The widening of Washington street will go on as fast as it is possible to do so, but not the whole length at once, which could be done only at an enormous expense, and it would hardly be proper to expend such an amount this or the next year. The idea thrown out that there will be expensive buildings put up on the line of the burnt buildings was entirely gratuitous and unwarrantable, for he had himself given notice to the Inspector of Buildings not to issue permits for rebuilding until action had been taken on the subject of widening the street.

Alderman Gibson said he believed the widening as proposed would be equal to a third fire, and worse than the others, producing more suffering. He was not disposed to go so far in the proposed widening. The late fire was a money-making operation, for nearly all the insurance was in foreign offices. So far as related to the spread of the late fire, a gale of wind was blowing at the time, and it was in such a position, so difficult to get at it, that a hundred steam fire engines could not have put it out. The water as it went up was spread and turned to steam before it reached the fire. The building was too high and too combustible, and engines every ten feet could not have put out a fire in a building so high and filled with combustible materials.

It was true they might have engines of eighty tons, with corresponding apparatus, but no ordinary engines could put out fires on such high buildings, and the fire burned until it reached buildings two stories lower, when it was stopped. If all the buildings had been as high, the fire would not have stopped until it got to the water. In this case it was the same as in the great fire, which, as it approached State street where the walls were lower and better, it was stopped. At the last fire the atmosphere never was drier. The Street Commissioners have now all they can attend to in the widening of streets, and the cost would be enormous, besides putting business men to great inconvenience in cutting off their stores. They were suffering enough from the great fire.

Alderman Power said that under ordinary circumstances, the expense of the proposed widening would frighten the community, yet now there was a general willingness to stand any sacrifice to preserve us against such another fire. As to fire engines, he believed we were as well equipped as any city in the Union, and as long as we have high buildings on narrow streets, we could not prevent serious fires. Our only protection was in making our streets wider. It would be prudent and wise to tear down buildings to widen streets, and we should not delay an hour in doing so. We could not restrict the business of Haley, Morse & Co. on the ground of danger from combustible material, for it was no more dangerous than the goods of Jordan, Marsh & Co. Should we drive them out of the city on that account, we should have no need of fire engines. Business was necessary for the city, and it would be folly to drive it out; for it was as much benefit as was the cost of widening its streets. There was no matter more important than the widening of Washington street, and he hoped the order would pass and be sent to the Street Commissioners.

The question was taken and the order was declared to be rejected.

Alderman Power raised a doubt, and asked for the yeas and nays in solving the doubt.

Alderman Clark said the question of yeas and nays in solving a doubt was very thoroughly discussed in the Council at its last meeting, and he did not think it was needed here, yet he would not object, for he was ready to record his vote against this order.

Alderman Gibson said it would give him great pleasure to record his vote against it.

The yeas and nays were ordered and the order was rejected, by a vote of 2 to 9, as follows:

Yeas—Power, Sayward.

Nays—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy, Stebbins.

Alderman Gaffield, pending the amendment of another order, made some remarks in relation to the construction of buildings and the management of fires. Formerly, he said, the buildings were not so high and the walls were better. The Fire Department he believed to be good, but he wished to make it better.

Alderman Sayward, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred the accompanying petition and request from the City Council for a hose house at Longwood, made a report that they have considered the same, and find that a lot of land can be bought for the purpose, which will be satisfactory to the Committee on the Fire Department, on the corner of Longwood and Brookline avenues, for the sum of one dollar per square foot, said lot containing 4800 square feet more or less. The committee would recommend the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to purchase of H. P. Gerrish 4800 square feet of land at the corner of Longwood and Brookline avenues at a price not exceeding $1 per square foot, and erect thereon a hose house at an estimated cost, for land and building, of $28,000.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $28,000, the same to be applied to the purchase of a site for and the erection thereon of a hose house at Longwood.

The orders were passed.

Alderman Sayward offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide temporary accommodations in Parker street, near Beacon street, for a steam fire-engine, and the men and horses connected therewith; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

A question was raised as to the authority for locating a steam fire engine on the territory in question, supposed to be in Ward 15, the words "near Beacon street" not being in the order, to which Alderman Sayward replied that the request came from the Committee on Fire Department, and the accommodations were for an engine already provided.

Alderman Clark said the land in question was not situated in Ward 15, as was supposed, but near Beacon street, and could be leased for two years. It was designed to cover the Back Bay territory, the nearest engine to which was in Charles street. There were no hydrants on Beacon street, and the attention of the Water Board had been called to the necessity of providing them. The neglect as to provisions for fire was chargeable upon the Water Board as well as upon the Fire Department. New hydrants, pipes, etc., were needed on Beacon street, and these could be put in at small expense. The Committee on Public Buildings were also to be called upon to provide a temporary building for a steam fire engine on the burnt district, to be built of wood and corrugated iron, near the Fort Hill territory, where a permanent building was to be put up, which would require four or five months. This was advisable, and as the city own the lot, the cost would be only for the erection of the building.

Alderman Gaffield said he wished simply to remark that he did not design to throw blame on the Water Board or the Committee on Fire Department. The trouble was that for years past the design had been for the city business to be carried on in an economical manner. While they spent much time in discussing the question whether they should raise the salaries of heads of departments to $3300, the same class of officers in New York were paid from $8000 to $10,000. It had been the policy to go to these departments to induce them to get along with as little as possible, which was not always for the best, but was false economy. This was true not only of the Water and Fire departments but of the Health Department, and when other departments use water it is made chargeable to the expense of that department.

It was time to drop this false economy, and to practise it no more. When the Chief-Engineer says he wants more engines or other apparatus, give them to him, and he did not doubt the citizens would back them in all the expenditures required. We had a good Fire Department, but it should be better, and it was equally applicable to the Water Department, that their calls for improvement should be heeded.

The order was passed.

Alderman Bayward said he did not propose to wait for a request from the Committee on Fire Department in another matter, and would offer the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to purchase, hire or erect upon lands owned by the city within the burnt district, so called, a temporary building suitable for the accommodation of a steam fire engine and the men and horses connected therewith; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Alderman Gibson inquired if this lot of land was large enough for the erection upon it of a permanent building while occupied by the temporary one.

Alderman Clark stated that the lot was large enough for a house for a steam fire engine, hook and ladder carriage and a hose carriage. The city owned two lots, and there was a small lot between them which it would be necessary to purchase. The lot was 30 by 60 feet, and a temporary building could be put up at a cost of from $3000 to $5000. Provision had been made for only three additional steam fire engines, while in his opinion the force should be doubled. Six steam fire engines in the city proper were not enough and had not been enough during the last five years, and for this section of the city they should be doubled. The time has been when complaints were made against the City Government for extravagance, and there were persons now who deery the City Government for negligence who as members of the Government opposed these necessary measures for its protection.

It was suggested two years ago that larger pipes should be put down in Summer street, and parties were told to mind their own business, for the Water Board knew their business and the Fire Department theirs. This city he believed should do as is done in New York. Pay the firemen for their whole time, and not make it necessary that a man should work at his business as a carpenter or mason, and be at a great distance from a fire on its breaking out. The sum of $300 was not enough for a man in risking his life, and wasting half his time at fires. The assistant-engineers should be paid for their entire services.

All of this will add largely to the expenses of the city, and may drive a large number more of heavy taxpayers from the city, but such persons should feel ashamed of themselves, for there was nothing more contemptible than for those who come to the city poor, and made all their money here, to leave the city to escape taxation. It was believed that not less than $20,000,000 of property escaped taxation by that class of men going out and paying their taxes elsewhere. This may drive out others, yet these men come here and cry the loudest to have the expenses increased for the protection of their property, while they pay taxes for their personal property elsewhere.

Alderman Gibson said his inquiry had not yet been answered, whether there was room for a temporary building, and for the putting up of a permanent one on the same lot?

Alderman Clark replied that there was a lot alongside of the same kind, which could be had, and the building could be put up in thirty days.

Alderman Power said he was not opposed to the erection of the building if necessary, and inquired whether there were not a number of buildings now there which were about to be vacated. It was presumed that the citizens would find fault if proper precautions were not taken, and he was disposed to do all that was required, but there were buildings on the spot which might be had. In regard to the fire apparatus, he believed we had as good as any in the world, and nothing more could be done but to increase the size of the engines. There was no foundation for the complaint in regard to the condition of our fire engines.

Alderman Clark suggested an amendment to make the order read "lease or erect," which was accepted, and he said he was glad that the Alderman said what he did in regard to the condition of the Fire Department. It was well known that we had the best engines we could procure, but to satisfy the community of the fact, an order was put into this Board to authorize the Committee on Fire Department to visit the various establishments for the manufacture of fire engines, but it was not designed to expend much money in doing so. The days of extravagance had ceased, and as a member of the committee he failed to see where there was any ground of complaint that there was any unnecessary expense in expenditures upon fire apparatus.

There had been a backwardness in providing the means required by the Fire Department, as in the case of the fire boat, which was not built for two years after it was demanded, and since it had been in use it had saved five times its expense in cost. So it was with many other cases of complaint of eternal and everlasting expense. That expenditures must be made, even should taxpayers grumble, was true, and, in connection with the subject, he quoted an article in the Transcript which met the question fully in his view.

Alderman Quincy believed we could not afford to save by delay, and he agreed that the members of the Fire Department must be paid fully for their whole time. This question of service settled, and we could see whether we could not dispense with the system of public fire alarms, which was a bad one. In London and Paris and in some other cities, there are no public alarms. Stations are provided in various places, to which the alarm is communicated, and it is telegraphed from there to the fire brigades who are always on duty. In this way the alarm is given, which is not attended by an excitement or crowd, and the work is done better.

The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the report of Committee on Streets on the occupation and improvement of the South Boston Flats (City Doc. No. 7), was taken from the table.

Alderman Clark said he supposed the members of the Board must have become familiar with the provisions of the report, which were in fact the same which were passed by both branches of the City Council last year, the delay in carrying out which was caused by the fire.

The indenture appended to the report was passed.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

On the petition of J. F. Kenting for leave to locate a steam engine and boiler at No. 32 Lancaster street. Hearing Monday, June 23. 4 P. M.

Adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
JUNE 7, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at eight o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The annual report of the Overseers of the Poor (City Doc. No. 75, 1873), was ordered to be placed on file.

The petitions of Robert T. Swan and others, Suffolk Kindling Wood Company, Newton Morton, and Charles E. Wiggin and others, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The reference to Committee on Fire Department of a message from the Mayor recommending an increase of the efficiency of said department, was concurred in.

The order authorizing temporary accommodations to be provided for a steam fire engine, and men and horses connected therewith, on Parker, near Beacon street, being on its passage,

Mr. Jones of Ward 10 moved to amend by striking out the provision making it chargeable to the Fire Department, and substitute therefor "Public Buildings."

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 opposed the amendment, believing the expense should be chargeable to the Fire Department.

Mr. Jones replied that providing such buildings was properly chargeable to Public Buildings.

The amendment was adopted, and the order was passed.

The order to purchase, hire or erect upon city lands in burnt district a temporary house for a steam fire engine, and the men and horses connected therewith, was amended in the same manner, and passed.

The following orders were severally read twice and passed:

Order authorizing sale by public auction of old Roxbury City Hall and other buildings on the city lot, in order that the building of the schoolhouse for Dudley District may be proceeded with.

Order for Committee on Fire Department to investigate the cause of the fire on May 30, and the efforts made to suppress it, and to report to the City Council.

In relation to the last order, Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he hoped the committee would give a public hearing.

Report and order authorizing the erection of two primary schoolhouses in East Boston, for Prescott and Chapman districts; and for a loan of $80,000 to be applied therefor.

The following orders were severally read once:

Order authorizing a contract to be made for watering streets around the public grounds at a cost not to exceed $1000.

Order authorizing a clock to be placed in tower of Ticknor Schoolhouse, at a cost not to exceed $1000.

Report and order to allow and pay to Henry Doherty $746 98, for loss on account of settling of earth deposited on Madison square.

Report and order for Mayor to execute, in behalf of the city, an indenture as annexed to said order, with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and other parties named therein, concerning the occupation of South Boston Flats. (Printed City Doc. No. 71, 1873.)

Report and orders authorizing 4800 feet of land to be purchased on corner of Longwood and Brookline avenues, at not exceeding $1 per square foot, and the erection thereon of an engine house at an estimated cost, for land and building, of $28,000; and for a loan therefor.

Request and order authorizing a transfer of $5100 from Reserved fund to appropriation for Widening Federal-street Bridge. (Printed City Doc. No. 80, 1873.)

REVISING THE CITY CHARTER.

The report and order for a commission of five persons to be appointed to examine the act incorporating the city and all other general and special statutes for government of the city, and report what changes are necessary or expedient in view of prospective increases in area and population, were considered.

Mr. West of Ward 16 stated that the committee was not full when this subject was considered, and he moved that it be recommitted, when it will receive the consideration which it should.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 believed the reason to be a poor one to recommit the matter because all of the members were not present. It had already passed the Board of Aldermen, and was recommended by the Mayor, and he believed the measure was a very proper one.

Mr. West replied that the report was by a majority of the committee, and he moved a recommitment at the desire of those who were not present.

Mr. Dean of Ward 13 hoped the report would be recommitment, for it was very important, and it should be discussed fully in committee before passed. If called upon to act now, he should oppose it, for as far as can be ascertained, no reason can be given in favor of it. The Mayor was called upon and could not give any reason, and no one else could give any; but if, on examination in committee, there should be particular reasons for a revision, he should favor it.

Mr. Dean again stated that the measure should be fairly considered, and when the Mayor was asked for a reason he could not say why a revision should be made; he had not thought of any special reason, but thought that it should be passed because we had outgrown the city charter. If there should be any alterations, he asked what should such alterations be, for members of the City Council should be able to tell better than any other persons what may be necessary as affecting them, or the provisions making them a corporation. The Board of Aldermen have the power of County Commissioners, and the elections of Mayor and members of both branches of the City Council embrace nearly all which constitutes the city charter.

If it was believed to be desirable to lessen or increase the number of members of the Common Council or of the Board of Aldermen; the measures to such an end can be carried out without revising the city charter. Such matters would relate to the size rather than the organization or charter of the City Government. Having every desire to do everything which might be necessary, it was asked of the Mayor what was wanted in order that a reason could be given when a report was made, and the only answer was that a Board of Public Works might be desirable. If such a board was necessary, why not pass upon it directly? We now have Street Commissioners, a Board of Health, Trustees of the Public Library and Trustees of the City Hospital, and why not establish a Board of Works in the same manner?

Why, then, should there be a commission to revise the charter? The provisions of the city charter have been settled for many years, and the courts know all about it. It would be a most unwise thing to revise it unless there was a special object for so doing, for then when anything relating to it comes up, they must go to the courts to determine what it means. This was not a question requiring haste, and he would like to have the committee go over it and see whether there was anything which may be called up to pass upon. When he was in the Council in 1856, the Committee on Ordinances were directed to provide for an election of members of the Council for two years, two to be elected each year in every ward, but it came to nothing.

Mr. West stated that the gentleman from Ward 12 was one of the absentees from the committee, and the motion to recommit was to enable him as well as others to give his views on the subject.

Mr. Flynn said if gentlemen were unable to attend meetings of committees, that was no reason why delay should take place. Now was the proper time to take action on the order, and when the report is made it will be time enough to argue upon the matter. It appeared to him that the gentleman was a little ahead of his time.

Mr. Dean replied that the reason of the gentleman was not the best in the world. The subject did not receive full consideration in committee because some of the members were not present. There were various reasons which were not laid before that committee.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 said he would not object to recommit it if the gentlemen desired it, but the statement made was not a fair one. The subject was fairly considered, and after debate it was the opinion of every one present that the order should pass.

Mr. Perkins said that it was not the functions of the committee to examine and revise the city charter, but the object of the reference was simply to provide some means by which the city charter and ordinances could be revised. He hoped that not all the statutes relating to the city would be revised.

Mr. Dean said it was not the purpose of making such a revision.

The motion to recommit was carried.

The order for Committee on Ordinances to report an ordinance to prohibit discharge of cannon on the Common without authority of City Council was considered.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 moved as an amendment that the committee consider the expediency of such an ordinance.

Mr. Perkins replied that it was to the same effect, for it must be reported to the City Council for final action.

Mr. Mahan said it was usual, courteous and parliamentary to consider the expediency of a measure, and he desired to conform to the established usage. The expediency should first be considered, but if it should be discussed now he should oppose it. Some persons seemed to have such delicate nerves that they could not allow anything on the Common which was not under their control.

The amendment was carried.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12 moved to amend by including all "other public grounds," which was carried, when the order was passed.

The report and orders for erection of a stable on city lot, Highland street, for Health and Paving departments, and for a loan of $85,000 to be applied therefor, were considered.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 inquired if there was any reason for this expenditure for a stable.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 replied that this was the first time he had seen the order; and as to the necessity for a stable he did not know. In the early part of the season the attention of the committee, as individuals, was called to the necessity of increased accommodations, but it was never brought before them as a committee.

Mr. Perkins moved a reference of the order to the Committee on Health of the Common Council.

Mr. Denny suggested that it be referred to the Joint Committee on Health.

Mr. Perkins amended his motion.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 said this matter was referred to this City Government as unfinished business of last year.

The motion to refer was carried.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order authorizing the erection of an iron fence around the square on Commonwealth avenue, between Dartmouth and Exeter streets; and to raise the grade of said square, cover it with loam and sods, and to lay out walks over the same; the cost not to exceed $8000.

Report and order authorizing the grading of Madison square, and the erection of a wooden fence around it, at not exceeding $3000.

Order authorizing the removal of the foot bridges over Boston & Providence Railroad, at West Canton street and Berwick park, and for that purpose to sell the same by public auction.

Order to authorize the Directors for Public Institutions to construct a telegraph line from their office to the institutions at South Boston, at an expense of $1200.

Orders to rescind order (Nov. 1, 1872) authorizing purchase, for $7500, of land on Adams street, from Old Colony & Newport Railroad Company, as a site for Police Station Eleven; and in lieu of said purchase, authorizing the purchase of 7500 feet of land, at not exceeding $1 per foot, of J. H. Robinson, as a site for said station.

RESERVOIR ON PARKER'S HILL.

The report and orders for a loan of $115,000 for extension of water pipes in Wards 13, 14, 15 and 16; also for a loan of $161,000 for Parker's-Hill Reservoir; also to authorize the Cochituate Water Board to take the land necessary for construction of reservoir, etc. (City Doc. No. 77), were considered.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 wished for information on the subject, for he had yet to learn the necessity for this new reservoir. The statement of the Water Board gave some figures which to him were wholly unsatisfactory. He had the honor, with other members of the City Council, to visit the premises, and heard a statement from the City Engineer, which did not satisfy him. It was stated in the report that the land could be purchased at fifteen cents a foot, while the figures of the Engineer give an estimate at a rate of sixty cents. If there is to be such an uncertainty, and we are to be led on statements which will involve an expenditure of millions, instead of $160,000, it would be best to know it. We should do differently from what had been done in the past, and while he admitted that we needed more water, he believed also that we need better means of handling the water, but that he should not discuss at this time. At that time he took the liberty to make some inquiries, and was told that the high service was a success. An estimate was made for a supply of five million or six million gallons, which he thought was too small for such an expense. But he thought we could get a higher head of water, and he asked why we could not go somewhere else. To this it was answered we could go nowhere else under the law.

Referring to the law, he said that when under consideration in the Legislature, he asked the question why an alternative place was not placed in the bill, and was told that nowhere but on Parker's Hill was it desirable to go. He asked why not go to Corey's Hill, and was told that it was too high. Yet Corey's Hill was but forty-three feet higher than Parker's Hill, and land could be purchased there at one quarter of the cost of land on Parker's Hill. But he believed there were higher hills in the vicinity of Boston, and that with the high service on such hills, a great part of the expense of throwing water at high points could be saved. He believed that from Powder-Horn Hill water could be thrown over the State House.

Instead of spending money, or travelling about to ascertain where can be found more powerful engines, he believed it would be better to make examination to ascertain where the highest head of water can be obtained. His own experience at a fire on Wednesday night was related, in which a stream from a little hydrant was sufficient to extinguish the fire. If a point higher than Parker's Hill can be found, he believed it was his duty to find such a place, and there should be no haste in passing the order until such an examination was made. He would be in favor of adopting the highest hill which could be found within a range of five miles of Boston.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 explained in regard to the figures, that the owners of property on Parker's Hill found fault with being taxed at ten cents a foot, and it was believed to be fair to make the estimate at fifteen cents. The City Solicitor had given it as his opinion that as the will of the former owner of Parker's Hill was a peculiar one it will be necessary to take the land and leave the price to be settled in the courts. If such a settlement was made, it would be better not to allow the parties any advantage by an admission that the land was worth a great deal more.

Mr. Pease read a statement from the City Engineer, that the pumping engines for the high service are kept up nearly to their capacity, and that water is kept in the reservoirs at South Boston and on Beacon Hill to meet emergencies; that more engines will be necessary, or a reservoir be provided as proposed; and as the location of these engines must at some time be abandoned, it would be useless expense to make any large expenditure there. Parker's Hill was selected because it was the only place which could be had within the city limits, and it was the best place.

Aspinwall's Hill and Corey's Hill in Brookline had been considered, but Corey's Hill was too high, and if located there the reservoir must be on the side, and more expensive on that account. The place was more remote from the pumping engines, and in place of $39,000 for the pipe, at Parker's Hill, the cost to Corey's Hill would be $135,000, and if there is much rock cutting it would cost $150,000. Eventually there must be three distinct points of distribution, and as to the objection that the expense of this reservoir would be but an entering wedge for a much larger sum, it is answered that the estimates are ample, although but one link in a chain of supplies, but this will be all that is required at present.

Mr. Shaw said he was willing to admit all that the Engineer says, but his statement did not meet his objection. He did not propose to interfere with the present high service, and would admit all his statements except in relation to Corey's Hill, which was not too high. They could not find a hill too high, for as judges of the Supreme Court differ so do engineers differ. In the supply of water he wished to provide for the future, and in its application to the extinguishment of fires he referred to a building on the corner of Hayward place and the Bellevue as dangerous buildings.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 inquired whether it was designed to connect the high service with service outside of the present limits.

Mr. Pease replied that he did not know, and in answer to Mr. Shaw said a postponement would be equivalent to a putting off of the matter for another year, for we could not get any change in the law the present year.

Mr. Shaw said he would guarantee that a change in the law could be had in twenty-four hours, and he read an order to request an application to the Legislature for a change in the location of the reservoir.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 hoped the order would be passed, for after an examination it was determined that Parker's Hill was high enough; the present engines would throw the water there, and that hill was the right place.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 hoped the order would be passed, for a plain statement had been made in favor of the proposed location. The members of the Council had visited the place, and heard the statement of the Engineer, and they had also heard the other side from the gentleman from Ward 5. He believed, therefore, that they were ready to act upon the subject, and moved the previous question, which was ordered.

The order was passed by a vote of 46 yeas, 6 nays—the nays being Messrs. Bicknell, Dean, Hine, Mahan, Martin and Shaw.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the order establishing the salaries of the officers of the Law Department was laid on the table.

BALLOON ASCENSION.

The report and order for an additional appropriation of $5000 for the celebration of the Fourth of July was taken up.

Mr. West of Ward 16 hoped the Council would not pass the order, for he thought if they could not do any better than to expend so much money to go up into the air, they might expend it to buy a steam fire engine. The expenditure of $15,000, he thought, was sufficient for the celebration of the Fourth of July.

The order was declared to be lost by a vote of 23 to 25, when Mr. Shaw asked for the yeas and nays, which were ordered, and the order was lost by a vote of 23 to 29, as follows:

Yeas—Abbott, Barnes, Brackett, Dean, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hall, Harrington, Hughes, Jones, Madden, Marston, Morse, Shaw, Thacher, Train, Upham, Wells, Weston, Whiston, Woods.

Nays—Adams, Bicknell, Blackmar, Bleiler, Boardman, Bowles, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cndworth, Dacey, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Hine, Holmes, Kingsley, Loring, Mahan, Martin, Pease, Perkins, Powers, Tower, Warren, West, Wilbur, Woodward.

VISITING STEAM FIRE ENGINE ESTABLISHMENTS.

The order authorizing the Committee on the Fire Department to visit the several steam fire engine establishments, to enable them to select the most efficient and approved engine, hose and hook and ladder carriages, at a cost not exceeding $1000, was taken up.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 said he had given notice of a reconsideration of the vote ordering it to a second reading, and he would move such a reconsideration for the purpose of reconsidering the vote sustaining the decision of the Chair at the last meeting, being clearly of the opinion that the decision was wrong.

The motion to reconsider was carried.

Mr. Dacey moved to reconsider the vote by which the decision of the Chair was sustained.

The Chair stated the question to be on giving the order a second reading, and the motion would not now be in order, but could be made when a call was made for motions, orders and resolutions.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said the Chair may be right, but he thought the question was whether they should not go back to the question whether the doubt which was raised was not legally or properly solved. The yeas and nays were not called at a certain stage to solve a doubt, and the Council sustained the Chair in his decision. He believed they had a right to the yeas and nays, and to get at that right they must undo the vote ordering the order to a second reading. What that vote was has not been determined, and the vote was never passed, and it would be necessary to reconsider the vote sustaining the decision of the Chair before the question could be properly settled.

Mr. Perkins rose to a point of order that the gentleman was not in order.

The Chair ruled that the gentleman was not in order, for there was but one motion before the Council, and that was on giving the order a second reading, placing it now as though the vote had never been passed upon ordering it to a second reading. A reconsideration of the other question must be by itself.

Mr. Dean said the motion of the gentleman was in order to get at the erroneous decision, and to put the question where it was before the decision was made.

The Chair stated that however desirable it might be to arrive at that result, it was not in order.

The question being upon giving the order a second reading—

Mr. Blackmar believed it to be unnecessary for the Committee on Fire Department to visit steam fire engine establishments, for if it is given out that the city is in want of fire engines we shall be flooded with petitions, and they need not go to see them, for the manufacturers will bring them here.

Mr. Perkins believed that in the difference of opinion in relation to the management of the recent fire, the order had better not be passed.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said that gentleman seemed not to understand the object of the order. If they wished to see the best engines, they must visit the manufactories and see the working of the engines there. He hoped the order would pass.

Mr. Perkins asked for the yeas and nays on the passage of the order, which were ordered.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 said it was their duty not only to visit manufacturing establishments to see the best engines, but to ascertain the working of fire departments. There were some engines not known here which were highly commended, and there were different kinds of hydrants. It was desirable not to reorganize the Fire Department, but to organize it, and to obtain all the means of benefiting it. Many things could be learned by the committee in making this visit.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 said if there ever was a time when such a visit was needed, it was the present time. The committee would act in their discretion, and would not expend the money unless they believed it to be necessary.

Mr. West said if the visit was not to see engines alone, but to improve the department, he would vote for it.

Mr. Jones referred to some of the places and establishments which would probably be visited, from Manchester to Albany, thence west to Cleveland, Cincinnati and to Chicago. At Cleveland they had an improvement on the fire-alarm telegraph. The appropriation would not allow of an extended trip, from two to six hours in a place only would be occupied.

Mr. Blackmar was of opinion that $1000 would not pay the expenses of such a trip as was mapped out. If manufacturers in Cincinnati had engines which they had faith in, they would no doubt send one here when they know we were in want of the best.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 said the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department had diagrams of the best-manufactured engines, yet it could not be told what the working of them would be by those diagrams. It would be an absurdity, also, to suppose that engines would be sent here, and the only way to satisfy the desires of the Mayor and the demands of the press and of the public for a better method of managing fires is to go where the machines are in operation, and not to wait for them to be sent here.

The motion on giving the order a second reading was carried, by a vote of 37 to 10, as follows:

Yeas—Abbott, Adams, Barnes, Bleiler, Boardman, Brackett, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cndworth, Dacey, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Edwards, Flynn, Hine, Holmes, Hughes, Jones, Kingsley, Loring, Madden, Mahan, Marston, Martin, Pease, Thacher, Tower, Warren, Wells, West, Weston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

Nays—Blackmar, Dean, Hall, Harrington, Perkins, Powers, Shaw, Train, Upham, Whiston.

Mr. Dean said the reasons given for the passage of the order in the action of the committee, and in the statement of the Chief Engineer in relation to the management of the fire are entirely opposite to those offered in the discussion.

The order was then passed without a count.

Mr. Dacey inquired if a reconsideration of the other question was now in order.

The Chair stated that it would properly come up under orders, resolutions, etc.

SPECIAL ASSIGNMENTS.

The special assignment for 8½ o'clock was taken up, it being the orders to transfer and assign to William Smith & Co. the city's interest in three insurance policies effected by said Smith & Co. on a building which they had contracted to erect as a Smallpox Hospital, and which was destroyed by fire before it was delivered by the contractors; and for City Clerk to attach a copy of the above order to each of said policies.

The question was stated to be upon the passage of the order, and the order was passed, in concurrence.

The special assignment for 9 o'clock, the reports of Committee on the Burrill Claim, was reassigned to Thursday evening next, 9 o'clock.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Biglow, Kennard & Co. and others, that a steam fire engine be located on Mason street.

S. W. Hayden and others for a horse hose carriage in Ward 16.

Severally referred to Committee on Fire Department.

Samuel R. Russell, for appropriation to pay for expense of exhibition of his fire apparatus. Referred to Committee on Water.

Hannah Daley for compensation for injuries. Referred to Committee on Claims.

S. H. Russell, that the Common be not used for fireworks. Referred to Committee on the Fourth of July.

S. S. Lord, to be allowed to erect an addition to his blacksmith shop in Ward 12.

Referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL CLAIMS.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 moved a reconsideration of the vote passing the orders to transfer and assign insurance policies to William Smith & Co., and hoped the motion would not prevail.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 hoped the motion would prevail, for the question was taken at a time when several members were not in their seats, and it places us in a ridiculous position, with a payment of $5000 and an assignment of policies of insurance, with the passage also of another order designed as a substitute for this. Before the passage of this order the motion was perfectly right, and if more was received from the insurance policies it was to be paid to them.

Under the passage of these orders, in addition to the $5000 which they have received, should the policies be paid, they will receive $10,000 more, and they had no more right to assign these policies to them than they had to take money from the treasury and pay it to any one else. There was no legal claim for the demand, and, in face of this decision and opinion of the City Solicitor, they would virtually get their entire claim. With such a precedent it would complicate the difficulties in settling claims and rob the treasury. There were many claims before the Committee on Claims which were much stronger. If a member of the Council should contract for a building, and it should be burnt before it was delivered, he would consider it a misfortune of the builder; and if he should pay for it he should admire his generosity, but he would not be obliged to do so.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 rose to a question of order that the gentleman was addressing the Council and not the Chair.

The Chair stated that he was not aware that the gentleman was out of order.

Mr. Blackmar proceeded with his remarks, and Mr. Mahan again raised the point of order.

The Chair ruled that the point was not well taken.

Mr. Blackmar repeated his statement in relation to individual liabilities in such cases, and if an individual was not legally bound to pay such a claim, they had no right to put their hands into the treasury to make such payments because a contractor was unfortunate.

Mr. Shaw wished to inquire of the gentleman from Ward 11 whether these parties were entitled to one dollar.

Mr. Blackmar replied that they were not.

Mr. Shaw believed the parties were entitled to payment, and with reference to the opinion of the City Solicitor, he said the opinions were not put and answered directly. As to the question of equity, he believed the parties had an equitable claim, and as he understood the facts, after they had nearly completed their work, the city stepped in and interrupted the work. In demanding the premises by the city for other work, he believed if Smith & McGarigle had not a legal, they had an equitable case. If the committee were bound to put proper questions to the City Solicitor and they were answered, why were they not put and answered, and reported to the Council?

Mr. Shaw believed the city was belittling itself, after interrupting this work, to refuse to pay the parties for their loss; and it appeared, also, that the city put in furniture in addition to this interruption. For these reasons, he hoped the reconsideration would not prevail.

Mr. Perkins said the gentleman had four times asserted that if these gentlemen had no legal claim, they had no right to its payment. His argument, too, was reason enough against the payment. Smith & McGarigle could not blow hot and cold at the same time, and could not claim that the building was delivered and get the insurance on it, after it passed from their hands. There was no show of law, equity or justice in the claim, and if the policies should be transferred to them, the $5000 paid to them should be in the city treasury.

Mr. Mahan stated that the assignment of the question was to 8½ o'clock, and if gentlemen did not pay attention to what was going on, they had no right at this late hour to make objections. He believed the claim was a just one and should be paid, and as the subject was well understood, he moved the previous question, which was sustained.

The motion to reconsider was lost, by a vote of 17 to 29, as follows:

Yeas—Adams, Blackmar, Bleiler, Boardman, Brackett, Burditt, Denny, Hall, Hine, Holmes, Morse, Perkins, Powers, Train, West, Woods, Woodward.

Nays—Abbott, Barnes, Bicknell, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cndworth, Dacey, Davis, Dean, Flatley, Flynn, Harrington, Hughes, Jones, Kingsley, Loring, Madden, Mahan, Marston, Martin, Pease, Shaw, Thacher, Tower, Warren, Wells, Weston, Whiston.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 moved to take from the table the several orders which had been ordered to a second reading, and were laid over for want of a sufficient number of members to pass them by a two-thirds vote.

The motion was carried, and the orders were considered.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 moved that when the Council adjourn it be to 7½ o'clock next Thursday evening, and that that hour be the time for meeting. Declared to be carried, but on a count it was lost—15 to 18.

The several orders which were taken up were passed as follows:

Orders authorizing the purchase of 7600 feet of land on Dudley and Forest streets, at not exceeding $1 50 per square foot, as a site for Hook and Ladder House No. 4; and for a transfer from the Reserved Fund of $12,000 for the purchase of said land, and for plans for such house.

Orders authorizing the erection of a police station house on city land on Fourth street, between K and I streets, at an estimated cost of $45,000; and for a loan therefor.

Order to allow and pay $600 per annum for rent of Armory of Company B, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., in hall 577 Washington street.

Order authorizing a transfer of not exceeding $3000 from Reserved Fund to the amount authorized for a hose house at corner of O and Fourth streets, South Boston.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 offered a resolve that in view of the danger from fire from high buildings and narrow streets, it was the opinion of the City Council that no further permits should be issued, and all which were granted should be annulled until action should be taken on the subject of widening Washington street within the limits of the late fire.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 stated that at a meeting of the Committee on Streets yesterday, an order was passed that the Inspector of Buildings be instructed not to issue permits for building on that territory until action was taken by the City Council. He moved that the resolve be laid on the table, which was carried.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 offered an order that the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings be requested to consider the expediency of providing by ordinance that the floors of buildings be made fire proof. Referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 offered the following orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to purchase the estate late of Nathaniel Whiting, between Washington square and Washington place, containing 1523 square feet, more or less, for a sum not exceeding $11 per foot; and also to erect upon said lot and the lots adjoining on either side, owned by the city of Boston, a building suitable for the accommodation of a steam fire engine and a hook and ladder carriage and the horses and men connected therewith.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $50,000, to be applied to the purchase of land and the erection of an engine and hook and ladder house in Ward 5.

It being stated in answer to a question that these orders came from the Committee on Public Buildings, Mr. Shaw said he would like to know by what authority a committee reported orders without any petition or instruction from the body to which they were responsible?

The Chair stated that there was no rule which prevented the offering of orders of this kind.

Mr. Shaw said that when he offered a resolution, his friend from Ward 7 moved to lay it on the table, and stated that his committee had given directions without any instructions from the Council for doing so. There were a plenty of lots on Fort Hill owned by the city, some of which were better fitted for this purpose than these lots were.

Mr. Pease stated that most of the lots owned by the city on Fort Hill were leased, and they could not be used for the purpose proposed at present.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 believed they could wait, for the parties who were using certain newspapers which they could handle, did not know half what they thought they did in these matters. There was no occasion for going it blind on the subject of the extinguishment of fires.

Mr. Dean also objected to acting hastily on the subject.

Mr. Denny referred to action already taken with regard to providing further facilities for extinguishing fires in the burnt district, and moved that the orders be laid on the table, which was carried.

Mr. Jones offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Water Board be and they hereby are instructed to place Lowry hydrants on the several main water pipes of this city, and also upon each and every street crossing.

Mr. Jones advocated the order, as a necessary measure for extinguishing fires, and Mr. Loring of Ward 12 was of opinion that it might safely be left with the Water Board, to which two able members were recently added. He moved that it be laid on the table, which was carried.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 moved a reconsideration of the vote sustaining the decision of the Chair on a point of order at the last meeting, stating that, should it prevail, he would move to lay it on the table.

The motion to reconsider was carried, and the question of order was laid on the table.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 offered the following order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to communicate to the Commandant of the United States Navy Yard at Charlestown the thanks of the City Government and citizens of Boston for the very valuable services rendered by the marine corps in preserving order and protecting property during and after the fire of the 30th ultimo.

The order was amended to add thanks to the commandant of Fort Warren, and as amended was passed.

On motion of Mr. Wells of Ward 3, the order for a joint committee to be appointed to arrange for music on the Common and in other parts of the city, at a cost not exceeding $3000, was taken from the table and assigned to Thursday evening next.

Adjourned.

COMMUNICATION RELATING TO THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The following communication was received from the Mayor:

Boston, June 9, 1873.

To the Hon. the City Council of the City of Boston: Gentlemen—I have the honor to transmit herewith a communication from the representatives of various insurance companies, which sustained losses by the fire of the 30th ultimo. I commend the suggestions which it contains to your careful consideration.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

The communication is the same which has been published in full in the newspapers.

Referred to the Committee on Fire Department.

AUDITOR'S MONTHLY EXHIBIT.

The Auditor's monthly exhibit was laid before the Board in print, it being an exhibit of the general and special appropriations for the present financial year of 1873-74, as shown in the books in his office, June 1, 1873, including the June draft, being two months' payments of the financial year—exhibiting the original appropriations, the amount expended, and the balance of each unexpended at that date. A recapitulation gives the following result:

General.....	$11,036,949 34	$1,176,725 01	$9,860,224 33

	$19,028,221 55	$2,809,287 38	$16,218,934 17

Ordered to be sent down.

WIDENING OF BROAD STREET.

A communication was received from the Street Commissioners, with a resolve and order for the widening of Broad street to one hundred feet, from Atlantic avenue to Summer street, at an estimated expense of $780,887 25.

The several items of the cost are estimated as follows:

City of Boston, Belcher lane, 637 feet, no expense. Proprietors of Foster's wharf, 11,438 feet, $5 50, $62,909; damages, $27,000; total, $89,909. James and P. H. Power, Harris's wharf, 2625 feet, $5 50, $14,437; damages, $4900—$19,337 50. Heirs of John H. Pearson, Pearson's dry dock, 2574 feet, $5 50, $14,157; damages, $2000—$16,157. Heirs of James Otis, Otis wharf, 5056 feet, $5 50, $27,808; damages, $2000—$29,808. David Snow, Arch wharf, 4946 feet, $5 50, $27,203; damages, 19,600—$46,803. David Snow, Packard's wharf, 4822 feet, $6, $28,932; damages, $4800—$33,732. William R. Clark, Fort Hill wharf, 4789 feet, $6 50, $31,128; damages, $17,500—$48,628 50. William Litchfield, Litchfield's wharf, 6492 feet, $6, $38,952; damages, $3500—$42,452. John L. Batchelder, Batchelder's wharf, 3088 feet, $6, $18,528; damages, $6200—24,728. Heirs of John P. Dolbeare, Dolbeare's wharf, 2959 feet, $6 25, $18,493 75; damages, $800—$19,293 75. David Chapin, W. L. Prescott and others, Liverpool north wharf, 8870 feet, $7—$62,090; damages, $250—62,340. Proprietors of Liverpool wharf, Liverpool south wharf, 5309 feet, $6 50—$34,508 50; damages, $25—$31,533 50. Herman B. Inches and others, Russia wharf, 10,827 feet, $6 50—$70,375 50; damages, $2000—$72,375 50. Heirs of William H. Prentice, Prentice's wharf, 9638 feet, $6 75—$65,056 50; damages, $150—$65,206 50. Heirs of Thomas Tileston, Tileston wharf, 7354 feet, $7—$51,478; damages, $125—$51,603. William T. Hart and C. P. Clark, Trustees Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad, 5120 feet, $7 50—$38,400; damages, $1500—$39,900. Thomas F. Richardson, 8140 feet, $9—$73,260; damages, $5500—$78,760. Heirs of Solomon Piper, Federal street, 665 feet, $8—$5320—making a total of 105,349 feet of land, at an estimated cost of $683,037 25; value of buildings before widening, $130,200; value after widening, $26,000; material to be cut off, $8550; damages to buildings, owners and occupants, $97,850—$780,887 25.

Alderman Clark stated that the proposed widening had been before the Committee on Streets, who recommended that the widening should be made as proposed in City Document No. 67, and as the parties in interest are anxious to get their lines and build, if the Board are prepared to act upon the subject, he hoped the resolve and order would be passed at once.

The resolve and order were passed.

WIDENING OF PEARL STREET.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Pearl street, near Milk street, by taking a parcel of land, owned by S. S. Perkins, containing 101 square feet, at an expense of $1414.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the resolve and order were referred to the Committee on Streets.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CITY REGISTRAR.

The annual report of the City Registrar was submitted in print for the year 1872, an abstract of which is as follows:

Births. There were 9270 births registered, showing an increase of 715, or 8.36 per cent. over the registered births in 1871, making the birth rate 1 in 28.59 of an estimated population of 265,000. Adding still born, 560, the rate is 1 in 27; preceding year, 1 in

Of these births 6224 (67.14 per cent.) of the children born had foreign fathers, and 6046 (65.22 per cent.) foreign mothers. Half of those recorded as of unknown fathers and mothers are embraced in each instance. This shows that while the foreign-born population makes but 35 per cent., the children born of such parentage makes 67 per cent. of the births. The Irish population is about 22 per cent. of the whole, while the children of Irish make 34.58 of all the births and 51.48 of all the children of foreign fathers. In contrast, it is shown that the American population, with nearly 65 per cent. of the whole, has but 32.84 per cent. of the births. The whole number of cases in which one or both parents were foreign born was 3869, or 41.74 per cent. of the whole number of births. Estimating the Irish population at 58,000, the ratio of births is 18.10, and the American population at 174,500, the ratio is 74.92.

The number of births in the several quarters was as follows: First quarter, 2213; second, 2138; third, 2477; fourth, 2442. The largest number of births in any one month was 851, in August, the smallest was 695, in April.

A table giving the number and percentages of births by wards, for 1871 and 1872, shows that the largest increase was in Wards 1, 12, and 15, the number being 446, or 62.38 of the whole increase. There was an increase of 108 in the four southern wards, making 15.10 per cent. There was an increase of 34 births in Ward 2, and in Wards 5, 8, 13, and 16 there was a decrease of 118 births. There were 1074 births in that part of Ward 7 lying in South Boston.

The number of colored births was 126, 47 less than the colored deaths. The colored population makes about 1.32 of the whole, and the percentage of births is the same. The birth rate is about 1 in 27.77 of the estimated population. During the last sixteen years the colored population has increased nearly 58 per cent.; due from immigration.

The number of twin births was 65 an increase of nine from the preceding year. The percentage was 1 in 142; in 1871, 1 in 115. In only ten instances were both the parents American, those of Irish parentage making nearly half the number. In one instance both parents were colored, and in another Indians. The still births exceeded those of 1871 by 17. There were 14 colored still births, making the ratio 1 in 9 of the whole number. Among the whites the ratio was 1 in 16.74 of the whole births. The still births of foreign parentage make 67.50 per cent. of the whole; Irish 43 per cent.

Marriages. There were 3762 marriages recorded, an increase of but 48, showing a ratio of 1 in 35.22 of the population; in 1850 the ratio was 1 in 27.14. The number of marriages during the autumn months make 31.50 of the whole, in the summer 23.76. Only 470 (12.49 per cent.) of the grooms were born in Boston; 511 (13.58) in other towns in the State; 809 (21.50) natives of other States. Less than 48 per cent. were native born. Of the brides, 718 (19.08 per cent.) were born in Boston; 475 (12.62) in other towns in the State; 644 (17.12) born in other States. The number of marriages in which both parents were foreign was 1578, 42 per cent., and in which one or both were foreign was 2319, 61.64 per cent. The above relative proportions of foreign and native marriages vary slightly from year to year.

Over 67 per cent. of the grooms were between 21 and 30 years of age, and 2.37 per cent. minors. Of the last, eight were eighteen years of age. There were nine minor grooms who married brides under 18 years. One of 19 married a maiden of 14; and one of 20 married a bride of 35. One man of 83 married a woman of 43, and another of 70 a bride of 43, one of 72 a bride of 43, and another of 77 a bride of 45. Two men of 35 and 36 married misses of 16 and 17. Over 70 per cent. of the brides were between 20 and 30 years, and but 2.87 per cent. above 40. In 448 instances the brides were older than the grooms. One bachelor married a widow three times before married, and two grooms three times widowed married a spinster and a widow. The number of colored marriages was 101, a decrease of 13 from the previous year.

Of the grooms the principal occupants were as follows: Laborers, 613; clerks, 395; carpenters, 264; merchants, etc., 198; mariners, 191; teamsters, 129; machinists, 121; painters, 98; shoemakers, 80—making more than half of the whole number. Of these 3215 were residents of Boston; 381 in other towns of the State; 166 in other places. Of the brides 3397 belonged in Boston, 229 in other towns, 136 other States. The number of certificates of intention of marriage issued was 4424, an increase of 136 over 1871.

The number of deaths in 1872 was 8090, an increase of 2203, or 37.40 per cent., a mortality of one death in 30.53 of the population of 265,000. In the last sixty years there were only three years in which the death rate exceeded or approximated that of 1872; in 1847, 31 in 1000; 1848, 28.50; 1849, 38 in 1000. During the two years first named, typhus fever and diarrheal disorders prevailed to a great extent, and in 1849 cholera, when the deaths were 658. The large mortality of 1872 was chargeable to smallpox, the number of deaths being 738, or 9.12 per cent. of the whole. Otherwise the mortality was in excess of that of 1871. In a comparison with other cities, it is shown that with the exception of Richmond and Cincinnati, there was an increase in each of the principal cities of the Union.

The excess of deaths of males over females in the first six months was 60; in the last, 284; making an excess of 344; in 1871 the excess was but 22; the average for ten years was 109. In a table showing the births and deaths for the last ten years, it is shown that the average births was 6337, an average of deaths 5030—showing an excess of births of 13,071 in the whole time; in 1872 the births exceeded the deaths 1180. Another table given shows that 68 per cent. of the decedents were native born, very nearly identical with the proportion of the preceding year. Of the foreign decedents, those of Irish birth made 64.14 per cent.; the preceding year nearly 70 per cent. Of the male 31.78, and female 32.50 were foreign born. There is but a slight variation from year to year in the character of the parentage of the decedents—those of native in 1872, making 29 per cent., Irish 48 and foreign entirely 67.

In another table it is shown that while the children born of foreign parentage make 67.14 per cent. of all the birth, the decedents of foreign parentage of all ages make no less than 71.25 per cent. of all who died—showing that the death rate of this class exceeded the birth rate more than four per cent. On the other hand, while the birth rate of American children was only 32.86 per cent., the death rate of the same class was four per cent. lower than that.

In another table it is shown that 26.66 per cent. of the whole number of deaths were under twelve months. In 1821, the deaths under one year were only fourteen per cent. of all who died; in 1825, 17.18 per cent.; in 1836, 22.57 per cent.; in 1846, 20.55 per cent. Since the last-named year the proportion has gradually increased, so that it has rarely fallen as low as in the last-named year. It is also shown that 42.20 per cent. of all who died were under five years, and that 45.33 per cent. failed to reach their tenth year, although only three per cent. died between five and ten. More than half—fifty-one per cent.—died under twenty years of age; there were 535 who were over seventy years of age, 6.61 per cent. of the whole number being females.

Another table shows that 126 died on the day of their birth; 1327 between one day and six months; 1257 between one and five years; 253 between 5 and 10; 127 between 10 and 15. The decedents of foreign parentage make 73.50 of the whole number. Of the number of deaths over 15 years, 4296,—53.10 per cent.—the Irish born make 39 per cent. The highest per centage in every decennial period was between 40 and 50, when the foreign decedents made 67.18 of all who died. Of all who died over 80 years, the native-born make 54.36 per cent. Of the decedents, 1143 males were married, 702 foreign born; and of females 892 were married, 345 foreign born. The number of colored decedents was 173—107 males, 66 females.

Of the causes of death the principal ones were the following: Accidents, 286; diseases of brain, 430; cancer, 107; cholera infantum and diarrhoea, 915—an increase of 250; consumption, 1161—an increase of 81, but with a smaller percentage; croup and diphtheria, 94—a decrease of 34; disease of heart, 270—an increase of 31; marasmus, 305—an increase of 88; nephritis and nephritis, 121; pneumonia, 517—an increase of 172; smallpox, 738—453 males, 285 females; in Ward 2, 222; Ward 7, 86; in hospitals, 210—57 per cent. children of foreign parentage. Less than six per cent. were between 5 and 15 years of age; scarlet fever, 258—an increase of 147; typhoid fever, 229—an increase of 53; meningitis cerebro spinalis, 60.

Of the deaths by consumption, 18.25 per cent. of the males, and 21 per cent. of the females, were under 20 years of age. Nearly 17 per cent. of the deaths were of children under 5 years of age. The 548 deaths embraced 103 laborers, and there were 118 whose employments were not given. There were 31 clerks, which was the next highest number.

Tables are given showing the localities of the deaths from cerebro-spinal meningitis, scarlet fever and typhoid fever. Of the first named there were 34 males, 26 females, and the greater portion of the deaths were at the South End, Roxbury and Dorchester. Of the whole number of deaths from smallpox, 222 were in Ward 2, and 86 in Ward 7, making 41.73 per cent, and 135 were at Gallop's Island. The natiivities were—261 born in Boston, 109 in Ireland, and 131 in British American provinces. Of the 420 native born, 265 were children of foreign parentage. Less than 6 per cent. were between 5 and 15 years. In Wards 1, 2 and 7, containing less than 32 per cent. of the population, the deaths by typhoid fever were 41 per cent. of the mortality in the wards. Ward 2, with 10 per cent. of the population, had 14.78 per cent. of the deaths, and Ward 7, with 12 per cent of the population, had 15.27 of the deaths. Scarlet fever was the most fatal in East Boston and in Wards 7, 12 and 15.

In Wards 1, 2 and 7, containing less than 32 per cent. of the population, the deaths were 41 per cent. of the whole; in Wards 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14 and 16, with 48.48 of population, the deaths were 48.48. Ward 2 has ten per cent. of the population, while 14.79 of the deaths occurred there; Ward 7, 12 per cent. of population, 15.27 per cent. of deaths; Ward 1, 790 deaths, 11 per cent. of mortality, 10 per cent. of population. The daily average of deaths during the year was 22.16.

Ordered to be sent down.

HEARING ON ORDER OF NOTICE.

The order of notice on the petition of Francis Brown and others, that Waltham street be paved and the railroad tracks be removed from the street, was taken up.

Francis Brown, representing the petitioners, made a statement that Waltham street was paved with the ordinary cobble stone, and that no alteration in paving had been made since the street was laid out, except in occasional repairs. The laying of the railroad track was an injury to the street, and as the track was laid eight or nine years ago, and its use was continued for a year or two only, and been disused since, the switches being removed, there was no reason to the petitioners why the track should not be removed. The travel has greatly increased, and great annoyance is occasioned by the unevenness of the pavement.

Mr. Brown made further remarks, in which he said the attention of the residents was drawn particularly to the subject from the petition for repaving the street near the Franklin Schoolhouse with wood.

William Wallace and G. B. Pfitnam, the last-named master of the Franklin School, concurred with Mr. Brown as to the necessity of repaving the streets, removal of the tracks, and in relation to the great increase of travel through the streets, making it particularly noisy.

The report was recommitted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order to build a sewer in Harrison avenue, from Malden street to Union-park street.

Order to abate certain sewer assessments on Forest street and Conant street.

Order to allow Clifford R. Weld of Roxbury to take birds and their eggs for scientific purposes.

Order to pave Merrimac street, from Haymarket square to Causeway street, with granite blocks, at an estimated cost of $30,000.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The petitions from Bigelow, Kennard & Co. and others, W. H. West and others, Samuel R. Russell, S. S. Lord, Hannah Daley, and of Samuel H. Russell and others, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The report and orders for erection of a stable on city lot, Highland street, for Health and Paving departments, and for a loan of $85,000 to be applied therefor, coming up referred to the Committee on Health, the reference was concurred in.

The order for Committee on Ordinances to report an ordinance to prohibit discharge of cannon on the Common without authority of City Council, coming up amended so as to include "other public grounds," and for said committee to report on the "expediency" of the proposed measure, the amendment was concurred in.

The report and order for a commission of five persons to be appointed to examine the act incorporating the city and all other general and special statutes for government of the city, and report what changes are necessary or expedient in view of prospective increases in area and population, were "recommitted to the Committee on Ordinances," in concurrence.

The orders authorizing temporary accommodations to be provided for a steam fire engine and men and horses connected therewith, on Parker, near Beacon street; also to purchase, hire or erect upon city lands in burnt district a temporary house for a steam fire engine and the men and horses connected therewith, coming up with amendments to charge the expense to the appropriation for "Public Buildings," instead of "Fire Department," the amendments were concurred in.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Order to authorize the Directors for Public Institutions to construct a telegraph line from their office to the institutions at South Boston, at an expense of $1200.

Votes of thanks to commandants at the United States Navy Yard and Fort Warren for valuable military services rendered on the occasion of the recent fire.

Order for the passage of an ordinance making it imperative to construct fire-proof floors in certain buildings. Referred to the Committee on the Survey, etc., of Buildings.

Orders authorizing the erection of a police station house on city land on Fourth street, between K and I streets, at an estimated cost of $45,000; and for a loan therefor.

Order to allow and pay $600 per annum for rent of armory of Co. B, Ninth Regiment M. V. M., in hall 577 Washington street.

Order authorizing a transfer of not exceeding $3000 from Reserved Fund to the amount authorized for a hose house at corner of O and Fourth streets, South Boston.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of John Mallay for abatement of a sewer assessment in Newman street, South Boston. Accepted.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on the Fire Department, on the part of this Board, to whom was referred the petition of Briggs & Shattuck for a license to keep and sell petroleum, etc. at No. 165 Milk street, made a report that a license be granted on condition that the petroleum be stored in the cellar and not in the yard of said premises. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses, as follows: John M. Burke, to exhibit a panorama at Wait's Hall, June 20, 21; J. W. Pickering, to exhibit the "Fairy Sisters" at 176 Tremont street, from June 12 to July 5; Hugh Blakeney, to give concerts at 443 Broadway; J. D. K. Willis, as an auctioneer; also to twelve newsboys and three bootblacks; to sundry persons as victuallers and for wagon licenses, and for transfer of wagon licenses. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on petition of P. J. Ryan for a license as a victualler corner of Beacon street and Western avenue; and of Morris Jones as a victualler No. 50 Beach street; also on petition of Henry Walton, for a hack stand in Lagrange street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of petitions for stables as follows: Blanchard & Snow, to add sixteen stalls to stable on Endicott street, corner of Stillman street; Wilcutt & Grant, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse on Bowdoin avenue near Union avenue; Thomas Carbery, to build a stable of wood for ten horses at 1482 Tremont street; Henry Melbroy, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Villa court; Edward Whiting, to occupy a wooden stable for three horses on Tileston avenue; A. D. Gould, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Marcella street, between Centre and Highland streets; and leave to withdraw, as per request, on petition of Stillman Wilson to occupy a wooden stable for one horse on Third street, adjacent to No. 433. Severally accepted.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on the Treasury Department, to whom were referred the City Treasurer's accounts of the Stoughton School and Poor Funds and the Gibson School Fund for the year ending April 30, 1873, made a report that they have carefully examined the several accounts and find them correct. Accepted.

Alderman Brown, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Assessors' Department, to whom was referred the order to refund certain taxes paid by Joseph H. Billings and another, special administrator, made a report recommending that the order be passed in a new draft, as follows:

Ordered, That the City Treasurer be directed to refund to Joseph H. Billings and William Gaston, executors of the Kingsbury estate, the sum of $169 65 on account of taxes erroneously assessed upon them in 1872; said sum to be charged to the receipts for taxes.

The order was passed.

Alderman Brown, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of the Mercantile Savings Institution for the refunding of certain taxes assessed upon the property of said institution for the year 1871, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the City Treasurer be directed to refund to the Mercantile Institution for Savings the sum of $550 60, on account of taxes erroneously assessed upon said institution in 1871; said sum to be charged to the receipts from taxes.

The order was passed.

Alderman Brown from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Edward F. Thayer that the tax assessed upon Thayer & Brother in 1867 may be abated, made a report recommending that the petitioner have leave to withdraw; also leave to withdraw on petition of Sidney Fisher for an abatement of the tax assessed upon his personal estate in 1872. Severally accepted.

REGULATIONS RELATING TO FIRES.

Alderman Quincy offered the following order:

Whereas, The Legislature of this State did on the 16th day of April, 1873, pass an act in the words following, to wit:

"Section 1. The engineer of a fire department in command at a fire shall, to the exclusion of all other persons, have the power conferred upon firewards by the fourth section of the 24th chapter of the General Statutes.

Section 2. This act shall be in force only in those cities in which it is accepted by the City Council, and in those towns in which it is accepted by the legal voters":

Now therefore it is hereby

Ordered, That the above recited act be and the same hereby is accepted by the City-Council of the city of Boston, and the Committee of Ordinances are hereby instructed to report an ordinance in accordance therewith.

Alderman Quincy made the following remarks in explanation of the order:

The General Statutes empower three firewards or three engineers of a fire department to direct the demolition of buildings as they shall judge necessary to check a conflagration; and if the fire is thereby checked, or stops short of the building destroyed, the owner is entitled to compensation.

In addition to this statute right, which protects both the officers who exercise it and the owner of property sacrificed, there is the common law right, which protects neither. That is, any citizen may destroy property to check the spread of a fire, but if such destruction turns out to have been unnecessary, he is answerable in damages, and if necessary and the fire is thereby checked, yet the owner has no remedy.

Now the power which the statute gives to a majority of those persons to act on their own judgment at a crisis, with a knowledge that the owners will be saved harmless, should be, I submit, a one-man power, like that of a general in the field. The absurdity of calling a council of war at the turning point of a doubtful battle is evident. Now the only right which the engineer in command now has to destroy property is the common-law right of every citizen, which he exercises at his peril. The present act proposes to confer on him alone the statute authority by which his judgment will be protected and the property owner compensated for a sacrifice. The act was drawn at the suggestion of his Honor the Mayor, and if it commends itself to the City Council, certainly should be adopted with the least possible delay.

Alderman Clark said he did not sufficiently understand the character of the order to enable him to act at this time upon it, and he hoped it would be laid over.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the order was referred to the Committee on the Fire Department.

SALE OF FIREWORKS.

Alderman Gaffield offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Board of Engineers of the Fire Department be requested to abstain from granting licenses during the present year for the keeping, storage or sale of fireworks in the city of Boston.

Alderman Gaffield asked for the second reading of the order at this time.

Alderman Stebbins inquired whether many licenses had not already been granted which would be effected by the order.

Alderman Gaffield replied that he did not know; yet it was a singular and absurd arrangement that the licensing of the sale of fireworks was intrusted to the same parties whose duty it was to put out fires. We had had fires enough already, and should have no more by the help of the Engineer's Department. Whether any licenses have been granted or not, there should be no more licenses granted for the sale of fireworks by the Engineers of the Fire Department, and the expression of the Board would prevent further action.

Alderman Stebbins was of opinion that it should be ascertained whether licenses had been granted before passing the order.

Alderman Gaffield believed the sale of fireworks should be stopped, for the safety of the city, and referred to the great fire in Portland as having its origin in fire crackers, and a large fire in East Boston originated in the same way. As this was the special time for the sale of fireworks, the order should be passed before licenses were granted.

Alderman Power said he was opposed to the use of fireworks in the city, and in favor of all measures designed for the prevention of fires. There could be no doubt that a large amount of money had been invested in fireworks, which might be sold to go into the country, and he would not stop the sale for such purposes. The prevention of the use of fireworks was absolutely necessary within the city limits, but he would not prohibit the sale for use outside of the city. He did not know what course to propose, but believed that the order should be modified.

Alderman Clark said the suggestion of the Alderman from Ward 12 was a good one, for there were large quantities of fireworks which were purchased to be sent off to small towns. If a prohibition of the entire sale was made, it would cut off a large trade, and it would be better to prohibit the use of fireworks in the city than to attempt to cover the entire ground. It would not be fair to interfere with arrangements made to sell fireworks to be sent into the country, but to prevent the use of them in this city would be doing good service. He hoped the order would be laid over for the time being.

Alderman Stebbins said he had just learned that sixty-five licenses had already been granted for the sale of fireworks, and these licenses run till next May. He did not see how, under such circumstances, the order could be passed.

Alderman Quincy said he could not see how the storage and sale of such fireworks could be dangerous, but the regulations to prevent the discharge of them could not be too stringent. To interfere with the trade of wholesale dealers, who had provided for the sale of fireworks, would be too much like interfering with private rights. They might prevent the discharge of fireworks within the city limits, but it was not desirable to prevent the sale for use outside of the city.

Alderman Power believed it would be better to have the order lie over, for we have now all the law that is necessary to prevent the discharge of fireworks in the city.

Alderman Clark concurred in the remarks that we have law enough on the subject, and it was only necessary to have it enforced.

Alderman Gaffield said it appeared, then, that for the petty sum of one dollar for each, the Board of Engineers have issued 65 licenses, and if not prevented might grant 665, giving licenses to every corner grocery, and already thousands of fire crackers might be in the hands of little children. If it was believed there was no danger from fire, and the city had not already been sufficiently baptized with fire, then there might be delay in preventing the further sale of fireworks.

Alderman Power believed the law against the use of fireworks in the city, could not be too strictly enforced, yet they could not be justified in stopping the sale of fireworks, when thousands of dollars had been invested in the business. It would not be right to stop the sale by such persons without fair notice.

Alderman Gaffield moved to lay the order on the table, which was carried.

Alderman Gaffield subsequently offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Chief-of-Police be instructed to prosecute all persons who keep, store or sell fireworks in the city of Boston without a license; and also to prosecute persons who discharge fireworks, fire crackers or other explosive substances in any public street, square, lane or alley in the city of Boston, without a license so to do.

Alderman Gaffield said this order seemed to meet the views of the members of the Board, and he hoped it would be passed.

The order was passed.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Brown—

Ordered, That a committee, with such as the Common Council may join, be appointed to make the annual examination of the bonds of the several city officers.

Alderman Brown and Bigelow were appointed the committee.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That the voting lists of this city for 1873-74 be prepared and revised under the direction of the City Clerk, who is authorized to employ such additional assistance as may be necessary, the expense of such preparation and revision to be charged to the appropriation for that purpose.

Alderman Gibson offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be requested to report to the City Council upon the expediency of laying water pipes from the Beacon-Hill Reservoir through portions of Tremont, Washington, Devonshire and Congress streets, for the exclusive use of the Fire Department in the extinguishment of fires, and submit therewith estimates of the expense of laying such pipes.

Alderman Gibson stated, in explanation of the above order, that the Beacon Hill Reservoir was 135 feet higher than high-water mark, and by laying independent lines of pipes through the streets indicated it would give a supply of water on all that business territory exclusively, which would throw it over any buildings from its own force. When the Parker-Hill Reservoir shall be completed it will give the water a pressure of its own, so that every man may use a pipe from his own door to force the water to the top of his building. We shall then have a never-failing source of supply, far ahead of any stream which can now be thrown by any steam fire engine. This supply from separate pipes will give more water and an outside power, and will be of great service for fires.

Alderman Gaffield inquired if there would be room in the streets for another line of water pipes, with the present pipes, gas pipes, sewers, etc.

Alderman Gibson replied that there would be room enough, and it was the opinion of the Assistant City-Engineer that a pipe of eight inches would be sufficient.

Alderman Clark said he was not sufficiently posted on the subject to enable him to vote upon it, and hoped it would be laid over, for it would undoubtedly involve large expenditures.

Alderman Gaffield stated that it was simply an order of inquiry, to be referred to the Committee on Water.

Alderman Clark withdrew his objections, and the order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Chief Engineer be, and he hereby is authorized to organize and equip a horse hose company for Hose Carriage No 12, to be located at South Boston Point; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Ordered, That there be paid to Joseph G. Russell $1700, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Milk street; also that there be paid to said Russell $46,000, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Congress street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to William Minot, Jr., trustee, $900, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Arch street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to the heirs of Hannah Allen $5850, for land taken from the widening of Summer street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to Charles A. Welch, trustee, $1500, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Federal street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to the President and Fellows of Harvard College $42,050, for the land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Hawley street; also to pay said President and Fellows $20,850 for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Arch street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to Mrs. Lucy Morse $4258, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Warren street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Warren Street.

Alderman Clark offered the following order:

Whereas, Certain statements and reports have been made in the public press and elsewhere to the effect that the steam engines, hose carriages, firemen and the necessary apparatus of the Fire Department of this city, have not the right of way in the public streets when proceeding in answer to a fire alarm towards the locality indicated thereby; that on their arrival at their posts at the scene of the fire they have not the exclusive right to the streets in the immediate vicinity; that they have no special rights to enable them to protect their lines of hose from being run over, cut, or otherwise rendered unserviceable; and, further, that in none of these cases have the police authorities a right to arrest those who thus interfere with and lessen the efficiency of the Fire Department; therefore, be it

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to inquire of the City Solicitor what the laws are bearing on the following subjects, and to submit the reply to this Board:

First, Do the laws now in force grant to the fire engines and their necessary accompaniments, when hastening to a fire, the right of way through the public streets of this city? Is this right absolute? Or, if not, in what degree is it restricted? Moreover, if this right exists, is there any penalty, civil or criminal, to which those shall be subjected who, through wilfulness or carelessness, disregard it?

Secondly, Is there any penalty which shall be incurred by those who illegally drive private vehicles over lines of hose laid by firemen in the streets for the purpose of suppressing a fire, thereby materially injuring them?

Thirdly, In case of a fire, what right or authority has the representative of the Fire Department of this city over the streets in its immediate vicinity?

The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be requested to notify the State Commissioners of Public Lands that the city is ready to accept the conveyance of Berkeley street, eighty feet in width, in accordance with the terms of the act approved June 9, 1873.

Alderman Clark stated, in offering the order, that he had just received information of the signing by the Governor of the act to convey Berkeley street to the city, and he wished to show the Legislature the willingness with which they would accept the street when it was what they asked for.

ORDER OF NOTICE.

On petition of Patterson & Lavender, for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at their factory on Burke street. Hearing Monday, June 30, 4 P. M.

On the proposed construction of a sewer in Lexington street, between Prescott and Eagle streets. Hearing Monday next, June 16, 4 P. M.

Adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

JUNE 12, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at eight o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The petitions of William Evans and others and of Stetson & Pope and others, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The Auditor's monthly exhibit, June 7 (City Doc. No. 82, 1873), and annual report of City Registrar (City Doc. 72, 1873), were severally ordered to be placed on file.

The reference to Committee on Streets of a resolve and order from Street Commissioners, for widening of Pearl street, near Milk street, was concurred in.

The reference to Committee on Fire Department of the message from Mayor, transmitting a communication on the necessity of greater efficiency of the Fire Department from the representatives of various insurance companies which sustained losses from the fire of 30th ult. being under consideration—

On motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 it was laid on the table.

The reference to Committee on Fire Department of a preamble and order for the acceptance of the act of the Legislature of 1873, giving the Engineer of the Fire Department the power conferred upon firewards by the fourth section of the 24th chapter of the General Statutes; and for Committee on Ordinances to report an ordinance in accordance therewith, was concurred in.

The following orders were severally read once:

Order authorizing a horse hose company to be established for Hose Carriage No. 12, at South Boston Point.

Report and order for the Treasurer to refund to the Mercantile Institution for Savings $550 60, on account of taxes erroneously assessed on said institution in 1871.

Report and order, in a new draft, to refund certain taxes paid by Joseph H. Billings et al.

Report, resolve and order from the Board of Street Commissioners that Broad street should be widened to 100 feet from Atlantic avenue to Summer street, at an adjudged expense of $780,887 25. (City Doc. No. 67, 1873.)

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 moved a suspension of the rules for the passage of the last mentioned order at this time.

Mr. West of Ward 16 wished for the reason for a passage of the order now, believing there was no necessity for immediate action.

Mr. Burt replied that the necessity for this was as in other cases to give parties interested their lines so that they may build.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 opposed immediate action, believing that there was no necessity for haste, and that the rules should be complied with in laying the matter over, so that if any one should be opposed there would be an opportunity to be heard.

The motion for a suspension of the rules was lost.

The order for a joint committee to make the annual examination of bonds of city officers was passed, in concurrence, and Messrs. Blackmar of Ward 11, Darrow of Ward 9, and Holmes of Ward 6 were joined to the committee.

The order requesting the Water Board to report on expediency of laying water pipes from Beacon-Hill Reservoir through portions of Tremont, Washington, Devonshire and Congress streets, for exclusive use of Fire Department, and submit therewith estimates of the expense, being under consideration,

Mr. Loring of Ward 12 submitted a substitute, which was adopted, and the order, as amended, was passed, as follows:

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be requested to consider and report to the City Council as soon as possible what alterations in and addition to the present system of water pipes and hydrants will be required to render them of such capacity as will afford an adequate supply of water for all necessary purposes, to include the number and kind of hydrants, size and quantity of pipes, and cost, including expenses of laying the same; first, for the city proper; second, for South and East Boston; third, for Roxbury and Dorchester; also what portions of the work could be completed during the present year, and whether any additional appropriation for the same will be needed.

Reports, leave to withdraw, were accepted in concurrence, as follows:

Of Sydney Fisher, for abatement of tax of 1872.

Of Edward F. Thayer & Brother, for abatement of tax of 1867.

The report of the Committee on Treasury Department, that they have examined the Stoughton School and Poor Funds and the Gibson School Fund, for the year ending April 30, 1873, and find the same correct, was accepted in concurrence.

The order requesting Board of Street Commissioners to notify State Commissioners that the city is ready to accept the conveyance of Berkeley street, eighty feet in width, in accordance with terms of act of June 9, 1873, was passed, in concurrence.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order authorizing a contract to be made for watering streets around the public grounds, at a cost not to exceed $1000.

Order authorizing a clock to be placed in tower of Ticknor Schoolhouse, at a cost not to exceed $1000.

Report and order to allow and pay to Henry Doherty $746 98, for loss on account of settling of earth deposited on Madison square.

Report and order authorizing 4800 feet of land to be purchased on corner of Longwood and Bookline avenues, at not exceeding one dollar per square foot, and the erection thereon of an engine house, at an estimated cost, for land and building, of $28,000; and for a loan therefor.

Request and order authorizing a transfer of $5100 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for Widening Federal-street Bridge. (Printed City Doc. No. 80, 1873.)

Report and order for Mayor to execute, in behalf of the city, an indenture as annexed to said order, with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and other parties named therein, concerning the occupation of South Boston Flats. (Printed City Doc. No. 71, 1873.)

MUSIC ON THE COMMON, ETC.

The order for a joint committee to be appointed to arrange for music on the Common and in other parts of the city, at a cost not exceeding $3000, specially assigned to 8½ o'clock, was taken up and passed, Mr. Bicknell only voting in the negative.

Messrs. Caton of Ward 11, Burditt of Ward 16, Prescott of Ward 9, Bowles of Ward 12, and Boardman of Ward 14 were appointed the committee.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Mary A. Winn, to be compensated for personal injuries caused by an alleged defect in Temple street. Referred to Committee on Claims.

Joseph Bird, to be allowed to present to the City Council his plan for preserving property by putting out fires. Referred to Committee on Fire Department.

Michael Scanlan, that further time be granted him in building on land purchased of the city of Boston on Fourth street in 1871. Referred to Committee on Public Lands.

L. Felch, to be allowed to put up a wooden building larger than allowed by the ordinance. Referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

COST OF WIDENING AND EXTENDING WATER STREET.

The following communication was received from the Street Commissioners:

Boston, June 12, 1873.

To the Honorable City Council—The Street Commissioners, in reference to your order of May 26, would state their estimate of the cost of widening Water street, from Congress to Broad street, to fifty feet, and extending it thence to Atlantic avenue, to be $392,650.

Referred to Committee on Streets.

REPORT OF DIRECTORS OF EAST BOSTON FERRIES.

The third annual report of the directors of the East Boston ferries states that the boats John Adams, Daniel Webster, Ben Franklin, Lincoln and General Grant are in good repair and condition. On examination, the Jefferson was found wanting so many repairs that the directors considered it inexpedient to repair her, and shall ask permission of your honorable bodies to sell said boat as soon as the new boat now in progress is completed; when we trust we shall have all the boats required for the present, with ordinary repairs.

The buildings, drops and slips are in very good repair and condition; the new drops and slips, which have been delayed so much in consequence of the extremely hard winter just passed, will soon be completed.

He would like to know who paid for the Fire Department, the people or the underwriters? He looked upon the insurance officers as but policy dealers, and he as well as others had lost money by the late fires, in the increased rates of insurance. The more insurance companies the more fires there were, in his belief. He did not believe in more boards, for it was almost impossible to get access to the newly created Board of Health, and he feared a fire board would be more difficult to approach. It was not the Fire Department either that was in fault, but the obstructions to their operations, the kind of buildings put up, supply of water, etc., and he believed the order of the gentleman from Ward 12, which had been passed, covered the whole matter.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 said there was little use in dwelling on this matter as had been so eloquently done by the gentleman from Ward 5, for on this subject there was no disagreement, and every one in the community believed that something must be done. The only question was—what is the best step to take? The gentleman from Ward 12 states that the whole subject is before his committee, and it must be agreed that there could not be a better committee. It is desirable to prevent a conflict in action, and as the matter must go to the Committee on Ordinances at some time, it would be as well to have it go to them at once.

Mr. West replied to the remarks of Mr. Shaw in relation to underwriters, that so far from their being applicable to Boston alone, he had it from those who knew, that the question under consideration by underwriters was the withdrawal of some of their risks from all large cities.

Mr. Shaw regretted to be compelled to speak again, and in doing so he said they were not there to discuss the merits of men, for every member was a peer of any other member. If the Council chose to dodge the responsibility relating to this matter by refusing the appointment of a committee, then they might do so, and he would have his record made. The gentleman from Ward 16 had denied that the convention proposed of underwriters had reference to policies in Boston, but with the consent of the Council he would read the article in the Advertiser.

Mr. Shaw read the article in question, and there was no reference in it, he said, to other cities. The proposed withdrawal of policies was on the ground of the incompetency of the Fire Department, and the parties represented in the proposed convention were connected with home and foreign insurance companies. Besides this, there had been a meeting in State street today, having reference to this same subject, and the protestations of underwriters have come up, and will continue to come up, showing a want of confidence in the Fire Department.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 said, as a member of the Committee on Ordinances, he had no pride as to having this matter submitted to them, and in fact would prefer to have it referred to a special committee. The gentleman from Ward 3 had stated the facts in the case, and he assured his colleague that the Daily Advertiser did not control him, much less the underwriters. The question was not here as one for the benefit of insurance companies and underwriters, for they can take care of themselves and rob the public. Neither did he believe that the matter was here because of any cry against the Fire Department, for he believed the city of Boston had one of the best fire departments in the country, and the man who had said otherwise two years ago would have been laughed at.

He repeated that there was no better fire department in any city in the country. Let the insurance offices abandon their policies and give up their offices and others will flock in and there will be more competition than ever. The fact that the City Government and the Legislature have taken action on the subject of fires, and better buildings are put up, all will induce them to come in here. The question of abandoning policies was all nonsense, and the question to be considered was, shall the motion to adopt the order be reconsidered. Both orders were passed and one had been reconsidered,—now shall the other be? Aside from the matter of courtesy to the Committee on Ordinances, which has the subject under consideration, is it an object to refer the question to another committee?

Mr. West, in reply to Mr. Shaw, said he got his information in what he stated from the agents of underwriters, while that gentleman got his from a communication in a newspaper.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 moved the previous question, which was sustained; when the motion to reconsider was lost, by a vote of 11 to 35.

The Chair appointed as the committee under the order, Messrs. West of Ward 15, Shaw of Ward 5, Dean of Ward 12, Denny of Ward 9, and Powers of Ward 4.

On motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14—

Ordered, That the Water Board consider the expediency, and report the cost, of building five reservoirs at the intersection of streets, under the sidewalks, to contain about two thousand gallons each; the same to connect with a four-inch pipe from the street main.

Mr. Whiston of Ward 8 offered the following orders:

Ordered, That the order approved June 6, 1873, requesting the Committee on the Fire Department to investigate the cause of the fire of the 30th ult., be and the same is hereby rescinded.

Ordered, That a special committee, consisting of five members of the Common Council, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, be appointed to investigate the cause of said fire and the causes of the subsequent fires which have occurred in this city and the efforts made to suppress them, and report the result of their investigation to the City Council.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 moved that the orders be laid on the table. Rejected.

Mr. Flynn called for a division of the orders, and hoped the Council would be consistent in their action, and if so, the first order should be passed, when the other could be referred to the same committee which had been appointed. There could be no harm in rescinding the order.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14, as a member of the Committee on Fire Department, hoped the order would be passed, for there appeared to be an outside feeling that the Committee on Fire Department was disposed to whitewash everything connected with the department. Yet he would say that it was not so, and that Captain Damrell did not wish that any whitewashing should be done, but that the fullest investigation should take place.

Mr. Whiston moved to strike out the last part of the order.

The Chair stated that the last order was not under consideration.

The first order was passed.

Mr. Whiston said he would withdraw the other order.

The Chair stated that it was under consideration.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 moved its reference to the special committee which had been appointed.

Mr. Flynn inquired if the subject matter was not the same.

The Chair stated that it was not.

Mr. Jones did not think it necessary to appoint a new committee, which the order required.

Mr. Flynn moved to lay the order on the table, which was carried.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, having received the accompanying request from the Chief-Engineer and the Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department, namely, to make such additions to the house of Engine Company No. 16 as are necessary to accommodate Hook and Ladder Company No. 6, made a report, as follows:

They have had plans prepared which have the approval of the Chief-Engineer, and received estimates for the performance of the work, the cost of which, as per estimates received, will amount to $18,000.

The committee would recommend the passage of the accompanying orders, from the fact that the proposed addition furnishes accommodations for Hook and Ladder Company No. 6, now without shelter, and room for a horse hose carriage besides:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to build such an addition as may be necessary to the house occupied by Engine No. 16 to accommodate Hook and Ladder Company No. 6, at an estimated cost of $18,000.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund the sum of $18,000; the same to be applied for building the addition to Engine House No. 16.

On motion of Mr. Wells, the orders were laid on the table.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9, from Joint Standing Committee on Health, to whom was referred the communication from the Committee on Public Buildings respecting the procuring of plans and estimates for a city stable on land belonging to the city situated on Highland street, with an order for the construction of said stable at a cost of $85,000, after giving the subject a careful consideration, submitted the following statement:

The stable on Highland street used by the Health and Paving departments at the present time, is a one and one-half story building, about sixty-five feet long by thirty-five feet wide, containing thirty-six stalls, all of which are occupied at the present time. The building is of wood and an old structure, wholly inadequate for the present requirements of the Highland District. Enlarged accommodations and more teams should at once be supplied, in order that the work required may be performed.

It is proposed to erect a new brick stable on the present site, two stories high, 195 feet deep and 61 feet front, to contain therein sixty stalls. With this accommodation there will be ample room to meet the demands for some years.

The committee would therefore recommend a concurrence in the report and order passed by the Board of Aldermen.

The report was accepted, and the question being upon the passage of the order—

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 inquired if the stable was designed for any other purpose.

Mr. Denny replied that it was entirely for the use of the Paving and Health departments, for which it was much needed. It was a matter before a previous government, and came to this City Council as a part of the unfinished business of last year.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 moved that the order be laid on the table, which was carried.

Adjourned.

Ordered to be placed on file.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE GRAND JURY.

The Grand Jury of Suffolk County, having duly served their term and performed the duties required of them, think it well before separating to make several recommendations to your honorable body.

They respectfully recommend that accommodations for tramps or casual homeless people be provided in connection with the police stations, separate and distinct from the quarters assigned persons arrested for crime; that female prisoners be not transported in the same vans with male prisoners; that freedom of conscience of all inmates of institutions under management or control of the city, be duly respected and religious services and practices, under proper regulations, but of a nature best calculated to influence and reform them, be provided or permitted there.

JOHN A. HAVEN,
HORACE B. FULLER,
SAMUEL TUCKERMAN,
Committee of Grand Jury.

Referred to Joint Committee on Public Institutions.

HEARING ON ORDER OF NOTICE.

The hearing on the order of notice on the proposed construction of a Sewer in Lexington street, between Prescott and Eagle streets, was taken up. No person appeared in relation thereto, and the report was recommended.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order to construct a sewer in Alpine street, at its westerly end.

Order to construct a sewer in Fruit street, from North Grove street to Blossom street.

Order to pave Eighth street, between E and Dorchester streets, with granite blocks, at an estimated cost of $9000.

Order to postpone the collection of an assessment on heirs of James McMahan, for a sewer in Eighth street.

Order to print for distribution ten thousand copies of the acts to annex Brighton, Brookline, Charlestown and West Roxbury to this city.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The petitions of Joseph Bird, L. Petsch, Michael Scanlan and Mary A. Winn were severally referred, in concurrence.

The third annual report of the Directors of the East Boston Ferries (City Doc. No. 81) was ordered to be placed on file.

Report from Board of Street Commissioners, that the estimated expense of widening and extending Water street to Atlantic avenue is $392,650, was referred to Joint Committee on Streets, in concurrence.

The order to appoint a joint special committee to consider the expediency of reorganizing the Fire Department in this city was concurred in, and Aldermen Quincy, Power and Bigelow were joined to the committee.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Order to rescind order of June 6, appointing the Committee on the Fire Department to investigate the cause and management of the recent fire.

Order for Water Board to report on the expediency and cost of building reservoirs, to hold 2000 gallons each, at the intersection of streets, and to connect the same with water pipes.

The following order was considered:

Order requesting the Water Board to report on the expediency of laying water pipes from Beacon-Hill Reservoir through portions of Tremont, Washington, Devonshire and Congress streets, for the exclusive use of the Fire Department, and submit therewith estimates of the expense, came up amended so as to require said board to report what improvements can be made in the system of supply pipes and hydrants to insure the delivery of water sufficient to extinguish fires; and to report cost of same for city proper, East Boston, South Boston, Roxbury and Dorchester.

Alderman Gibson said he offered the original order, not thinking it would lead to such a range as was contemplated by the substitute order, which would require much more expense than the taxpayers might be willing to pay for. Under the order offered by him, as he suggested, an engine would be provided at every man's door, with power sufficient to throw water 135 feet, over any building. He was not particularly opposed to the substitute, yet he did not believe the taxpayers would be willing to incur the great expense of relaying all the pipes.

Alderman Stebbins said that what they all desire is to get information in regard to the pipes necessary and the quantity of water required. In that respect it would make little difference as to which order was passed, and both cover the same ground. To secure the information desired, it would be better to pass this order, to save the return of the subject again to the other branch.

The order was passed, in concurrence.

MUSIC ON THE COMMON, ETC.

The order for appointment of a joint special committee to provide music on the Common and other parts of the city, and to appropriate $3000 therefor, being under consideration—

Alderman Power moved its indefinite postponement.

Alderman Clark hoped the motion would not prevail, for there was no expenditure made during the twelve months of the year which afforded more general satisfaction. It was nothing more than justice to ladies and children that these concerts should be given, and many of them should be in the afternoon for the special entertainment of those who are otherwise debarred from hearing them. He therefore hoped the motion would not prevail.

Alderman Power replied that as the City Council, from motives of economy, had struck out the appropriation for fireworks and a balloon ascension, which had always given more satisfaction than anything else, this had better be disposed of on the ground of economy and the expense be saved. There are a dozen bands which perambulate the streets, giving everybody an opportunity to hear that kind of music, and in no way could they more justly save $3000 than in the appropriation for this purpose. If they want to spend more money let it be spent in the celebration of the Fourth of July for the enjoyment of citizens and others who assemble for that purpose. He hoped they would have no more expenditures for such concerts, and that they would stick to the saving of money and dispense with such expenditures.

Alderman Stebbins stated that there was this difference in the expenditures referred to. The expenditure of $5000 for fireworks and balloon ascension was for gratification for a few hours in one day, while the proposed concerts would extend over several months. There were many persons who were unable to leave the city in the warm weather, and he was one of those, and these concerts were a source of much satisfaction to the people of the city and the outlying districts who were obliged to remain at home. If the people of South Boston were satisfied with the music of the perambulating bands, they might have it, but he and others preferred something better.

Alderman Power said he appreciated good music as well as others, but believed they had just as good a right to provide theatrical entertainments for the people as they had to furnish concerts. But if entertainments are to be provided at the public expense the Fourth of July is the day, and the people assemble on that day for the purpose of enjoying such entertainments. He believed there was something better which could be done with the money than to provide concerts, and that the taxpayers require that expenditures shall be confined to the legitimate wants of the city.

Alderman Clark stated that the discontinuance of the fireworks and the balloon ascension was not for economy's sake, but on account of a proposed experiment which invited the destruction of lives—one of the most unheard of schemes. The experiment, if carried out, would have been witnessed by 20,000 or 30,000 for half an hour; but in the expenditure of $3000 for concerts, the people of all sections of the city, young and old, would derive enjoyment. When the Aldermen preach economy, he should be reminded that he urged the expenditure of $5000 for a balloon ascension.

In relation to the failure of the appropriations for the usual fireworks and balloon ascension, he was sorry, because they are a part and parcel of the celebration of the Fourth of July; but, on the whole, he thought it was better to dispense with them. Fireworks were attended with greater danger than formerly, when there were not so many houses near the Common. Many of these dwellings are not occupied during the summer, and have glass upon their roofs, through which the rockets might enter. He was not aware, however, that the fireworks were discontinued on account of economy. There are many ways in which they might economize better than to discontinue these concerts, for there were thousands like the Alderman and himself who cannot leave the city, and can enjoy these concerts. He hoped they would concur in the passage of the order.

Alderman Power said he was not in favor of the appropriation for fireworks or for the balloon, and only advocated the appropriation for the balloon for the sake of killing the whole thing. He had expressed his opinion against the whole thing, and for the same reason he was opposed to this appropriation.

As he before said, he believed they had the same right to furnish theatrical amusements for the people as they had to furnish concerts. This was a small matter, and if they were not to throw away a dollar, it should be expended for legitimate wants and wants of necessity.

Alderman Sayward said he was not present at the discussion on the balloon, but as the Alderman said he favored that to kill it, he hoped he opposed this to pass it. He was in favor of providing music on the Common and in other sections of the city for the enjoyment of the people.

Alderman Cutter opposed the appropriation in a moral point of view, and he advised the Alderman who desired to take a lady to hear the concerts to go and get married and stay at home to a better entertainment at a less expense. He thought it was time to make a stand somewhere in stopping extravagant expenditures. Calling attention to figures, he said the cost of the Fire Department the present year would be $150,000 more than last year, the increased expense for the police $75,000, and for the Health Department $118,000. Under such circumstances he believed it was time to begin to economize, and to begin now. The giving of concerts on the Common had caused much trouble to the Police Department, and it was only single men who wished to attend such concerts, and not the married, who go into the country with their wives and children. The expenditure proposed would almost buy a fire engine.

Alderman Sayward said he was not surprised that the Alderman favored the expenditure for a balloon ascension.

Alderman Cutter called the Alderman to order, there being nothing in the order relating to balloon ascensions.

Alderman Sayward replied that he spoke of balloon ascensions because the Alderman had done so, and if he was afraid of getting his morals corrupted by attending such concerts, he would invite him out into Ward 16, where there was no danger of that kind.

The question was taken on indefinite postponement of the order, which was lost, by a vote of 5 to 6, as follows:

Yeas—Brown, Cutter, Emery, Gibson, Power.

Nays—Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

The question being on the passage of the order, it was lost, the vote being 6 to 5, not two-thirds, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Brown, Cutter, Emery, Gibson, Power.

VETO BY THE MAYOR.

Alderman Cutter took the chair, when the following communication was received from the Mayor:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL,
BOSTON, June 14, 1873.

To the Honorable Board of Aldermen: Gentlemen—I am constrained to withhold my approval of the order directing the City Treasurer to transfer and assign to William Smith & Co. all the city's interest in certain policies of insurance on the building erected for a smallpox hospital, which was destroyed by fire on the 26th of December last, and return the same herewith to the branch of the City Council in which it originated.

It appears that Messrs. Smith & Co. entered into a contract with the City of Boston on the 16th day of November, 1872, to erect a building on Sweet street, in accordance with certain plans and specifications, to be used for the purposes of a smallpox hospital. The contract provided among other things that the building should be completed on or before the 28th day of December, 1872; that the contractors should insure the building as soon as the roof was put on and complete, for such an amount as the committee of the City Council having charge of the work should direct, and should increase the amount of insurance, from time to time, under the direction of the committee, the policy to be for the benefit of the City of Boston and to be made payable to the city in case of loss.

In consideration of the work to be performed by the contractors, the city agreed to pay $16,200, at such times and in such sums as the chairman of the committee might approve. The provision in regard to insurance was in accordance with the established custom of the city; the purpose being to save the city from loss on account of any payments which might be made to the contractors during the progress of the work.

On the 18th of December the contractors insured their interest in the building for the sum of $10,000, payable in case of loss to the city. On the 21st of December, the city paid the contractors $5000 on account. On the 26th of December the building was destroyed by fire.

In their petition to be paid the full amount named in the contract, the contractors represent that the building was "substantially completed" at the time of the fire, and that they "intended to surrender it to the city of Boston on the morning of the 27th of December." It appears from this that the building was not completed, and that it had not been surrendered to the city at the time it was destroyed. Upon a statement of these facts, the City Solicitor has given an opinion that the contractors had no legal claim upon the city for work under the uncompleted contract. They entered into an agreement to do a specific job for a specified price, and they are not entitled to receive the price unless they have completed the job.

The effect of the order passed by the City Council is to allow the contractors $5000 from the City Treasury in addition to the insurance of $10,000 which they had obtained on the work and materials. Such an allowance is, in the opinion of the law officer of the city, illegal, and I cannot give it my approval.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

The question being upon the passage of the order, the objections of the Mayor notwithstanding—

Alderman Brown moved that the subject be laid over, and that the communication of the Mayor and opinion of the City Solicitor be printed, so that they might understand it more thoroughly.

Mr. Stebbins opposed postponement.

The motion of Alderman Brown was lost, 2 to 7, when the question again recurred upon the passage of the order.

Alderman Power rose to a question of privilege, and wished for information whether there was not some limit in the charter to the time for action by veto.

Alderman Clark replied that the limit was ten days.

Alderman Power said it was his impression that eleven days had elapsed since the passage of the order.

The City Clerk stated that the order passed the Council on the 5th of June, after having passed this Board was received by him on the 6th of June, and was submitted by him to the Mayor on the same day, and this communication was received on the 14th of June.

The Chair ruled that the communication of the Mayor was received within the limit of time allowed by the charter.

Alderman Clark said he supposed it would be useless to expect to pass the order over the veto, because it would require eight votes to carry it. He regretted that he should be required to vote against the Mayor, but he could not do justice to himself or to the community, if he did not do so. The claim he believed to be a just one and he wished to vote "Yes" upon it. It should be passed to do justice to honest and faithful mechanics, poor men who had been kept out of their just dues for six months.

The order failed of a passage by a vote of 5 to 7, as follows:

Yeas—Clark, Emery, Power, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Bigelow, Brown, Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy.

The following communication was also laid before the Board:

BOSTON, June 16, 1873.

To the Board of Aldermen of the City of Boston: Gentlemen—I have received and transmit herewith the inclosed communication from the City Solicitor, in answer to your inquiries concerning the rights of the Fire Department in the public streets in times of fire.

HENRY L. PIERCE,

Mayor.

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE,
2 PEMBERTON SQUARE,
BOSTON, June 13, 1873.

Sir—I have the honor to have received your communication, of the 10th inst., requesting me to answer the questions raised by an order of the Board of Aldermen adopted on the 9th inst., in regard to the rights of the Fire Department in the public streets, when it is called out to extinguish fires.

The act of the Legislature entitled "An act in addition to an act relating to the Fire Department of the city of Boston," passed yesterday, defines the rights of the department to the streets in such cases, and renders unnecessary a reply to the questions proposed.

It is, however, my opinion that this statute does not confer upon the Fire Department any new rights. The department had a clear right, independently of the statute, in proceeding to and extinguishing fires to use the streets, and to protect all their apparatus in such manner as the exigencies of each case required, and any person interfering with the exercise of that right was liable to the penalty provided in the ninth section of the one hundred and sixty-first chapter of the General Statutes.

I am, with great respect,

Your obedient servant,

J. P. HEALY.

City Solicitor.

Hon. Henry L. Pierce, Mayor.

The communications were ordered to be placed on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, made a report recommending the approval and confirmation of the appointment of Cyrus K. Thomas to be Sergeant of Police. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported no action necessary on the petition of William Bassett and others for a sewer in Bennington street, from Brooks to Putnam street. Accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of John S. Dunlap and Ivory Bean for release of conditions of land bought by them of the city of Boston, on Dedham street, east of Harrison avenue, May 1, 1871, having fully considered the same, made a report recommending that the petitioners have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses, as follows: W. B. Stacey, to give concerts at Tremont Temple, June 16, 17; also, licenses to sundry persons as victuallers, to keep a bowling saloon, and leave to withdraw on petition of John Glancy for a license as a victualler, No. 1404 Washington street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of stables, as follows: Phineas B. Smith, to occupy a stable for three horses on Marcella street, rear of No. 30; James Brosman, to occupy a wooden stable for six horses on Franklin court, Ward 16; William B. Thomas, to occupy a wooden stable for fourteen horses on Earl street, near the Old Colony Railroad, provided said stable is placed on the rear of said lot; John O'Donnell, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse on Saratoga street, junction of Chelsea street. Severally accepted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on petitions of John W. Rollins, for leave to occupy a brick stable for one horse on Carver street, No. 89½; Silas H. Sherman, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on D street, southeast corner of Eighth street; W. B. Pike, to occupy a wooden stable for six horses on Bolton street, No. 303. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported leave to withdraw severally on the petitions of C. U. Cotting for abatement of assessment for Shawmut-avenue betterments; Ann M. Harlow, for abatement of assessment for betterment on Purchase street; John Norton, for abatement of Harrison-avenue betterment; and no action necessary on petitions of T. L. Sturtevant and others, for abatement of assessments for betterment on estates 12 and 36 Edinboro' street, also for abatement of betterment on No. 118 Essex street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on Paving, reported leave to withdraw severally on petitions of Henry Homer and others that Fourth street be paved with wood between E and F streets; Alden Avery, that a street running from Albany street to Walnut avenue be called Albany avenue; Anton Holtz, guardian, and others, to be paid for grade damages on Cabot street; Mary A. Drinan, administratrix, for payment for grade damages on Blue-Hill avenue; James D. Thompson and others, that Wiggleworth and Washington streets be paved with wood. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, to whom was referred the petition of George B. Emerson and others, for the removal of the concrete covering on the malls and walks of the Common, made a report that the use of this material on the public grounds has been limited to the paths which could not otherwise be kept in a condition to accommodate the public travel. All the work contemplated on the Common during the present season has been completed. Every precaution has been taken to prevent injury to the trees, and the committee are assured by the superintendent that in no instance can it be shown that the use of concrete has been injurious to the trees, or that as at present used it is likely to be injurious to them in the slightest degree. Under the circumstances no further action upon the petition is necessary. Accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, made a report that an additional loan of $50,000 will be required for the payment of unsettled damages occasioned by the extension of Columbus avenue to Park square.

The loan authorized by the order of the City Council approved July 3, 1871, was for the purchase of the property of the Boston & Providence Railroad Company only, and did not provide for damages occasioned by cutting off the "back yards" of the several estates north of Providence street, neither did it provide for interest to be paid the Boston & Providence Railroad Company, as required by the indenture between the city and that company.

The amount of the loan was $475,000.

The amount paid the Boston & Providence Railroad Company to date was $150,000; interest paid on the same, $2250—$152,250—leaving a balance on hand of $322,750.

Columbus avenue was extended to Park square by a resolve approved December 29, 1871.

The estimated expense of damages to estates north of Providence street for which no provision was made was $25,835. Balance due the Boston & Providence Railroad Company within sixty days from June 29, 1873, $325,000—making an amount of $350,835.

Balance of loan on hand, $322,750—leaving a balance to be provided for of $28,085.

The amount to be provided for, it will be seen by the above figures, is $28,085, but to cover interest and all contingencies the committee would recommend the passage of the accompanying order, making an additional loan of $40,000:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be and he hereby is authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $40,000; the same to be added to the loan for the extension of Columbus avenue.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the report was referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on Public Lands, made a report in relation to lots of land on Dedham street sold to Ivory Bean and John S. Dunlap, with their failure to comply with the terms on the extension of time on which to build on said lots, concluding with a recommendation of the passage of an order that the Treasurer be authorized to cancel the bonds given by said Bean and Dunlap, and that the Superintendent of Public Lands be directed to take possession of the aforesaid lots in behalf of and for the use of the city of Boston.

Alderman Stebbins inquired whether the course proposed was the best for the interest of the city.

Alderman Emery stated the circumstances of the purchase, the application for extension of time and the refusal to comply with the full conditions, and it was proposed to take the usual course in such cases, the parties to forfeit the ten per cent. purchase money which had been paid.

Alderman Stebbins stated that the parties were well able to pay, and he raised the inquiry whether it would not be better to enforce the conditions of the sale.

On motion of Alderman Power, the order was laid over.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings be authorized to prepare and print a digest of the laws and ordinances relating to buildings in Boston; the expense therefor to be charged to the appropriation for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

On motion of Alderman Brown—

Ordered, That the Committee on the Market be directed to assign stands to the several applicants therefor upon the new market limits, near India wharf, and to charge therefor such rents per annum as they may judge expedient to reimburse the city for the outlay expended there.

On motion of Alderman Emery—

Whereas, The city of Boston did, on the 1st day of January, 1873, lease for a term of five years from said date to E. and R. W. Sears a lot of land and wharf on Albany street, opposite to the City Hospital, containing 30,000 square feet, at a rent of $3200 per annum, to be made in quarterly payments on the 1st day of April, July, October and January, in every year during said term; and whereas the amount due on the 1st day of April, 1873, remains unpaid; therefore be it Ordered, that the Superintendent of Public Lands be and hereby is authorized to enter upon and take possession of the said premises in behalf of and to the use of the city of Boston.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the gutters on Trenton street, between Brooks and Eagle streets, at an estimated cost of $5000.

Ordered, That the Board establish the grade of Bremen street, between Porter and Bennington streets, as shown on a plan and profile drawn by the City Surveyor, dated June 16, 1873, and deposited in the office of said City Surveyor.

Ordered, That the Board establish the grade of Arch street, between Milk and Franklin streets, as shown on a plan and profile drawn by the City Surveyor, dated April 23, 1873, and deposited in the office of said City Surveyor.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to grade Putnam street, between White and Condor streets, according to the established grade of said street, at an estimated cost of $3500.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the gutters on the southerly side of White street, between Brooks and Putnam streets, at an estimated cost of $1000.

On motion of Alderman Quiney—

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories and Military Affairs be requested to consider and report what changes, if any, are necessary in the allowances for rent of armories in this city, on account of the recent act concerning the militia.

Ordered, That all sums in excess of $5000, collected by the City Treasurer on certain policies of insurance on William Smith & Company's interest as contractors in the smallpox hospital on Swett street destroyed by fire, be paid over to William Smith and — MeGaragle, the contractors aforesaid.

Alderman Sayward subsequently moved a reconsideration of the passage of the above order, stating in doing so that he could not see how the city could pay money which it had not got.

Alderman Quiney replied that the order contemplated that when money was collected under the policies, in excess of $5000, it should be paid over. It would not be denied by the Alderman that something was due them, and the passage of the order showed the attitude of the city towards them.

Alderman Sayward said he could not see the object of the order, for the city could just as well pay over the amount when collected. He could not conceive the object of the order unless it was to prevent the parties from obtaining it in court. They could pay it over when received without the order just as well as they could now.

Alderman Quiney again stated that it would show the attitude of the city in acknowledging the justice of the claim.

Alderman Sayward said he did not wish to show the magnanimity of the city in any such way, and he could not conceive the object in pressing the order.

The reconsideration was declared to be lost, by a vote of 5 to 5.

Alderman Sayward raised a doubt as to the count, to which the Chair stated that he counted himself in the vote which was taken.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That "an act to provide for the conveyance of Berkeley street to the city of Boston," being chapter three hundred and fifty of the statutes of the Commonwealth, passed in 1873, be and the same is hereby accepted by this Board.

Ordered, That there be paid to F. M. Johnson and Albert Thompson, $7350 for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Congress street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to Marshall P. Wilder the sum of $235 60, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Columbia street, in Ward 16, by a resolve and order of this Board, approved October 11, 1870, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to Elizabeth Child the sum of $5250, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Bedford street, by a resolve and order of the Street Commissioners, April 21, 1873, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to Mary Chism the sum of $10,357, for land taken, and all damages occasioned by the widening of Bedford street, by a resolve and order of the Street Commissioners, April 21, 1873, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to Joseph Forristall the sum of $800, in full compensation for all damages caused to his estate on Chambers street by the raising of the grade of said street, by order of the Board of Aldermen, Sept. 17, 1872, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Paving.

Ordered, That the betterment assessed upon the estate of Moses Kimball, corner of Oliver and Sturgis streets, by an order of the Board of Street Commissioners of June 29, 1872, for the laying out and grading of Sturgis street, and amounting to $4500, be and the same is reduced by the sum of $2250, leaving the assessment upon the said estate at $2250.

Ordered, That the betterment assessed of $50 laid upon the estate of Mary Burnham on Palmer street, for benefit thereto from the extension of Harrison avenue, by an order of this Board of November 5, 1872, be and the same hereby is for cause abated in full.

RECOMMENDATIONS IN RELATION TO THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The following communication was laid before the Board:

BOSTON, June 11, 1873.

To the Honorable City Council of the City of Boston: Gentlemen—At a meeting of the officers of the several companies of the Boston Fire Department, called for the purpose of considering what changes might be made for advancing the efficiency of the department, it was Voted That we petition to the City Council to adopt for general use in the Fire Department a post hydrant similar in pattern to that known as the Hill hydrant, to be placed in the sidewalk, the location to be designated by a colored glass, in the nearest street lamp, for the following reasons, namely: In being above the sidewalk it does not get covered up in the winter by snow and ice; it is easy of access, requiring but a few seconds to make connections, whereas in using the Lowry hydrant as now constructed, requires a "chuck" which weighs about ninety pounds, and considerable time is taken up in making all the connections, while a post hydrant relieves the apparatus of this extra weight, saves valuable time and can always be seen by the driver of the apparatus as he approaches it, as it cannot be hidden from sight by people standing upon it.

It was also voted that the following changes be recommended: First, that the horse hose carriages now in use may be so altered, and all those that may be built in the future, be so constructed that they may carry the hosemen, so that they may arrive at the fire with the apparatus and be fresh for duty; second, that a horse hose company be placed in every engine house, carrying not less than 800 feet of hose, to be run in connection with the engines instead of the tenders now dragged behind them; and by adopting this plan we feel confident that much valuable time will be saved that is now occupied by us in running here and there looking for hose to make out a line, or to replace that which is defective; third, that more hosemen be appointed for each company, as the present number is not sufficient to handle the long lines of hose that are required on the high buildings we are called upon to protect; fourth, that some method be adopted for controlling the water by the hosemen at the pipe, to save time in passing the word to the engine, and also prevent the conflict of orders given from different engines; fifth, that when purchasing new hose the two-inch hose be substituted for the two-and-a-half-inch hose, now in general use, as it can be handled with more efficiency and promptness and will stand a greater pressure; sixth, the removal of all ropes and guys used for stretching flags and signs across the streets, as they greatly retard the progress of the laddermen in throwing their ladders on to buildings.

Signed by John B. Hill, J. F. Hewins, F. M. Hines, George C. Fernald, C. L. Rosemere, William Childs and Samuel L. Fowle, Committee.

Alderman Sayward moved a reference of the communication to the Committee on the Fire Department.

Alderman Stebbins suggested as more appropriate the special committee which had been appointed upon the subject of the reorganization of the Fire Department.

Alderman Sayward said the committee was not appointed for the purpose of considering matters generally pertaining to the Fire Department.

Alderman Stebbins believed that the order under which the committee were appointed had reference to the whole subject of reorganization of the Fire Department, the charge of apparatus, hydrants, etc., and the management of fires, and the committee was the only proper one to consider this communication from officers of companies.

Alderman Power said if everything relating to the Fire Department was to be referred to this committee, it would make it a standing committee, and it would have enough to do, while the Committee on Fire Department would have nothing to consider.

Alderman Quincy called for a reading of the order, his understanding of it being not that of the Alderman who wished to have this referred to the special committee. Should radical changes be proposed in the organization of the department, it may take the business entirely out of the hands of the Committee on Fire Department.

Alderman Sayward agreed with the Alderman that it was not designed to refer all matters relating to the Fire Department to the special committee, for if so, they might as well abolish the standing committee, as having no use for it.

Alderman Power agreed with the Alderman as to the understanding of the order, for if every thing which came in relating to the Department, was so referred, the committee would never be able to report on the special matter referred to them. He should prefer to report on that matter.

Alderman Stebbins said he made the suggestion to draw out the sentiment of the Board, whether the Committee on Fire Department were to have anything further to do.

The motion to refer to the Committee on Fire Department was carried.

Alderman Clark offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Joint Special Committee on the reorganization of the Fire Department be instructed to investigate the cause of the fire which occurred in this city on the 30th of May last, and report thereon in print to the City Council; the expense attending such investigation to be charged to the appropriations for Incidentals.

Alderman Clark said he offered an order like this at the last meeting, but as that had failed he offered this. If the origin of the fire should be completely investigated, it might answer the question as to the necessity of the reorganization of the department.

Alderman Quincy said his impression was that it might be the duty of the special committee to report upon the expediency of causing an investigation to be made into the cause of the fire, and that such an investigation, if made, should be made outside of the City Government, as in the case of the other fire. If this committee should be required, in addition to the object for which they were appointed, to take voluminous testimony as to the origin of the fire, they may not be able to report until the next winter.

Alderman Clark believed an inquiry as to the cause of the fire to be as important as anything. If anything, it is a part of the inquiry as to the reorganization of the Fire Department. Not wishing to shirk responsibility, he offered an order for an investigation of the origin and management of the fire, but in that order the other branch did not concur, and abandoned it altogether. He desired an investigation into all matters relating to the fire, and an investigation might show a state of things in relation to the combustible character of such buildings as would justify insurance companies not to take risks in them and to cancel such as they have in neighborhoods of that character.

Alderman Emery believed this was a proper inquiry for the special committee to make.

Alderman Sayward was of opinion that the first thing the special committee had to do was to ascertain the cause and management of the fire; then they would know whether there was a necessity for the reorganization of the department.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark and Brown presented the following petitions asking for various changes in the Fire Department:

To the Honorable the City Council of the City of Boston—The undersigned, citizens and taxpayers of Boston, respectfully petition that a much larger number of steam fire engines, fully manned and equipped, be provided and placed in central locations; that a larger number be sent to each fire at the first alarm; that provision be made for a supply of water in all parts of the city sufficient and available in any emergency; that assistant-engineers and hosemen be employed, who shall devote their whole time to the interests of the department; that a disciplined force be organized to clear the streets and prevent theft in the vicinity of a fire; and that such other measures be adopted as will secure the highest efficiency of the Fire Department. And moreover, believing that such efficiency can only be secured by intrusting the control of the Fire and Fire-alarm Department, and other matters pertaining thereto, to an independent board, they ask that such a board be constituted, to consist of three persons, who shall be appointed for a term of not less than three years, by the Mayor, with the approval of the Board of Aldermen or City Council, and be removable by the Mayor; said board to have the appointment of the chief and assistant engineers, and to be paid such salaries as will secure the best available talent for the important duties to be performed. They further ask that these changes shall be made at the earliest practicable date.

The question being upon referring these petitions to the special committee, there was some further debate as to the extent of their labors.

Alderman Quiney referred to the investigation of the management of the other fire as being desired through a commission outside of the Board, and it might be thought advisable to have this also investigated in that manner, while the taking of testimony would involve great labor upon the special committee; yet if it was the sense of the Board that the committee should do this work he did not wish to shirk it.

Alderman Power said the only point was whether any delay would be occasioned by the labor put upon the committee, and whether the public outside of the Government might not desire an investigation by other persons.

Alderman Sayward believed, if the public had lost confidence in the City Government, the sooner they knew it the better.

The petitions were referred to the special committee.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

JUNE 19, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at eight o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The petitions of W. G. Preston and others, Phineas B. Smith, M. J. Flatley, Augustus Stevens, Jeffrey Richardson and others, C. F. Hovey & Co., Jordan, Marsh & Co. and two thousand others, and a communication from officers of the Fire Department, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The following matters were disposed of, in concurrence:

Reference to Committee on Public Institutions, of report of grand jury suggesting improvements in care and transportation of prisoners.

Reference to Committee on Streets of a request for an additional loan of $40,000, to pay unsettled damages occasioned by extension of Columbus avenue to Park square.

Acceptance of report no action necessary on petition of George B. Emerson et al. for removal of concrete covering on walks and malls of Common.

Acceptance of report leave to withdraw on petition of John S. Dunlap and Ivory Bean for release of conditions to eight lots of land on Dedham street and Harrison avenue.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Order requesting Committee on Armories, etc., to report what changes are necessary in allowances for rent of armories under the recent act concerning the militia.

Order for the Committee on Survey, etc., of Buildings to prepare and print a digest of the laws and ordinances relating to buildings in Boston.

Order for Committee on Reorganization of Fire Department to investigate the cause of the fire of the 30th ult., and report thereon in print.

Order for the printing and general distribution of 10,000 copies of the Acts of 1873, relating to the proposed annexation of Brighton, Brookline, Charlestown and West Roxbury to the city of Boston.

The following order was considered:

Ordered, That all sums in excess of $5000 collected by the City Treasurer on certain policies of insurance on William Smith & Co.'s interest, as contractors of the smallpox hospital on Swett street, destroyed by fire, be paid to William Smith & McGaragle, contractors aforesaid.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 inquired if an order identical with this was not now lying upon the table.

The Chair stated that the two were identical.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 thought it hardly proper that the order should be passed the second time. It was a matter in a delicate position, between the city and the contractors, and somebody ought to get the money. He had been assured that the time for payment of the policies had expired, and the insurance company had refused to pay the insurance. It may be necessary to instruct the City Solicitor to commence a suit. The matter was not clear, and it certainly seemed to be the same thing which had been acted upon.

The Chair again stated that the two orders were identical.

Mr. Shaw moved to lay the order on the table.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 raised the inquiry whether the state of the question was not this? That the order first named was passed by this branch and was not on the table. The other order was then passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The Chair stated in explanation, as appeared by the records, that the order identical with that under consideration was passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. Shaw withdrew his motion.

Mr. Train of Ward 14 rose for information, and stated as his understanding of the question that the order which was passed provided for the payment of the entire policies to Smith & McGaragle.

The Chair again stated the question, as before.

Mr. Perkins renewed the motion to lay the order on the table, which was carried.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Report and order for the Treasurer to refund to Mercantile Institution for Savings $550 60, on account of taxes erroneously assessed on said institution in 1871.

Report and order, in a new draft, to refund certain taxes paid by Joseph H. Billings et al.

Order authorizing a horse hose company to be established for Hose Carriage No. 12, at South Boston Point.

Report, resolve and order from Board of Street Commissioners that Broad street should be widened to 100 feet from Atlantic avenue to Summer street, at an adjudged expense of $780,887 25. (City Doc. No. 67, 1873.)

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Austin C. Wellington & Co., for permission to construct two wooden buildings upon a wharf occupied by them, known as Drake's wharf. Referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 presented the petition of Campbell & Brooks for an investigation into the award of a contract by the directors of the East Boston ferries for the building of a ferry boat, setting forth that the contract was for $27,678 37, and that their bid was $1021 63 less than the parties to whom the award was made.

Mr. Flynn moved its reference to a joint special committee for the reasons that one of the members of the Committee on Ferries was a member of the Board of Directors of the Ferries; otherwise he should not object to its going to that committee.

Mr. Weston of Ward 1, a member of the Board of Directors of the Ferries, stated that he did not object to the proposed reference, and gave as an explanation of the contract that the specifications were for the building of the boat and its delivery in seventy days, at such place as might be designated for the receiving of the machinery. Although the price of Campbell & Brooks was the lowest, they would not agree to the conditions specified, besides which they had a contract last year for the building of drops, which were to be done in October, but which had not yet been completed, much to the inconvenience of the city. No director had any interest in any one man, and he should make no objection to the reference.

Mr. Flynn withdrew his reference, and moved a reference to the Committee on Ferries, which was carried.

Messrs. West of Ward 16 and Dean of Ward 12 presented petitions for the reorganization of the Fire Department, headed by signatures, as follows:

The following special appropriations have been made: For new Bakery at Deer Island, $16,000 00 and the building erected at a cost of $15,947 95; leaving an unexpended balance of $52 05. For Engineer's House at Deer Island, $9000 00. The house has been built, costing $8959 28, leaving a balance of $40 72; a new wharf has been built at Deer Island costing $11,966 24, for which an appropriation of $12,000 00 was made, leaving the amount $33 76 unexpended. For repairing House of Correction the City Council appropriated $48,000 00; a brick building has been built and arranged for workshops and chapel. The amount expended has been $47,977 33, leaving a balance of $22 67.

The expenditures on account of new Lunatic Hospital for financial year has been $516 72; paid town of Winthrop for tax on land for 1872.

The expenditures on account of new Lunatic Hospital, new Bakery, Engineer's House and repairing House of Correction, are not included in the aggregate of expenditures or in any comparisons with the former year.

The number of inmates in the several institutions were as follows: House of Correction, 486—an increase of 131; House of Industry, 725—an increase of 178; Almshouse, 288—an increase of 34; House of Reformation, 270—an increase of 6; House of Reformation (girls), 31; Lunatic Hospital, 193—a decrease of 40. The average number shows 1827—an increase of 89, and a decrease of 35.

The following table shows the average expenditure for each inmate of the several institutions during the year, and the actual cost of the same for the year and per week:

	Average Expenditure.		Actual Cost.

The Directors say the tables show an increase of $37,000 in the expenditures of the year, which is accounted for by the large increase of the number of inmates remaining in the House of Correction and House of Industry as compared with the numbers remaining one year ago, and by the additional expense involved in preparing the buildings at Rainsford Island for the reception of the adult male inmates of the Almshouse. The decrease in the amount of income for the year has been caused principally by the transfer of the Quarantine Department to the custody of the Board of Health, and a decrease of more than $3000 in the income of the Lunatic Hospital, caused by the discharge or death of patients who were wholly or partially supported by friends. The usual high standard of discipline has been maintained in all the institutions. They have been remarkably exempt from epidemic disease, and as regards effective, economical management, leave nothing to be desired.

Deer Island. The report states that many of the improvements suggested in the report of the previous year have been completed or are now in progress. The transfer of the adult male paupers to Rainsford Island in October last afforded partial relief to the overcrowded House of Industry, but the large increase in the number of commitments has already filled the space thus obtained, and the directors are satisfied that there can be no permanent relief until the entire main building shall be devoted to the House of Industry. This is not a sudden conviction, but has been for a long time considered. When it was contemplated to erect a Home for the Poor at Deer Island, as proposed, and for which an appropriation was granted three years ago, it was then suggested that if hereafter it should be decided to permanently locate that institution elsewhere, before a site could be selected and a building constructed, the structure then asked for erected at Deer Island would be required for the female prisoners of the House of Industry, leaving the entire main building for the male department and the House of Reformation. The number of commitments during the past year was 5670 against 2371 five years ago, an increase of 140 per cent. and upwards of 25 per cent. more than the number committed the previous year. The average number of inmates of the House of Industry for the past year was 654 against 369 five years ago; an increase of more than 70 per cent., and there is no reason to suppose that the number will decrease. On the contrary, the annexation of territory, and the increase of population, will cause at least a corresponding increase in the number of inmates of these institutions.

It is believed also that there will be a demand for the removal of the House of Reformation, and this has received the serious consideration of the Board. That portion of the building now used for this purpose admits of no suitable classification of the boys, composed of truants and stubborn children, juvenile vagabonds and juvenile offenders.

Lunatic Hospital. Reference to the report of the superintendent shows the number of patients remaining in the hospital at the close of the year to be 193, or 40 less than one year ago. During the year but 15 patients have been admitted, and these were cases of emergency, eight having been admitted by the Judge of Probate on account of extreme old age, or physical weakness rendering them unable to bear the journey to Taunton. Seventy-one patients, who have a legal settlement in Boston, and who under ordinary circumstances would have been admitted to this hospital, have been sent to Worcester or Taunton. Though in most cases the Judge of Probate has adhered to the request of the Council, contained in the order of December, 1871, yet he has admitted several cases to the South Boston Hospital upon the written application of the Board of Aldermen. As a natural result of sending the city insane to the State hospitals, the number of inmates at South Boston has materially decreased, while the State institutions have been more crowded and uncomfortable than before. We believe that the number of inmates in our hospital could be increased, and forty more patients accommodated here, knowing there are many cases likely to be committed during the year who can be better provided for at South Boston than in the crowded hospitals of the State.

House of Correction. The board are gratified to be able to report that, under the faithful and economical administration of the master, this institution has continued, as for four successive years, to be not only self-sustaining but profitable, having, the past year, realized an income of more than $3500 above its expenditures.

During the year the new chapel and workshop building has been completed, and has proved to be well-adapted to the purposes for which it was constructed. The project of heating the entire prison by steam, which has been discussed in former reports of the board, has, during the year, been carried into effect, and this much desired improvement gives great satisfaction, being more comfortable, cleanly, and economical than the former method of heating by stoves in the prison corridors.

Especial attention is called to the great lack of proper cell accommodation for the prisoners. There are now one hundred and fourteen more male prisoners than cells; forty of these prisoners are lodged in the dormitory over the brush shop, and the remainder are crowded into a low, unventilated attic, where they are not only uncomfortable, but where they can communicate with each other and offend against the rules and discipline of the prison. Though the attention of the City Council has been called to this condition of the institution, in the reports of the board, for several years past, and in special communications, yet the Directors feel that they would be derelict in the discharge of their duty should they fail at this time to again present the subject in its true aspect. The plans for alterations of the present structure, submitted to the City Council in the summer of 1871, contemplated the erection of a block of cells in the rear of the centre of the present prison, which would accommodate one hundred and thirty-six male prisoners; the building of a house in front for the master and officers, providing a guard room and steam-heating apparatus for the entire prison, remodelling the basement, the removal of the hospital from its present position, and the erection of a new chapel and workshop. This latter building has been erected and steam-heating introduced, but the remainder of the plan failed to receive the sanction of the City Council. The directors have been assured by the parties who, in 1871, estimated the expense of this improvement, that the work can be completed at the present time for the same amount as then. The present practice of confining the prisoners in the attic and dormitory is contrary to the statutes of the Commonwealth, is dangerous to the officers and the institution, and should be speedily discontinued. Even in the event of an early removal of the institution to some other locality, the proposed enlargement will be required to properly provide for the prisoners during the occupation of the present site. There are now 160 more prisoners than at the date of the last annual report, and the number is steadily increasing.

In the Almshouse Department there were remaining 1st of May, 135 men, 71 women, 52 boys and 30 girls; the largest number during the year was 351; smallest 227; average 280. The adult males were removed to Rainsford Island on the 22d October last. The buildings have been crowded and more accommodations will be needed. The females have been comfortably provided for as in former years. The children are comfortably situated and the general health has been good.

In the House of Industry Department, there are 441 males, 269 females—total 710; children of sentenced mothers, 15. The commitments for the year were 5670; discharged, 5507. The offences were mostly for drunkenness; the terms of sentence being from 1 to 18 months, 4585 being sentenced for nonpayment of fines and costs.

The amount of fines and costs paid was $7614 61. The principal farm products were 105 tons of hay, 50 tons of corn fodder, 5 tons squashes, 8500 bushels beets, 4600 bushels onions, 2500 bushels carrots, 800 bushels potatoes, 600 bushels turnips, 3000 cabbage heads; and from the dairy they had 13,800 gallons of milk, consumed in the institution; 1820 pounds of butter were made, but a small portion of which was sold.

The report of the Resident Physician shows 40 deaths in the Almshouse, 12 of consumption,—and there were two births. In the House of Industry there were 20 deaths; and in the House of Reformation 3; the daily average in the hospitals was 65 patients.

In the Lunatic Hospital there were 22 deaths, 55 were discharged, 11 recovered, 13 improved, and 9 not improved. The general health of the patients has been good.

In the House of Correction there were remaining April 30, 486. The commitments have numbered 858; discharges 724; 286 males are employed in making shoes, 135 in brush making, 93 on sewing machines, and 38 in the yard; females on contract work 80; washing and ironing 24. The number of males was 676; females 182; there were ten deaths.

Ordered to be sent up.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Joint Standing Committee on Public Instruction, to whom was referred the request of the School Committee that the City Council would purchase a lot of land and erect thereon a primary school building in the vicinity of Blue-Hill avenue and Quincy street, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Instruction be authorized to purchase, as a site for a primary schoolhouse, a lot of land on Quincy street, near Blue-Hill avenue, belonging to Charles Mann, and containing 15,777 square feet, more or less; also, a lot of land adjoining the same, belonging to W. S. Edmunds, and containing 7681 square feet, more or less; the price paid for said lots not to exceed forty cents per square foot.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $10,000, to be applied to the purchase of land for a primary schoolhouse on Quincy street, near Blue-Hill avenue.

The orders were read once.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, from the Joint Committee on Streets, to whom were referred the resolve and order for the widening of Pearl street, by taking land owned by S. S. Perkins at an expense of $1414, made a report that the resolve and order ought to pass.

The report was accepted, and the resolve and order were passed, in concurrence.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 moved to take from the table the report and orders authorizing the building of such an addition as may be necessary to the house of Engine-Company Sixteen, to accommodate Hook & Ladder Company Six, at an estimated cost of $18,000; and for a transfer therefor from the Reserved Fund.

The motion prevailed, and in answer to an inquiry as to the necessity for the measure, Mr. Jones stated that the hook and ladder carriage had been without a house during the last year, stored two hundred and fifty feet from where the horses were stabled, and was liable to injury in its present place.

The orders were passed.

On motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, the orders for the purchase of the estate of the late Nathaniel Whiting, between Washington square and place, containing 1523 square feet, at not exceeding $11 per foot, and to erect on said lot and those on each side, owned by the city, a building for a steam fire engine and a hook and ladder carriage, and the horses and men connected therewith; and also for a loan of $50,000 to be applied therefor, were taken from the table.

Mr. Shaw stated that the motion to lay on the table was made by him, but on examination of the Fort-Hill territory he was satisfied that the proposed purchase was the best thing which can be done.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said the land leased by the city on Fort Hill would be at their disposal on the first of July, and he could see no necessity for purchasing land for an engine house.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16 stated that the land proposed to be purchased was but a narrow strip between two lots owned by the city, the most suitable which could be had for the purpose, and the house to be built would be designed to accommodate a steam fire engine, a hose carriage and a hook and ladder carriage.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 made a similar statement, the accommodations being for two engines besides the other carriages. A sub-committee on the subject had given great attention to a location, and found this desirable from being on three streets, of the right depth, with light on each side, and available in moving either way with the engines or carriages. There was no lot which can be had which is so available as this.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 inquired the situation of the lots.

Mr. Jones replied that they were on Washington square and Hamilton street.

Mr. Shaw said the lots were near the centre of Fort Hill, as it was. If the gentleman from Ward 6 had been present the last evening he would have heard the severe criticism which he made as to the location, but he had examined it since that time, and was satisfied that it was the best location in that vicinity. The lot of Mr. Whiting contained about 16,000 feet, between two lots belonging to the city, and it would give a hook and ladder carriage a chance to swing either way. He was satisfied the lot was one of the best which could be had at present.

The city had several acres of available land in that vicinity, but as that would be available for sale, nothing would be lost by this purchase. It was designed, also, to place another engine in Ward 5, and as this was the best which could be had under the circumstances, he hoped the orders would pass, so that the work can be commenced immediately.

Mr. Perkins desired to see the plan to know the situation of the lots, and on his motion the orders were laid on the table.

The orders were subsequently assigned to Thursday evening next, 8½ o'clock.

DIGNITY OF THE COUNCIL.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 offered the following resolution:

Whereas, It appears by the reports in the morning papers of this day that exceptions were taken by members of the School Committee at their meeting last evening to the action of the President of the Common Council in his capacity as a member ex-officio of said committee in advocating the cause of and voting for the reelection of Master Crampton; and whereas, in the opinion of the Council it is not only the right (regardless of what may have been the practice), but the duty of the President as such member, to take part in the doings of said committee, the Council without entering into or expressing any opinion upon the merits of this individual case, hereby declares its approval of his course in taking such action in the premises as his own judgment dictated to him to be right and proper.

Mr. Shaw read from the Advertiser the portion of the proceedings of the School Committee which related to the reflections upon the conduct of the President of the Council, and stated that he offered the order for the purpose of vindicating the dignity of the Council by sustaining the course of the President as a member of the committee representing the Council.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 thought the Council was unprepared for action on the question, and he did not agree with the mover as to the necessity of passing the resolution. He did not think they were called upon to act, and it would be in bad taste to do so, inasmuch as the action of the School Committee sustained the course of the president, and vindicated him from the aspersions of one member. The vote of the committee was a very proper one, and it covered the whole ground. It would hardly be proper to take up the criticism of one member when all the others were opposed to his course.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said that while he sympathized with the gentleman from Ward 5 in regard to the honor and dignity of the Council, but as the President had sustained that honor and dignity there was no need to pass the resolution, and he hoped it would be indefinitely postponed.

The Chair stated that the objectionable remark was made by one member only, and the apology for it was that it was made through ignorance of the right of the President of the Council as a member. It was so understood by the whole board. The Chair defended the dignity of the office, instantly, without delay, and his defence received the approval of the committee.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, in view of the feelings of the Chair in regard to the resolution, moved its indefinite postponement.

Mr. Shaw said he offered the resolution not without reflection, and in view of the principle involved, in which the same indignity might be repeated, applied equally to the Mayor, he thought the resolution should be passed in vindicating the dignity of the Council. It was quite time, he believed, such reflections should be stopped. It was due to the President of the Council that he should act according to the dictates of his own conscience, because it was right.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 believed it quite unnecessary to take action upon the subject, since the President vindicated his position, and that ended the whole controversy. It would then be in poor taste to take any part in such a controversy. He did not consider the President to be especially the representative of the Council, in the committee, but as on a footing with other members, and his reply vindicated his rights as a member of the Council much better than they could do. There was no difference of opinion on the subject, and there was no necessity for passing the resolution.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 did not think it necessary to pass the resolution, because the President was competent to take care of himself. He had tested his competency under the same blanket and in the same tent, and no one would be more glad than himself to indorse the President if there was any necessity for it. "Where ignorance is bliss 't is folly to be wise," and as the President is amply able to take care of himself, he moved the previous question, which was sustained, when the motion to indefinitely postpone was carried without dissent.

On motion of Mr. Train of Ward 13, the reports of the Committee on the Burrill Claim were taken up, and their consideration assigned to Thursday evening next, nine o'clock.

Mr. Collins of Ward 2 offered an order, which was read once, authorizing the erection of a clock tower on the Ticknor Schoolhouse, at an expense not exceeding $100.

REORGANIZATION OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the reference to Committee on Fire Department of message from the Mayor, transmitting a communication on the necessity of greater efficiency of the Fire Department from the representatives of various insurance companies which sustained losses from fire of 30th ult., was taken from the table.

Mr. Page moved to amend by referring the message to the Joint Special Committee on the Subject of the Reorganization of the Fire Department.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 called for the reading of the Mayor's message and the communication of the underwriters, and after they were read he said he believed they should be referred to the Committee on the Fire Department, where most of the subjects referred to had been discussed.

Mr. West of Ward 16 cited the action of the Board of Aldermen as being in favor of the reference to the Committee on the Fire Department after the subject had been discussed there.

Mr. Jones hoped the motion to refer to the special committee would not prevail. Already nearly all the matters suggested by the underwriters had been considered by the Committee on the Fire Department, and that committee was mainly composed of those who had seen service in the department and knew its wants, weaknesses and shortcomings. It would not be long to get at all of the matters, and if it should lie over they would not long see the necessity for any action.

Mr. Perkins said he should vote against the motion, because the joint special committee had one subject under consideration, that of the reorganization of the Fire Department. Everybody was sick and tired of the Fire Department, and he would not refer the question of hydrants to the special committee, for such things would only bring delay, when they wanted rapid and intelligent action.

Mr. Jones said the Committee on Fire Department had referred several essential matters to the Committee on Ordinances, who had not, as he supposed, found time to consider them; but which would increase the efficiency of the department, which the gentleman so much desired. The Committee on Fire Department were alive to the interests of the city, as much so as any other committee, and as a member he had worked hard for the better government of the department. Let these little matters be done to make up the whole aggregate of efficiency as he had done, and there would not be so much complaint.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 hoped they would not distrust a committee of the Council, by taking their proper work away from them. When a member of a committee says the committee have acted upon certain subjects, it should be sufficient; and he could not believe the Council would refuse a reference of this matter to that committee. On the committee there were four practical firemen, and he did not believe the people were sick and tired of the Fire Department, as the gentleman from Ward 6 had said they were. There were no braver or more determined set of firemen to be found than were those of the Boston Fire Department.

Mr. Mahan further vindicated the character of the Fire Department, and believed it wrong to say the people were sick and tired of them. It might be well enough for the white-vest and silk-gloves citizens to find fault, but none who knew the firemen and had worked with them would deny that they were the finest set of men. It was shameful and wrong for one man to attempt to dictate what should be done, when the Committee on Fire Department know best what should be done. Let the gentleman talk with those who pile up their stores so high, to get more money, as to make them dangerous in cases of fire, and he will be of more service. It was not in accordance with decency and courtesy so to malign the firemen.

Mr. Perkins said he was not disposed to take back any words which he had used, but, in speaking of the Fire Department, he meant the head of it. At the meeting of underwriters, the Chief is reported as having said that he had no fault to find with the Committee on Fire Department, but the difficulty was with the red tape of the City Council. In his experience of three years in the Council he had never known of a vote of the Committee on the Fire Department which was not adopted, but the Chief lets the committee alone and throws the results of his incapacity upon the Council.

Not satisfied with that statement here, some admirer of the Chief made a similar statement in New York, that the inefficiency of the Fire Department was due to the City Council. He had always tried to vote intelligibly upon all measures for the improvement of the department, and had never voted against any recommendations of the committee. The people demanded changes in the department, and the Chief should resign and give way to some one in whom the people had confidence. He had never climbed ladders or held the hose, but meant to do his duty and criticise whatever deserved criticism.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1, as an instance of failure to follow the recommendations of the committee, stated that the Council cut down the appropriation last year $40,000.

Mr. Jones said it was likely Mr. Damrell might have done wrong sometimes, but it was true that he had for years made recommendations for the improvement of the efficiency of the department, many of which were unheeded. His reports would show that. Abuses had been showered upon the Fire Department by those who had not swallowed smoke nor chewed cinders, but he assumed they were as efficient as any firemen in the country. The Chief could not report over the committee, and if his suggestions were not carried out, he had only to repeat them from year to year.

Mr. Shaw did not believe there was any necessity to get into fever heat in defence of the firemen, as his colleague had, for not even the gentleman from Ward 6 had said anything against them. The order offered by him was upon a reorganization of the Fire Department, and did not refer to persons. Yet he proposed hereafter to refer to names. He believed, however, this matter should go to the Committee on Fire Department. The special committee has under consideration the subject of reorganization, on principle and measures, and not a reference to men. In his inquiries on the subject he had learned that the Fire Department of Boston, for 300,000 inhabitants, cost more than that of London, of £78,000, for 3,000,000 inhabitants.

If such is the fact, that we have so expensive a department, it may be a question whether the money is properly expended. The question as to measures and not who shall be the head is the one before the committee; the mode of reorganization, but not the steps to correct and change certain matters not affecting organization, are to be considered by them. One question is, whether it is not absolutely necessary to have a higher head of water, as was suggested by him when the reservoir on Parker Hill was considered. He had been told by a practical engineer, that in the draft upon a hydrant in front of the City Hall today, by a two and one-half inch pipe, there was a failure in the supply of water.

The special committee were to receive light from the people as to what is necessary to make the department efficient. To get light he had sent to other cities to ascertain facts about the organization and cost of departments. This department might be reorganized, although even every man in it should be retained. It was not necessary in that respect to discuss Mr. Damrell.

Mr. Page said he made the motion to refer to a special committee, not thinking it would produce such a debate, but because he thought it appropriate to the committee. He would, however, withdraw his motion.

The reference to Committee on Fire Department was concurred in.

ORDER PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—

Ordered, That the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department be and hereby is authorized to send for persons and papers, and to employ a stenographic reporter; the expense of the same to be charged to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16 offered the following order;

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department be and they hereby are authorized to make the necessary repairs and alterations on the fire-boat William M. Flanders; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 inquired the necessity for the proposed expenditure.

Mr. Burt replied that guards were required about the deck, and two more berths were proposed, the expense of which would not be heavy.

Mr. Pease stated that another propeller was desired, besides the putting up of guards.

Mr. Flynn moved a recommitment to the committee with instructions to report the cost, which was carried.

On motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12, the order establishing the salaries of the officers of the Law Department was taken from the table.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 believed the original order to be preferable to that under consideration, and that the service of the assistants would not be better performed by classifying them and of making a distinction between the salaries of the first and second assistants. One of them was senior by the length of time as an assistant, while the other, who it was supposed would be senior, conducts the cases in courts, and it would devolve upon the City Solicitor the unpleasant duty of making a choice between the elder in office and the elder at the bar. He did not think it would be necessary to designate the assistants, as proposed, and it would be better to allow it to remain as it is, to determine whether the new arrangement works well. He moved to substitute the original order for that under consideration.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said it was stated when this subject was up before, that the second assistant received certain perquisites in writing out deeds, which made his pay equal to that of the first.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said the matter had been subject to a lengthy discussion, and the grades were believed to be necessary on account of having three assistants. Such perquisites as were received by Mr. Stackpole were divided among all the assistants, while those received for making deeds belonged entirely to the one who makes them.

Mr. Perkins withdrew his motion, and the order was passed fixing the salary of the City Solicitor at $6000; for the Assistant, $3000; Second Assistant $2500; Third Assistant, $2000; Clerk, $1500.

Adjourned.

ABATEMENT OF A NUISANCE.

The following communication was received from the Board of Health:

To His Honor the Mayor and the City Council of Boston: Gentlemen—From separate reports coming to us from various persons, and of our own knowledge, we are satisfied that there now exists an offensive and dangerous nuisance, consisting of stagnant water, on territory situated southwesterly from Ruggles street, and between Parker and Tremont streets, in Ward 15. We are of the opinion that immediate measures should be taken to abate said nuisance, and we earnestly recommend that the City Council take action at once by putting in force Chapter 312 of the acts of 1872; that being, in our opinion, the only way of abating said nuisance.

Referred to the Joint Special Committee on the Suffolk-street and Ruggles-street districts.

REPORT OF THE GAS INSPECTOR.

The following report was submitted in reply to an order of the Board in regard to the standard of gas in this city:

OFFICE OF GAS INSPECTION, }
BOSTON, June 18, 1873. }

To the Honorable the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Boston—In compliance with your request of May 12, I present the following report on the gas furnished by the various companies within the limits of the city of Boston:

Name of Co.	Candle Power.	Sulphur.
Boston.....	18.3 candles,	20.1 grains per 100,
South Boston....	15.4 "	13.1 cubic feet of gas.
East Boston.....	14.4 "	18.5
Dorchester.....	15.6 "	26.0
Roxbury.....	15.4 "	—

In taking the "candle power" of a gas it was burned in an Argand burner with a seven-inch chimney, and at the rate of five feet per hour, and was compared with a standard candle burning at the rate of one hundred and twenty grains per hour. The minimum legal "candle power" is twelve candles. The gas of the Boston and East Boston companies was tested at a point about one mile distant from the works. The gas of the other companies was tested at the works, which is a less desirable place for testing.

As carbonic acid (CO₂) is an impurity only so far as it affects the candle power, it was not determined, as the candle power was found above the legal standard.

Only traces of sulphuretted hydrogen (H₂S) were discovered in any of the gases examined, the sulphur existing in some other form, probably as bisulphide of carbon (CS₂) or possibly as some sulphuretted hydrocarbon. The maximum amount of sulphur allowed by the London referees is twenty grains per one hundred cubic feet of gas. Sulphur is the most objectionable impurity that coal gas contains, and it is very difficult to remove it entirely from gas. The sulphur in the gas manufactured by the Roxbury company was not determined, as their meter prover, which is necessary in making the determination, was out of repair.

The amount of ammonia (NH₃) has been determined only in the Boston gas, as the determination is tedious and as I had considered that a small amount of ammonia would be quite unobjectionable. Quite lately, however, I have made experiments which show that a small part of the ammonia is converted into one of the higher oxides of nitrogen, which are quite corrosive. The Boston gas contained eight (8) grains of ammonia (NH₃) per one hundred feet.

It is perhaps proper to add that during the past winter the amount has been two and three grains per one hundred feet of gas. Judging by the colorations produced on litmus paper the other gases contain as much and probably more ammonia than the Boston gas.

I have the honor to remain,

Your obedient servant,

CHARLES W. HINMAN,

State Inspector of Gas and Gas Meters.

Ordered to be placed on file.

COLUMBUS-AVENUE EXTENSION.

To the City of Boston and the Honorable the Mayor and Aldermen of said City—The Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation gives notice that it is now ready to surrender and does hereby surrender to the city of Boston all the remaining lands conveyed by said company to said city by their indenture dated September 30, 1871, the occupation whereof has been heretofore reserved by said corporation, under the provisions of said indenture;

And thereupon said corporation respectfully asks payment of the sum of $325,000, the balance due under said indenture;

And also that said city convey to said corporation all the right, title and interest of the city in that part of Church street lying between the northerly line of Columbus avenue extended and Providence street, heretofore discontinued, as provided in said indenture.

BOSTON & PROVIDENCE RAILROAD COMPANY.
By W. G. RUSSELL, its Solicitor.

Ordered to be sent down.

Alderman Clark offered the following order:

Ordered, That there be paid to the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation the sum of $325,000, being the balance due said corporation in full for land purchased for the extension of Columbus avenue, as set forth in the indenture between the city of Boston and said corporation, dated Sept. 30, 1871; said corporation to give the city a receipt for the same satisfactory to the City Solicitor, and said sum to be charged to the appropriation for the Extension of Columbus avenue.

Alderman Clark stated that the conditions relating to the indenture with the railroad company expire on the 29th June, and as the money had been appropriated, and the interest would amount to $50 a day, he asked for its passage at this time.

The order was passed.

The following order was also passed:

Ordered, That His Honor the Mayor be and he hereby is authorized to release and convey to the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation all the right, title and interest of the city of Boston in that part of Church street between Columbus avenue and Providence street, which was discontinued by the Board of Street Commissioners by a resolve of Nov. 10, 1871, in accordance with an agreement of the city contained in its indenture with the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation, dated Sept. 30, 1871; said conveyance to be satisfactory to the City Solicitor.

HEARINGS ON ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The hearings on the several orders of notice on the proposed construction of sewers in Arch street, between Milk and Franklin streets; in Bolton street, between D and E streets; in Clinton street, between Blackstone street and Merchants' row; and on Silver street, between A and B streets, were taken up. No person appeared in relation thereto and the reports were recommitted.

The hearing on the order of notice on petition of J. F. Keating, for leave to locate a steam engine and boiler at No. 32 Lancaster street, was taken up. A remonstrance was presented from A. M. Vance and others, against the said location of a steam engine and boiler, on the ground that it would so increase the rates of insurance that they would be obliged to abandon the premises now occupied by them.

E. W. James appeared for remonstrants, stating that if the petitioner be allowed to put up a steam boiler and engine, as proposed, the occupants of buildings in the vicinity would not be able to obtain insurance at less than five per cent. The petitioner had already been burnt out four times, and should not be allowed to use a boiler and engine except in a secure brick building.

A. M. Vance, a remonstrant, stated that he was a dealer in lumber, second-hand doors and other articles, and, to make his own business more secure, had reconstructed the building occupied by him, and, as there were many other buildings, stores, dwelling houses, barn for storage of hay and a schoolhouse in the vicinity, the whole neighborhood would be endangered by the location. It was a question whether insurance could be obtained on his building under such circumstances, and it would be against the interests of the city to grant the petition.

Mr. Spinney, owner of the building occupied by Mr. Vance, did not doubt he should be obliged to pay double his present rates of insurance, now 2½ per cent., and stated that Mr. Keating had applied to Mr. Washburn for the use of his building, but was refused on account of his misfortunes from fire.

Mr. James further stated that he had been assured that eight per cent. would be charged as insurance on Mr. Vance's property, should this petition be granted. He was satisfied, however, that should the committee of the board visit the premises, the petition would not be granted.

The report was recommitted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The report and order to cancel bonds held by Ivory Bean and John S. Dunlap for certain lots of land on Dedham street, for non-compliance with conditions of sale, on motion of Alderman Emery, was recommitted to the Committee on Public Lands.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Report and order to notify the Metropolitan Railroad Company to remove their tracks from Waltham street, and put the said street in good order.

Order to pave Fleet street, between Hanover and Commercial streets, with small granite blocks, at an estimated cost of $10,000.

Order to pave Pleasant street, from Park square to Tremont street, with small granite blocks, at an estimated cost of $17,000.

Order to expend a sum not exceeding $2000 for water and gas pipes and repairs to machinery on Broadway Bridge.

Order to set edgestones, pave gutters and gravel the roadway on Emerson street, between Fourth and L streets, at an estimated cost of $3000.

Order to set edgestones and lay sidewalks on Gold street, from B to C street, and from D to E streets, and to pave roadway with wood, at an estimated cost of $8000.

Order to set edgestones, lay sidewalks and pave the roadway on Bowen street with wood, at an estimated cost of $4000.

Order to pave roadway of Waltham street adjacent to the Franklin Schoolhouse with wood, at an estimated cost of $1700.

Order to set edgestones, lay sidewalks and pave roadway with wood on Silver street, from Dorchester avenue to B street, at an estimated cost of $8000.

Alderman Gibson raised the question as to the policy of paving the streets in South Boston named in the above orders, with wood, believing that such paving, not burnettized, would not last more than three or four years.

Alderman Power replied that the streets in question were but twenty-foot streets, and the principal reason for paving them with wood was of a sanitary character. The streets had been nuisances for years, and as narrow streets it was believed they were just the ones to be paved with wood, if wood pavement was to be used anywhere. There was but little travel on such streets except by milk carts and other carts for household supplies.

Alderman Gibson stated that he had noticed a large quantity of cobble stones, convenient for use, at one of the bridges to South Boston, and further objections were made by him to the use of wood pavement.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The petitions of Lee, Higginson & Co, and 2500 others, A. C. Wellington & Co. and of Campbell & Brooks were severally referred, in concurrence.

The annual report of Directors for Public Institutions (City Doc. No. 76) was ordered to be placed on file.

An order for Committee on the Fire Department to make repairs on steam fire boat William M. Flanders was referred, in concurrence, to the Committee on the Fire Department, with instructions to report the estimated cost.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Order for Committee on Reorganization of the Fire Department to employ a shorthand reporter, and to be empowered to send for persons and papers.

Report of Joint Committee on Streets in favor of the widening of Pearl street, and passage of resolve and order to widen Pearl street.

Order establishing the salaries of City Solicitor's office, as follows: City Solicitor, $6000 per annum; First Assistant, $3000; Second Assistant, $2500; Third Assistant, $2000; Clerk, $1500.

In answer to an inquiry of Alderman Stebbins, it was stated that the increased salaries take effect from the 1st April last.

Report and orders authorizing the building of such an addition as may be necessary to the house of Engine Company Sixteen, to accommodate Hook and Ladder Company Six, at an estimated cost of $18,000; and for a transfer therefor from the Reserved fund.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Bigelow, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of a license to Edward N. Mullen to exhibit a pedestrian match at the base-ball grounds July 2, and to sundry persons as victuallers. Severally accepted.

Alderman Bigelow, from the same committee, reported in favor of renewal of licenses as auctioneers, as follows: Samuel Hatch & Co., N. A. Thompson & Co., J. K. Porter & Co., George R. Highborn & Co., Cowing & Hatch, Samuel A. Walker, John H. Lester, George B. Farnce, Holbrook & Fox, Sullivan & Maedonald, George F. Hunting, Charles C. Homer, Newman & Perin, Patrick Kilroy, Charles S. Blood; also for a license to David S. Roberts. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, to whom was referred the request of the Committee of the Board of Aldermen on Streets for an additional loan of $40,000, to be added to the loan for the extension of Columbus avenue, made a report that the order ought to pass.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, to whom was referred the petition of William Evans and others that Tremont street be widened by taking a part of the mall on the Common, made a report that in their opinion the public travel on Tremont street would be greatly facilitated by removing the sidewalk adjoining the Common and putting that portion of the street in a proper condition for the passage of vehicles. The committee would therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to remove the sidewalk on the westerly side of Tremont street, between Park street and Boylston street, and put that portion of the street in a proper condition for the passage of vehicles.

The order was read once.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported leave to withdraw on petitions of Pratt & Wentworth and others, that Pyncheon street be paved, from Heath to Tremont street, and of Benjamin Franklin and others for a revocation of location of the Metropolitan Railroad Company on Dearborn street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of M. J. Flatley for an extension of time in which to build on East Newton street, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the time for building upon two lots of land on East Newton street, as purchased of the city by M. J. Flatley, be extended to July 1, 1874, upon his paying to the Superintendent of Public Lands the sum of $200 within ten days from the passage of this order.

The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Emery, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Michael Scanlan for an extension of time in which to build on Fourth, near N street, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the time for building upon the lot of land on Fourth near N street, as sold by the city to Michael Scanlan July 1, 1871, be extended to July 1, 1874, upon his paying to the Superintendent of Public Lands the sum of $100 within ten days from the passage of this order.

The order was passed.

Alderman Emery, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Howard A. Doe, for an extension of time in which to build on Broadway, between L and M streets, submitted a report as follows:

The committee learn, from the statement made to them by the petitioner, that he has been prevented from building within the time required of him from the imperfect manner in which the walls of the building erected on the adjoining lot were built, as it was very unsafe for any one to be at work near the same while in said condition. That a portion of the wall did fall down, and the delay occasioned thereby is the reason of his asking for further time in which to build.

The committee, in view of the facts as set forth by the petitioner, believe that he is entitled to an extension and also to a reduction in the amount required to be paid, and, therefore, recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the time for building upon a lot of land on Broadway, between L and M streets, as sold by the city and now owned by Howard A. Doe, be extended to July 1, 1874, upon his paying to the Superintendent of Public Lands the sum of $50 within ten days from the passage of this order.

The order was passed.

The Committee on Finance made a report asking for the passage of the accompanying order, for the purpose of facilitating the early collection of taxes:

Ordered, That in pursuance of the authority of chapter 225 of the acts of 1873, all taxes assessed for the purpose of providing for the expenditures of the city of Boston and county of Suffolk, and for paying the city's proportion of the State tax, shall be due and payable on the first day of November, and if the same shall remain unpaid interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum shall be charged upon all such taxes as shall not be paid at that date; and upon all taxes that shall remain unpaid on the first day of January next ensuing after the same have been assessed, there shall be charged interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and all the interest that shall become due from and after the above-named date shall be added to and be a part of such taxes; provided, however, that the taxes assessed by authority of chapter 315 of the acts of 1873, upon the shares of national banks and of other corporations shall be due and payable on the first day of November, and interest shall be charged as provided in said act upon all such taxes as remain unpaid after that date, at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum.

The order was read once.

REPORT ON FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department, to whom were referred (1) the message from his Honor the Mayor in relation to increasing the efficiency of the department; (2) a communication from the representatives of various insurance companies which sustained losses by the fire of May 30; (3) a communication from the officers of the Fire Department, suggesting certain changes in apparatus, hy-drants, etc., having carefully considered the subject beg leave to submit the following report:

The suggestions and recommendations contained in these communications were substantially covered in the Mayor's inaugural address, and they have received the constant and earnest attention of the committee since the beginning of the present municipal year. On the 13th of March last, a report was made to the Government stating that it was proposed to increase the department so as to include 29 steam engines, 13 horse hose carriages and 8 hook and ladder carriages. The means for making the increase were not furnished until the 1st of May, the beginning of the present financial year. A portion of the additional apparatus had already been purchased when the fire occurred, and steps had been taken to procure the remainder as soon as suitable accommodations were provided for it. In their report, above referred to, the committee pointed out several changes which in their opinion were calculated to secure a higher degree of efficiency in the organization of the department, and in conclusion recommended the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to report amendments to the ordinances relating to the Fire Department, providing that the Assistant-Engineers shall be nominated by the Chief-Engineer and appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen; that the foremen and assistant-foremen of engine, hose and hook and ladder companies shall be nominated by the Board of Engineers and appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen; and that the Committee on the Fire Department shall have jurisdiction of all violations of the ordinances or rules and regulations, committed by members of the department; also, to report an amendment to the tenth section of the ordinance concerning public buildings, by which the Committee on Public Buildings will be relieved from the purchase of land for engine, hose and hook and ladder houses.

The order was not passed by the City Council, but referred to the Committee on Ordinances, and there it has since remained, no report having been made to the City Council on the subject. On the 5th of June the committee recommended the purchase of land on Washington square for the purpose of locating thereon a structure to accommodate two steam fire engines, one horse hose carriage and one hook and ladder truck. That recommendation is still before the City Council. If the committee receive the necessary authority they propose to organize a permanent force for service in connection with this apparatus, the hosemen to perform patrol duty when not attending fires. By this arrangement the business portion of the city will efficiently be protected at all hours of the day and night. During the delay in furnishing permanent accommodations the committee have recommended that temporary structures be erected at Fort Hill and on Parker street; and the Committee on Public Buildings has been instructed by the City Council to provide such structures. Arrangements have also been made for the immediate location of a steam fire engine on Mason street. The committee are now considering the question of increasing the number of men permanently employed in connection with the engines and hose carriages. The extent to which it would be advisable to make such an increase will be reported upon at an early day. The new horse hose carriages will be made to carry a portion of the hosemen so that they can be taken to the scene of the fire in the shortest possible time and be in a condition for effective service. It is proposed to detach the hose reels connected with the steam engines and provide separate carriages to convey the hose to fires, the accommodation for these carriages to be furnished in the engine houses. In regard to the supply of water, although the committee have no direct control over the matter, it may be well to state briefly the improvements which are being made. The new conduit from Sudbury River, involving an expense of about $5,000,000, and work upon the new reservoir at Parker Hill will be entered upon at once. In the appropriation for the present year the sum of $85,000 was allowed for new pipes and hydrants in the burnt district. Lowry hydrants are being placed wherever the Board of Fire Engineers request, and where in the judgment of the Water Board they are needed. The annual report of the Water Board, soon to be published, will contain important recommendations from the city engineer in regard to changes and new connections to be made in the water pipes now in use, so as to secure a larger and more uniform supply of water in case of fire. In reply to the request of the chairman for information in relation to the statements concerning the erection of unsafe structures on the burnt district, a communication has been received from the Inspector of Buildings, to the effect that the statements are entirely unfounded, and that the buildings now being erected in Boston are greatly superior, both as re-guards strength and safety, to those which were destroyed by the fire of November last. A copy of the communication is appended hereto. The extensive street widenings made by the city, at a cost of five or six millions of dollars, has, of course, greatly diminished the liability to serious conflagrations.

In view of the recent comments of the underwriters doing business in this city, it may not be improper to state in this connection that if the insurance companies compete for and take as first-class risks high buildings surmounted by wooden roofs, the city is not bound to insure them against loss under their policies. With the increase of the fire apparatus, and the changes in the organization of the department which have been recommended, the committee believe the force will be adequate to any emergency, and as reliable and efficient as the department of any other city.

L. R. CUTTER, Chairman.

The following communication from the Inspector of Buildings accompanied the report:

L. R. Cutter, Chairman of the Committee on the Fire Department: Dear Sir—Your favor of the 21st, asking for information relative to the statements made through the public press to the effect that many of the buildings now in process of erection on the burnt district are improperly constructed, is received, and in reply I beg to say that the statements are entirely unfounded, and undoubtedly originated with some one totally ignorant of building matters. To any one at all familiar with the construction of buildings, a personal inspection of the buildings now being erected in Boston will show at once their great superiority both as regards strength and safety to those which were destroyed by fire, and the almost certain impossibility of such another conflagration. The increased thickness of walls, the separation of floor timbers by brick work, and the construction of battlement walls render it almost impossible for a fire to communicate from one building to another, while the abolition of wooden exterior finish, and the substitution of iron and other incombustible material therefore, secures immunity from flying sparks and cinders. I do not mean to convey the idea that the buildings now constructed are fireproof, for as long as wooden floors and wooden interior finish are used, buildings will burn; but I believe that a fire occurring in any one of the buildings which conform to the requirements of the present Building law can be confined to the building in which it originates. As regards unsafe buildings, this department is doing all in its power to secure the safety of the public. Since January 1 between fifty and sixty buildings have been labelled as unsafe, and have either been demolished, rebuilt or secured. It should be understood, when speaking of unsafe buildings, that this department has no control over old buildings, which are unsafe by reason of combustible material stored therein, or the inflammable nature of the buildings themselves, and therefore, though often requested so to do, cannot order the demolition of the old wooden buildings with which some portions of our city are infested. A large number of buildings in which operatives are employed have been examined in relation to the means of egress in case of fire, and up to the present time over two hundred notices have been issued ordering the furnishing of fire escapes, etc., on buildings which were found deficient in that respect, and the work is still going on. As a general thing the owners of buildings readily comply with the requisition of the department. In conclusion, I beg to say that as far as this department is concerned the statement that our city has failed to profit by the lesson of the great fire is, in my opinion, without foundation.

Respectfully yours,

DAVID CHAMBERLIN,

Inspector of Buildings.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department, to whom was referred the petition of Charles E. Wiggin and others for the appointment of a commission to prescribe some method of preventing or rapidly extinguishing fires, made a report recommending that the same be referred to the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department. Accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, to whom was referred the order of the City Council of June 9, made a report recommending the passage of the order, as follows:

Whereas, The Legislature of this State did, on the 16th day of April, 1873, pass an act in the words following, to wit:

Section 1. The Engineer of the Fire Department in command at a fire shall, to the exclusion of all other persons, have the power conferred upon the firewards by the 4th section of the 24th chapter of the General Statutes.

Sec. 2. This act shall be in force only in those cities in which it is accepted by the City Council and in those towns in which it is accepted by the legal voters.

Now, therefore, it is hereby

Ordered, That the above-recited act be and the same hereby is accepted by the City Council of the city of Boston, and the Committee on Ordinances are hereby instructed to report an ordinance in accordance therewith.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of W. H. West and others for the location of a horse hose carriage in Engine House No. 20, made a report and are of the opinion that the prayer of the petitioners ought to be granted, and respectfully recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department be and he hereby is authorized to purchase and equip a horse hose carriage for Engine House No. 20, at an estimated cost of $1500; the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, made a report recommending that additional accommodations be furnished for Hose Company No. 5, located on Shawmut avenue, and ask for the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings purchase a lot of land on the corner of Shawmut avenue and Upton street, at a cost of $14,000, and erect thereon an engine and hose house.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $30,000, to be applied to the purchase of land, on the corner of Upton street and Shawmut avenue, and the erection thereon of an engine and hose house.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Bigelow, Kennard and others, that a steam fire engine be located on Mason street, having carefully considered the subject, are of the unanimous opinion that the prayer of the petitioners ought to be granted, and would respectfully recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be requested to procure estimates for the purchase of a lot of land on Mason street, or in the immediate vicinity, and for the erection thereon at the earliest possible moment, of a building suitable for the accommodation of a steam fire engine, horse hose carriage, and the horses and men connected therewith; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

Alderman Gathfield suggested that as the city have property in Mason street the committee would do well to consider whether some of that property might not be used for the purpose.

Alderman Clark replied that it was the design of the committee to consider whether some of that property may not be utilized for this purpose.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, offered the following order, which was passed:

Ordered, That the Chief-Engineer be and he hereby is authorized to substitute horse hose carriages for the tenders connected with the steam fire engines now in use in the Fire Department, and that said hose carriages be so constructed that five horsemen can ride to the fires; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department be and they hereby are authorized to purchase (as per estimated appropriation for new apparatus in the annual appropriation for the Fire Department for 1873) four first-class steam fire engines, at an estimated cost of $18,000; also five horse hose carriages, at an estimated cost of $4500, and one hook and ladder truck, at an expense of $1800; the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

The question being on the passage of the order—

Alderman Gibson inquired whether it was proposed to continue the present hose carriages.

Alderman Clark replied that it was not designed to do away with the present hose carriages, but to have those attached to the steam fire engines entirely independent of the engines, drawn separately by a horse. It had been found that those which were connected with the engines were a serious interference in getting to fires, and the Board of Engineers had advised their doing away with them. The means of paying for them had been provided in the General Appropriation bill.

Alderman Gibson wished to know why the present horse hose carriages should not be transferred to the engine houses instead of purchasing new ones.

Alderman Stebbins stated that it was designed not to increase the number of hose carriages, but to substitute a horse hose carriage for the reel attached to the steam fire engine, and to provide measures by which the hosemen may get earlier to fires.

Alderman Gibson renewed his inquiry whether it would not be better to make a transfer of the hose carriages from the separate houses to the houses of the steam fire engines, for unless such a change was made now, it would be difficult to make it hereafter, as it was often said that the Fire Department run the City Government. It once took three years to locate a fire engine, and now was the only time when this change could be made, for with additional hose carriages they could never get rid of any of them. It would be a mistake to purchase more hose carriages when they had enough of them.

Alderman Clark replied that it was not designed to have additional hose carriages in these cases, but to substitute horse hose carriages for those attached to the engines. It was intended merely to establish such a number as is necessary, and do away with the reels attached to the engines. There would not be any more hose carriages on that account. The Committee on Fire Department had made such suggestions in relation to the election and appointment of hosemen as were thought necessary, but until there was a change in the ordinance there could be no change in their appointment; but when changed it was believed the Fire Department could be improved. If the Fire Department had run the City Government it was the fault of past Governments and not of this. This and other changes were constantly asked by citizens, and it should be done at once before more petitions are presented. What changes are required and additional engines are needed should be provided immediately.

Alderman Power said both gentlemen had omitted some things in relation to the proposed change. It was designed to obviate the existing evils in the necessity of dragging a ton or two of extra weight which caused delay in getting the engines to the fires. It would facilitate the means of getting to fires, but would not necessitate providing more hose carriages. The reason given by the Alderman from Ward 1 might come in when additional engines were provided.

Alderman Clark replied that the terms of the order were sufficiently explicit, not providing additional hose carriages, but substitutes for the tenders attached to the engines.

Alderman Gibson said they now run with the engines but a moderate amount of hose, and did not depend upon a large amount being taken with them. Why increase the number of horse hose carriages when there are enough? for it would be a good deal easier to arrange matters now than when new hose carriages are established. He repeated the statement in relation to the Fire Department running the City Government, and gave as his experience that the firemen were the hardest set of men we had to contend with. In many cases the committees finding themselves in a tight place are obliged to make a poor excuse to get out of it. If additional engines are not needed where there are hose carriages alone, then a transfer should be made or the horse hose should be abandoned.

Aldermen Quincy believed that the present horse hose carriages, as they are situated, could not be dispensed with. It was often the case that they are the first to get to a fire and put it out before an engine arrives. In the change proposed, it was thought that in the future horse hose carriages would be better than the carriages attached to the engines. The efficiency of the engines is weakened by connecting the carriages with them, and the necessity of light apparatus is claimed as one of the advantages of the system of Mr. Bird.

Alderman Gibson said the complaint was that they could not get water by the hose company when a steam engine was playing near them. He believed the procuring of additional hose carriages was entirely uncalled for, and that extra carriages could do no more than is now done. The expenses of the department should be kept where they are, for when increased, it will be for all time, and can never be reduced. Many of the expenditures of the city were now enormous, and economy should be looked for somewhere. He was not prepared to vote for an increase when the department was now double that of New York, and three times as large as that of Baltimore. As to the demands of the insurance companies, he was willing to stand the losses by fire and pay the bills. If they were not less excited and liberal in their expenditures they would lose more taxpayers, when the taxes would fall entirely upon real estate. If they thought best so to travel, then do so, but he thought it would be better to transfer the hose carriages instead of getting additional ones. The city had been liberal to a fault in regard to the Fire Department, and the means now provided were entirely ample.

Alderman Quincy said he did not wish to increase the expenses of the department unnecessarily, but it was true that the horse hose carriages were often the first at a fire. If incorporated with the engines they will arrive at a fire at the same time with them. This was not the time to dispense with the separate horse hose carriages.

Alderman Gibson cited the authority of the Chief-Engineer, that horse hose carriages were entirely unnecessary when there are carriages connected with the engines. There were now five horse hose carriages, and they might be transferred to the houses of the steam fire engines. Why not put them with the engines instead of buying more?

Alderman Clark said it was supposed at the commencement of the year that an additional number of engines would be called for. It was not on account of the late fire, neither was it on account of the action of insurance companies. It was believed that additional engines would be required and were provided for, and the committee now ask for the right to make the purchase. The object of the order is simply to substitute horse hose carriages for the reels attached to the engines. It was something new, but would not incur additional expense or increase the expenses except for apparatus and for the horse.

Alderman Clark further said that he supposed the Alderman meant in saying that the department was larger than in New York, that it was proportionately larger. He forgets that the department was nearly as large in Dorchester as in the city proper, and costs nearly as much, and that the whole department covers a vast extent of territory. There might be leaks in the expenditures for the Fire Department, but he failed to see them. As to taxpayers leaving the city, he was sure that many citizens will leave unless proper measures are taken to protect their property. There no doubt was some talk made for the purpose of raising the rates of insurance, yet he knew of no insurance companies which propose to withdraw their agencies from the city. He doubted whether there were any better paying companies than some which are now in existence in this city, but, aside from that, it was our duty to protect the city from fire and enlarge the Fire Department.

More engines had been needed in years past, but from the complaint of everlasting expense they had not been provided. It had been charged that the Fire Department was most extravagant, but there had been but six engines for the city proper when there should have been double that number. Other improvements would be recommended and most likely would be adopted. There will be no extra expense under this order for the appropriation has already been provided for, and this is to empower the committee to purchase additional steam engines and the necessary apparatus.

Alderman Gibson, in the comparison with New York, said we had twenty-seven engines, but not fifteen miles range of territory which the forty-two engines in New York had, and which would make ours double compared with the distance and the population. The department in Baltimore is not so large as our own, with a larger population.

Alderman Power said there could be no doubt we were behind the times in the present mode of attaching the hose carriages to the engines, which retarded their progress. It was well known that in South Boston a horse hose carriage had often been the means of putting out a fire. With additional steamers it may perhaps be well to locate them in the same houses with the hose carriages.

Alderman Gibson further urged the transfer of horse hose carriages, and stated that a location was secured for an engine on East street, while it required but three-fourths of a minute to reach that point by a horse carriage. In Ward 12 he said an engine was procured after a struggle of three years, when the Chief-Engineer and the chairman of the Committee on Fire Department stated that it was not wanted, and when procured it was stored for some time. He believed it would be better to settle this matter as we go along, for when an increase of hose carriages was made they could not be reduced.

Alderman Power did not believe it was a fair criterion to judge in this case as in that of procuring an engine at South Boston, when it was difficult to get anything there. If the Fire Department ruled the Government when the Alderman was connected with it, it was not much to his credit. It did not run this Government, and they had but to do their duty and get what apparatus is necessary according to their own judgment, and not be frightened or intimidated by the Fire Department. A slight attempt was made at the last election, which did not amount to much. Neither should they be actuated by the outside talk that they were afraid of the Fire Department because they did not remove Mr. Durrell. Let them show the right sort of man for the place, and he would not hesitate to make a change.

Alderman Gibson said he did not refer in his remarks to the present City Government as having been run by the Fire Department, yet the test of that was to come.

Alderman Quincy said he should not object to a transfer of hose carriages, where not needed, but so much had been saved by them in many instances as would more than pay the expense. This was not the time to weaken the department by consolidating it.

Alderman Gibson said he would not put new engines where wanted with the hose carriages, and transfer Alderman Quincy remarked as the difference that by having them located together, they would each arrive at the fire at the same time.

Alderman Power said he would not be driven into any measures by the action of underwriters, for he had little respect for what they had to say or do. The citizens should have little compassion for them and not be actuated by their threats. This measure was proposed immediately after the great fire, and its adoption was contemplated before the recent fire, an appropriation for which was asked for. He thought the Alderman was mistaken as to the territory over which the New York Fire Department operated, and that instead of being fifteen miles it was but eight miles to the Harlem Bridge. New York had been peculiarly fortunate in regard to great fires, yet their number was treble those of this city, and because they were fortunate it was no reason why the rates of insurance should be advanced in this city.

Alderman Gibson said he was not opposed to increasing the fire engines, but believed it would be better to transfer the hose carriages to make it square as we go along. He would put the four horse hose carriages with the four new engines instead of buying new ones.

Alderman Clark said there were no more hose companies than were needed. It was proposed to put one engine and hose carriage on Parker street to protect the property on the Back Bay; to put another engine and hose carriage on Fort Hill; the third on Mason street, and the fourth, with the two also in the same house in Ward 14. These would take four of the five. It would not do to remove the hose carriage from Grove street, in which section the people would think they were illy protected.

At the present time the steam engines in Charles, Bulfinch, East and Wall streets are relied upon to protect most of the property in the city proper, while twelve with the necessary apparatus would not be a large number. He was not aware that the fire territory in New York extended fifteen miles, and whether there were forty-two or forty-seven engines he could not say. He knew nothing of the fire departments of other cities, but supposed the committee would have had a chance to look them over. It was clear that there was not a force large enough in this city, and that they should expend money liberally to render the department efficient.

Alderman Gaffield said he could not agree with the Alderman that they should have no respect for underwriters, for he had great respect and sympathy for them—sympathy for the widows and orphans who had lost their all by the great fire. He had great respect for those who were now willing to take risks and save us from further losses. As had been stated before the Board today, there were risks so great that it was proposed to charge eight per cent. The foreign and American insurance companies, whether rightly or not, had contemplated raising their rates in this city, and we should heed the requests and the petitions of our citizens, and spend money for apparatus where it is needed. As to the charge of extravagance, the additional expense would be saved in the percentage of insurance.

As to the reference to political influence, which the Alderman made, on the reorganization proposed the department cannot be made a political machine. He was in favor of a good commission for the control of the department, and hoped the order would pass to provide all the engines which are necessary, and that confidence would be restored, and we should be blessed hereafter with a freedom from fires.

Alderman Power said he had great respect for honest men and those who paid their debts, but he could not have respect for corporations which had got rich and when a great fire occurred paid but a little towards the loss. They had not lost one dollar for the hundreds made by them, and they had laid by thousands for one paid. As to the question before us, they needed only to provide such additional apparatus as was necessary.

Alderman Gibson withdrew an amendment proposed by him for the transfer of hose companies, and the order was passed.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That Edward S. Ellsworth be appointed a field driver and pound keeper for the vicinity of Police Station No. 11.

Ordered, That the Committee on Bridges be authorized to repair Dover-street Bridge at an expense not exceeding $1500; to be charged to the appropriation for Bridges.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to grade and gravel Columbus-avenue extension, from Ferdinand street to Park square, at an estimated cost of $10,000.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the sidewalks, where required, on Milmont street, between Lambert avenue and Highland street, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the sidewalks on Gates street where there are none, between Dorchester and Telegraph streets, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave the sidewalks on Vernon street, between Shawmut avenue and Washington street, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the sidewalks on Lewis park and Highland avenue, where there are none, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to grade Norfolk avenue, according to the established grade, at an estimated cost of $4000.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave the sidewalks on a portion of Thomas street between G and Old Harbor streets, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Ordered, That there be paid to Julia Hurley the sum of $100, in full compensation for all damages caused to her estate on Chambers street, by the raising of the grade of said street, as ordered by the Board of Aldermen, September 17, 1872, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Paving.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That there be paid to John L. Batchelder the sum of $24,728 for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Broad street, by a resolve and order of the Street Commissioners, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to David Chapin, W. L. Prescott and others the sum of $62,340, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Broad street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to Maria T. Tileston the sum of $51,603, for land taken from and all damages occasioned the estate of the heirs of Thomas Tileston by the widening of Broad street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to George N. March the sum of $3080, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Hawley street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to A. O. Bigelow, trustee, the sum of $96,165, for land taken from S. P. Tuckerman, A. O. Bigelow, trustee, and all damages occasioned by the extension of Washington street to Haymarket square, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for the Extension of Washington Street.

Ordered, That there be paid to Henry Frothingham the sum of $3050, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Harrison avenue, by order of the Board of Street Commissioners, June 12, 1873; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to Helena C. Mendon the sum of $350, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the extension of Washington street to Haymarket square, by a resolve and order of the Street Commissioners September 9, 1872, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for the Extension of Washington Street.

Ordered, That there be paid to Elizabeth P. Gray the sum of $34,500, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the extension of Washington street to Haymarket square, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Washington-street Extension Loan.

On motion of Aldermen Stebbins—

Ordered, That the Committee on the Suffolk-street District be requested to report what action, if any, is necessary, on the part of the City Council under the provisions of Chapter 340 of the acts of the year 1873, authorizing the raising of the grade of certain lands in the city of Boston, for the purpose of preserving the public health.

Alderman Stebbins presented a communication from Zenas E. Smith, resigning his office as an Assistant-Engineer in the Fire Department. The proper course, he said, would be to refer it to the Committee on Nomination of Engineers, but in view of the valuable services of Mr. Smith, being one of the most efficient assistant-engineers, he hoped it would be referred to the Committee on Fire Department, and that he might be induced to withdraw his resignation. The communication was referred, as proposed.

Adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

JUNE 26, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at eight o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The petitions of J. R. Bigelow & Co., of Little, Brown & Co., and 2214 others, the report of the Committee on Health respecting a nuisance, and the communication of Zenas E. Smith, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The communication of the Boston & Providence Railroad Company, containing a notice of surrender of land, was ordered to be placed on file.

The recommitment of a report and order to cancel the bonds given by Ivory Bean et al., for certain land on Dedham street, between Harrison avenue and Albany street, as described in said order, was concurred in.

The following reports were accepted, in concurrence:

Report referring the petition of Charles E. Wiggin and others, for the appointment of a Fire Commission, to the Special Committee on Reorganization of the Fire Department.

Report of Committee on the Fire Department on the subject of increase of efficiency of Fire Department, to whom was referred the message of the Mayor and of the representatives of the various insurance companies on the subject, and the communication of the officers of said department, suggesting changes in apparatus, hydrants, etc.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Order appointing Edward S. Ellsworth as a Field Driver and Pound Keeper for vicinity of Police Station Eleven.

Order for Committee on Suffolk-street District to report what action is necessary under chapter 340 of acts of 1873, for raising the grade of certain lands, for preservation of public health.

Report and order for extension of time for building on two lots of land on East Newton street, purchased of the city by M. J. Flatley, to July 1, 1874.

Report and order for extension of time to July 1, 1874, for Michael Scanlan to build on a lot of land on Fourth, near N street.

Report and order for extension of time to July 1, 1874, for Howard A. Doe to build on a lot of land on Broadway, between L and M streets.

Report recommending the passage of the preamble and order for the acceptance of the act of the Legislature of 1873, giving the engineer of the Fire Department the power conferred upon firewards by the fourth section of the twenty-fourth chapter of the General Statutes; and for Committee on Ordinances to report an ordinance in accordance therewith, with the passage of said order.

Order authorizing hose carriages to be substituted for the tenders of steam fire engines, and to be so constructed that five hosemen may ride to fires.

Order authorizing the Mayor to release to the Boston & Providence Railroad corporation the city's right and title to that part of Church street, between Columbus avenue and Providence street, discontinued by resolve of 10th of November last, in accordance with the indenture of September 30, 1871.

The following orders were severally read once:

Report and order authorizing a horse hose carriage to be purchased and equipped for Engine House No. 20, at an estimated cost of $1500.

Order to pay the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation $325,000, being the balance due for land purchased for extension of Columbus avenue, as set forth in indenture of September 30, 1871.

The report recommending the passage of the order for an additional loan of $40,000 for the extension of Columbus avenue being under consideration, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, it was laid on the table.

The report and orders authorizing a lot of land to be purchased on corner of Shawmut avenue and Upton street, at a cost of $14,000, and the erection thereon of a hose house, and for a loan of $30,000 to be applied therefore, were considered.

Mr. Marston of Ward 10 stated that there was some opposition to this location and doubt about the title to the land, and he moved that it be laid on the table, which was carried.

The report and order authorizing estimates to be procured for the purchase of a lot of land on Mason street, or in its vicinity, and for the erection thereon of a building for a steam fire engine, horse hose carriage, and the horses and men connected therewith, on motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, was laid on the table.

The order authorizing four first-class steam fire engines to be purchased, at an estimated cost of $18,000; five horse hose carriages, at an estimated cost of $4500, and one hook and ladder truck, at an expense of $1800, was read once, and a motion was made by Mr. Denny of Ward 9 for a suspension of the rules for its passage at this time.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 hoped the rules would not be suspended, for while there was so much excitement on the subject, there should be no hasty action on the part of the Council, for they should act with judgment to show that they are so far from being crazy as possible.

Mr. Denny replied that the action was not hasty, but a simple proposition to purchase engines, the sites for two of which had already been provided, on Fort Hill and Parker street, and as there could be no question relative to increasing the number of engines, the order should be passed. If passed, it would be the first completed action relative to the Fire Department since the fire in November, and the delay only illustrated the objection to leaving such matters to so large a body for disposal. The appropriation for them had been made, and this would be the first action which had actually got through.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said he was in favor of an increase in the number of engines, but he could not see what was to be done with five new ones. There were two engines now in No. 7's house, one of which was not manned, and he could not see the need of a hurry to buy five. Let the committee first man this extra one and put it into service.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 replied that the committee had performed their duty by reporting the order. An appropriation of $18,500 had been made, and in relation to the disposition of them, the new house on Warren street would be ready for one by the time they received it, and two others were to be located on Fort Hill and on Parker street, where temporary engines are to be placed. Another hook and ladder carriage is needed, a deficiency which had existed for the last five years.

Mr. Dean said there was no matter so easy to get luna upon as this upon the Fire Department. There were now considering the subject of increasing the efficiency of the Fire Department, the Committee on Fire Department, the Special Committee and the Committee on Ordinances, and all manner of propositions were before them. One order of the committee, which had been referred to the Committee on Ordinances, had been severely criticised through want of action, in the report of the Committee on Fire Department, which had been accepted. That order provides that the Committee on Fire Department shall have jurisdiction of all violations of the ordinances, a matter which is cognizable by the courts, and proposed to take from the Committee on Public Buildings the purchase of land for engines, etc. The Committee on Public Buildings now act only as approved by the Fire Department. These suggestions were reported simply because there was a call for something.

In these matters he trusted they would consider, and look before leaping. Some time ago he urged such a change in the organization of the department, that the Mayor might appoint the Chief Engineer, and he believed that if it had been done there would have been no call now for a fire commission. When the report of the special committee is made, whatever shall prove to be the best should receive his voice and his vote; but when it will require months to procure these engines, then the order should go through the regular rules. Anything which should best promote the efficiency of the department he should favor, because he had no peculiar fancies, and he had no love for a commission. He favored the making of appointments by the Mayor because one can do what sixty could not do.

Mr. Dean referred to the action on the subject of the order relative to filling the South Boston flats, a matter which he had made himself somewhat familiar with, but which passed with little time to understand it, and a motion to reconsider was lost from the absence of one who was to make it. This, too, came up suddenly, and was not the true way for action, and it might lead to regrets hereafter. They were all anxious to do right the first thing, but should take time to be sure they are right.

Mr. Denny said his feelings were with those of the gentleman from Ward 12 in regard to the suspension of the rules ordinarily, but he thought he should be negligent of his duty in not acting now upon this. The report of the Commission, if it had any weight, recommended an increase of engines, and there was no reason why they should not have had them long ago. On the 13th of March last, that report was made, and its suggestions relative to an increase of engines could not be said to be hasty. When recommendations were made in December and March, and the gentleman desires more time to consider it, and reflects and hesitates, he was willing to give him more time if he needed it, but feared it was because of opposition to the measure.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 said it was a peculiarity of crazy persons to think every one else crazy. The Committee on Fire Department in March last asked for authority to purchase more engines, and there was no reason why it should not be done now, or the fault would be at our door.

Mr. Jones stated that as it was intended on the 1st May to purchase four new engines, the sooner it was done the better.

Mr. Wells said he was on the Committee on the Fire Department when No. 7 was removed from Purchase street, for the reason that it was thought the land was too valuable for an engine house, and it was located in East street. That land is in the locality where an engine is wanted, and the land is worth twice as much as it was sold for. It is now proposed to put an engine on the city's land, but the lot is not deep enough. So in another case, he was informed by a gentleman who had a lot not two hundred feet from a hose house, which could be had at easy rates, and hundreds of thousands of dollars could be saved by proper economy.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 believed they had been grossly negligent in not taking measures for an increase in the number of engines, and he did not think there was anything loony about this. It was clearly nothing sudden, for it passed the Board of Alderman on Monday, and they had had time enough to consider. If there had been too much consideration or delay, and this was the first opportunity to take sound action upon the subject, and he hoped the order would pass.

Mr. Dean denied that this was the first tangible proposition for increasing the efficiency of the Fire Department. It was not so. The first was when the report of the Commission came in, and he proposed to change the system by having the appointments of Chief and Assistant Engineers made by the Mayor. If that had been passed, there would probably have been no call now for a commission. Every consideration of the Commission was discussed until smothered by another fire. Although we had had great fires, the Fire Department was as good as for many years, under which the city had flourished, and the changes had been similar to the contest in marine gunnery and marine armor. There were bigger guns, then thicker armor, then bigger guns and thicker armor, alternating from one to the other.

Go down to the wharves where buildings were put up many years ago, and the walls were thick and carried above the roof. When steam engines were introduced then bigger buildings were put up, and insurance officers sought out such high buildings with granite walls as the best risks. Nobody thought we should have such great fires, and when the fires got to the old buildings they stopped. We were now as well off as we were before the fires, and insurance companies have no reason to complain. We have not lost sight of the lesson, and we have put up such buildings that such fires will never again occur. When the agent of an insurance company hesitates in taking risks, he is loony. He did not charge the Committee on Fire Department with being loony, for the benign countenance of the gentleman from Ward 1 would be the last to charge with being loony.

These two great fires have created a general lunacy, not in the Committee on Fire Department, but outside. An outside demand has been made for changes. He was content for an increase in the efficiency of the department, and if he was satisfied that a commission would be the best, he should vote for it. It was economy to make a proper expenditure. It was not the fault of the rest of the Council that the subject of increase of the force was not up before. If the committee were familiar with it, they should remember that others were not. It was only a question whether a matter of so much moment should be brought into the Council and they should go it blind.

Mr. Jones read from the report of the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department, in which he asked if the means provided were adequate to the emergency.

Mr. Denny said that this was not a new question, for every intelligent member of the Council knew that an increase of the Fire Department was called for. They could not do much if the subject was considered six months. It would take four months to get the engines, and he presumed it would be six months before they could get their location.

Mr. Wells did not wish to have it thought that he was opposed to an increase in the department, but what use, he asked, was the increase of new steamers if they did not man what they had? Why not man the steamer in No. 7's house?

Mr. Jones replied that as soon as they could get temporary engines, it would not be ten minutes before they would be manned. In further advocacy of the location on Fort Hill territory, he said a person giving an alarm, could easier give it at the engine house than to go to any box.

Mr. Pease stated that the manning of a hose company had been before the committee. In New York they have twelve men to each company at salaries of $1000 apiece. If Boston was ready to stand it, then the committee had no objection to make.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said if he were a member of the committee or Chief-Engineer, he should supply such sections as were needed from others where engines could be spared. There were seven in the city proper and six in Dorchester, and why not take two from Dorchester and place them where they were most needed and where the property is? As to waiting six months, he believed the committee could get them within one month. It was understood that the Amoskeag Company gets out one a week. While there is danger, why not place the engines where they ought to be?

Mr. Jones replied that the engines in Dorchester were just as necessary there as engines were anywhere, and he wished him to point out where one could be spared. As to the Amoskeag works, he should not vote for their engines unless they were best. They had propositions for building engines which would be lighter, and before buying, they wished to see the best in the country.

Mr. Wells said he had a petition in his possession which asked for an engine in Charles street, but they do not need it there. Referring to the several locations in the city proper, he thought they could reach the burnt district in three or four minutes. If new steamers were to be placed in the burnt district he would vote for it.

Mr. Jones stated that one was to be located on Warren street, one on the burnt district, the third in Ward 9 and a fourth in Mason street.

Mr. Perkins said this might be amusing and instructing, but he would move the previous question.

The motion prevailed, when the rules were suspended, and the order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, the special assignment for half-past eight o'clock was taken up and passed, it being the following orders:

Orders for purchase of the estate of the late Nathaniel Whiting, between Washington square and place containing 1523 square feet, at not exceeding $11 per foot, and to erect on said lot and those on each side, owned by the city, a building for a steam fire engine and a hook and ladder carriage, and the horses and men connected therewith; and also for a loan of $50,000 to be applied there for.

THE BURRILL CLAIM.

On motion of Mr. Harrington of Ward 8, the special assignment for nine o'clock—the reports of Committee on Claims on petition of Charles Burrill (City Doc. No. 70, 1873)—was taken up.

The Chair stated that there was no report of the committee, but individual reports.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 moved that the order on page 25, printed document, to pay the assignee of Charles Burrill $40,000, take its first reading.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 objected to paying the claim from the appropriation for Incidental Expenses, which only required a majority vote, on which account the claim had been defeated by an overwhelming vote each time it had been up. Every time the order had been in a proper form he had voted for it and should do so. Should it be passed in this form, there would be all manner of claims pressed under the same form of payment. The friends of Mr. Burrill would do more injury to the claim by asking for its passage by a majority vote than could be done in any other way.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said he had always voted for the payment of this claim, but not by a majority vote; but if his views should continue to change as they had for the last month, he should be disposed to vote against the payment, for he had received new light on the subject.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 moved to substitute the order on page nine, to pay the assignee of Charles Burrill $15,000.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6, moved to amend the order by providing that the payment be made from the "Reserved Fund," instead of from the appropriation for "Incidental Expenses."

In support of the motion Mr. Pickering said he agreed with the gentleman who had spoken, that the order should require a two-thirds vote, because they could not pay the smallest claim, or the rent of $100 for an armory, without such a vote, while here it was proposed to pay $40,000 or $15,000 by a majority vote. As the gentleman from Ward 5 said, there was no reason why we should suspend the rules in ordinary matters, so there could be no reason in favor of doing so when the sum was not a trifling one. This was the third or fourth year in which this claim had been urged for payment by a majority vote, and he was opposed to such action.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 wished the ruling of the Chair whether the motion to substitute the order for the payment of the smaller sum was in order as an amendment to the larger sum.

The Chair stated that this case was different from that in filling blanks, when the rule required taking the question on the larger sum first.

Mr. Brackett cited cases to show payments of claims by a majority vote, that of Thomas Richardson and others, and stated that this was settled by action of the Legislature, and was simply carrying out the action of the previous Government. If right, why not vote for it, but if not they could vote against it.

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 said he had always been in favor of paying Mr. Burrill the larger sum named, and knew something about the matter and the difficulty of getting recruits. He was in hopes the President would have ruled in favor of voting upon the larger sum first. He should vote against the smaller sum.

The Chair ruled that another amendment would not be in order.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said there was no question that the claim was an illegal one, and had been so decided by the courts. There might be an equitable claim for some sum, but whatever payment should be made should be in the usual manner and paid from the Reserved Fund.

Mr. Train of Ward 13 stated as the feeling of the committee that they were indifferent whether the payment of whatever sum should be agreed upon should be by a majority or a two-thirds vote. He was willing to go for the lower sum fixed upon, but believed, as recommended by Mr. Blackmar and myself, that interest should be allowed.

Mr. Pickering said in regard to the amount which Mr. Burrill fairly and honorably spent, that it never was and never will be known. The amounts vary in the sums proposed to be paid from time to time, from $800,000 to $15,000, and they were all arbitrary. There was no question that Mr. Burrill did work and was entitled to compensation, but whether he should be paid $15,000 or $40,000, it should be by the usual vote of two-thirds.

Mr. Perkins said he was entirely in favor of the payment from the Reserved Fund, and he suggested as the most philosophical mode to vote upon the larger sum first and, to do so, that all of the pending amendments be withdrawn.

The amendments were withdrawn, when the order submitted by Mr. Brackett was considered.

Mr. Perkins proposed amendments, in the language of the order, to relieve it from ambiguity.

Mr. Flynn stated that there were not members enough to pass the order, and moved its further assignment to next Thursday evening, at 8½ o'clock—which was carried.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The order authorizing the tower of the Ticknor Schoolhouse to be raised, at a cost not exceeding $700, was read a second time and passed.

The report and orders for purchase as a site for a primary schoolhouse of two lots of land on Quincy street, near Blue-Hill avenue, at a cost not exceeding forty cents per square foot; and for a loan of $10,000 to be applied therefor, being under consideration—

Mr. Train of Ward 13 inquired what necessity there was for the proposed schoolhouse, for, living not far from this locality, he did not think it was needed, and it could only be for the accommodation of a few people. The schoolhouse opposite Warren avenue was one of the largest, and while they were spending so much money on engine houses, and he was not opposed to building schoolhouses where needed, he could see no necessity for this house.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said he was on a sub-committee to investigate this matter, and found the schoolhouse on Warren avenue crowded, and the children to be provided for could not get to school except by going round the road for a mile. It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that the seven or eight lots selected were most available for the purpose, and that there was a necessity for providing for 100 pupils at once, which would soon be increased to 150.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said there were not enough members present to pass the order, and moved to lay it on the table.

Mr. West moved to amend by making the payment from the Reserved Fund instead of by a loan, which was carried, when the order was laid on the table.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Trustees of grammar school, Boston Highlands, for permission to erect an addition to the school building on Kearsarge avenue, without the addition of a brick wall.

Pearson Brothers & Co., for leave to erect a building larger than the ordinance permits.

Severally referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, from the Committee on Claims, reported leave to withdraw severally on petitions of Emma H. Crosby to be paid for injuries received on the sidewalk on Tremont street on the 21st of February last; of George S. Keyes, to be paid for damages alleged to be done to his property by the erection of an engine house on Bulfinch street; and of John Burns, to be paid for damages done to his dock on Condor street, East Boston, by the caving in of a street adjoining said dock. Severally accepted.

Mr. Caton of Ward 10, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, acting upon an order from the City Council to procure plans and estimates for a grammar schoolhouse to be erected on land owned by the city on Houghton place, made a report as follows:

They have had plans prepared which have the approval of the Committee on Public Instruction, and have submitted the same for estimates, and find that the estimated cost for a building such as the district requires will be $105,000.

The committee find that the Comins District is very much in need of additional school accommodations. At present very many children are deprived of school instruction from the fact that buildings suitable cannot be hired within the limits of the district. The temporary accommodations already provided are in dwelling houses, which are but illy adapted for the purpose, a high rent is demanded for the same, and a heavy expenditure in the way of alterations. In view of the fact that the present schoolrooms in the district are crowded beyond the maximum number, and the prospective demand for school accommodations being so great, the committee would recommend the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to erect a grammar Schoolhouse on Houghton place, Ward 15, for the accommodation of the Comins District, from plans approved by the Committee on Public Instruction, at an estimated cost of $105,000.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $105,000, the same to be applied for the erection of a grammar schoolhouse, Houghton place, Ward 15.

The orders were read once.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of the Suffolk Kindling Wood Company, for leave to erect a wooden shed on First street, near K street; and no action necessary on the petition of A. C. Wellington & Co. for leave to build two wooden coal sheds on wharf No. 240 Federal street, the matter being placed under the control of the Inspection of Buildings, under the provisions of section 1 of chapter 260, laws of 1872. Severally accepted.

Mr. Caton, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of S. S. Lord, for leave to build an addition to the blacksmith's shop at No. 312 Dorchester avenue, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be authorized to issue a permit to S. S. Lord to erect an addition to Building No. 312 Dorchester avenue, according to an application on file in the office of the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

The order was passed.

Mr. Caton, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Prescott & Chapin, for leave to erect a wooden building on Liverpool wharf, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be authorized to issue a permit to Prescott & Chapin, to erect a wooden building on Liverpool wharf, according to an application on file in the office of the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

The order was passed.

Mr. Caton, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Frank J. Downes, for leave to erect a wooden building, situated on Albany street, corner of Stoughton street, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be authorized to issue a permit to Frank J. Downes to erect a wooden building, situated on Albany street, corner of Stoughton street, according to an application on file in the office of the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

The order was passed.

Mr. Caton from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of L. Petsch for leave to erect a wooden building beyond the legal dimensions at 1545 Tremont street, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be authorized to issue a permit to L. Petsch to erect an addition to building 1545 Tremont street, according to an application on file in the office of the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

The order was passed.

Mr. Caton, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Phineas B. Smith, for leave to make a wooden addition to his house, No. 30 Marcella street, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be authorized to issue a permit to Phineas B. Smith to erect a wooden addition to his house, No. 30 Marcella street, according to an application on file in the office of the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

The order was passed.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Mayor be directed not to execute or deliver the contract relating to the occupation of the South Boston flats contained in city document of 1873, No. 71, unless the following amendment shall have been inserted in said agreement at the end of the fourth line on page twelve of said document, namely:

"And further, that said party of the fourth part may from time to time lay out Eastern avenue and L street, or any part or parts thereof before the same are filled as public streets, without incurring any land damages for so doing, and that when so laid out as public streets, said party of the fourth part shall have a conveyance of the said territory within the limits of said avenue and street, and shall be paid therefor by the party of the first part:

Provided, however, that said party of the first part shall not be required to pay therefor before the land adjoining said avenue and street shall be filled, nor at a greater price than the cost of said filling to the party of the first part, if filled by the party of the first part according to the provisions contained in this agreement; and provided, also, that said avenue and street, if constructed before the adjoining flats shall be filled, shall be so constructed as not to prevent the passage of scows for the purposes of filling the land on either side of said avenue and street."

Mr. Perkins characterized the proposed action as doing in an irregular way what could not be accomplished by reconsideration. The two branches of the City Council had acted upon it, and if the Mayor finds it objectionable he will not sign it.

Mr. Dean defended the proposed action in its effect on the laying out of new avenues and the relief of the city from land damages until the entire territory was filled in, while it would not effect the Commonwealth in any particular.

Mr. Perkins said there could be no harm in having the matter laid over.

Mr. Dean inquired if the gentleman could give assurance that the Mayor would not meantime sign the indenture.

Mr. Perkins replied that he could not.

The order was laid on the table.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 offered an order to pay John L. Cook, police officer, for extra services performed, provided it is approved in the usual manner.

In answer to an inquiry, he said it was but for a small sum, for distribution of mail matter in connection with the City Hall.

The order was read twice and passed.

Adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

JUNE 30, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held this afternoon, at four o'clock, Alderman Cutter, the Chairman, presiding.

JURORS DRAWN.

Twenty-two grand jurors and thirty-six traverse jurors were drawn for the Superior Court, criminal business.

APPOINTMENTS MADE AND CONFIRMED.

Special Police Officers without pay—Amos Dodge and John H. Terry, for new market grounds, India street.

A. A. Lothrop, S. S. Putnam & Co., Neponset; Daniel Burnett, Cutter's wharf, Commercial point; J. H. Green, Bankers' and Brokers' Electric Protective Co.; A. J. Clough, Bird street, Ward 16; George W. B. Lawrence, Village street and its vicinity; Hiram A. Wright, Boston Highlands; J. C. Frank, J. D. Foster, Michael Meleedy, George E. Bontelle, Frank Thayer, J. Charles Frank, severally for Long Island Steamboat Co.; Daniel Donovan, Rogers Brothers' wharf, First street; A. G. Chase, Pfaff's Hotel, Park square; William T. Gunnison, David Atkinson, for Bennington street and its vicinity.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Orsamus Nute, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for thirteen horses, rear of Plymouth street, for temporary use.

James Nash, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for two horses, on Bolton street, between E and F streets, Ward 12.

A. Burrell, for leave to occupy a brick stable for four horses, on Third street, near M street.

Severally referred to the Committee on Health.

Martin Lennon, to be paid for land taken to widen Dearborn street and Hartopp place. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Isaac P. Clark and others, for a sewer in Longwood avenue.

F. W. Dahl and others, for a sewer in Folsom place.

Selectmen of Brookline, notice of a hearing on a proposed diversion of Muddy River.

John P. Morrison, for a sewer in Chelsea street, between Marion and Brooks streets.

P. S. Briggs, for a sewer in First street, from K to L streets.

Severally referred to Committee on Sewers.

G. E. Lothrop, for leave to open an anatomical museum at 161 Court street.

David C. Sisson & Co., for license to keep an intelligence office at No. 15 School street.

Severally referred to Committee on Licenses.

Catharine McCully, to be paid for damages occasioned by raising the grade of Brighton avenue.

Henry Souther, for the removal of the tracks of the South Boston Railroad into the centre of Emerson street.

Blackstone National Bank and others, that Haymarket square be paved with granite blocks.

J. H. Hathorne and others, that Northampton street be repaved with wood or granite blocks.

Severally referred to Committee on Sewers.

Henry N. Stone, that salt water be used through the Holly system for extinguishment of fires.

The petitioner requests that independent main and branch pipes be laid in the principal business streets, with a sufficient number of hydrants to be supplied with salt water to be forced by one or more stationary engines on B. Holly's automatic system, which has already been successfully introduced in thirty or more cities. The petitioner says he offers it after consultation with the City Engineer, who is acquainted with the system and approves of it, if confined to the independent pipes, as being "well adapted to fire purposes," and "feasible if the city is willing to pay the expense."

Statements are given of the cost of such works in other cities, as follows:

Peoria, Ill., cost $440,000, 25½ miles, 200 double hydrants.

Binghamton, N. Y., $180,000, 19 miles, 200 hydrants.

Columbus, Ohio, $353,309, 26 miles of main and sub-main pipes, 154 hydrants.

The several costs of running these works is as follows: Peoria, $12,000; Binghamton, $12,000, including salaries; Columbus about $16,000.

Referred to Committee on the Fire Department.

HEARINGS ON ORDER OF NOTICE.

The hearings on orders of notice on the petition of Patterson & Lavender, for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at their factory on Burck street; also on petition of Frederick Bleiler, for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler in Heath place, were severally taken up. No person appeared in relation thereto, and the reports were recommitted.

WIDENING OF ESSEX STREET.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners, for the widening of Essex street, from Washington street to Harrison avenue, at an estimated expense of $82,138. The several items of expense are estimated as follows: H. Hollis Hunnewell, corner of Washington street, 949 feet of land, $35, $33,215; damages, $600—$33,875. Pleg W. Chandler, Nos 16 to 24, 583 feet, $23, $13,409; damages, $500—$13,909. Heirs of Sara A. Brown, No. 26, 294 feet, $21, $6174; damages, $263—6437. Aaron C. Baldwin, No. 32, 511 feet, $17, $8687; damages, $500—$9187. Asa P. Morse, 36 to 38, 318 feet, $17, $5407; damages, $264—$5670. Aaron C. Baldwin, 40 to 42, 313 feet, $20, $6260, damages, $6800—$13,060. Total, 2968 feet of land, $73,151; damages, $8987—$82,138.

Alderman Clark stated that the subject had been in the hands of the Committee on Streets, who were unanimously in favor of the widening.

The resolve and order were passed.

WIDENING OF WASHINGTON STREET.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Washington street from Boylston street to Avery street, at an estimated expense of $144,474. The several items of expense are as follows:

Heirs of Mary Boylston, corner of Boylston street, 257 feet of land, $40 per foot, $10,280; damages to buildings, $12,500—$22,780. John I. Brown, Nos. 427-25 Washington street, 442 feet, $30, $13,260; damages, $12,000—$25,260. Francis B. Hayes, Nos. 423-19, 482 feet, $67, $13,014; damages, $440—$13,454. Gardner Brewer, Nos. 415-13, 525 feet, $25, $13,125; damages, $467—$13,592. Massachusetts Baptist Convention, Nos. 413-11, 409 feet, $24, $9816; damages, $330—$10,146. James Parker, Nos. 409-5, 629 feet, $23, $14,467; damages, $600—$15,067. John Roessle, Nos. 401-397, 713 feet, $23, $16,399; damages, $440—$16,839. W. C. Murdock and Seth Turner, trustees, Nos. 395-389, 487 feet, $28, $13,636; damages, $13,700—$27,336. Total, 3944 feet, $103,997; damages, $40,477—$144,474.

Alderman Clark made a similar statement in regard to this proposed widening, and the resolve and order were read twice and passed.

EXTENSION OF WEST CHESTER PARK.

A communication was received from the Street Commissioners, with a resolve and order, for the extension of West Chester park to Beacon street, at an estimated cost of $15,335 10.

The estimate provides for taking land as follows: 5940 square feet of land belonging to the Boston & Providence Railroad Company; 54,209 feet owned by F. Haven and others, trustees; 11,475 feet belonging to unknown owners; 73,769 feet, Boston Water Power Company; 17,039 feet, William Gray, 90 cents per foot, $15,335 10; 75,303 feet, Boston Water Power Company; 5743 feet, Boston & Albany Railroad Company; 34,187 feet, Boston Water Power Company; 8522 feet, unknown owners; 69,956 feet, Boston Water Power Company,—making a total of 347,143 feet of land, at a cost of $15,335 10.

Alderman Clark said he supposed the Aldermen fully understood the circumstances in relation to the proposed extension of West Chester park. It was necessary to take the land in the proposed extension to enable Mr. Munson to fulfil his contract with the city in the filling and laying out of the street.

The resolve and order were passed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The report of Committee on Finance, with order for collection of interest on unpaid taxes of the current year, was accepted, and the order was passed.

REMOVAL OF SIDEWALK ON TREMONT STREET.

The report and order for Superintendent of Streets to remove the sidewalk on Tremont street adjacent to the Common, and put the street in condition for passage of vehicles, were considered.

Alderman Quincy wished for more information on the subject as to the necessity for this measure before voting for it. By removing the sidewalk outside of the fence he feared it would follow that the fence itself would be removed and that it would be but the entering wedge for further encroachments upon the Common. Two years ago, when this subject was brought up, the Chief of Police was directed to report upon the subject of travel on Tremont street, and the blocking of travel, and on this report the measure failed.

Alderman Quincy read from the report of the Chief-of-Police, from which it appeared, he said, that of the blockings of the streets alongside of the Common, eight of them originated north of Park street. The measurement of the street in various places showed that the narrowest part was north of Park street, and while the statement was made of the blockings below, how many times the street was blocked above they did not know. They only knew how many times there were blockings north of Park street. He wished to introduce a similar order for the Chief-of-Police to ascertain the blocking of the street in its different sections, before taking action on this order. He moved that the order under consideration be laid on the table.

Alderman Clark said he hoped the motion to lay the order on the table would not prevail, for there was no need of directing the Chief of Police to ascertain whether there was any blockade in Tremont street, for anybody could ascertain that in fifteen minutes. From eight o'clock in the morning to five o'clock, there was not a street in the city more crowded. From Bromfield, Winter, Temple and West streets, there is a constant stream of travel into Tremont street, causing a continual blockade. We are now spending $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 for street improvements, while here is an opportunity to widen a street from six to eight feet, without costing more than $25,000. No place in the city more needed widening than Tremont street.

While it was not proposed to do more than remove the sidewalk, he would go further and remove the fence, then lay a curb stone two or three feet further back. It was only proposed to remove the sidewalk, so that it will give room for the passage of vehicles between the fence and the car tracks. If it was a measure requiring a street widening not more necessary, at a cost of $300,000, they would vote for it. But here was a case in which it was necessary merely to remove the sidewalk to secure a valuable improvement. To ask the Chief-of-Police to ascertain whether there were blocks in the street would be to spend time for nothing, for it was well known that there is a complete blockade in the street from nine to five o'clock. He hoped, therefore, that the order would not be laid on the table, but that the Superintendent of Streets would be directed to remove the sidewalk without delay.

Alderman Quincy said he had no doubt there were blocks in the street, but he wished to know whether the blocks were not now as in 1871, eight out of ten originating north of Park street. If that is the case still, he could see no necessity for this measure. If there is to be a widening, it is necessary to widen the street north of Park street, and to remove the hacks and wagons which now obstruct the street before taking other action.

Alderman Clark said the Committee on Streets have initiated the measure that no more licenses shall be granted for wagons or coaches to stand in Tremont street. That portion of the street north of Park street cannot be widened except at a very large expense. There was no doubt the time would come for the widening of Tremont street from Park street to Scollay square. When improvements are made in the Tremont House, as no doubt some time there will be, the widening may be made. But here is a widening which can be made at no expense. The same objections were made to the cutting off of the corner of the mall at Boylston street, and the improvement was made in the night. When it was done, every one was surprised at the benefit, and wondered why it was not done before, and so it will be in this case. It was their duty to make such improvements when it can be done at no expense, and let other matters which require enormous expenditures, remain for the future.

Alderman Gibson hoped the order would not be laid on the table, for there was no good reason for it. The space now occupied by a sidewalk outside of the fence was entirely useless, and by taking away of the sidewalk it would allow another line of vehicles to pass outside of the railroad track, and thus relieve the street from blocking. Three-fourths of the people now walk inside the fence on the mall, and it will be no hardship for the other fourth to walk inside on the gravelled mall. With a good width the street will never be blocked. It was one of the most necessary improvements, and it will not be a week after it is done before the people will wonder it was not done before.

The Chair now stated that the motion to lay on the table was not debatable, but by general consent the debate was continued.

Alderman Clark stated that during the winter the sidewalk outside of the fence was covered with snow and ice and was comparatively unnecessary. In the winter plank walks may be laid down the mall as on other walks. They did not ask to encroach upon the Common, but to take up a useless sidewalk, to provide for the passage of vehicles, at no expense.

Alderman Emery said he should be happy to vote for the order, for it was time that the widening of the street in that manner should be done. The Alderman who opposed it suggested that there were clogs north of Park street. Doubtless there were, yet that was no reason why this portion of the street should not be widened. It could be done at a trifling expense, and it should be done. Where the street can be widened it should be, and the order should be passed.

The motion to lay the order on the table was lost, when the order was passed.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The petitions of trustees of Grammar School, Roxbury, and of Pearson Brothers & Co., were severally referred, in concurrence.

The following reports were severally accepted, in concurrence:

Reports from Committee on Claims (leave to withdraw) on petition of John Burns, for damages to his dock on Condor street; of Emma H. Crosby, for personal injuries on Tremont street, and of George S. Keyes, for damages on account of erection of an engine house next his estate.

Reports from Committee on Survey, etc., of Buildings, granting leave to Phineas B. Smith, S. S. Lord, Prescott & Chapin, Frank J. Downes, and L. Petsch, to make additions to their buildings, etc.

Report (no action necessary by the City Council) on petition of A. C. Wellington & Co., for erection of coal sheds.

On motion of Alderman Emery, the report (leave to withdraw) on petition of Suffolk Kindling Wood Company, to erect a shed on First street, near K street, was laid on the table.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Order to pay bill of John L. Cook, police officer, for extra services.

Orders for purchase of the estate of the late Nathaniel Whiting, between Washington square and place, containing 1523 square feet, at not exceeding $11 per foot, and to erect on said lot and those on each side, owned by the city, a building for a steam fire engine, and a hook and ladder carriage, and the horses and men connected therewith; and also for a loan of $50,000 to be applied therefor.

The order authorizing the tower of the Ticknor Schoolhouse to be raised, at a cost not exceeding $700, was a subject of inquiry as to its origin, Alderman Gibson stating that as a member of the Committee on Public Buildings he was not aware that it had been before that committee.

Alderman Clark suggested that it be referred to that committee.

Alderman Sayward said he had no objection to the reference, but knew nothing of the matter.

Alderman Power replied that the Superintendent of Public Buildings knew something of it, if the committee did not. He had been trying to find the committee to consider the subject. The Superintendent of Fire Alarms had consulted with him about it, and as a clock had been ordered for the schoolhouse some time ago, the Superintendent of Public Buildings believed it would be necessary to raise the tower. To him it was fully understood.

Alderman Sayward said he was not aware that a clock had been ordered to be placed in that schoolhouse, and it might be that the Superintendent of Public Buildings understood the matter, but the committee did not. If all the applications which came here for such purposes were granted, and clocks are put up in various places where they are not needed, and where few look at them, the appropriation for Public Buildings will come much short of what is called for. They could not provide for every thing, in furnishing every schoolhouse, jail, and other buildings, with clocks.

Alderman Power did not see any impropriety in the Committee on Public Buildings not being called upon any more than the Committee on Clocks. If a clock was needed anywhere, it was on that house, for there was none in that vicinity. It could not be put there without an alteration in the tower, and there were not many improvements more needed for a similar purpose than this.

Alderman Sayward did not think so many clocks were needed, and he thought the order had better be referred to the committee to learn their opinions.

The order was passed, in concurrence.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Power, from the joint special committee appointed to make the annual examination of the bonds of the several city officers, made a report that they find all the bonds to be correct in form and the sureties of each sufficient. Accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on Public Lands, on the part of the Board, to whom was referred the petition of E. & R.W. Sears for reimbursement of a portion of rent for City Hospital wharf, made a report recommending that the petitioners have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of the petition of David R. Whitney, for leave to locate and use a steam boiler and engine on New street, East Boston. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of stables as follows: Thomas Wilkins, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Green street, near old well; D. W. Parmenter, to erect a stable for three horses on Condor street; Patrick Coyne, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse on Eighth street, between M and N streets; G. H. Barker, to occupy a wooden stable for three horses on Saratoga street, between Moore and Byron streets; John D. Campbell, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse rear of Putnam street, Ward 1; and leave to withdraw, on petition of Maurice Lane, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Longwood avenue, between Parker street and Bumstead lane. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses as follows: E. W. Wiggins, for leave to exhibit the "Giant Couple" at the Meionon for ten days from July 1; also licenses to John N. Brown and John Glancy as auctioneers; and licenses to sixteen newsboys and three bootblacks, to one hundred and eighty-three dealers in second-hand articles, sixty-six pawnbrokers, and to thirty-six persons to keep intelligence offices, as victuallers and innholders, etc.

Severally accepted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on petition of G. E. Lothrop, to open an anatomical museum at No. 161 Court street, and on petitions of Nicholas Bessey, Holmes & Rowerth, Margaret Lambrecht, Michael G. Minon, 31 Lagrange street, Margaret Savage, 29 Lagrange street, and John Fleming, No. 1013 Tremont street, for licenses as victuallers. Severally accepted.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That hack licenses numbered from 1 to 637 inclusive, except Nos. 98, 111, 120, 129, 151, be granted for one year from July 1, 1873.

Ordered, That wagon licenses numbered from 1 to 3338 inclusive, except Nos. 306, 309, 523, 567 and 1451 be granted for one year from July 1, 1873.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on Paving, reported leave to withdraw severally on petitions of Minerva W. Houghton, to be paid for grade damages at 493 Tremont street; Francis Chickey's heirs, to be paid for grade damages at 35 Warrenton street; C. E. Jackson, to be paid for grade damages at No. 124 Essex street; Stephen M. Allen, for a sewer in Centre street, near Marcella street; Samuel B. Hopkins and others, that West Dedham street be paved with wood or granite blocks; Eben Jackson and others, that Fourth street be paved from A street to Dorchester avenue; Ralph Haskins's executors, that their right of drainage through Blue-Hill avenue be restored. Severally accepted.

The same committee reported no action necessary on the several petitions of John C. O'Callahan, to be compensated for damages caused by surface water on Columbus street, Ward 16; Samuel Downer and others, for abatement of a nuisance near Creek street, Ward 16, said nuisance having been abated; Bartholomew Roach and others, that a nuisance near Creech street may be abated, the nuisance having been abated; Timothy McCarthy, for the grade of Tremont street between the Boston & Providence Railroad and Tremont street; and no action necessary during the present season on petition of H. G. Flinn and others, that some street in East Boston be assigned for coasting purposes. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, made a report that they have received a communication from the Overseers of the Poor, requesting the consideration of certain needed repairs upon the Central Charity Bureau Building and Temporary Home; also that some means of safety may be provided for the inmates of the Temporary Home, in case of fire.

The committee have considered the request of the Overseers and are of the opinion that the same should be granted; the cost of said repairs and improvements being estimated at $3000. In order that the work may commence as speedily as possible, they would recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to make such repairs and improvements as may be needed in the Central Charity Bureau Building and Temporary Home; also to provide a fire escape for the Temporary Home, at an estimated cost of $3000; all of said repairs and improvements to be subject to the approval of the Overseers of the Poor, and the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

The order was passed.

NUISANCE IN THE HALLECK-STREET DISTRICT.

Alderman Cutter, from the Joint Special Committee on the Suffolk-street District, to whom was referred the communication from the Board of Health in relation to the abatement of the nuisance caused by the imperfect drainage of the territory between Tremont, Ruggles, Parker and Prentiss streets, having carefully considered the subject, made a report, as follows:

This territory, known as the Halleck-street district, covers an area of about twenty-eight acres, of which twenty-six acres are less than eighteen feet above mean low water. The grade of the streets varies from twelve to twenty-eight feet, and the general grade of the vacant lands in the interior is about ten feet. In 1872 the City Council petitioned the General Court for authority to take the land with the buildings and other fixtures thereon and abate the nuisance in the same manner that similar nuisances had been abated in the Church-street and Suffolk-street districts. The authority to take the property was granted, but, instead of requiring the parties who failed to agree with the city upon the damage done by the taking to join in a simple bill in equity and have the matter passed upon in the first instance by three commissioners appointed by the Supreme Court, the act allows any or all of the parties in interest to apply directly for a jury in the same manner and subject to the same provisions of law as if the property had been taken for a street.

By proceeding under this act the city would be involved in expenses which are not warranted by the circumstances. The estimated expense for raising the territory, raising and underpinning the buildings, paving the streets, and building sidewalks, sewers and cess-pools, is $389,000. Following the precedents established in the cases of Church street and Suffolk street, the owners would expect the city to do the whole or the greater portion of this work, and reconvey the estates without charging any betterments. There is no obligation resting upon the city to abate this nuisance except in the usual way, that is, at the expense of the owners of the estates on which the nuisance exists. The impaired drainage on the Church-street and Suffolk-street districts was the result of action to which the city for certain valuable considerations gave its assent, and although there was no legal liability on the part of the city to make good the damage, the parties in interest had a strong claim in equity, and it was upon that ground that the improvements upon these districts were made.

In the present case, the purpose sought to be accomplished, namely, the immediate abatement of a nuisance, could not be effected by proceeding under this act of the Legislature. It is necessary that accurate descriptions of the estates should be made before the city can proceed to take them. Some progress has been made by the City Surveyor in preparing these descriptions, but considerable time will still be required to complete them. Further time would be consumed in making contracts and beginning the work of filling, so that with the utmost energy nothing could be accomplished in the way of abating the nuisance until the necessity for action had passed.

It appears from a personal inspection of the premises that although the whole district is at a low grade, only a small part of it is in a condition to be injurious to the public health. Some of the owners have already filled their lands sufficiently to abate any nuisance, and if the others neglect or refuse to do the same, the Board of Health has ample power to do it at their expense and without delay. For these reasons the committee are of opinion that it would not be expedient for the City Council to exercise the authority granted by the Legislature.

The question was stated to be on the acceptance of the report.

Alderman Clark remarked upon the position of the question, that the Board of Health had referred the matter to the Joint Committee on Health to abate the nuisance complained of, on the ground that it was nothing that concerned them, and this committee, after looking at it, said it was nothing that concerned them. The evil complained of was a consummate nuisance, and it was never worse than it is now. The filling up, as proposed by the Board of Health, would not affect it. He rode around in the vicinity, on Parker street, on Saturday night, and ascertained what the nuisance was. In the change of direction of the sewer, the contents flowed over a space of two hundred or three hundred acres, and the exhalations caused the nuisance complained of.

Instead of constructing a channel for the sewerage to deep water, the sewage empties itself upon the flats, and just so long as it is allowed to evaporate there, they would have the smells. It was not the space in the Halleck-street District nor Miller's River, but this evaporation from the sewer which caused the nuisance every where complained of on the Back Bay, and the filling up as proposed by the Board of Health would not remedy the evil. The sewer empties itself on the right hand of Parker street, and was the source of all the smells at the West and South ends. It would be necessary in providing a remedy that a sewer should be constructed of a sufficient capacity to carry the contents to deep water. Until this was done the city would be liable to cholera, yellow fever and other pestilences, in spite of the Board of Health or of the Health Committee.

Last year a complaint was made on account of this nuisance, and an act of the Legislature was passed which it was supposed would remedy it. We are now, on the 1st of July, nowhere nearer the abatement of the nuisance than we were last year at this time. With the exception of getting rid of the smallpox and the vacation of a few tenement houses we have gained little by the establishment of a Board of Health. With all the boards of health or of special committees we shall not get rid of the nuisance until we have a sufficient sewerage system to drain the city.

Alderman Sayward said he desired to understand the subject, and as he could not, he moved that the report be laid on the table and be printed.

Alderman Power did not think it necessary to print every document which was reported to the City Council. If anybody had power to abate this nuisance, it was the Board of Health, for they had all the power given to them which was possessed by the Board of Aldermen as a Board of Health. It was proper to refer back the report, or make any other disposition of it, so far as that was concerned.

Alderman Sayward believed there was no doubt the Board of Health had all the power that was necessary, to abate nuisances, but thought if the matter originated from sewers, it might be referred to the Committee on Sewers. The Suffolk-street Committee might have done better than to refer it to the Board of Health, who had not the power to build sewers.

Alderman Power said the Board of Health could require the proper means to be used to abate the nuisance. It was time for the Committee on Sewers to act when their attention was called to it.

Alderman Quincy inquired whether the matter had been before the Board of Health, and called for the reading of the order to which the report related.

Alderman Clark said he supposed the report was made up on the advice of the City Solicitor, or his assistant. The smell, he repeated, did not come from Halleck street, but from where the sewer empties upon the flats. The Board of Health should have found out where it came from and suggested a remedy. Complaint was made in the public press about the nuisance, which induced the Board of Health to call attention to it. But where, he asked, was the press which last year made such a complaint against the Board of Aldermen as a Board of Health? They should have asked ere this, Have we a Board of Health?

For the last fortnight the stench had been so great in many places on the Back Bay that the people were obliged to close their windows, but the press had been silent as to the remedy. It was their duty to stir up the Board of Health as they did the Board of Aldermen last year. It was a part of their duty to do such things. The Board of Health should have inquired whether the systematic drainage of the city was necessary to the removal of the nuisance. The Superintendent of Sewers, he understood, had changed the course of the sewer for some purpose, and tomorrow would turn it back, and the Board of Health would probably go up with a barrel of disinfecting powder to disinfect the nuisance, but it would require more than one barrel to do it, for it was caused by evaporation on the flats.

Alderman Quincy, on examination of the report, said the committee give reasons why the act to which the Board of Health referred would not remedy the evil. If such is the fact that the act cannot be put in operation, then the Board of Health should tell us how the nuisance shall be abated. He moved that the report be accepted, and referred to the Board of Health.

Alderman Brown said the committee visited the locality in person, and found the condition of it to be such that the nuisance should be abated at once.

Under the act it would require until September to make an inventory of the property preparatory to taking it, while the Board of Health has all the power necessary for abating such nuisances, and they reported it back to the board to act at once. They believed the board was instituted for certain purposes, and to fulfil the purposes for which it was created, it was referred to the board for their adjudication.

Alderman Sayward said he believed in the Board of Health, although he was opposed to its organization, and believed it had done all that was in its power for the public health, and that it will abate this and all other nuisances.

Alderman Gibson did not see how they could abate this nuisance, for they could not cart earth upon three hundred acres of flats. They might build up a dike to keep the flats flowed with salt water, but that would be a job of months. It would require a long time to get such a space sweetened.

Alderman Brown stated that a point castelry of Parker street was pestilential in character. There was one section of eighteen or twenty acres which would cost from 12½ to 20 cents per foot to fill it, and under the act of filling would be chargeable to the abutters, the owners of the property. The taking possession of the land would require until fall to do so, while the Board of Health could abate the nuisance at once.

Alderman Gibson stated that three years ago, when they began filling in of a portion of the Back Bay, there was a disagreeable stench, and a water course was opened which flowed it. Possibly this might be done so.

Alderman Stebbins said there were particular points which the Board of Health referred to as causing the nuisance, and those were not bigger than this room, and $1000 for each place on either side of Halleck street would be sufficient to fill them up. A notice of three days was all that was necessary for the Board of Health to give, when these special points could be covered in ten days. As to sewerage, there was no doubt a better system would be needed before many years. The Superintendent of Sewers would remove the temporary dam tomorrow, and much of the smell would disappear.

Alderman Clark said the committee did right in reporting the matter back, for the City Government, under the Legislative act, would be put to great expense, which should be borne by abutters. Yet the locality in question was not the source of the nuisance. If the Board of Health had been indefatigable in their duties, they would have found out the cause of the nuisance. Last year it was impossible to be near this sewer five minutes without being sick, and no doubt this was the same trouble which was complained of twelve months ago. The Board of Health should have known it did not originate in the Halleck-street district, but in a district over a large area of flats.

The water is let out and filled up once or twice a day, but the sewerage is not carried off. The same is true of a sewer which extends under the Public Garden and empties into the river near Beacon street. The Roxbury canal was complained of twelve months ago, and was deepened, yet it is about as bad as ever. The sewerage of all that part of the city is bad, and never can be kept healthy in its present condition. The Board of Health should have devised some system of drainage, in the discharge of the sewage at deep water on one side of the city or the other, but nothing had been done nor suggested by them. It was neither one side of the city nor the other, nor Miller's River which was the cause of the stench, but this nuisance which was stated by him.

Alderman Stebbins said an application was made to the last Legislature for authority to construct a circular wall in the river at Beacon street, to cause a better flow of water, but some of the residents opposed it, it was defeated, and they must endure the smell.

Alderman Sayward withdrew his motion to print, when the report was accepted.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Brown

Ordered, That the expenses for grading and planking the territory hired by the city of the India and Central Wharf corporations for a vegetable market be charged to the appropriation for Markets.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Fire Alarms, under the direction of the committee on that department, be authorized to have suitable notices printed, giving information of the location of the nearest signal box and key to the same, for distribution in the vicinity of the signal boxes, at a cost estimated not to exceed $400; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Alarms.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Fire Alarms, under the direction of the committee on that department, be authorized to extend the telegraph lines, repaint poles, etc., at an estimated expense of $2500; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Alarms.

Ordered, That the Committee on Fire Alarms be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $500 in each case for apparatus, or making such extensions, alterations and repairs as may at any time be necessary, said sums to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Alarms.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the City Surveyor be authorized, with the approval of the Joint Standing Committee on the Surveyor's Department, to make such purchases of supplies, instruments and materials, and to incur such other expenses as may be necessary for his department from time to time during the present municipal year.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That so much of the Annual Report of the Directors for Public Institutions as relates to accommodations for the inmates of the several institutions under their charge, be referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Institutions.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones, pave the gutters and macadamize the roadway of Dorchester avenue, between Glover's Corner and Field's Corner.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Sewers be directed to construct a common sewer in Bolton street, and report a schedule of the expense to this Board, according to law.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Sewers be directed to construct a common sewer in Lexington street, between Prescott and Eagle streets, and report a schedule of the expense to this Board.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Sewers be directed to construct a common sewer in Arch street, between Milk and Franklin streets, and report a schedule of the expense to this Board.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Sewers be directed to construct a common sewer in Silver street between A and B streets, and report a schedule of the expense to this Board.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the expense of extending West Chester park to Beacon street—$15,335 10—be charged to the appropriation for Laying Out and Widening Streets.

Ordered, That the Mayor be, and he is hereby authorized to contract with parties owning estates on the Fort Hill territory, so called, adjoining land of the city of Boston, to build party walls, one-half of said walls to stand on the city's land and to be paid for by the city or its assigns where used.

Ordered, That there be paid to the heirs of William H. Prentice the sum of $65,206 50, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Broad street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to Henry Poor & Son the sum of $9000, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Congress street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

Ordered, That there be paid to Warren A. Rogers the sum of $4562, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Bedford street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to George A. P. Darling the sum of $3240, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Harrison avenue, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to the heirs of James H. Foster the sum of $3935, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Bedford street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to the heirs of William H. Monroe the sum of $4771, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Bedford street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to Horatio G. Hall the sum of $1400, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Cove street, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

MUSIC ON THE COMMON, ETC.

Alderman Clark offered the following order:

Ordered, That two members of the Board of Aldermen, with such as the Common Council may join, be a special committee with authority to make arrangements for furnishing music on the Common and in other sections of the city at an expense not exceeding $2500; to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Alderman Clarke in support of the order, urged that it was one of the duties of the City Government to alleviate the sufferings of the poor, and to provide for the reasonable entertainment of the multitude. Many members of the Board were in favor of the former order, and he hoped there would be more for the passing this to appropriate the trifling sum of $2500 for the entertainment of poor people who could not afford to purchase tickets for musical entertainments. Many members of the Board could pay their fifty cents to $2 for concerts and $4 to go to an opera, but there were thousands who could not spend such sums for amusements. He did not expect to hear these concerts, but there were those in his family who would, and there were many in the outlying wards who would attend them.

Alderman Power said the order was precisely the same as that which had been considered, and he had nothing more to say than he did when that was up, and he had not changed his mind. They had cut down the appropriations for the Fourth of July, a day especially set apart for such entertainments and when it is expected, and they had cut down all other expenditures not necessary, and not justified in other days. He believed as he had stated before that they had as much right to furnish free theatrical amusements as they had to furnish music. If allowed, they would not know where to stop in such expenditures, and they should be left to the Barnums and the theatrical managers. It had been said that the sum appropriated would buy a steam fire engine, and it was true, and they should save it, and feel the necessity of saving the expense of such injuries as we could once afford.

Alderman Gibson said that we were spending $70,000 or $80,000 for improvements on the Common and public grounds, and why not spend the trifling sum of $2500 to enable the people to enjoy music? Since the last order was up he had been carefully looking over the matter, and believed that such an expenditure was as good as any money which could be spent this year. Such an expenditure was for the benefit of the poor, and he hoped it would receive an unanimous vote. People had complained and found fault with his vote against the former order, and he had felt guilty ever since. He was sorry, and believed this would be one of the best expenditures this season.

Alderman Power said he was willing to forgive the Alderman if he was sorry, but he doubted whether these concerts were for the poor exclusively. Were any of them given in the South Cove, or in North street, or Joy or Phillips street? They were given in such places as West Chester park, Independence square, or other select places. Such expenditures were made on great holidays, but it was a question in a moral point of view, whether these concerts were beneficial. As to the matter of beautifying public squares, everything of that kind was conducive to health, morals and good taste, but it was not so in this case. But the expenditure was objectionable on the ground of economy; this pressure for music was not from the taxpayers, who think economy necessary.

Alderman Quincy said he was in favor of economy, yet he feared that in this case it was like saving at the spigot and losing at the bung hole. It was a legitimate expenditure in providing amusement for the poor, and it may be, as suggested, that enough was not appropriated for the celebration of the Fourth of July. It was true that in providing concerts there might be some wrong mingling with them, for so it must be always; yet, in providing for the enjoyment of the many, should there be a few cases in which vice shows itself, it would be no reason why the enjoyment should not be allowed.

Alderman Clark said it was evident the Alderman could never get over that balloon ascension on the Fourth of July. Yet he could assure him that these concerts were not confined to the parks named by him. Last year there were one or two in North square and some elsewhere, which were enjoyed by many in those localities as much as did the Alderman at the Apollo Club, for which he paid $15. So it was in South Boston not on Independence square, and so in Roxbury, Dorchester and in East Boston. The Alderman claims, and no doubt he pays great attention to music, and to that in part he is indebted for what he is.

If the objection was a good one, that these concerts would be a resort for the immoral and vicious, it would do away with the Public Library, the Institute of Natural History and other institutions. Perchance there would some resort to them not to enjoy music, but that would be no reason why they should not be given, any more than that the places named by him or churches should not exist. The Alderman argues with tremendous force and labor, yet never more did he go against his own convictions of duty in opposing these amusements for the poorer classes. Last year the custom of a harbor excursion which cost $3000 or $4000 was dispensed with, and that was economy in a right direction, which he hoped would be followed this year. There were other expenditures which affect the rich and not the poor, but this was the only direct one for the benefit of the people. He was not sure but what they could go further in providing entertainments which elevate and refine them. These concerts were of an elevating tendency, and they should do what they can to provide entertainment for those who cannot afford to pay for expensive amusements.

Alderman Power said it was true "music hath charms," but he did not suppose it would have such an effect as to cause the Alderman from Ward 1 to basely retrograde from his former position, and he hoped no other Alderman had so changed.

Alderman Gibson, exhibiting a package of tickets for Fourth July amusements, said that with them they could not provide one in ten who wished them, and it must be a godsend to such persons to be allowed to attend concerts without tickets. He did not believe they could make any better expenditures, and while it was better to start back when one does wrong, there were those who were not willing to give it up that they are wrong. It was a small sum to expend, when so much was appropriated for the care of the Common and squares.

Alderman Power said he was well aware it required more courage to make an apology for a wrong than to sustain it, but in this matter of expenditure, they had just as much right to establish a free refreshment saloon in every ward as they had to furnish free music. There would be some substantial good in providing food for the needy.

Alderman Gaffield said it was evident enough after the eloquent remarks which had been made that "music hath charms" and he hoped it would prove that it had Power, also, and that he would face the music and vote for the order.

Alderman Clark, in reply to Alderman Power, said that the city every winter furnished food free, and no man, woman or child need go hungry.

Alderman Power believed there were those who were just as hungry in summer as in winter, yet there was no comparison between furnishing the poor with music and with food. The principle of the expenditure was wrong, and had been so decided by the City Solicitor.

Alderman Clark remarked that they continued to have their sailing regattas and to provide refreshments in their excursions on the Henry Morrison, and which, he asked, was the most sensible, legal or humane? The sailing regatta kept the attention for sixty to eighty minutes of 500 to 800 persons, while 50,000 would enjoy the concerts which cost but $2500. He regarded it as a great bugbear, to cite the opinion of the City Solicitor in a case in which the convictions of the consciences of the entire city were in favor of an expenditure.

Alderman Power said it was well established that they had the right to expend a certain percentage of the taxes for Fourth of July celebrations, but on other days they had not the same right to expend money for entertainments. This had often enough been stated by the City Solicitor.

Alderman Gibson believed no taxpayer would object to the expenditure, and that the Alderman had no constituent who would oppose it, or would dare show his head who did so. He would be willing to give something to see such a man. Ninety-nine out of a hundred would support him in such an expenditure, and he did not doubt the Alderman felt sensibly the reason for the expenditure, but found it hard to yield.

Alderman Power replied that the Alderman was supposed to have lost his courage, but whether there were any others to be added to the list he did not know. He could see no reason to change his opinion, and knew people and taxpayers who oppose such expenditures.

Alderman Clark doubted whether the Alderman would be willing to face his constituents after voting against the order.

Alderman Quincy said it was a duty to provide food for the needy, but that was not a reason why they should leave the other thing undone. Music, flowers, sunshine have an elevating influence, and while there were some who were too proud to receive food while in need, there would be none who may attend these concerts but what would feel that they are as good as many who are able to pay high prices for their amusements.

The reading of the order was called for, and a two-thirds vote being required, it failed of a passage, by a vote of 7 to 4, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Brown, Cutler, Emery, Power.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

On petition of W. L. Deland, for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at No. 22 Congress street. Hearing Monday, July 21, 4 P. M.

On the proposed construction of a sewer in Tudor street, between D and E streets. Hearing Monday next, July 7, 4 P. M.

Adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

JULY 3, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Petition of Henry N. Stone, that salt water be used through the Holly system for extinguishment of fires. Referred to the Committee on Fire Department, in concurrence.

The following orders were passed in concurrence:

Order that so much of the annual report of the Directors for Public Institutions as relates to accommodation for the inmates be referred to the Committee on Institutions.

Order for the purpose of facilitating the early collection of taxes.

Order for the purchase of supplies, instruments, and materials for the City Surveyor's Department, and to incur such other expenses as may be necessary.

Order to authorize suitable notices of the location of the fire-alarm signal boxes and keys to be printed and distributed, at an expense not exceeding $400.

Resolves and orders from the Street Commissioners that West Chester Park be extended from its present terminus at the Boston & Providence Railroad to Beacon street, at an adjudged expense of $15,331 10.

The order having been read once, Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said the matter had been before the Street Commissioners for a year or more. It would be no expense to the city treasury, and he would therefore move that the rules be suspended and the order put upon its passage.

The rules were suspended and the order was passed, in concurrence.

The resolve and order that Washington street be widened between Boylston and Avery streets, at an adjudged expense of $144,474 (City Doc. No. 86).

On motion of Mr. Harrington of Ward 8, the rules were suspended and the order was passed in concurrence.

The resolve and order that Essex street be widened from Washington street to Harrison avenue, at an adjudged expense of $82,138 (City Doc. No. 87).

On motion of Mr. Harrington of Ward 8, the rules were suspended and the order was passed in concurrence.

The following orders were severally read once:

Order authorizing extension of fire alarm lines, painting of poles, etc. at a cost not exceeding $2500.

Order authorizing contracts to be made with owners of land on Fort Hill territory, whose estates adjoin the land of the city, to build party walls.

Order authorizing $500 to be expended in each case where necessary for fire-alarm apparatus and such extensions and alterations and repairs as may be needed.

Order authorizing the making of such repairs and alterations as may be needed in Central Charity Bureau and Temporary Home, at not exceeding $3000.

Report of committee to examine bonds of city officers, that they find the same to be correctly drawn and the sureties sufficient. Accepted in concurrence.

Report (inexpedient) in detail of Committee on Suffolk-street District, to whom was referred the communication of the Board of Health in relation to the abatement of the nuisance caused by imperfect drainage of territory between Tremont, Parker, Ruggles and Prentiss streets, Ward 15. Report accepted, in concurrence.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order authorizing a horse hose carriage to be purchased and equipped for Engine House No. 20, at an estimated cost of $1500.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 moved to amend the order by requiring the purchase to be made under the direction of the Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department.

The motion prevailed, and the order, as amended, was passed.

Orders to authorize the erection of a grammar schoolhouse on Houghton place, Ward 15, and for a loan of $105,000 to be applied therefor. Passed—yeas 46, nays 0.

Order authorizing the Mayor to release to the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation the city's right and title to that part of Church street, between Columbus avenue and Providence street, discontinued by resolve of 10th of November last, in accordance with the indenture of September 30, 1871. Passed in concurrence.

Mr. Caton, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, acting upon an order of June 9, to erect a station house on Fourth street, between K and I streets, South Boston, reported that in using the same plans as in the erection of Station House Nine, quite a saving of money can be made, and a building well adapted for police purposes, but the lot will not be sufficient to give the building the needed light and air. A lot can be had adjoining, giving twenty feet front on Fourth street, and containing about 2500 square feet, and at an estimated cost of $2800. The committee recommended the purchase of the lot, and reported an order authorizing such purchase by the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, at an estimated cost of twenty-eight hundred dollars, the same to be charged to the appropriation for Station House in South Boston.

The order was read once and laid over.

On motion of Mr. Denny the report and orders for erection of a stable on city lot, Highland street, for Health and Paving departments, and for a loan of $85,000 to be applied therefor, were taken from the table and passed—yeas 46, nays 0.

On motion of Mr. West of Ward 16, the report and orders for purchase as a site for a primary schoolhouse of two lots of land on Quincy street, near Blue Hill avenue, at a cost not exceeding forty cents per square foot; and for a transfer of $10,000 to be applied therefor, were taken from the table and passed as amended—yeas 45, nays 0.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the order authorizing estimates to be procured for the purchase of a lot of land on Mason street, or in its vicinity, and for the erection thereon of a building for a steam fire engine, horse hose carriage, and the horses and men connected therewith, was taken from the table and passed.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the report recommending the passage of the order for an additional loan of $40,000 for the extension of Columbus avenue, was taken from the table and the order was passed—yeas 45, nays 0.

THE BURRILL CLAIM.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 called up the special assignment, being the reports of Committee on Claims on petition of Charles Burrill (City Doc. No. 70, 1873).

The question being on the passage of the substitute of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 said he hoped the amendment would not prevail, the reasons for which he gave at the last meeting. He could not see how any friend of paying the claim could favor the substitute, for with it they could not get a two-thirds vote. He could well understand why the opponents of the claim could favor it, for if the amendment is adopted they would vote against the whole thing. We have forty-six members here tonight; it requires forty-three to pass the order. You therefore put it in the power of four men to defeat the whole thing in case you pass this amendment. If the majority believed this claim should be paid, why not pay it? Its legality has been settled by a higher power than this Council, by the decision of the Supreme Court and the act of the Legislature. As he stated the other night, there are precedents enough for the action proposed, and the fact that this claim is larger than many others, it seemed to him, should not change its course. It seemed to be a breach of good faith not to pass this order, in conformity with the order of 1870. The money was not paid at that time because of the injunction, which was simply to restrain the city from paying the money until the matter was settled. The barrier which prevented the payment of the money in 1870 has been withdrawn, and now what reason is there for not paying it? He hoped the amendment would not prevail, but that the action of the City Government in 1870 would be carried out.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 hoped the amendment would prevail. He also favored the Democratic principle that a majority should govern. We have a rule that money shall not be appropriated by a majority vote simply. We have taken votes by yeas and nays tonight, on the payment of money, and why should we try to avoid it? He should vote in favor of the amendment.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 reminded the gentleman from Ward 10 that this amendment was simply in accordance with the decision of the courts. A very warm friend of the present claim said he would never favor it unless it should come out of the Reserved Fund, and he should like to see what favor it would meet with if that principle be violated.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 asked to be excused from voting on this question, he having been counsel in the case that preceded the application to the City Government. The Council voted to excuse Mr. Dean.

The amendment was put, and the Chair decided that it had been carried, but a doubt being raised the yeas and nays were called and the amendment was carried—yeas 21, nays 17.

Mr. Brackett said it was useless to vote upon the order tonight. Owing to the small number in attendance, he would move that the order lie on the table.

The motion prevailed.

THE SOUTH BOSTON FLATS.

On motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12, the order to amend the order relating to the contract for the occupation of the South Boston flats was taken from the table.

Mr. Dean said, In consequence of a conversation with a member of the Council in whose judgment I have a great deal of faith, and for the purpose of obviating one objection which arose in his mind in regard to this order—although, as I shall show, it is not a correct one in principle—I now move an amendment to this order, by adding, “and further that the party of the fourth part, after the first day of October, in the year 1878.” Of course, continued Mr. Dean, I need not call the attention of the Council to the fact that I am in favor of the contract that has been passed upon by the City Council, and that my constituents have perhaps a deeper interest in it and expect to derive a greater benefit from the occupation of the South Boston flats than the constituents of any other member. It interests them immediately. It is impossible that the flats shall be occupied without producing a benefit to the property of the section of the city which I represent. In the occupation of these flats anything that tends towards progress, whatever it may be, is for the benefit of my section of the city, and therefore I am in favor of the proposition. Therefore any amendment I may make is done for the purpose of getting the greatest benefit from any expenditure that the city or any other parties are expected to make on these flats. In this connection, I might, perhaps, call your attention to the fact that this matter of the occupation of the flats was started as early as 1851, when there was an act of the Legislature to incorporate Robert Rantoul and others to build Eastern avenue. In 1861 a lengthy report was made with a plan of Eastern avenue, in which this whole subject was gone over, and it was recommended that the public convenience and necessity of South Boston required a more central avenue to the city, and stating that South Boston had received a small expenditure of the money in laying out the streets. Although this may not be a legitimate reason for the expenditure, still it is something that can fairly call for the careful and kindly consideration of the City Government. And because members of the Council may not be aware of the facts, it will be permitted me to say that all the streets of South Boston were laid out and given to the city of Boston by the proprietors of the lands when the place was annexed to the city. Federal-street Bridge was built by contributions of the citizens, and it didn't cost the city a cent. Dover street cost the corporation thirty thousand dollars to build it, and it was conveyed to the city for $3500. Dorchester turnpike was made free by contributions of the citizens of South Boston. And until you come to the Broadway extension, about which such a howl was raised, there has been no considerable expenditure for the benefit of South Boston.

Mr. Dean discussed the difficulties of securing expenditures for the outlying districts of the city, for which members would not vote until convinced of their necessity, where in the city proper avenues may be laid out and depots swept away, at an expense of hundreds of thousands of dollars, and nothing is said. The extension of Eastern avenue is entirely due to the agitation of the people of South Boston. As early as 1852, and again more fully in 1861, this subject was brought before the City Government, and various reasons were given for this project. Now the city has got some sixty acres of upland in South Boston, just exactly where this avenue will terminate, and when this piece of flats is filled in as far as B street, it will be only three-quarters of a mile to the sixty acres belonging to the city. What are those sixty acres worth? What will they be worth if they have this avenue extend directly to them? That they will be quadrupled there can, in my judgment, be no doubt. It will all be made taxable property. If the city should enter into the project for the purpose of making a hundred acres of taxable property, how much stronger is the reason for creating hundreds of acres of taxable property? Still another reason is that this avenue will be of great benefit to the harbor of Boston.

Run a broad avenue through these flats, and so far as the Commonwealth's interest is concerned it would be in exactly the same direction as the city's, namely, to increase the value of property at the termination of them. It will bring the line three quarters of a mile nearer City Hall, and give South Boston the same advantages for speedy transportation that other sections have.

Mr. Dean said that if there was any certainty about the time that the flats would be filled up he would not be disposed to offer the amendment, but there is danger that it may not be done for a great many years. Congress street has been widened for this very purpose, and by this contract we decide to expend sixty thousand dollars, and a bridge for Eastern avenue is a part of this very improvement. Now shall a barrier be placed in the way of this improvement? And what is the barrier? It has turned out that every reason in favor of it has justified the statements made. The necessities of the city call for it; and notwithstanding all this we are discussing the question whether we shall have a barrier to it. We find an agreement put in here which is against its being carried out, and is for a distinct and fatal purpose. This provision we ask to be taken out, so that we shall be in the same position as other sections of the city. The Commonwealth has different objects and interests from the city. It may make its estimate for filling the flats so large that it will not be filled up until a purchaser comes to take up a large portion; it may wait until the property is worth dollars per square foot before undertaking to deal with it, and the city should ask that this great length of time should not be taken. In October, 1875, this hundred acres will be filled, and he called it 1878, to allow three years after that improvement is carried out; he wanted them emancipated some time or other, so that if any future City Government should think fit to carry out this improvement he wanted them to be able to do so without being burdened with a great and inordinate expense. He asked no change on the part of the Commonwealth, nor one cent more money to be paid than has been; nor did he ask any interference with the rights of the Boston Wharf Company or the Boston & Albany Railroad.

Mr. Dean called attention to the danger of traveling to South Boston; no one can go over Federal street without being in danger at certain times of the day. The street is jammed and crowded to death. The line of travel is unknown to the benighted gentlemen who live so far off. Mr. Dean discussed the effect of the amendment, contending that the Commonwealth could not oppose it, and the only opposition is from the Boston Wharf Co. The only reason he could assign for this is that the wharf company do not want any other lands to compete with theirs. He begged the kindly consideration of members to this matter, which does not alter the agreement, but gives greater control of the matter of laying out streets to the City Government. If defeated it would be a great wrong to the city of Boston, which is already expending thousands of dollars to meet it by the widening of Congress street. If the gentlemen have any objection to this amendment, let them propose another that will accomplish the purpose. If it is desired, said Mr. Dean, in conclusion, he would move that this matter be specially assigned for the next night at half past eight o'clock.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said the reason it would be unwise for this matter to lie over is that we are losing precious time. The last meeting of the Governor's Council occurs day after tomorrow, and if the indenture is not sent to the Council it will have to lie over until next fall. The Mayor is keeping the indenture on his table simply out of courtesy to the Common Council, and, although he felt that it was important that time should not be lost, he allowed it to lie on his table at least a week.

Mr. Perkins thought the order asking the Mayor to withhold his signature is out of order, and the Mayor is certainly showing consideration for the feelings of the Council, but the Council was not showing consideration for the feelings of the Mayor. The Council is attempting to instruct the Mayor to do a thing which is out of their power. The indenture is on the Mayor's table, and that seems to be a good reason that it should stay where it belongs—in the hands of the Mayor. Secondly, I am opposed to the amendment for the reasons as stated by the Harbor Commissioners in the letter from Mr. Ware, that the State will not agree to the proposition which the gentleman makes. He has stated that this will not cost the Commonwealth anything. If that is so it will apply equally after the indenture is signed as before. The argument proves too much. I object to this mainly on the ground of the enormous expenses attending this project. The plan will require rip-rap walls from where the hundred acres terminated, away out to L street. The city has got to build that expensive wall and the expensive bridge over the channel because the rights of the riparian owners have not been bought up. It may not be necessary to build this bridge at all, for we shall have the avenue. He was in favor of adopting the indenture which was adopted by every voice except three, and which has been approved by the Mayor. I look on this mainly as an improvement of Boston Harbor, but I have no objection to South Boston being benefited. This plan is primarily for the benefit of Boston Harbor, and Congress street was not made sixty feet wide because it was opposite to this point where this great street comes. Since 1861 South Boston has had the Broadway extension, and now we propose that Eastern avenue be extended and filled at the expense of the Commonwealth, so as to give another avenue to South Boston. The spirit shown by the Commonwealth has been very liberal. Mr. Ware has had the interests of the Commonwealth at heart.

Mr. Dean—Does the gentleman mean to say that the Mayor opposes the amendment?

Mr. Perkins—I can reply that the Mayor told me he had delayed it because he had a press of business, and because he wished to study and make himself master of the subject before he signed it. In his annual address the Mayor said a slight change was necessary and that has been made. The Mayor told me that he was satisfied with the indenture, and only delayed because there is an order in the Common Council.

Mr. Dean said he had a conversation with the Mayor and he was decidedly in favor of it. The Mayor would be the last man in the world who would say that the city should not have control of its own streets. I know that when this went through before, the effect was not understood and not known. I doubt whether there is any member of the Council who understood the bearing of this matter we are discussing. It was not understood that there was to be a barrier upon it for all time. Now is there any objection to taking it away. Emergencies may arise which will make it a matter of primary importance. I want to secure to the City Government the rights which the city ought to have.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 thought Mr. Dean had stated the true position of this case. He would venture the proposition that not five members present know the provisions of that indenture. The gentleman has introduced a proposition that it may be understood. This has been done scores of times in the Legislature of Massachusetts. We had better recall it a thousand times than have a misstep. The proposition is simply that we have made a misstep. It is nothing else but a proposition to deter and postpone the building of Eastern avenue. When this proposition was made, twenty years ago, the population of South Boston did not exceed fifteen thousand, and today it is not less than sixty thousand, and constantly increasing. One-half of my district have moved to South Boston in the last three years. When the gentleman argues that it is not necessary to have another avenue to South Boston, he mistakes the interest and present condition of that community. Anything that will deter the finishing of that avenue is detrimental to the interests of this whole city. To say that this should be passed through now is simply misleading the Council. If the Council has been too hasty, it is better to retract and not go on further. I venture the assertion that the gentleman from Ward 6 has not read that contract. If we are to pass blindly upon this important matter, which will be for all time, without one word or delay or without its provisions being understood, the sooner we retrace our steps the better. And the only way we can do so is through the proposition of the gentleman from Ward 12.

Mr. West of Ward 16 could see but two objections to the order offered by Mr. Dean. One is the extra expense that will have to be incurred by the city in building rip-rap walls, and the other is whether or not the passage of this order would not prejudice the commencement of the work. He had the best reasons for knowing that the Commonwealth will not agree to the indenture with this proviso in it. The city should have control of its streets, the limit of time is a very proper one, and he thought that if five or ten years hence the Commonwealth had not got much done, the city would be justified in going ahead and building it.

The vote being taken on Mr. Dean's amendment, it was adopted.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 hoped this important subject would be disposed of.

The order as amended was then passed with but one dissenting voice, and a motion to reconsider was lost.

NEW STATION HOUSE.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to erect a station house for the Eleventh Police District on land recently purchased for that purpose of John H. Robinson on Adams street, Ward 16, from plans subject to the approval of the Committee on Police, at an estimated cost of $40,000.

Mr. Caton also offered the order authorizing the Treasurer to make the necessary loan.

The orders were read once and laid over under the rule.

Mr. Caton offered the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to sell by public auction the old Mather Schoolhouse, Meetinghouse Hill, Ward 16, in order that the grounds around the new school building now approaching completion may be graded, said building to be removed under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Buildings and the proceeds of the sale to be paid to the City Treasurer.

The order was passed.

Mr. Hall of Ward 10 presented the remonstrance of S. S. Perkins and thirty others against the location of an engine house on the corner of Shawmut avenue and Upton street. Referred to the Committee on Fire Department.

On motion of Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

JULY 7, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock this afternoon, Alderman Cutter, the Chairman, presiding.

GRAND JURORS DRAWN.

Ten grand jurors were drawn for the Superior Criminal Court for the July term.

HEARING ON ORDER OF NOTICE.

The order of notice for constructing a common sewer in Tudor street, between D and E, was taken up; no objection being offered the order was recommended to the Committee on Sewers.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Of James Collins et al., that sidewalks be laid on Broadway, between N and P streets.

Of George Darling et al., that Blackstone street, from North to Hanover street, be paved with granite blocks.

Of John P. Squire et al., that Blackstone street, from North street to Clinton street, be paved with granite blocks.

Of Thomas F. Stevens et al., that Cambridge street be renumbered from Bowdoin square to Temple street. (Referred with power.)

Of Cummings & Carlisle et al., that Albany street be paved forthwith.

Of Alphens M. Stetson, to be paid for grade damages at 148-150 Fourth street.

Of S. S. Rowe et al., for the removal of freight cars which are allowed to remain on Albany street, between Dedham and Newton streets. The petition sets forth that the continual occupancy of the street by freight cars is a great detriment and inconvenience to the business of the street and a great obstruction to travel, and that occupants of wharves frequently cannot get on to or off from their premises with loaded teams, in consequence of the street being occupied by cars and teams placed across the street and by the sides of the cars.

Of Metropolitan Railroad Company, for leave to extend their location by construction of tracks in Stoughton street, from Hancock to Hudson streets, Ward 16

Severally referred to the Committee on Paving.

Of Edward McDonnell, for leave to occupy a one-story building stable for one horse at 677 Saratoga street.

Of A. D. Pattee, for leave to occupy a stable for sixty-four additional horses, at 260 Hanover street, by altering the present building, which now contains thirty-six horses. A remonstrance against the granting of the petition was presented, signed by W. H. Caessman, owner of the estates Nos. 250 and 254, and Walter W. Dearborn, Aaron Hook and Patrick E. Campbell, tenants.

Of F. O. Clark, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for one horse, between Columbia and Hancock streets.

Of James F. Clary, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Eighth street, near O street.

Of Joseph H. Clough, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for two horses at No. 7 Dexter street.

Of Thomas Mulrennan, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for one horse on 612 Parker street (Ward 15).

Severally referred to the Committee on Health.

Of Company D, First Battalion of Infantry, for approval of armory at the corner of Springfield and Washington streets.

Of Company F, First Regiment, M. V. M., for appropriation for fitting up armory.

Severally referred to the Committee on Armories.

Of J. D. K. Willis et al., for a sewer in Myrtle street, Ward 16. Referred to Committee on Sewers.

Of Thomas Carbery, for leave to erect a range of wooden sheds at 1482 Tremont street, beyond the legal limits. Referred to the Committee on Survey of Buildings.

Of Cummings & Carlisle, for leave to erect and use a stationary steam engine of sixty-horse power at the corner of Albany and Sharon streets. Referred to Committee on Steam Engines.

REPORT OF WEIGHERS AND INSPECTORS OF LIGHTERS.

The report of the Weighers and Inspectors of Lighters, for the quarter ending June 30, was submitted; three hundred and twenty-two lighters and their cargoes, amounting to twenty-five thousand six hundred and seventy-five tons, have been inspect-cd. the fees for which amounted to $1335 85; expenses of office, $73 93; leaving a net income of $1261 92 to be divided.

Read and sent down.

APPOINTMENTS MADE AND CONFIRMED.

Weighers of Coal—Ebenezer Curtis, James Regan. Special Police Officers Without Pay—James C. McKie, Rowe's wharf and vicinity; William Appleton, Young Men's Christian Association; John Bartley, at George B. James's wharf; Jacob Beals and Henry A. Doane, Long Island Steamboat Company; Richard K. Vaughan, Myrtle street, Ward 16

QUARTERLY REPORT OF THE CHIEF OF POLICE.

The quarterly report of Chief-of-Police Savage was submitted, and presents the following statistics: Arrests 7293—males 5730, females 1563, Americans 2430, foreigners 4863, non-residents 1780, minors 1319; commitments 5069; lodgers 9800—males 8538, females 1262, Americans 4000, foreigners 5800, non-residents 7967, minors 1281; amount of property taken from prisoners and lodgers and restored to them, $16,937 33; amount of property reported stolen in the city, $15,801; amount of property recovered which was stolen in and out of the city, $16,263 34; amount of fines imposed by the courts, $20,270; amount of imprisonment by the courts, 473 years 4 months; days spent in court, 4402; witness fees earned, $4884 34; larcenies reported in the city, 716; arrests for the same, 482; amount received for dog licenses, $7514 75. The expenditures of the department for the quarter were $165,210 88.

Placed on file.

AUDITOR'S ANNUAL REPORT.

The annual report of Alfred T. Turner, Auditor of Accounts, was received in print, accepted and sent down.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Report and orders for the erection of a primary schoolhouse corner of Newbury and Exeter streets, at a cost of $40,000; and for a loan to that amount, were, on motion of Alderman Gaffield, referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions were referred in concurrence.

Remonstrance of S. S. Perkins et als., against the proposed location of an engine house on the corner of Upton street and Shawmut avenue. Referred to the Committee on the Fire Department, in concurrence.

Report and orders for purchase as a site for a primary schoolhouse of two lots of land on Quincy street, near Blue Hill avenue, at a cost not exceeding forty cents per square foot; and for a transfer of $10,000 to be applied therefor; passed in concurrence, 11 yeas, 0 nays.

Report and orders to authorize the erection of a grammar schoolhouse on Houghton place, Ward 15, and for a loan of $105,000 to be applied therefor.

Alderman Clark inquired where the schoolhouse is to be located, and if it were not almost out of the limits of the city.

Alderman Sayward replied that it was about a quarter of a mile beyond Hogg Bridge; the lot had been bought at the request of the local committee, who were satisfied that this was the proper place for the schoolhouse. The plans were laid aside for a while to see if the building could be built somewhat cheaper, and now they find that it can be, by several thousand dollars.

The order was passed in concurrence—11 to 0.

Report from the Committee on Health, that the orders for erection of a stable on city lot, Highland street, for Health and Paving departments, and for a loan of $85,000 to be applied therefor, ought to pass; and passage of said orders.

The report was accepted and the order passed in concurrence, 9 to 2.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The report and order authorizing a horse hose carriage to be purchased and equipped for Engine House No.

20, at an estimated cost of $1500, came from the Common Council, with an amendment providing that the purchase be made "under the direction of the Committee on the Fire Department." The question being on concurrence.

Alderman Gibson said, "It seems to me we ought not to be increasing the Fire Department at this time; we have already gone too far in this direction; we have got men enough if we had the right man to handle them. I move to lay the order on the table."

Alderman Clark—It seems to me hardly proper to begin to economise just now. An order has already been passed to put horse hose carriages in the houses, and now that we have decided that they are an improvement on the old system it is hardly fair that we should refuse to appropriate the money to do what we have voted to do.

Alderman Gibson—The present department of Boston is large enough. The city of Baltimore, with a population much larger than Boston, has only ten steam engines. If we are going to make a new department let us see where we are and then put our department in proper condition. If it is necessary to have more engines let us have them, but first let us make proper use of what we have got. The present inefficiency of the Fire Department is not for the want of apparatus—there is no question about that.

The motion to lay on the table was defeated, and on the question of concurrence with the Council, Alderman Power said—

I don't desire to waste the time of the Board, but as the gentleman has referred to the alterations in the Fire Department, I will say that so far as the committee have received any information, it is the wish to dispense as soon as possible with the horse carriages on the steam engines and have them drawn by horses altogether. I think that the change will come and I don't think the money will be thrown away.

Alderman Quincy—The question is not a general one, whether the taxpayers do not get their money's worth for what we pay for the Fire Department. The question is whether we need this apparatus. The taxpayers will not hesitate to make the Fire Department better than it really is, and this could not be done better than by purchasing horse hose carriages.

Alderman Gibson—I think it is not best to go ahead and keep constantly increasing the department. Our expenses are more than three times what any other city's are of the same size, and the vast surplus is unquestionably large enough to put out all the fires that will occur in the city. We had better wait till the opportunity offers. I don't know what we shall do since they have raised the rates of insurance.

Alderman Clark—I believed that the underwriters testified that the rates of insurance are lower in Boston than in most places in New England, certainly in New York, Hartford, Providence or Portland. So this is not the worst city in the world to get insurance in at the present time. Twenty thousand persons have signed petitions for a Fire Commission, and to have the apparatus for extinguishing fires increased. They have asked to have the efficiency of the department increased after the apparatus is furnished. I am not prepared to say whether this is the best department in the world, but there are very good reasons why the cost of running this department is greater per head than in New York. In New York there are half a million people living in tenement houses, while in Boston there are not twenty thousand. The population of New York is more densely crowded together. It costs as much to take care of Ward 16 as it does the city proper. There were the same number of engines in Ward 16 when it was annexed as there are today, and you can't do away with one of those engines. There is a large territory out there to take care of, and they have no more than they need. The expense per man is the same as here,—that is one item. Then East Boston is a department in itself. There are many good reasons why this is an expensive department to take care of, but that has nothing to do with putting horse hose carriages into the engine houses. We have decided that the old plan is not the best, and having decided to put in the horse hose carriages, an order comes up for just what we have decided to do, and we refuse it! I am not disposed to think that it requires so much more to take care of the Boston department in the city proper.

Alderman Stebbins—The facts in relation to this particular matter are these: An order was reported in response to a petition from citizens residing near where this engine house is located. The nearest engine to this point is two miles away, and that engine covers a district on which are lumber wharves and quite a large village. The weight of the hose carriage is 7450 pounds, and it has to be drawn by the engine. Many of the citizens wanted a horse hose carriage for that district, and the committee reported in favor of putting them on all the others.

Alderman Gibson—I only know until the changes which have been made are settled we are anticipating work that is to come. Now it is well known that every day or two a crowd is in the other room across the hall who have got ideas about now the Fire Department should be run. What business have we to do anything now, just as it is going out of our hands? If the department is to come under other heads let them do it.

Alderman Stebbins—We all know that the petitions at the other side of the hall are manufactured to order. Here is a petition for a horse hose carriage sent in from citizens.

Alderman Gibson—Why, are not all our petitions manufactured to order? Gentlemen may think it very serious, but I suppose they are bound to have the commission.

Alderman Quincy—I don't see the necessity of mixing up this question with the general one of reorganizing the Fire Department. The simple question is whether this particular measure will add to the efficiency of the department. If it be true that this order will enable an engine and hose carriage to reach a fire sooner, we may soon save enough to pay for them all.

Alderman Power—I suppose the citizens of Boston send us here to attend to these matters, regardless of any pressure from any quarter. We have thought that some apparatus should be added to the Fire Department, and this is only carrying out the plan that was in contemplation before this other matter came up at all. I don't think we should be governed by them at all, but should act on our own knowledge as to what we think is for the best interest of the city of Boston. If, after deliberation, we decide that this is the proper conclusion, we should act upon it. This old system has greatly impeded the engines in getting to fires, and they ought not to be delayed a single instant.

The motion to concur prevailed.

SOUTH BOSTON FLATS.

The order directing the Mayor not to execute or deliver the contract relating to South Boston Flats, came from the Common Council with an amendment inserted—relating to the prospective laying out of Eastern avenue and L street after October 1, 1878, without incurring land damages therefor, and before the flats adjacent thereto are filled.

The question was on concurrence with the Council in adopting the amendment.

Alderman Clark—I hope the Board will not concur with the Common Council in this amendment, inasmuch as it will cause delay in the commencement of one of the most important improvements which have been contemplated in the last twenty years. If this amendment is adopted by us it necessitates its going back to the Legislature, and the whole subject will consequently have to lay over another year.

It is well known that this same amendment was attempted to be introduced into the original indenture, and the State positively refused to allow this provision to be engrafted into it. It came before the committee and they did not think it advisable that this clause should be inserted. The indenture has already been signed by the Boston Wharf Company and the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, has been approved by the Harbor Commissioners and the Mayor. Tomorrow the Governor and Council meet, one of the purposes of which is to complete this indenture, so the whole subject is in a fair way to be completed and the work commenced at once. This amendment provides that Eastern avenue may be extended before the flats are filled. It commits the city to the extension of Eastern avenue down to South Boston Point, at an expenditure of two or three hundred thousand dollars before the flats are filled, and before there is any necessity for the extension of Eastern avenue, and the State is required to pay a certain proportion of the building of this avenue through these flats.

This is a matter which can be arranged by a supplementary agreement between the city and the State, if in the judgment of all parties it is thought best to lay out that avenue. As the indenture now stands the city agrees to build Eastern avenue and extend Northern avenue through these flats whenever this territory is filled. The principal objection to the amendment offered by Mr. Dean of South Boston is the delay which will be necessitated if we concur in its passage. I should not like to see this improvement, for which we have all labored so anxiously during the past year, carried over to another year. I understand that as soon as the indenture is signed by all parties the Boston & Albany Railroad are all ready to commence the erection of their wharves. The appropriation of four hundred thousand dollars which has been granted by the Legislature expires during this year, and if it goes to another Legislature we stand a great risk of losing it. There is no way of getting this amendment ingrafted into the present indenture. It is simply for us to say whether or not we will vote for this amendment, and thereby kill the whole project for 1873. I hope the subject will be indefinitely postponed, for it will surely kill the whole project.

Alderman Power—I should be sorry to do anything that would endanger the ultimate carrying out of this plan, but as the gentleman opposite has said that a supplementary article can be drawn up and signed by the Governor and all parties interested, I don't see why they won't consent that it be put into the original article as well as in a supplementary agreement. As the carrying out of this improvement is of the very greatest importance to the district which I have the honor in part to represent, I should be sorry to do anything that would endanger its passage. But I think I have heard within a very short time that all parties interested may agree to this amendment offered by Mr. Dean in the Council. I understand that this matter has not to go to the Legislature again, and that the Governor and Council have full power to settle this matter; and I don't know any reason why it can't be decided in a very few days. So I hope this amendment will not be indefinitely postponed.

I am free to say as one of the committee of last year that I think,—although we did our best according to the knowledge we had on the subject—we were hardly up in the knowledge of the subject to those with whom we had to contend in the settlement of this matter. When it left our hands once before we had omitted some very important things that ought to have been put in, but were overlooked. As the State ultimately agrees to carry out this improvement I don't see how they can object to this amendment. The city means simply to enforce this agreement; it simply says that when the State does not go ahead and carry out this improvement the city shall have that power. I should be very sorry to do anything to defeat that project, as it is the most important of any measure that has come before us. But I don't see why any parties acting in good faith with the city should fail to vote for that amendment.

Alderman Clark—It is very true that a supplementary contract can be signed, if both parties agree to it, but whether they will is the question—and a very serious question, in my mind. In the meantime let this indenture go on; let us not run the risk of losing what we have already got and which is to enhance the value of lands at South Boston Point. It is committing the city to building the street down to South Boston Point, at an expense of half a million dollars, to improve private property. That is what this amendment means. It was attempted last year to do the same, and the State absolutely refused to have it engrafted into the indenture. I have good reasons—the very best reasons—for believing that, if this indenture is not executed, the whole subject of improving those flats will be abandoned for the present year. The Harbor Commissioners have no authority to agree to pay out a single dollar for the building of any streets over this territory.

But they have the right, as these flats are filled, to deed this land to the city of Boston as a public street, while they cannot spend a single dollar to build a street, and that is the reason it is to go to the next Legislature. The city of Boston has the right to lay out Eastern avenue from Fort Point Channel to Eastern Point; that right was given by the Legislature. Now the whole matter lies right here. If this amendment is insisted upon, so far as the State and city are concerned, it goes over to another year. It is for you to say whether, to help carry out private speculation, you will prevent the citizens of Boston from being benefited by one of the greatest improvements ever attempted in this city, or whether you will have it commenced immediately.

Alderman Emery—I, for one, hope this Board will not indefinitely postpone, but will rather concur in this matter as it came from the Council. I should be the last one to do anything that would endanger the safety and completion of this whole project, and would deprecate any step that would endanger it. At the same time I am very much in favor of this amendment, and think it can be carried out. The principal objection raised by the Alderman from Ward 6 seems to be that we are committing the city to something; that the city by accepting this amendment is committing itself to something. I beg to differ entirely from the gentleman. This amendment does not commit the city in the least to anything. It is provided, as you all see, that if the Commonwealth does not go on and make this improvement, the city shall have the right to do certain things.

The Commonwealth stipulates to do certain things with the city, and the city shall have the right to do the same if the Commonwealth fails to carry out their portion of it. Who is harmed by it? Is the Commonwealth harmed or made to pay out a dollar more in consequence of the concurrence of the Board in this amendment? Not at all. It only gives the city an opportunity to accept that right hereafter if she chooses. They might say you have compelled us to expend a large amount of money, and now you have partly built this avenue, perhaps you will never build the rest of it. Shall the city have the right to go on and complete the avenues? Other parties may place their lands on the market as fast as they can be built, but the city cannot. Now what harm can come to any one from giving the city this right? I can see no harm to the Commonwealth unless it is to deprive it of an advantage.

The city has only the right to come in, provided other parties do not perform their stipulations, and perform them at the same expense as the original party. Can any one tell me where the harm can come from? The city is reserving its right only. If I thought it was going to endanger the whole project I should not vote for the amendment. We don't ask the Commonwealth to pay anything, but that the city be allowed to do what the others shall fail to do. If the time allowed is not long enough, make it longer.

Alderman Clark—The Harbor Commissioners have certain rights delegated to them, and they have no right to expend a single dollar to filling up those flats, and no other right to make this agreement than is given by the Legislature. This is why it has got to go to another Legislature. I would be glad to have the State of Massachusetts give to the city all the territory that it owns in South Boston, and I would be glad to have the State build those avenues.

But the very best terms were obtained from the Harbor Commissioners that could be. But in this amendment we are asking for things that the Harbor Commissioners have no right to make. As a Boston merchant, I am decidedly anxious to see this improvement commence at once. The Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad are anxious to begin work. The Hoosac Tunnel line is coming in here, and what inducements have we to offer to European ships to come here? We need this avenue, but the Harbor Commissioners have not the right to expend a single penny for its extension. They have the right to expend four hundred thousand dollars, and as this territory is filled up they have authority to deed these streets to the city of Boston as they are built.

The city don't need to have this right inserted in the indenture. It already has the right to take this land and build it up. The Harbor Commissioners have not the power to build Eastern avenue. The indenture is made as perfect as it is possible to get one made, and it has been attended with considerable anxiety. It has been signed by the Western Railroad and the Boston Wharf Company, who have no objection to it. It only awaits the signature of the Mayor and Council of the city of Boston. But there is danger of delay, in that if we concur with the Council this whole matter goes over for the year 1873. That is what it amounts to, and I don't want the city to be the means of throwing any obstacle in the way of this improvement.

Alderman Quincy—I don't undertake to argue this case on its merits. This amendment was presented to the committee, but its adoption was not deemed advisable. After it had passed the other branch, no motion was made to reconsider. After neglecting to offer the amendment and neglecting to move to reconsider, the only way to get at the matter was to order the Mayor not to execute this indenture unless a certain amendment was incorporated into it. The only thing to be done is to show some good reason for thinking it ought to pass.

Alderman Emery—This matter ought to have been attended to during its passage through either this Board or the other. I undertook to read it over, but it was a very intricate document. Now if that was the proper time and we did not do it, we must take the only opportunity that will be offered in the next ten years.

There is one thing I would like very much to hear from the gentlemen on that committee. They say this thing was talked about, suggested and opposed in committee; I would like to know on what ground the provisions of this amendment were opposed; I cannot conceive of any ground for opposition. As soon as you begin to oppose it, you want to look into it and see what you are voting for. You can't persuade any one to get up and oppose the principle of the amendment, which allows the city to do what the Commonwealth should fail to do. Here is a thing to be done some time or other, we can't tell when. There is a chance for people to speculate, to take advantage of a matter that will extend over a great many years. This is a gigantic undertaking, and we don't know what changes may take place. We don't know but the policy of the present commissioners may be changed, and they might not give us the rights which others would. I have heard no reason why that amendment can hurt any one except that you feared it would put off the work. I should like to see the time extended.

Alderman Clark—Mr. Ware has told me within a week that the adoption of this amendment, asking the State to pay for this street before the flats are filled, would prevent the commencement of this improvement for the present year. The right to extend this street was granted to the city by the State years ago. We don't want that right. The Alderman from Ward 12 says there has been no reason given. My reasons are simply the delay. This is an immense project, and it will take many years to have six or seven hundred acres filled up. It is for the purpose of having this project commenced that I do not wish to see this amendment adopted. No members of the committee opposed this amendment; but when the committee did take this action the State positively refused to have it incorporated in the indenture, because the commissioners had no right to make this agreement.

If this amendment had been incorporated in it, the Governor and Council would have refused to sign it. Make a provision of this character in the indenture and the Governor and Council have no right to sign it. The committee have endeavored to make the agreement as perfect as possible. It was made under the superintendence of the City Solicitor, the Mayor and last Mayor being present. They all witnessed it and had something to say about it. It is not perfect, of course, but it is as perfect as it is possible to get an indenture, and if we wish to have this work commence during the present year we must accept it as it is. I think, Mr. Chairman, I have stated very fully the reasons why it is impossible to have this amendment incorporated in this indenture. You may get it incorporated in it, but you will never get it signed this year. The appropriation of four hundred thousand dollars expires on the first of next January. We have been years getting this appropriation, and if we refuse to use this four hundred thousand dollars, it seems to me we will do what we have no right to do.

Alderman Power—I was a member of the committee last year that had charge of this matter. The committee labored at a great disadvantage; they had to contend with gentlemen thoroughly conversant with the city and State for very many years. The gentlemen acting for the State tried to drive as close a bargain as they could. They were seemingly anxious to take charge of the city in the bridge question. We did the best we could with the limited knowledge we had on the subject, but it is very fortunate that the order they recommended did not pass. Those points were simply considered after a hard fight. Then again it was not the fault of the city that the matter was delayed to this year. It was simply because some of the other parties could not get all they wanted. It is a one-sided bargain. Everything is exacted for the State and for the Boston Wharf Company, and I can't see how they can refuse to have some limit put upon the time in which that filling must be done.

Some people here can understand better than others why South Boston can take a great interest in this matter. If this improvement is made, and nothing else is done, you ruin the whole water front of South Boston, which is very valuable. It is important that something be done to give them back that water front. Gentlemen talk about private speculation. Why would there be any improvements made if it was not supposed that some one would be benefitted by it? I don't think this thing should be thrown aside on that argument. I can't see wherein the State of Massachusetts can refuse to accede to this request. It is nobody but Mr. Ware, one of the Harbor Commissioners, and a very active one, and the State chose wisely when he was made its representative.

Where we labored at a disadvantage was in not having some gentleman thoroughly posted on the legal matters; but we had not, and we did as well as any committee from the City Government could have done. But I have not seen where the State has refused this request. It is simply Mr. Ware says "We won't." That is all I know about it. I think it is proper that we should try to get the State to make this concession, if you choose to call it so, but I don't say that it is a concession. We simply ask them to put some limit on the time in which they propose to do this work. It is proper to lay this matter on the table till we have had some official communication with the State.

Alderman Gibson—I don't know which side is right, and therefore move the question be specially assigned for next Monday afternoon. I want time to look into it.

Alderman Clark—There is no sum of money at stake, except so far as the money agreed to be expended in bridges. I will remind the gentleman (Mr. Power), of the document he signed last year.

Alderman Power—I don't deny that I signed the document.

Alderman Clark read a portion of the report of last year's committee, and continued: They have called attention to the fact that these were the best terms that could be obtained, they show conclusively that we had urged for this same thing last year, and could not obtain it. The fears now are simply on account of delay. Twelve months hence we might get this indenture altered, but not during the year 1873. This matter was before the committee last year, and again this year.

The Harbor Commissioners were the only proper authority for us to confer with in regard to the agreements so far as the South Boston flats are concerned, or any other flats in this neighborhood. The commissioners know what powers have been conferred on them by the Legislature, and they have no right to exceed those powers; and those powers do not allow them to expend a single dollar for bridges or avenues. The whole thing hinges on this: Do we want this improvement commenced this year or next? If you wish to have delay, ask for an amendment to suit some one now and another to suit some one else. That has been the matter with this project for the last twenty years. It is no new thing. It is what I first heard of when I came to Boston. I can't afford to wait twenty-five years longer to derive any benefit from this improvement. I own no property there, but I am interested in seeing this project carried out, and, I trust, we shall vote, on this subject tonight, and vote as in my opinion it is desirable for us to vote; that is, accept the amendment and vote not to instruct the mayor to withhold his signature.

Alderman Gaffield—I should urge the members to vote for this indenture just as it now stands, hoping that the people of South Boston would be content with half a loaf, and trusting to next year. It is no new matter. We can build northern and eastern avenues today or tomorrow if we wish to construct riprap walls. We now have an offer from the State to build it without expense to us. The gentleman from South Boston proposes that the city build riprap walls and the State "pay for the filling." If the city feels rich enough, and it needs them, I have no doubt we shall pass a vote to make that expense when it is needed. But if we incorporate it in the indenture now, I am afraid it will kill the whole measure for the present year. I beseech the gentlemen, if they have any interest in the improvement of South Boston, I beseech them to indefinitely postpone this amendment, so that it can be signed, and I guarantee that the citizens of South Boston will get all they want in due time.

Alderman Power—I care no more for the interests of South Boston than for East Boston, and I think my conduct here does not show anything to the contrary of what I assert. I speak for the interests of Boston. The city has the right to build streets anywhere she sees fit, but the State agrees to build streets here at its own cost, and I don't see how the State can refuse to have it inserted in the agreement that the city can have the right to go on and complete this street when it sees fit. We don't ask to build riprap walls. No bridges are needed. The original plans have been altered. There is to be no inside channel. It is simply to continue the inside walls, and not have any riprap walls. It is simply binding the State to carry out its agreement at some time or other so as not to deprive South Boston of all its wharf privileges.

I think they cannot in reason refuse to place some limit to the time in which they will complete the job, and it is very reasonable that the people of South Boston should see the necessity of this, and that it should be more obvious to them because they are familiar with the importance of the wharf privileges. It is the same to her that it is to East Boston, where the wharf fronts are the most valuable property, and it is very reasonable that they should see the necessity of engraving this agreement with the indenture more than others who are not familiar with the subject. In all this we have never met the Harbor Commissioners as a body. It was simply Mr. Ware, and he said what they would and would not do. I think there are questions of some importance which were left out at first. How quick the Boston & Albany Railroad were to quibble when they found that they could not have the privilege of running their tracks across the territory. They looked out very closely for their interests, and are quite willing that this should go through, because they have got everything they want. It only forces them to do what they offered to do in some specified time. I don't know that any one asks to have them agree to build riprap walls. The amendment don't; for the walls will not be needed.

Alderman Clark—I see that the gentleman don't understand the position of these South Boston flats, although he is a resident of that part of the city. They have been obliged to buy this land. It is n't proposed to take away the wharf property from any abutters, and leave a channel through it, so that arrangements have got to be made with the abutters before they can be deprived of a single foot of their property. It is well known that one member of the Harbor Commissioners has one department to look after and another another. It fell to Mr. Ware to look after the South Boston flats, and he gave it more attention than any of the others, and that is why we came in contact with him more than any of the others. In the first place the State has no right to deprive the riparian owners of their rights. The only way that it can be filled up is by purchase—buying the abutters off.

In regard to the Boston & Albany Railroad's quibbling, so far as they were concerned they had omitted to put into the indenture the right to cross Eastern avenue and Northern avenue; they had laid two tracks on Northern avenue, and as that street will be used almost exclusively for wharf purposes, the committee saw no objection to granting that right. The Board of Harbor Commissioners have no authority to sign the indenture with the condition of the proposed amendment. By attempting to attach this new project with the old one, a proposition will be raised which may defeat both. These are the facts, and I state them authoritatively.

Alderman Power—Will the gentleman state who is his authority?

Alderman Clark—D. E. Ware tells us [showing a letter] that the board has no authority—and gentlemen will please bear this in mind—to agree to the terms of this amendment. It has got to go back to the Legislature.

Alderman Power—I have had reason to inquire into that channel matter within the last year, and I find that it has been abandoned. The State owns the land to First street. I have investigated the matter in the pursuit of property which I proposed to purchase for my own interests. The State has purchased within two hundred feet of First street, and has purchased no wharf or water privileges beyond the point where the State sees fit to fill up. That project of the channel has been abandoned long ago.

Alderman Emery—Let the matter of filling up be as it may, we don't assume anything by concurring with the Council, but what the Commonwealth has the right to do. The gentleman from Ward 6 says the best time to get a supplementary contract is after the indenture has been signed.

Now as a man of business I beg to differ from the gentleman in that respect. If I want to get anything into an agreement, I think the proper time is before the completion of the agreement. It is better to get an extension of a note before and not after it becomes due. It is better to ask for this thing now than after the conclusion of the agreement. If they had any reason for withholding their assent to a proposition of this kind before, they certainly will have after the signing of the agreement. There must be something that we don't see. I have no disposition, if gentlemen wish to defer their decision on this matter, to have a vote taken on it. But I wish to state that I did not come here with any interest in this matter. I have not the slightest interest in those flats, nor in anything on that shore. Nor am I here as an Alderman from that part of the city. I hope I represent all parts of the city as well as South Boston.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me that we have either got to take this indenture without the amendment or not at all. Is there a gentleman here who supposes that they are going to humbug the people? I have no doubt the State will deal justly and fairly. Here are four hundred thousand dollars appropriated to improve this land. We propose to delay it. Now will you lose four hundred thousand dollars or go ahead and trust the State to do what is right? I don't believe there is any question but that the State will do full justice. I shall have to support the proposition of the gentleman from Ward 6. Here are four hundred thousand dollars. If you don't take them this year you may not get them at all. We can well afford to trust the State authorities to do what is for their own benefit as well as our own.

Alderman Power—It is the simplest thing in the world. If they mean to carry out that agreement I don't see how they can object to the amendment, to have some time named within which it shall be done. All that we ask is that the city shall have the right to do this if she sees fit. We are not asking to build streets or anything of the kind; we are simply asking that if the representatives of the city see fit to continue that improvement, the city may have the right to do this thing at the same expense as the State.

Alderman Clark—It seems impossible to impress the fact upon the gentleman that the commissioners have no right to make this bargain. They have no right to exceed the authority given them by the Legislature. If the work is not commenced the appropriation of four hundred thousand dollars goes over to another Legislature. Then it will be said we had the money and did not use it. Years hence they may make another appropriation.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me that is all there is to it. These parties have no authority to do it, and if the amendment prevails the matter goes by default.

Alderman Emery—The gentleman says that all this may be done afterwards by a supplementary agreement, and you can't get it in the committee, and that makes me suppose there is something wrong about it. It strikes me that rather than not carry this thing out they would grant this request.

Alderman Clark—Allow me to say that they have not the right to work this thing in. Another Legislature may do it, or a great many things that this Legislature would not. We may go before the Legislature and ask for a supplementary contract, but for the time being the Harbor Commissioners have no right to make one, although a future Legislature may give them that right. The great thing is delay. The year is already half past. It would be well if this thing could be passed today, and be signed by the Governor and Council tomorrow.

Alderman Quincy—If this amendment had been offered at the proper time it may be that it would not have endangered the whole thing for the year. This is reason enough to decide me to vote for a postponement.

Alderman Power—Nobody disputes that the Harbor Commissioners have the right to fill in that whole territory to the foot of L street, and if so, they certainly have the right to make a bargain when it shall be done. If they have the right to make a bargain with the city of Boston to fill in these flats, they certainly have the right to name the time when it shall be done. Now if the Harbor Commissioners, representing the State, had come here and said they didn't have the right to fill in the flats, we would have agreed to that. We would have said, Go back to the Legislature and get your power. It would have been our duty to have sent them back. It is well known to everybody here that if this improvement is carried out to South Boston Point, it will make every foot of land double and treble its worth if the connection is made. To carry it out we are asked to spend a million and the State is going to spend four hundred thousand. We are not going to get this back in taxes unless the connection is made with South Boston. I say it is very important that this should be done for the interests of the whole city, and if the commissioners have the power to make any agreement looking to the filling up of those flats it must have the power to name the time in which it shall be done.

Alderman Clark—There is no right allowed the Board.

The Alderman read a brief extract from Mr. Ware's letter sustaining his position.

Alderman Gibson withdrew his motion to postpone for one week, and the question of concurrence being put it was defeated—yeas, 3; nays, 8.

Yeas—Aldermen Carter, Emery and Power.

Nays—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy, Sayward and Stebbins.

A motion to reconsider the last vote, offered by Alderman Clark, who expressed the hope that it would be defeated, was voted down.

FIREMEN DISCHARGED.

A communication was received from the Secretary of the Board of Engineers, stating that for the reasons given the following-named persons had been discharged from the department by order of his Honor the Mayor, on the recommendation of the Board of Engineers: Engine Company No. 4, John G. Duffy, neglect of duty on May 30, by leaving the city when a fire was raging; Hook and Ladder No. 3, N. B. Whitman, want of interest in his duties, having remained in Boylston Hall for two hours during the fire of May 30, his excuse being that he supposed he had a substitute; Hose 8, William Blake, old age and worn out in the service. The communication was placed on file.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

The following communication was received from the President of the Cochituate Water Board:

The Cochituate Water Board, in reply to a recent order of the City Council, has directed me to transmit the enclosed report of the City Engineer. This Board fully indorses the conclusions of the engineer as to the value of street reservoirs in portions of the high service districts, and in such parts of the low service districts as are not laid with larger pipes. Recent changes and improvements in the distributive system already authorized by this Board, may, however, render the construction of a large number of the proposed reservoirs unnecessary. The changes referred to are in brief as follows:

The laying of a sixteen-inch pipe from the pumping works to the Beacon Hill High Service District, thus releasing the thirty-inch pipe now performing that service and turning it on to the low service at the west and north sections of the city and the extension of the sixteen-inch main on North Charles street from Cambridge street to Leverett street, thus giving a very large additional supply to those sections; the laying of a new high-service main from Tremont street across Dover-street Bridge to South Boston, and turning the twenty-inch pipe from Dorchester now used for high service at South Boston on to the low service there, giving a largely increased and needed supply of low service to that territory; an increase of the size of the service mains along side of the twenty-four inch main through portions of Washington street, and a generally increased capacity of pipes through what is known as the "burnt district."

These improvements, with the conversion of the twelve-inch marginal mains in South Boston and some portions of the South End, are now being made, and all of which will be finished as rapidly as the pipe can be procured, will give the city a largely increased supply of water for fire purposes. Even without those additions, this city has today a better water supply for fire and domestic purposes than any other city of its size in this country, and with them completed, as they will be within a comparatively short time, the citizens should have entire confidence in the water supply for every probable emergency, especially if this supply is used with ordinary discretion and care.

The expensive additions already named are made with distinct reference to a greater supply of water for fire purposes, and in the opinion of this Board all expense for the proposed reservoirs should be met by an independent appropriation and not chargeable to the Water Works.

When the appropriations for the current fiscal year were made, the additions referred to were not contemplated, but this Board, in view of the feeling of insecurity so prevalent among the more timid of our fellow citizens, has not hesitated to inaugurate a liberal and judicious expenditure for the purpose of allaying these fears, while it is confident it is not departing from the careful and conservative policy which has governed the action of the Water Board during preceding years.

Following is in substance the report of the City Engineer on the subject of building fire reservoirs, appended to the communication from the Water Board:

The cost of the reservoirs for the purposes and of the capacity stated (2000 gallons each) would vary, depending upon such circumstances as the width of sidewalk, size of main pipe, location and depth of sewer, etc. I estimated that $385 each, including cost of connection with street pipe and sewer, stop cocks and covers, is a fair average price for building such reservoirs within the limits of the old city. The advantages of these reservoirs are, first, allowing the concentration of a number of engines at one point; second, permitting the engines to get quickly at work, provided they have a sufficient pressure of steam; third, furnishing a supply to any engine, whatever may be its size of coupling, which is important when out-of-town engines are called into service; fourth, being more quickly accessible in times of deep snow than hydrants placed in the street; fifth, holding a quantity of water in store to compensate partially, at least, for want of capacity in street main to deliver an adequate supply.

The objections are, first, the occupation of valuable space more especially in the business portion of the city; second, the possible waste of water into the sewers, at times when waste would be seriously felt, by carelessness in regulating the flow with the stop cock; third, the great liability to cause damage to cellars and goods stored in them by leakage and overflow; fourth, not permitting the playing of a stream until the engine gets up steam; fifth, the cost.

For general use the City Engineer prefers the Lowry hydrant, but in the high service districts and at points in the low service territory where the pipes are of small calibre, the reservoirs would be judicious.

The report and communication were laid on the table to be printed.

FIRING SALUTES ON THE COMMON.

Alderman Quincy, from the Joint Standing Committee on Ordinances, who were instructed to consider the expediency of reporting an ordinance prohibiting the discharge of cannon on the Common or other public grounds, unless authorized by vote of the City Council, having carefully considered the subject, submitted the following report:

The artillery firing which has been customary hitherto on the Common and public grounds may be divided into three classes: First, the salutes fired by order of the City Government on national anniversaries and occasions of public rejoicing; second, those ordered and paid for by political or other associations to celebrate party triumphs, private anniversaries, reception of visitors, etc.; and, third, military firing for the purpose of drill by the militia.

By the ordinance of 1850 all discharge of firearms within the city limits was prohibited, excepting, however, "the use of such weapons at any military exercise or review." Prior to the ordinance of 1870, this exception had been practically constructed to include all firing by the organized batteries, whether by military orders or for hire, and no objection was made to the latter employment of the Commonwealth's soldiers and guns. By the ordinance of 1872, however, it was provided that all firing must be authorized "by the military authority of the Commonwealth, or by the City Council or by the Mayor of the city of Boston."

This ordinance, it will be observed, contemplates a continuance of both the civil and military practices of artillery firing on the Common, for drill by proper military authority—for hire when authorized by the Mayor or the City Council. But the committee cannot avoid coming to the conclusion that the time has arrived when this use of pleasure grounds now in the heart of a crowded city should cease, or at least be restricted to the fewest possible occasions. They will endeavor to show why in their opinion the danger of accidents, the damage to property and the suffering occasioned to sick persons of all classes imperatively demand the restriction proposed.

First, The danger of accidents by frightening horses. It is well known that the number of these has been steadily increasing with the increase of travel and business in the streets bounding the Common. Only one happens to have come to the committee's knowledge on the last May training—it was a case where a buggy was destroyed on Beacon street and a lady and gentleman were thrown out, but they fortunately escaped serious injury. The damage which a runaway team might occasion in Tremont street may be imagined.

Second, The damage to property. The committee have received a communication from Gardner Brewer, describing the damage sustained by the walls of his house by the January firing two years ago, when the ground was frozen, and he stated that he had taken evidence of its amount, with a view of holding the city liable. This is a single case, but it suffices to show that actual injury has been and may be again sustained.

Thirdly, The suffering occasioned to sick persons in the vicinity. Desiring to obtain the opinion of experts, the chairman communicated with several leading physicians, asking what to their knowledge, had been and would be likely to be the effect of the custom in question upon the condition of sick persons and invalids in the vicinity.

The committee give long extracts from the answers received to these inquiries, extracts from which are appended—

Dr. Edward H. Clark, 18 Arlington street—I have observed that such firing affects the majority of invalids and sick people in its vicinity unpleasantly; during the last artillery practice one of my patients rolled, with every shot, from one side of her bed to the other in a sort of agony. Twice during the past year premature confinements started with the firing and seemed to be induced by it.

Dr. G. H. Lyman, 121 Boylston street—I have no hesitation in characterizing the practice as injurious in the highest degree.

Dr. R. M. Hodges, 53 Mt. Vernon street—I could instance a number of persons whose illness has been aggravated by the firing on the Common on public occasions, and whose nervous systems are deranged by the same cause.

Dr. C. D. Homans, 90 Boylston street—Firing on the Common is a source of great annoyance and suffering to invalids and sick persons, particularly those prostrated by nervous diseases.

Dr. F. Minot, 7 Charles street—In cases of extreme illness and with patients of nervous temperaments it has a most injurious effect.

The committee are well aware that in very many many cases the preferences or the temporary comfort of the few are rightly sacrificed to the interest or to the enjoyment of the many. Several worthy citizens were recently compelled to submit to the disagreeable vicinity of a smallpox hospital in order that the city might successfully combat an enemy within its walls. In like manner, were danger imminent from a foreign foe the necessity for training men and horses in actual firing would be paramount. But this not being the case, the committee must consider the question narrowed to one of enjoyment or suffering.

Is the enjoyment of the many such as should fairly be regarded as counterbalancing the suffering of the few? The committee cannot so regard it. Political firing pleases the exulting victors, but disgusts the conquered and embitters the strife, and in firing ordered by private associations it is evident that the number of sufferers may actually exceed that of those gratified or flattered thereby. It has been asked why not leave the power to authorize private firing with the Mayor, where it now resides? Because, giving him the power implies its exercise, and when once exercised the permission can hardly again be refused to respectable and influential applicants.

A few years since the City Solicitor gave an opinion, to be found in City Document No. 52, of the year 1870, to the effect that the City Council had the right to regulate, or if necessary to abolish, the use of the Common as a training field by the militia. The committee have come to the conclusion that the time has arrived when this right of regulation should be exercised by the prohibition of all artillery firing, unless specially authorized by the City Council. That it will be so authorized, according to the old custom on certain occasions, there can be but little doubt, but in time of peace the committee are of the opinion that not even the commander-in-chief should have power to continue the custom without the city's consent.

As the ordinances now in force apply to the whole city limits, and include musketry as well as cannon, it was thought advisable not to repeal them, but to make special provision for the subject under consideration; viz., artillery on the Common and public grounds, as there are already many places within the city limits to which the objections alluded to do not apply. The committee therefore recommend the accompanying ordinance:

"An ordinance in relation to the discharge of cannon upon the Common or public grounds.

No cannon or artillery shall be fired by the militia or others upon the Common or public grounds unless authorized by the City Council."

Mr. Dacey dissents from the majority, and reports that it is inexpedient to pass the ordinance.

The report and ordinance were ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the petitions of Milton Austin for appointment as an auctioneer, at 29 Pemberton square; of Jonas H. French, for a license to manufacture and sell liquors, at 179 Essex street; of C. H. Graves & Sons, for a license to manufacture and sell liquors, at 35 Hawkins street; of Appleby & McClinch, for victualler's license, at 1350 Tremont street; of C. Harnes, for victualler's license, at 4 Bedford street; of Felton & Stone, for license to manufacture liquors, at 63 C street. Accepted.

The same committee reported in favor of renewing the licenses of thirteen intelligence offices. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported (leave to withdraw) on the applications of the following-named persons for victualler's licenses: Peter Alteri, 28 Ferry street; N. Ferretto, 131 North street; John Doherty, 123 Endicott street; Sarah Uran, 336 North street; Frank A. Caswell, 59 Shawmut avenue. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the petitions of J. F. Keating, 32 Lancaster street; Fred Bleiler, Heath place; Patterson & Lavender, Burke street. Accepted.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on Paving, made a report recommending that the petition of Otis H. Weed to be released from the service water which flows upon his estate on Heath street, be referred to the Committee on Sewers, and it was so referred.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the petition of J. W. Kimball for leave to locate a wooden stable on Paris street near Porter; of Orsamus Nute, for leave to occupy a wooden shed stable for thirteen horses on Plympton street, the latter for six months only. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported leave to withdraw on petition of Ira A. Med-bury for a sewer in F street, and no action necessary on a notice from the town of Brookline in regard to the diversion of Muddy River. Accepted.

THE WIDENING OF TREMONT STREET.

Alderman Quincy moved to take from the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which the order was passed for the Superintendent of Streets to remove the sidewalk on Tremont street, adjacent to the Common, and to put the street in condition for passage of vehicles.

Alderman Quincy stated that he moved the reconsideration in order to give Aldermen who desired it an opportunity of recording their votes. He would, however, ask of the Committee on Streets whether they were willing to allow reconsideration to prevail in order to take the sense of the Board on an amendment which he would offer providing that two feet of the present sidewalk be allowed to remain outside the fence as a landing place for persons entering or leaving the cars on that side. If this were refused and the whole sidewalk thrown into the street, then, much as he deprecated encroachment on the Common, he hoped to see the fence go down before and not after life or limb had been sacrificed. Passengers would continue to stand on that side to take the outward cars; they would continue to alight on that side; and, as a gentleman in business on the opposite side who came here to remonstrate against this measure, said, What would happen if a smartly driven team, or, worse still, a fire engine came along before pedestrians had time to plaster themselves in single rank against the fence? The Alderman continued to be of the opinion that the proposed widening, not being at the point of stricture, would have little effect in preventing blockades. The evil was the double track and the station between Park and School streets. In his opinion the double track should commence at Boylston street, and cars go in one direction only through the northerly part of Tremont, as they do through the narrow part of Washington street. The Alderman then read a protest from General John S. Tyler against the proposed removal of the sidewalk, taking similar grounds in regard to the convenience and safety of pedestrians, and the inefficiency of the measure to prevent blockades, which originate as a rule north of Park street. In concluding, Alderman Quincy called for the yeas and nays on the question.

Alderman Clark—If the gentleman will say that he is ready to cut into the mall two or three feet, I have no objection to his making an amendment to that effect. I am glad to have the opportunity to record my vote in favor of one improvement that will cost nothing. No doubt the Superintendent of Streets will so arrange the curbstone and sidewalk that people can go to the horse cars just as easily as they do now. Unless this street is to be made wider, I hope this reconsideration will not prevail. A good start has been made in this direction for an improvement, and I have no doubt that we will all see the benefit of it. There is a very large amount of travel that comes into Tremont street from Bromfield, Temple and West streets. Another fact is that we cannot abolish horse railroads which accommodate the public.

Alderman Sayward—I should be in favor of reconsideration if the fence can be cut down. I don't see any reason for cutting down the trees at all. By removing the fence a little it would be a relief to travellers and answer every purpose of a sidewalk.

Alderman Clark—I should not be in favor of cutting down a single tree, but I do not think the present curbstone would be sufficient. There is no occasion to take the fence away unless it is to set it back.

Alderman Power—I have no objections to taking the fence down. I think it will be absolutely necessary when the sidewalk is removed, but I decidedly object to taking one inch from the present size of the Common. In voting to take away the sidewalk I simply voted to restore the street to its original width, which I can remember myself. It there was a reason thirty years ago for the street being that width there is decidedly more reason now. If there is an inch to be taken off the Common I shall not give my vote for it. There is nothing so absolutely necessary as this in the city—nothing so conducive to the health of Boston as the Common, and I should therefore object to taking off one inch of it. But I do think that the fence should be taken down, and a handsome curb put on so that people can step from the Common to the cars. I believe that the sidewalk there is of very little use; that the need of a wider street and extra accommodations there is very great, and I hope that we shall immediately take steps to prevent the horse cars from standing in Tremont street, and have them go to Scollay's square or somewhere else. I hope by the next meeting of this Board to have an order to offer looking to that end.

Alderman Clark—I hope we shall not reconsider that vote. The first move is to take up that sidewalk and put the curbstone down. I agree with Alderman Power in his views of the beauty and usefulness of the Common in summer—in fact, I know of nothing of a more healthful character than it.

Alderman Sayward—That fence must come down, else the wheels of every carriage which passes it will be hitting against it.

The Board voted not to reconsider the vote—ayes 5, nays 6.

MUSIC ON THE COMMON.

Alderman Clark moved to take from the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Board rejected the order for appointment of a Joint Special Committee to provide music on the Common and in other sections of the city, at a cost of $2500.

The Board reconsidered the vote, and on motion of Alderman Clark the order was laid on the table.

THE SALE OF FIREWORKS.

Alderman Gaffield offered the following:

Whereas, the use of fireworks on the Fourth of July and other public occasions in our large and crowded cities has led to disastrous conflagrations, and whereas, the immediate prohibition of their sale might work injustice to many innocent dealers who may have a stock on hand which they cannot dispose of without sufficient notice, it is therefore Ordered, That due notice be given to all who have been hitherto licensed to sell fireworks, that the city authorities will at the next session of the Legislature take measures to procure the passage of an act to prevent the sale of fireworks except for the purpose of marine signals, giving the power to license such exceptional sales exclusively to the Board of Aldermen.

The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield, the order to restrain the licenses usually issued by the Board of Engineers of the Fire Department for sale of fireworks was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

HOME FOR THE POOR.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the order for Committee on Public Institutions to report within one month on subject of "a home for the poor" was taken from the table and passed in concurrence.

ORDERS OF NOTICE ISSUED.

Orders of notice were issued returnable in one week for hearings on petitions for a sewer in Western avenue, between Longwood park and Longwood avenue; and in Longwood avenue, between Western avenue and Autumn street; and for sewers in Folsom place, in Chelsea street, between Marion and Brooks, and First street, between K and L.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the thanks of the City Council be tendered to the Rev. John F. W. Ware for the very patriotic and eloquent oration delivered by him before the municipal authorities on the Fourth of July, instant, and that he be requested to furnish a copy for publication.

Ordered, that there be paid to Frederick H. Stimpson the sum of fifty-two thousand dollars for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Congress street, by a resolve and order of the Board of Street Commissioners, passed February, 27, 1873.

Ordered, That there be paid to George A. P. Darling the sum of three thousand and sixty dollars for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Harrison avenue, by a resolve and order of the Board of Street Commissioners, June 12, 1873.

Ordered, That the order to pay the said George A. Darling three thousand two hundred and forty dollars for said land and damages, passed June 30, 1873, be and the same hereby is rescinded.

Ordered, That there be paid to Samuel Stillman and wife, trustees, and the heirs of Sarah Hughes, the sum of fifty-three thousand three hundred and sixty dollars for land taken, and all damages occasioned by the extension of Washington street to Haymarket square.

Ordered, That there be paid to D. W. Williams and Jonathan French, trustees, the sum of eleven thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight dollars for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Milk street.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to grade and macadamize Alpine street according to the established grade, at an estimated cost of $4000.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Committee on County Buildings be authorized to expend, in addition to the amounts of $7,500 heretofore granted for the repair of the clock tower on the county jail, and for repairs on said jail and yard attached to the same, a further sum of three thousand dollars, which sum, together with the amount authorized to be expended for said purposes under authority of orders of the Board of Aldermen, approved by the Mayor, February 12 and May 6, 1873, in the total amount ten thousand five hundred dollars.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That there be paid to the several companies enumerated in the certificates of the Adjutant-General dated June 18 and 23, the sums to which they are respectively entitled for inspection duty in May last; said sums, amounting to $2918 50, to be charged to the appropriation for Militia Bounty.

On motion of Alderman Cutter—

Ordered, That permission be given to Faxon Brothers to construct a pipe under and across Otis street, through which to carry shafting and steam, upon condition that the work of constructing said pipe shall be done to the satisfaction of the Superintendent of Streets; also upon condition that the said Faxon Brothers shall give to the City Solicitor bonds to hold the city harmless against any and all claims for damages, costs or expenses growing out of the constructing or maintaining of said pipe under said street.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to sprinkle with salt water that portion of Broad street lying within the burnt district; the expense thereof, not exceeding seventy-five dollars per month, to be charged to the appropriation for the Burnt District.

Adjourned, on motion of Alderman Stebbins.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

JULY 10, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The quarterly reports of the Inspector of Lighters, the State Paymaster of Aid, and the annual report of the Auditor were accepted and placed on file.

Several petitions were referred in concurrence.

The following orders were severally passed in concurrence:

Order tendering thanks of City Council to Rev. John F. W. Ware for his oration on the Fourth of July.

Preamble and order giving notice of intention of the City Council to petition the Legislature for an act to prevent the sale of fireworks, except for the purpose of marine signals.

The following was read once:

Report and order to authorize the Committee on County Buildings to expend a further sum of $3000 in addition to the amount heretofore authorized for the repairs on the County Jail, etc.

The following was referred in concurrence to the Committee on Public Instruction:

Report and orders authorizing the erection of a primary schoolhouse on land of the city on Newbury and Exeter streets; and for a loan of forty thousand dollars to be applied therefor.

AUDITOR'S MONTHLY EXHIBIT.

The monthly exhibit of the City Auditor for the month ending July 1, was received in print, accepted and sent up. The appropriations and expenditures are thus summarized—

	Appropriations, Revenues, etc.	Expended.	Unexpended.
General.....	$11,038,862 48	$2,200,890 47	$8,837,972 01
Special.....	8,458,372 21	2,229,614 11	6,228,758 10
	$19,497,234 69	$4,430,504 58	$15,066,730 11

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following were severally read a second time, and passed in concurrence:

Order authorizing extension of fire alarm lines, painting of poles, etc., at a cost not exceeding $2500.

Order authorizing contracts to be made with owners of land on Fort Hill territory, whose estates adjoin the land of the city, to build party walls.

Order authorizing $500 to be expended in each case where necessary for fire alarm apparatus and such extensions and alterations and repairs as may be needed.

Report and order authorizing the making of such repairs and alterations as may be needed in Central Charity Bureau and Temporary Home, at not exceeding $3000.

Report and order authorizing the purchase of 2500 feet of land, more or less, adjoining Station House Lot, Fourth street, at an estimated cost of $2500.

The following were read a second time, and, on motion of Mr. Denny of Ward 9, were laid on the table:

Orders authorizing the erection of a police station house for District Eleven, on land recently purchased therefor on Adams street, Ward 16, and for a loan of $40,000 to be applied for the same.

PETITION PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Mr. Thacher of Ward 15 presented the petition of E. Howard & Co. for leave to build a wooden frame building in rear of Enstis street for the storage of lumber.

On motion of Mr. Thacher it was referred to the Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, who were directed by the City Council to procure estimates for land and a building on the same, for the accommodation of a steam fire engine and horse hose carriage, said building to be located on Mason street, or in the immediate vicinity, having considered the same, reported that a lot suitable for an engine house in the location named cannot be obtained except at extreme prices. Instead of the purchase of a new lot, they recommend the taking of the city building on Mason street, formerly occupied by the Natural History Society, and at present as a branch of the High School. The building, with the land in the front and rear, can be made available, and an engine house completed at an estimated cost of $15,000. Provision can be made for the English High School branch in the Bowditch Schoolhouse, South street, recently surrendered to the city. The committee recommend the passage of the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to make such alterations in the building formerly occupied by the Natural History Society, and now owned by the city of Boston, on Mason street, to accommodate a steam fire engine, horse hose carriage, and the horses and men connected therewith, at an estimated cost of $15,000.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the reserved fund the sum of $15,000, the same to be applied for the providing of an engine house on Mason street.

The order having been read once, Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 asked if there is any necessity for such an expenditure, as it did not seem to him that that amount would be required.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 said it was merely an approximate estimate; there were no surveys or plans made as yet.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 did not think Mason street just the place, and as it would do no harm to have the matter go over, he moved that it be laid on the table.

It was so ordered.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred an order to raise the tower of the Ticknor Schoolhouse a sufficient height to receive a tower clock, reported that they deem the appropriation, $700, insufficient; that they are not favorable to an increase of the appropriation so that the work may go forward, but would recommend its postponement from the fact that a new district has been created in Washington Village by the School Committee, which will very soon require the erection of a new schoolhouse, when such a clock can be constructed on the new building at less expense than upon the present Ticknor Schoolhouse. The committee therefore report it inexpedient to erect a clock tower on the Ticknor Schoolhouse.

The report was accepted.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, reported that they had received a request from the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department, asking them to furnish accommodations for the wagon of the Insurance Brigade in the house of Hook & Ladder Company No. 3. The committee request of the City Council information as to whether they are obliged to furnish accommodations for the wagons and horses of the Insurance Brigade.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 desired an explanation of the report.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 moved the acceptance of the report.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 said the city is not only to furnish a building for the wagon but they wish the horses fed. The Committee on Public Buildings could not see their way clearly to recommend doing it. He wanted to know if the Fire Department and the insurance companies were to run the city.

Mr. Dacey thought that if the Insurance Brigade is a necessity, the city should bear the whole expense and not merely a part of it. What is asked now is, to provide accommodations for the wagon and feed for the horses. This is simply an entering wedge.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 was not quite clear in his mind that the city is obliged to furnish accommodations. One insurance wagon is accommodated in Bulfinch street, and the companies propose to organize a new one for the South End and Roxbury. The Committee on the Fire Department did not think the city obliged to grant the request, and he was glad to see that the Committee on Public Buildings did not think so.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 was of the opinion that there was no obligation on the part of the city, but there does arise a question of expediency. If any citizens or any body of men will defray a large part of such expense it becomes a question whether it is not wise for the city to furnish the accommodations for the horses and vehicles, the insurance companies paying the remainder of the expense. It would be well, he thought, to send this matter to the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department, and he so moved.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 did not approve of this reference. If the insurance companies wish to locate another wagon at the South End they should do so. The companies pay the salaries of the men, and the city pays them a dollar each that they may be members of the Firemen's Charitable Association. So they are in reality members of the Fire Department.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 could not see the propriety of the proposed reference, when the committee had simply asked for information from the City Government. The insurance wagons do a great amount of good at fires, and if the companies wish to do anything toward putting out fires and saving property, the city might at least feed their horses for them.

Mr. Dean did not want to be understood as opposing the giving of the accommodations. While taking it for granted that the city is not obliged to do this, it may be that it ought to be done, and although the matter comes up in the form of a request for information, it would be wise for the city to take such action as would give the requisite accommodation. Some order authorizing or instructing the Committee on Fire Department to investigate it should be put in, and if it is a good thing they should come to the City Government for power to do it. From what information he had he should vote in favor of giving the Insurance Brigade the requisite accommodation in some convenient place.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 deemed it the duty of citizens to do everything they could to preserve property. He should be perfectly willing to have the matter go back to the Committee on Fire Department.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said he understood the Insurance Brigade to be a voluntary adjunct of the Fire Department, the expenses being paid by the insurance companies, who merely ask the city to give a room for the wagon and the taking care of the horses. The matter is not well understood. It should go to some committee, be thoroughly investigated, and reported upon fully, that each member may understand the brigade's relation to the department.

Mr. Wells moved an amendment that the matter be referred to the Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department.

Mr. Dean accepted the amendment and it was so referred.

ENLARGEMENT OF CITY HALL.

Mr. Caton, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, reported that they had received a communication from the Board of Directors of Public Institutions for increased office accommodations, and such accommodations not being obtainable in City Hall, the committee have sought for rooms outside. They therefore recommend the passage of the following:

Ordered. That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to hire for offices for the city of Boston, the building No. 23 Pemberton square, for a term of ten years, at an annual rent of three thousand dollars; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

The order was read once.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said this matter had been before the City Government before. He was perfectly satisfied they should not go outside the present building, which can be added to and enlarged on either branch, and this would have to be done soon, or else vacated altogether. He should oppose going to Pemberton square or anywhere else from here. He had thought of offering an order directing the Committee on Public Buildings to consider the expediency of enlarging the City Hall. Only a few days ago he had walked down the street with a celebrated architect, who asked why they did not enlarge the City Hall on either wing, and get the room they need and thus make the building what it ought to be. This subject has already been discussed in the other branch, but it was concluded to put up with the present accommodation for a while longer.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 said it is well known that there is not room to accommodate the different departments in the building. The rooms occupied by the Directors of Public Institutions are entirely unfit for them, and those occupied by the Board of Health must be vacated for the Assessors. The Board of Health are in a little seven-by-nine room that is injurious to them, and they say something must be done else they can't stay there. If the gentleman from Ward 5 can tell us how we can enlarge this building and get the required room, I should like to have him do so, for the enlargement would take two or three years at least.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 said the accommodations for the Directors of Public Institutions are entirely inadequate. The vaults of the City Treasury are to be enlarged and that will take a considerable portion of the space, as it will take part of the inside room now used by the Board of Directors. In addition to this the room is very damp and injurious to the health of the clerks. The drain of the building runs right under the floor, and some time ago the carpet of the inner room was taken up and found to be very mouldy. We are now paying a large rent for the City Solicitor's Office, which can be taken to the building proposed to be leased. He was in favor of enlarging this building, but thought they could not do better than to engage the one in Pemberton square.

Mr. Davis of Ward 14 thought it would be better to abolish some of the offices in the City Hall which occupy good rooms, instead of incurring the additional expense of $3000 per year. There were the Superintendent of Printing and the Inspector of Milk, one of whom he had occasion to know was not much good to the city.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said that the city of Boston owns a pile of bricks on Chardon and Hawkins streets, which are occupied by loafers who air themselves on the granite steps. There is plenty of room there. He opposed hiring any building outside of what the city owns. It looks rather cheap to go up into Pemberton square and take the leavings of the State Police, while there is plenty of room in the Charity Building, if they see fit to make use of it. He hoped the order would lie on the table and the committee work on the Charity Building.

Mr. Shaw agreed with Mr. Wells that the room could be had without a dollar's extra expense. The Directors of Public Institutions had sat in that room for more than eight years, and never until now has there been any complaint. If there is a common sewer running under that room it is time we appointed somebody to look into this matter of sewers and drains. Mr. Shaw offered the following as a substitute:

Ordered. That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings consider and report upon the expediency of enlarging the City Hall.

Mr. Shaw believed that if the work was taken hold of in the right manner, the enlargement could be finished by the first of September, 1874. There were a good many other matters connected with the City Hall that ought to be investigated, and he hoped the first thing taken up would be the sewer and drain.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 said that if the gentleman did not want the directors to have the new rooms, let the order be killed. If we had to wait till the City Hall is enlarged, we might kill the Board of Health before it is done. The trouble with the City Hall is, there is not room in the basement story for half the occupants. I am in favor of enlarging the City Hall, but we want more rooms for the heads of departments.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 inquired of Mr. Caton if there were any vacant rooms in the Charity Building, or rooms occupied by private organizations, that would answer the purpose.

Mr. Caton replied that the committee went to the Charity Building about three months ago to see if they could not procure rooms to meet this very emergency. They found two or three rooms in the basement used by the Provident Association, and those were the only ones adapted to the purpose. Alderman Gibson, who was strongly in favor of the committee going there, came to the conclusion that they would have to abandon that plan.

Mr. Shaw withdrew his substitute, and said he would move an amendment. He did not want to see the city harassed under any more long leases. He did not know how much advantage that little room of the Board of Health is to be to the assessors. But here is the Inspector of Milk occupying a room when it is not at all necessary. Other large rooms are occupied only a few hours in the day. He moved an amendment that the lease be for three years instead of ten.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 hoped the amendment would not prevail. The city owns enough rooms now to accommodate all the heads of departments. The machine would run just as well without so many offices as with it.

Mr. Shaw's amendment was adopted, and the order as amended was read once.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, reported the following:

Ordered. That there be allowed and paid the sum of six hundred and fifty-four dollars and eighty-seven cents, for removing unsafe walls after the fire of May 30, the bills for the same having been duly approved; the said amount to be charged to the appropriation for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Mr. Caton said it was desired that the parties should have their money. On his motion the rules were suspended and the order was passed.

Mr. Caton, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, offered the following:

Ordered. That the order passed June 3, 1873, authorizing the Committee on Public Buildings to purchase of H. P. Gerrish 4800 square feet of land, on the corner of Longwood and Brookline avenues, at a price not exceeding one dollar per square foot, and erect thereon a hose house, at an estimated cost for land and building of twenty-eight thousand dollars, he and the same is hereby rescinded; the city not being able to obtain a proper title to the land.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to purchase of Henry N. Clark 5000 square feet of land, more or less, contained in a lot on the corner of Longwood and Brookline avenues, at a price not exceeding one dollar and fifteen cents per foot, and erect thereon a hose house at an estimated cost for land and building of twenty-eight thousand dollars; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Hose House, Longwood.

Mr. Caton asked for a suspension of the rules that the order might pass, as the Committee on Fire Department wished to get the work ahead as soon as possible.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 inquired if the new location was near the old one.

Mr. Caton said it was on the opposite corner, and was considered much better than the other lot. It met the approval of the Chief Engineer.

The rules were suspended and the order was passed.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, reported that there would be required for the widening of Washington street, between Avery and Boylston streets, and for the widening of Essex street, from Washington street to Brimmer place, including the paving and grading, the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The committee recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be and he hereby is authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; the same to be appropriated for the widening of Washington street, between Avery and Boylston streets, and the widening of Essex street, between Washington street and Brimmer place, including the grading and paving of said portions of those streets: said loan to be designated as the loan for the widening of Washington and Essex streets.

On motion of Mr. Flynn the rules were suspended and the order was passed.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 called up the order offered by him in relation to the enlargement of City Hall and it was passed.

Mr. Anderson of Ward 3 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on the Fire Department be authorized to procure a new steam fire engine, and cause the same to be located at the foot of Poplar street on Charles street, on land owned by the city of Boston; the expense of the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 moved its reference to the Committee on Fire Department, and it was so referred.

Mr. Collins moved to take from the table the substitute order to pay the assignee of Charles Burrill $40,000.

The motion was rejected.

Mr. West of Ward 16 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Joint Special Committee on the Re-organization of the Fire Department be authorized to visit other cities in order to obtain information of the management of other departments, at an expense not exceeding one thousand dollars.

The order was read once and Mr. Jones of Ward 16 moved to suspend the rules that it might take its second reading.

The motion was rejected.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Health be requested to examine into the present system of sewerage in this city, and report to the City Council whether any improvement of the present sewerage facilities is necessary for the protection of the public health.

The order was passed.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to remove the iron fence on the westerly side of Tremont street, between Boylston and Park streets, and set thereon a suitable curbstone; the expense to be applied to the appropriation for Paving.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 inquired if the Council had the right to direct the Superintendent of Streets to do anything of that kind.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said the fence was on the line between the street and the Common, and the object was to err on the safe side by having the order pass both branches.

The Chair ruled that the order could be entertained by the Council, and on motion of Mr. Denny the rules were suspended and the order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

JULY 14, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held this afternoon, at four o'clock, Alderman Cutter, President, in the chair.

CITY CLERK PRO TEM.

A communication was received from his Honor the Mayor, appointing James M. Bugbee City Clerk pro tem. during the absence of Mr. McCleary. The appointment was confirmed, and the oath of office was administered to Mr. Bugbee by Alderman Cutter.

APPOINTMENTS AND CONFIRMATIONS.

The following appointments of the Mayor were confirmed:

Constable—William T. Pindell.

Members of Fire Department—John R. Chapman, David L. Adamson, H. Heymann, Francis M. Houghton, Frederick W. Knight, George W. Stone, Ambrose Abbott, Samuel T. Sawyer, Thomas C. Soesman, Walter Jenkins, George J. Deluce, Charles Griffin, Jr., F. E. Ersham.

Special Police Officers without pay—John Luis d'Almerda, in discharging vessels consigned to the Vice-Consul of Portugal; J. J. H. Richards-on, Bankers' and Brokers' Electric Protective Company; Thomas Fleming, Kingston street and its vicinity; John H. Kendall, Sudbury street and its vicinity.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The orders of notice for the sewers in Western avenue, between Longwood park and Longwood avenue, and in Longwood avenue, between Western avenue and Autumn street; in Folsom place; in Chelsea street, between Marion and Brooks streets, and in First street, between K and L streets, were considered. There being no objection offered, they were severally recommitted to the Committee on Sewers.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Of Company B, First Battalion Infantry, for approval of armory and increase of allowance for rent. Referred to the Committee on Armories.

Of Thomas J. Clarke, for license as a common victualler.

Of George Beatty and L. M. Pike, 10 State street, for auctioneers' license.

Severally referred to the Committee on Licenses.

Of Boston Metallic Roofing Company, for leave to occupy a wooden stable on First street, near B.

Of Herman Grundell, for a wooden stable on West Walnut park.

Of Charles Newhall, for a stable on Bailey street.

Of W. H. Dow, for a stable on Court, from Hancock street, near Columbia street; with a remonstrance by A. T. Wheelock.

Of W. R. Gerrish, for a stable on Atlantic street, for one to five horses.

Of Hall & Eaton, for a wooden stable on First street, between B and C streets.

Of James Jeller-on et al., for leave to occupy a brick stable for fifteen additional horses, on Fleet street, No. 24.

Remonstrance of J. Spencely et al., against the erection of a stable on Walnut park by Herman Grundell.

Severally referred to the Committee on Health, on the part of the Board.

Of John McKinnon et al., that edgestones be set on Newman street, between Dorchester and Lowland streets.

Of Winchester & Hight, for a sidewalk on Dorchester avenue, corner First street.

Severally referred to the Committee on Paving.

Of Joseph B. Moors et al., for relaying of sewer in Buckingham street.

Of A. Hamilton et al., for a new sewer in Kingston street.

Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

Of George H. Davis et al., Executive Committee of the Peace Jubilee, for remission of taxes for 1872. Referred to Committee on Assessors' Department.

PAPERS FROM THE STREET COMMISSIONERS.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Pleasant street from Columbus avenue to Eliot street, by taking 1532 feet of land valued at $12,256 belonging to the city; also a resolve and order for the extension of Eliot street to Columbus avenue, by taking 7094 feet of land valued at $56,752, owned by the city.

On motion of Alderman Clark, they were severally referred to the Committee on Streets.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to furnish and set edgestones and pave the gutters on south side of Longwood avenue, between Brookline avenue and Muddy River. Estimated cost, $2600.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to pave Clinton street, from Merchants' row to Commercial street, with small granite blocks. Estimated cost, $10,000.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to set edgestones and pave the gutters on Blue-Hill avenue, from Warren to Schuyler street. Estimated cost, $1800.

Severally passed.

An ordinance in addition to an ordinance in relation to the Fire Department.

Be it ordained, etc.—

Section 1. Whenever it is adjudged at any fire by the Chief-Engineer or, in his absence, by the Engineer next in rank who may be present, to be necessary, in order to prevent the further spreading of the fire, to pull down or otherwise demolish any building, the same may be done by order of said Chief Engineer or Engineer next in rank who may be present.

Sec. 2. Section eleven of an ordinance in relation to the Fire Department, printed on page two hundred and thirty-seven of the Revised Ordinances of eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, is hereby repealed.

Alderman Stebbins inquired what was the necessity of the ordinance.

Alderman Quincy replied that the Committee on Fire Department had reported that this order ought to pass, for reasons which were very well known. At the great fire in November, it was not known who had authority to destroy buildings, and many structures were destroyed by parties who had no authority to do so. If a person now orders a building to be destroyed, he renders himself liable for damages. Such an order can be given legally after consultation by three fire wards, who must act together, and the individual whose building is thus destroyed has the right to compensation. This power to destroy buildings should be possessed by the one man in command at a fire; he should feel that he is protected in such an exercise of his best judgment. And the person whose building is destroyed should receive damages if the fire is stopped. This order is to put that power into the hands of one man, and it was for this reason that the Legislature had passed the act.

The order was then passed and sent down.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions were referred in concurrence, and the Auditor's monthly exhibit was accepted in concurrence and placed on file.

Reference to the Committee on Fire Department of a report from the Committee on Public Buildings, asking whether they are obliged to furnish accommodations for the horses and wagons of the Insurance Brigade.

Reference to Committee on Fire Department of an order to authorize said committee to procure a new steam fire engine, and locate the same at foot of Poplar, on Charles street, on land of city.

Severally referred in concurrence.

Report (inexpedient) to erect a clock tower on the Ticknor Schoolhouse came from the Council accepted.

Alderman Power hoped the Board would not concur in the action of the Council. The fact that a new schoolhouse in that vicinity is contemplated has nothing to do with the question. That schoolhouse is situated on the most elevated land in the vicinity, and if there is to be a clock on any house thereabout, that is the house to put it on. On no other place will it be so useful, and all the people in that part of the city have been trying to get a clock put on that building. The present tower is ample, it only being required to raise it a little.

Alderman Sayward hoped the Board would concur with the Council. He was not sure that this is the most conspicuous place in that part of South Boston, and even the gentleman proposed to raise the tower that the clock might be seen. This schoolhouse was built by Dorchester some thirty years ago, the tower had been raised since then by the city, and if there had been a necessity for the clock it would have been put on then. This matter came from the Committee on Fire Alarms. As to the necessity of it, most of the people in that vicinity are able to have their own clocks and watches. It will not accommodate the people of that vicinity, but those who come in from Norfolk County. If it is needed let the clock be put on the new schoolhouse which is to be built in a year or two.

Alderman Power rejoined that the present tower could be raised at a much less expense than a new one could be built, and any one who would go to the locality would at once see the necessity for the clock.

On the question of concurrence Alderman Sayward called for the yeas and nays, which were as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Emery, Sayward and Stebbins—4.

Nays—Aldermen Brown, Clark, Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Power, Quincy—7.

The report was declared not accepted.

Alderman Power moved that the order be recommitted to the Committee on Public Buildings.

A motion to lay on the table, offered by Alderman Sayward, was rejected, and the motion to recommit was carried.

Report and order authorizing the purchase of 2500 feet of land, more or less, adjoining station-house lot, Fourth street, at an estimated cost of $2800.

Order to allow and pay $654 87-100 for removing unsafe walls after fire of 30th of May.

Orders to rescind order of June 3, authorizing the purchase of land of H. P. Gerrish, on corner of Longwood and Brookline avenues, and the erection thereon of a hose house; and in lieu thereof authorizing the purchase of 5000 square feet of land, more or less, of H. N. Clark, on the corner of said avenues, and the erection thereon of a hose house, at a cost for land and building of $28,000.

The above were severally passed, in concurrence.

Order requesting Committee on Public Buildings to consider expediency of enlarging the City Hall came from the Common Council adopted. The Board refused to concur.

Report and order authorizing a loan of $250,000 for the widening of Washington street between Avery and Boylston streets, and of Essex street between Washington street and Brimmer place, passed in concurrence—yeas 11, nays 0.

Order requesting Committee on Health to examine the present system of sewerage, and report what improvements are needed for preservation of public health, came from the Common Council adopted.

Alderman Power moved to lay the order on the table, as he did not understand its meaning. If any information is desired on the subject of sewerage, the Committee on Sewers are competent to give it. They know just what ought to be done, and are willing to give any information that may be needed or that would be useful.

Alderman Sayward desired to speak on the question, and Alderman Power withheld his motion to lay on the table.

Alderman Sayward didn't know anything about the order, although it had been referred to the Committee on Health, which he had not asked to have done. It may have come up from the fact that the Board of Health had asked to have certain acts enforced. There is no doubt that many of the evils of the city are due to the system of sewerage.

Alderman Power stated that the appropriation of two hundred thousand dollars for the Committee on Sewers was in a fair way to be spent this year. A million dollars could be spent in preserving the health of the city by improving the sewers, and it was to this committee that all matters of this kind should go. If the Board of Health want any information on that subject they can get it from the Committee on Sewers.

Alderman Sayward knew that the appropriation for sewers was not what it ought to be, and the committee did wrong not to ask for a larger amount.

Alderman Clark hoped the order would not be laid on the table. A better system of sewerage is needed. All know very well that with the small appropriation asked for, the committee could not make the necessary repairs. Last year he offered an order, which asked for the appointment of a commission to devise a system that would thoroughly drain the entire city, but no action had been taken. To get at the root of the unpleasant smells which infest the city, a more perfect system of sewerage is necessary. He moved to amend the order by substituting the word "sewers" for "health."

Alderman Power agreed to the amendment and withdrew his motion to lay on the table, and the order as thus amended was passed.

Order directing Superintendent of Streets to remove the fence on the westerly side of Tremont street, between Park and Boylston streets, and substitute a curbstone therefor. Passed in concurrence.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

The first annual report of the Board of Health was submitted in print, and was accepted and sent down.

The report gives a review of the measures taken to prevent the spread of the smallpox by the establishment of hospitals and says—

To avoid, as far as possible, unpleasant association, and to preserve in all its integrity the market value of real and personal property, as it stood in the city early in January last, and to steer clear of all acts of needless disenchantment, we designated each hospital by a number, rather than by the street on which it stood; that already in use being called Hospital No. 1; that just entered, No. 2; but Gallop's Island had already got past the medicine of numbers, and we did not attempt to christen it anew.

As nearly as we can estimate, the number of cases of smallpox in our city on January 15 last was 650. Of this number there were at Gallop's Island, 61; and at Hospital No. 1, 56, the hospital having been built but a few days, and that number having been removed there during this time. The remainder were at their several homes in the city, and consisted of those cases which were reported when there were no hospital accommodations, and of others who could not legally be removed. It gives us satisfaction to be able to state that in only a few instances has an order for a forcible removal been given; and that in the larger portion of these the order was not needed after it was issued, the parties in almost every instance manifesting a willingness to go before the ambulance arrived to take them. Besides this, very few, if any, have left the hospital after recovery without expressing a thankfulness to Drs. Webb or Green that they were taken there, and in many instances has the patient been so pleased with his treatment there that he has expressed a wish to stay longer than was necessary.

The number of patients Feb. 11, was as follows: At Gallop's, 24; at No. 1, 66; at No. 2, 75. March 2—At Gallop's, 10; at No. 1, 25; at No. 2, 52. March 14—At Gallop's, 0; at No. 1, 11; at No. 2, 33; and 6 cases only in the city, outside the hospitals. April 30—At Gallop's, 0; at No. 1, 0; at No. 2, 12, and of these only 2 were sick abed.

The number of patients admitted at Gallop's—From Sept 1, 1872, to April 30, 1873, was 473; from Jan. 15, 1873, to April 30, 1873, was 17.

Number admitted in all—At Hospital No. 1, 233; died, 48; vaccinated, 174; vaccinated and died, 33. At Hospital No. 2, 291; died, 60; vaccinated, 246; vaccinated and died, 45. But of this last number (291), 11 were transferred from No. 1.

The number of deaths from smallpox in the entire city, for the week ending January 18, was 46; January 25, 35; February 1, 42; February 8, 24; February 15, 17; February 22, 8; March 1, 11; March 8, 5; March 15, 4; March 22, 6; March 29, 4; April 5, 2; April 12, 2; April 19, 2; April 26, 3; May 3, 2; May 10, 0.

Immediately upon the recovery of a patient, or his removal to a hospital, or for burial, his house has, in every instance within our knowledge, been thoroughly fumigated, and all infected material as thoroughly disinfected as possible.

We found it necessary to run a telegraph from some central point, near City Hall, to both hospitals. One was constructed accordingly from Police Station Two, in Court square. This was particularly necessary when an ambulance was needed, as the vicinity of City Hall, or any other place much frequented, was no place to keep an ambulance in waiting.

Whenever a case appeared which could not be moved without danger to the health of the patient, or could not be legally moved, we have taken due care that the existence of the case and its exact locality should be known to all likely to pass that way, or liable to be in any way affected by it. A flag has been placed at the door, or a card on the door with the word "Smallpox" on it. The people have, so far as we know, with two or three exceptions only, willingly allowed this to be done till all danger had passed, when it was removed. Two or three flags only, to our knowledge, were wantonly removed, and we immediately applied to the Legislature to prohibit the removal of such card or flag, and to add a wholesome penalty for such removal. They did so promptly, as will be seen by consulting chapter two of the acts of 1873.

After reviewing the causes which led to the appointment of health officers, the report continues—On the 20th of January we published in the press of the city an appeal to the people, not to magnify a new office nor to alarm any one, but simply that the evil that was upon us might be more fully comprehended; that it might be better prepared for and guarded against; that we might get the active aid and encouragement of all in trying to stop the spread of the epidemic; that all might be induced to obey the laws; and last but not least, that some sympathy might be awakened in behalf of poor unfortunates who were suffering so much and dying so fast. We should have been well satisfied with the result of that appeal had it had no other effect than to bring such abundant contributions of choice flowers and little luxuries for the sick at the hospitals as came to us almost every day afterwards. But it did a great deal more. And in this connection we must speak of the regret we feel that we cannot with propriety disclose the names of such true Christian philanthropists. But they are not forgotten; we know them all.

During our first week smallpox seemed so prevalent that we feared we should need another hospital. We soon made selection of a spot, and took some steps towards putting it in a condition for building a hospital. Competent architects were employed, who submitted plans from time to time, each new plan being for a smaller hospital, till, finally, the disease abated so, that what seemed at first an absolute necessity, we afterwards found we should have no occasion for, and on the 5th of February we abandoned the project altogether.

The General Statutes provide that a smallpox patient, admitted to one of our hospitals, who is not an inhabitant of any town, and who is unable to pay, becomes a State charge. Acting upon this, we have made out the bills of all those who were State charges, so far as we were able to ascertain them (for putting the necessary questions to find this out, to a poor victim just arriving at the hospital, was not considered the best medicine for him), and these bills have all been sent to the secretary of the Board of State Charities, for all patients up to and including the 30th of April, 1873. They amount to upwards of $100,000, and this amount is now due the city, from the Commonwealth, under the law.

A number of medical gentlemen had been authorized to vaccinate throughout the city proper to the time of our entering upon our duties, and were then vaccinating. Of these, as many as applied to us for that purpose were authorized to continue until some plan could be matured, or definite arrangement made. Finally, on the 25th of January, one medical inspector was appointed for each ward,—appointment to take effect on the 27th—with power to each to appoint two assistants, and in some wards three, all to be approved by us. But we held the chief medical inspectors responsible for their assistants. The latter were continued in office until the 22d of February; the former until the 15th of March. Families were visited, and in a number of wards the ward rooms were opened for vaccination.

The figures may be unimportant, but we append them:

Whole number vaccinated.....	14,977
“ reviewed.....	10,546
Average percentage of success so far as reviewed.	55

On the seventh of April we appointed, subject to the approval of the Mayor, Dr. Samuel A. Green, City Physician, whose report is submitted herewith, George W. Forristall, Superintendent of Health, and Dr. C. Irving Fisher, Port Physician, and these appointments were approved. We also appointed George T. Ranlett, captain of the steamer “Samuel Little” (Captain Cates having resigned), and William H. Preston, engineer.

In 1872, the number of tenement houses in the city was 2165, containing 54,450 people. Although one ward in New York contains nearly double this number of tenement population, yet the fact alone that nearly one-fifth of the population of our city dwells in tenement houses, makes the subject, and their proper construction and care, one of great concern to all. We began to turn our attention to it, and to nuisances of every description, in the latter part of February, the smallpox having abated somewhat at that time, so that we could do so without neglecting the sick, although the deep snows of winter charitably hid a multitude of violations of law and ordinance, and made almost unobjectionable innumerable nuisances, they were so perfectly concealed. But upon the dissolving of the winter's snows these nuisances broke from their hiding places all over the city.

Chief among the essentials to a perfect tenement-house system are the genial sunlight and pure air; and both of these involve the necessity of space. Density of population and overcrowding are stern foes not only to good morals but to any civilized system of living. It can easily enough be shown that houses ill-ventilated and filthy are economical, in the market sense, for the tenants, because much less food is needed in them, and the body is very soon destroyed; and not the body only, but the soul. And as cleanliness is somehow always associated in men's minds with godliness, and always in such a manner that we can only reach the height of the latter through the former, we cannot but ask ourselves, if this is so, what chance has godliness in some of our tenement houses in this city? We should understand, then, that before godliness can be obtained we must be made clean, and missionary labor to a poor sick man, gasping for air, should begin by giving him pure air at the start, and religious consolation when, afterwards, he is able to bear it.

Yet people, young and old, die in multitudes in our tenement houses, and deaths there as elsewhere are attributed to the mysterious dispensations of Providence, when there is no mystery about it. The deaths are all logically due when they happen, and the mystery would be if they happened not. It is only certain effect following obvious cause. If the owners of some tenement houses could be quickened into a sense of moral obligation, the duty they owe to their Maker, to society, to themselves, or that first lesson of political economy, that the better tenement houses are built, no matter what class of house, the better in the long run for the owners' pockets; or that other lesson, that sickness is oftener than anything else the cause of non-payment of rent, and their miserably built, badly ventilated shells and surroundings, the cause of the sickness,—these things would not be in our city, our yearly mortality would decrease at least one-fifth, as clearly shown by Mr. Leeds, in his comments on the death rate in New York, rarely would a sickness “native and to the manor born” start up, and no foreign plague, pestilence, cholera, or contagion of any description would ever find foothold here if it came.

If the death rates and statistics of mortality in great cities should be carefully studied, and its causes could be accurately seen, there would be no doubt but that one-fourth of those who die, die from causes connected in some way with impure air. Is this one-fourth then, worth saving? If so let us have pure air. There is enough of it—more bountiful than the sea—and it is as essential to life and health as food; and why men will shut themselves up and inhale rank poison, all their lives, when they can have pure air for the asking, is more than we know. We pet and train and teach birds, dogs and horses and the like, and let little children, who might be made of great worth, even in the lowest market sense, grope their way in the dark and into the ground early, as if they were of no consequence; when a few choice grains of knowledge of the laws of health would save them. Two thousand years ago this was not so.

The Legislature of 1871 gave us a tenement-house law much in advance of the old system. There are excellent requirements in it, which, if rigidly enforced, will and must conduce greatly to the public health. And we have taken the best care we could that this law should be understood and complied with. It makes excellent provision for the proper ventilation of tenement houses, and for proper and sufficient rooms for sleep. When we consider that of the threescore and ten years of life we pass almost twenty-five in sleeping chambers; that the first requisite of life and health is pure air; that, according to the English apportionment for hospitals, the cubic space for each bed with one occupant is 2100 feet, and that in consequence of the impurity of the air once breathed 4000 cubic feet an hour are required, we can but stand aghast at the scanty breathing places, the wretched Calcutta black holes called sleeping chambers, which we find in many of our tenement houses.

A well-known writer says, “There are strong reasons for believing that every year there are more cases of dangerous and fatal diseases gradually engendered by the habit of sleeping in small, unventilated rooms, and by crowding persons in the same bed and room, than have occurred from cholera atmosphere during any year since its first appearance in this country.” From the same authority we learn that England, out of a total force of 93,959 men engaged in the campaign in the Crimea, lost 33,645; of whom only 2058 were killed in action, and 1761 died of wounds. To every one taken to hospital on account of wounds, twelve were taken there on account of disease. The chief disease was typhus fever. And Boudens, surgeon-in-chief of the French army, says of this disease, “It is engendered by crowding and want, either in hospitals, prisons, or on board vessels. The disease may indeed be called forth and removed at will. And,” he adds, “the first remedy is pure air and powerful ventilation.” Our writer further says, “The sickness was stayed and finally disappeared; and the great panacea was pure air.”

Nor are those who are fortunate enough to dwell in other than tenement houses exempt from the common want of pure air; and we should be much more exempt than now from needless disease and death, if men everywhere would only carry into daily practice those natural laws which it is every man's imperative duty to know. Those who should know better pass many consecutive hours in close rooms, breathing over and over their own poisoned breath without a change of air. Sickness follows, and the poisoned mortals can't see the point.

If people could only see the air they breathe as they do the water they drink, there would be no trouble. But they do not, and in the long run it tells its own inevitable, retributive story.

Our public buildings, halls and schoolhouses are many of them built with no view to or thought of proper ventilation. The writer just quoted says that Judge Pierpont resigned his seat on the bench in New York in 1860, because the court room was "ruinous to health and dangerous to life," and that Chief-Justice Robertson of that city died of pneumonia from exposure for eight hours to the bad atmosphere of a court room. Let some person who has never thought of it go into some of our school rooms, even in our own city, on a moist winter day, about twelve at noon, where some sixty or one hundred pupils are climbing the wearisome heights, and the darkest troglodytic dormitories of our city have something of the scent of an orange grove in full blossom in comparison. You ask about the ventilation, and your eye is directed to two or three holes in the wall near the ceiling, but you are not told whether moral suasion is to coax, or corporal punishment drive, the deadly poison up there, nor who or what does the coaxing or driving. But you must be persuaded to believe that a mastodon crawls out of a gimlet hole when no inducement is offered him to go.

From the incomplete returns we have been able to gather up to the date of this writing, we are unable to give the average number of families in our tenement houses, but in 1869 there were 120 distinct families under one roof in New York, and there were in that city 13,623 houses, which averaged nearly six families each. In Philadelphia there was one house to every six persons; in New York, one to every thirteen; and there were three times the number of deaths in proportion to the population where they are huddled together, compared with the mortality where every family lives in a dwelling of its own. Dr. Mapother says, "Consumption and allied diseases slay about 100,000 yearly in England, Ireland and Scotland. And these deaths are distributed in almost exact proportion to the density of the population." Again, of Dublin, he says, "Over-crowding, impure air, insufficient water, imperfect sewerage, debility, pauperism, contagious scourges, death, widowhood, orphanage and high taxation have been in this city sequential terms." But who can wonder at the death-rate in such places, when, as a fair illustration, Corfield tells us in his book on sewage that a woman in Rugby, England, living near some great nuisance, said her rent was low (1s 9d a week), on account of the nuisance.

A large number of people, upon being requested to call at our office, have done so, and upon our showing them wherein they were living in violation of law and the city ordinance, they have promptly remedied everything and complied with the law. Yet there are those who have done so reluctantly, and some who would not do it at all until they acquired a more perfect knowledge of the law and the ordinances than we could give them, the knowledge derived from experience. During the entire month of March we gave what attention we could to tenement houses and nuisances, aided during the first half of the month by some of the medical inspectors, but this we did without any regularly established system, not coming at any conclusion as to the simplest and at the same time the most efficient method of conducting the business; but on the twenty-ninth of March we appointed sanitary inspectors, who commenced work on April 1st.

The number of tenement houses so inspected and entered upon our records, not including those visited by the members of the board, to the thirtieth of April, is 620. Those were occupied by 3,643 families, comprising 14,426 people. Up to that date many notices, whose number it is a waste of time to count, had been sent to parties who had failed to comply with the law regulating tenement houses, and a large number also to persons who suffered nuisances to exist upon their premises in violation of either law or ordinance, or both. In addition to these, there have been some few prosecutions. We cannot leave this subject without earnestly recommending that the yards, alleys and courts connected with them be required to be paved, as in many instances in New York and Philadelphia, thereby avoiding many causes of foul air and various nuisances that now lie concealed.

A law of 1872 provides for the appointment of inspectors of provisions, whose duty it is to inspect meats, fish, etc. If, on such inspection, a calf is found under four weeks old, the inspector must seize it and cause it to be destroyed; but the owner may appeal to the Board of Health, whose duty then is to inspect it also, and order it to be destroyed, or disposed of otherwise than for food if they find it unwholesome. On the 8th of April, we were called upon to inspect the veal of twenty-four calves. We did so, and condemned them, and have had no invitation to inspect any since. The argument in favor of selling such veal is that it costs less than other meat, and there are many poor people who must have meat who cannot afford to buy any other. It will be seen that the argument proceeds upon the same reasoning as the low rent of the widow at Rugby, and on its face seems the very incarnation of humanitarianism. But its fallacy consists in calling creatures of such tender days meat at all. Still, of the two, we consider the argument better than the veal.

A hen is not a matter of large concern in a great city, nor is a pig; yet they are both important in the domestic economy; they give great comfort to poor people, and are both subjects of municipal regulation. No one, by the ordinance, is allowed to keep fowls, swine, or goats, without a license from this board; and while we have in totidem verbis licensed none, we have interfered with no one, unless a well-grounded complaint came from those who were disturbed by it. Many things in themselves apparently evil are the cause of much good. And whenever we "from seeming evil still educe good," could contribute to the comfort of people in this respect by letting them alone, we have done so.

It is the opinion of the Board that a smallpox hospital should be built in some favorable spot within the city limits, where it would cause the least annoyance, and at the same time where all the essentials of a hospital could be had. Hospital No. 2 has been an excellent place for the sick, while its occupancy for smallpox patients has been a cause of very great annoyance to some in the immediate neighborhood, and to many quite a distance away, who were not otherwise afflicted. But the truth should be told, that the people of Ward 15 have, on the whole, borne with great patience and magnanimity the infliction of this misfortune in their midst, which could not fall elsewhere; but a more favorable spot can now be found, and land of much less market value.

In conclusion, the ordinance requires of us "a review of the sanitary condition of the city." It is much better, in our judgment, to confess that our limited experience renders us unable to do so now, farther than the facts and suggestions we offer may show it, than to attempt to do so and fail to do it correctly, for want of knowledge. Yet we certainly know that there are serious drawbacks to that perfect health which our favored city ought to enjoy. The soil of New England is proverbially sterile, and our shores in some places dangerous and forbidding. Our climate is shamefully abused by those who study it not, or who, knowing it, as shamefully set at defiance natural laws. An easterly wind is not, perhaps, the most favorable one for rheumatic complaints, but he who is suffering from these, in abusing the climate, forgets that he has no lawful right to the troubles he suffers from, and, therefore, no just ground of complaint. He who "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" sends the east wind in mercy, and it is all well ordered. We have no excuse for being otherwise than well fortified, and, being so, no trouble will come from that quarter.

It is easy to attribute pulmonary complaints to the east winds, but the real cause is not in them, but in ourselves. Exercise, temperance, cleanliness, and an abundance of pure, fresh air; sunlight and good food—these are the true preventives of disease, in whatever shape; and lack of these is sure to bring its train of ills, let the wind come from what quarter it may. People in every position in life should be more fully awake than they are to their importance. If they were so, and would only give constant heed to these key notes to health, there would be no such increase in the mortality of the city as there was in 1872. The promptest attention should be paid by all our citizens to stagnant and waste water, defective drainage and sewerage. As to the troublesome question of sewerage, or what to do with our sewage, the problem has not yet been solved. Yet the time must come sooner or later, when sewage, properly so called, must be disposed of in some manner independent of and disconnected from the sewers, or something must be added to our present sewers. Our sewers must be extended, or some large one take the contents of all those which now fail to go there, into the deep tidal currents of the river or the sea, and the vexed problem may be saved for us for a long time, if not forever.

The effect on the health of the city of filling up the Back Bay entire, we have yet to wait for. But had five hundred feet in width of Commonwealth avenue been left open from Arlington street westward, in conformity to the request of the memorialists in House Document No. 238 of 1860—in other words, were the constantly changing blue water where the green now is on that avenue, so that the western air could come in to us over another broad water sweep, there can be no doubt that the city would not have suffered in point of health, and she might easily have been made another Hamburg. And last, but not least, could several inches, perhaps feet, of the putrid bottom of Miller's River be removed beyond smell and sight, not only would the "atmosphere of death" that so often hangs like a pall over the West End, give way to something sweeter, but our people would begin to have some faith in the doctrine that society exists only upon the principle that sometimes private advantage shall be sacrificed to the public good.

It hardly seems possible that men can be found so lost to all sense of moral obligation or public duty, so captivated by the music of what Carlyle calls "the all-pervading jingle of dollars," as for private gain to endanger the lives and destroy the comfort and peace of thousands of our people by such a dreadful nuisance as this.

While we have devoted many days to the purification of the city in all parts, trying hard to enter into every little detail of impurity at the North End, and make the unclean clean in the smallest matters, we have more than once thought of how little worth is all this in view of the dreadful odors that come from the nuisances of Miller's River to the people of the West End, and have half thought we heard some inhabitant of that portion of our city say of the Board of Health, in the language of King Richard to Stanley—

"What do they in the North,
When they should serve their Sovereign in the West?"

Respectfully submitted,
A. W. BOARDMAN,
Chairman.

The report of Dr. Samuel A. Green, City Physician, is thus summarized—

Visits have been made to the Jail daily, and 1150 prisoners been vaccinated at the time of their entrance. The Temporary Home and the City Prison have been visited as often as necessity required. A physical examination of all candidates for the police has been made on the requisition of the Chief. During the year 3367 cases of smallpox have been reported, and 996 deaths have occurred from the same disease.

The following facts are elicited from the report of Dr. C. Irving Fisher, Port Physician:

By order of the Board of Health the quarantine inspection of vessels was observed from June 1, 1872, to Nov. 1, 1872, and during the year only two vessels have required an official visit outside of the season specified. These were the steamers Kedar and Batavia, from Liperpool, with smallpox, and which arrived respectively, May 9, 1872, and April 5, 1873. During the year there have been inspected six hundred and seventeen vessels, which may be classified as follows:

Steamers.....	48
Ships.....	57
Barques.....	190
Brigs.....	194
Schooners.....	128

617

As of interest in showing our commercial relations with ports from which vessels are subject to quarantine inspection, from June 1 to November 1 each year, the following classification is given. The numbers include vessels of every description:

From United States south of the Capes of Virginia.....	116
West Indies and South America.....	251
England and Scotland.....	87
Europe, north of, and including France.....	41
Europe, south of France and the Mediterranean.....	43
Africa and East Indies.....	77

Total.....615

Of the whole number inspected during the year only seven, or a little more than one per cent., had sickness of a quarantinable character on board, and were detained at the station. Of these, five had smallpox and two ship fever. In all, ten persons were removed to the hospital; six with smallpox and three with ship fever. One was not sick, but had been especially exposed to smallpox. All of the sick recovered. The length of time the vessels were detained from which the above sick were taken, varied from fifteen hours to three days. The revenue derived from vessels in fees amounted to $3970. Four of the vessels included in the list were ships of war, and, by courtesy, passed without fee. The amount collected for board and medical care of patients above mentioned, was $163 97. Whole amount collected and passed to the City Treasurer, $4133 97.

Having at present no accommodations on Gallop's Island, except for smallpox patients, and being liable to need other and different accommodations during the summer season, I would also recommend the construction of at least two more hospitals—one for yellow fever and the other for ship fever. Should cholera present itself, even a third building, or a ship, or tents would be needed. There are several buildings upon the island which, in their present dilapidated condition, are unsightly and useless and ought to be torn down. For many years the boarding of vessels and transferring of patients to the quarantine hospital was done in an open row boat. There were many times when this method, though possible, was unsafe. At times it was impossible. The new steamer "Samuel Little," which was built and placed upon the station last season, has fully met a need long felt and the quarantine work is now done with comparative comfort.

There are remaining in the hospital four patients, one with smallpox, the others convalescing from the low condition in which the disease left them several weeks ago. There has been collected for board of patients not having a settlement in the city, $1,451 54. This has been paid to the City Treasurer. A recapitulation of moneys paid into the City Treasury is as follows:

For fees for vessels.....	$3,970 00
For board of patients from vessels.....	163 97
For board of patients not having settlement in the city.....	1,451 54
Total.....	$5,585 51

On November 21st, 1872, Dr. Thomas Kittredge was appointed to act with the Assistant Port Physician in the care of those sent to the island with smallpox. The appointment was a fortunate one; his recent election as Assistant Port Physician was fully merited.

Although it falls to me to make this report, it is but just to remind you that the credit of the successfully executed work of the year is another's. I refer to Dr. S. H. Durgin of your Board. I trust that the high standard of integrity and faithfulness of the past will be maintained during the coming year.

REPORT OF THE CITY SOLICITOR.

The annual report of the City Solicitor was received and laid on the table to be printed. The report gives a list of all the suits and legal proceedings to which the city of Boston is party, pending at the time of his last report or since instituted, with a statement of the causes of action, the courts wherein the several cases are pending, and the action that has been had on them respectively.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses reported a list of nine billiard licenses and one license for intelligence office, for renewal. Accepted.

Of James Nash, for a wooden stable on Bolton street, between E and A streets.

Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of W. R. Gerrish, for stable on Atlantic street. Accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, submitted a resolve and order authorizing his Honor the Mayor to execute and deliver to John G. Cushing and others a release of all the city's interest in, and to any land now or lately belonging to said grantors, said land having been taken in the widening of Milk street.

The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, submitted a resolve and order, giving notice to the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation, F. Haven and others, trustees, Boston Water Power Company, William Gray, the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, and all other persons interested as owners, etc., to remove and carry away all buildings and obstructions projecting over the line of West Chester park, as established by the Board of Street Commissioners before the twenty-third of July, and empowering the Committee on Streets to enforce the same.

The resolve and order were read twice and passed. Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, submitted reports as follows:

On petition of proprietors of India wharf, for change in assessment of betterments on Atlantic avenue—leave to withdraw.

Orders to pay S. S. Perkins fourteen hundred and fourteen dollars for land taken in widening Pearl street; to pay Joshua P. Preston sixty-three hundred and fifty dollars for land taken in widening Congress street; to pay Aaron C. Baldwin twenty-three thousand and sixty dollars for land taken by widening Essex street; to pay Joshua P. Preston ten thousand eight hundred and twenty-one dollars for land taken in widening Purchase street; to pay Cornelia V. and James V. Parker twelve thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars for land taken from estate of Charles M. Parker in widening Milk street; to pay the heirs of Edmund P. Dolbeare nineteen thousand two hundred and ninety-three dollars and seventy-five cents for land taken in widening Broad street; to pay Henry Lee twelve hundred dollars for land taken in widening Bedford street; and thirteen hundred dollars for land taken in widening Lincoln street; to pay Lydia A. G. Ellsou seven hundred dollars for land taken in widening Cottage street.

The reports were accepted and the orders were read twice and passed.

ORDERS READ ONCE.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

On the motion of Alderman Emery—

Ordered, That the lot of land on Swett street purchased by the city of Boston, containing 11,090 square feet, together with the building located thereon, be placed in charge of the Committee on Public Lands, and that they be directed to lease the same as in their judgment may be for the best interests of the city.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Streets be and they hereby are authorized in the settlement of damages to the estate of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company on account of the widening of Congress street, between Water and State streets, to purchase the entire estate belonging to said company on the corner of State and Congress streets for the sum of three hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars; said purchase to be upon such conditions as shall be agreed upon by the said committee, and the expense of the same to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That during the recess of the Common Council the Joint Standing Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings be authorized to permit the erection of wooden buildings of larger dimensions than those authorized by the ordinance, upon such terms and conditions as they may deem advisable.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to remove the fence recently erected on Ruggles street, at the westerly corner of Tremont and Ruggles streets, and set the same back on the true line of the street.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to build a retaining wall on Pynchon street, and to grade said street where widened by the Board of Street Commissioners; also to reset the edgestones and repave the gutters and sidewalks on said street.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the gutters on the southerly side of Longwood avenue.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That Hook and Ladder Company No. 1 of this city have permission to leave the city for three days in the month of August next, as a fire company; provided that they furnish substitutes to perform the duty in their absence, acceptable to the Chief-Engineer.

Ordered, That upon the payment to the city by C. E. Wiggin, of the sum of fifty-five hundred and seventy, and twenty-seven hundredths dollars, referees' award; less costs and interests to Benjamin Bradley, holding a lease upon an estate of said Wiggin on which Hanover street was widened, the City Solicitor be and he hereby is authorized to discharge the execution held by the city upon said Wiggin for the damages upon said leasehold.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the report of the Cochituate Water Board on increase of hydrants and water service in various sections of the city (City Doc. No. 92), was taken from the table and sent down.

ARTILLERY FIRING ON THE COMMON.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the reports, majority and minority, of Committee on Ordinances, with ordinance to prohibit the discharge of artillery on the Common without proper authority (City Doc. No. 93), were taken from the table.

On the question of accepting the majority report and passing the ordinance, Alderman Quincy called for the yeas and nays, which were as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Power, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins—11.

Nays—0.

JULY 17, 1873.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at 1 P. M., today, Alderman Cutter, chairman, presiding.

APPOINTMENT CONFIRMED.

Special Police Officer without pay--J. H. Richardson.

FROM THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The following papers were received from the School Committee:

Ordered, That the Oliver Primary Schoolhouse, on Summer street, East Boston, be and hereby is surrendered to the City Council.

Referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings.

Ordered, That the City Council be requested to provide additional accommodations for the Minot School.

Ordered, That the City Council be requested to provide additional accommodations in the new grammar school district in Washington Village, Ward 12.

Ordered, That the City Council be requested to purchase a lot of land, and erect thereon a primary school building of not less than eight rooms, for the accommodation of scholars in the Lawrence School District.

Ordered, That the City Council be requested to provide additional accommodations for primary schools in the Dorchester Everett District.

Severally referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Public Instruction.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Of Thomas H. McDouald, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for five horses, on 13 Gardner avenue, Ward 15.

Referred to the Committee on Health, on the part of the Board.

Of Faxon Bros., that edgestones may be set and sidewalk laid between 143 and 147 South street.

Referred to the Committee on Sewers.

Of John Preston, for permission to make an addition to his manufactory on South street, Commercial Point, Ward 16.

Referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

FROM THE HARBOR COMMISSIONERS.

Notice was received from the Harbor Commissioners of an application to that Board from the South Boston Yacht Club for leave to build a pile structure in tide-water at South Boston Point, and appointing July 26, at 11 A. M., as the time fixed for a hearing thereon.

Referred to the Committee on Harbors on the part of this Board.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Ordered, That there be paid to the several companies enumerated in the certificate of the adjutant-general, dated July 9, the sums to which they are respectively entitled for inspection duty in May last, said sums amounting to fifteen hundred and forty dollars, to be charged to the appropriation for Militia Bounty.

[The companies named are Companies B, D, E, F, G and K, First Regiment Infantry, and Batteries A and B Light Artillery.]

Passed.

Ordered, That the lot of land on Swett street, as purchased by the city of Boston, October 22, 1872, and containing 111,090 square feet, together with the buildings located thereon, be placed in charge of the Committee on Public Lands, and that they be directed to lease the same upon such terms and conditions as they in their judgment may deem for the best interest of the city.

Alderman Clark moved to amend by striking out all after the word directed, and insert the words "to raise the grade so as to secure the proper drainage of the same."

Alderman Emery thought there could be no objection to the amendment.

Alderman Clark said the city had $75,000 of land, and the best thing to be done is to put it in condition to be occupied. He proposed to further amend the order by inserting the words, "to dispose of the buildings in such manner as they may deem for the best interests of the city," before the other amendment offered by him.

Alderman Gibson thought it could be used as a lumber yard, and might be advantageously disposed of.

Alderman Clark said his object was to get the land filled up, which could be done at a trifling expense.

Alderman Brown was of the opinion that it could be disposed of for a lumber wharf, and thought it would be well to allow the committee to sell it.

Alderman Clark thought the committee had better see what could be done with the lot first.

Alderman Gibson agreed with Alderman Clark that it had better be filled up first.

Alderman Sayward hoped neither the amendment nor order would pass until some other place had been provided for a smallpox hospital.

Alderman Clark said the order contemplates the abandonment of the buildings for smallpox purposes. Now the grade is too low for occupancy. The Board of Health consider the buildings undesirable for use in any contingency. He merely wished to secure good drainage and dispose of the buildings and lands.

Alderman Brown said if the committee were not obliged to sell the buildings he would not object. He thought the buildings had better remain there. There was no danger of smallpox from them. They should be made as useful as possible.

Alderman Clark said the committee had power to dispose of them for the best interest of the city.

Alderman Emery said the difficulty would be in raising the building.

Alderman Clark--The buildings have already been raised to grade.

Alderman Gibson thought it was all right and hoped the order would pass.

The amendments were adopted and the order was passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the petitions of John Le Baron, Martin E. Moran and Sarah Wran, for victualler's licenses; of C. Mahan for billiard license and of Martin E. Moran for innholder's license. Severally accepted.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Public Instruction, to whom were referred the orders authorizing the Committee on Public Buildings to erect a primary schoolhouse on Newbury and Exeter streets, at an estimated cost of forty thousand dollars, having considered the subject, reported that the orders ought to pass in a new draft, as appended.

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to erect a primary schoolhouse on the lot of land owned by the city on Newbury and Exeter streets, in accordance with plans approved therefor by the Committee on Public Instruction; the expense of erecting said building not to exceed the sum of forty thousand dollars.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $40,000, the same to be applied to the erection of a primary schoolhouse on Newbury and Exeter streets.

Alderman Power would like to have the matter laid over, in order to look into it. Some people objected to having the schoolhouse located there.

Alderman Clark said that a schoolhouse is needed there very much, and it ought to be built at once. The people there pay their taxes, and pay them liberally, and if there is any place in Boston where a public schoolhouse is needed it is on the Back Bay. He had been obliged to send his children to a private school because there is no public school there.

Alderman Gibson remarked that as the pupils were not there now he supposed the Alderman was counting on the future.

Alderman Clark rejoined that there are pupils there now and there are more to come. It was proposed to build a house large enough for both a grammar and primary school.

Alderman Brown said he would be happy to vote forty thousand dollars for a schoolhouse on the Back Bay as soon as it would be filled up. He did not see any reason why the order should not pass at the present time.

Alderman Gaffield said there is a great call for a public schoolhouse on that ground. The commissioner for the sale of the Commonwealth's lands said there were frequent inquiries among purchasers why there was not a schoolhouse provided there. The Commonwealth gave the land at a very low price that this schoolhouse might be erected. The order contemplates the erection of a small building, and prospectively provides for a large house, which shall contain both a primary and grammar school.

Alderman Power said if the schoolhouse is not needed money ought not to be spent for it. Many people who live there do not patronize the public schools, and many think a public school is not needed there at all. He did n't object to having schools where they are required.

Alderman Clark insisted that there is great need of a public schoolhouse there. The territory is filling up very rapidly with dwelling houses, and where there are dwelling houses there are very naturally children who want to go to school. Many gentlemen had spoken to him about having a school there, and he had done all that he could to have one located there last year.

The orders were read twice and passed.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave the sidewalks on the northerly side of Washington street, between Eliot square and Pyncheon street, and report to this Board a schedule of the expenses thereof.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to remove all obstructions remaining over the line of Washington street, between Elmwood and Pyncheon streets.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones on Columbia and Hancock streets, between Stoughton and Bird streets, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Public Buildings, under the direction of the Committee on Public Buildings, be authorized to repair the cellar of Engine House No. 10; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to furnish temporary accommodations for primary schools in the Comins District, the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Orders to pay Sampson & Davenport $135 for land taken from Alexander H. Read by the extension of Franklin street to Pearl street; to pay E. M. Cate and W. A. Nickerson $10,960 for land taken in widening Federal street; to pay Sampson & Davenport $2400 for land taken in the name of Alexander H. Read in the widening of Congress street.

Orders to vacate and remove obstructions by August 10, giving notice to the heirs of Joseph Sargent, corner of Dorchester and G streets; Michael Havey, Haynes street; James Leeds, James Parker, F. H. Thompson, Congress street; heirs of John Tappan, Moses Williams, Ellen Stearns, James Lawrence, trustee, James Lawrence, James Vila, J. C. Howe and J. J. French, Pearl street; James Leeds, James Lawrence, Ellen Stearns, Milk, Congress and Pearl streets.

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Streets be authorized to grant a right of way to estates of A. A. Burrage and the heirs of Nathaniel Whiting, situated on Oliver street, over the rear portion of the estate owned by the city of Boston fronting on Washington square, upon such terms and conditions as said committee may deem best for the interest of the city.

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be requested to furnish estimates of the expense of laying out and extending Fayette court forty feet in width from Washington street to Tremont street; also of extending Hayward place through Rowe place to Kingston street.

On motion of Alderman Clark the order authorizing Committee on Streets to purchase the estate of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, corner of State and Congress streets, for $375,000, was taken from the table.

This order was presented by Alderman Clark at the last meeting, read once, and laid over on motion of Alderman Brown, who desired time to investigate the case.

Alderman Brown said he had made the contemplated inquiries, and although he thought the price pretty large, he did n't know that the city could do any better than make the purchase as proposed by the order. He had seen two of the trustees of the institution, and was satisfied that if the offer was not accepted by this Board, the city might be obliged to pay more than the amount named in the order. He should, therefore, vote for the order.

The order was passed.

MUSIC ON THE COMMON.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the order for the appointment of a joint special committee to provide music on the Common was taken from the table.

Alderman Clark hoped the order would pass, inasmuch as this would be the last opportunity the Council would have to act upon it, and it may as well be decided now by the Board, leaving the Council to take any such action as they might deem proper.

Alderman Power moved that the order be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Clark said he did n't suppose it required any argument to vote down that motion, the feeling of the Board being too well known to lead him to suppose such a motion would be entertained.

Alderman Power's motion was rejected.

The vote on the passage of the order was as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbens—7.

Nays—Aldermen Brown, Cutter, Emery and Power—4.

Not receiving a two-thirds vote the order was rejected.

On motion of Alderman Emery, the report (leave to withdraw) on petition of Suffolk Kindling Wood Company, which had been accepted by the Common Council, was taken from the table.

The Board voted to concur.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held at eight o'clock this evening, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The report of the Cochituate Water Board on extension of water pipes and the annual report of the Board of Health were accepted and placed on file.

Petitions of Co. D, Thomas Moley, George H. Davis et al., and John Preston, and the requests and order from the School Committee were severally referred, in concurrence.

Resolves and orders from the Board of Street Commissioners for widening Pleasant street from Columbus avenue to Eliot street, at an adjudged expense of $12,236, and for the extension of Eliot street to Columbus avenue, at an adjudged expense of $56,752, were referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Streets.

Order authorizing the Mayor to execute a release to J. P. Cushing et al., of certain land taken in widening Milk street.

Passed, under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7.

Order to discharge execution of the city upon C. E. Wiggins on Hanover street, on terms in said order set forth.

Order authorizing Committee on Survey, etc., of Buildings to permit the erection of wooden buildings during recess of Common Council.

Report and order that Hook and Ladder Company No. 1 be permitted to leave the city for three days in August.

Report and an ordinance in addition to an ordinance in relation to the Fire Department.

Severally passed, in concurrence.

Report and an ordinance in relation to the discharge of cannon upon the Common or public grounds. (City Doc. No. 93, 1873.)

Mr. Wells of Ward 3, at the request of a member of the committee, who had to leave town and who wished to present a minority report, moved to lay the order on the table. The motion prevailed.

The report (inexpedient) to erect a clock tower on the Ticknor Schoolhouse came from the Aldermen recommended to the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings.

Mr. Warren of Ward 12 said there is no place in South Boston where a clock is needed more than in Washington Village. This place was on high ground nearly at the foot of Dorchester street. There is no clock within half a mile of that place. He hoped the report would be recommended. If they deferred the matter till the new schoolhouse is built, and the clock is put there, the location will not be near so good as the old one would be, nor would it be so satisfactory to the residents of that neighborhood.

Mr. Upham of Ward 16 said the matter was before the Committee on Fire Alarms last May, and they were unanimously of the opinion that the clock should be placed on the house, and an order was reported to that effect. Subsequently an order was introduced in the other branch that the committee be authorized to raise the building. The population of Washington Village would be very much accommodated by the clock, the striking part of which will operate on the fire-alarm bell. He moved that the Council concur in the action of the Aldermen.

The Council voted to recede from its former action and concur in the recommendation of the report.

Order to permit a right of way to estates of A. A. Burrage and the heirs of Nathaniel Whiting, on Oliver street, over land of the city on Washington square. Passed in concurrence.

Order concerning repairs of cellar of Engine House No. 10. Passed in concurrence, under suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1.

Order for providing temporary accommodations for primary schools in the Cornish District. Passed in concurrence, under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. West of Ward 16.

Order requesting the Board of Street Commissioners to furnish estimates of the expense of laying out and extending Fayette court forty feet in width from Washington street to Tremont street; also of extending Hayward place through Rowe place to Kingston street.

On the question of giving the order a second reading, Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 asked whether this had come from any committee. He had first seen a copy of the order this afternoon. It is well known that the Street Commissioners have been considering this matter. It happens to affect Ward 15, which has been very much troubled during the last year by fires.

As a representative of that ward he would like to know the source of this order and the reason for taking the matter out of the hands of the Commissioners. There are various reasons for and against opening a new street from Washington to Tremont street, and it has for some time been the subject of a quarrel. No hearing has been held, the people have not been heard, and it is not proper in such a case to pass upon this matter. He desired that the matter should lie over while being considered by the proper tribunal. To pass it in this way and get a snap judgment would be entirely out of order. Ward 5 has had a great deal of trouble about streets, and if he could have had his way he would have seized the whole of the burnt district and laid it out new. The afflictions of that ward are known all over the city and he could only account for it on the old Scripture doctrine that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth." If any member could explain the order he should like him to do so.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said the Committee on Streets have had this matter under consideration for some time. Petitions representing millions of dollars had been received asking that these streets be laid out. At a meeting of this committee, yesterday, the members of the Street Commissioners were asked the reasons for not presenting a plan and an estimate of the cost to the City Council. The reasons given were not satisfactory to the committee, and that is why this request is made.

Mr. Shaw wanted to know what right the Street Committee have to act upon petitions which are before the Street Commissioners. They have no right to act upon such matters until after the Commissioners have voted.

Mr. Flynn—The Committee felt that, representing the people, they had the right to suggest or forward any schemes that would benefit the people. The Street Commissioners have refused to furnish any estimates to the City Council, and this order was put in asking them to do so.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The great objection to putting that street through is the expense. It is certainly desirable that any information as to the expense should be presented to the Council. And it is but fair that the Commissioners be asked to furnish it. This is a matter of common knowledge. The Street Committee are supposed to read the newspapers, and to know what is said. It is perfectly proper for the City Government to act on this matter and to seek information before acting.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 moved to amend by adding the words "and widening Avery street."

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said there is no territory within forty feet of Avery street which has been scorched by fire. No one thinks it would be judicious to widen Avery street. What the Street Committee ask for is the expense of widening Fayette court and continuing it through to Tremont street. This information they want in order to form their opinions on the project before them. The Street Committee have no intention of widening Avery street now, because it is not within any burnt district.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—This extension of Fayette court is like buying something that is cheap. I don't believe in the necessity of cutting through a place that has been burned simply because the land is cheap.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—It may be a matter of common notoriety, but it is no legitimate way to bring it before the Common Council. When matters are brought before the Committee on Streets then it is time to act on them. Because several rich gentlemen want this matter carried through is no reason why it should be adopted by a snap judgment. It seems to be intended to snap this matter upon us because it is supposed to be the last meeting of the season. But there is another reason why we should object. I was familiar with that district before the gentleman from Ward 6 was born. I have lived there thirty-five years, and I almost said I have travelled every inch of it. When I ask that this matter may be laid over that gentlemen may have time to think of it, it seems too reasonable a request to be denied. I have heard some of the Commissioners say it would be very expensive to put the widening through Avery street. The people have not been heard before the Street Committee yet. The gentleman says the committee sent for the Commissioners to come before them; that is perfectly right, but the people have never been heard. Now, as in all such matters, I am opposed to rushing anything through the City Government until the people have had time to consider it. I was about to move to lay the order on the table, but if the gentleman wishes to speak I won't do so.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—It seems to me that the gentleman in representing that this is a snap judgment unintentionally conveys a wrong impression. He would convey the opinion that something would be done to imperil his constituents. I don't know how many of his constituents own property.

Mr. Shaw—I rise to a point of order. If the gentleman alludes to my constituents I desire an explanation.

Mr. Perkins—That is not a point of order, only a little interruption. The thing is simply this: The Street Committee have considered the subject of widening the streets in the smaller burnt district. The Street Commissioners have already passed two orders, and there is one other question whether a street shall be run through opposite Hayward place. I rather agree with the gentleman from Ward 5; I am not in favor of running the street through opposite Hayward place, an estimate for which the committee have asked for. But that is no reason why an estimate should not be made. It simply enables the Council to form an intelligent opinion. The gentleman from Ward 14 also asks for an amendment to furnish an estimate for widening a street outside of the burnt district. No one has petitioned that this should be done. It is generally a rule that we should not do anything till some one has made a public move. The gentleman is trying to do something that can be done a hundred years from now just as well as now. I don't care a copper whether one street or the other is widened, but I do consider that any information which the Council asks for the Commissioners ought to grant.

Mr. Shaw—It is perfectly well known that the Commissioners have agreed to report against the widening of this street; they have voted as a whole to go against the extension of Fayette to Tremont street. What is the use of trying to hoodwink this Council? I have it from the lips of the Commissioners themselves.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I desire to ask the gentleman if he is aware of the fact that the Commissioners had laid out this street and printed the estimate, and were ready to submit it to the City Council? Why they did not is what the City Council is not aware of.

Mr. Shaw—I have no doubt it was done on the hasty judgment of the Commissioners, and indeed of a great many petitioners. They did make such a report, but upon their attention being called to the state of matters today and the large expense of widening streets, they decided that if the street was to be cut through from Washington street to Tremont street, Fayette court was not the street to cut through. That being the case, when the Commissioners say among themselves they do not consider it for the public interest to have any street cut through, or if they did it certainly would not be this street, we are bound to respect their opinion. It is the legitimate business of the Committee on Streets to consider those matters only when they are referred to them, and they have no right to take up anything outside. I object to this as a matter of principle. The Board of Street Commissioners are chosen to investigate this matter of streets. The people are not ready for this proposition and this order would give it a semi-official sanction. I have not the least shadow of an idea that this matter can be carried. If we are to have a street through there let it be somewhere nearer Bedford streets. When I am told by the Commissioners that the cost of one will be double the other, I am opposed to it. All I ask is time for the people to consider and reflect.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I don't know anything about the question, except what I have heard here tonight, but I can't see how it is any violation of principle for the Council to obtain information on any matter on which it may be called to act, either now or in the future. It is right and proper for them to ask for information from the properly constituted board. It commits the Council to nothing, and it is the proper way to get the information asked for. I don't understand how the gentleman speaks as the mouthpiece of the Commissioners. I am satisfied to receive information from the gentleman from Ward 5, but I don't think the Commissioners should report to the Council through any one member.

Mr. Shaw disclaimed being the mouth piece of the Commissioners. He again urged that the Committee on Streets had no right to speak as a committee on any matter not referred to them. He moved to lay the order on the table.

The motion was rejected.

The question being on Mr. Jones's amendment, Mr. Denny of Ward 9 said the estimates are already in possession of the Street Commissioners, and consequently there would be no labor or expense. If this would violate any principle let us do it and have a precedent.

Mr. Jones remarked that his object in offering the amendment was simply to save time. He would, however, withdraw it.

The order having been read a second time, Mr. Jones of Ward 14 said he had no objection to the passage of the order, but it would be some time before we can act upon the subject in view of the proposed adjournment for six weeks, and parties who intend to build on that street would be very much inconvenienced.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said it was for this very reason the order was offered. No permit had been given for building on that street, and the object was to save time.

The order was passed, in concurrence.

Report and order for the erection of a schoolhouse at the corner of Newbury and Exeter streets. Passed in concurrence, under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. West of Ward 16—yeas 46, nays 0.

Order for the grading of land and disposing of the Swett-street hospital property.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 inquired if the order came from any committee. He moved it be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Train of Ward 13 hoped the order would not be postponed; the hospital is an eyesore and a nuisance to the citizens of Ward 13.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said that some time ago the Committee on Health decided not to dispose of the property. While there it is very little expense, and if the Board of Health desire to dispose of it they can do so.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 thought the property good for wharfage, or it would be a good site for a stable for the Paving Department.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I think it was last year we got caught in the same way in which we may get caught again. We had a smallpox hospital in the rear of the City Hospital, and for a year or two there was a quarrel between the Committee on Public Lands and the trustees of the hospital about the control of it. The committee finally triumphed and the trustees resigned. Now don't let us repeat the same experience. It is better to err on the safe side.

Mr. Train of Ward 13—It has been pronounced unfit for a smallpox hospital, and certainly it would not do for a cholera hospital. The order is to give discretion to the committee. The property can be graded and they can sell it if they see fit.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—It has been proposed to extend Swett street from Washington Village to this very point, and all this expense of grading the land could be done when that street is laid out. There is no reason for doing it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 could see no necessity for grading the property. He hoped the committee would not make the mistake of selling it or putting it into the hands of any committee to sell.

The order was indefinitely postponed.

Order for the purchase of land from the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company for $375,000. Passed under a suspension of the rules on motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6.

THE COUNTY JAIL.

Report and order to authorize the Committee on County Buildings to expend a further sum of $3000 in addition to the amount heretofore authorized for the repairs on the County Jail, etc. Passed.

ENLARGEMENT OF CITY HALL.

Report and order authorizing building 23 Pemher-ton square to be hired for offices for the city, at an annual rent of $3000.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 offered the following as a substitute:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to hire, on such terms and conditions as they may deem best for the interests of the city, the two upper stories of what is known as Niles Block, and connect said building with City Hall by a bridge; the expense to be charged to the appropriations for Public Buildings.

Mr. Flynn had seen Mr. Niles, who stated that there are no leases on the two upper stories, and he would be glad to lease them to the city on the same terms as they are now occupied. There were thirty-two offices, and the rental would be about $3250. The only room in City Hall which would be disturbed would be that of the City Registrar. This would make all the offices connected with City Hall.

The substitute was adopted, and the order as amended was passed.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Order authorizing Committee on Reorganization of Fire Department to visit other cities to obtain information regarding their several fire departments.

The question being on its passage, Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 asked how long the committee intended to sit.

Mr. West of Ward 16—The committee have not voted to make this visit; they simply desire the power in case they should wish to go.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I would ask if a vote to go was passed in the committee prior to the presentation of this order.

Mr. West—I think not.

Mr. Perkins—I may infer then that the order does not come from the committee.

Mr. West—He can infer what he pleases.

Mr. Perkins—I know the matter was not discussed in committee until after that order. I should like to know what good purpose is to be served by their going anywhere—by their going West.

Mr. West—The order simply contemplates receiving authority to visit other cities if the committee deem fit. If the committee want to go they will, and if the city don't pay their bills the members will do it themselves.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I hope the committee will be granted a thousand dollars to investigate this matter. When the committee returns I think the gentleman from Ward 6 will change his mind.

Mr. Perkins—Then I am to believe this order means a long life to the head of the department; that the Council is going to adjourn before it can act on the reorganization of the Fire Department. I know, from conversation with the chairman of the committee, that he is ready to report, and I have reason to believe that the members are equally ready. Rumor states that at the meeting yesterday, the committee voted on the subject referred to them, and yet the Council is asked to pass an order that they may go where they please. The Council is to adjourn for the summer that Mr. Damrell may have a long life, and no action shall be taken on this matter until the summer vacation is over. I am ready to forego my summer vacation for the public interest. This order is a deathblow to reform in the Fire Department.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I desire to say that the gentleman's remarks are entirely wrong. The matter of using a thousand dollars has not been discussed by the committee to any considerable extent. They have no proposition to visit any city, but if we can serve the city of Boston by visiting New York or Chicago, we shall go, and I believe the city will sustain us. The gentleman has stated that this order means a long life to the head of the department. It means nothing of the kind. The head of the department has not been considered in any way. I want my word to go as authority on that particular question, because the gentleman from Ward 6 has put it down very strongly. I wish to positively state the reverse. The committee will go to New Orleans, St. Louis or New York if they think the interests of the city of Boston require it. I leave it to the common sense of this Council if this committee could not act better after observing the management of departments in other cities. Still I think it very doubtful if we shall go.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I am glad to see the members of the committee are coming out on this question. I would now like to ask the gentleman from Ward 9 whether this order comes from the committee, or whether the committee, at any meeting prior to the time when this order was introduced into the Council, by vote authorized its introduction.

Mr. Denny—This committee will sit until they thoroughly consider the reorganization of the department. I don't propose to answer any questions in regard to the discussions of the committee. But I stand by that order.

Mr. Perkins—In my experience it has been very frequent for members to be asked if orders came from the committee.

Mr. Denny—I have given good reasons why I will not answer that question. I indorse the order, as does each member of the committee. I don't think it a proper subject for further discussion.

Mr. Jones hoped the order would prevail, as the committee would get more valuable information by visiting other cities than in any other way. He moved the previous question.

The main question was ordered, and the order was passed.

PETITIONS.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 presented the petition of James M. Hunt, for compensation for injuries from falling into a gulchway on Bremen street, East Boston, April 19, 1873. Referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. Boles of Ward 12 presented an order for the paving of Broadway with granite blocks, between Dorchester and I streets. Ordered to be sent up.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, to whom were referred the resolves and orders for the extension of Eliot street to Columbus avenue at an estimated expense of $56,752, and for the widening of Pleasant street from Columbus avenue to Eliot street extended, at an estimated expense of $12,256, reported that the orders ought to pass.

The rules were suspended and the orders were passed.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16, from the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department, to whom was recom-mitted the order of the City Council of June 19th, for them to report an estimate of the expense for repairs on the fire boat, having carefully considered the same, find that the repairs amount to the sum of $3888 98. The committee recommend the passage of the original order, authorizing the committee to make the necessary repairs and alterations; the expense to be charged to the appropriations for the Fire Department.

The order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9.

Ordered, That the allowance for rent paid to companies B and D, First Battalion of Infantry, at William's Hall be discontinued from and after July 1st, and that the same be paid to said companies for rent of armory at Minot Hall, corner of Springfield and Washington streets, beginning July 1st.

Passed under a suspension of the rules—yeas 46, nays 0.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 offered the following:

Ordered, That the salaries of the teachers employed by the School Committee in the school called the Normal School be allowed as follows:

Larkin Dunton, three months, at $291 66.....	$874 98
Jane H. Stiekney, three months, at $125.....	375 00
Florence W. Stetson, three months, at $83.....	249 99
Bertha W. Hintz, three months, at $83.....	249 99
Annie J. Stoddard, three months, at $58 33.....	174 99
Total.....	$1,924 95

Mr. Brackett—It is well-known that a question has been raised in regard to the legality of this school, but whatever may be the decision, these teachers were employed prior to the raising of the question. They should be paid for their services, whatever may be the fate of the school in the future. I understand that in case an order of this kind is passed an injunction will be applied for to test the question of the legality of the school, so the gentlemen need not have any fears of having to pay the money just now.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 thought Mr. Brackett wrong in his chronology.

Mr. Brackett said the school year ends on the first of September, and the order is to pay the salaries which the city agreed to pay. He moved a suspension of the rules that the order might be passed.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The Mayor has already vetoed an order for the fitting up of the Normal School, on the ground that it was illegally constituted. I can't see with what propriety we can pay the teachers from the first of June to the first of September when the school had no legal existence at that time. It seems to me not to be right to pass an order to allow extra privileges to some citizens who are more careful of the public interests than we are. It is better not to pass this order. I presume these persons have performed services up to the first of June, but this is an attempt to pay them for a quarter when they have not worked. It is simply in accordance with the theory that prevails in the School Committee.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would like to ask the gentleman, as an astute lawyer, if the city, having employed these persons, is not bound to pay them.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 explained that the teachers are hired for a year, which ends on the 1st of September.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—Inasmuch as these teachers are hired by the year, we are bound to pay them for so much of the year as has elapsed, although, as the City Solicitor has decided that the school is illegal, he must have decided that the employment of those teachers was illegal.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 said that as it may not be well to act on this matter in a hurry, he moved that it be referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

The motion prevailed.

FIRE ALARMS.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 offered the following:

Ordered, That the order of the City Council approved by the Mayor, May 31, 1873, authorizing the Superintendent of Fire Alarms to place a bell tower, bell and fire-alarm apparatus in the Prescott Schoolhouse, be rescinded and the following orders substituted:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Public Buildings, under the direction of the committee on that department, be directed to place a bell tower on the new Primary Schoolhouse in Princeton street; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for that building.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Fire Alarms, under the direction of the committee on that department, be directed to place a bell and striking apparatus on the new Primary Schoolhouse in Princeton street; the same to be charged to the appropriations for Fire Department.

Mr. Pease explained the occasion of offering the order, and at the request of Mr. Davis of Ward 14 and Mr. Upham of Ward 16, the matter was referred to the Committee on Fire Alarms.

ENLARGEMENT OF QUINCY MARKET.

Mr. Shaw offered the following:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings consider and report on the expediency of adding one or more stories to the Quincy-Market Building.

Mr. Shaw—Every one who is familiar with Quincy-Market building knows that it is but two stories in height. There are twenty-seven thousand feet of land covered by that building. The lower story is rented to the market men, and the upper story is leased for a short time for nine thousand dollars per annum. It is perfectly feasible to add one or two stories to that building and a much larger income would be thus obtained. Having passed the building a week ago it occurred to me that a large amount could be received. A great deal of room in the public buildings is not utilized. Matters of this kind should be considered more fully than they are. My friend referred the other night to the vacant bricks and mortar in Chardon street, and I took occasion to visit that building the next day, and I found it about half occupied.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 raised the point of order, that the question under discussion was not the Charity Building.

Mr. Shaw—I was just illustrating my position. I undertake to say that the Committee on Public Buildings are not attending to their business. The order I introduced at the last meeting having gone to the tomb of the Capulets, I am glad to see the order passed tonight for enlarging the accommodations in City Hall.

Mr. Caton raised the point of order that if Mr. Shaw was making an attack on the Committee on Public Buildings, he should like to reply.

The Chair ruled that Mr. Shaw's remarks were a little wide of the subject, and he must confine himself to the subject of Quincy Market building.

Mr. Shaw—I am simply giving my reasons for offering this order. I find other buildings are not used as they ought to be. Now we are paying a large amount for armories, and I would suggest that the Quincy Market be built upon and one or more stories used for these armories. I think some reconstruction ought to be had with regard to the public buildings. When these questions are coming up here day after day, it is time for the heads of departments to be looking about to see where we can get more room. I don't propose to remove any of these highly respectable bureaus down to Quincy Market. We are very much afraid of running out of the old ruts round about City Hall. Instead of paying rent for armories, let us take our own buildings and enlarge them.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 could not see the necessity of enlarging the market when we have so many public buildings unoccupied.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 explained that the city has no control of the Charity Building.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said it is very true that the city has nothing to do with the Charity Building. He approved of enlarging, but the gentleman from Ward 5 is wandering too far. The way is to build a new court house and use the old one for public offices, having a bridge connecting with City Hall. Quincy Market will take care of itself. The gentleman ought to amend his order and start for a new court house and let City Hall be enlarged by tacking on the old Court House.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—As there has not been any application for additional room I think the discussion of the subject a little immature. I move the subject be indefinitely postponed.

The motion prevailed.

MUSIC ON THE COMMON.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 offered the following:

Ordered, That five members of the Common Council, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, be a Committee of Arrangements for furnishing music on the Common and other parts of the city, at an expense not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars; to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 suggested that, as one order for $2500 had been rejected, this one had better be made $2600, and he moved such amendment.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said as it had been charged that the morals of the community would be ruined by free concerts, he hoped the order would lie on the table, and he made such a motion, which was rejected.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11—My object in offering this was that in all probability it would go through the next meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 hoped the Council had manhood enough to stand on the original order. No good music could be furnished for three thousand dollars.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 said the appropriation of $2500 at this time would enable them to furnish as much music as they would want, as the season had partly elapsed.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 agreed with the gentleman from Ward 3. The Common Council has passed an order appropriating money for music, and the Board of Aldermen did not concur. There are two objections to this order,—first the Aldermen cannot pass an order for $2500, and, second, it should originate in that Board. Let us not send orders after orders to the Aldermen to be rejected.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 did not see how the idea of manhood is involved. If they could get one more Alderman, as he understood they could, the order would pass.

Mr. Perkins referred members to the report of the afternoon's proceedings of the Aldermen.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the amendment making the amount $2600 was adopted, and, on motion of Mr. Caton, the rules were suspended and the order was passed—38 yeas 7 nays as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Abbott, Brackett, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Harrington, Holmes, Hughes, Jones, Kingsley, Lamb, Madden, Marston, McCue, Morse, Page, Pease, Pickering, Prescott, Shepard, Thacher, Train, Upham, Warren, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward—38.

Nays—Messrs. Adams, Boardman, Cudworth, Hine, Loring, Perkins, Shaw, Wells—7.

Subsequently a motion to reconsider the vote, offered by Mr. Page of Ward 9, was rejected. Mr. Wells of Ward 3 expressed the belief that when the order gets into the Board of Aldermen it will get all the reconsideration it wants.

SUMMER VACATION.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 moved that when the Council adjourn it be to the first Thursday in September at half-past seven o'clock.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 should prefer to have the Council meet next Thursday at 8 P. M., and should like the mover to give some reason for the motion.

Mr. Pease replied that it is generally understood by all members of the Council that this should be the last meeting of the season. If the gentleman wishes to open another vial of wrath on the chief-engineer, he (Mr. Pease) was willing to meet next week to give him an opportunity.

Mr. Perkins remembered that at special meetings of the Council nothing is often done, because they cannot get a two-thirds vote. He hoped the Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department would report next week, and he did not think it in accordance with public sentiment to adjourn just now without doing some work. He was sorry the motion had been made.

The motion was put and carried.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 called for a report from the Committee on Ordinances on the subject of the revision of the city charter, calling attention to the rule requiring a report within four weeks.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said the committee was not ready to report, and asked for further time, which was granted.

STONY-BROOK NUISANCE.

On motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14, the following was passed:

Ordered, That the Board of Health be requested to take such measures as they may deem necessary to abate the nuisance in Stony Brook, between Simmons and Vernon streets.

Mr. Morse of Ward 13 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Common, etc., consider the expediency of placing a granite curb around Orchard Park in place of a wooden fence.

Referred to the Committee on Commons and Squares.

On motion of Mr. West of Ward 16, the report and orders authorizing the erection of a station house for the Eleventh Police District, at an expense of $40,000, and for a loan therefor, were taken from the table and rejected by a vote of 35 yeas, 1 nay, two-thirds of all the members being required to pass it.

Mr. Caton moved that the vote be reconsidered, which was adopted, and then the orders were laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. Brackett of Ward 10, the following was passed:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be requested to consider and report on the expediency of enlarging Engine House No. 3.

Mr. Collins of Ward 2 moved to adjourn, and the Council adjourned to Thursday evening, Sept. 4, at 7½ P. M.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

JULY 21, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock this afternoon, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

Constable—W. L. Hicks, for duty in the office of the Board of Health.

Special Police Officers Without Pay—L. man Peavey, Stephen A. Holbrook, at the Post Office; Luther Moulton, corner Washington and Adams streets, Ward 16, and the vicinity; S. A. Smith, the District Telegraph Company.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

On the orders of notice on the petition of W. L. Deland, for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at 22 Congress street, and of Cummings & Carlisle, to locate an engine on the corner of Albany and Sharon streets, no objections being offered, the petitions were recommitted to the Committee on Steam Engines.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED

Of Joseph Nickerson, to be paid for land taken in the widening of Heath street, and requesting that he may have a hearing. To the Committee on Streets.

Of Caroline G. Nichols, to be paid for grade damages on Alpine street.

Of Cyrus Carpenter & Co. and others, that Union street, between North street and Hanover street, be paved with granite blocks.

Of William Frost and others, that Columbus avenue, between Church street and the railroad bridge, be watered by the city.

Of Thomas Wilkins, that Green street, Ward 16, may be graded.

Severally referred to the Committee on Paving.

Of John M. Johnson, for leave to occupy a wooden stable on Fourth street.

Of Daniel Moules, for leave to occupy a wooden stable on Greenwich street, Ward 16.

Severally referred to the Committee on Health.

A communication from the Harbor Commissioners giving notice of the application of W. R. Clark for leave to build a solid and pile structure in tide-water, at Fort Hill wharf, was referred to the Committee on Harbors.

On the petition of George W. Bowker for permission to use a stationary steam engine or caloric engine at the corner of Albany and Dedham streets, an order of notice was passed, returnable August 11, at 4 P. M.

Petition of Jacob Littlefield, that a fine of ten dollars for using hose in a stable may be refunded, because the use thereof was without his knowledge or consent and against his will. Referred to the Co-chnitate Water Board.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The following papers from the Common Council were severally acted upon, in concurrence:

Reference to the Committee on Claims of the petition of James F. Hunt, to be compensated for injuries received from a defect in Bremen street.

Reference to the Committee on Fire Alarms of orders (1) rescinding the order to place a bell tower and fire-alarm apparatus on the Prescott Schoolhouse; (2) directing the Superintendent of Public Buildings to place a bell tower on the new primary schoolhouse on Princeton street; (3) directing the Superintendent of Fire Alarms to place a bell and striking apparatus in said bell tower.

Order authorizing the Committee on Fire Department to repair and alter the fire boat, at an estimated expense of $3888 98. Passed.

Order allowing the Committee on Ordinances further time to report on revision of charter. Passed.

Order that the Board of Health be requested to abate the nuisance in Stony Brook, between Simmons and Vernon streets. Passed.

Order transferring the allowance for rent of armories occupied by companies B and D, First Battalion Infantry, M. V. M., from Williams Hall to Minot Hall. Passed, yeas 10, nays 0.

Report of Committee on Streets, that the resolve and order to widen Pleasant street, from Columbus avenue to Eliot street, and the resolve and order for extending Eliot street to Columbus avenue, ought to pass. Reports accepted and orders passed.

Order that the Committee on Public Buildings report on the expediency of enlarging Engine House No 3. Passed.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

On the question of concurring with the Council in the reference to Committee on Public Instruction of the order to pay the salaries of teachers of the Normal School, so called, to the first of September next—

Alderman Stebbins said this matter had been previously considered, and was thoroughly discussed at the time. He was a little surprised at the turn it had taken. It seemed in direct conflict with the opinion of the City Solicitor and directly opposite to the action previously had by the Common Council.

Alderman Gaffield said it was not an order to pay, but to refer to the Committee on Public Instruction.

Alderman Stebbins—It is simply an entering wedge for future action, and is intended to partly relieve the embarrassment of the School Committee. It will be remembered that when this matter was introduced before I asked the chairman of the committee if there were to be any more orders introduced here, and he replied that there were none. Now it seems that the school has been continued, and a member of the School Committee has addressed letters to each member of this Board asking that the salaries of the teachers may be paid, and the principal of the school has advertised for scholars for next year. It does not look to me as if the School Committee meant to abandon this school.

Alderman Emery—I don't think there is any great objection to referring this to any committee. I don't wish to act without having the order thoroughly examined by some committee, and the proper one is the Committee on Public Instruction. I don't pretend to say whether it is correct or not, and I want to hear what they have to say, and to know if we are under any obligations to pay these teachers.

Alderman Stebbins—This matter has been thoroughly investigated. The Mayor has sent us a message, with the opinion of the City Solicitor that this school is illegal, and yet it is insisted upon that we pay these bills. I don't propose to do so.

Alderman Sayward—I don't see the necessity of referring this order to any committee. It seems to me that the School Committee wish to run this Board. I want them to take the responsibility of this matter, which is perfectly understood without its going to any committee.

Alderman Clark—If we are going to act on this subject at all, it should be in the right direction, which, in this case, is to pay these teachers. If we are going to abandon this school let us do so fairly and give due notice. These teachers supposed that the school is to be continued and that idea has been held out by the School Committee. It is nothing more than just that the teachers should be paid their salaries until it is definitely decided that the school is not to be continued. It would be a small piece of business for the city of Boston to refuse to pay this small amount of three or four thousand dollars to these poor teachers, who have been employed by the agents of the city. If we refuse to run the school any further, it will be perfectly understood by them, and, of course, there will be no more bills of this nature to come before us. As we have received the services of these teachers, it is nothing but fair that they should be paid.

Alderman Emery—I apprehend that the teachers of the public schools are hired by the year and are paid by the year. If this matter is referred to a committee, they will investigate and we shall know whether the City Solicitor has given any opinion or not. It is a question in my mind whether the city is liable.

Alderman Clark—And it is questionable whether we have not the right to run this Normal School. This is to be decided by the Supreme Court. Good lawyers have decided that we have the right, and that the Normal School is not an illegal institution. The teachers have faithfully performed their duties, and it is nothing but just that they should be paid. I hope the order will go to the committee, but if there is to be final action taken on it I shall vote to pay them.

Alderman Gihson—I understand that they have been paid for all their legal services. I go in for paying them for every day they have spent in the school, and no more. Everybody understands why the veto came and what caused it. I think the school ought to be illegal, if it is not, unless it be agreed that a girl receiving an education there shall engage to teach for a certain period in the city. As it is now, there is no certainty that any one of them will take a school here if she gets through. We have been educating young ladies to take schools for the West about long enough, and we have to get our own teachers from New Hampshire or somewhere else. Now I think we ought not to pay them for services which are not reuderred. I hope everything will be honorably and fairly passed upon.

Alderman Clark—I don't understand that this question has been before this Board before, and I don't think we are prepared to vote upon this thing intelligently tonight. Nobody is able to say whether they ought to be paid up to the first of July or September, and the only way to have this done is to refer it to some committee.

Alderman Stebbins—The facts are that on the first of May we received the veto from the Mayor, and on the 19th the chairman of the Committee on Public Instruction introduced an order for the payment of the salaries up to the first of June, and in reply to a question from myself, he stated that it was to pay them for services rendered, and nothing more. I understand that the School Committee, supposing the money would be paid, put the names of these teachers on the pay roll for September, and they were struck from it by the Auditor, as he was in duty bound.

The Board voted to concur—6 to 4, as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Gaffield, Bigelow, Emery, Quincy, Brown and Clark—6.

Nays—Aldermen Sayward, Power, Stebbins and Gibson—4.

ENLARGING CITY HALL.

On the question of concurring with the Council in passing the order authorizing the Committee on Public Buildings to hire the two upper stories of Niles Block, and to connect said block with the City Hall by a bridge, which had been adopted as a substitute for the order authorizing the lease of the building 23 Pemberton square, Alderman Stebbins inquired if the Committee on Public Buildings favor such a project.

Alderman Gaffield—I was about to say that I hope the Board would not concur, and would adopt the original report of the committee.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the Board rejected the substitute, accepted the report and adopted the original order.

Order for Committee on Common, etc., to consider expediency of placing a granite curb around Orchard park, came from the Council passed.

Alderman Power said this matter had been considered by the committee, but owing to the uncertainty of the shape in which Orchard park would ultimately be, it was not thought prudent to put up a very expensive fence. It is in contemplation, if the place is reserved by the city as a public square, to purchase more land, and not have an uneven, unsafe piece of ground as it is at present. I suppose that is the reason the committee put in that order. I don't think it prudent to put it in shape at this time.

Alderman Clark said he had supposed that a wooden fence had been contracted for. It seems entirely out of character to place an expensive curbing on that square now.

The Board concurred with the Council in the passage of the order.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Order authorizing the Joint Special Committee on the reorganization of the Fire Department to visit other cities at an expense not exceeding $1000, came up for concurrence.

Alderman Quincy hoped the order would not pass. It had not originated in any action of the committee, the subject never having been mentioned until, at the last meeting, when attention was called to the fact that it had been offered. If it was desired to instruct or even advise the committee to visit other cities, they would undoubtedly comply, otherwise he submitted it was time enough to offer money when it was asked for. He did not believe that visiting any number of cities would change the vote of any member of the committee upon the measure asked for by the petitioners, and he thought that the public expected and would appreciate prompt action. The City Council could take all the time they pleased in discussing any measures proposed, but after the minds of the committee were evidently made up, he thought their report or reports should be laid before the Council and the public, with the least possible delay. The sooner this is done the more time is given for public discussion of the measures proposed, for their respective merits and demerits to be pointed out, and the greater the probability of wise and enlightened action. He moved that the order be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Clark—I, for one, should be in favor of granting the committee money to visit other cities as they may think advisable. It is desirable that they should get all the information possible before they present their report to this Government. I cannot see how they are sufficiently posted with the working of commissions in other cities. I came here prepared to vote for the order, but if the chairman of the committee asks for an indefinite postponement shall vote for it. But it seems to me a committee of as much importance as that cannot report without first having examined the workings of departments in cities where commissions are in operation.

Alderman Gaffield—I feel, with the alderman from Ward 6, that if it is deemed necessary by the committee they should have the privilege of visiting other cities.

Alderman Quincy—I will change that motion if it is desired, that the order be referred to the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department, that they may decide upon it.

Alderman Power—I don't suppose that the order will alter the matter, or that it obliges the committee to go abroad. Therefore, in view of the possibility of their voting to go, it may be better to pass the order now. The members on the part of the Council seemed to be unanimously in favor of passing the order, but I don't see anything in it that obliges the committee to go abroad and spend the money.

Alderman Stebbins—After the statement of the chairman of the committee, I don't see how we can vote in favor of the order. He says it won't change the minds of the committee if they visit all the cities in the country. It is an important matter, but I shall follow his lead.

Alderman Emery—The subject referred to this committee is a very important one, more so, in fact, than anything referred to any committee for a year. Their action may perpetuate good or evil beyond what we at first calculated. The committee ought to post themselves in every particular as to the working of fire commissions. If the order is referred to the committee before anything can be done it will have to go back to the Council, which would take considerable time.

Alderman Gibson—I presume that this committee have the official returns of all the commissions in the country, and that is all they would receive if they visited other cities. All the information on the subject, as I understand it, is now in their hands. If they desired to go I should vote for the order, but I can't see why they want to go to get information which is now in this hall. If they desire to go I am for the order, and if they do not I am against it.

Alderman Quincy—Because the order did not originate in any action of the committee it was my purpose to oppose it, unless the gentlemen wish it, or the majority do not wish to take the attitude of instructing the committee to go. Still I wish that the order would be indefinitely postponed. As the Alderman says all the information is accessible, and no other result can be obtained except to strengthen members in their opinions. There is no doubt that the commissioners would put forth their best efforts to show us the best view of the workings of the system, but I don't think the vote of any member of the committee would be changed. On this particular subject I think the public expect prompt action; the sooner will its merits and demerits be pointed out. The majority will be ready to report this week, and the minority will also be able to report at the same time, and we may get through the business of the committee in that time.

Alderman Gibson—I am free to confess I don't like the way the order comes in here. It don't look so much like a request to be allowed to seek information as it does like asking for the privilege of making a journey. Gentlemen in the other branch get up and ask for a thousand dollars to go on a journey, when the other members of the committee don't know anything about it.

Alderman Quincy—In view of the fact that the Council has adjourned, I withdraw my motion for a reference and renew my motion for an indefinite postponement.

The vote being taken on an indefinite postponement, it was carried, as follows.

Yeas—Aldermen Quincy, Bigelow, Stebbins, Clark, Gibson and Emery—6.

Nays—Aldermen Gaffield, Power and Sayward—3.

MUSIC ON THE COMMON.

Order for the appointment of a joint special committee to provide music on the Common and in other sections of the city, at an expense of $2600. Passed, in concurrence—yeas 6, nays 3, as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Gibson, Sayward and Stebbins.

Nays—Aldermen Cutter, Emery and Power.

A motion to reconsider, offered by Alderman Clark, was rejected.

Alderman Quincy explained that he had paired off with Alderman Brown, who was compelled to leave.

The Chairman appointed Aldermen Clark, Power and Sayward members of said committee. Messrs. Caton, Burditt, Prescott, Bowles and Boardman had been previously appointed on the part of the Council.

Ordered, That when this Board adjourns, on the 28th inst., it be to meet on Monday, the 11th day of August, at four o'clock P. M.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay as follows: J. P. Dearborn and Seth Robison, $3850, on account of widening Hawley street; Leonard Ware, $13,146, on account of the widening of Summer street; Leonard Ware, $12,354, on account of the widening of Federal street; John G. Tappan, executor, $3900, on account of the widening of Pearl street; to John C. Haynes, $13,000, on account of the widening of Summer street, and $4000 on account of the extension of Washington street to Haymarket square. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported as follows:

Ordered, That the betterments for the widening Kingston street, assessed upon the estates of Charles L. Goodnow on Edinboro' street—$300 upon the estate of said Goodnow, numbered 38 on Edinboro' street, and $150 on the estate numbered 40, on said street—be and the same hereby are reduced by one half, leaving the amounts due upon said Goodnow's estate, for said Kingston-street betterment at $150 upon the estate 38 Edinboro' street—and $75 upon the estate 40 Edinboro' street—and this upon condition of the payment of said remainders to the city.

Read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders of notice for hearings on Monday, August 11, at 4 P. M., on the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad for leave to extend their location by construction of tracks in Stoughton street, from Hancock to Hudson street, and on the petition of Henry Souther for the removal of two tracks of the South Boston Railroad into the centre of Emerson street, between Broadway and Third street. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of John Glennon to be paid for grade damages at 282 Dorchester street. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported order to pay Thomas Keyes eight hundred dollars for damages caused to his estate by the raising of the grade on Athens street. Report accepted and order passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Cummings & Carlisle, reported the following:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave Albany street, between East Canton and East Concord streets, with small granite blocks. Estimated cost $26,000.

Passed

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of Henry J. Parker, 102 Harrison avenue; George Pierce, 177 Hanover street, and J. O. Tjemblom & Co., 923 Fremont street, for victuallers' licenses; and leave to withdraw on the application of Thomas J. Clark, 121 Cambridge street, for the same. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported in favor of granting the petitions of M. J. Donovan, Richardson & Co., Adams & Albee, T. Galvin, John S. Robinson, C. E. Skinner, and Henry A. Bond for wagon licenses; and of twenty-nine other applications for transfers of wagon licenses; also in favor of granting the application of John Somers for license for a one-horse carriage in the vicinity of Bacon's Hall, and in favor of granting a pawnbroker's licenses to G. W. Stackpole, 45 Green street, and Nathan Waxman, 344 Hanover street. Severally accepted.

Milant for leave to occupy a stable on Border street, and of the Boston Metallic Roofing Company for leave to occupy a stable on First street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported orders for hearings on Monday, 28th instant, at 4 P. M., on the application for sewers in Norfolk avenue and Kingston street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported orders for the construction of common sewers in Brookline avenue between Longwood park and Longwood avenue, and in Longwood avenue, between Brookline avenue and Autumn street; in Chelsea street, between Marion and Brooks streets; in Tudor street, between D and E streets; in Folsom place and in First street, between K and L streets. Reports accepted and orders passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported on the petition of Otis H. Weed, for relief from surface water from Heath street, that the petitioner have leave to withdraw.

Accepted.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave Devonshire street, between State and Washington streets, with small granite blocks; expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for Devonshire street. Estimated cost, $5000.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the sidewalks on Purchase street, between Pearl and Gridley streets, and upon Gridley street; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for the Burnt District.

Ordered, That the Board establish the grades of Stoughton street, Brook avenue, North avenue and West Cottage street, Ward 16, as shown on a plan drawn by the City Surveyor, dated June 25, 1873, and deposited in the office of the City Surveyor.

Ordered, That the collection of $71 04 levied upon Jessie Kierstead for a sewer in West Eagle street, be postponed till the land is drained into the sewer.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the armory occupied by Companies B and D, First Battalion Infantry, at Minot Hall, corner Springfield and Washington streets, be approved as a suitable and safe place for the deposit of arms and equipments.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, orders were adopted to pay companies A, B, C, D, E, F, H, I, K, of the Ninth Regiment, $491, and the band of the same regiment $90, for inspection duty in May last.

THE ASPHALT WALKS.

Alderman Quincy offered the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on the Common and Public Grounds be requested to cause the asphalt to be removed from a space of twenty feet in radius from the trunks of the elms on Tremont-street Mall, near the corner of Park street.

Alderman Quincy said he offered the order rather as a means of calling the attention of the Committee on Common and Squares to the matter, and as a means of recording a protest against the killing of the trees. He moved that the order be referred to the Committee on Common, etc.

He offered the order, he said, because having passed through the Common the other day, he observed that the grounds and grass near the asphalt was covered with dead leaves, while not a leaf had fallen from the trees not surrounded by the asphalt. Any one passing that way must see that the asphalt must have suffocated those trees. He offered this order as a protest against a measure which would certainly kill three fine trees. He would say further that it is very evident the moisture is kept from the roots. The roots take in moisture at the ends, and no water poured around the base of the trunk has any effect. The asphalt hermetically seals the surface and no moisture can penetrate it.

The order was referred.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
JULY 28, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held this afternoon, at four o'clock, Alderman Cutter, the Chairman, presiding.

REPORT OF COMMISSION ON WOOD PAVEMENTS.

A communication was received from his Honor the Mayor transmitting the following report of the commission appointed to investigate the subject of wood pavements and the methods of preserving the same. After reciting the action of the City Government in appointing the commission the report says—

The first meeting of the commission was held at the office of Shedd & Sawyer, in Barristers' Hall, Dec. 20, 1872, when organization was effected by the choice of Edward Sawyer as president and J. M. Merrick secretary. Public notice was given in the daily journals that the commission would give hearings to all interested parties, and then such meetings were held in the City Hall. Patentees and parties interested in wooden pavements and the preservation of wood appeared at those hearings and set forth their views and the merits of their processes. The commissioners have held numerous private sessions, at which the matters in question have been thoroughly discussed, and they have also visited and inspected various pieces of wooden pavement in this city. They have declined invitations to visit other places at the expense of the persons inviting them. As the result of their labors they submit this report, which takes up, first, the matter of the preservation of wood, and, secondly, the construction and laying of pavements.

Preservation—In regard to the matter of the preservation of wood for paving purposes, your commissioners have to say that they have patiently and diligently sought for information upon the subject, and have listened to the statements of numerous patentees and interested parties. Each process is very warmly praised by those interested, and the patentees of one process fail, of course, to see any merit in their competitors' methods of preservation. So far as your commissioners know, there is no wooden pavement in this city which has been down long enough to afford a proper test, which does not show considerable deterioration, owing either to defective treatment or defects in construction, and they have not been able to find a preservative process cheap and efficient enough to be recommended to the city without qualification. The leading processes brought to your commissioners' notice are—

1. Treatment of the wooden blocks with hot oil; the so-called dead oils, and other similar oils. Of this it may be said that the complete saturation of the wooden block with dead oil affords, perhaps, the most perfect preservation it is possible to attain, but this method must be put entirely out of the question on account of the expense which the large quantity of oil required necessarily involves, and the slipperiness of the surface of the blocks. The partial or incomplete treatment of the wooden blocks with oil or tar can hardly be recommended, and especially is the practice of tarring each end of the block to be avoided, as in this case the wood invariably rots in the middle. It is claimed that a partial saturation of the blocks with oil under proper conditions will add much to their durability, preserving them, in fact, for an indefinite time. While this may be the case, your commissioners have no positive proof that this process will do its work well enough to justify them in recommending it to the city.

2d. Cyanizing, or the treatment of wood by long immersion in a solution of chloride of mercury, is undoubtedly a very effective preservative process, but your commissioners believe it is inapplicable for two reasons, viz., its expense, which is large, on account of the cost of salt of mercury, and also on account of the danger to the health of the workmen employed.

3d. Burnettizing, or treating wood with a solution of chloride of zinc, seems to be the process to which in practice we are reduced; and here the evidence laid before the commission has been of rather a contradictory nature. Many discrepancies in the statements brought to us may have had their origin in the fact that wood said to have been burnettized had not been located at all or perfectly treated; but making allowance for this there seems to have been some cases in which the treatment has failed to add to the durability of the wood.

Still, in the great majority of cases, so far as your commissioners are informed, it has succeeded reasonably well. It should, however, be borne in mind that paving blocks but a few inches long, cut across the grain, and set on end, are under conditions different from and probably much more trying than those to which long timbers are ordinarily exposed. But, on the whole, your commissioners consider this process the best at present available for preserving wood to be used for pavements. Your commissioners are of opinion that if the city adopts any method of preserving blocks to be used for pavements, some additional security should be had that the treatment of the wood shall be thorough and complete.

Construction of Wood Pavements. For durability under the wear of travel, spruce seems to have few if any equals amongst the woods in common use. This and its moderate cost make it rather the best material for wood pavements, provided its resistance to decay can be sufficiently increased by preservative treatment. A firm foundation is indispensable for making a good pavement. To make such a foundation, the earth of which it is composed should be saturated with water and rolled. Many attempts have been made to overcome or mitigate the bad effects of unequal settlement in foundations, by the use of flooring under the blocks, also by interlocking the blocks, and by the use of connecting pieces between them. But a flooring one or two inches thick is not stiff enough to carry heavy loads over depressions or cavities of any considerable size, and it is hardly practicable to interlock or connect the blocks strongly enough to do this during any long time. When there are cavities or soft places, the pavement soon crumbles down under ordinary use.

Floorings and connections are inconvenient when, as often happens, it becomes necessary to take up pavements for obtaining access to pipes or sewers. Where portions of a pavement are taken up and excavations are made, it is difficult to refill and restore the pavement so that its surface will remain uniform with that of the adjoining pavement, which has not been disturbed. Your commissioners do not hesitate to say that a very large portion of the repairs of street pavement is necessitated by the frequent tearing up for obtaining access to water pipes, gas pipes and repairs on the same, or for drains. Too often the repaving and refilling are improperly done, and the result is a bad depression or a disagreeable elevation tending to produce a depression on each side.

If a wood pavement is to be laid on an unconsolidated foundation, flooring or connections may retard unequal settlement considerably, if the travel is light, and slightly under heavy travel; but they cannot reasonably be expected to keep the pavement in permanent good condition. Your commissioners believe that the best method of constructing wood pavements is as follows: The rows of blocks should be set square across the street, and should be about four inches thick at the top, with spaces of about one-half inch between the rows. This may be done with blocks of uniform thickness set apart or with tapering blocks half an inch thicker at bottom than at top. The latter arrangement is the more costly, but it is believed by some that it will stand better, by reason of its covering the whole surface of the foundation. Longer trial is necessary to settle this point beyond dispute. Blocks with only a slight chamfer at the top leave the interspace too narrow as the blocks wear down.

Construction of Stone Pavements. Your commissioners consider it important to have a firm foundation for a stone pavement. If a foundation settles much, it generally settles unequally. Your commissioners recommend granite blocks four inches thick and eight inches high, well fitted and set close together, in rows square across the street, as the best form of stone pavement known to them. Mr. Whidden understands the order under which this commission is acting to call for an opinion as to the relative merits of stone and wooden pavements; the other members of the commission do not so construe the order; and hence express no opinion on this matter. Mr. Whidden desires to say that, with our present experience and knowledge, wooden pavements must be regarded as one of the luxuries of the age, and should be restricted to particular locations, and gradually applied until, at least, a more extended practical trial is had. Its merits seem to be its freedom from noise, its producing less obstruction to the traction of vehicles, and less wear. This is very agreeable and pleasant. To offset this, it is expensive at start, if properly done, depreciates and decays early, and is entirely lost after a few years.

Essays. Your petitioners have received a large number of essays for examination, several of which show evidence of care and study. By the direction of your commissioners, each essay was accompanied by the writer's name, inclosed in an envelope bearing a motto corresponding to one upon the essay. The successful essay has been opened.

Your commissioners are unanimous in according the premium to the writer of the essay indorsed "Competition"—Mr. F. W. Clarke of Boston.

Respectfully submitted,

J. M. MERRICK, NATHANIEL O. HART,
JAMES T. BABCOCK, EDWARD SAWYER,
THOMAS J. WHIDDEN,

The report was laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Special Police Officers without pay—Charles A. Metcalf, Clarence A. Perkins, Franklin M. Miner, in connection with their duties in the City Surveyor's office; William Hannin, Lyceum Hall and its vicinity, Ward 16.

Weigher of Coal—Charles H. Sawyer.

Members of the Fire Department—Addison Getchell, driver; John A. Shannon, Jr., and T. F. Fitzgerald, firemen; Henry T. Welch, Ossian P. Adams, George H. Robinson, hosemen; Fred L. Wilson, John Tileston, Richard W. Hitchcock, members; Walter Dalrymple, foreman Hose Company No. 8; Joseph W. Fowler, foreman Engine Company No. 1; John Brown, foreman Hose Company No. 12.

CONSTABLE WHITTIER REMOVED.

A communication was received from his Honor the Mayor as follows:

"The Mayor, having been satisfied that Nathaniel Whittier has been guilty of gross misconduct in the discharge of his official duties as a constable of this city, recommends his removal from office, to take effect from and after this date."

The question being on adopting the recommendation of his Honor the Mayor—

Alderman Quincy said, This case has been represented to me as one in which it would not be inadvisable to give the accused a little time to present his version. The offence is certainly a grave one; it certainly merited the reprimand it has received from the public; but at the same time this is represented to be a worthy officer, who has been in office only a short time. We ought not to revoke his commission without giving him an opportunity to be heard. I make the request at the solicitation of some members of the bar, and move that the subject be laid on the table till the next meeting.

Alderman Gibson—Constable Whittier has had a fair opportunity before the Mayor and the Police Committee to present all the evidence in his case with counsel. There is no question but that the young man was determined to annoy the officers of the Fitchburg Railroad Company. He was offered a bond of a hundred dollars, he was offered another car, but would not accept either. For a long time a large amount of goods had been stolen from the company's cars, and these parties who had this attachment issued were suspected of being connected with the robbery. Young Whittier goes down and attaches this car, just as the train was starting, and would not allow it to be removed. The superintendent offered another car, but that would have no effect; he would take no other property. Finally, President Stearns came down and Whittier declined to take the hundred dollars offered by him. President Stearns then took the responsibility of ordering the car set off on a side track, so that the train was detained only about five minutes. It was clearly an understood thing between Whittier and these parties; there is no question that they thought to extort forty dollars from the railroad company. The train did not go forward at length by Whittier's consent. This is a pretty serious matter. I know something more of this case than this Board does, and I think this mere discharge isn't the punishment he deserves. He has got hold of a branch of business that he don't understand. I should like to have had all the gentlemen who sit here hear the evidence in the case. If five hundred merchants had heard it, there is not one but would have said he should be discharged.

Alderman Quincy—There seems to be some difference of opinion as to the facts. The gentlemen who spoke to me this morning assured me that no money had been offered. This gentleman (Mr. Thayer) represented this young Whittier as an efficient officer, though he undoubtedly deserved rebuke. I was not aware that the matter had received the investigation as stated by the Alderman, or that the officer had an opportunity to defend himself. I, therefore, withdraw my motion.

Alderman Gibson—Mr. Whittier was represented by counsel of his own selection. It was evident that he had no case. It was so palpable an arrangement to trouble the railroad company and annoy the passengers that there was no argument left for his counsel.

Alderman Quincy—I am satisfied that the affair has received the full investigation it should have, and I withdraw my motion.

Alderman Gibson—The president of the railroad company swears on his oath that he offered to give Whittier $100, but he would not take it.

The Board voted to adopt the recommendation of his Honor the Mayor and dismiss Constable Whittier.

Alderman Stebbins—In this connection I would like to ask Alderman Gibson a question. I notice that we have a large number of special police appointed every year. Have they any power to serve warrants or arrest parties, and are they not liable if they do make an arrest?

Alderman Gibson—I understand that they have no authority whatever. It is simply a bluff game. I don't know of an instance where a special police officer has attempted to arrest a man. But it is expected that the star they wear will do some good, and I don't know but it has done some valuable service.

The monthly bills and pay roll of the Suffolk County Jail, amounting to $461 21, were presented by Sheriff Clark, and were ordered to be paid.

FIREMAN REMOVED.

A communication was received from Chief-Engineer Danrell transmitting the cause of the discharge from the Fire Department of George A. Kennison, viz., for using profane and insulting language in the ladder house to ladies residing there. Placed on file.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Of John Sullivan, for leave to construct a basement cellar, corner Kneeland and Albany streets, below grade; to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Of M. Doherty, for leave to occupy a brick stable for forty horses on Broadway.

Of Henry Doherty, for leave to occupy a wooden stable for twelve horses at 137 Ruggles street.

Severally referred to the Committee on Health.

Of Charles C. Barry, to be paid for grade damages to his estate on Alpine street.

Of Charles Roberts, for damages caused by the grading of Regent and Alpine streets.

Of B. F. S. Bullard et al., for sidewalk on Tremont street, between Ruggles and Pynchon streets.

Severally referred to the Committee on Paving.

Of E. A. Cushman and others, that Linwood square may be graded, and that curbstones and sidewalks may be laid around the same; to the Committee, on Common, etc.

Of Avery Wellington and others, for a sewer in Highland street, Ward 15; to the Committee on Sewers.

Of Engine Co. No. 14, for permission to leave the city; to the Committee on Fire Department.

Of John Richie et al., for leave to use a steam engine; order of notice issued.

Of Co. H., Ninth Regiment Infantry, for new gun rack; to the Committee on Armories.

Of Jourdain and Davison, for a license to keep an anatomical museum at 542 Washington street; to the Committee on Licenses.

A communication was received from the Grand Jury, submitting recommendations as to the treatment of criminals and lodgers, which was referred to the Committee on Public Institutions.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The order of notice relative to the construction of a sewer in Norfolk avenue having come up for consideration, Mr. Bishop, counsel for the trustees of the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad, asked that the matter be recommitted to the Committee on Sewers, as they desired to be heard and had had no opportunity, having only heard of it through the notice in the papers.

The Board voted to recommit the order, as requested.

The order of notice for a sewer in Kingston street, between Bedford and Summer streets, was considered, and objection being made, the order was recommitted to the Committee on Sewers.

On the order of notice on the petition of Cummings & Carlyle to erect a steam boiler, no objection was offered, and the petition was recommitted to the Committee on Steam Engines.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gibson, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, to whom was referred the petition of Thomas Carberry for leave to erect a range of wooden sheds at 1482 Tremont street, beyond the legal limits, reported that the petitioner had conformed to the requirements of the ordinance, and no action is necessary on the part of the City Council. Accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the same committee, reported "no action necessary" on the petition of Newton Morton for leave to erect a wooden building beyond the legal requirements on K street. Accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Markets, reported favorably on the petition of Haskell W. Gleason, that his lease of cellar No. 13 Faneuil Hall Market be transferred to C. T. Dunn. Accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Health, to whom was referred the petition of S. Weld and others, for an investigation as to the award of the offal contract of S. Ward & Co., in 1872, reported that after two protracted hearings upon the subject, the last of which was attended by the full Committee on Health of 1872, they are unanimously of the opinion that the city's interest has been best promoted by the course pursued, and fully sustain the action of said committee in the award made by them. The committee recommend that said petitioners have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Health, reported favorably on the petitions of Daniel Monles, F. F. Hill, Thomas H. McDonald, R. J. Elder, James Jellerson et al., W. R. Gerrish, Charles Newhall, Herman Grundell, Thomas Mulrenan. Severally accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petitions of W. H. Dow, James F. Cleary, Joseph H. Clough, F. O. Clark, Arthur Deady. Reports accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders to pay damages for grading of streets as follows: Dolly Kenney, wife of Thomas Kenney, 73 Regent street, $876; James Donnelly, 75 Regent street, $1040; Caroline G. Nichols, 59 Alpine street, $800.

The orders were passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of Francis C. Hersey et al., that the name of Dorchester street be changed to Summit avenue.

Alderman Emery moved that the petition be recommitted to the Committee on Paving with authority to grant the parties another hearing, for the reason that the petitioners did not see the notice and were desirous of being heard. The subject was recommitted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay as follows: Robert Treat Paine and Charles J. Paine, $2976 25, for land taken in widening Ruggles street; William Litchfield, $42,452, for land taken in widening Broad street; Gilbert Evans, $5005, for land taken in widening Bedford street; Donald Kennedy, $1074, for land taken from Noah D. Joyce in widening Walnut avenue; Andrew J. Morse, $7300, for land taken in widening Congress street; James Barrett, $1368 50, for land taken in widening Lincoln street; Andrew M. Morton, $18,250, for land taken in extending Washington street to Haymarket square; Adeline Bartlett, administratrix, $4050, for land taken in widening Hawley street, upon an estate of the heirs of Theodore Bartlett; Augustus Meisel, $161 50, for land taken in widening Ashmont street; heirs of Jonathan Brigham, $2239, for land taken in widening Cottage street; Edward A. White, $12,050, for land taken in widening Hawley street; heirs of David Sears, $2900, for land taken in extending Washington street to Haymarket square; John Ritchie, John Ritchie, 2d, and Elizabeth Lewis, $11,066, for land taken in widening Federal street; John Ritchie, John Ritchie, Jr., and Elizabeth Lewis, $22,834, for land taken in widening Franklin street; Mary E. Bird, $14,415, for land taken in extending Washington street to Haymarket square; Andrew M. Morton, $18,250, for land taken in extending Washington street to Haymarket square.

Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported orders, notifying Joseph G. Russell to remove obstructions from Congress street by August 10, and notifying H. H. Hunnewell, Peleg W. Chandler, heirs of Sara A. Brown, Aaron C. Baldwin and Asa P. Morse to remove obstructions from Essex street by August 15.

Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Bigelow, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the petition of Robert McHenry for a wagon stand at 78 Phillips street; of Henry F. Williams, for a billiard license at 109 Cambridge street; of Cyrus R. Jones, for victuallers license at 11 Boylston street; of Charles P. Chipman, to run a hack to Eastern Depot; of Daniel C. Sisson, for license to keep an intelligence office at 13 School street; of Henry Wright, to keep a junk store at 415 Second street; of John Friels, to keep a junk store at 193 Endicott street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Bigelow, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petitions of Frank A. Caswell and G. R. Reichardt for victuallers license. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the petition of W. L. Deland. Accepted.

Alderman Bigelow, from the Committee on Licenses, reported an order revoking, for cause, the license of Osborne Chase as victualler, at 871 Washington street. The order was passed.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Committee on Cemeteries, reported inexpedient on the petition of J. Munsell for assistance in the publication of his work on cemeteries. Accepted.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Public Instruction, to whom was referred the order to pay the salaries of the Normal School teachers to September 1st, having considered the subject, reported that in the month of April an order was passed to provide rooms in the Rice School building for the use of the Normal School, which order was vetoed by the Mayor on May 1st, in accordance with the opinion of the City Solicitor, that the City Government has no authority to establish a Normal School, such schools being already established and supported by the State Government in different parts of the Commonwealth. Under this decision the school, after May 1st, had no longer any legal existence, and the engagement made by the School Committee with the teachers of said school for one year were rendered null and void.

But as these teachers were not aware of this illegality of their appointments it was not considered equitable to cut off their salaries at once, and the Government ordered them to be paid up to the first of June. Eight months of the year only had passed when the school was declared illegal, and the teachers have been paid for nine months of service. The order under consideration contemplates their payment for the remaining three months of the year. The School Committee, in the face of the Mayor's veto, not only kept the Normal School in operation after May 1, but have reelected the head master for another year. Your committee propose to abide by the decision of the City Solicitor and its logical results, until set aside by the Supreme Court, and therefore recommend that the order ought not to pass.

The question being on the acceptance of the report, Alderman Clark said, I have no objection to accepting the report of the committee, provided some arrangement can be made to pay the teachers for the whole year. I don't see why the teachers of the Normal School should be treated differently from those in the grammar or other schools. They were engaged for twelve months, just as the teachers in the primary, grammar or Latin schools were, and should not be made to suffer by the misdoings of the School Committee. If the city was running this school illegally, they should not be made to suffer. If the High and Normal schools were part and parcel of each other, then, so far as the Normal School goes, it has been illegal for twenty years. For the time being, I admit that the Normal School, as at present constituted, is illegal. But should the teachers suffer from that fact? Their services were engaged for the year 1872-73, during the school term, which ends on the first Monday in September. The teachers of the other schools have a vacation during July and August, and why, I ask, should the Normal School teachers be treated differently from the others? I would not propose to pay them a single dollar for the year to come, notwithstanding that the committee have decided to run this school during the coming year. If they undertake to teach during next year they take the chances of getting their salaries, but as they were employed by the School Committee, who receive authority to do so from us, there is no reason why they should not be treated just the same as the other teachers. The teachers of the Normal School are not to blame for our running this illegal institution, and I hope we shall not refuse to do justice to them and pay them for the terms for 1872-73. I do not understand that this is a unanimous report of the committee either.

Alderman Gaffield—It was the report of the majority of the committee. Reports are not necessarily unanimous.

Alderman Emery—At the last meeting I favored having this matter referred to the Committee on Public Instruction for inquiry. For my part I am very unwilling to vote against paying those teachers their salaries. If they have performed their services for the year, I see no good reason why we should not pay them as well as the other teachers, as the Alderman from Ward 6 has remarked. I should be very unwilling to have them lose their pay for the balance of the year. They have served the city faithfully; they were hired as all the other teachers have been, and I think it is our duty to pay them. Of course, the committee could report no other way than they have done, but I think nevertheless that the teachers should have their pay, and I, for one, will vote to give it to them.

Alderman Power—I think both the Aldermen are mistaken when they say that these teachers were hired for a year. I say they were not. As that report states, they served and got pay for one month after this school was pronounced illegal, and they have taken the chances by staying there longer. These salaries should not be paid until it is decided whether this school is legal or not. The School Committee have seen fit to reflect the teachers in the face of the veto message of the Mayor, and the teachers have seen fit to stay there. I think we should stand by our Mayor and legal adviser until we see whether we have the right to run this school or not.

Alderman Clark—No one proposes to run against the action of the City Solicitor or the Mayor. I agree with them that the school is illegal; there is no question in my mind on that point. But I do think the Alderman from Ward 12 is wrong when he says these teachers are employed for less than twelve months. They are employed for the school year of 1872-73 by the School Committee. It is not becoming this Board to allow our prejudices to stand in the way of our doing right. The question is this: Shall we treat those whom we have employed with justice and equity? Shall we treat the teachers of the Normal School with the same fairness that we do the teachers of the grammar and the Latin schools. It would be treating them with injustice if we find out during the last term of this school that it is illegal and then during the last week of the term say, these teachers have been teaching in an illegal school, therefore we will refuse to pay them, and they must spend one-half the money due them in order to sue us for the rest.

Alderman Cutter, having called Alderman Gibson to the Chair, said—

The Alderman has stated the question differently from what it really is. When this subject was first before the Board I think the Alderman asked the question if they were coming in here for more pay, and was answered that they were not. Now they come again. The teachers are not hired for a year. They do not receive any pay after they are discharged. And if they are hired by the year, it is for the financial year which begins on the first of May. Therefore they are not entitled to pay for services, because they have not rendered any, because the pay would not be due till the first of September. But in the face and eyes of the veto of the Mayor it is not judicious to pay them in advance for their services. It will be no use to pass this bill, for the Mayor will veto it, as it will be his duty to do. I don't think it would be best for this Board to put itself in an illegal position. I think the gentleman has been put up to fever heat on this subject by the School Committee, who on the first of July re-elected the teachers for this Normal School, notwithstanding its illegality. I don't propose to gratify the School Committee in this by taking money from the treasury to support an illegal school.

Alderman Clark—The very terms of this contract show that they were employed by the year. The contract says four thousand dollars per annum. I would inform the Alderman that the School Committee have not put me up to this matter. I propose to do justice to all people without promptings from the School Committee or any one else. I have not seen a member of the School Committee for thirty days. It may be that the Alderman needs such promptings sometimes to get him to do the community justice; it may be that he has seen some members of the committee. It is not for us to decide that the Mayor will veto this bill. We should act according to the dictates of our own consciences. Undoubtedly we have no right to run a school for the purpose of preparing teachers any more than we have to run a school to prepare doctors or lawyers. But we have been twenty years finding that out. It may be that they were notified thirty or sixty days ago that the school was illegal; it may be that the chairman of the committee was asked whether they would come here again; it is nothing that concerns him; we want to treat them precisely as the other teachers are treated. I do not know a single teacher in the Normal School, and I have seen none of the committee.

Alderman Cutter—I supposed the gentleman was prompted to this thing by the School Committee, because I don't see what ground he has to stand on at all. We gather our money into the treasury according to law, and we can't stand up here and defend ourselves for laying it out illegally. We have no right to take the taxpayers' money to pay this sum asked for by these teachers.

Alderman Power—I am not particular about how these teachers are hired. No doubt the gentleman has several persons who are employed by him in the same way. I have, and when the contract is made it says so much per month. There can be no question about the responsibility of the city in the case. If the Supreme Court decides that the school is legally run, they will get their pay; and if not, they will not get it.

Alderman Clark—If the Board propose to stop paying all the teachers during vacation, I have no objection. Put them all in the same boat together. That is all I want. I say that the teachers of the Normal School should stand precisely on the same ground where the others stand. Common justice and equity will bear us out in that. I don't believe the taxpayers mean to have us do such mean, contemptible business as that.

Alderman Quincy—It seems to me that these teachers have been paid for all the work they have done, and they ought to have known that they went on performing their duties at their own peril. I cannot see that they have been employed for a year because their salaries are established at a certain rate for the year; they are engaged for so long as they are employed, that is they will be paid so long as they do the work.

They knew that as long as they did the work they would be paid for the service they had done and no more. Now, it seems to me, that they knew this and took the risk if they worked any longer. The School Committee have undertaken to take a position in opposition to the decision of the City Government, and the teachers have acted at their own peril.

Alderman Emery—It has been stated that the teachers have a vacation and are paid for serving nine months. Now you propose to use these teachers differently from those in the other schools. That question has been raised by the gentleman from Ward 12. No other mention has been made of it. I see no reason why they should be treated differently from the other teachers. If you make a contract for a year, you are bound to fulfill that contract. If the gentleman hires a man for a year he must keep him through the year. He may hire him by the year and may discharge him by the time that he receives his pay. I understand that these teachers are hired for a year, and if so you can't discharge them till the year is up. If a portion of the time is taken up in vacation, as the other teachers have, I don't see why they cannot be paid.

Alderman Power—If these teachers can show any authority for being hired by the year I have no objection to paying them. But they can show no such authority. These teachers stand differently from others. It is well known to all of us that this school was pronounced illegal, and by special action of this board it was voted to pay their salaries for one month, and the gentlemen asked the question at that time if it was going to end there, to which the gentleman on my right replied that it was. Now in the face and eyes of this legal decision these teachers see fit to take the chances and go on, and the School Committee have again elected them. They have been paid for the services performed, and we have no right whatever to pay them any more. They are out of office and stand in an entirely different relation from the others.

Alderman Clark—I agree with the Alderman from Ward 12, that they are out of office, but their duties have not ceased until after their vacations. Of course they could have stopped when the notice of illegality was served. The fault lies with this Board, and not with them. Members have served here year after year, and every year they were voting away ten or fifteen thousand dollars to support an illegal institution. All I want is that these teachers shall be on the same footing as the teachers of other schools. The testimony of Mr. Capen, the Clerk of the School Committee, as I understand it, is that the teachers are employed for a year and not by the year. If there is any doubt about the matter in the minds of members of this Board I should like the matter to lie over. If these teachers have been faithful to their duties they should be paid, and if not, then they should not be paid.

Alderman Gibson (Alderman Cutter again in the chair)—I am surprised at the argument of members who favor paying this money. There is no such thing in the book that these people are entitled to be paid for a year's service. We have already paid them a part illegally, and now they ask for more. The School Committee is no doubt a large and respectable body of gentlemen, but they should not undertake to run this Board. I am of the opinion that an effort will be made to have us pay them next year.

Alderman Clark—I said explicitly that I am not in favor of paying them another year; I took the other side of the question.

Alderman Gibson—We have already paid them illegally and I don't see how any Alderman, with a full knowledge of the facts, can vote to pay them any more after the decision of the City Solicitor. This talk about the poor teachers is all buncombe—all humbug, sir. We have just as much right to put the money into our own pockets. Why the School Committee should press this thing upon us I cannot see. I won't be a party to any such action in which there is no justice or reason. No man who understands his oath of office can do it.

Alderman Quincy—If the School Committee had not taken the defiant attitude, but had discontinued the school, then, in view of the fact that the other teachers had been paid for their vacation, I might be willing to vote for this order. But in the turn affairs have taken, I can't see how we can vote to pay them. The committee have taken this defiant attitude, and say they will run the school. We cannot afford to vote to pay this money and indorse such action of the committee. At least I am not willing to do so.

Alderman Clark—That is just exactly what I am glad to hear the gentleman acknowledge. He would make the teachers responsible for the action of the School Committee. I don't propose to stand here and defend the action of the School Committee, but the teachers should be treated just as equitably as we would treat others. I regret, Mr. Chairman, that any gentleman should take exceptions to my statement. I stated here publicly, and I propose to stand by it, that I did not propose to vote for carrying on this school for 1873-74. I would not vote for it if the Supreme Court decided it was legal. I don't believe there is any question about the right of the city of Boston to support a Normal School, but having employed these teachers there is nothing left for us to do but pay them precisely as we pay the others. That is all I propose to do, and if we don't do it we shall not do our duty.

Alderman Hulbert—This is a new subject to me, Mr. Chairman, and I have taken the pains to look at the contracts. We are responsible for the contracts of the School Committee, but not without certain limitations.

The Alderman read from the rules and regulations of the School Committee—

The school year commences on the first Monday in September, and the salary year on the first day of September. In June the School Committee elect the teachers and fix their salaries for the ensuing year. All such officers hold office for the year, unless sooner removed by the Board." The Alderman also read the portion designating the vacations during the year. He then continued—

That would seem plainly to make the summer vacations part of the year just as much as thanksgiving week. Had it not been for the question of the legality of the school I should have no question in my own mind that the salaries of the teachers should be carried to the end of the year. The only question with me now, is this, because whatever you or I may be inclined to do as private individuals, I apprehend that it is our office to act according to legal instructions. Now it seems according to the opinion of the City Solicitor, that the city has been employing persons illegally.

Alderman Gaffield—The gentleman has said that we have been acting illegally for several years. We have had the Girls' High and Normal School for twenty years, but it has not been illegal.

Alderman Clark—I contend that the normal part of that school has been illegal. They have taken out the part called the normal school and made a separate institution.

Alderman Gaffield read extracts from the rules and regulations of the School Committee to show that it was not until last year that a pure normal school was established. A pure normal school is a professional school, and that the City Council have no authority to establish.

Alderman Hulbert—The point with me is this,—April 28th is the date of the Mayor's veto. At that time this Board was informed that they were doing what they had no right to do. It was just the same as if they had ascertained that fact three months before this was brought before the Board. The committee understand that this school was kept illegally, and the city had no alternative but to stop, after such a decision. Now, while I heartily agree with the sentiments of the alderman from Ward 6 in doing justice, it seems to me that when this question was raised before the end of the working year we are placed under a ban; that whatever our private feelings may be, I do not see how we can appropriate funds for these teachers now. We have already extended the term a month beyond, and it was supposed that would be the last of it. Our obligations are distinctly laid down. If the City Solicitor says we are authorized to pay these salaries on account of the contracts running from September to September, I am ready to vote for it. But if it is his opinion that we have no legal right to do it I do not see how I can. Our sympathy for the teachers must be laid aside. They and the City Government have been participants in an illegal proceeding, and this may become a precedent, and precedents sometimes become difficult things to manage. I do not feel authorized to vote for this order against the opinion of the City Solicitor.

Alderman Clark—The arguments of the gentlemen only convince me more strongly that it is our duty to pay these teachers. I did not know that they were employed for a year, but now there is no question in my mind about it, and we have got to pay them for it. We have not got to vote for any appropriation. The estimates were put in at the beginning of the year and we voted so much for the Normal School. If there is any danger of the School Committee leading us into trouble it is our duty to look after them and see that we do not vote for appropriations which are not right. In regard to the division of the school which took place a year ago, that makes no difference. The Normal part of that school has been run for twenty years and has been just as illegal all the time as the Normal School is today. There is nothing in this report which indicates that the City Solicitor thinks we have no right to pay the salaries for which these teachers were employed.

Alderman Gaffield—Before making that report I waited on the City Solicitor, and he said we had no legal right to pay those salaries. As the institution is illegally constituted the payment of all the salaries must be illegal. I feel as much sympathy for the teachers and as much pride in our public schools as any gentleman in this Board, for I am a Boston boy. I have taken a great interest in this school for girls and should be glad to pay the teachers if I could. One thing I learned in the public school is respect for laws, and I intend to stand by them. In the face and eyes of the illegality the school committee have chosen teachers for this institution for next year. Gentlemen will say that if we are bound to pay them this year we shall have to pay them next year. I think we have got to bear in mind something about that bugbear, the taxpayers, who pay for the schools. If we don't respect their wishes we don't do our duty. We have already paid them illegally for eight months, but that is no reason why we should do it again. Suppose we should have established half a dozen steam fire engine companies, and then find out that it was illegal, would we have to keep them all the year? Let us adopt this report and let the Supreme Court decide the question, and if the decision is in favor of the teachers then we can pay them. This thing has not all been done in a few weeks. It has been discussed in this Board ever since last February. The Mayor held back for some time; we knew that something was coming, but we did not know it was a veto. The teachers stayed in the school at their own risk. They could have left the next day.

Alderman Quincy—I am unable to see how the contract makes them engaged for a year. If they serve for a year, and if the school is continued, they will be paid for a year. But if it is found that the school is illegal, they take the responsibility of working longer. I can't see how we can indorse this antagonistic attitude of the committee.

Alderman Gibson—I don't see one word that has been said in favor of the right of the city to pay this money. It seems that the School Committee have got two or three members of this Board to try to run it. They have gone on and elected teachers for another year and they don't seem to care about the opinion of the city solicitor or the mayor. They are determined to override anything that we can do here. If the teachers expected another year's election they are just as guilty as the parties who have put them up to it. It is astonishing to find here an advocate of allowing the School Committee to undertake to run this Board—to try to get us to vote money to pay for their illegal doings.

Alderman Clark—I should think that the gentleman would think himself sufficiently strong not to adopt that style of argument. But his arguments are not sufficiently strong to convince me. I think that all gentlemen are just as honest in this matter as I am. I am surprised that the gentleman objects to saddling this amount on the taxpayers in order to do justice to these poor teachers. I almost wonder if the gentlemen would feel justified in meeting their constituents if we pass an order to carry out this contract. I don't think the School Committee have tried to make cats' paws of the two members who have advocated this matter. They may have gone to East Boston, but I do not think they have been either to Ward 6 or 12. I think it is our duty to see whether the appropriations asked for by the School Committee are legal, and not wait till the last days of the school year and then refuse to pay them. There is no reason that these teachers should not be paid as well as the others.

Alderman Emery—I am perfectly surprised at the insinuations of the gentleman from Ward 1. I came into this Board about the first of last January and I supposed that gentlemen came here and acted from their convictions of right and wrong. But when the gentleman gets up here and tells me that some one has been operated upon, it gives me an intimation that the gentleman himself may have seen operations of that kind. His insinuation gives me to understand that he must have seen considerable of that sort of management. It is my opinion that no gentlemen of this Board have been dealt with by the School Committee. I am sure I act from perfectly conscientious motives. I think those teachers should be paid if they are hired by the year. If we have paid them any amount since the knowledge came to the Board that the school is illegal, it was done illegally, and all other payments have been illegal. But it strikes me that fair and honest dealing requires that they should be treated as the other teachers have been during the year that has passed, taking into account the vacations. I can't see how, having made this engagement for a year, with a portion of the time to be allowed them, we can keep from paying them.

Alderman Clark—I have just learned that the teachers in this school are composed of one male and four females. Now it is hardly a just thing to force four poor women to sue the city in order to recover pay for their services. I trust we shall not so belittle ourselves and force the city into any such unpleasant situation.

Alderman Power—I don't see what they have got to sue for if they have been paid already. To them belong the blame, and not so much to the School Committee. Because we have paid them once is no reason why we have the right to pay them again. They saw fit to be re-elected after knowing what was the decision of the City Solicitor. This is the only matter in which we have got any control over the School Committee, and I don't know but they will get the Legislature next year to take that right away from us, as they have done everything else. This thing has been done in defiance of the City Government.

Alderman Gaffield—The male teacher in this school receives $1000, and the three ladies receive $2000, $1000 and $700 respectively. I wish to add, also, that the paying of teachers for less than a year has frequently been done before. We sometimes find that we have to reduce the number of schools; sometimes schools are discontinued and the teachers are dismissed. This has been done time after time, and if we can discontinue the salaries of teachers legally chosen, can we not do so with teachers illegally employed?

Alderman Clark—The contracts with the teachers of this school were made legally, and they can sue the city for breach of contract, for money for services rendered. They have a good cause and should be paid.

Alderman Gaffield—There is no written contract with these teachers. They are simply notified of their election, and hold office during good behavior unless sooner removed.

Alderman Clark—They were not removed, but were notified by the board to continue their services. That Board is composed of some pretty responsible men, and it is natural that these women would be as likely to believe members of the School Committee as members of this Board. This whole thing hinges on the antipathy to the School Committee. That is the trouble. But I don't propose to make the teachers suffer.

Alderman Emery—I don't propose to indorse the action of the School Committee. It is through them that these teachers have been engaged, and I don't indorse that action.

Alderman Gaffield—They have been elected again, and notified of their election.

Alderman Clark—Does the gentleman know that they have accepted.

Alderman Gaffield—I know that Mr. Duntton has advertised for pupils to come to this school.

On motion of Alderman Gibson the previous question was ordered and the question being on accepting the report and rejecting the order the vote stood as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Hurlbert, Power, Quincy and Stebbins—8.

Nays—Aldermen Clark and Emery.

The order was declared rejected.

THE FENCE ON THE COMMON.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported an order authorizing that Committee to sell by public auction the iron fence on the westerly side of Tremont street, between Park and Boylston streets.

Alderman Clark—It seems a little premature to take such action until it is found whether it is advisable to keep the fence down. It would be wise to see how the community are satisfied with the fence being taken away. The amount received from the sale of the fence would be very small compared with what it would cost to build a new one.

Alderman Power—The Committee on Paving found themselves with an elephant on their hands, and thought this the best way to get rid of it. There were various suggestions as to what might be done with the fence; some thought the committee on Mount Hope might want it to fence up the cemetery with. It has been delayed to hear what suggestions would come from the members of the Board, but no one has offered to take care of it, and the committee thought it best for the city to dispose of it. It is a very cumbersome affair, and it will be very expensive to remove with the curbstones attached.

Alderman Gaffield—I would ask if the committee on Mount Hope have any objections to having it moved out there.

Alderman Stebbins—The trustees of Mount Hope would be very glad if the Committee on Paving would have it carried out there.

Alderman Gibson—If there is any possibility of having to put up the fence again we had better keep it.

Alderman Clark—The city has plenty of vacant land on which the fence might be stored, and that would be the best disposition we could make of it for the present. I should like to see it stored somewhere until we decide whether we want to have it put back. I believe we never shall; still, if such a thing were possible, it would cost forty times as much as we should get for it.

Alderman Stebbins—I have taken occasion to look on that side of the Common with the view of deciding in my own mind what is best to be done, and I am of the opinion that it would be best to set the fence back inside the first row of trees.

Alderman Clark moved to amend the order by directing the committee to store the fence.

Alderman Power—The city has no place where the fence can be stored, unless it be on the vacant hospital lot on Marcella street. If the gentleman who makes that suggestion can imagine how long his pocketbook would remain on an open lot he will know how long that fence would remain there, for nothing brings the ready money quicker than that material. It would cost thousands of dollars to take care of it; it will bring thousands of dollars if sold now; it will cost thousands of dollars to remove it. Then it is an old-fashioned affair. No doubt it is stronger than the modern style, but for a park it is rather behind the times. The Paving Department have no place where it can be stored.

Alderman Quincy—It had better be sold, I think; the chances of using it again are very slight. Indeed, I should go in for having it sold three or four times rather than have the suggestion made by the gentleman carried out, and put it inside the trees. I hope it will be sold, and hope that the asphalt, which has killed the trees on that mall will be sold at the same time.

The order was passed.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, an order was passed to pay Co. I, First Regiment of Infantry, $97 50 for inspection duty in May.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to furnish additional school accommodations in the Minot School District; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to furnish additional primary school accommodations in the Dorchester-Everett District; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be requested to report to this Board all cases in which the cellars or basement cellars of buildings in the city of Boston are constructed, used or occupied below the grade of twelve feet above mean low water.

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be authorized to offer and pay a reward of five hundred dollars for the detention and apprehension of any person guilty of feloniously setting fire to any building in the city of Boston; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Ordered, That the City Engineers be authorized to obtain duplicate parts for the running gear of Federal-street Bridge; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Bridges.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered that the Superintendent of Streets be directed to grade Eliot street, as recently extended from Pleasant street to Columbus avenue, and Pleasant street as widened from Eliot street to Park square. Estimated cost $1500.

Ordered, That this Board establish the grade of Newland street, between West Concord and Worcester streets, as shown on a plan drawn by the City Surveyor, dated April 30, 1873; also the grade of Haynes street, East Boston, as shown by a plan dated July 31, 1872; also the grade of Linwood square, as shown on a plan dated April 22, 1873; also the grade of Prescott street, Ward 13, as shown on plan dated Dec. 27, 1872; also the grade of Gerard and Howard streets, as shown on plans dated Oct. 4, 1872; also the grade of High-street place, as shown on plan dated Aug. 17, 1872; also the grade of Lamartine street, as shown on a plan dated Sept. 1, 1869,—all of said plans being deposited in the office of the City Surveyor.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to macadamize Berkeley street between Beacon and Providence streets; also to pave the gutters and crosswalks and build the necessary cesspools on said street. Estimated cost, $12,000.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Alderman Power moved a reconsideration of the vote whereby the board rejected the order authorizing the Joint Special Committee on the Fire Department to visit other cities at an expense not exceeding $1000.

The motion was carried, and the question recurring on the passage of the order in concurrence with the Council.

Alderman Quincy said—Had this order originated in the committee I should not have opposed it. The order now has the vote of the committee, and I withdraw my opposition.

The order passed in concurrence

On motion of Alderman Clark the board adjourned till Monday, August 11, at 4 P. M.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
AUGUST 11, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock this afternoon, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

Special Police Officers without pay—Charles W. Seabury, Marlborough street and its vicinity; Charles H. Curtis, Roxbury Branch Library; Royal Boston, Eddy's Refrigerator Manufactory, Ward 16; Oliver Boyden, steamer Henry Morrison; William A. Morse, Francis A. Morse, Farm School, Thompson's Island; James McCrillis, at No. 18½ Boylston street.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Of Patrick O'Donahue, for leave to erect a lumber shed at 434 Harrison avenue; to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Of Newton Morton, for leave to erect and use a steam engine on K street, at the corner of Third; order of notice issued for a hearing, September 1, at 4 P. M.; also, petition of Newton Morton, for leave to erect a brick stack at the place above named. Referred to Committee on Fire Department on the part of the Board.

Of A. Burrell, for release of condition of sale of land on M and Third streets, so as to erect a stable on said lot; to Committee on Public Lands.

Of Henry P. Tallant, representing that the placing of a smallpox hospital in the Roxbury Almshouse, so near his residence, 215 Highland street, compelled him to move from that vicinity, which he did at much trouble and expense, remaining away nearly four months, and therefore respectfully asking that suitable compensation may be awarded him therefor.

Of Mrs. S. T. G. Webber, representing that during the fire in May last her dwelling house, on the south side of Hayward place, was damaged by persons acting under authority of the city, in carelessly and negligently taking down the east wall and chimney of the Chickering building, to the extent of $340, and praying compensation therefor.

Of Trufant & Davis, representing that, on the eve of Aug. 5, while driving through Prince street, their horse fell into a deep hole, rendering him perfectly useless, also breaking the carriage and harness, and praying $400 damages.

Severally referred to Committee on Claims.

Of Samuel B. Krogman et al., for a sewer in Copeland street; and of Peter Higgins et al., for a sewer in Rockland street, between Walnut avenue and Warren street. Severally referred to Committee on Sewers.

Of Vincent Laforme et al., that K street from Broadway to Ninth street, be paved with wood; and of Samuel R. Spinney et al., in aid thereof.

Of the members of the Wooden Pavement Commission, representing that they had held numerous public and private sessions and made examinations in several instances, to the direct neglect of their own private business, and in view of these facts they ask the City Council to increase or add to the original appropriation of $500 voted to them as compensation for their services.

Of R. T. Paine, Jr., that Ruggles street, north of the Providence Railroad, be graded.

Of S. C. Bixby et al., that the name of Bread street be changed to Sturgis street, it being a continuation from Pearl street to India street, or Franklin street should the latter be extended.

Of Weston Gray, to be paid for grade damages at 81 White street.

Of Kelly Bros., that Dorchester street be graded near their estates.

Of Matilda A. Dawson, to be paid for grade damages on Alpine street.

Of D. M. R. Dow, that Chelsea street, between Porter and Marion streets, be paved.

Of Jeremiah Plympton et al., for a suitable sidewalk on Hawthorn and Cedar streets.

Of John Brown et al., for a sidewalk on O street, from Fourth to Sixth street.

Of G. H. Cavanaugh et al., that E street, from Seventh to Eighth streets, be paved.

Severally referred to the Committee on Paving.

Of John Donnelly, Nathaniel Tucker, William Agnew, L. H. Kalla, H. P. Dunbar, Sophia A. Johnson, George E. Martin, A. C. Richmond and W. E. Coffin, for leave to erect stables. Severally referred to the Committee on Health.

Of George H. Lane et al., occupants of stores in Dock square and its immediate vicinity, representing that the high and dangerous buildings situated on the extension of Washington street, numbered 1 to 19 inclusive, are about to be torn down, and they pray that the same may be done between the hours of

7 P. M. and 7 A. M., to insure the safety and comfort of the travelling public as well as protecting the petitioners' goods from the dust and filth arising from such demolition during business hours. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Of Albert F. Cole, for leave to erect a wooden building on Broadway, South Boston. To Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Of G. W. & F. Smith, for leave to use a stationary engine and melting furnace on Frothingham street; order of notice passed for a hearing Sept. 1, at 4 P. M.

Of L. H. Tasker, treasurer, for leave to use a steam engine and boiler at 76 Chauncy street; order of notice passed for a hearing Sept. 1, at 4 P. M.

Of John P. Squire & Co., for the appointment of a board to act in conjunction with commissioners from other cities, for the purpose of making a thorough examination of Miller's River and recommending some comprehensive system of sewage of Boston and its vicinity into the open sea, at a great distance from its present places of discharge, or to suggest some other and better method of disposing thereof. Referred to the Committee on Sewers.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

On the order of notice on the petition of George W. Bowker for permission to use a caloric engine, no objection was offered, and the petition was recommitted to the Committee on Steam Engines.

The order of notice on the petition of Henry Souther for the removal of the tracks of the South Boston Railroad Company from their present location on Emerson street, between Broadway and Third street, to the centre of said street, was considered. Mr. O. W. Holmes, Jr., appeared for the railroad company, and suggested that the corporation, while ready to submit to any order of the Board, thought that in case the tracks should be moved, it should be done at the expense of the city. The corporation had expended considerably more money than is usually necessary for such purposes in bettering some of the defects in the highway when they laid the tracks. When the order was first passed for laying the tracks they inquired if it would be necessary to make any change, and they were instructed by the agents of the city to let the rails run where they were before. An expense has been incurred on the faith of the representations of the agents of the city, and therefore they did not think the expense should be put upon them.

The subject was recommitted to the Committee on Paving.

The order of notice on the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Company for leave to extend their location by construction of tracks in Stoughton street, from Hancock to Hudson street was considered. Several parties desired to be heard.

Mr. Perkins appeared for abutters on the line of the proposed extension. He said the abutters had had very little opportunity to be heard, and what few were present were there spontaneously. It is but a short distance from the present terminus of the Metropolitan Railroad to the place to which they intended to extend their lines, and it has long been asked that this should be done for their convenience. If it did not pay the railroad immediately it would soon be remunerative. What is desired by the inhabitants is that the location shall be granted to the railroad on condition that the rails are laid there and the cars be running some time between now and the first of January,—not simply to grant the location and then have a long time elapse before anything is done. If the Metropolitan Railroad don't wish to do this, other parties would be glad to make this extension.

Mr. Lincoln appeared for the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad, whose tracks will be crossed by the extension. Mr. Lincoln said the chairman of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Hart, could not be consulted in reference to the extension, he being out of the city, and the trustees would like to have a hearing before the Committee on Paving. The other parties had consented to a postponement.

Mr. E. Clapp said he would like to inquire whether the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad opposed this extension. It could not be any detriment to them, and perhaps it would be a help. The question is this: A large portion of the people of Boston live in the southwestern part of the city, and it is very difficult to get from Ward 16 to that portion of the city. Those who have carriages can go very comfortably, but it takes at least an hour and a half to walk from Upham's store down to Chester park to take the horse cars. It would be a great help for the railroad to run as far as Upham's Corner, and so far as the people in that vicinity are concerned, they are unanimously in favor of the city granting the location asked for.

Colonel E. O. Shepard appeared for the Metropolitan Railroad and stated that Mr. Jewell, counsel for the corporation, desired him to state that he did not object to the hearing asked for by the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad. The Metropolitan road desires to make the extension, but if there are any objections the company does not wish to stand in the way.

Mr. M. L. Bradford thought there was no doubt but that public convenience requires some communication between the eastern and western parts of the city. There are now no lines of public travel by which inhabitants of Ward 16 can reach the South End without first coming into the city proper. All the lines of steam and horse railroads diverge from the centre, with one exception. Those living in the Sixteenth Ward see the necessity of this communication. Whatever question there may be there is now no public conveyance by which they can get across there. If they want to go to the Boston & Providence Railroad they have got to come round through the centre of the city. Public convenience undoubtedly requires that this short piece of road, which would make a connection with the Mount Bowdoin line, should be constructed, that connection may be made between the Lower Mills through Roxbury and the South End. This will complete the circuit of communication with South Boston and the lower portions of the city. It should be done as a matter of public importance. In regard to the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad, if they have any objections, the company should be here to make them. When that road was built it was announced by the managers that it was not to cross any street at grade; it was to go under or over travelled roads. This matter of public convenience for travel should not be turned aside for the wishes of that road. They have had sufficient time to make their objections. It is important that this connection should be made immediately.

Mr. C. B. Fox had been requested to appear on account of his general knowledge of the business wants of the Sixteenth Ward, in regard to means of transportation. We are, he said, often met with objections that there is no communication between Ward 16, and the South End. There is a large section lying between the Grove Hall Railroad and the Four Corners, which have no means of communication with the southern part of the city, except by walking almost a complete circle. For a long time the inhabitants of that ward have been trying to get some means of communication; a petition, very largely signed, was presented to the Highland Railroad to extend a branch from the Mount Pleasant Station, and it was only after this application that the Metropolitan Railroad concluded to make the change. The petitioners submit that the Boston, Hartford & Erie have had the same amount of time that other parties have had; the notice has been published, and parties have been notified to appear. Now the Metropolitan Railroad, after having been forced to apply for the location, are found in complete accord with the Boston, Hartford & Erie in desiring a postponement, when it would seem to be necessary only for the Boston, Hartford & Erie to appear and state their objections. The inhabitants of Dorchester now have a certainty of getting it from one source, and do not wish any unreasonable delay on the part of those who have been forced to petition for this location.

Mr. Swan wished to add simply a word in favor of the petition. He was in the lumber business at Harrison Square, Ward 16, and spoke for three firms there. They have found a decided falling off in the trade with Roxbury on account of the inconvenience in getting from there to Ward 16. He had lost the sale of four houses because the man said he could not spend half a day in walking to Dorchester and back.

Mr. Perkins desired to know how long it would take for the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad Company to make up their minds.

Mr. Lincoln could not state exactly. Gentlemen forget it is very important to that road. He did not know to what extent the road would oppose this proposition, but certainly it is so important that they need time to consult the chairman of the trustees.

Mr. Perkins thought that so very important a matter might have secured the attendance of the proper officers of that road. They have as much interest in opposing this extension as the petitioners have in favoring it, and the latter hope that if the Board grant an extension of time it may be made as short as possible so that it may be known whether this great boon is to be granted by the corporation or not.

The Board voted to recommit the subject to the Committee on Paving.

A communication was received from Robert L. Spear, Chairman of Committee on Parade of the Grand Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, inviting his Honor the Mayor and the City Council to review the procession on the occasion of the State parade of the order on the 12th inst. Ordered to be placed on file.

The bond of W. L. Hicks, Constable, was presented approved by the City Treasurer. The Board concurred.

QUARTERLY REPORTS.

Of N. A. Apollonio, City Registrar, showing that during the quarter ending July 31 there have been received and paid to the Treasurer $592 for certificates of intentions of marriage.

Of H. A. Davis, Superintendent of the City Scales in Haymarket square, showing that during the quarter he has received $874 91, of which $270 85 have been paid to the City Treasurer.

Of the Overseers of the Poor, showing the receipts for the quarter to have been $16,662 90, including the balance on hand of $764 64, expenditures $13,608 03; paid City Treasurer $370 16; cash on hand $3449 35.

Severally read and sent down.

AUDITOR'S MONTHLY EXHIBIT.

The Auditor's monthly exhibit was presented in print, accepted and sent down for concurrence. The summary of the receipts and expenditures for the month ending August 1 is given, as follows:

	Appropriations, Revenues, etc.	Expended.	Unexpended.
General.....	$11,043,302 27	$3,155,575 72	$7,887,726 55
Special.....	8,998,372 21	3,011,410 95	5,986,961 26
	$20,041,674 48	$6,166,986 67	$13,874,687 81

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gibson from the Joint Standing Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, to whom was referred the petition of John Sullivan, reported in favor of granting the petition, and submitted the following order:

Ordered, That a license be issued, authorizing John Sullivan to construct a basement cellar on his premises, situated on the corner of Kneeland street and Albany street, and to place the bottom of said cellar nine and one half feet above mean low water; provided that the said cellar is properly boxed and constructed to the satisfaction of the Inspector of Buildings, and that the bottom thereof is either paved with brick laid in cement or covered with concrete. The said license to be issued subject to the provisions of chapter 377 of the acts of the year 1872.

Alderman Power asked for the reasons for departing from the law requiring people to keep up to the proper grade.

Alderman Gibson explained that the building was a storehouse and the cellar is valueless without this improvement. The plan is approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

Alderman Power asked if the petitioner had agreed to box the cellar.

Alderman Gibson replied that he had.

Alderman Sayward—The law provides that no building shall go below the grade of eighteen feet, but the city has power to allow persons to go below that. If this party does not comply with the requirements his license can be revoked at any time.

The report was accepted and the order passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the several petitions of Charles E. Dunn, J. O. Tjebblom & Co., David C. Sisson & Co., F. A. Marston, John K. Sinclair, James Clark & Co., Sargent Brooks, L. B. Hull and Eugene J. Sullivan; also in favor of granting petitions of various other parties for the transfer of wagon licenses. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported favorably on the application of William Brown, Patrick C. Ryan, Nathaniel Ferretti, Willy & Smith, John Gallagher, Martin E. Moran, William Housman, Lott Boody, and Louis Reynolds & Bros., for victuallers' licenses. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the petition of John B. Gurtz for leave to occupy a stable in Washington place. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported orders for a sewer in Kingston street, between Bedford and Summer streets; and in Norfolk avenue between Humphrey street and the N. Y. & N. E. R. R. in Humphrey street; in Stoughton street, between Humphrey and Myrtle streets, and in Myrtle street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported an order of notice for a hearing September 1, at 4 P. M. on the petition for a sewer in the rear of Beacon street between Otter and Berkeley streets; also an order of notice for a hearing August 25 on the petition of Joseph B. Moors et al. for a sewer in Buckingham street. Severally passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom was referred the petition of William Frost et al., reported an order for the watering of Columbus avenue, between the railroad bridge and Church street, at the expense of the city, at the cost of $175 per month.

Alderman Clark thought the sum named a pretty high price for that distance; in his section of the city a much larger territory is watered for $125 per month. He had no objection to the watering of the street, but thought it could be done at a less price.

Alderman Power said there is no comparison between the amount of water used in the two localities. This street is not paved, and the watering cart would have to go there half a dozen times to have the same effect that it would on Beacon or Arlington street. It is a difficult matter to get any one to water streets at this time, and the city is obliged to pay what they see fit to ask. The Committee on Paving have tried to get the price of watering the streets down, and to get this work done at a less price.

Alderman Clark asked if Mr. Jones, who did the city work, had been applied to.

Alderman Cutter (Alderman Gibson in the chair,) stated that the Superintendent of Streets wrote to several men who water streets, and found that this was the least it could be done for. People who water streets are not apt to do it so low for the city as they will for private parties who subscribe. If Alderman Clark had been through that section he must have seen the necessity of watering that street.

Alderman Clark expressed satisfaction with the explanation; the only question with him was whether it could be done at a less price.

The order was passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom was referred the petition of Charles Roberts for compensation for damages done to his estate at the corner of Ruggles and Alpine streets, caused by the lowering of the grade, reported an order for the payment of $800 to the petitioner. The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be requested to cancel the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse on Meetinghouse Hill, Ward 16, provided it can be done by the payment of the expenses incurred by the purchaser; the cost of said cancellation to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Alderman Sayward asked the object of passing such an order as this.

Alderman Power—A petition came to the Committee on Paving for a permit to move that schoolhouse. They visited the premises and found that the owner had purchased that schoolhouse at an auction by the Committee on Public Buildings, for $800. They found that it was a very good building for school purposes, and also learned in looking over the matter that there was a probability of that schoolhouse being wanted within a year. A new brick schoolhouse has been erected on Meetinghouse Hill, close to where this schoolhouse stands, and I presume the Committee on Public Buildings thought this wooden schoolhouse would not be needed, and therefore ordered it to be sold. I learned from the chairman of the School Committee of that district that in all probability it will be needed within a year. The Committee on Paving found that the city owned land enough close by to which this schoolhouse could be moved without interfering with the new schoolhouse. In view of all those circumstances it was thought not to be for the interest of the city to allow that schoolhouse to be taken away or torn down and it would be best to pay the expense of the sale if it can be done so. The chairman of the School Committee of the district assures me that extra accommodations will be needed this year. This house was just as good as it could be so far as to size. It has been somewhat disfigured by the purchaser, but to repair it would be only a trifling expense to what it would be to build a new building.

Alderman Sayward—This seems to me to be a rather singular proceeding. The explanation is that the Committee on Paving were applied to to give a license to remove this building. Instead of granting or refusing it, they have taken it upon themselves to investigate the doings of the Committee on Public Buildings, who, at the request of the City Government, have erected a new schoolhouse on Meetinghouse Hill, which has been very much needed there for many years. This old building was erected twenty-five years ago, and a portion of the school was kept there until the new one could be built. Now this may have been sold at a small or a large price, but it was sold with the understanding that it was to be taken down and removed under the direction of the Committee on Paving. The party who purchased it wanted to move it in as few pieces as possible; he wanted to cut it in two or three parts, so as to save as much as he could. The committee neither refuse or grant permission to move it, but they have agreed with that party to let it remain there until they can introduce this order of censure upon the Committee on Public Buildings. What has been sold is an old wooden shell; all the furnaces, etc., have been taken out, and on a fair estimate eight hundred dollars is a good price for it. This house is neither needed nor fit to remain there now. We have sold a mere shell for $810, on the condition that it shall be taken down without injury to the trees. If the party who bought it could have got a permit to move that building, it might, perhaps, be an advantage to him, if he proposes to fit it up for a dwelling house. The Committee on Public Buildings considered it was best to take the house out of the way. It will not be wanted for a year, and, if it is, there are other provisions for that district. A new building has been erected, and it is necessary to employ a watchman at night for fear the old one will be set on fire. For this reason the Committee on Public Buildings think they have done the best thing they could under the circumstances, and it appears that the Committee on Paving desire to censure the Committee on Public Buildings.

Alderman Power—The Committee on Paving have not the slightest desire to censure anybody. The petition came to that body for leave to remove that building; we did not think it could be moved without injury to the trees in the streets through which it would have to pass. The committee went out to look at the ground, and after going there we heard those statements I have made. I have a letter from the chairman of the District School Committee, stating that it would be needed within a year, and hearing that the city owns land on which it could be put by removing some horse sheds and putting it there, we thought certainly that the interests of the city should be consulted. It seems to me that the School Committee should be the best judges of the question whether or not it will be needed again. The gentleman says accommodations are provided for in case they are wanted. Now I understand that they intend to give the old almshouse for that purpose. I don't think it will be prudent to put children in the old almshouse, for it is not a proper place for them. As I stated before, we wish to disclaim any intention of interfering with the Committee on Public Buildings. But I have talked with several members of that committee and they tell me that they did not know anything about it and if they had known there was any probability of accommodations being needed there they would not have favored its sale. I don't see any reason why it should be set on fire any more than any other building. If this building can be moved for $500 it would be for the best interest of the city that this order should pass.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman says he disclaims any intention to censure. I can only say that actions speak louder than words. I had no knowledge that such an order was to be introduced. Common courtesy would have demanded that the Committee on Paving should have mentioned it to the chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings. But so far as that goes I care very little about it. The gentleman wants this bargain cancelled. He or some one else has already stopped proceedings. The ten days have elapsed and the building comes back to the city, the party who bought it has removed all the partitions within the buildings, and there is not even so much now as we sold him. Now the committee wants us to buy back that building. It would seem that the party has made a bad bargain. He is bound, to take it down and get it away from there. The foundation and all beneath the ground belongs to the contractor who built the other building. If we take it back the city will buy an old shell. The other building has been made with ample room for years to come. There are more rooms than they can fill today. It is a mixed school; the old house was never of sufficient capacity to comply with the regulations. At any time, whether one year or five years hence, the old almshouse can be fitted up at a slight expense for all the accommodations that may be wanted for ten years to come. For these reasons it is disrespectful for the Committee on Paving to attempt to pass such an order as this.

Alderman Power read a letter from Benjamin Cushing, chairman of the District School Committee, saying that "Every room in the new building will be occupied by September, and in his opinion they will need more space. In his opinion the old almshouse is unfit for a schoolhouse, the rooms being low, the building standing on the south side of a gravel bank with no proper playground about it. By removing the old schoolhouse three hundred feet as good accommodations will be obtained as will be needed, and by keeping the old house for future need a very considerable sum of money will be saved to the city."

Alderman Power—In relation to the purchaser of that building and the action of the committee; the former was notified that he could not have permission to move that building as it would injure the trees on the streets. As I stated before, we don't wish to censure anybody. We all see things in a different light. The Committee on Public Buildings thought it best to sell that schoolhouse; we thought differently, and this Board can decide the matter as they think best. We simply give our views on the matter and offer that order.

Alderman Sayward—It seems that the letter is in answer to an inquiry from the committee. It is not voluntary. Dr. Cushing is a gentleman and a particular friend of mine, but it appears to me that if he had any desire to have kept that schoolhouse he would have consulted the Committee on Public Buildings, who had the matter in charge. Now, sir, I say that the Committee on Paving have overstepped the bounds of their duty. It is for each committee to attend to their respective business, and when a matter comes up here for discussion, then is the proper time for objection. This matter is confined to one or two gentlemen in Ward 16, Dr. Cushing and his brother. He feared that some of those trees would be crushed if the building was moved. The doctor says he would be glad to have every building on the hill moved. This is the poorest building there; let us move it first.

Alderman Power—I will state again that when the Committee on Paving went out to view the premises, they heard that the School Committee did not wish it to be moved. As to the Committee on Paving going out of their way, now I want to know what they are here for. Of course all gentlemen will consider that it is our duty to look into the orders and recommendations of every committee. It is nothing more than our duty to look into the doings of every committee appointed for any purpose. It is our duty to know that the recommendations of any committee are proper before acting upon them. We took hold of this without any intention of slighting the Committee upon Public Buildings. Upon looking into this matter we thought differently from what we did at first. We think it is not for the interest of the city that this building shall be sold, and therefore we hope the order will pass.

Alderman Sayward—I don't wish to say that other committees' doings should not be investigated. But it should be done at the proper time; when this order came up that was the time to discuss it; not after it was passed without a dissenting voice. I believe we have done the best thing. I would like to know where the saving is to buy that old shell. There are other members of the School Committee who, by inquiry, will say in a letter that it is unfit for a schoolhouse.

Alderman Power—We have another important thing that I forgot to mention. It is customary for the School Committee, when they get through with a schoolhouse, to deliver it up to the City Government. I think that in this instance the School Committee have not said officially that they have got through with that building. In relation to the Almshouse, I think any member will only have to go there to convince himself of its unfitness for a schoolhouse.

Alderman Sayward—This comes from the same Dr. Cushing. Is not it the right of this City Government to sell any property without regard to the School Committee?

Alderman Quincy—Without going into the subject of the courtesy of the two committees, it seems to me that the Committee on Paving have travelled out of their track. I don't like this idea of the city hacking out of a bargain that it has made. But if a blunder has been made I think we should go back and correct it. If the purchaser has not made a good bargain, or if he has only paid the fair value of the property, I don't see why we should not as well have that money in the treasury as not. I hope the order will not pass.

Alderman Gibson—It was stated to the Committee on Public Buildings that we had built a schoolhouse to take the place of this one. I have never seen the building, and know nothing of it personally. The gentleman said it was somewhat dilapidated. I did not suppose that another schoolhouse would be wanted in that location, and only know of this by representation. All the members of the committee voted, on the representations made, to sell the house. Now with regard to the last speaker, the Committee on Paving rather hold the purchaser by the ears. If they don't give him permission to remove it he has got to tear it down. If they hold him to it, and he does not move it, it comes back to the city.

Alderman Sayward—I would call the attention of gentlemen to the fact that the sale had been advertised, and the terms were that the building should be taken down. He bought it understandingly. He would like to move it so that it can be got together again at the least expense possible. There is nothing for the committee to do except to say whether it is to be removed in larger pieces than the law will allow.

Alderman Power—I should think that Mr. Cushing is the best judge of what they intended to do. Persons I have conversed with say it is a most wanton piece of destruction to tear that building down. It is just as good a building as can be built of wood, and will answer all the purposes of any brick building. It is of a modern style, and if the damage that the purchaser has done is repaired, it will answer the purpose as well as any building that can be constructed. I say that if you do not pass this order it will put this city to an expense of ten or fifteen thousand dollars at least, which you may save if you leave the building there.

Alderman Sayward—I am obliged to the gentleman for disclaiming any censure. He just used the word wanton, and I should like to know if that is not censure, of the worst kind.

Alderman Gibson—I should like to inquire what is the size of the building.

Alderman Power—The gentleman can understand what is its size when the Chairman of the School Committee says it will accommodate three hundred children. It can be put in good order again at an expense of a thousand dollars, and be set upon the ground of the city, which is the very best for school purposes. In fact, there is no comparison between the old almshouse and that locality. If the building is sold, in my opinion it will be a great loss to the city.

Alderman Hulbert—I apprehend that this is a subject of which members of the Board know very little. I think it would be better to lay it on the table till the next meeting, with the understanding that a committee be appointed to investigate. I therefore move that it be laid on the table.

Members desiring to speak, the motion was temporarily withdrawn.

Alderman Sayward—I hope the matter will not be laid on the table. All the light gentlemen want has been given them. It would be doing wrong to the party who bought this building to let it go over. I think he is here in the room, or he was, awaiting some decision from the Committee on Paving as to moving the building down some other street in place of the one where it was thought the trees would be defaced. I think it would be better for both parties to settle this matter at the present time.

Alderman Power—I must confess I agree with Alderman Sayward. The purchaser is in a bad fix. Perhaps it would be as well to decide the question now as at any time. This Board will not make any mistake by passing that order. I am willing to stake my judgment on its passage.

Alderman Hulbert—My object in presenting this motion is simply this: There are two gentlemen presenting opposite views. It is a matter of some importance. We, to act judiciously, should know what we are voting on, and my object was simply to end the discussion at the present hour. I am perfectly willing to withdraw my motion and will abide by the Board.

Alderman Sayward—We have acted under the authority of the Board, and the question is, whether this Board will back up the Committee on Public Buildings, or whether they will pass the order of my friend, who, with his usual persistency, when he starts out on a thing, is bound to put it through. His arguments are against what he has argued in other matters. The School Committee ought to know how many truant officers they need—but did the gentleman vote for them?

Alderman Stebbins—Has the party paid for the building yet?

Alderman Sayward—We did not present the bill at once; the party is amply able to pay.

Alderman Gibson—We ought not to go round in the dark in this matter. Both the gentlemen opposite have good judgment, and if we have done wrong I am perfectly willing to confess it and take the right course. If here is a building that will accommodate three hundred scholars, and it can be saved for $800, why should we not do it?

Alderman Sayward—I cannot be moved until this question of the church's sheds is decided. The owners of the church don't want the sheds there. If the gentleman thinks he has done something wrong, we are perfectly willing to forgive him.

Alderman Power—Those sheds are a nuisance, and have been ordered to be taken away by the Mayor on two occasions, and yet it seems the people can keep them there without having any trouble.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman says there are certain horse sheds which are a nuisance; the order to have them removed has already gone forth. Now there are two or three which set over the line between the land of the First Parish and the City of Boston. Both the Town of Dorchester and the City of Boston have been travelling over the First Parish's land to get to the school buildings. This year the Committee on Public Buildings have made arrangements to have the right of way. We thought it would be nothing but right.

Alderman Gaffield—I have never known in all my experience in the City Government a Board of Aldermen whose members have ever acted with greater courtesy to each other than this. But I think that here we have a case in which there is some difference of opinion between members of the same committee.

I don't think any member meant anything disrespectful to the Committee on Public Buildings. The apparent disrespect arises from the fact that we have been away from the city for several days.

I have no doubt the gentleman intended to confer with the committee or with the Superintendent of Public Buildings. But we have been away for a fortnight and have not been together day by day as we have the rest of the year. The Committee on Sewers had occasion to go to the locality; I saw the building and thought it was a new one. The gentleman says he can get information from other members of the School Committee. Let us have this information at the end of a fortnight, and after having had a good time let us come together again and hury the hatchet.

Alderman Sayward—I disclaim any ill feeling. After we pass out of this room I don't expect either the gentleman or myself will be deadly enemies. I have been here today for hours, and the first of my hearing of this order was when it was offered. For that reason I would not desire it to be deferred any longer. There is no more information to be obtained on the subject.

Alderman Clark—There is quite a diversity of opinion in regard to this matter, and as it will require concurrent action, if the order should pass tonight nothing will be gained. Therefore, I move that the order be laid on the table, and in the meantime let members visit the locality and post themselves. I know something of the value of the building, and I think $800 a very small amount to pay for it. I don't think twenty thousand dollars will put up as good a one. If there is any chance of new accommodations, it would be better not to sell this one. I have no doubt that the Committee on Public Buildings have done what they deemed for the city's best interest; but as the passage of the order would not progress matters at all, and, as it has to go to the other branch, I move that it be laid on the table; though I withdraw the motion if any gentleman desires to speak.

Alderman Sayward—All these gentlemen, I have no doubt, have good judgment in regard to the value of buildings, but I will simply remark that from what the gentleman says that he knows nothing about it. But that is neither here nor there. This order requires concurrent action if we pass it, but if we kill it it will not.

Alderman Clark—I shall feel compelled to vote for the order today and I might not vote so two weeks hence.

Alderman Sayward—We are all liable to err in our judgment. There have been many buildings sold by the city of Boston which were very much more valuable than this. Gentlemen are sticking upon this building; they want it moved because the Chairman of the School Committee has said that they may need it. The gentleman's judgment may be worth something, and it may not. Other members of that committee say they don't want it. The gentleman says it may be set upon a rock. This is perfectly preposterous.

Alderman Power—The gentleman has stated that the Committee on Public Buildings had made arrangements for future accommodations. Now if there are not going to be future accommodations needed, why should they be looking for them? I hope this order will not be laid on the table, for the purchaser may go on and tear down the building and put the city to an expense of fifteen thousand dollars. In the Municipal Register the value of the house is put down at twenty-two thousand dollars. Such a building cannot be erected for twenty thousand dollars. The only safe way for us to economize is to pass this order.

Alderman Clark renewed his motion to lay on the table, and Alderman Power called for the yeas and nays. The vote was as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Hnhbert—4.

Nays—Aldermen Brown, Cutter, Emery, Gihson, Power, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins—8.

The question being on the passage order the vote stood—

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Gaffield, Gihson, Hnhbert, Power—8.

Nays—Aldermen Emery, Quincy, Sayward and Stebbins—4.

The order was accordingly passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, submitted the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Streets be and they hereby are authorized, in the settlement with John L. Gardner, for damages occasioned by the widening of Congress street, between Water and State streets, to make such terms with said Gardner, for the temporary occupancy of the portion of his estate taken to widen said streets, as the said committee shall deem expedient.

The order was read twice, and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, submitted orders to quit, giving notice to the heirs of T. Bigelow Lawrence to remove obstructions from Milk street by Sept. 1, and to the Liberty-square Warehouse Company, John Belknap, Daniel P. Stone and Benjamin F. White to remove obstructions from the extension of Oliver street by Feb. 27, 1873. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay as follows: Ebenezer Holden, $280 70, on account of Humphrey street widening; John N. Tileston, $1000, on account of widening of Blue Hill avenue; Charles H. Cotting, trustee, $90, 450, on account of the extension of Washington street to Haymarket square; heirs of Joseph Libby, $1500, on account of the widening of Federal street; John L. Gardner, $34,929, on account of the widening of Congress street; Francis B. Hayes, $13,450, on account of the widening of Washington street; H. Hollis Hunnewell, $33,875, on account of the widening of Essex street; Alden Avery, $1277 50, on account of the widening of Dudley street; Aaron C. Baldwin, $10,000, on account of the widening of Essex street; Adeline Bartlett, administratrix, $3945, on account of the widening of Hawley street; heirs of Solomon Piper, $5320, on account of the widening of Broad street; Bartholomew Otheman, $11,200, on account of the widening of Hanover street; Gardner Brewer, $13,590, on account of the widening of Washington street; George N. March, $52, on account of the widening of Hawley street; John H. J. Hincke, $1460, on account of the widening of Lincoln street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Gihson, from the Committee on Markets, submitted the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Markets be authorized to lease the stalls in Faneuil-Hall Market upon such terms as they may deem best for the interests of the city; provided, however, that no lease shall be granted for a term exceeding three years.

Alderman Stebbins said it was voted by the Committee on Licenses not to renew the leases of the outside stalls which expire at the same time. He would move an amendment that the committee be directed not to renew the outside leases.

Alderman Gihson—I presume it is well known to the members of the Board that the outside stalls are wooden structures, and that there are only two of them.

Alderman Stebbins—This matter of removing the stalls was brought before the committee by parties doing business on North Market street. I am informed by the Superintendent of Markets that these leases expire at the same time as the others. The committee is of the opinion that these outside stalls should be removed as soon as the lease expires. In South Market street there are two oyster shops and North Market street two. They should be removed forthwith.

Alderman Gihson explained his statement. If it was desired to make a clean sweep, they would have it done.

Alderman Brown—As I understand it, the committee have voted that these stalls should be removed at the earliest possible moment, and they have all been removed, except one on North Market street. The committee do not propose to renew these licenses, as I understand it. I don't think there is any thought of the Market Committee to re-lease them, or to let them continue.

Alderman Stebbins—In order to save trouble I move to so amend, so that the committee have no power to re-lease the outside stalls.

Alderman Sayward—The Committee on Licenses voted not to give those stands a license, and I hope the order will not be amended. Let us leave it to the honor of the committee.

Alderman Gihson—Some people say it is indispensably necessary to do this.

Alderman Sayward—Many people say things are necessary which this Board does not see fit to do.

The order offered by Alderman Gihson was then passed, and the following was offered by Alderman Stebbins:

Ordered, That the Committee on Faneuil-Hall Market be directed not to renew the leases of any stands outside the market building in South or North Market street.

Alderman Gihson asked how far this was intended to go.

Alderman Stebbins replied that it had special reference to the oyster stands, four or five in number.

Alderman Brown asked if it would prevent the Committee on Markets from leasing places for the sale of vegetables in connection with the market. If it does, I should hope it would not pass. He proposed that the order specify oyster or refreshment stands.

This was agreed to and the order was so passed.

On motion of Alderman Gihson, it was voted that when the Board adjourn it be for two weeks.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported no further action necessary on the petition of Moses Williams to be paid for grade damages to his property on Fort Hill, inasmuch as the petitioner has already obtained a judgment in court in favor of his claim. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to remove all obstructions extending over the line of Warren street, as widened by the Board of Street Commissioners, between Quincy street and Blue Hill avenue.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the vote referring the petition for the paving of Linwood square to the Committee on the Common was reconsidered, and the petition was referred to the Committee on Paving.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Alderman Clark moved to reconsider the vote accepting the report of the Committee on Public Instruction and rejecting an order to pay the teachers of the Normal School their salaries to the first of September.

Alderman Clark moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table. He explained that he wanted the members of the Board to post themselves on this subject by obtaining information as to their legal rights.

Alderman Gaffield said the vote had been passed ten to two at the last meeting, but he would vote to lay it on the table if the gentleman had n't information enough already.

Alderman Power desired the question to be divided.

Alderman Sayward asked if a motion to reconsider had been made; he had not heard it, and raised the point of order that no question was before the Board.

Alderman Brown asked if it was in order to make a motion like that of Alderman Clark.

The Chair ruled that it was.

Alderman Power understood that the Alderman from Ward 6 gave notice to the clerk of intention to move a reconsideration, and now he moves to lay it on the table. I contend there is no question before us.

Alderman Clark—I gave notice of my intention to reconsider within the required time, and I now ask that that motion be laid on the table. This is perfectly in order as declared by the Chair.

Alderman Sayward—That is simply moving to lay the request made to the Clerk on the table. If the Chair decides that in order, I shall appeal from the decision.

Alderman Quincy—The motion can be laid on the table. The gentleman can say, "I move to reconsider and I move to lay it on the table."

Alderman Clark—I intended to move to reconsider, and if I did not I now make that motion.

Alderman Power asked if the motion to reconsider was the question before the Board.

Alderman Clark—Any other member has the right to move to lay a motion to reconsider on the table; why has not the original mover the same right?

Alderman Gibson—The gentleman has made this request and I am willing to grant it provided he will not bring the subject up unless the members are all present. I don't want him to spring a trap on us.

Alderman Clark—This is the first time anything of this kind has ever taken place since I have been in this Board. I have no intention of springing a trap on the gentleman.

Alderman Power—I don't understand that the vote has been reconsidered. The gentleman comes in, and moves to reconsider and then moves to lay it on the table.

Alderman Clark—I see that the Alderman is as clear as he usually is on subjects that he talks upon. It is perfectly in order to move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table. My object is this: If I were to move a reconsideration of that vote to-night I should lose it, but in order to save it, I ask to have it laid on the table, to be kept alive so that some members of the Board can post themselves up and see that they have done wrong in not voting to pay the salaries of these teachers. The matter can be killed two weeks hence just as well as now.

Alderman Gaffield—There is one thing I wish the Board to recollect. The master of this school is advertising for pupils. If we pass this vote it will go abroad that we have not made up our minds on this subject. Still I will vote for it if the Alderman will bring it up at the next meeting.

Alderman Clark promised to bring it up at the next session of the Board.

Alderman Gibson—I don't like to choke off a member from an investigation that he desires to make. But I wish it understood that I am not in for paying these teachers. I don't want to be trapped in the future, but as I have the word of the Alderman I will vote for the motion.

Alderman Hulbert—In obedience to the request of Alderman Clark this week I called on the City Solicitor and put the question to him, whether we have any right to pay these teachers, and he said we have no right to pay them. This being so unquestionable, it seems to me that I cannot reasonably assent to having the motion laid on the table. With all regard for my friend from Ward 6, I think it would imply too much. I find my hands perfectly tied. I have no prejudice. The City Solicitor says you can do certain things and you cannot do certain other things. This has been definitely stated by him. Having seen him and got this opinion from him, I must vote against this motion.

Alderman Clark—If all the members have had an opportunity to consult the City Solicitor, I ask no further delay. It is merely to give members an opportunity to talk with the City Solicitor that I made this motion. I have been to see him, but have not been able to find him. According to his opinion, this has been illegal for twenty years, and we have had no legal right to pay a salary to any person employed in the Normal School.

Alderman Clark then withdrew both the motion to reconsider and lay on the table.

FIRE APPARATUS FOR CITY HALL.

Alderman Sayward said he had a report to present from the Committee on Public Buildings. He did it from a sense of duty. But the Board had just passed a very discourteous order. He should hope that the report would be discussed and passed upon, but after the action this afternoon he felt some diffidence and hoped that if there is anything in the report that members do not understand they would satisfy themselves before passing it over. The report is as follows:

The Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings beg leave to report that they witnessed an exhibition of the invention of Hon. E. S. Tobey as a means of extinguishing fires upon the roofs of large buildings, and would recommend the adoption of the same for the City Hall. The building is already supplied with the high service, which, together with the required tanks and fixtures to retain the water upon the roof, will give the city the benefit of this invention at a small expense. The committee would recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide the necessary fixtures for the adoption of Hon. E. S. Tobey's invention for extinguishing fires upon the roofs of large buildings and cause the same to be placed upon the City Hall building, the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

Alderman Brown asked that the report be laid over. He was absent at the time the matter was introduced. The City Hall has stood so long that it won't be very disastrous to let the matter lie over.

Alderman Sayward only desired to do his duty. He had no desire to press the subject.

Alderman Clark hoped the order would be adopted, and that speedily. It is of the utmost importance that the apparatus be put into the City Hall and Public Library and every other public building. It is no argument that this building has stood for some time. We are having fires constantly, and it was only the other day that an appliance attached to a building in Roxbury saved it from being burned.

Alderman Stebbins inquired what the expense would be.

Alderman Sayward said he supposed it would be, probably, a thousand or fifteen hundred dollars. There are already stand pipes in the interior of the building, and all that is needed will be to place stand pipes on the outside.

Alderman Hulbert thought this one of those things on which it would do well to take a little time for proper consideration. He had no doubt but that it is all right.

Alderman Clark hoped members would be allowed an opportunity to see the operation of this appliance. It has been shown to great satisfaction on the Congregational building to members of the Board. It is an absolute protection to the entire roof of the building, and on the City Hall it would protect both the roof and dome.

Alderman Brown withdrew his objection to a second reading of the order.

Alderman Sayward hoped the order would be laid over.

Alderman Gibson explained the construction and operation of the apparatus.

Alderman Hulbert did n't want to vote for anything that he didn't know anything about. If the majority of the Board had witnessed this operation and were satisfied with it he would offer no objection.

The subject was then laid over, and on motion of Alderman Brown the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

AUGUST 25, 1873.

The regular meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock this afternoon, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

Thirty-five traverse jurors were drawn for the September term of the Supreme Judicial Court.

EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

Special Police Officers without pay—William Hannan, Lyceum Hall, Ward 16; Melville DuCrowe, Boston Young Men Christian Association building, corner Elliot and Tremont streets; James McCartney, 221 Washington street.

Railroad Police—Boston & Albany Railroad, C. H. Chase; Boston & Providence Railroad, George E. Black, Warren S. Brown, Charles H. Crummett, William D. Thurston, Joseph O. Mowry, Hiram Eldridge, station agents; Benjamin P. Williams, Emmons Metcalf, Joseph N. Weaver, conductors; H. W. Pettengill, Charles W. Gleason, John McIntire, watchmen.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Of R. J. Elder, to build a wooden stable on Border street, exceeding the legal dimensions.

Of McQuesten & Fogg, to enlarge a lumber shed at 170 Border street.

Of Davis Damon, to make additions to wooden building exceeding the legal dimensions, at 64 Eaton street.

Of Charles P. Clark, trustee Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad, to erect a wooden building on Boston wharf, for coal shed for use of the corporation.

Severally referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Of Joshua D. Howard, to occupy a wooden stable on Earl street.

Of Joseph Ham, to occupy a brick stable in rear of Fort avenue, opposite old stand pipe, and remonstrance of Uriel H. Crocker, et al., against granting the same.

Of Peter E. Brandley, to occupy a wooden stable on Downer street, Ward 15.

Of Jacob Edwards, to occupy stable on Maple avenue.

Of Manuel Silva, to occupy stable on Van Winkle street, Ward 16.

Of Prescott Chapin, to occupy stable on Liverpool wharf.

Of Adeline P. Flanders, to build stable on Fenton and Greenwich streets.

Of Patrick Norton, to erect stable on Pearl street, Ward 16.

Severally referred to the Committee on Health on the part of the Board.

Of James S. Little, et al., for a clock on the tower of the Church of the Holy Trinity, now erecting on Shawmut avenue; to Committee on Fire Alarms.

Of W. C. Kingsbury, et al., that Groton street be paved with wood or stone blocks.

Of trustees of estate of Robert C. Hooper, to be paid for grade damages on Cottage street.

Of John G. Webster, et al., that Boylston street between Berkeley and Clarendon streets be paved with wood.

Of Jewett & Pitcher, et al., that a portion of Condor street be gravelled.

Of David A. Berry, et al., that edgestones be set on Fifth street, between K and M streets.

Of William Donaldson, et al., that the obstruction at the corner of Walnut avenue and Rockland street be removed.

Severally referred to Committee on Sewers.

Of W. R. Clark, that the piles in the dock at the foot of Belcher's lane may be removed; to Committee on Public Lands on the part of this Board.

Of Rumrill & Stanton, et al., for sewer in Catawba street.

Of W. R. Clark, for a sewer through Foster's wharf, from Broad street.

Of Amos A. Stevens et al., for sewer in Condor street, from Meridian street to Putnam street.

Severally referred to Committee on Sewers.

Of Henry Lee representing that in the year 1868 he decided to the city 161 feet of land on Bedford street, at the corner of Lincoln street, for which he received no money, and his neighbor on the opposite side of Lincoln street obtaining from a jury an award of $32 per foot for his land taken by the city. Petitioner's compensation was the widening of Bedford street, for which he did not much care, also and chiefly, the setting back of Church Green 19 feet, which brought 19 feet of petitioner's Bedford-street front on a square. By the widening of Lincoln street the petitioner now loses 5 feet out of 19 feet, or more than a quarter of the consideration, for which loss he asks compensation, as the price awarded for the land taken on Lincoln street had to be in proportion to other awards, based on the value of the land only. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Of occupants of Faneuil Hall Markets, that the hour of closing said markets be at 5 P. M., excepting Saturdays at nine, and the evenings before Thanksgiving and Christmas, which shall be at the discretion of the Market Committee, the same to be inserted in the forthcoming leases. Of the 162 stalls of the market 120 are in favor, 18 are neutral, and 22 are against the closing, and 3 are not represented on the petition.

Remonstrance of Curtis & Co. et al., against the proposed change of time of closing Faneuil Hall Markets, and that they be closed at 5 P. M., excepting Saturdays and holidays, from Oct. 27 to Jan. 27 inclusive. Also petition of Lewis Rice & Son, and other hotel keepers, in aid of the remonstrance, and asking for a hearing.

Severally referred to Committee on Markets.

ORDER OF NOTICE.

The order of notice for a sewer in Buckingham street being considered, no objection was offered, and the subject was recommitted to the Committee on Sewers.

On the order of notice on the petition of John Ritchie et al., for leave to use a steam engine, no objection being offered, the petition was recommitted to the Committee on Steam Engines.

FANEUIL-HALL MARKET.

The report of C. B. Rice, Superintendent of Faneuil-Hall Market, for the quarter ending July 31, was received. During the quarter $21,092 57 have been received, as follows: Stalls, $10,396 50; cellars, $5385; permanent outside stands, $708 75; weighing at market scales, $88 82; stalls in new market, $3030; cellars in new market, $1462 50; for tree stand, $21. The report was ordered to be placed on file.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The order from the Committee on Public Buildings for applying Hon. E. Tobey's apparatus for extinguishing fires to City Hall came up as unfinished business.

Alderman Gibson remarked that he had never had the pleasure of seeing the apparatus work, but some parties who were interested in another pattern had told him that if the wind happened to be blowing it would drive the water all on one side. He, however, had no experience in the matter and would make no objection.

The order was read a second time and passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of Martin Lennon to be paid for land taken to widen Dearborn street and Hartopp place; and of George H. Lane et al. that the removal of buildings on the Washington-street extension be done at night. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay, as follows: Martha H. Bancroft, $2000, on account of Federal-street widening; Alden Avery, $1335 90, on account of Dudley-street widening; John Richardson, $248 25, on account of widening of Cottage street; heirs of James Otis, $29,808, on account of the widening of Broad street. The orders were severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the application of Matthias F. Horgan for hack stand at 253 Dorchester street; transferring license, No. 604, from Thomas Humphrey to James King; of Tompkins & Thayer for license for the Boston Theatre for the ensuing season; of William H. Vialle to deal in second-hand articles at 130 and 132 Fulton street; of Heman Kalish to deal in second-hand articles at 44 Salem street; of Aaron Aronson, for pawnbroker's license, at 27 Kneeland street; of William P. Pierco, for auctioneer's license, at 168 Brooks street; of transfer of billiard license to Henry C. Pratt, Neponset avenue, to W. A. Stevens; of John T. Harris, for auctioneer's license, at 29 Pemberton square; of George K. Saville, for billiard license, at corner of Warren and Palmer streets. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported in favor of granting victuallers' licenses to John Nichols, 230 Broadway; M. J. Kelly, corner Dorchester and Eighth streets; Patrick C. Ryan, 50 Endicott street; P. M. Denon, 871 Washington street; William Benson, 312 Dover street; Frank A. Caswell, 59 Shawmut avenue; George K. Saville, 4 Warren street.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on the following applications for victualler's license: James Keenan, 96 Maverick street; John Fleming, 1013 Tremont street; also in favor of renewal of license of Ann M. Schultze, Employment Agency, 1749 Washington street; also leave to withdraw on application of C. K. Miller for billiard license at 112 Harvard street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported orders revoking the license of John M. Towne, victualler, 769 Washington street, and Cornelius McCarthy, a newsboy. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported in favor of the approval of the transfer of sixteen wagon licenses as petitioned for, and in favor of granting wagon licenses to A. J. Boies, Daniel O'Hern, Thomas W. Kennamon, Joseph Mead, L. Stratton, John Lynch. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Faneuil Hall, reported in favor of granting the petition of T. C. Meagher, et al., for leave to use Faneuil Hall on the evening of September 8th, for the purpose of holding a mass meeting to consider the expediency of the present Prohibitory law. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the petitions of Nathaniel Tucker, William Agnew, A. C. Richmond, W. E. Coffin, H. P. Dunbar, to erect wooden stables; also, leave to withdraw on petition of L. H. Kalla for same. Severally accepted.

A requisition for $1601 68, for the expenses of Suffolk County Jail during the month of September, was received from Sheriff Clark, the same having been audited by the City Auditor. The bills were approved by the board.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the petition of George W. Bowker for leave to use a caloric engine at the corner of Albany and Dedham streets. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported an order for the construction of a sewer in Buckingham street, which was passed.

Alderman Power offered the following:
Ordered, That the Committee on Police be authorized to erect a new flag staff upon "Tommy's Rocks" so called, in place of the old one, which has become decayed and dangerous, at an expense not exceeding four hundred and seventy-five dollars; to be charged to the appropriation for Police.

On motion of Alderman Clark the order was referred to the Committee on Police.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders for the removal of obstructions from Gold street, Silver street and Bowen street. The orders were severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark offered the following:
Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to William R. Clark, the sum of one hundred and sixty thousand dollars, upon his giving to the city a deed of the estate on Broad street, known as Fort Hill wharf, and also a release of all damages occasioned to said estate from the widening of Broad street, said Clark to have the buildings and other fixtures on said estate, which are within the lines of Broad street as widened, and the privilege of occupying the whole of said estate free of rent until the first day of April, A. D. 1874, and of occupying the portion remaining after the widening of Broad street, thereafterwards until wanted by the city, upon such terms as the Joint Standing Committee on Streets may direct; the said deed and release to be satisfactory to the City Solicitor, and said sum of one hundred and sixty thousand dollars to be charged to the Board District Loan.

The order was read once and laid over under the rule. Alderman Clark called attention to the importance of the subject, and hoped the members would be prepared to vote upon it at the next meeting. The city has taken a part of Fort-Hill wharf for the widening of Broad street. When Northern avenue is extended it will be necessary to take the entire wharf, and it has been deemed advisable by the Street Commissioners to take the whole of the property at the present time instead of awarding damages now, allow the proprietor to go on and make improvements, and then, in the course of three or four years, to take it and pay another bill for damages. The proprietor proposes to lease the wharf and pay seven per cent. interest on the amount which the city is to pay for it.

THE MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

Alderman Sayward moved the suspension of section 11 of the rules of the Board. He explained that he wished to move a reconsideration.

Alderman Power asked the reason of this departure from the rules. He had n't got any new light on the schoolhouse matter, and unless good and sufficient reason was given he should vote against a reconsideration.

Alderman Sayward—I desire to reconsider the order directing the Committee on Public Buildings to cancel the contract for the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse. I neglected to move a reconsideration at the last meeting, and neglected to leave notice with the Clerk within the prescribed time. I will endeavor to give further explanation if the rules are suspended.

Alderman Power remarked that he would not oppose a suspension of the rules, and they were accordingly suspended by a unanimous vote.

Alderman Sayward—I now move to reconsider the vote by which was passed the order authorizing the Committee on Public Buildings to cancel the contract between the city and the party who purchased the schoolhouse in the Mather District. In moving this reconsideration I desire to say that the passage of that order accomplished no particular object. The thing remains the same as at the last meeting. But the party who purchased the building has been deprived of the privilege of removing it either whole or in part, or in pieces. As is well known the building was sold under certain conditions; the party applied to the proper authorities for permission to remove it, and, if I am correctly informed, no action has been taken on that petitioned by the Committee on Paving, so that all the debate of two weeks ago, when it was charged upon the Committee on Paving of doing certain things out of the general run, amounts to nothing, for since then I have been informed that no action had been taken by that committee on this matter. I ask that this committee may have a chance to grant permission to the man to move the building or refuse it. As it stands now he is waiting for two weeks, and expected that some decision in reference to the moving of the building would be given on the day of the last meeting. He was told by parties that it would be settled on that day, and he informs me that he can move it by cutting it in two or three pieces with out injury to the trees. He is waiting out of courtesy to the gentleman who at the outset gave him some encouragement that he would be allowed to move it. I also understand that he applied to the Superintendent of Streets and to one of the Committee on Paving, and was told that they thought there could be no objections. I also understand that they almost gave permission, but decided to wait until two weeks ago, when it was to be settled. The Committee on Public Buildings have no right to make any bargain to cancel that contract until the order has passed both branches. I have also consulted the City Solicitor, who says the Committee on Public Buildings have no authority in the matter. The old building stands right against the new one, endangering it every day. We have had two fires in unoccupied houses in Dorchester lately. Another reason for removing this old building is that school begins a week from today, and the old building obstructs the light of the new one. If the building is allowed to remain the school must wait over a week or two until the old structures can be moved and the ground be graded. For these reasons I hope the order will be reconsidered.

Alderman Power—None of the reasons mentioned had anything to do with the action that was taken, so far as I was concerned. I have no reason to think our action should be amended. I stated at the last meeting, on the best authority, that the schoolhouse would be needed, and to sell it would put the city to a great expense. In my opinion it would be best to cancel the contract and put the schoolhouse on the site of the sheds which the people in the vicinity say are an intolerable nuisance. Then, if the city within two or three years wants a new schoolhouse, several thousand dollars will be saved. I don't know that any considerations for the purchaser of that building had anything to do with my action. I acted simply for the interest of the city, which is to have that sale cancelled if it can be done.

Alderman Sayward—The gentlemen who have done this business for the city thought it was not a question for them to consider whether it would save the city anything; the question was for the Committee on Paving to decide whether that man should remove that building or not, and not what were the accommodations for schools in Ward 16. I find that the information the gentleman received was by a note directed to Dr. Cushing by the Secretary of the School Committee. That communication was used for a purpose other than it was intended for. Dr. Cushing thinks the city ought to remove that building, and he further objects to it as a schoolhouse because the city does not own the materials under the building. He is not in favor of cancelling this contract. Those sheds belong to the First Church in Dorchester; they are said to be over the street line, and if so the city has no authority to move the house there. If the site is in the street the street must be discontinued before it can be used by anybody; and if it is discontinued it will revert to the original owners. But these questions have no particular bearing on the case. The schoolhouse is there; it is as cheap a building as could be built at the time it was erected. It cost eight thousand dollars twenty-five years ago. A new and better one, adapted to school purposes, could be built today for ten thousand dollars. The city owns property there now which can be put in a great deal better shape for school purposes for less money if it is so desired. If they use this building they would have only nine rooms, whereas in the new one they have ten. The new building was erected to meet all the wants of the district for ten years. They may divide the classes and put part of them in the old building, but they will not use it with full classes. I also understand that they have one additional teacher more than the law allows. There is no need of this old building being there.

Alderman Quincy—I have not heard anybody say that this purchaser desires to rescind his contract, and it seems to me we are rather losing sight of his rights in this matter. He has bought this building and goes to the Committee on Paving, who, instead of giving him permission to move it, make him wait. Suppose he says it is a bargain and he don't want it rescinded. If he says he is satisfied with his bargain I am in favor of voting for the reconsideration. If he wants to rescind it I am ready to vote for that.

Alderman Gibson—The pith of the whole thing is just here: He bought the building with the condition that he would remove it. The Committee on Paving go there and discover that the city would lose a great deal of money by allowing it to be removed. He can't put that building in the street unless they give him permission. He bought it with the express understanding that the building would be taken down. They know that if the building is taken down it will be greatly diminished in value, and they have a right to hold him at bay until this question is settled. If the gentlemen differ honestly, as I have no doubt they do, I would like to see this building myself. I voted for the sale, but I am ready to be forgiven if I have done wrong. There should be no obstinacy here. Every gentleman should be in duty bound to visit the building. That man has a right to take the building down today if he sees fit, and the Committee on Paving have the right to give him permission to remove it. He has not suffered at all, because it was bought with condition that he should take it down.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman argues that the purchaser has no right to come here and ask for anything. The Committee on Paving have no right to hold him at bay. I am not afraid of what I have done, but if he has done anything wrong he can be forgiven. As a member of the Committee on Public Buildings, it was his duty to have gone to see it.

Alderman Brown—The disposition of the matter made at the last meeting, as I understand it, was to rescind the sale and refer it back to the Committee on Public Buildings. Now, has anything been done to cancel that contract?

Alderman Sayward—There has not, because it has to pass both branches.

Alderman Quincy—This man ought to have an answer. If he is still satisfied with his contract, I don't think he ought to be kept in uncertainty; when he has had an answer then he will know whether he wants to rescind the contract or not.

Alderman Gibson thought that as the purchaser had bought the building under the condition that it be moved, he had no claim before the Board. He could make considerably more of the bargain if he could be allowed to move it. The building would have sold for four times as much if that condition had not been put in.

Alderman Sayward said it could be moved in two, or three or four pieces, and the man was waiting an answer from the Committee on Paving; the restrictions were put on the sale by vote of the committee, and it was done to protect the trees.

Alderman Gibson said it had been represented to him that the building was dilapidated. The Committee on Paving are doing their duty. That man has made a contract, and if permission is given to move the building, he will make a dollar or two out of it; and what kind of a way is that to act for the taxpayers. It is robbing them to benefit speculators.

Alderman Sayward denied using the word dilapidated. He was not asking the committee to give the man permission, but he wanted them to do right and decide whether they will give him permission or not. What he complained of is that there had been no action by the committee.

Alderman Power said the purchaser is perfectly willing to wait. If it had been known at that sale that the building could be moved, it would have brought three times as much as it did. If it is to be torn down he will be glad to return it to the city. It has been intimated that he has been given some extraordinary privileges that no one else could have. I also understand that the church would much prefer to have these sheds removed, for they are a nuisance. It is only necessary for the Board to go there and see the sheds, and that building. If it was built for $8000 twenty-five years ago, we all know we can't build such a one for three times that amount. The building can be put on the other place for $500. If there is no prospective need of a new schoolhouse, it may be well enough to let this contract be carried out.

Alderman Sayward differed from Alderman Power in regard to the cost of the building. He did not know that any one would make money out of it. Dr. Cushing thinks it would be policy to buy it back.

Alderman Power said that when he went there individually he thought it would not be for the interest of the city to sell the schoolhouse. He knew parties who would give three times what that man gave if they could move it.

Alderman Sayward said he did not propose to go out of his way to investigate matters not belonging to his duty. The proceedings in this case were certainly very extraordinary.

Alderman Clark proposed a postponement of the subject until the next meeting, that members could go out then and see the building.

Alderman Sayward opposed postponement. The party wants the building on the conditions under which he bought it, but it would save him a little money if he could be allowed to move it in pieces.

Alderman Power had no doubt the Committee on Public Buildings were doing what they deemed best for the interest of the city; he thought otherwise, and felt it his duty to come here and say so.

Alderman Sayward said it would have been better to have carried it before the committee, and not brought it before the Board in the way it was done.

The motion of Alderman Clark to postpone was passed.

Alderman Sayward moved to reconsider the vote, and called for the yeas and nays on the motion, and the vote stood—

Yeas—Aldermen Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins—3.

Nays—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Gibson, Hulbert, Power—7.

The motion to reconsider was lost, and the further consideration was assigned to Monday next.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Committee on County Buildings be and they are hereby authorized to cause such repairs and alterations to be made in the Court House and Probate Building, as may be required; provided said repairs and alterations do not exceed the sum of five thousand dollars, in addition to the amount heretofore authorized during the municipal year, and to be charged to the appropriation for the County of Suffolk.

Ordered, That the Committee on County Buildings be and they are hereby authorized to provide the necessary new furniture and cause such repairs to be made upon the old as may be required in the Court House and Probate Building, also for the Municipal Court rooms in the Highland and Dorchester districts during the municipal year; said expenditure to be charged to the appropriation for the County of Suffolk.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be instructed to close the rooms in the school building on Newton street, heretofore occupied by the Normal School, so called.

Ordered, That the City Solicitor be authorized and directed to enforce payment of the policies of insurance obtained by William Smith & Co. in favor of the City of Boston on the Hospital Building on Swett street, which was destroyed by fire on the 26th of December, A. D. 1872.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the bill of the Boston Gas Light Company, amounting to two hundred and fifty-nine dollars and fifty cents, for gas furnished to inflate the large balloon for the city on July 4, 1872, be paid, said claim having been accidentally omitted in the settlement of the bills for the observance of that day; and that the said sum be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Ordered, That the Chief of Police be directed to close against the passage of vehicles so much of Pine street as may be necessary to facilitate the removal of the front of building No. 6 Pine street, which has been ordered by the Inspector of Buildings.

INSPECTION OF BUILDINGS.

The report of David Chamberlin, Inspector of Buildings, for the half year ending June 30, 1873, was received. The report gives the following statistics:

Permits Issued—Brick, stone or iron buildings, 373; wooden and frame buildings, 456; repairs, alterations and additions, 611; special permits, 14; steam boilers, etc., 31; notices intention to put in furnace, 27; total, 1492. Walls—Belt course not balanced, 1; building party walls in advance of rear walls, 1; cutting doorways in party walls, 1; cutting doorways in party walls without iron doors, 1; marble facing insecurely tied; not corded, 20; not corded full thickness, 2; improperly bonded, 1; not properly supported, 4; not thick enough, 21; not carried through roof, 9; out of plumb, 1; recessing party walls, 1; stone facing of insecurely tied, 3; supported by wooden posts, 1.

Water closets—none, 1. Wood-hearth trimmer, 1. Number of violations by wards—1, 25; 2, 85; 3, 71; 4, 84; 5, 220; 6, 35; 7, 80; 8, 54; 9, 45; 10, 88; 11, 23; 12, 44; 13, 30; 14, 29; 15, 37; 16, 28. Total, 978.

Fire Escapes—In March last an examination was begun of buildings in which operatives are employed above the second story, and which are required to be provided with sufficient means of escape, with the following result:

Buildings examined, 539; notices sent out requiring fire escapes, 240; buildings having and not requiring fire escapes, 299; notices satisfactorily complied with, 100; notices responded to, being built and partially completed, 140; number of fire escapes required for buildings through the ordinary operations of the department, 69.

The report was accepted and sent down.

INSPECTION OF PRISONS.

Alderman Gibson presented the first semi-annual report of the Committee on the Inspection of Prisons and Houses of Detention in Suffolk County for the year 1873, being City Document No. 102. The committee, consisting of Aldermen Gibson, Emery and Bigelow, visited the various prisons and houses of detention on the 17th of June of the current year, and the following is a summary of the report on each institution for that date:

House of Correction. The health of the prisoners has continued very good. The prison is kept clean. Only one prisoner occupies a cell at one time. Deprivation of bed and solitary confinement are the punishments. Good discipline is maintained. Since the inspection, in December last, the number of inmates has increased 135; consequently there are more prisoners than there are cells to put them in. At present, 83 males are lodged in the prison attic, and 55 in the upper part of the brush shop—an arrangement which is not only dangerous but illegal.

Remaining as last report, 405; committed from Jan. 1 to June 17, 1873, inclusive, 446; total commitments, 851; pardoned by the Governor, 5; paid fine and costs, 15; died, 6; transferred to Lunatic Hospital, 2; discharged by Municipal Court, 20; escaped, 2; expiration of sentence, 261; total 311; remaining June 17, 1873, 540.

Lunatic Hospital. Remaining, 190—males 100, females 90; discharged during the term, 16; number in hospital Dec. 31, 1872, date of former inspection, 200—males 105, females 95; admitted since, 6—males 2, females 4; whole number under care during the term, 206; discharged during the term, 16; recovered, 3; improved, 2; not improved, 3; died, 8. Of the 8 deaths, 4 were from consumption, 2 from disease of the heart, 1 from general paralysis, and 1 from softening of the brain. Names of those who have died: Joseph L. Gifford, Edward Moylan, Elizabeth F. Stuart, Sarah Myrick, Ann Ayrin, Alexander P. Macomber, Catherine McCarty and Edward Hall. The health of the hospital has been very good. No one has died of whose recovery to mental health there was the slightest hope.

The County Jail. Number of prisoners held at that time, 164; number of prisoners at the date of previous inspection, 201; number committed between those dates was 1587; the general health of the prisoners during the present year has been good, no cases of sickness have occurred except from smallpox. During the prevalence of that disease five persons who had it were committed to the jail. Two of the number were sent to Gallop's Island, and died there; the other three were sent to Hospital No. 2, in Roxbury, and subsequently returned convalescent.

House of Industry. Remaining as per last report, January 1, 1873, 575; committed from January 1 to August 4, 1873, inclusive, 3965; total, 4540; discharged from January 1 to August 4, 1873, 3795; remaining August 4, 1873, 745—men 418, women 327; total 745.

The attention of the Government is called to the fact that both the male and female prisons contain but two hundred cells each, making four hundred in all. At this date there are seven hundred and forty-five prisoners—three hundred and forty-five more than there are cells in both prisons, who have to be lodged on prison platforms and in dormitories. Strict attention is paid to cleanliness in all departments. Good and wholesome food in sufficient quantity is provided.

House of Reformation. The number of commitments since the date of the previous inspection (Jan. 1st) was as follows: Habitual truants, 42; juvenile vagabonds, 44; larceny, 29; breaking and entering, 3; stubbornness, 4; idle and disorderly, 1; common drunkard, 1; total, 124. The number discharged by expiration of sentence was 87; by pardon of directors on probation, 28, total, 115. Remaining by last report, 299; committed from Jan. 1st to Aug. 4th, 1873, inclusive, 124; total 423. Discharged from Jan. 1st to Aug. 4th, 1873, inclusive, 115; remaining Aug. 4th, 1873, 308. Boys, 279; girls, 29; total, 308.

From the date of the last inspection till May 1, all inmates of this department attended school. Since May 1, some seventy-five of the larger boys have been employed on the farm and in various kinds of outdoor labor. The inmates are well and comfortably clothed and fed, and their health has been good. The boys' department of this institution is overcrowded, in consequence of which no proper classification of the inmates can be made.

The report was accepted and placed on file.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Alderman Clark presented City Document, No. 88, being the 21st Annual Report of the Trustees of the Public Library, as follows:

In conformity with the requirements of the fourth section of an ordinance concerning the Public Library, passed September 21, 1869, the Trustees have the honor to present to the City Council their Twenty-first Annual Report, being the fourth made under the new ordinance, and including the results of administration for the last year, in which the library was opened for the use of book-borrowers three hundred and eight days, and the reading rooms of the Central Library and its branches for the perusal of periodicals and books of reference therein contained, including twelve Sundays, three hundred and twenty days.

With the increasing magnitude of the libraries, and the new experiences called forth by the branches, the reports of the Superintendent increase annually in detail and value. No one can properly understand or appreciate the careful oversight and the minute analysis of all the points of administration, which ought to be known, not only to the community but to every similar organization, without a careful scrutiny of his tabular statements. The duties and responsibilities of this devoted official increase from year to year. With the additional charge of the Roxbury Library, to be opened during the next month, and with the possibly impending annexation of neighboring towns and cities containing other libraries to be placed under the control of this Board, all executive labor will be proportionately magnified.

Recurring to the condition of the building, and to the inadequate accommodation, not only for the public, but also for the administrative necessities of the library, it is hoped and anticipated that some relief may be obtained, at no distant day, by the adaptation to the library's service of the estate purchased for that purpose by the city, in the spring of 1872. Want of room for the public curtails the circulation of the lower hall, and diminishes attendance at the reading room. No satisfactory plans have yet been formed for the construction upon this site of a new edifice to be attached to the main building, which should meet any considerable portion of our present and future requirements. When the City Government are of the opinion that the financial condition of the city will authorize a sufficient appropriation for the purpose, the trustees will endeavor to present suitable designs.

Upon the other point, of sufficient protection against fire, the Trustees feel sensitively the dangers so strongly set forth in the reports of the Examining Committee and of the Superintendent. The removal of the wooden skylights upon the roof of the building, and the substitution of fire-proof coverings in their places, is now going forward, under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Buildings. Everything should be done which skill or ingenuity can dictate to render the building safe from outward or internal conflagration. The library now contains a large number of works which, if lost, could never be replaced. The institution could never again rise from its ashes to the wealth of its present possessions. There must be no mistake or misunderstanding on this point. It is the duty both of the City Government and of the Trustees to see that everything practicable is done to insure the permanent safety of this inestimable property.

The operations of the past year and the present condition of the library are briefly as follows: The whole number of volumes at present contained in the libraries, parent and branches, are 209,456, of which 149,477 are in the Bates Hall. The remainder is to be found in the circulating libraries of the Lower Hall in Boylston street, the East Boston, South Boston and Roxbury branches. The increase of the library during the year has been 14,644 volumes. The whole number of pamphlets is now 112,153, of which 11,770 have been added during the year. The total circulation has been 467,855, being a daily average of 1519 for home use. The figures from the branches are most encouraging. While East Boston shows a circulation of 67,754 from a library of 7291 volumes, South Boston gives a circulation of 102,322 for 5174 volumes. The total number of names registered as applicants for the library privileges are 53,043; of these 1592 have had cards refused, principally for the reasons of non-residency or under age and 3626 have not taken their cards. 177,512 readers frequented the Periodical Reading Room of the Central Library, who read 213,599 magazines. The total number of books loaned and not returned has been between 60 and 70. Most of these were taken from the Lower Hall in Boylston street, and a portion of them may possibly be recovered. The average loss on these figures is one volume in every 7000 or more loans. The total expenditure from the city appropriations was $86,498 01, and $1681 79 was paid into the City Treasury from fines and sales of catalogues. Other important results will be found in the tables attached to the Superintendent's Report.

The most striking novelty in the administration of the library has been the opening of its periodical reading rooms on Sunday, at the request of the City Council. The event is too recent to admit of any decisive conclusions. There is not yet occasion for discouragement nor greatly marked features of encouragement for the enterprise. The best indications are to be found in the increasing attendance of adults, and in the presence of a considerable number of people who seldom or never came to the rooms on week days. It was for this latter class specially that the rooms were opened. Another year's trial will enable the Trustees to gauge their results more accurately, and to determine whether the advantages are in due proportion to the expense.

It is most gratifying to find that the establishment of our branches, as is also the experience of the large English cities, is more successful than could have been possibly anticipated. With the new branch shortly to be inaugurated in Roxbury in connection with the Fellowes Athenæum, quite as favorable figures may be expected. This library will at the outset possess superior advantages in having a considerable fund to be annually expended in books of permanent value, all of which, except works of reference, will be used in circulation, bringing as it were a considerable portion of the more valuable modern books, published both here and in England, such as form part of the Bates Hall collection, directly at hand to the residents of the Highland District. In view of the formation of these smaller libraries it is naturally found that convenience of access creates circulation of books where none existed before.

Like the great European libraries, our institution finds continued embarrassment in any catalogue system. We have long passed the period when it was possible to print in one alphabet, upon any intelligible system, the titles of all the books contained in our libraries. Such an undertaking would be enormously expensive, and when concluded at the end of five or ten years, the continual additions during that period would require the whole work to be done over again. The expedients which have been adopted in place of this system are well known to the frequenters of the library. The card catalogues in the Bates Hall accessible to the public, with the bulletins and class lists, afford the needed information, and the hand-book prepared by the Superintendent for the use of borrowers, indicates to every reader how and where he may find what he wants, provided it is upon the shelves of the institution.

The donations to the library have been continued by its friends during the present year, with the same liberality as before. The report of the Examining Committee shows how largely it has been indebted since its foundation to the sympathetic generosity of special benefactors and the public at large. Probably no other library in the world has received so many benefactions from so many different sources as this. In this matter the trustees would be deeply ungrateful if they felt any distrust in the future.

The most important event of the year has been the acquisition of the Barton Library, for which the negotiations were completed just previous to its close. An account of the volumes acquired, which did not come to the library until after the beginning of the new library year, will find an appropriate place in the next report of the Trustees. It is sufficient to say now that it is the most intrinsically valuable addition yet made to the library, and that it has placed the institution in a position which will render it still more invaluable and indispensable to every cultivator of elegant letters in the country. From the initial correspondence to the final termination of the purchase Mrs. Cora Livingston Barton, the widow of Thomas P. Barton, the collector of the library, conducted herself with a liberality founded on generous impulses and a large cultivation. For the purpose of fulfilling the expressed wishes of Mr. Barton, and of keeping the library together as one collection, and in placing it within the means of our institution, she undoubtedly made a large pecuniary sacrifice. In her sudden death the Trustees experienced a sense of personal loss. Indeed, the whole transaction was as creditable to her as it was advantageous to the city. It is most gratifying to the Trustees to place upon record their acknowledgment of the intelligence and public spirit of the City Government, which so promptly and decisively secured this magnificent acquisition.

In an educational point of view it is no exaggeration to say that the largest expectations of the founders of the library have been more than fulfilled. The liberality of the City Government and the intelligent generosity of private benefactors have established a store of learning and knowledge which has substantially supplemented, as well as strengthened and developed, most forms of progress known to modern civilization. It has attracted to itself the sympathetic aid and frequent use, not only of the so-called professions, but also of other laborers in science and art, whether engaged in the duties of instruction, or in the practical application of their accomplishments to the daily wants of life. But beyond this the increase of the library has received a vigorous impulse from the specialists, who have confined themselves to narrower fields of work, the outgrowth of some larger classification. Although all departments are not filled in the same proportion, continuous attention will be paid till such a result shall be measurably obtained.

It has placed within reach of our schools and colleges knowledge beyond the instruction of teachers; it has assisted in forming a taste for reading and for culture among many to whom the chances of life had previously denied such an opportunity. Few should be the homes in the city of Boston which should not have experienced its tangible benefits, and whose inmates have not reason to bless the intelligence which renders its existence a public necessity. Signed, William W. Greenough, G. S. Hillard, George Putnam, Weston Lewis, Samuel A. Green, Daniel S. Curtis, John T. Clark, W. E. Perkins, Charles A. Burditt.

Report of the Examining Committee—In examining the several buildings, the committee have regarded it as their first duty to ascertain how far the buildings have been made fire proof, and whether any alterations are needed to provide further security to the books against injury by fire or water. At the present time the pecuniary value of the books in the Central Library alone cannot be estimated at less than half a million of dollars; but this sum very imperfectly represents the loss which would be sustained by the destruction of the library. To give but a single illustration; the Prince Library, which was deposited with the Trustees in 1866, contains about 1900 volumes, and is of inestimable value to the student of American history; but so rare are many of the volumes that probably no amount of money would enable the Trustees to duplicate them. This is true also of portions of other collections which have from time to time been given to the city. Their loss would be irreparable, and without them any one wishing to prosecute thorough and exact inquiries in history or science would have to go elsewhere for his most important materials.

In view of the new light which recent experience has thrown on the combustible character of buildings heretofore regarded as fire proof, the committee are unanimously of opinion that the Central Library is not adequately protected against fire, and that immediate attention ought to be given to this matter.

The building erected for the use of the Roxbury branch is the property of the trustees of the Fellows Athenæum. The estate on which it stands is bounded on three sides by public streets, and beside this advantage it is so far from other buildings that no anxiety need be felt at present for its safety. The committee are glad to add that it is a model of convenient arrangement, and is well worth the examination of persons interested in town libraries. Built at a moderate cost, it makes no pretension to architectural beauty, but is admirably adapted to the use for which it was designed. At a small additional expense it can be shelved to contain about one hundred thousand volumes.

The South Boston Branch is located in the second story of a stone and brick building at the corner of Broadway and E street. There are no iron shutters on the building, and on two sides it is exposed to danger from fire communicating from the adjacent buildings. But as the library is only one of several tenants, and the collection at the present time numbers little more than 5000 volumes, which could be duplicated at a comparatively small cost, the Committee do not recommend any further expenditure by the City Government, until the wants of the branch shall justify the erection of a building specially devoted to its use.

A similar remark will apply to the East Boston Branch, which occupies a part of the old Lyman Schoolhouse, in Meridian street. It is, however, less exposed to danger from fire than the South Boston Branch; and as the city owns the land and building, suitable accommodations can readily be provided whenever the increase of the library shall render a reconstruction of the building desirable.

The committee regard the establishment of these branches with great favor, as adding largely to the usefulness of the library. They not only contain books of a similar character to those in the Lower Hall in Boylston street, but by means of the daily communication which has been established with the Central Library, books from either of its departments can be obtained by application at the branch.

The report of every Examining Committee since 1864 has referred with more or less of detail to the defects of the plan adopted in the erection of the building in Boylston street. This committee have likewise been impressed by these defects, which even the large capacity for organization, and the great executive ability of the present Superintendent have not been able to overcome. The extensive alterations made within the last two years have nearly doubled the shelving, both in the Lower Hall and in the Bates Hall, and have provided improved, though still inadequate accommodations for some of the employes connected with the former. But in other respects the work of the library is carried on under great and increasing disadvantages, which can be remedied only by an enlargement of the building.

Much of the unpacking, collating, cataloguing and marking is now performed in the galleries and alcoves, and in the southeastern tower, used also as a stairway. The rooms for the Superintendent and the Assistant Superintendent are so cramped and crowded with the necessary furniture and hooks of reference as greatly to interfere with the discharge of their respective duties. Additional closets, wash-houses and other conveniences for the employes, now numbering about fifty persons, are also needed. There is no room for meetings of the Trustees. The only room available for the examination of the foreign and American patents, which now extend to more than two thousand volumes, and are in almost constant use, is so small that not more than two or three persons can easily consult them at the same time. The bindery, which occupies a portion of the basement, is much too small for the necessary work of the library. The newspaper room, which is also in the basement, is dark, damp and badly ventilated; and no one can contrast it with the small, but convenient, newspaper room recently fitted up by the Massachusetts Historical Society without a feeling of regret that this room is the only one in the Public Library which can be appropriated to this important use. If the public are to derive the fullest benefit from the library, these defects, which do not fall under the notice of an occasional visitor, should be remedied at the earliest practicable opportunity.

In the judgment of the committee, it would also be much better if separate rooms could be provided for large and valuable collections, like the recently acquired Barton Library, Parker Library, and some others. Heretofore these collections have been placed in separate alcoves, or distinct portions of the galleries, appropriately inscribed; and the committee are informed that the same course will be pursued with regard to the books in the Barton Library. The acquisition of this library, so rich in Shakspeariana and in other departments of dramatic literature, was the great event in the history of the Public Library during the past year. As the volumes have not yet been unpacked, only a few of them have come under the examination of the committee; but the great value of the collection has long been known through the elaborate description in Dr. Wynne's "Libraries of New York." The committee desire to congratulate the Trustees and the public on this important addition to the treasures of the library.

It is a noteworthy fact that with the exception of this purchase almost the whole strength of the library comes from the direct gift of individuals, or from the income of trust funds, specially given for this purpose. At the very outset Mr. Bates gave about 26,000 volumes; the Bowditch, Parker, Ticknor, and Prince libraries (the last of which, however, is only deposited with the Trustees), contain 20,326 volumes; and during their lives Mr. Everett and Mr. Ticknor, by whom the original plan for the organization of the library is understood to have been drawn up, gave 3587 volumes and 5673 volumes respectively, exclusive of an immense mass of pamphlets. Indeed, of the whole number of volumes in the library at the present time, 209,456, exclusive of the Barton collection, nearly one-half, 92,333 volumes are set down as gifts. If to this number are added the volumes purchased from the income of the trust funds, it will be seen how largely the library is indebted to private munificence. Liberal as have been the appropriations of the City Government, and they have been unstinted, even more has come from other sources. No one who has been familiar with the history of the library from that day of small things, when it was first opened to the public in the lower floor of the Mason-street Schoolhouse, can fail to be amazed at its rapid and healthy growth. For the whole cost of its administration the library is of course indebted to the annual appropriations of the City Government.

The volumes are all in good condition, with the exception of the usual amount of injury to the hooks of a more popular character which circulate from the lower hall and the branch libraries, and of a few volumes in one of the galleries of the Bates Hall, where the old bindings have been destroyed by the heat and foul air. The committee are by no means confident that such a system of ventilation can be introduced as will obviate this evil; but the subject is one worthy of investigation. The cataloguing has been regularly kept up, and the Accession Lists, the Shelf Lists and the Card Catalogue are all that can be desired in those departments. Four numbers of the Library Bulletin have also been issued during the year, and have proved of much service to readers. In 1858, the index to the lower hall catalogue was issued; and this was followed (in 1861) by the index to the Bates Hall catalogue, and in 1866 by a supplement to the latter. These three volumes were prepared under the direction of the late Professor Jewett, at that time Superintendent of the library, and form a fit memorial of the bibliographical knowledge and thoroughness of research which that accomplished scholar brought to the discharge of his task.

In 1870, the excellent catalogue of the Prince Library was issued; a catalogue of the Ticknor Library is in preparation; and by the contract for the purchase of the Barton Library, a catalogue of that collection must be printed within four years. But the long-expected third volume of the Bates Hall catalogue has not yet been put to press. The committee are aware that the tendency of opinion among librarians at the present time is against the issuing of printed catalogues; but in view of the great number of students who cannot go to the library every time they wish to ascertain whether it contains some book of which they have need, it is to be hoped the time will never come when the Trustees will not include within the plan of their operations the issuing of consolidated catalogues as often as the growth of the library may require. To no better use could the city appropriations be applied; and for it the appropriations should be freely granted.

Complaint in regard to the sensational character of some of the juvenile books in the library has come to the knowledge of the committee; but they are not able, from their own examination, to say how far these complaints have a solid foundation. They accordingly recommend the subject to the consideration of the Trustees. They are, however, of the opinion that a closer scrutiny should be made, and a stricter rule should be observed, as to the character of books purchased for the juvenile department, than would be proper in the case of books ordered at the request of adult readers. No doubt a large part of the juvenile literature of the day is of a very unprofitable, if not pernicious, character: it does not afford healthful amusement, and it is not instructive. But it is possible to select from the immense mass of juvenile books some which are harmless, and at the same time not uninteresting to the youthful reader. That the excessive reading of works of fiction is an evil will not be denied, and in the case of school children it is a very great evil; but in their case the remedy is in the hands of parents and guardians, and not with the managers of a public library. It is not easy to see how they could frame rules to prevent the abuse of its privileges, without narrowing its scope and practically limiting its usefulness.

From records kept by the superintendent, it appears that the number of persons who use the reading rooms on Sunday is more than half as large as the number using them on other days; and that a very large proportion are persons who use the library only on Sunday. No case of improper conduct has been reported; and no injury has been done to the buildings or the periodicals. The result of the experiment thus far has probably disappointed the expectations of those who took extreme views on one side or the other of this much-vexed question; but the committee regard it as highly satisfactory, and as fully justifying the increased cost of carrying on the library. (Signed) George S. Hillard, Benjamin Dean, E. D. Jordan, Charles C. Smith, George H. Vibbert, Henry A. Whitney.

Report of the Superintendent. The report begins by a reference to the alterations made in the central building during the past year, and gives a plan of the new half-story. The gain from this new arrangement is all that was expected—a much greater rapidity of delivery of the books from one floor, and an extent and convenience of offices which were never before enjoyed.

The fire of November last led to a survey of the building, and under a decision reached not long afterwards the roof of the building is to be made practically fireproof. The windows of the main lantern will be protected by iron shutters; and the ordinary skylights over the upper alcoves will be replaced by heavier glass, with honeycomb settings. Means are also to be provided for hoisting hose to the roof without dragging it through the interior of the building. I look, however, upon Hotel Pelham as a standing menace, that renders the most particular precautions advisable. A number of fire-extinguishers, as an additional safeguard, have also been placed in the building. An outer row of iron shutters on the side windows, by providing an air chamber, would afford further security; but the present shutters are at such distance from the sashes, that wet sail cloth or blankets placed in the interval will probably furnish good protection in case great heat should curl the shutters. The janitor makes a monthly report upon the condition of all appliances for guarding against and subduing a fire. It should be added that, during the winter, two agents from the office of Inspector of Buildings have examined the steam-heating apparatus to see if the library was under any danger from super-heated steam, and have pronounced the building free from danger, except at one point, which was at once attended to.

The first year's experience with the South Boston Branch has shown a success, as compared with the operations of the East Boston Branch, proportionate to the difference in the population of the two sections of the city. While South Boston has a population about half as large again as that of East Boston, the number of people registering for the first year, and the extent of the circulation has been in much the same relations, and the immunity from loss has been nearly as favorable.

The Trustees of the Hawes Fund, having established a School of Art in the same building, have kindly placed a number of their casts upon brackets about the library rooms, adding much to their attractiveness.

The report gives a brief history of the establishment of the Fellowes Athenaeum and the Roxbury branch of the Public Library, and a description of the building and the arrangement of the books. In forming a collection for this branch about 700 volumes were taken in nearly equal proportions from the shelf duplicates of the Lower Hall and from the Duplicate Room, and to these something over 3000 had been added, mostly by purchase, up to the 30th of April, on account of the city's appropriation, while to the same date 865 of the more expensive books had been bought with the money of the Fellowes Fund, making a total of over 4600 volumes. The branch opens with something over 5000 volumes.

If we add the Barton Library (purchased, but not received at the end of the library year,) to the figures of the extent of the collections, shown in appendix I, it will be found that more than 220,000 volumes is the result, which is just double the extent of the library ten years ago. The library of Congress still surpasses it, but the Astor Library has only about an equal extent with the Bates Hall collection. The library seems now to be having a normal increase of about 12,000 to 15,000 volumes a year. Should the acts of the Legislature annexing Charlestown, Brookline, Brighton, and West Roxbury find favor with the people, three new branches—being the existing public libraries in all but the last named place—will, within a year, be added to our system, bringing to our aggregate something like 35,000 or 40,000 volumes, and swelling the total under the control of the Trustees to nearly 275,000 volumes,—an extent likely to place the Boston Public Library at the head of all American libraries in the aggregate of its collections, as it is already in the value and usefulness of them.

The increasing magnitude of the labor attending the ordering and receiving of books for all the departments of the Library has justified the division of the Library Service, by which the faithful assistant of the Superintendent in this duty is assigned to the responsible head of a new department, kept heretofore as an adjunct of the Catalogue Department.

The library suffered a small loss of books in a bindery in Hawley street, by the fire of November last; and the Italian invoice for the year, embracing a complete set of the public documents of the Italian Government since 1848, upon the collection of which considerable pains had been expended, was on board the ship Charlotte, from Leghorn, which was wrecked on Bermuda reefs, in March. Insurance will be recovered in both cases. The Italian books, it proved, were saved, though damaged, and were sold for salvage, and the purchaser has offered them to the library at one-quarter of the original cost.

The grand total of issues approximates to half a million volumes. I look during the coming year, for a larger use of the Bates Hall than ever before. The last month of the year showed that the circulation, which it maintained before the alterations, had been restored, and it will naturally increase. In the Lower Hall there was no perceptible diminution of use, from the withdrawal of readers living at East Boston, during the first year after the opening of the branch in that district. It was too remote from Boylston street to allow its inhabitants to be constant frequenters of the Central Library, and the use which the new branch got was almost entirely from readers never before enjoying the privileges of the library. With South Boston the case was different. There was far greater convenience of access for its residents to the Central Library, the drain upon whose frequenters was so severe, that the new retainers on our registration roll have not been able to make the loss good. The loss from last year is, however, only about sixteen thousand issues, while the gain to the library from the issues at the South Boston Branch has been over 102,000. The natural recuperative power of our circulation will probably more than regain during the coming year what has been lost, were no other new branch to interfere; but the opening of the Roxbury Branch is likely to produce the same temporary stay upon the accumulative tendency of our statistics for the Lower Hall. The check will, however, be but temporary.

Acting upon a request of the City Council, the Trustees ordered the opening of the reading rooms for periodicals on Sundays, from 2 P. M. to 9 P. M., and this was done for the first time February 9. The use has been from one-half to three-quarters of the average week-day use. The frequenters have been uniformly decorous; and the most favorable feature of the result is, that a large proportion of the Sunday visitors are not such as are seen in the rooms on week days. After a brief interval of scrutiny among those interested favorably or adversely in the experiment, this inroad upon old custom has passed from all active observation, and the bulk of the population probably neither know nor care about the practice; leaving a comparatively small number of people to find a satisfaction in the privilege that sufficiently pays for the attendant outlay.

In pursuance of a policy of guiding rather than forcing the public taste in the selection of books, the past year has been significant in the publication of two different helps to this end. First—In August a new Hand-book for Readers was issued, including the regulatious, a description of the possessions of the library most likely to interest the curious, with a brief summary of its history. Before the year closed, an edition of five thousand had been distributed, and a second amended edition is now in press. Second—The scope of the new Lower Hall Class List for History, Biography and Travel has, in its progress through the press, been much enlarged. A supplemental List of the Tosti Engravings, including those framed in the lower floor of the Central Library, and not included already in the List of Portraits, has been prepared by Mr. Whitney, the Principal Assistant of the Library, to whom has been intrusted with confidence this critical labor. The present issue completes the work. The general work of this department, including the issue of four Bulletins, has gone forward satisfactorily under the immediate direction of Mr. Wheeler, its accomplished head.

Respectfully submitted,

JUSTIN WINSOR, Superintendent.

In the appendices which accompany the reports the following figures are given: Total volumes in all the libraries, 209,456; Bates Hall, 149,477; Lower Hall, 32,605; newspaper room, 2111; duplicate room, 8183; East Boston branch, 7291; South Boston branch, 5174; Roxbury branch, 3750; Fellowes Athenæum, 865; whole number of pamphlets added from the beginning, 112,153. Six hundred and one persons donated 3939 volumes and 8060 pamphlets during the year.

During the year the circulation was as follows: Bates Hall—home issues, 28,261; hall issues, 31,003; total issues, 59,264; daily average, 192. Lower Hall—home use, 230,111; daily average, 772; hall use, 7946; total use, 238,057. East Boston Branch—home use, 67,754; daily average, 222; hall use, 458; total use, 68,212. South Boston Branch—home use, 101,688; daily average, 330; hall use, 634; total use, 102,322.

The appendices contain a great variety of interesting statistics in regard to the working of the library. The report was accepted and sent down.

DOING BUSINESS ON THE COMMON.

A petition was received from Howe & French representing that a portion of Boston Common has recently been leased for a business purpose and another portion set apart for the use of a secret organization for the purpose of a dinner; they, the petitioners, drug and paint dealers of this city, offer for a space of 2500 feet of said Common the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars per annum rental for the prosecution of their regular business thereon.

In the regular disposition of the petitions the above was referred to the Committee on Common, etc.

Subsequently Alderman Clark called the attention of the Board to the subject. He said the petition was an insult to the Board of Aldermen. No part of the Common had ever been leased for business purposes by which the city has received money. Permission was given to have a magnificent display of flowers, which will have an influence in elevating the taste of the rising generation, if not on the elder portions of the community. We did give permission to a respectable body of men to partake of a collation on the Common, and those are the only permits given, except to the Young Men's Christian Association to hold divine service. This petition is evidently an insult to this Board. It is a subject which the Committee on Common, etc., do not care to entertain or to act upon. I therefore move a reconsideration of the vote whereby it was referred to the Committee on Common, etc.

Alderman Sayward—I hope it will not be reconsidered. It can do no harm to investigate this matter. Howe & French ought to have the right of petition, reference to the proper committee, and a hearing if they desire it. I hope it will not be reconsidered.

Alderman Clark wanted to know if the petition to carry on the drug business on the Common ought to be considered in committee. The petition is an insult to this Board and should not be considered at all.

Alderman Sayward said there were applications to erect business houses on the Common directly after the fire in great numbers. He could see no objection to giving the parties a hearing.

Alderman Clark pronounced the subject too ridiculous for serious consideration, and called for a vote.

The motion to reconsider was carried, and on motion of Alderman Quincy, the Board voted that the petitioners should have leave to withdraw.

On motion of Alderman Power, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

SEPTEMBER 1, 1873.

A special meeting of the Common Council was held at noon today, E. O. Shepard, president, in the chair.

The following message was received from his Honor the Mayor.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL, }
Boston, Sept. 1, 1873. }

To the Common Council—It becomes my painful duty to announce to you the death of Thomas H. Doherty, a member of the Common Council from Ward 2.

I respectfully recommend that the Common Council recognize in some appropriate manner the loss they have sustained, and express their respect for the memory of the deceased.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

The communication was placed on file.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2, offered the following :

Whereas, The members of the Common Council have received with deep sorrow the intelligence of the death of Thomas H. Doherty, a member of this board, from the Second Ward,

Resolved, That in the death of our esteemed associate and co-laborer, the City Government loses the services of one whose sterling integrity and honesty of purpose have endeared him to all with whom he came in contact.

Resolved, That the President of the Common Council be requested to convey to the family of our deceased friend and associate the expression of our deep and heartfelt sympathy for their bereavement.

Resolved, That the members of this Council will attend the funeral of their late associate, and that —, with the President of the Council, be a committee to make the necessary arrangements, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 said—In presenting those resolutions, Mr. President, I would like to say only a few words on the character of the man whose death is the occasion of our presence here today. Many here were not well acquainted with my friend and colleague, Mr. Doherty, for he had been a member only four months when taken sick by the disease which resulted in his death. Mr. Doherty was a man with whom I was well acquainted. I was proud of his acquaintance. He was honest in the full sense of the word, a model husband and father. His voice was not often heard in the debates of this Council, but he was a man of sound judgment, good sense and a deep thinker. His family loses a good husband and father and the city of Boston an honest and upright citizen. Mr. President, I move that when the vote on the passage of these resolutions is taken it be taken by a rising vote.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—Mr. President, I had not intended to say a word on this mournful occasion, because I had supposed that there were members here who were better acquainted with the deceased than I was. I have, however, some satisfaction in saying that a few months ago I made his acquaintance when we came together in January last, and I formed an opinion at that time, which has since grown upon me, that the deceased was a gentleman of sterling integrity; one who was highly respected in the ward which he represented, and as his colleague has stated, he was a kind husband and an indulgent father. Certainly no man, no member of this Council, when we came here in January, had apparently a longer lease of life than the deceased. But he has been stricken down by the disease over which there seems to be no human control, and he has left us. I am one of those who sympathize most heartily with the family of the deceased, and as one of his associates in the Council, I am glad to be able to add my feeble voice in favor of the adoption of the resolutions. I think, Mr. President, although our departed associate had not to any considerable extent cultivated the acquaintance of his fellow-members, yet, sir, by his upright and manly appearance at this board, I think he has won their respect. And, as I said before, I am very glad to add my feeble voice in favor of the adoption of the resolutions.

The President—This is the first time in the annals of the year that the circle of this Council has been broken by the hand of death. Thomas H. Doherty has passed away from these to higher scenes above. My acquaintance with him has been somewhat limited, but I have seen considerable of him and can add my testimony to that which I think obtains with you all—that his constancy of attendance here, before his sickness struck him down, his faithfulness in the discharge of all the duties that devolved upon him, his genial and kindly behavior, won for him the esteem and friendship of us all. His seat has been vacant for some weeks by his illness, and the vacant place henceforth will remind us of him and his virtues, and also of the uncertainties that attend the life of each of us. As many as are in favor of the passage of the resolutions will rise and stand in their places.

The resolutions were passed unanimously.

Mr. Anderson of Ward 3, offered the following :

Ordered, That the City Messenger cause the seat of our late associate to be draped in mourning for thirty days.

The order was read twice and passed.

The President announced the following as the committee named in the resolutions:

Messrs. Dacey of Ward 2, Shaw of Ward 5, Flynn of Ward 7, Hall of Ward 10, Anderson of Ward 3, and Upham of Ward 16.

The President announced the arrangements for the funeral, and on motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 15, the Council adjourned till Thursday evening next.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Of John Haggerty, to be paid for grade damages on Commercial street, Ward 16.

Of John A. Allen et al., for sidewalk on Eighth street.

Of William A. Guild et al., that edgestones be set and gutters paved on Fourth street, from N to O street.

Of Richards & Co. et al., that a portion of Creek square be repaved.

Of Metropolitan Railroad Company, for leave to construct an additional track on Washington street, from Essex street to Temple place.

Severally referred to the Committee on Paving.

Of J. T. Barrow et al., that the Regent-street sewer be extended to Circuit street; to Committee on Sewers.

Of R. H. Wiswell, lessee, to be paid for Warren-street damages; to Committee on Streets.

Of John Brett, for leave to close a portion of Oneida street against vehicles while repairing his building.

PROTECTION OF SEAMEN.

The following communication was received:

CONSULATE OF THE GERMAN EMPIRE,
BOSTON, Aug. 28, 1873.

His Honor Mayor Henry L. Pierce, City Hall:
Dear Sir—I beg to bring the facts subjoined to your official knowledge. The master of the German ship Ludwig Heyn, now lying in this harbor, Captain J. I. Schmeling, lost two men by desertion on the 21st of this month. He instituted proceedings for their arrest on the 22d of the same month. On the 25th of August one man deserted. Two more men threatening to desert were committed to jail under the consular convention between the United States and the German Empire. Yesterday afternoon as Captain

Schmeling was going toward his vessel, then lying at Constitution wharf, he was warned by the laborers working on the wharf to beware, that he was in danger of his life. At ten o'clock P. M. two friends left his vessel to go home. When they reached the entrance to Constitution wharf one of them, who wore a straw hat exactly like the captain's, was seized by seven men, who came upon them out of darkness. His face was examined, and with the remark, "It 's a mistake, let him go," he was let go. In view of the fact that there is in existence in this city an association of sailor boarding-house keepers, one of whom a few weeks ago in this office boasted that they would get the best of us: in view of the fact that the damage these boarding-house keepers do to German trade by enticing seamen to desert is great, and in view of the fact that the earnest endeavors of this consulate are directed to the increase and strengthening of the intercourse between the German Empire and the city of Boston, I would respectfully request your Honor to take all steps in your power to protect masters of foreign vessels and to bring to swift punishment all the offenders against the laws and ordinances. In view of the fact that these convictions advanced ere this by Mr. Schlesinger, that two measures would help much to repress the lawless element in the harbor—(1) increasing the number of Harbor Police, and (2) having a steamboat in readiness to pursue and apprehend evil doers. In conclusion, I beg to assure your Honor that my remarks as above are made solely with the intention of fostering the prospects of the city of Boston as a commercial metropolis, and of securing to German masters of vessels such protection as will best promote their coming here. Believe me to be

Yours very respectfully,

C. A. SCHMIDT,

Acting Consul.

Petition of the consuls, vice-consuls and commercial agents in Boston, representing that in view of the continual and increasing desertions of crews of foreign vessels visiting this port, and the necessity of protecting such vessels in their rights, they respectfully ask that the harbor police be instructed and means provided for them to approach and board such vessels as soon as possible on their entering this harbor to prevent boarding-house agents and others from tampering with the crew. The petitioners being fully assured of the necessity of more protection to foreign ship masters during their stay at this port, respectfully ask early attention to their petition. Referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Police.

Severally referred to the Committee on Police.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The orders of notice on the petition of L. H. Tasker, for steam engine at 76 Chauncy street; of Newton Morton, for steam engine on K street, corner of First; of G. W. & F. Smith, to erect melting furnace on Farnham street, were considered, and there being no objection they were severally recommitted to the Committee on Steam Engines.

The order of notice for a sewer in the rear of Beacon street, between Otter and Berkeley streets, was next considered.

John Jeffries, Jr., appeared to ask an explanation of the proposed plan. He could n't see the necessity of carrying everything to the westward which comes from down Otter street. If the refuse is to be carried down Berkeley street he should certainly object. Everything that comes out of the drain on Berkeley street at ebb tide passed down and settles at the corner, forming a pool. If the idea is to avoid this, he did n't think the sewer would accomplish it. The street is private property, and by consent of all parties the owners have the right to build over it. If the city puts this drain in there the abutters ought to have some compensation for it. He did n't think the proposed drain would remedy the matter.

The subject was recommitted to the Committee on Sewers.

A POLICE BOAT FOR THE HARBOR.

The following communication was received:

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF-OF-POLICE,
BOSTON, Sept. 1, 1873.

To His Honor the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen of the City of Boston: Gentlemen—I would most respectfully ask leave to call your attention to the subject matter of providing additional means for police protection in Boston Harbor. We have within the limits of our police jurisdiction, including Boston proper, East Boston, South Boston, Dorchester and Hull, a water frontage covering a distance of at least ten miles, with some one hundred and twenty wharves, most of them loaded with merchandise, and in many instances so situated that they cannot be properly protected on the land side. There are also within the limits of the city at least ten islands which require more or less police protection, some of them having permanent residents, besides being visited daily in the summer time by pleasure parties and others, numbering hundreds of men, women and children, and where persons of doubtful or dangerous character often find their way, especially on the Sabbath.

Our harbor is also alive with steam and sailing vessels, from all parts of the world, together with water craft of every size and description, carrying thousands of people and millions of property, and there is no field in New England offering a better opportunity for plunder and the commission of crime. The rules and regulations of the Police Department require the officers to board all foreign vessels on their arrival, and serve them with copies of the harbor regulations; to prevent boarding-house runners from visiting vessels to incite their crews to desertion and mutiny (which foreign consuls complain now frequently occurs in the lower harbor); and by an act of Congress passed June 7, 1872, they are "to give their assistance in apprehending any seaman or apprentice who deserts from or refuses to join and go to sea in any ship in which he has duly engaged to serve."

The officers are also required to challenge all boats, and to pursue and examine them when seen under suspicious circumstances; to send back vessels that have run quarantine, and assist in other quarantine regulations; to prevent the removal of gravel from the islands; to protect powder boats and lobster pots; to remove and care for the bodies of dead persons found afloat or washed ashore on the islands; to hasten to the assistance of boats that are capsized or are otherwise in distress, or to go where any accident or breach of the peace may occur in the harbor; and to give general protection to life and property, and preserve the peace at the wharves, the islands and on shipboard, and to send police aid and protection to Hull whenever occasion may require.

To do this work we have small row boats, only carrying two men each (at best, too small and too slow), with which to visit the lower harbor, even in pleasant weather, or to do in the upper harbor much of the work required there to be done. With the immense amount of property and the great variety of people and interests scattered over so large an area of wharves, islands, water and shipping, with circumstances continually arising that demand the earliest possible presence of the police, it seems to me that there is an urgent necessity in this quarter for an active and efficient police force, and that they be prepared with the best means for reaching any given point, in the shortest possible time. Some six years since arrangements were made and considerable money was expended for building a harbor-police steamboat.

The plan contemplates a boat ninety feet long, fifteen feet beam and about nine feet draft, at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars. It was finally objected that such a boat would be too large and unwieldy, altogether too expensive, and would be liable to be called into usages not altogether profitable in the police service, and the enterprise was abandoned. If a large boat is not subject to all of these objections at the present time, I am of the opinion that a much smaller one would be much better adapted for the work required to be done. The following plan and estimate is made by a well-established firm of steam boat builders, and is respectfully submitted for your consideration:

Length of boat, 55 feet; breadth of beam, 12½ feet; hold, 6 feet; to draw not exceeding 5 feet of water, when coal, water and equipments are on board; hull made light and strong, from mostly hackmetack, with oak under the engine and boiler; planked with hard pine; composition fastenings; to have considerable shear, heavy fender, strike, light rail, and white pine deck 2x3; fastenings to be plugged, and seams puttied above the water line; to have an iron shoe under the propeller, and stem under forward; to have light joiner work, consisting of a small forecabin with one berth to be used as a lockup, with trunk companion way; a pilot house, with room for a broad upholstered seat across the rear end, and a house from there 4 feet high to cover the boiler and engine, with suitable lights for the companion way and for ventilation, and stairs aft to the engine and fire room. The engine to be 12x12, with light, strong frame and bed plate, every part proportioned to carry 100 pounds of steam for ordinary use fitted with main and cut off valves, eccentrics,—plunger pump for boiler; syphon pump of very large size, suitably connected for outside fire purposes in case of need, with hose, nozzles and independent suction pipe through the bottom of the vessel. The boiler to be horizontal circular shell, with flue and return tubes, steam jet, smoke pipe and whistle, to be connected with copper. Steam feed and exhaust pipes. To have a propeller 4½ feet diameter and 6 feet pitch. The engine to exhaust into an outside condensing pipe, so as to condense the steam and thus obviate the necessity of carrying water in tanks; to have a small air pump to connect with the condensing pipe and return the water to a small tank connected with the boiler feed pump; to be provided with bells, gong and jingle bell, connected with the pilot house; to have suitable steering gear, and a grating over all. The house to be grained and the hull painted three coats of the most approved color. The material to be of the best quality and the work to be done in a thorough and workmanlike manner, and properly fitted for the service, except the portable furniture. The estimated amount of coal is one hundred pounds per hour when in actual service, requiring to be manned with four men and guaranteed to make ten miles an hour. The estimate includes a full apparatus for the extinguishment of fires on wharves or on other vessels, and the entire cost not to exceed ten thousand dollars. Such a boat, it is believed, would be of sufficient size and strength for all purposes in the lower harbor, and with its light draft would be conveniently serviceable in the upper harbor, about the wharves, on the flats, and on the shores of Dorchester.

Although there would seem to be an urgent necessity for providing additional means for police protection in our harbor, under present circumstances I should hardly feel at liberty to ask for such an outlay for my department were it not apparent that such a sum as is required for this purpose may be spared from the appropriation already made for the present year.

I have the honor to be,
Most respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
EDWARD H. SAVAGE,
Chief of Police.

The communication was referred to the Committee on Police.

An invitation from the German Protective Association to attend a public meeting in Faneuil Hall was received and placed on file.

THE ABBOTT LAWRENCE FUND.

The trustees of the Abbott Lawrence Fund submitted a report of the second distribution among the public charities of the city of Boston, made on the 12th day of May last, etc., as follows: Farm School for Indigent Boys, $800; Boston Dispensary, $800; Warren-street Chapel, $700; Children's Hospital, $800; Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, $1000; Fragment Society $500; Needle Woman's Friend Society, $500; Sailor's Snug Harbor, $1000; Temporary Home for the Destitute, $800; Ladies' Relief Agency, $497 38; Industrial School for Girls, $800; Fatherless and Widows' Society, $1000; Total, $9197 38. The report was placed on file.

REPORT OF THE CITY CLERK.

The quarterly report of the City Clerk, S. F. McCleary, was submitted. It makes the following exhibit of receipts: For recording mortgages of personal property, assignments, liens, etc., $595 40; licenses of billiard saloons, $216; licenses of intelligence offices, $41; licenses of auctioneers, $52; record of goods found, 25 cents; total, $904 65; all of which has been paid to the City Treasurer. The report was accepted and sent down.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to pay William R. Clark $160,000 for estate on Broad street, known as Fort Hill wharf, upon condition of his giving a release of the same, and authorizing the Treasurer to borrow $110,000, to be applied to the purchase, and charging the remaining $50,000 to the Burnt District Loan.

The order was read a second time and passed—yeas 9, nays 0.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of R. M. Field for license for Boston Museum; of L. M. W. Steere, agent, to exhibit Panorama of Ireland at Tremont Temple; of Charles K. Miller to keep a billiard saloon at 112 Harvard street, Ward 16; of Thomas Galligan to keep a billiard saloon at 863 Tremont street; of Alice Leake to keep an intelligence office at 9 Carver street; of Henry Taylor et al. for hack license on Tremont street, near Milford street; of Daniel Leary, to deal in second-hand articles at 45 Stillman street; of James Gateby, to deal in second-hand articles at 24 Newbern street; of John McCawley, for wagon stand at 25 Fulton street; of A. Holt and several others, for transfer of wagon licenses; of F. B. Coffin, Elijah Kinsman, Stumcke & Goodwin, Henry M. Scott, Patrick C. Ryan and John F. Driscoll, for victuallers' license, and leave to withdraw on application of James Cain, for the same. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the application of Eugene J. Sullivan, to keep a bowling saloon at 291 Dorchester street. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward from the Committee on Health reported in favor of granting the applications for leave to erect stables by Prescott Chapin, Jacob Edwards, Peter E. Brandley, Sophia A. Jackson, John Donnelly and Joseph Ham. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the application of Henry Doherty and Dennis Sullivan for leave to occupy stables. Severally accepted.

Alderman Bigelow, from the Committee on Sewers, reported orders of notice for sewers in Catawba, Rockland and Copeland streets, and appointing hearings on the same at four o'clock P. M. on Monday, September 8. The orders were read twice and passed.

Alderman Bigelow, from the same committee, reported the following:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Sewers be hereby authorized and directed to extend the sewer now discharging near the foot of B and Seventh streets to the Commissioners' line; the expense to be charged to the Sewer Department.

The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Hulburt, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders to pay as follows: Trustees estate of Robert C. Hooper, $150, on account of raising grade of Cottage and Franklin streets, Ward 16; W. G. Hickey, $300, on account of raising grade of Chambers street; Charles C. Barry, $73, on account of lowering grade of Alpine street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported an order to pay Nathan Underwood $59 95 on account of the widening of Stoughton street. Read twice and passed.

THE NORTHAMPTON-STREET DISTRICT.

Alderman Brown, from the Committee on the Suffolk-street District, on the part of the Board of Aldermen, to whom was referred the subject of establishing a permanent grade for the lands included within the Northampton-street District, so called, in accordance with the provisions of chapter 340 of the acts of the year 1873, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the grade of the cellars, back yards and vacant lots of land included within the district which is bounded northwesterly by Washington street, southwesterly by Eustis street and Mall street, southeasterly by Albany street and northeasterly by Northampton street, being the district described in chapter 340 of the acts of the year 1873, be and the same is hereby established at twelve feet above mean low water; said grade being deemed necessary by this Board in order to secure the complete drainage of said lands so as to abate and prevent nuisances and to preserve the public health of the city.

The report was accepted and the order passed.

Alderman Brown submitted the report of the Joint Special Committee on the Suffolk-street District, who were requested to report what action is necessary on the part of the City Council to carry out the provisions of the act relating to the Northampton District so called. Having fully considered the subject, they recommend the passage of the following order:

Whereas, by an act of the Legislature of Massachusetts, approved the fifth day of June, A. D. 1873, entitled, "An act to authorize the raising of the grade of certain lands in the city of Boston, for the purpose of preserving the public health in said city," it is provided, among other things, as follows, namely:

"Section 1. The City Council of the city of Boston may order the owners of lands in said city, situated and lying within the district which is bounded northwesterly by Washington street, southwesterly by Eustis street and Mall street, southeasterly by Albany street and northeasterly by Northampton street; or any of such owners, to raise the grade of their said lands filling up the same with good materials to such permanent grade as may be deemed necessary by the Board of Aldermen in order to secure a complete drainage thereof, so as to abate and prevent nuisances and to preserve the health of the city."

Now, therefore, it is ordered, that the following named parties, being owners of the land situated and lying within the district aforesaid, be, and they are hereby severally directed to raise the grade of their said lands respectively, or such portions thereof as are below the grade established by the Board of Aldermen, by filling the same with good clean gravel, earth or ashes, to the grade of twelve feet above mean low water, as established by an order of the Board of Aldermen, approved September 1st, A. D., 1873; said lands with the portions thereof below the said grade being shown upon a plan made by the City Surveyor, dated July 25th, 1873.

[Appended to the report is a list of the names of the owners of property within the district named.]

The report was accepted and the order passed.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Hulburt—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the gutters on Fifth street, between K and M streets, and on L street, between Fourth and Fifth streets. Estimated cost, $4000.

Ordered, That the Board establish the grade of Ruggles street, between the Providence Railroad and Parker street, at eighteen feet above mean low water.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to furnish and set the edgestones and pave the gutters on the southerly side of Guild street, between Shawmut avenue and Lambert avenue. Estimated cost, $1200.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets, under the direction of the Committee on Paving, be authorized to raise Federal, Franklin, Congress, Pearl, Kilby, Oliver, Batterymarch, Central, Lindall, Hawes, Water and Milk streets to the grade established by the Board of Aldermen for said streets Jan. 2, 1873; also to grade the streets on the Burnt District as widened by the Board of Street Commissioners and to pave the streets on said district with small granite blocks, as fast as building operations will permit and the public safety and convenience may require; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for the Burnt District.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to make such alterations in the rooms of the Ticknor Schoolhouse as may be necessary to accommodate pupils of the grammar school of that district; and, also, to furnish such additional accommodations as may be required for the primary schools; the expense attending the same to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Ordered, That the expenses incurred in repairing Neponset Bridge, to an amount not exceeding eleven hundred dollars, be allowed and paid; said amount to be charged to the Appropriation for Bridges.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to locate a stand pipe in the City Hall Building, and connect the same with the high-service supply; also, to provide the necessary hose and fixtures in order that the same may be made available in case of fire; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Committee on Police be authorized to erect a new flag-staff on Washington Park, so-called, in place of the old one, which has become decayed and dangerous, at an expense not exceeding $475; to be charged to the appropriation for Police.

Ordered, That the Chief Engineer be and he hereby is authorized to organize and equip a steam fire engine company for Steam Fire Engine No. 22, to be located on Parker street, Ward 15; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

THE MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

Alderman Sayward called up the special assignment, being his motion to reconsider the order for the cancelling of the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse on Meetinghouse Hill.

He said that in the absence of the chief opponent of the motion (Alderman Power), he would, as a matter of courtesy to him, move that the motion be laid on the table, although the matter was very important. The motion was carried.

THE SYSTEM OF SEWERAGE.

Alderman Bigelow submitted a report of the Committee on Sewers, to whom was referred an order requesting them to examine the present system of sewerage in the city. The report is as follows:

It is generally conceded that the rapid removal of decaying matter from habitations is part of the necessary machinery, and forms one of the conditions of life in large cities, and no doubt has a marked influence on the preservation of the public health; but so varied are the conditions of life and so many the influences that should be eliminated before a comparison could be made, that no estimate in figures of the relations of sewerage to human life has ever been given. There can be no question as to the perfect means enjoyed by our citizens in the collection and removal of sewage from their houses; it is probably in relation to its discharge into the waters surrounding the city that it was the purpose of the order to direct inquiry. Whenever a sewer may discharge into the harbor, there will undoubtedly be unpleasant odors at low stages of the tide and with some directions of the wind. The city is fortunately situated, in being able to distribute its outlets all around it, discharging only from a few such an amount of sewage as to render their location noticeable. These will be considered in detail, with the means proposed for diminishing their offensiveness as far as possible.

Some notice may be taken here of the reiterated statements that "we have no system of sewerage," or "a bad system," and that we need some "comprehensive plan" for the drainage of the city—reciting the story of flooded cellars, offensive odors, and a shoaling harbor, and pointing to some great scheme for diverting drainage from Charles River, and carrying it southward to Dorchester Bay. Our system of drainage is as perfect, though not so complicated, as that of any other city. We are favored by location with generally good grades and outlets to deep water; and though we have no long lines composed of huge sewers with their many branches, with pumping works and flushing apparatus, yet the removal of the sewage from the house to the ebbing tide in the harbor is rapid and complete; and that is a perfect system. We have probably more than 5000 cellars or basements below extreme high water, which, with a few exceptions, are perfectly drained; but after a heavy storm the newspapers invariably report the flooding of cellars in the low parts of New York, Brooklyn and Baltimore.

In the drainage of the surface of streets and in the appliances for protecting cellars from tide water, our system is probably better than that of any other city. The offensive odors which every summer afflict the south and west parts of the city are but in small degree traceable to sewers. The most prominent cause has been the exposure of mud banks by the filling of the basin of the Water Power Company and the stagnation of a large body of shoal water. Both this year and last, as soon as fresh cold water was permitted to flow in, the offence ceased. Our sewage system had no more to do with this than with the frequent visits of sickening odors from the shores of Miller's River.

But it is said that Charles River is becoming a vast cesspool, that it is growing shoaler by sewer deposits, and enormous mud-banks are forming in its channel, and that it has become what the Thames was to London, and that a similar remedy must be employed and the sewage carried southward to the harbor. Perhaps all this may come true in the future, when Boston shall rival London in size and population, but it is undoubtedly now all false. A simple inspection will suffice to show that the river does not yet suffer from the amount of drainage it receives, being pure enough for bathing purposes; and it is a fact, indorsed by the Harbor Commissioners, and there is no trace of sewage deposit in the harbor, and that the growth of the shoal in Charles River above Cambridge Bridge is due entirely to the growth of the oyster beds. Before the diversion of the London sewage and the building of the Thames embankment, that river received in the limits of the metropolis and from the towns above the drainage of 4,000,000 people, and then the offensive smell arose chiefly from the mud-banks exposed along the shores at low water and not from the river itself.

It is also the experience here that the exposed mud banks of Miller's River, of Back Bay, in the rear of Beacon street and in Roxbury Canal, discharge the obnoxious gases, but, when covered with a small depth of water are innocuous. The Charles River receives from Boston the sewage of about sixty thousand people; it is inclosed by walls and shows no flats below Cambridge Bridge; and long before those now in the river become offensive, the needs of commerce will have applied the same remedy that was carried out with the Thames, and have embanked the channel as far as the tide reaches. Keeping in mind the fact that flats covered with organic matter and exposed at low water are, here and elsewhere, the great sources of nuisance, compare the discharge of sewage into the Charles River, with its suggested diversion into Dorchester Bay.

In one case the sewage, discharged by many outlets, is mixed and dispersed in a rapidly flowing river, with current strong enough to hold and keep all noxious matter suspended until it is deposited beyond our limits, and, in fact, beyond our knowledge, without any sensible pollution of its own waters. In the other the sewage would be discharged by a single outlet into a basin almost completely bare at low water, at all times without motion, except the rise and fall of the tide, and half inclosed between two rapidly growing wards of the city. This is precisely the cause of the present condition of Miller's River and of our own like nuisances, and apart from the great cost of the construction of the necessary channel, it is certain that in a few years the deposits from its mouth, having spread over a square mile of flats, would emit a miasma which would render uninhabitable portions of Wards 12 and 16, and, with a southeasterly wind, would sensibly affect the death rate of the city itself.

The committee would now draw attention to the nuisances due to sewer outlets, so far as they know them, and discuss the means for abating them. There is no complaint around the borders of the city up to the rear of Beacon street. Here a large sewer from the Church-street District and another at the end of Berkeley street discharge very near to the abrupt angle in the wall of the river, where Braman's baths were formerly located. The channel of the river sweeping round this angle leaves a triangular bit of flats on its outer edge, which becomes the resting place, not only for matter coming from the sewers, but for every filthy thing floating up or down the river. At low tide in summer the smell from this is offensive and is often ascribed to the sewers in close proximity, and they are doubtless the indirect cause of much of it, by furnishing a share of the decomposing matter.

But, years ago, a remedy concurred by all interested to be perfect was proposed, viz., to change the line of the sea wall from an angular to a circular one, built along the line of the channel, inclosing the offensive flats and extending the sewers to deep water. At the same time it was urged by this department that provision should be made for a wide street or boulevard all along the water front from Cambridge bridge to Brookline, which might eventually serve to inclose a sewer, intercepting all the drainage on the west side and carrying it down to the bridge. This scheme, which was sanctioned by the Legislature and urged by the city, was defeated by the influence of the owners abutting, who feared to lose the water front and preferred to retain the smell from the river to losing the sight of it under their windows.

As it is improbable that this project will ever be perfected, the department is now carrying all the drainage from Church street, Berkeley and Dartmouth street sewers, by outlets submerged below low-water mark, to the channel of the river. This will remove the sight of much offence, but until the flats below are embanked they must be constantly dredged to keep them from being a nuisance. The Stony Brook, which is the receptacle of the drainage from most of the breweries and factories of Roxbury, now discharges at Parker street, and deposits more or less sediment upon the flats of the Full Basin. This basin is the property of the Boston Water Power Company, which, with the State, has filled all the flats westward from the Public Garden. The gravel filling has kept so far in advance of the construction and occupation of houses upon the land that the odors at low water have not till recently been noticeable at the dwellings of the Back Bay.

The city has covered this outlet during the past year one thousand feet toward the Milldam, and it is fair to suppose, from the progress in the past that the gravel filling will proceed fast enough to reach the line of the proposed channel for the brook, and confine it to a narrower and perhaps covered course, before the evils arising from its present discharge will become serious. If it becomes imperative, before the basin is filled, the channel of the brook can be extended so as to prevent the diffusion of sediment upon the flats, and transfer the outlet still farther from habitations. It is quite possible that a large interior basin, kept at high-water mark, may be preserved here for ornamental purposes, and its waters used to flush and purify the channel to the Milldam.

The Roxbury canal, on the east side of Ward 11, has, for a long time, furnished with Pine Island and the soap factories, its quota to the afflictions of that ward. It is the intention of this department to divert all the sewers discharging into this dock to the point of Pine Island through the new avenue formed by the extension of Swett street to South Boston. As soon as the lines of this avenue are decided, the department is ready to build the intercepting sewer, and whenever the canal can be filled as far as Albany street, all the sewers emptying into South Bay should be carried either to Pine Island or Dover-street Bridge. In laying out streets in the new territory which has come under the jurisdiction of the city by annexation, it is important that avenues should be laid out along the valleys of the various water sheds, in order that the main sewers of those valleys may be advantageously located and constructed.

The department is already embarrassed in providing necessary drainage for certain districts in Dorchester by the necessity of either taking land solely for sewer purposes at considerable expense, or else awaiting—perhaps, after all, in vain—the action of the Street Commissioners. At East Boston a new corporation is filling the flats east of the railroad and north of Maverick street. These flats have heretofore received the drainage of nearly one-half of the Ward, and the sewers must now be intercepted and new outlets provided. This will render necessary the construction of a main and branch sewers sufficient for the drainage of some 400 acres. The main line is already determined, and portions will be built as needed by the progress of the filling, so that no obstruction will be made to the free discharge of the sewers.

It has been unfortunate that almost the whole water front of the original city has been pushed out and filled by private corporations, which arrange their streets and sewers and fill and improve their lands without any control by the city, and often without any settled plan of policy of their own, but varying with the interests of powerful stockholders. This course compels the city to do the best it can when possession of streets is finally forced upon it, which is generally but a makeshift for what should have been done or left undone from the beginning. Your committee have therefore "examined the present system of sewerage of the city," and report that everything which appears to them necessary to the public health or convenience will be carried out by the Department as soon as it is possible or expedient.

JAMES POWER,
THOMAS GAFFIELD,
ALANSON BIGELOW,

Committee on Sewers.

The report was laid on the table to be printed.

On motion of Alderman Brown, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

SEPTEMBER 4, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held last evening, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE ALDERMEN.

The Reports of the Trustees of Public Library, Inspector of Buildings, Trustees of the Sinking Fund Overseers of the Poor, City Clerk, City Register, Superintendent of North City Scales and Auditor's Exhibit for August, were accepted and placed on file.

Petitions were referred in concurrence.

The following papers were disposed of in concurrence:

Reference to Committee on Common, etc., of an order requesting said committee to cause the asphalt to be removed twenty feet in radius from trunks of elms on Tremont-street Mall.

Reference to Committee on Public Institutions of recommendations of the grand jury of Suffolk County of 13th of June last.

Report no action necessary on petitions—1. Of Thomas Carberry, for leave to erect a range of wooden sheds at 1482 Tremont street; 2. Of Newton Morton, for leave to erect a wooden building on K street. Severally accepted.

Report leave to withdraw on petition of S. Weld & Co., concerning ofal contract. Accepted.

Report and order authorizing a license to be issued to Jno. Sullivan to construct a basement cellar at the corner of Kneeland and Albany streets. Report accepted and order passed.

Order authorizing and directing payment to be enforced of the policies of insurance in favor of the city on the Hospital Building, Swett street, destroyed by fire. Passed.

Order authorizing the reward of $500 for the detection of incendiaries. Passed.

Order to furnish additional primary school accommodations in Dorchester-Everett District. Passed.

Order to furnish additional school accommodations in Minot District. Passed.

Order authorizing alterations to be made in Ticknor Schoolhouse to accommodate the grammar school in that district. Passed.

Report of the Joint Special Committee on the Suffolk-street District, and order directing owners of land in Northampton-street District to raise the grade of said land as provided by law. Report accepted and order passed.

Order authorizing organization and equipment of Steam Fire Engine Company 22, to be located on Parker street, Ward 15. Passed.

Order to close the school building on Newton street heretofore occupied by the Normal School. Laid on the table on motion of Mr. Brackett of Ward 10.

Report and order authorizing fixtures to be placed on City Hall Building, for E. S. Tobey's invention for extinguishing fires. Laid on the table on motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12.

The following orders were read once:

Order to pay Gas Company's bill of $259 50, for gas for balloon on Fourth of July last.

Order authorizing a stand pipe to be located in City Hall Building and connected with high service supply.

Order for necessary repairs and alterations to be made on Court House and Probate Building, at not exceeding $5000.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I want to know what is contemplated by this order, and should be glad to have it explained. In the present condition of affairs it would seem that no more money should be spent on the Court House until it is understood what is to be done in regard to building a new one. Five thousand dollars spent on the old Court House would hardly be sufficient, and why it is contemplated to spend this money when there has been for several years a proposal to build a new one for the county of Suffolk is a very singular thing to my mind. Now, Mr. President, I have an idea that the city of Boston can save about two million dollars by a certain arrangement, and by which the present Court House can be made available for all the purposes required by the courts. The whole of this area around the Court House leading to Court street can be taken for the purposes of a Court House and blocked up from public travel. Then the noise consequent upon the use of Court square by the express teams will be abated, and the courts be better accommodated at an expense of from a hundred and fifty to two hundred thousand dollars, better than the courts in any county in the United States. I wish members to think of this and see whether the plan I propose is not feasible. Shut up the whole area this side of Court street from public travel so that it shall be used only for the purposes of the courts, except the Municipal Court, which I would remove from that building entirely. It brings twenty-five persons to the court house against one brought to any other. Then I would propose to extend City Hall to Tremont street, the necessity for which has become more apparent every day. I would then have the Municipal, Criminal, and perhaps the Civil, court in this extended building. This would accommodate the Supreme and Superior courts better than they are accommodated in any city in the United States. I have this opinion from persons familiar with public buildings in different States and counties. By this expenditure of a hundred and fifty or two hundred thousand dollars the present Court House can be made available for years to come, and perhaps for a century. Rather than go back upon the site of the reservoir on Beacon Hill, and build a new Court House at an expense of a couple of millions or more, let us try to economize, let us avail ourselves of the property that belongs to the city. I undertake to say that this plan never has been suggested before. I know the fertile minds of the Suffolk Bar may originate anything, but I never heard of this proposition until it occurred to me today. I had the honor sometime since to suggest an enlargement of City Hall, and I think if this matter were to be taken hold of properly—and the Committee on Public Buildings are abundantly able to examine this matter—I think they will see the necessity of doing something, and I know of nothing more apparently in the line of economy than this. It will be said that parties who own the estates on either side of the Court House will come in for damages. If I owned a building like Barrister's Hall, or any other there, and I should get two hundred dollars where I now get only one, if these offices were made available for the bar, I would not object. Instead of being damaged the property would be enhanced in value. I can see no reasonable objection to the plan which I suggest now, because when I see this small appropriation asked for it is proper to inquire what it is for and whether it is available. I leave this matter to the Council today whether the suggestion I have made is worthy of consideration.

The order was read once and laid over.

Order authorizing sale at auction of iron-fence on westerly side of Tremont street, between Park and Boylston streets.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16, moved to strike out the words "sell by public auction" and insert the words "transfer to Mount Hope Cemetery."

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 asked the reason for the proposed transfer to Mount Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16—The city of Boston owns both, and Mount Hope Cemetery needs just such a fence as that around the Common. It would be much more advisable to transfer the fence there than to sell it for one fourth what it is worth.

The amendment was adopted and the order as amended passed.

Orders to pay William R. Clark $160,000, on his giving to the city a deed of estate on Broad street, known as Fort Hill wharf, and also a release from all damages to said estate on account of the widening of said street, and for a loan of $110,000.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 asked for an explanation of this appropriation, which seemed to have just started out fresh. He wanted to know if there is any necessity for it.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—It is because the land is needed to widen Broad street, and the terms mentioned are the best that the owner of the property and the Committee on Streets could arrive at.

Mr. Shaw—That is not a proper explanation, though it may be all that the gentleman can give. I have known this property for several years, and unless some more satisfactory explanation is given I don't mean to vote for the order. The property is situated in the district which I represent, and I propose to have an explanation from some source with regard to it. I undertake to say that it isn't the best trade that can be made, notwithstanding the short and bluff manner in which the gentleman from Ward 6 answered me. If the city is to pay twenty-five per cent. more for property than a private individual does, it is time people knew it. When the city has to sell anything she has to take twenty-five per cent. discount, and it is time people understood this matter, and as a member of this Council it is my duty to rise here and say so. It is n't the best bargain that the city can make. It is made because an individual has been hovering round this City Hall and importuning members to buy his property, and it is time the people of Boston knew about this. I undertake to say that that property is n't worth anything like a hundred and sixty thousand dollars, and if the city does n't send men here competent to make good bargains it is time she left us all at home, and sent new men here. I don't propose to sit here and be bluffed in that way. The gentleman is one of the Committee on Streets, and it is perfectly proper that he should give me a fair and decent answer. I am entitled to it, and the citizens of Boston are entitled to it. I have known something of the value of this property for years. I want a better reason than the gentleman from Ward 6 gives for making this purchase, and proposing to make a new loan for it. With our loans reaching nearly up to fifty million dollars, it is time we were looking into this extravagance. It is time that we elected a City Government capable of making better bargains. I don't propose to come here and be answered in this terse, bluff and impertinent manner. I have a right to a fair answer, and when I am not satisfied with any proposition here I propose to ask an explanation.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—This matter has been before the Committee on Streets for some time and was reported to the Aldermen last Monday. In City Document No. 67, which relates to the widening of Broad street, the Street Commissioners awarded Mr. Clark for the widening of Broad street, Mr. Clark applied to the Harbor Commissioners to extend his wharf. The Street Commissioners thought that the proper place to extend Northern avenue, and they prevented the extension of the wharf until a good trade could be made for the city. The matter was finally left to a referee, who decided that the property is worth $175,000. After several weeks the committee made the best trade they could and allowed him to stay there till next April. The city will be obliged to have this sometime or other. If this arrangement is not carried out the commissioners will have to allow Mr. Clark to extend his wharf at an expense of twenty thousand dollars, which the city would have to pay when the avenue is extended.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I thank the gentleman for his answer and for the gentlemanly manner in which he put it. It is so different from the answer made by the gentleman from Ward 6 that I appreciate it.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—Another statement I intended to make was that Mr. Clark is to pay seven per cent. interest on the property while he retains it.

On motion of Mr. Flynn the rules were suspended and the order passed in concurrence—yeas 48, nays 0.

Order to hire the building at 23 Pemberton square, for the use of certain city officers, which had been amended in the Council by an order to lease the upper rooms in Niles Block, and connect the same with City Hall by a bridge, came from the Aldermen with the amendment non-concurred in.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the Council voted to adhere to the amendment.

PETITIONS.

Mr. Martin of Ward 7 presented the petition of Fowler & Bennett, to be reimbursed for damages to a horse caused by a defect in a street. Referred to Joint Standing Committee on Claims.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 15 presented a petition from Andrew J. Noyes for leave to erect a wooden building. Referred to Joint Standing Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department, reported that, after a careful examination of the system and management of fire departments in the leading cities of the Union, as compared with that of our own, the committee are thoroughly convinced that by the adoption of the within-named recommendations the Boston Fire Department would be as powerful in its armament, and as thoroughly equipped as any department in the United States, and its members as intelligent and disciplined a body of men as can be found in any city. The committee present the following table of expenditures of the different fire departments:

While the committee are slow to recommend any measure that will increase the burden of taxation, yet, in view of the fact that our dwelling houses are giving place to warehouses and stores, making it impossible to obtain tenements for the members of the department in the central portion of the city, they believe that the extra expenditure for their maintenance in this district will be cheerfully met by our citizens for carrying out the following recommendations, viz.: The organization of one steam fire-engine company and one hook and ladder company, to be located on Fort Hill, said companies to be permanently employed, and one engine company to be located in the vicinity of Mason street, as provided for by the City Council in the annual Appropriation bill. The committee also recommend that in addition to the above engines and hook and ladder companies, Engine Companies Nos. 4 (on Bulfinch street) and 7 (on East street) be reorganized so as to consist of twelve men each, as follows:

Foreman, engineer of engine, fireman, two drivers and seven hosemen, all of whom are to be permanently employed; also that Hose Companies Nos. 1 and 8 be transferred into engine companies as above, to take charge of Engines Nos. 24 and 25, and that Hook and Ladder Company No. 8, located on Fort Hill, be composed of fifteen men, to be permanently employed and ranked as follows: Foreman, assistant foreman, driver and twelve laddermen. The Department of the city proper, as now organized, consists of seven steam fire engines, five hose companies, two hook and ladder companies, and two extinguisher corps, with a membership of thirty-three men, permanently employed, and a hundred and forty-four members who do duty only when an alarm of fire is sounded, at an annual expense for salaries of $81,692 50. The recent vote of the City Council authorizing horse bosc carriages to run in connection with the several engines will increase the number of permanent men in the city proper to thirty-eight and the expense for salaries to $87,167 50. By the addition of the above recommendations the city proper will have fourteen steam fire engines, nine of which will be fully manned and equipped, and in case of emergency fourteen engines can be at work within the space of fifteen minutes. Of this force there will be on duty constantly a patrol force of forty men. With the increased water supply which has been furnished by the Water Board since the 16th of May—being sixty Lowry hydrants, with additions made daily in this direction—the city will have a working force as strong as any other city on the continent. Yet the committee, notwithstanding all this, fully concur in the opinion that there should be placed in the mercantile section of the city an independent water supply for fire purposes, believing the same could be maintained with one-third the expense it now costs for the present system of extinguishing fires, and give the city of Boston in the above-named district, by the adoption of the Holly system, a power equal to a hundred and fifty steam fire engines, instead of fourteen; for each hydrant would be equal in power to any first-class steamer now in service.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the report was laid on the table, to be printed.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, reported that, acting upon an order from the City Council of June 30th, 1873, to purchase the estate of the late Nathaniel Whiting between Washington square and Washington place, and erect on said lot and the lots adjoining on either side owned by the city, a building suitable for the accommodation of a steam fire engine, they had expended $16,750 of the $50,000 appropriated in the purchase of the Whiting estate. Plans have been prepared for a building which has the approval of the Chief-Engineer and the Committee on Fire Department, said building to accommodate two steam fire engines with horse hose carriages and a hook and ladder carriage. Proposals have been received for doing all the work necessary to complete the building, and it is found that the unexpended balance of the appropriation, namely, $33,250, will not be sufficient, but at the lowest estimate the sum of $15,000 more will be required before the work of building can be contracted for. The committee report and recommend the passage of an order authorizing the Treasurer to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, to be added to the amount already authorized for the purchase of land and the erection of an engine and hook and ladder house in Ward 5.

On motion of Mr. Caton, the rules were suspended and the order was passed—yeas 48, nays 0.

THE BACK-BAY SCHOOLHOUSE.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 moved to reconsider the orders whereby the Council voted to borrow forty thousand dollars for the erection of a schoolhouse on the Back Bay. At the request of a gentleman who is absent he moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The motion was carried.

PROPOSED NEW WATER SUPPLY.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 offered the following orders, and at his suggestion they were referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Water:

Ordered, That the Water Board be requested to consider the expediency and report the cost of supplying the territory bounded by Eliot and Tremont streets, Tremont row, Sudbury, Charlestown and Commercial streets, Atlantic avenue, Broad, Federal and Kneeland streets, to point of beginning, with salt water on the Holly system, for fire and sanitary purposes.

Mr. Jones also offered the following, which was referred to the same committee:

Whereas, the following order was passed by the City Council June 19, 1873:

"That the Water Board consider the expediency, and report the cost, of building five reservoirs at the intersection of streets, under the sidewalk, to contain about two thousand gallons each, the same to connect with a four-inch pipe from the street main";

And whereas the following advantages are stated by the City Engineer in response to a request from the President of the Cochituate Water Board, viz.:

"1st, of allowing the concentration of a number of engines at one point; 2d, of permitting the engines to get quickly at work, provided they have a sufficient pressure of steam; 3d, of furnishing a supply to any engine, whatever may be its size of couplings (this is of importance particularly when out-of-town engines are called into service); 4th, of being more quickly accessible in times of deep snow than hydrants placed in the street; 5th, of holding a quantity of water in store to compensate partially, at least, for want of capacity in the street main to deliver an adequate supply, while it is true that two thousand gallons would supply an engine under full steam, for four or five minutes only; yet if a partial supply were being received at the time the engine is working it would permit the latter to run uninterruptedly at its greatest velocity for say ten or twenty minutes; whereas, in using a hydrant, the speed of the engine, and consequently its efficiency, in case the supply is not adequate, depends upon the rate of flow from the hydrant, this condition might be of considerable importance when a large number of engines are at work within a limited area where the pipes are of small capacity."

DORCHESTER POLICE STATION.

On motion of Mr. West of Ward 16, the report and orders authorizing the erection of a Station House for Eleventh Police District, at an expense of $40,000, and for a loan therefor, were taken from the table and the orders were passed by a vote of yeas 49, nays 0.

A NEW ENGINE HOUSE.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Public Buildings, under the direction of the committee on that department, be directed to erect a bell tower on Hose House No. 12, located on the corner of O and Fourth streets, South Boston, at an estimated expense of fifteen hundred dollars; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

The order was read once and laid over.

MASON STREET ENGINE HOUSE.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 moved to take from the table the report and orders authorizing alterations on building formerly occupied by Natural History Society, Mason street, to accommodate a steam fire engine, horse hose carriage and men and horses connected therewith, at an estimated cost of $15,000; and for a loan therefor. Carried.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—It seems to me that the Committee on Fire Department ought to have located that engine in a different locality. In driving rapidly from Mason street, four times out of five an engine will capsize. In my opinion it is a very poor locality for either an engine or hose carriage. I have hoped that they would find some better locality than the one adopted. It is a narrow passage way and nothing more nor less. I move that the orders be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—The Committee on Fire Department, after careful investigation of the subject, and on the strength of a petition handed in from property owners on Mason street, decided to locate a steamer there. The city owns that building, and to occupy it with an engine is the best thing the city can do with it. An engine can get out of that street almost as well as out of any other. It is really the only available lot in the vicinity of Boylston street, and is an excellent location for reaching all parts of the city.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I withdraw my motion to indefinitely postpone and move the recommitment of the order to the Committee on Fire Department.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I consider it an unfortunate thing that the subject of locating an engine house comes before this Council at any time, and I trust the Council will very soon have nothing to do with locating engine houses. This is a very important matter at this time. There is not an engine located in that vicinity and an effort has been made to get a place for one. You cannot put an engine house in any street of the city but some objection will exist. If you want them right at hand in a thickly settled part of the city, you have got to put them into locations where you can't run very fast going in and out of the house. I think this objection would exist in any part of the city where it is built up for business purposes. And that is just where we want an engine located. I see no objection to having such matters come up to be decided by discussion in this Council.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I still hold to my objection. I will cite you a case on Salem street, that of Engine Eight. Half the time that street has to be shovelled clear after a storm, that the engine may go through it.

Now if this is so, what must be the case with Mason street? My idea is not to have an engine go where there will be huge snow drifts, as in Mason street.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I don't think that objection holds good. Hardly any street in the city has so many hacks and livery stables in it as Mason street, and hardly any street would be trodden down so soon as that. I consider it the duty of the City Government to pass that order before the summer vacation. Look at the Bunt District. It is nothing but a regular carpenter shop. In case of an alarm of fire in that district an engine in Mason street could be there within five minutes.

Mr. Wells's motion to recommit was lost, and the orders passed, yeas 46, nays 1.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12, moved that the report of the trustees of the Public Library be taken from the table and referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings. The reason of this motion is that there are so many recommendations which the trustees deem necessary to preserve that building from fire, and in order that the committee may do what is necessary. This motion was made.

The motion prevailed.

REBUILDING WASHINGTON STREET.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be authorized to issue permits to build on the westerly side of Washington street, between Boylston and Avery streets, within the limits of the fire of May 30, 1873.

Mr. Perkins—My object is this. On July 17 the Common Council passed an order asking for an estimate of the widening of Fayette court and extending it to Tremont street. If that order had not been obstructed we should have had that estimate, a gentleman having given notice of a motion to reconsider, but did not offer it. In justice to the owners of property something should be done. It is well known that the Street Commissioners are opposed to putting that street through. If it is to be put through it can be done only by a two-thirds vote of the City Government. We should no longer compel owners of property to lose money by not allowing them to build. One owner whom I know of has a lease of $20,000 a year, and partly on account of the motion of the gentleman from Ward 5, he has not built. It is the James Parker estate. The lease has been signed. We cannot in justice do injury to Mr. Parker's or any other estate. I don't know myself whether I favor this widening of Fayette Court, and I offer this order merely to elicit discussion.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I hope the order will not pass tonight. The member from Ward 5 had tied the matter up so that the Street Commissioners could not act. I understand that they have made estimates of the expense of the widening, and will be ready to furnish them next Monday to the Aldermen.

Mr. Perkins, of Ward 6—I have no desire to press that order, only I wish to call attention to what I think is a wanton disregard of the interests of citizens, which was shown by a member. It could have been settled tonight if the member had not given notice of a motion to reconsider which he hasn't made. At the rate of ten thousand dollars a year amounts to something, and this is what owners of property are losing on account of the inexplicable action of some one on the other side of the house.

The order was laid on the table.

REORGANIZATION OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. West of Ward 16 presented the printed report of the Joint Special Committee on the reorganization of the Fire Department, (City Doc. 97). He moved that the report be accepted and the ordinance read by its title.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12, presented a minority report from the same committee and moved that both lie on the table until the minority report could be printed.

The motion to lay both reports on the table prevailed.

The report is as follows:

The Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department, to whom were referred the petitions of Little, Brown & Co., and many other citizens and taxpayers of Boston, praying for the appointment of an independent board to have control and management of the Fire Department, after a series of public hearings given to the petitioners aforesaid, as well as to the remonstrants against the proposed measure, having duly considered the subject, would respectfully report in favor of granting the prayer of the said petitioners, and submit the following statement of the views and considerations upon which their recommendation of the measure is based.

Until the manner of building of American cities shall be reformed altogether, we, their inhabitants, cannot too soon realize that we are living, not in a state of peace, but of war, declared against us, for good cause, by a relentless and stubborn enemy. There is no safety for us now unless our troops are kept constantly upon a war footing and in the highest state of efficiency. This no person in his senses will attempt to deny, and it is the question of means to this acknowledged end which it is the most important duty of this committee to consider. Our soldiers, in spite of their undeniable bravery, have suffered two terrible defeats. The consequence for the moment is greatly increased vigilance at all outposts, and it may be some time before the enemy again advances in force; but when he does, the community cannot feel confidence that similar or even more disastrous losses may not occur. For we cannot but come to the conclusion that the department with the old hand engines was a better protection to Boston of the past, than even with the assistance of steam and electricity it is now to Boston of today. Our business thoroughfares become daily more and more crowded, our warehouses rise higher and higher, and combustible material for a conflagration is heaped together with the increase of business to a tenfold greater degree than in former days. The introduction of steam has only partially counteracted this increased liability, for although vastly greater volumes of water can be now thrown, it will not help us so long as the problem of placing a little where it will do the most good remains unsolved. This was what the old volunteer department certainly did better than our firemen of today; for the danger of entering burning buildings and scaling roofs could not be compared with what it is at present. We would refer on this point to the testimony of ex-Alderman Fitch, a practical fireman of the old school. All parties concur in acknowledging that most important changes and improvements are imperatively called for in the department before its efficiency will again merit the confidence of the community; the difference of opinion is merely upon the question whether the desired reforms can be effected and the department brought to and kept in a state of excellence which shall enable us to court comparison with those of other cities under joint committees of the City Council and the Board of Engineers, or whether a permanent commission should be created to whom the whole authority and responsibility in the matter should be delegated.

To answer this question it will be necessary to inquire to what extent and how radically the present force needs reorganization. It appears to the committee to be at the present moment in a transition state. That the men individually do more than ought to be expected of them, under the present system, no one can deny. But that system seems to us an unfortunate compromise between a regular and volunteer department, and gives us neither the drill, discipline and trained professional skill of the one, nor the numbers, enthusiasm and rivalry of the other. Engineers, stokers and drivers only are permanently employed; the men whose duty it is to fight the flames at close quarters still leave their private vocations—the support of their lives—to run to fires, as of old, and only at the scene of action are they under orders. If danger is anticipated, as it was recently on the Fourth of July, the chief-engineer can only request soldiers to assemble at any given point. They were so requested, and complied; but it was evident from the statement of Mr. Merritt that an order would have been resented as an unauthorized assumption, which, indeed, it would have been. Then what little discipline might be established voluntarily within the companies is rendered almost impossible by the fact that the foremen and assistants are still nominated by the companies, and owe their positions to popularity.

It appeared from the statement of the last-named gentleman that there are or have been volunteer drills in the hook and ladder companies, but the committee have heard of none elsewhere, and there is no power to compel them.

Then there can be no doubt that the existing apparatus is not properly distributed for the protection of the greatest amount of property. This may be owing to the recent increase of the city's area by annexation; but there would seem to be no body or official ready to take the immediate responsibility of ordering the necessary change.

The committee cannot but regard the present system of electing the chief and assistant engineers by the City Council as a dilution of responsibility; which, whenever there is competition, greatly decreases the best man's chances of success. And the fact that these officers owe their position to election and not to appointment, greatly enhances the difficulty of a removal for incompetency or misbehavior. It is not difficult to see why the chief would hesitate to attempt it, except in a case so glaring or outrageous as to render him certain of success; for if he fails, as happened a year or two since, where the committee sustained the accused, the effect must be damaging to discipline and efficiency.

The request of the petitioners that a special force be organized to take charge of the streets in the vicinity of a fire, with power to check and properly divert travel at the requisite points, appears to the committee reasonable and good. To these duties might be added that of preceding the engines on horseback, if necessary, to give warning of their approach. The chances are that the fire of May 30th would not have gained the mastery, as it did, but for the block of horse cars and other vehicles on Tremont street, which impeded the engines. The police, relieved from the duty of keeping the lines, could then devote themselves to their legitimate business of preserving order and preventing theft.

The question of the combination of light, portable apparatus, whether chemical or manual, with the powerful steamers, is one which has received, in other cities, greater attention than with us.

In like manner it has been found advantageous in all cities in which the force is kept constantly in hand, to dispense with the public alarms, which serve only to attract the curious, and announce to the criminal classes where a field for their operations may be found. But it is useless for the committee to further suggest reforms and improvements. Whenever all traces of the volunteer system shall have disappeared, and we have in its place a small, but paid, drilled and disciplined standing army, with appointed officers, under a competent and responsible head, those whose business it is to seek and devise means for increasing its efficiency will undoubtedly continue to find them.

The question for the committee is whether the reorganization indicated, which shall result, as one of our New York friends prophesied, in the production of the model American department, can be hoped or expected under the existing or any similar machinery, or whether a permanent board should be appointed, paid to make it the business of their lives and held to a corresponding responsibility. There would seem to be but one answer to this question, unless it can be shown that the evils resulting from such a system will more than counterbalance its increased efficiency. For, until, as before stated, the manner of building American cities shall be reformed altogether, the business of protecting them against fire will soon, if it has not already, come to be regarded as a profession not unworthy of the best talent and education in the land.

The conviction which seems to have justly entered the mind of the public is that the business of running the Fire Department has become too big a job, to use the common expression, to be longer intrusted to elective boards, and changing, unpaid committees, and they demand a concentration of power and responsibility in some permanent and competent body whom they may hold to strict account for shortcomings and deficiencies. And these eight thousand petitioners ask us for such a body in the shape of a fire commission of three persons, to be appointed by the Mayor.

The testimony which we have concerning the working of fire commissions, for we are not now concerned about others, seems to be almost all in one direction. The regular and striking diminution of loss by fire in New York since the adoption of this system speaks volumes in its favor. The objections thus far urged before this committee have been first, the greater opportunities for corruption which a permanent commission is alleged to present; and second, the increased expenditure which it would call for out of the pockets of the taxpayer. But the committee cannot admit that commissions should receive general condemnation because certain aristocratic thieves in our sister city succeeded in perverting one to their purposes, any more than that horse cars should be abolished because a humbler class of professionals made them their field of labors. The committee would have supposed, on the contrary, the system of electing officers, of constantly changing committees of an unpaid government, and of diluted responsibility in general, to be more favorable to dishonesty, to political influence, to jobs, and what are called rings, than would be a permanent board, whose doings would be at all times subject to the fierce light of popular criticism by the citizens whose property they were paid to protect. If we have escaped corruption under our present system, the committee cannot believe that the appointment of a fire board is about to inaugurate its reign. Next, the increased expenditure. It is evident that increased expenditures are imperatively called for, whether under a commission or the present system. Unless it can be shown that the probabilities are that they will be greater under the first-named regime than under the latter, then the increased expenditure amounts only to the salaries of the board; for the committee would certainly recommend that these be fixed at a sum which would enable us to command the services of education, talent and business capacity of the first order. If the result shall be a protection of property and a restoration of confidence in the community at large, will not this money have been well spent?

But let us follow this subject of increased expenditure a little farther. If the taxpayer should be called on to pay more for a department which does protect his property than for one which does not, it may be supposed that he would not complain. Have, then, the departments which have given the best protection to property, cost proportionally more than ours, which has just notoriously failed? Not so; the facts show the contrary. The committee would cite a few figures, taken from an excellent article upon this subject, published in the last number of the North American. It appears that the expense of various fire departments in American cities assessed per capita on their inhabitants is as follows: New York, $1 02; Philadelphia, .57½; St. Louis, .46¼; Chicago, $1 00; Baltimore, .57; Cincinnati, $1 27; Boston, $1 54. The amount of losses per capita within the last five years, exclusive of the great fires of Chicago and Boston, has been: New York, $16 80; Philadelphia, $16 17; St. Louis, $13 26; Chicago, $30 39; Baltimore, $6 62; Cincinnati, $16 56; Boston, $13 08.

Of these cities the only one which had not a more permanent government of the department than that of Boston was Cincinnati, where, it will be observed, the cost per capita comes nearest to that of our own department, while the losses nearly equal those of New York and Philadelphia. So far from assuming that the department of the future will cost more to future taxpayers if run by a commission than under a continuation of the present or similar machinery, the committee consider that reason and experience have proved the contrary, and that our present system has proved itself of all others the most costly and not the most efficient.

The committee do not feel themselves called on to discuss the competency or qualifications of the present Chief-Engineer, or to criticize the management of the recent fires. They would, however, remind those loudest in censure that the Chief has never enjoyed the power which should render him responsible for the efficiency of the department. Had he, in past years, been vested with the power which it is proposed to give the commission, then the occurrence of either of the recent fires would have justified a demand for his instant resignation. Whether he managed his forces well or ill, it is evident that under any management they were insufficient, and he should not be made a scape-goat to bear the faults of the system. It has been asked by those who oppose the appointment of a commission, Why not vest the whole power in a single head, giving autocratic power to the chief-engineer, and hold him responsible? Because, in the first place it would be too much to expect any one man to undertake. The general in command of an army, although absolute in the field and responsible for the manner of its use, yet is not responsible for the details of its organization, its armament and equipment; that is the business of the War Department, acting through boards and commissions, who give their whole study to the question of keeping the machine in the highest state of efficiency. Because it has been found in another city that five commissioners were better than seven, and three than five, the committee can by no means agree that it follows that one would be better than three, and that that one should be also chief-engineer. There is work enough for three men. In the New York department, each commissioner is at the head of a bureau, one for the extinguishment of fires, one for the investigation of the cause of fires, one in relation to the storage of combustibles.

It has been asked, Could not the present Board of Engineers, if given greater powers, accomplish all that could be expected of a commission? In the first place, different qualifications are or should be required of an engineer, and of a commissioner; and, secondly, the body is too large to properly exercise the supreme authority, and to assume the responsibility which the public require.

The committee allow the full force of the arguments in favor of building laws which should give to this city the safety of those on the continent of Europe. Could we pull down our city and rebuild it, with the fireproof floors of Paris, we might undoubtedly diminish the expense of our department and sell our steamers to London; but, though we should spare no effort in this direction in behalf of unburnt Boston, it is Boston as she stands today that we are called on to defend. It is not, however, to her superior construction alone that Paris owes her immunity from loss, but to the admirable manner in which the protection of her fire-soldiers, or *pompier*s, is dispersed throughout the city.

Stations are very numerous, patrols constant, in every theatre and public ball room the brass helmet shines; they are, in short, a fire police, always on duty and on the watch. How far such a system could be introduced or adapted to our community is exactly one of the questions to which the commissioners would undoubtedly devote all the necessary study. The principle underlying Mr. Bird's theory of a fire department, viz., portable apparatus within instant reach for the attack upon a fire in its inception, is also a valuable one. The placing of such apparatus within reach of citizens as well as firemen, with inducements and instructions for its use, may be an experiment well worth trying, on a larger or smaller scale, according to the judgment of the commissioners. The advisability of legislation upon this point might well deserve their consideration. Were the owners of all buildings stored with certain classes of combustibles compelled by law to provide apparatus on each floor for instant attack on the flames, under penalties to be enforced by the department, many a destructive fire would be avoided. With a Johnson pump and a bucket Mr. Burr might have dashed out the conflagration of May 30, even in spite of the oil and turpentine which soon gave it such fearful headway.

The committee have used the words "standing army" intentionally, because no others so well express the nature of the organization to which the defence of a large city against fire should be intrusted. That the words are repugnant to our form of government, and that our citizens look with distrust upon officials who do not owe their positions directly to the voice of the people, is well understood. But the war taught us at least that republican government could not be carried into an army; that the town-meeting principle, though admissible for the militia in time of peace, would never produce the fighting machine of an army in condition to face the enemy. Our argument in favor of a commission, therefore, is based upon the position announced at the beginning, viz., that the inhabitants of American cities, as now constructed, are living in a state of war against an enemy, ready to take instant advantage of every weak point in our lines, and that in consequence war powers and war responsibilities must be given to and imposed upon the body to whom are intrusted the organization and management of our troops. To expect such powers and responsibilities to be properly exercised and assumed by elective boards and unpaid changing committees, whose members' time is claimed by half a dozen others in addition to the private business by which they live, seems contrary to all reason and common sense. That the appointment of a commission will act as an immediate remedy for all the faults and deficiencies of our present system, we do not claim. Men of the desired abilities and qualifications may not be immediately found. But that they will eventually appear, and that in the long run this system is the only one which will insure to Boston of the future a protection equal, if not superior, to that enjoyed by her sister cities, this committee is so convinced, that they have no hesitation in recommending the change desired. In so doing they desire to recognize and acknowledge all the zeal and industry which the existing as well as former committees have brought to a task which, for the reasons above stated, this committee would transfer to a permanent board. It must be remembered that the City Council, in deciding to try the experiment of a new system, parts with no power which it cannot resume at will if, after a fair trial, we may desire to retrace our steps, as the statute already provides that all powers in relation to the establishment and maintenance of the Fire Department may be exercised either by the City Council immediately, or through the agency of any persons or boards to whom the same may be delegated.

In accordance with the foregoing views the committee would offer the following recommendations and suggestions concerning the reorganization of the department which it is proposed to commit and intrust to a permanent board of three commissioners, in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners:

I. Such immediate increase of the permanent force of the department, both in men and apparatus, as shall, in the opinion of the commissioners, suffice for the present protection of the city.

II. The establishment and maintenance, through out the entire command, of a system of strict military discipline and responsibility, together with such instruction, training and drill, theoretical as well as practical, as shall bring it to the highest state of efficiency, together with the adoption so far as necessary for this purpose of a military form of organization.

III. The division of the city into fire districts, in each of which an assistant-engineer or other officer should reside, held to a knowledge of the character of all buildings and their contents in relation to the possible origin or spread of fires, such engineer or officer to have command in such district in the absence of the chief.

IV. The establishment of a fire patrol in each district by detail from the department, who shall make daily reports of their tour of duty to the engineer or officer in charge, to be by him transmitted to headquarters. Such patrol to be empowered to make all investigations necessary to enable them to report all changes in use of buildings, storage of merchandise, character or habits of occupants, and all other matters which may in any manner bear upon the danger of origin or spread of fire within the district. Such a system would give those in command constant information of the state of the lines and the points of danger most necessary to be strongly covered.

V. The establishment of a body of fire police, in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners, whose duty it shall be to take charge of the streets and keep the lines at fires. If it shall be found impracticable or unadvisable to detail this body from the regular force, we recommend its appointment in addition thereto, and that legislative authority therefor be obtained, if necessary, without delay.

VI. The amount of water supply necessary and available at different points should, of course, receive the immediate and earnest attention of the board. Whether all hydrants and water apparatus are in proper order for instant use should form part of the daily patrol report before alluded to, together with the condition of the fire alarm boxes.

VII. In view of the surprisingly large expenditures now incurred for the repair of engines and fire apparatus, the committee would suggest that the establishment of a city repair shop, with skilled workmen in regular employ, would, in the long run, be found to be a measure of economy, as has been shown in the case of railway corporations.

VIII. The committee have provided in the ordinance that a report containing such information concerning fires as is most interesting and useful to the public be made monthly, instead of annually. The facts will thus be known, before the interest in the matter has died out, and the lesson which they inculcate will be more likely to be remembered.

The committee would, therefore, recommend the passage of the accompanying ordinance, to which they would call attention as embodying matters of detail necessarily omitted in the foregoing report.

City of Boston.

In the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three.

An ordinance to establish a Fire Department.

Be it ordained by the Aldermen and Common Council of the City of Boston in City Council assembled, as follows:

Section 1. The Fire Department of the City of Boston shall consist of a Board of three fire commissioners, a chief-engineer, and such number of assistant-engineers and other officers, and so many engineers, telegraph operators, and other members, not exceeding in the whole number — men, as the said commissioners may deem necessary to perform the duties of the department.

Sect. 2. In the month of September, in the year 1873, or as soon thereafter as may be, the Mayor shall appoint, subject to the approval and confirmation of the City Council, three persons, who shall constitute said Board of Fire Commissioners of the City of Boston, and who shall have and exercise the powers and duties hereinafter designated. One member of said board shall be appointed to hold his office until the first Monday of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, one until the first Monday of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and one until the first Monday of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six. In the month of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and thereafterwards annually in the month of April, the Mayor shall appoint, subject to like confirmation and approval, one person to be one of said fire commissioners for the term of three years from the first Monday of the following May. Any member of said board shall, at any time, be subject to removal by the mayor for cause, and all vacancies occurring in said board, from any cause, shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointments are herein directed to be made. No member of either branch of the City Council shall hold the office of fire commissioner. For their services the fire commissioners shall receive such compensation as the City Council may from time to time determine.

Sect. 3. The said board shall organize forthwith upon the first appointment of its members, and thereafterwards annually on the first Monday of May, by the choice of one of their members as chairman. They shall also choose a clerk, who shall not be a member of the board; and they shall make such rules and regulations for their own government and for the government of all other officers and members of the Fire Department, including the fire-alarm telegraph, as they may deem expedient, provided that said rules and regulations shall not be inconsistent with the ordinances of the city.

Sect. 4. The duty of extinguishing fires and protecting life and property in case of fire, shall within the city of Boston be intrusted to the said Board of Commissioners; and to enable them to perform that duty in the most efficient manner, the said board is hereby authorized to appoint all other officers and members of the Fire Department, including the fire-alarm telegraph, and fix their compensation; to discharge any of said officers or members at any time for cause; to divide the city into fire districts; to organize companies and battalions to work the apparatus; to purchase steam engines, extinguishers, hose carriages, hook and ladder carriages, and all other apparatus and supplies necessary for the complete equipment of the said department, or conducive to the proper performance of its duties: provided, however that the expenditures for the purposes herein named shall not exceed in the aggregate the sums previously appropriated by the City Council for the maintenance of said Fire Department.

Sect. 5. The said Board of Fire Commissioners shall annually, on or before the fifteenth day of February, send to the City Auditor an estimate in detail of the appropriations required for the maintenance of the Fire Department during the next financial year. All bills for expenditures from the appropriations for the Fire Department shall be drawn for by the said board, examined by the Auditor, and approved by the Committee on Accounts, before they are paid by the Treasurer.

Sect. 6. The said board shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, present to the City Council a report made up to and including the last day of the preceding month, containing a chronological statement of the number of fires in such month, with the causes thereof, a general description of the property destroyed or injured at each fire, with the names of the owners or occupants and the amount of insurance, if any, specifying the portion of the force and apparatus called into action at each fire, with the name of the officer in command; also a statement of all fatal or serious accidents to members of the department or others on account of fires or alarms of fire during the month; together with such other information or suggestions as they may deem proper. They shall also, annually, in the month of May or June, present to the City Council a report made up to and including the thirtieth day of the preceding April, containing, in addition to a consolidated statement of the facts contained in the monthly reports of the preceding year, a list of the causes of fire, alphabetically arranged, a statement of the income and expenditures on account of the department during the preceding year, a schedule of all the property belonging to the department, with a statement as to its condition on the date of the report, and an estimate of its value, also a statement of the number and location of the fire-alarm boxes; together with such other information or suggestions as they may deem proper.

Sec. 7. The Chief-Engineer and the assistant engineers appointed by the Fire Commissioners as hereinbefore provided, shall constitute the Board of Engineers of the City of Boston, and shall have and exercise all the powers conferred upon such officers by the statutes of the Commonwealth and by the ordinance in relation to the manufacture, storage and sale of petroleum, camphine and burning fluids. And they shall also have authority, under the direction of the Fire Commissioners, to inquire for and examine into all shops and other places where shavings or other such combustible materials are collected or deposited, and report to said commissioners from time to time the condition in this respect of the district to which they are assigned; and whenever, in the opinion of said commissioners, the same may endanger the security of the city from fires, they shall direct the tenant or occupant of said shops or other places to remove such shaving or other combustible materials; and in case of such tenant's or occupant's neglect or refusal so to do, they shall cause the same to be removed at the expense of such tenant or occupant, who shall, in addition, be liable to a penalty of not less than five or more than fifty dollars for such neglect or refusal; and any person who shall obstruct the said commissioners or engineers or any of them in carrying out the provisions of this section, shall also be liable to a penalty of not less than five nor more than fifty dollars.

Sec. 8. It shall be the duty of the members of the Police Department to aid the Fire Department by giving alarms in case of fire in such manner as the Fire Commissioners may direct, and in clearing the streets or grounds in the immediate vicinity of the fire so that the members of the Fire Department shall not be hindered or obstructed in the performance of their duties. If any policeman refuses or neglects to give an alarm as directed in the manner aforesaid, or refuses to obey the orders of the chief officer in command at a fire, he shall forfeit and pay a fine of not less than five nor more than twenty dollars.

Sec. 9. The said Board of Fire Commissioners shall make suitable regulations, under which the officers and men of the Fire Department shall be required to wear any appropriate uniform and badge, by which, in case of fire and at other times, the authority and relations of such officers and men in said department may be known as the exigency of their duties may require.

Sec. 10. The ordinance in relation to the Fire Department, printed in the revised ordinances adopted the thirty-first day of December, A. D. 1869, and all amendments and additions thereto, are hereby repealed, said repeal to take effect upon the organization of the Board of Fire Commissioners as herein designated.

REPORT ON THE CAUSE OF THE FIRE OF MAY 30, 1873.

This committee was instructed, by an order passed June 20, 1873, to investigate the cause of the fire of May 30. As these words are generally used in this connection, an investigation into the cause of a fire does not go beyond the circumstances of its origin. The fact that a previous order, which failed of passage, directed an investigation into the "cause and management" of the fire, would seem to forbid the assumption that any more extended meaning was intended in this instance. The committee have taken the testimony of all persons who seem to be able to throw any light upon the origin of the fire, and their evidence will be found hereto annexed.

It appears that the fire originated in the back part of the room, which extended through the whole depth of the second story of Messrs. Haley, Morse & Co.'s furniture warehouse. The front part of that room was occupied by the Freeman's Bank, temporarily; the rear was used as a show-room and filled with furniture standing close, and in some cases even piled up. This furniture it was the duty of the witness, Mr. Burr, from time to time, to clean and rub over with oil, spirits of turpentine and shellac. He was at his work, rather in a hurry, on the morning of May 30. He commenced at the rear, and as he went through pushed each piece of furniture back towards the wall as fast as his work thereon was completed. He had accomplished a good portion of his task, when, thinking he saw a light in his rear, he turned round, and, to use his own words, "About twenty feet from where I was there was a light flame running up over the furniture." He instantly shouted "Fire!" and ran down stairs for water.

At the same time Mr. George R. Richards, an employé of the bank, who was in the room, hearing the shout and seeing the flames, started for the box in Boylston Market, where he happened to find a fireman, by whom the alarm was promptly pulled in. The witness, C. W. Elton, employed up stairs, testifies to hearing the bells, as he thinks, for five minutes before the smoke gave notice to those upon the fifth floor that it was their own building which was on fire, and as he escaped he met firemen at the door with hose. It would seem then that the alarm could hardly have been given sooner, and that a portion of the department responded with great promptitude. But they found the enemy in no ordinary force. Cotton-covered furniture, with woodwork annointed with spirits of turpentine not yet dry, turpentine spilled more or less on the floor and its vapor in the air, gauze mosquito bars hanging from wooden posts, open wells and elevators through the building insuring circulation of air to fan the flames,—it seems as though all possible conditions were combined to give an instant and irresistible impetus to the fire. The prompt arrival of reinforcements might have turned the battle even then, but though not in evidence, it is a matter of notoriety that a portion of these, during precious moments, were involved in a block of cars and other vehicles on Tremont street. The manner in which the forces were used when brought into action the committee do not, for reasons above stated, regard as subject to their investigation under the above order.

With regard to the actual origin of the spark which fired this train of combustibles there are two theories; one that of spontaneous combustion among a few oiled rags, which the witness admits that he left in the room a few days previous, and which, perhaps, still remained there; and the other that of a match on the floor ignited by moving the furniture. The committee are inclined to regard the latter theory as the more probable. Though smoking was strictly prohibited among the employés, yet it is evident that a match dropped by a customer might remain for a long time unobserved, until accidentally struck by the caster of a piece of furniture at the moment when everything was most inflammable and ready to flash almost like a train of powder. Spontaneous combustion of rags would, as the witness (Mr. Haley) suggests, have been preceded by smoke pretty sure to have been perceived by persons in the room, nor does it appear that the rags if present were in a quantity or position so to ignite. Leaving them in the room was, undoubtedly, careless, and a habit of so doing would be highly reprehensible; but it does not appear that such habit existed, and the committee do not think it probable that the fire resulted from this single oversight. If the committee are expected to draw any conclusion or moral from the result of their investigation, it is simply that to which allusion is made in the report on the subject of reorganization, viz., the advisability of compelling, either by law or through the insurance companies, the occupants of all buildings stored with combustible merchandise to provide apparatus upon each floor for an instant attack upon the flames when discovered. From the experiments which the committee have seen with the Johnson pump, it would seem that even this fire, exceptionally fierce and rapid from the start, might have been dashed out by Mr. Burr had this apparatus been within instant reach. The gallant and distinguished fireman, James Braidwood, lost his life in a fire which originated in a neglect of similar precautions which he himself had advised. If it were made the duty of large business firms not merely to provide the arms but to instruct and practice all employés in their use, the victories of the fire fiend, as the reporter phrase it, would soon become greatly diminished. For the committee,

SAMUEL M. QUINCY, Chairman.

Minority Report. It would be an easy thing for the members of the committee to avail themselves of the character and number of the petitioners to grant all that is asked, and thus throw upon the petitioners the entire responsibility.

It would also be an easy thing to say, "Let us get rid of this most difficult subject by recommending the appointment of commissioners.

The care of the safety of the city will then be in their hands, and whatever errors they may make cannot be charged against us." The undersigned do not think such action the discharge of their duty.

Petitions are addressed to the sound discretion of the committee and City Council.

They do not justify neglect or careless consideration, nor can they justify a yielding to their requests unless, after careful consideration, our own convictions demand it. The petitioners would have a right to say to the Government, "It is true that we asked what you have granted, but that was without investigation, and we asked knowing it was your duty to investigate, we took the usual and proper course, to bring the subject before you; we never intended to relieve you from your duty, and if you failed to consider our requests and to refuse them if not wise ones, you neglected your sworn obligations."

While we know that the thousands who signed the petition could not have examined the details embraced in it, we take it as evidence, if any were wanted, of the deep feeling of insecurity and apprehension of danger pervading the entire community.

Perhaps the readiest relief from their fears, would be found in prompt, radical change.

The true course, however, is to endeavor from the mass of information accumulated, to adopt measures for the permanent security of the city, rather than for the temporary allayment of present fears. These fears have had since the great fire other expressions than the petitions in question.

At one time the city was, that the Chief-Engineer did not have power enough, and the Legislature was called upon to give him absolute control over the destruction of buildings, without requiring him to consult with two other firewards, though the lesson of the fire taught no such necessity, and the result on that occasion would have been the same under either plan, as the Chief authorized all that was done. Again, the Legislature was called upon to give the right of way to engines, when the time has never been known when every citizen did not get out of their way as quickly as possible.

Then it was required that the engine houses should be built by the Fire Department, as if the mere hands which erected buildings would have an effect upon fires, though the buildings have always been erected where the Fire Department required.

The same claim was made with reference to the fire-alarm telegraph, though it has been admirably managed.

It were idle to enumerate all the changes suggested. Most of them pointed to a concentration of power and responsibility in the Chief-Engineer; that is, to a concentration of power and responsibility. The present petition points rather to a division of power and responsibility; it proposes to add three persons to attend fires and control the management of them. For, having the power to remove the Chief-Engineer, they could control his action.

This is certainly a "dilution" of responsibility, if "dilution" means division; and thus those who favor the appointment of a commission with full power, do so believing they are concentrating power into one head, as is done in military affairs, to which a contest with fire is likened, when in truth they are dividing among four what now belongs to one.

The excuse for this course is, that the City Council "can resume at will its power" at any time, if the experiment prove a failure.

If we appoint a commission, we appoint it to adopt certain measures.

The majority tell us the things they want done; they desire to appoint a commissioner to do them.

Will the commissioners do these things? We don't know. If we are agreed as to what should be done, why not do the things we are agreed ought to be done? and then we shall be sure they are done and done quickly and cheaply. Why put an additional expense of from fifteen to thirty thousand dollars per annum upon our taxpayers, when by a little extra labor we can save it all and get exactly what we are agreed we want, certainly what we are asked to appoint commissioners to do.

If we "resume" our powers, after the failure of commissioners, we shall then have the duty to perform we ought to perform now.

In one of the Transcript articles on the "Garden and Farm," is found the following:

"Two boys, John and Will, were employed by a gentleman to keep the paths of his garden weeded.

John contented himself with taking off the top of the weeds. He soon cried, 'I have cleared my path,' and having swept away the leaves, went off to play.

Will was much longer at work, for he stopped to take up all the weeds by the roots, and he was well tired when he went home.

But the rain came down in the night and all the next day, and when the boys' master went, a few days after, to look at the two paths, John's wanted weeding as much as at first, while Willie's was clear, and only needed a few turns of the roller to make it quite neat. So John went back to do his work properly, and very tired he would have been had not Will good-naturedly helped him to finish his task."

Only thorough work is worth doing. Faults only half uprooted will appear again and again, and we shall almost despair of curing them. Will you remember this? We think it better to pluck from the fire department all weeds by the roots, and do all necessary pruning rather than devolve that duty into unskilled hands, who may do it or may not do it.

As importance has been attached to the numbers of the petitioners, we desire in addition to what we have already said, to call attention to the ease with which people will sign petitions circulated, as we understand these were, by hired canvassers, without carefully considering their contents, and without any knowledge of the subject.

Even Mr. William B. Spooner, one of our citizens most esteemed for his intelligence and zeal for the public welfare, did not know that the Fire Department of our city was managed by a Board of Engineers of skill and experience, and doubtless spoke the general belief when he said, in answer to a question as to his impression of the management of the department, "I suppose there is a committee of the City Government but I suppose the Chief-Engineer has the control during fires, certainly."

From Mr. Spooner's testimony, again:

"Q.—Can you tell us if a board of three or five commissioners should be selected in what way they could govern and control the Fire Department any better than a strong board of engineers?"

A.—I should think that would be a commission, would it not?

Q.—We have such a board in existence now, have we not?

A.—I have never heard much of them. I do not know how that is, but I want some independent men who do not care for the salary, men who have an interest in the city, men of public spirit, men of independence and known character, who will set to work and look this matter up, and think it out and say what ought to be done. I want somebody to tell me. I want somebody whose business it shall be to look the matter up."

We cite this testimony because it expresses in the strongest and clearest language the sentiment that favors the appointment of a commission. And what then, is the story of the petitioners? It is this: "We don't know how the Fire Department is managed, we have an idea that it is managed by some committee of the City Government which is ever changing; these great fires make us fear that all is not right, and we want somebody to tell us what ought to be done."

This is the opinion of the undersigned, and expresses the real sentiment of the petitioners.

They do not want a "permanent" commission, a commission "independent" of control, responsible to nobody. Some say "they want somebody that they can hold responsible," and would have us appoint a commission so independent as to be responsible to nobody.

What do they mean by having persons whom they can hold "responsible"? They do not intend to indict and imprison them if they fail to put out fires. They do not intend to turn them out of office, because they are to hold for long terms, and thus be independent. They mean to have somebody whom they can scold, and talk about. Have they not that already? and have they not exercised this privilege? and are we not endeavoring to comply with their demands, as they ought to be, by endeavoring to cure every evil we can discover in the department? The objections to a commission are—First, it is unnecessary. We already have something like a commission in the Board of Engineers. They have such full control of the department that the committee on the department meets but once a month. Second, the expense would be inordinate for the duties performed. All the executive duties of the department would be done by the engineers, leaving no necessity for the expense of a commission. Third, the commission, if independent, and of the powers asked for by the majority of the committee having the complete control of five hundred voters and all their influence, would be a political power capable of controlling almost any municipal election in the city of Boston.

The appointment of a commission, therefore, would not take the department out of politics.

Fourth, such a commission, independent, having absolute control of the large expenditures of the department, would be likely to become corrupt, and we might have a repetition of the frauds which have so recently disgraced New York. Whatever may be said of the Committee of the Fire Department, it has never been charged with corruption.

It has been a favorite method of reasoning on this subject to refer to the Water Board and the Board of Health, as examples of the successful working of boards.

It must be remembered that the Water Board has always been composed of gentlemen who could not be hired for any sum the city would pay, and when Mayor Gaston applied to a gentleman to take the chairmanship of the Board of Health he replied, "If the office were without pay I would undertake it."

As to the present Board of Health, however estimable the gentlemen may be, and we hold them in much esteem, it is a question whether they have done anything that would not have been done by the Board of Aldermen, except the seizing for their purposes of the Roxbury Almshouse and taking patients from the other hospitals to place in it.

They were appointed at a time when, owing to the immense amount of vaccination that had been done by (direction of) the Board of Aldermen, the disease was diminishing.

The new board continued the same policy and the disease abated, and well it might, as the whole community became protected by vaccination. The citizens will find when the account is rendered by the new Board of Health such an exceedingly expensive method of dealing with that department that they cannot afford to have all our departments managed in the same way.

If a commission was to be established for anything, it would be better far to apply it to the Department of Survey and Inspection of Buildings—a department not calling for the expenditure of half a million of money nor giving control over half a thousand voters, but requiring constant supervision, a duty that commissioners could personally discharge.

This would be striking at the root of the evil, and should meet the views of the majority of the committee, who say, "Until the manner of building American cities shall be reformed altogether, we their inhabitants cannot too soon realize that we are living not in a state of peace, but of war declared against us for good cause by a relentless and stubborn enemy." In view of their danger, however, the undersigned deprecate the insidious inroads of permanent commissioners for the discharge of any of the duties devolving upon the City Council.

Returning to the present method of electing the Chief-Engineer.

We would, agreeing with the views of the majority of the committee, instead of devolving the duty upon a commission, apply a direct remedy and provide that he be nominated by the Mayor and confirmed by the City Council. This is also in accordance with the recommendation of the learned commissioners appointed to inquire into the management of the great fire. The Chief-Engineer is purely an executive officer, and the chief executor of the city ought to take the responsibility of his nomination, and if he finds a superior candidate the City Council would readily supply the required salary. It will be remembered that at the great fire, the citizens involuntarily turned to their excellent Mayor for relief, though he had no legal authority to act, and though he had no part in the appointment of the executive (officer of the) department, who alone had authority to act.

This would be a concentration of responsibility, and in accordance with our system of government, national, State and municipal.

There has never been, to our knowledge, any difficulty in the manner of electing the assistant-engineer, and no fault has been found with them as persons of skill in the department, or as persons of respectability and substance. Besides, permitting them to be chosen as at present would avoid placing the political power resulting from the direct control of so many men in the hands of one person, and those now living in separate districts are best known to the members of the Government from their districts.

Another objection to the present system is that the members of the companies choose their foremen, which is claimed to be injurious to discipline.

Though not much fault has been found with the discipline of the department, they always responding to every call with an alacrity and zeal, which called from the commissioners to examine into the great fire, great praise:

He would change this, and provide that all the officers and members of the companies be nominated by the Board of Engineers to the Board of Aldermen, and be appointed by said board.

We now come to another change which we recommend.

The majority of the committee say, "The difference of opinion is merely upon the question whether the desired reform can be effected and the department brought to, and kept in, a state of excellence which will enable us to court comparison with those of other cities, under joint committees of the City Council and the Board of Engineers, or whether a permanent commission should be created to whom the whole authority and responsibility in the matter should be delegated." The committee doubtless had in mind the testimony of Mr. Avery Plumer, who, after stating that he had been chairman of the Committee on the Fire Department, said, "I had some six months' experience there, sir, and I came to the conviction at that time, and subsequent developments from time to time have only tended to strengthen that conviction, that the Fire Department should be placed in the hands of an individual or commission, or, at least, that the joint committee should be abolished, and it should be placed in the hands of the Board of Aldermen, for the reason that you would thereby narrow the responsibility, and the work would be more efficiently performed and with much less expense in my judgment than by the large board which now manages the department. I think that must be obvious to every gentleman." Here is a gentleman called to testify in favor of a commission, and having been chairman of the Fire Committee, he knows more about it than all the rest; and his complaint is of the joint committee, and he says that the purpose would be subserved by the department being placed in the hands of a committee of the Board of Aldermen.

The undersigned recommend the abolishment of the joint standing committee and the placing of the department under the control of the Board of Aldermen. They are satisfied that a committee of the Board of Aldermen will be more efficient as a general thing than any hired commissioner. For instance, no member of the present Board of Aldermen could be hired for any service which would take his whole time for any sum the city would pay or ought to pay. They are larger men than can be obtained for pay. But it is said they have not time to attend to it. The reply is, that almost without exception they attend to their duties with singular zeal and fidelity. The public demands, and generally obtains, a high class of men for Aldermen; and then demands and secures their best services in preference to their attention to their private affairs. A majority of the Aldermen of this committee are gentlemen of leisure, and not only have time to attend to their duties, but do attend to them with fidelity. It is true that commissioners might show the same energy for a short time, as a new brown sweeps clean, but commissioners afterwards show little zeal except to protect themselves, and keep themselves in office. They are not looked after as other public servants are, and become obstinate and indifferent to the public wants. A notable instance of this has lately occurred. With regard to the filling of the South Boston flats, the only important thing they have had to deal with for years, the Harbor Commissioners were not even called together to meet the committee of the city, one of their number being intrusted with the management of the whole matter.

The consequence is an immense expenditure of money and retarding the occupation of the great bulk of the flats for many years.

The one intrusted with the business actually objects to the city's making improvements that would advance the value of and expedite the occupancy of the flats.

Another notorious instance is that the Board of State Charities, because it brought money through their hands, prevented for a long time and fought gallantly to the last against the repeal of the act levying head money on immigrants. It was, however, at last, by a close vote, repealed, and immediately additional steamships steamed into our harbor. But the majority say, if the commission is a failure we can resume our powers. This is a delusion and a snare. Give three commissioners the appointment and control of five hundred men, and the expenditure of five hundred thousand dollars, and it would be found that the power was too great to be resumed. It would be the importation from our sister city of an institution which has been the cause of all her evils, and which we don't like to copy. As an illustration of the political effects of commissions, we call attention to the following article in the Boston Daily Advertiser:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 24. The local political campaign this fall promises to be interesting in consequence of the reported determination of the Board of Public Works to prevent the reelection of every member of the House of Delegates who aided last spring in the defeat of Mr. Shepherd, brother of the vice-president of the board, for the position of Speaker of the present House. Two districts are already in open revolt against this movement, and in one the board is supporting one of their earliest and most persistent opponents in order to defeat the reelection of the present delegate. In the eastern part of the city much dissatisfaction exists because the market house, practically completed for five months, is not yet opened, the delay compelling all business to be done at the house of the Central Market Company, in which Vice-President Shepherd is a large stockholder. The expediency of an extra session of the Legislature is now being discussed, in order that the lately-revised code of statutes of the District may have its second formal reading, a proceeding which will occupy nearly a week."

We have heard some persons say all the business of Boston should be done by commissioners. Let us suppose that to be the case, and where would we land? Instead of the people having the power in their own hands, instead of their meeting when not satisfied with the management of municipal affairs and appointing a citizen's committee irrespective of political ties, and choosing the men they can trust with all their interests, we say instead of thus having the management of their own affairs, they would find the Fire Commission with its five hundred voters and five hundred thousand dollars; the Board of Health if intrusted with all the power of the department with four hundred men and five hundred thousand dollars; the Paving Commissioners with five hundred men and a million of money, the Public Commissioners with six hundred men, the public buildings and other departments, with their immense expenditures, to contend with, and the Citizens' Committee and citizens themselves would find themselves utterly powerless to correct abuses.

If the attempt were made, they would find these commissioners taking alarm and combining together, and with the immense patronage in their hands, absolutely irresistible, and only to be overcome by a convulsion similar to the one in New York which so recently startled the whole country.

This is no fancy sketch. It is what has always been done and is now being in Washington, and is the natural result of such a system.

Let it not be forgotten that notwithstanding the discovery of the immense frauds in New York, no one has been convicted of any offence, and it is yet undecided who will be the victors in the end.

Our city, thus far, has borne an unblemished character, and her credit has commanded money at the lowest rates on both sides of the Atlantic. This has been because her learned men, her merchant princes, and her humblest citizens, were left by the charter written by the late Chief-Justice Shaw untrammelled in the management of our municipal affairs. If the management was too lavish they met in council and changed their public servants, and if too parsimonious (for these two offences have been the only crimes charged down to this day), the same fate awaited them. Let us not change our policy in this respect, but leave the same power in the hands of the people they had when we were sent here.

The rumor that the commissioners or some of them, are already selected, and that the petitions were circulated by hired employes, in the interest of the would-be commissioners, also cautions us not to be too hasty in creating so unnecessary a political power.

As a part of their political design, we would call attention to the fact that up to the 12th of June last, the law provided that the "appointment of engine men, hose men, and hook and ladder men shall be made by the Mayor and Aldermen exclusively." All other powers could be carried into effect by the said City Government "in any manner which they may prescribe, and through the agency of any persons, or any board or boards to whom they may delegate the same."

Now the persons managing this great change, not content when it should be successful, that the commissioners should appoint the chief and assistant engineers and expend half a million of money annually, and receive large salaries for doing so, but anxious for the political power the control of many men would give them, got the law first above quoted amended by an act finally approved June 12, 1873, by adding after the word "exclusively," these words: "Unless the said City Council shall by ordinance otherwise provide for their appointment," and the majority report does provide for the appointment by the commissioners.

The proviso was an important one. It prevented so large a political power from getting into the hands of any board or boards. The amendment which abolished it was not asked for by the city. Its Committee on Legislative Affairs knew nothing about it, except the chairman, and he does not know who proposed it, but thinking it unimportant, did not acquaint the committee with it. It will be seen at a glance that the amendment was the result of careful study and cunning design. Even the majority of the committee do not expect to reap any immediate benefit from the course they recommend; for they say, "That the appointment of a commission will act as an immediate remedy for all the faults and deficiencies of our present system, we do not claim. Men of the desired abilities and qualifications may not be immediately found."

Our belief is that what of good a commission could do, would be in the early stages of its existence, and all after that would be of evil, and if there is no immediate benefit, then there would be none whatever.

The comparison between car conductors and commissioners is a good one, as illustrating that in all walks of life we cannot resist too strong temptations.

We also agree with the opinion contained in the above quotation that success depends upon the men employed and not upon the name of the office they hold.

The successful contest with fire depends upon the Chief-Engineer and his assistants.

The efficiency of the London Fire Brigade is due to its chief officer, Eyre M. Shaw. No diluted commission could make good his place.

The Chicago Fire Department had been managed by a commission for five years prior to Chicago's great fire. We might then have said "down with commissions and submit to the control of a department of firemen like ours."

Then came our own great fire, and it proved that a mere system of government does not give safety or efficiency.

We have now one Babcock engine and one Extinguisher wagon. The value of these small engines in the early stages of fires is conceded. That being so, it is idle to expect them to do much good when confined to so few a number of vehicles. They can be rarely at fires as early as the more numerous large steam engines, and to have a great number of extinguisher wagons would increase the expense of the department beyond endurance. We therefore, recommend, that small hand engines, or Johnson pumps, and suitable buckets be carried on each engine, hose carriage, and hook and ladder carriage, and that a certain number of such pumps be placed in each police station, and that one or more policemen with hand engines at each alarm start for the fire from the police station nearest the fire.

We also recommend that hose, similar to those on the stand pipe in the City Hall, with couplings fitting on hydrants, and with stop valves on the nozzles, be placed in each police station, and that one or more policemen proceed with the same to each fire, from the station nearest the fire. We also recommend that hose, similar to those on the stand pipe in the City Hall, in addition to the heavier ones, be carried on each hose carriage, so that it can be easily carried into buildings by a few men.

The adoption of these recommendations will be a great stride towards the preventive system which Mr. Bird proves to be the best one, and which can, as it proves efficient, be more generally adopted.

These small engines will not only prevent many conflagrations, but will also prevent much damage from water. At present an immense amount of damage is caused by the great and useless quantity of water used to put out little fires. While the memory of the great fire is fresh upon us, we are apt to think only of deluges of water; but, to be prepared to stop a small fire only by a great engine and a great amount of water, is to make it certain that a small fire shall always do a large amount of damage, and in the long run our insurance companies suffer enormously from this cause, even if we leave out the great fires that would be stayed by the prompt use of small engines.

Eyre M. Shaw, chief officer of the London Fire Brigade, in his report for 1870 says, "The quantity of water used for extinguishing fires in the metropolis during the year has been 11,161,446 gallons; in round numbers a little more than eleven millions of gallons, or about 50,000 tons, a most insignificant quantity for the work done.

This may have been an exceptional year, and consequently it may not be well to base any definite conclusions on the matter.

But in a professional point of view the fact referred to is especially worthy of being recorded, as evidence of the extreme care used by the brigade to reduce the unavoidable item of damage by water to the lowest possible point consistent with the certainty of extinguishing fires. Assuming the annual supply of the metropolis to be thirty-four thousand million gallons, it will be seen that the total quantity used for fires during the year has been less than one gallon for every three thousand supplied. Even in the heaviest years the water required for extinguishing fires bears a very small proportion to the total quantity; the really important object is to obtain it with quickness and certainty, which can be effected only by means of a constant high-pressure service."

The last clause quoted contains the whole wisdom in a nutshell.

We must now adopt the best appliances we can to obtain this result, namely, to place water on fire with "quickness and certainty."

In our city water can be obtained at all times, and hand engines in skilful hands sufficiently numerous to be early at fires, and a supply of hose of a size easily carried and handled, will probably best attain that end with our present water supply.

But we should never forget the last words we have quoted, namely, that this result "can be effected only by means of a constant high-pressure service."

This great remedy is so complete in the hands of an efficient force, with easily-handled hose, that we desire to enforce it by quoting another sentence from the same report: "I presume that London will not submit much longer to the inconveniences and risks of intermittent water supply, and I confidently anticipate, that, when constant high-pressure services have been established all over the metropolis, the quantity of water used in extinguishing fires will be still further reduced, for it must be remembered that in many cases a single gallon at an early stage is more effective than a million gallons half an hour later."

We have been informed that the Fire Department of Montreal consist of a few hose carriages and a few men, the high service being sufficient to carry the water wherever wanted; also that in our sister city of Providence the engines are rarely used. They are taken to the fire, it is true, but usually are returned without being used, the pressure from the hydrants being sufficient. We have heard that in one instance twenty-four streams were thrown at the same time over five-story buildings.

The Water Department is already in a board, and we recommend that high service be secured for every part of the city; when the expense of the Fire Department will be greatly reduced and its efficiency greatly increased, and the losses by water lessened.

The committee, having decided by a large majority in favor of a commission, determined that it was unnecessary to avail themselves of the privilege given by the City Council to visit other cities in quest of information.

The undersigned, however, impressed with the importance of the subject submitted to them and anxious to obtain all the information necessary without saddling the city with the greater burden of a commission, sought for it elsewhere. Their investigations were rewarded when they had examined "Birdsill Holly's system of water supply and fire protection."

This they found in operation in Lockport, N. Y., in the works of the Holly Manufacturing Company, and spent much time in studying the system, its mechanism and mode of operation. The peculiarity of the system is that the engine pumps directly into the mains, without the necessity for a reservoir or stand pipe of any kind, and the engine having been set to supply water at a given pressure, will continue to keep up that pressure under all circumstances. If much water is drawn much will be supplied; if little is drawn, little will be supplied. It was certainly a pleasant sight to see the ponderous engine working, now faster, now slower, and to see that its speed was regulated by a little mechanism which caused the engine to go faster or slower, as the pressure in the pipe was greater or less. The undersigned are convinced that the cost of these Holly pumps would not exceed the cost of the pumps for pumping water into our stand pipes and reservoirs, and the cost of the reservoirs and stand pipes for high service could be wholly saved. The cost of the changes in the pipes of the city to meet the wants of the new system cannot, of course, be ascertained without a careful examination. This system of works can be adopted to supplement and increase the pressure in all the pipes in the city; or it can be applied to sections of the city; or it can be so arranged that the increased pressure can be applied to any district where the pressure is required for fire purposes; or it may be used to furnish an independent supply of salt water from the docks for fire purposes. The undersigned were so much pleased by the simplicity of this system of works and their adaptability to meet every requirement that they recommend the passage of the order herewith presented to secure its examination by persons of skill, and their report concerning the same to the City Council. This course is extremely desirable in view of the great expenses now being incurred and foreseen as necessary for our future wants.

We ought not to omit here to state that the Holly system has received the commendation of all the places which have adopted it, that many underwriters have extolled it, and that its adoption has been followed by the reduction of insurance rates. To furnish means to stop the losses from the frequent fires in Lockport, the place of Mr. Holly's residence, the fire engines proved inadequate. The result of the new system was so wonderful a success in putting out fires—that it does not pay to have fires at all, and the attempts to have fires have diminished in numbers.

Since the introduction of these works at Lockport similar ones have been established in about fifty different Western cities and villages, and the demand for them continues to increase. For cities located on plains this system supplied a great want, as they had no hills for reservoirs. For a city like Boston its recommendations are its efficacy and its economy.

In the meantime we think the "quickness and certainty" of obtaining water is not to be attained by the universal introduction of the Lowry hydrant, but that it should give way to the lamp-post or Lockport hydrant, hereafter described.

The Lowry hydrant placed on the main pipe in the roadway in our climate must be many times difficult to find, and its use cause much delay. Our winters are severe, and the removal of ice and snow, the opening of the hydrant and placing the cap upon it at night by the uncertain light of lanterns, cannot be conducive to "quickness and certainty." Their rapid introduction is owing to the great fire, and is a haste that will make waste. We admit there may be places when they should be placed, but so far as we look for "quickness" we must adopt some other.

The claim has been that the street mains were insufficient to supply the Boston hydrants. It is difficult to see how the great capacity of the Lowry hydrant could remedy such defects. There may be instances where their use would be beneficial, in which cases they should be retained. The lamp-post hydrant is always accessible, and readily found, will give water with "quickness and certainty," and has its light always burning. It is strange that the combination of lamp-post and hydrant should be so late an invention.

We cannot leave this subject, without alluding to a hydrant we saw in Lockport, New York, in a cylinder made of boiler-plate iron, with a movable top. Inside this case was a hundred feet of hose, with a nozzle similar to those attached to the stand pipes in the City Hall, except that there was a stop valve near the nozzle. There was also in the case a wrench to turn on the water. We saw the cap removed, and one man ran with the hose, and when it was stretched to its utmost, another turned on the water. From the taking off of the cap just twenty-five seconds elapsed before a stream of water one hundred feet high was thrown from the nozzle.

To this hydrant another hose on a steam engine could have been attached without interfering with the one we have mentioned.

These hydrants placed in reasonable proximity to each other, in connection with the Holly system, or any other system of high-pressure service, would make it difficult for any fire to get such headway as to cause great damage, as the water could be put on the fire within a minute of its discovery.

There is another respect in which haste is likely to prove waste. We allude to the clamor for stand pipes. We learned, during our investigations, that at the Chicago fire the falling buildings broke the stand pipes, and immediately large streams of water ran to waste, causing the engines to feel an immediate deficiency, and to become useless. Stand pipes, no doubt, may be valuable to individual buildings, but their introduction into general use in the city would, in the event of a large fire, be disastrous. Certainly no stand pipe should be allowed without a shut-off at a safe distance from the building.

The same precautions should, as far as possible, be taken with regard to all water supplies to large buildings. We also recommend that the plumbing of all buildings should be subject to a rigid inspection, either under the Inspector of Buildings or the Water Board. During the coldest weather many persons are compelled to keep the water constantly running to prevent the freezing of water in the pipes. This evil is much greater than is generally supposed.

We find by the Auditor's Report the following items, viz.:

Repairs of engines, hose and hook and ladder carriages, fuel, and extinguisher wagons and pungs.....	$47,053 67
Fire hats and badges, including repairs.....	5,362 75
Hose, hose pipes and couplings, including repairs.....	85,270 33

To those at all familiar with the department, it is well known that the struggles of the different contractors to obtain the work represented in the above items has a demoralizing effect upon the department. Here is where political influence seems to exert itself.

It would be much better if all the work that can be, should be done in a workshop owned and equipped by the city. Certainly all of the first of the above items and probably some of the others could be. Of the good effect upon the department—as well as the economy of such a change—the undersigned are convinced. They therefore recommend the establishment of such a workshop and the creation of an officer to be styled Superintendent of Construction and Repairs, to be nominated by the committee on the department, confirmed by the Board of Aldermen, and to hold his office subject to removal by the committee for cause.

This plan is not an experiment; it is already in successful operation in the Health Department, which department makes and repairs all its wagons, pungs and harnesses, and shoes its own horses.

We were prepared to recommend a moderate increase in the permanently employed men of the department, but an examination of the Holly system has convinced us that its adoption will require a diminution of the force. This in fact has been the result in many instances where that system has been adopted.

The Holly system is one or more great engines of greater power than any locomotive steam fire engine, with its iron pipes already laid wherever wanted, and with steam always up ready for action.

Of course reductions in the present service should be cautiously made. There should not be a hasty trusting to one security alone. One of the signers of this report witnessed the recent large fire in Quebec, from the time it might have been put out with a Johnson pump to its close. The great loss was due wholly to defective water works. The supply pipe was broken in the bed of the river, and was permitted to remain so, as it still furnished a supply for domestic purposes. Of course the high service which the works were intended to supply was not in existence, and having no engines or other means of contending with the flames, the flames ran their course.

In order that the attention of the Fire Department shall not be distracted by other duties, we recommend that the Chief of Police delegate certain members of his department to attend fires, and when there take control of all members of the police present, prevent theft, prevent the populace from impeding the firemen in their work, and keep the roads clear.

We make no recommendation regarding districts in the city, because we find it already judiciously distributed by the Board of Engineers into eight districts.

The undersigned do not claim to have exhausted the subject committed to them. They present the result of all the investigations and thought they could give it, in the time allowed them. They are ready to adopt other measures if better ones can be suggested, and ask the cooperation of their fellows in the City Council to aid in improving this important department without the expense and dangers of a commission.

They do not look upon the putting out of fires as a contest with some feud—or mysterious and unknown power. Common sense should be applied to this department, as to all others. Fire will burn combustible substances when it comes in contact with them. When fires occur water will put them out if applied with "quickness and certainty." Vigilance, energy and common sense will, with the means now in existence, almost invariably put them out without much damage.

For want of time the undersigned present this report as a report of progress, asking permission to present at a subsequent meeting an ordinance, in accordance with the recommendations of the report.

JAMES POWER,
BENJAMIN DEAN.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
SEPTEMBER 8, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held this afternoon at four o'clock, Alderman Cutter, the Chairman, presiding.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENT CONFIRMED.

Special Police without pay—Henry H. Hyde, Union wharf.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Of Joseph H. White, to occupy brick stable on Stanhope street. Referred to the Committee on Health on the part of the board.

Of Joseph Robbins & Co., for leave to place a wooden roof over coal shed on Carleton's wharf. Referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Of William Childs, for more pay for land taken at the corner of Third and Emerson streets. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Of Colonel H. W. Wilson, for approval of armory for headquarters at Boylston Hall. Referred to the Committee on Armories, on the part of this Board.

Of W. A. Low et al., for revision of assessments for Longwood and Bellevue-street sewers.

Of James McDonough et al., for a sewer in Barton street.

Remonstrance of Ai Poole et al., against the construction of a sewer in Humphrey street.

Severally referred to Committee on Sewers.

Of John M. Arnold et al., for a brick sidewalk on west side of Old Harbor street.

Of citizens of Baxter street, for improvements of said street.

Of Joseph Lane & Co. et al., that Alden street and Alden court be paved with trap rock.

Of Charles Davenport and thirty others, that Devonshire street be renumbered.

Of William T. Brigham, that sidewalks be laid on Boylston street west of Berkeley street.

Of Henry N. Sawyer et al., to be paid for grade damages on Thornley street, caused by the widening of Pleasant street, Ward 16.

Of Nathaniel C. Nash et al. that the Wood Pavement Commission be requested to make a supplementary report. They allege that they sought a report embracing an entire and complete process or method of putting down street pavement in the best manner, so that any one with limited skill and experience in paving would by following the recommendations of the report be able to put down pavement in the most thorough manner. They find, however, that the report commends setting the blocks square across the street with spaces between them of half an inch, but entirely omits to mention any material and process necessary to fill such spaces. The report also omits to state anything in regard to the character of the evidence in favor of the process of burnettizing, whether samples of burnettized wood that had been exposed in different places and under different conditions and for any length of time, were produced to prove the efficiency of the process, and whether or not there was any evidence excepting mere hearsay to prove the inefficiency of the process. They therefore request that a supplementary report be made embracing these points.

Of Hart Bailey, to be paid for grade damages on Stoughton street.

Of Henry Humphreys, to be paid for grade damages on Stoughton street.

Of heirs of the late Francis J. Chickey, to be heard in relation to grade damages on Warrenton street.

Severally referred to the Committee on Paving.

THE PROHIBITORY LAW.

Alderman Stebbins presented petitions from Rev. A. A. Miuer, Rev. W. H. H. Murray and two thousand male and female residents of Boston, asking that the Board will take such steps as shall secure the enforcement of the law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

Alderman Stebbins said the committee in charge of the petitions desired to be heard before the full Board, and on his motion a hearing was fixed at five o'clock on Monday, Sept. 22.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The following papers received concurrent action: Petitions of Patrick J. Myers and Fowler & Bennett were referred.

Order for Cochituate Water Board to consider the expediency of a supply of salt water through the "Holly system," for extinguishing fires. Referred to the Committee on Water.

Order for Cochituate Water Board, in consultation with engineers of the Fire Department, to construct reservoirs for water in the streets. Referred to the Committee on Water.

The report of the Trustees of the Public Library (City Doc. No. 88). Referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

Report and orders to alter Mason-street building into an engine and hose house at a cost of $15,000; and for a loan of that sum. Passed—yeas 10, nays 1, Alderman Power.

Orders for erection of a police station house for District No. 11, on Adams street, at a cost of $40,000; and for a loan of that sum. Passed—yeas 11, nays 0.

Report and order for a loan of $15,000 to be added to appropriation for engine and hook and ladder house on Washington square, in Ward 5. Passed—yeas 11, nays 0.

The order to sell the Tremont-street section of the Common fence by auction came up with an amendment to transfer said fence to Mount Hope Cemetery.

Alderman Power—I would like to make another amendment, that "the expense of the removal and transfer of the same to be charged to the appropriation for Mount Hope Cemetery."

The amendment was adopted, and the order as amended was passed.

The order to hire rooms for city officers in Pemberton square came from the Council, that body having voted to adhere in the amendment to substitute rooms in the upper stories of Niles Block, which the Board had rejected.

Alderman Sayward—I cannot conceive what is the object of members of the Council trying to hire the upper stories of Niles Building. If there were any stories in that building that could be hired they would not accommodate the offices of the City Government. And further, I understand that there are no rooms to be let there. The original order has passed this Board twice and I hope the Aldermen will not concur in the amendment.

The Board refused to concur.

AUDITOR'S MONTHLY EXHIBIT.

The monthly exhibit of the City Auditor was presented, accepted and sent down. The exhibit for the month of August is as follows:

	Appropriations, Revenues, etc.	Expended.	Unexpended.
General.....	$11,047,450 27	$3,371,938 34	$7,175,511 93
Special.....	8,998,372 21	3,773,475 94	5,224,896 27
	$20,045,822 48	$7,645,414 28	$12,400,408 20

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The orders of notice for sewers in Copeland, Catawba and Rockland streets were considered. No objection being offered, the petitions were recommended to the Committee on Sewers.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the petitions of Manuel Silva, George S. Martin and Peter Gilligan for leave to erect stables; and leave to withdraw on petition of Joshua D. Howard & Co. for leave to occupy stable. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported favorable on the applications of Abraham Aronson, dealer in second-hand articles; of Joseph Commassa, Michael Graney, Jr., Daniel Buckley, boot blacks; of Francis M. Gray, George E. Ladd, Patrick Noonan, Joseph Wood, William H. Kennedy, Stephen Volanti, John J. Daily, John Coughlan, William H. Burke, newsboys; John McCrillis, hackman; Margaret Fitzgerald, intelligence office; George H. Lee, W. N. Young, D. & J. E. Twigg and John Hogan, for wagon licenses; of various parties, for transfer of wagon licenses; of Thomas Mellen, victualler, and Edward R. Bailey, innholder; of Frank Damon, for leave to give public entertainment at 41 Ferry street, Sept. 12; of Rich & Stetson, for leave to give dramatic and musical entertainments at the Howard Athenæum; of Alonzo Warren, for leave to hold a fair at Gray's Hall, Oct. 14, for two weeks. Severally accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Fire Alarms, to whom was referred an order for placing a bell and striking apparatus on the new primary schoolhouse on Princeton street, made a report recommending the passage of the order. The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the petitions of G. W. & F. Smith, Newton Morton, John Ritchie et al., Cummings & Carlisle, and L. H. Tasker, severally, for the location of steam engines. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay as follows: Louisa C., wife of Franklin Perrin, $157 50, on account of widening of Blue Hill avenue; James Tuttle, $5050, on account of the widening of Congress street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported an order to pay John I. Brown $35,260 on account of the widening of Washington street. Read once and laid over.

REVISION OF THE CITY CHARTER.

Alderman, Quincy from the Committee on Ordinances, to whom was committed the report in relation to the revision of the city charter, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to appoint a commission to consist of five persons to examine the act incorporating the city of Boston, and all other general or special statutes now in force concerning the government of the city, and report to the City Council what, if any, changes are, or will become necessary or expedient in view of the prospective increase in the area and population of the city; the expense attending such examination and report to be charged to the appropriation for incidentals.

The order was read onnce, and laid over.

Alderman Sayward, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings reported, that on account of placing a clock tower upon the new grammar schoolhouse on L street and the furnishing of more school rooms than was anticipated, an expenditure of about five thousand dollars will be required in addition to the amount authorized. They recommend the passage of the accompany order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to complete the furnishing of the new grammar schoolhouse on L street, at an estimated cost of five thousand dollars; the expense to, be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

The report was accepted, and order read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom was referred the petition of the Wooden Pavement Commission for increase of pay, made a report recommending that the petitioners have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Company for leave to construct an additional track in Washington street, from Essex street to Temple place, made a report recommending that the petitioners have leave to withdraw.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the report was laid on the table.

On motion of Alderman Power, the printed report of the Committee on Sewers on the system of sewerage of Boston was taken from the table and accepted.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Committee on Fire Alarms be authorized to pay to Professor Joseph Winlock, Director of the Observatory at Harvard College, the sum of five hundred dollars, for furnishing true time to the city of Boston for the present year; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Alarms.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered that the collection of the following sewer assessments be postponed until entry is made into the respective sewers: Charity A. Lincoln, Prescott street, $70 24; Patrick Tobin, Conant street, $32 90; Mary Burnham, Palmer street, $19 97. Also that the sum of $64 14 assessed upon Richard Martin for a sewer in Seventh street, be hereby abated and the same amount assessed upon George Butterfield.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the abutters on Franklin street, between Federal and Pearl streets, to remove within ten days all obstructions placed by them on said street, and in default thereof the Superintendent of Streets is hereby directed to remove said obstructions at the expense of the owners thereof.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave Creek square with small granite blocks, and to construct cesspool and drains for the surface drainage of the same. Estimated cost, $2400.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the abutters on Washington street, between Milk and Summer streets, and on Summer street, to complete and cover the areas constructed by them under the sidewalks in front of their estates on said streets, and to remove all obstructions placed by them in said streets within fourteen days; and in default thereof the Superintendent of Streets is hereby directed to close up or cover said areas and remove said obstructions at the expense of the owners thereof

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave the approaches to the new drops of the East Boston north ferry with small granite blocks; the expense thereof, not exceeding five thousand dollars, to be charged to the special appropriation for new wings to the East Boston North Ferry.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the owners and abutters on Arch street, between Milk and Franklin streets, to remove within ten days all obstructions placed by them on said street; and in default thereof the Superintendent of Streets is hereby directed to remove said obstructions at the expense of the owners thereof.

THE MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the motion to reconsider the vote whereby an order was passed on August 11 to rescind order for sale of Mather Schoolhouse in Ward 16, was taken from the table.

The question being on Alderman Sayward's motion to reconsider, the motion was lost for want of a majority—yeas 5, nays 5, not voting 1.

REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES OF THE CITY HOSPITAL.

Alderman Power presented the ninth report of the Trustees of the City Hospital. Accepted and sent down.

Report of the Trustees. The Board of Trustees of the City Hospital, in compliance with the ordinances, respectfully present herewith their ninth annual report:

Number of patients remaining in the hospital, April 30, 1872, 223; admitted during the year—medical, 1667; surgical, 1339; ophthalmic, 78; smallpox, 220—3304; treated during the year, 3527; discharged, 2942; died, 351—3293; remaining in hospital, April 30, 1873, 234; largest number in hospital at any time, 264; smallest number in hospital at any time, 172; daily average number of patients, 218; average length of stay of each patient, days, 22½.

In the department for out-patients, there were treated—Medical patients, 2602; surgical patients, 2386; ophthalmic patients, 1519; cutaneous patients, 809; aural patients, 210; total, 7526. Number of visits made by out-patients to the hospital: Medical, 3597; surgical, 5820; ophthalmic, 8601; cutaneous, 2763; aural, 1297; total, 22,078.

The accompanying reports of the physicians and surgeons in attendance upon the hospital are transmitted herewith, and furnish tabulated statements of all the cases, with their results, treated during the year, which reach a total of 11,035 in all the departments of the hospital.

The report of the superintendent and resident physician gives further information regarding the work accomplished at the hospital, in the case of those who have sought its benefits, and exhibits also a statement in detail of the expenditures made in maintaining it.

The number of patients in the hospital during the year, 3527, were under treatment at an average of 22½ days each, making a total of 79,570 days or 11,367 1-7 weeks. The entire cost of maintaining the hospital for the year, including every expenditure, and the unexpected expenses incurred in the smallpox department, was at the rate of

$10 60½ per week.....	$120,552 65
But of the patients enumerated above, 146 paid for 263 weeks' board.....	3,948 64

Leaving, therefore, the sum of.....$116,604 01

as the cost to the city of treating 3381 patients, for a period of 11,104 1-7 weeks, which is at the rate of $10 50 per week. The cost of taking care of 229 patients in the smallpox department of the hospital during the recent epidemic, and not provided for in the appropriation for the year, amounted to $10,219 93, or $22 64½ per week for 451 2-7 weeks. Deducting this expenditure and estimating the average cost of maintaining each patient, in all the departments of the hospital proper, in the same manner as above, it will appear that there was expended the sum of $107,783 24, as the cost to the city of treating 3229 non-paying patients for 10,743 5-7 weeks at the rate of $10 03 per week. The expense of maintaining the out-patient departments, estimated at $1500 to $2000, has not been deducted in making these statements.

The increase in the amount of the expenditures for the year was caused, in some degree, by the greater number of patients treated, but chiefly by the large expenses on account of the Smallpox Hospital, that had not been anticipated in making the appropriation for the year, which was $107,000. It, therefore, became necessary to ask the Government for a special appropriation of $11,500, to cover the additional cost of maintaining the Smallpox Hospital till it was discontinued in August.

The increase in the number of patients treated in the hospital has gone on during the past as in former years, the daily average for the year being 218 patients, nearly 12 per day in excess of the number treated in any previous year. To speak of the difficulties of management that rapidly multiply as the numbers increase above the proper capacity of the wards of the hospital, and to urge the necessity of more room for the sick, would only be to repeat the representations of the Board of Trustees in their reports of former years. There is also still the very pressing need of additional accommodations for the surgical department, both of rooms for out-patients and of a more commodious and convenient operating room. The Trustees forbear to urge the immediate attention of the Government to this matter, only because of the extraordinary demands that are being made upon it, in consequence of the recent disaster and loss that has befallen the city. It is believed, however, that as a matter of economy deserving early attention, the heating apparatus should, during the coming summer, undergo the thorough repairing that is now needed after nine years' constant use.

The vacancies in the medical staff, existing at the beginning of the year, caused by the resignation of Dr. Fitch E. Oliver as Visiting Physician and Dr. D. McB. Thaxter as Visiting Surgeon, were filled by the election of Dr. Robert T. Edes as Visiting Physician and Dr. George W. Gay as Visiting Surgeon. The resignation of Dr. John P. Reynolds as Visiting Physician having been presented and accepted, Dr. George J. Arnold was elected in his place.

Dr. S. G. Webber having declined to be a candidate for reelection as Pathologist, Dr. W. P. Bolles was chosen in his stead.

Dr. M. E. Webb was elected as Visiting Physician in the Smallpox Department, and was in attendance from May 1st till August 27th, when the department was discontinued by order of the Government.

In the month of May, at the first meeting of the Board of Trustees, a communication was received from Mr. L. A. Cutler, tendering the resignations of Mrs. Cutler as Matron and Miss Anna M. Cutler as Assistant Matron; also declining to be considered a candidate for reelection as Superintendent for the year ensuing. On the 1st of July following the connection of these officers with the hospital terminated, after eight years of constant and honorable service. At their meeting on the 11th of June the following resolutions were passed by the Trustees:

Resolved, That the cordial thanks of the board are hereby tendered to Lucius A. Cutler for his long, faithful, and arduous services as Superintendent of this hospital, and as the time approaches when Mr. Cutler's connection with the hospital is to end, the board expresses the wish and hope that success and happiness may attend his efforts in the future.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be engrossed, and transmitted to Mr. Cutler.

Resolved, That the thanks of this board be presented to Mrs. Cutler and Miss Cutler, for their faithful services as Matron and Assistant-Matron.

It thus became the duty of the Trustees, in the first months of their connection with the hospital, to fill important positions by the election of new officers, as well as to take upon themselves the labor and responsibility of the management of the institution, as it was left to them by the gentlemen of the former board, in whose years of zealous labors, devotion and experience in the work the hospital had been established in its high reputation as a noble charity.

It was determined to combine the office of Admitting Physician with that of Superintendent, in order that for the convenience and benefit of those seeking admission, and for other desirable considerations, there might be a physician residing at the hospital. Upon the recommendation of the Medical Staff, Dr. Edward Cowles was elected, and entered upon the duties of Superintendent on the first of July, and upon those of Admitting Physician on the first of October, thereby relieving Dr. F. E. Bundy from the latter office, the title of which was afterwards changed to that of Resident Physician.

Mrs. Sarah A. Fletcher was elected Matron, to fill the office from the 1st of July, for the remainder of the year.

For the donations of books and other reading matter, and the personal labors of kind friends of the hospital in the improvement of the library, and for other gifts and attentions to the sick from other sources, the cordial thanks of the board are returned.

The Trustees desire to acknowledge their appreciation of the continued services of the clergymen and others, whose kind attentions to the sick in the hospital add greatly to their comfort.

To the gentlemen of the Medical Staff, and to the Superintendent, the cordial thanks of the board are due, for their earnest and successful labors in promoting the interests of the hospital, and the welfare of the patients under their charge.

E. C. DREW, President.

Abstract of the Report of the Superintendent. During the year the number of patients examined for admission was 25,867; patients admitted, 18,212; patients accidentally injured, 3693; number of out-patients treated, 57,740.

The number of patients who visited the hospital for advice and treatment in the out-patients' department was as follows: Ophthalmic, under the charge of Drs. Williams and Wadsworth, 1519; medical, under charge of Drs. Doe and Haskins, 2602; surgical, under charge of the visiting surgeons, 2386; skin diseases, under charge of Dr. Damon, 809; ear diseases, under charge of Dr. Green, 210; total, 7526. Number of visits made by out patients to the hospital, 22,073.

Patients examined during the year, 4326; number admitted, 3304; number not admitted, 1022.

Patients in the hospital, May 1, 1872, 223; total number in hospital during the year, 3527; total number, including out-patients, treated during the year, 11,035; discharged, including deaths, 3293; daily average number in hospital, 218; largest number at any time in hospital, 264; smallest number at any time in hospital, 172; number treated in smallpox department, 229; average time remaining in hospital, 22½ days; males, 2046; females, 1258. Medical patients admitted, 1667; surgical patients admitted, 1339; ophthalmic, 78; smallpox, 220; total, 3304.

The principal nativities are thus classified: Ireland, 1465; Boston, 422; other cities in Massachusetts, 172; British provinces, 365; England, 180; Maine, 139. Condition of patients discharged—Recovered, 1764; relieved, 899; not relieved, 151; not treated, 128; died, 351.

The rate of mortality during the year was 9.9-10 per cent. of the patients treated in all the departments of the hospital. The excess of this rate over that of previous years was largely due to the fact that of the 229 patients in the smallpox department 54 died, or 23.6-10 per cent. If these cases are excluded in this estimate the rate of mortality will be reduced to 9 per cent. for the hospital proper. There were admitted during the year 95 more patients accidentally injured, than in any former year; and 79 cases in all departments resulted in death within 48 hours after admission; showing an increased proportion of cases necessarily resulting fatally, and materially enlarging the rate of mortality over that of previous years in the history of the hospital.

The net cost of maintaining the hospital for the year ending April 30, 1873, was $105,355.73. Of the cash received, $1309.16 was from pay patients in the Smallpox Hospital.

The business of the hospital has been still further enlarged during the past year, although it had previously reached the proper limit of the capacity of the wards, by a steady increase each year in the number of patients. Nearly five hundred more patients have been treated in the wards than in any former year; but this has been possible only by constantly crowding with beds all the available space, and by shortening the length of stay of each patient in the hospital. Many applicants were turned away for want of room, and many others, whose cases demanded immediate care and treatment, as a matter of humanity were admitted, at the risk of incurring the evils of overcrowding; some of which have, without doubt, been experienced during the latter part of the year.

That this should have been so must be apparent, when it is considered how nearly the daily average number for the year, 218 patients, approaches to the proper capacity of the hospital, which is 230 beds. But this number was much exceeded in some seasons of the year. During the months of winter and early spring there was a period of many successive weeks in which there were constantly about 250 patients in the wards, and at one time 264 were under treatment, the largest number ever attained in the wards of the hospital proper, exclusive of the smallpox department.

The want of sufficient accommodations for all the sick, who, under the present rules for admission, must be treated here, has existed for several years, and hardly needs to be set forth in stronger terms than has already been done. In view, however, of the past year, attention must be called to the fact that the enlargement of its capacity cannot be long delayed, or it will be impossible to care for, in a satisfactory manner, the increasing numbers of persons who are equally deserving with those now receiving its benefits, and who demand admission to its wards.

In the surgical department the need is more seriously felt than ever of properly arranged and larger rooms for out-patients, and of a more commodious and convenient operating room, with waiting and reception rooms adjoining, so that those who have undergone surgical operations may be removed, as they cannot now be, from the sight and hearing of others who are waiting and fearing to go through the same ordeal. A number of valuable books have been presented during the year to the Medical Library, for which much can be done to make it creditable and useful to the hospital. Thanks are due for the packages of magazines and papers that were frequently received during the year; to the ladies and their friends, who have kindly, and with much labor, prepared a new catalogue of the general library, and to the ladies of the Flower Mission, whose regular weekly visits have given much pleasure to the patients.

The clergymen and others who have contributed to the comfort and consolation of the sick, by their frequent visits and many attentions, are remembered with grateful appreciation for their kind labors for the hospital. Trusting that the confidence that has been placed in me by the trustees may prove to be well deserved, and with grateful acknowledgments to them for their generous support, and to the gentlemen of the medical staff for the very essential aid they have given me in my undertaking, I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Very respectfully,
EDWARD COWLES,
Superintendent and Resident Physician.

NEW HOME FOR THE POOR.

Alderman Power, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Institutions, to whom was referred so much of the Mayor's inaugural address as relates to a new Home for the Poor, reported that, being unable to agree upon a location, they submit the accompanying reports:

The committee are unanimous in the opinion that suitable provision should be made as early as practicable for the care of our poor apart from the penal and reformatory institutions, and upon a scale sufficient to meet the requirements of the city for the next half century at least. In 1870 the inmates of the several institutions at Deer Island numbered 1004. At the present time the number is about 1260. This is exclusive of those transferred during the past year to Rainsford Island.

In his report for 1870 the Superintendent stated that the Almshouse Department, the hospitals and the dormitories were crowded to such an extent as to interfere seriously with the health and comfort of the inmates. "That a new almshouse is required," he said, "is no longer a matter of doubt. It is an imperative necessity. Immediate steps should be taken towards accomplishing this end, in order that the poor of the city of Boston may not be so crowded and limited in their accommodations, and also that they may be entirely separated from the inmates of the House of Industry."

Since this statement was made, it will be observed that the number of inmates of the institutions on this island has increased over twenty-five per cent., while no substantial increase of accommodations has been afforded. The Inspectors of Prisons for the County of Suffolk have repeatedly called the attention of the City Government to the want of additional accommodations at this place.

In the last annual report of the Board of Directors for Public Institutions, it is stated that "the transfer of the adult male paupers to Rainsford Island, in October last, afforded partial relief to the overcrowded House of Industry, but the large increase in the number of commitments has already filled the space thus obtained; and the Directors are satisfied that there can be no permanent relief until the entire main building is devoted to the House of Industry. This is not a sudden conviction, but has been for a long time considered."

The City Council of 1870 passed an order just at the close of the year, which was approved by the then Mayor, appropriating $225,000 for the erection of a new almshouse at Deer Island; but through an oversight, the Board of Directors were not authorized to proceed with the work. When the Government of 1871 came to consider the matter, a large number of remonstrances, signed by the leading citizens of Boston, were presented against the establishment of a Home for the Poor on Deer Island. The committee to whom the subject was referred, recommended that the old Roxbury Almshouse, (since used for a smallpox hospital) should be repaired and enlarged for the purpose at an expense of $75,000. The recommendation failed to be carried out, and no further action has been taken except in providing temporary accommodations for a portion of the paupers at Rainsford Island. The appropriation made in 1870 is still available for such uses as the City Council may see fit to direct.

Upon the question of a new location your committee are evenly divided. Four members recommend the purchase of the lots of land known as the Whittridge and Seaverns estates on Neponset River, and within the limits of the City of Boston; and four members recommend the purchase of the Austin farm, so called, situated in the town of West Roxbury and on the line dividing that town from this city. The special advantages of the two locations are set forth in the accompanying reports.

Respectfully submitted,
CHARLES HULBERT, Chairman.

In presenting this recommendation for the purchase of the Whittridge and Seaverns estates in Dorchester, the undersigned beg leave to state briefly the principle requisites which in their opinion should be possessed by any site which may be selected for a Home for the Poor.

In order to save the city from an annual charge of several thousand dollars, the location should be within the city limits, otherwise the property will be taxed to pay the expenses of another municipality.

It should be easily accessible from the central portion of the city for the transportation of building materials and supplies, for visitation and for the conveyance of inmates and attendants either by railroad or water.

It should be on the main land, yet properly isolated where it will not affect injuriously the property surrounding it, and where the future growth of the city will not require the removal hereafter of the institutions placed upon it.

The site should be pleasant, airy, sufficiently elevated to be easily drained and well adapted from a sanitary point of view for the location of substantial structures to accommodate a large number of inmates.

A good supply of pure water should be easily obtainable.

In determining the quantity of land necessary for the purpose regard should be had, of course, to the future growth of the city for a long period and also to the fact that all land in excess of that which is necessary for the institutions will involve an annual expense for its care and embellishment.

The undersigned are satisfied from the examination which they have given to this matter that the quantity should not much exceed thirty acres.

All the requisites above named are possessed by the two estates situated on Neponset River, in Dorchester, and containing about thirty-six acres of land. The site is elevated, airy, commanding a very fine and extended view of Boston Harbor, Neponset River and the surrounding country. The land can be easily drained, and in addition to the supply of water on the premises, Cochituate water can be introduced at a slight expense, by extending the pipes a few rods from their present terminus. The soil is excellent in quality, and under good cultivation. The quantity of land is not excessive; and nearly all of it is available without material outlay. The marsh land does not exceed one acre in extent. This location is not likely to be in the way of the future growth of the city; and at the same time it is not more isolated than is required for the purpose.

The access by railroad is complete, as the tracks of the Milton Branch of the Old Colony Railroad are laid across the lower end of the land, and will furnish all the facilities for transportation which the city will ever require.

The communication by water is also admirable, as the land is bounded on one side by the Neponset River, and vessels of large draught can go up from the main harbor and discharge supplies of coal and building materials directly on the premises. There is a good wharf on land immediately adjoining, which can probably be hired for a moderate price or a wharf sufficient for the needs of the institution can be built at a small expense on the land purchased.

The situation of this land with reference to exposure, and the cost of preparing it for the reception of the buildings which are to be erected thereon, is in every respect satisfactory. A good farmhouse and outbuildings are already located on the premises, and are included in the price named for the land.

The objections to the "Austin farm" are these: It is beyond the city limits. It is not easily accessible either by railroad or by water; and building materials cannot be laid down there except at a considerably higher cost for transportation than at the Dorchester site.

The quantity of land is much greater than is needed for the purpose for which it is to be used, involving the city in unnecessary expense for its purchase and care. About one-fourth of the estate (twelve or fifteen acres) is low, wet and unavailable except for purposes of pasturage—land not at all adapted to the needs of such an institution.

If it is proposed to secure a site outside the city limits, it can be easily obtained on the line of a railroad by going a little farther in actual distance from the City Hall, and for one-fourth or one-third the sum asked for the Austin farm. Such a site would be more readily accessible, and would require less time and expense in furnishing supplies and personal transportation than the Austin farm. The large expenditure which the purchase of this place involves is therefore unwarranted, as there are other estates equally good as to the character of the grounds and better located as to facilities for communication from the business portion of the city, which can be had at much less expense. It should be understood that in selecting any site for an almshouse in another town, the statutes require that permission be first obtained from the inhabitants of that town.

The first cost of the estate in West Roxbury is $135,000. The cost of the two estates in Dorchester, containing about the same amount of available land, is $95,000.

In view of the foregoing facts the committee would respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying orders.

CHARLES HULBERT,
L. R. CUTTER,
CHARLES A. BURDITT,
HARRISON LORING.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Institutions be authorized to purchase as a site for a Home for the Poor and a Home for Neglected Children, the estate late of Charles Seaverns, bounded in part by Marsh street, Granite street, and the Neponset River in Boston, containing eighteen and a half acres, more or less; also the lot of land adjoining the same on the easterly side, known as Cushing's Hill, containing seventeen and a half acres, more or less; the price paid for said lots not to exceed six cents per square foot.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the appropriation for a Home for the Poor at Deer Island the sum of ninety-five thousand dollars to be applied to the purchase of land for a Home for the Poor in Dorchester.

The undersigned members of the Committee on Public Institutions would respectfully recommend the purchase of the estate known as the "Austin farm" as the most suitable place on which to establish a new Home for the Poor.

This estate is about four and one-half miles from the City Hall. It is situated in West Roxbury and is bounded on the east by the city of Boston. It lies between the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad and the Providence Railroad, about five-eighths of a mile from the former and one mile from the latter. It is distant about one hundred feet from Blue Hill avenue, one of the best avenues out of the city. It is bounded by four streets, namely, on the east by Back street in Boston; on the south by Morton street; on the west by Canterbury street, and on the north by a private way called Austin Terrace.

The estate contains about fifty acres, of which about twelve are meadow land, the rest upland. The whole estate is surrounded by a stone wall nearly two miles in length, built in the most substantial manner. This wall is nearly or quite three feet in thickness and about four in height. It is laid in cement on a foundation at least three feet below the surface of the ground.

There are three ponds on the estate, the largest containing about two acres; the others about half an acre. The largest pond is supplied by a never-failing spring, is twenty feet deep in the centre and is always full. It is estimated that at least two thousand tons of ice can be taken from the pond in winter, and throughout the year it will furnish an ample supply of water for at least five thousand persons. The three ponds are connected by a sewer; consequently when the large one is full it flows into the two smaller ones, and thence into a branch of the Stony Brook, which runs through the estate, and will furnish the most complete system of covered sewerage.

There are at least one thousand forest trees on the premises, divided into groves or scattered about; also about one thousand fruit trees of the choicest kinds, together with an abundance of smaller fruits. Near the centre of the estate there is a fine dwelling house, containing nineteen rooms in good order, also a carriage house, a barn, an icehouse and other out-buildings usually found on a gentleman's estate. The views from the house can hardly be surpassed. The city and country can be seen for miles about. The whole property is in the highest state of cultivation; the crop of grass alone, after supplying the stock kept on the place, was sold at public auction last season, standing for eleven hundred dollars. Good facilities are afforded for transportation by the Hartford & Erie Railroad.

All the materials required for erecting new buildings can be shipped from the East or from Quincy, and delivered at the dock, and easily be transported by cars to the grounds.

The objection which has been urged so strenuously against this estate by the other members of this committee, on account of its location outside the city limits, is without any force, as the annexation of West Roxbury during the present year is almost a certainty. If the act for that purpose should, however, fail to be accepted in October, the next Legislature would undoubtedly pass an act annexing this estate, upon the request of the City Council.

The condition of the institutions at Deer Island calls for the promptest action in this matter. If the Austin farm is purchased, there need be no delay in erecting the necessary buildings, as the grounds are already prepared for their reception. The buildings now standing upon the estate are available for immediate occupation. The estate in Dorchester will have to be improved before it is fitted for occupation, causing a good deal of delay and considerable expense. To bring that estate into an equally good condition with the Austin farm would require an outlay of at least fifty thousand dollars. Its situation with reference to the adjoining property presents many objectionable features. It is very irregular in shape, and in order to lay out the grounds properly and define the boundaries, other estates must be purchased. To secure communication by water it will be necessary to build a wharf on Neponset River or buy the wharf property adjoining, covering $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land, for which fifteen cents per foot is asked.

It should be borne in mind that the Austin farm contains fourteen more acres of land than the estate in Dorchester, and that the actual difference in the prices of the two estates is less than a quarter of a cent per foot. In order to accommodate the buildings required at present, and allow room for enlargement from time to time as the growth of the city will require, it would not be judicious to purchase an estate containing less than fifty acres. Every foot of the Austin farm, except the small portion covered by the ponds, is available for the purposes of the institutions which are to be placed upon it. The number of square feet contained in the estate is 2,161,455.

The owners will convey to the city the lands with the buildings and other fixtures thereon for the round sum of \$135,000, (something less than $6\frac{1}{4}$ cents per foot) and pay the taxes for the present year.

In view of these facts the undersigned believe that although the first cost of the Austin farm is somewhat larger than the Dorchester estate, it will in the end be found the most economical site for the city to purchase; and they would therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying orders.

JAMES POWER,
WASHINGTON L. PRESCOTT,
WILLIAM G. THACHER,
HILLMAN B. BARNES.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Institutions be authorized to purchase as a site for a Home for the Poor and a Home for Neglected Children, the lot of land known as the Austin farm, bounded on the easterly side by Back street between Boston and West Roxbury, on the southerly side by Morton street, on the westerly side by Canterbury street and on the northerly side by Austin terrace, so called; containing fifty acres, more or less, the price paid therefor not to exceed the sum of $135,000.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the appropriation for a Home for the Poor at Deer Island the sum of $135,000 to be applied to the purchase of the Austin farm as a Home for the Poor.

The reports were laid on the table to be printed. On motion of Alderman Brown the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

SEPTEMBER 11, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, at half-past seven o'clock, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE ALDERMEN.

Ninth Annual Report of Trustees of City Hospital, in print; Auditor's Monthly Exhibit, dated Sept. 3 (Printed City Doc. No. 104, 1873), were placed on file.

Petitions were referred in concurrence.

The following papers were acted upon in concurrence:

Report recommending passage of orders for placing a bell and striking apparatus on Primary School-house, Princeton street. Accepted, and orders passed.

Report and order to complete the furnishing of new grammar schoolhouse, L street, at an estimated cost of $5000. Passed under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Caton of Ward 11.

Order concerning removal of iron fence on westerly side of Tremont street came from the Aldermen amended by adding the words, "the expense of removing and resetting the same to be charged to the appropriation for Mt. Hope Cemetery." The amendment was adopted and the order passed.

The following orders were severally read once and laid over.

Order to pay Professor Joseph Winlock, director of the Observatory of Harvard College, $500 for furnishing true time to the city of Boston.

Order authorizing the approaches to the new drops of East Boston (North) Ferry to be paved with small granite blocks, at an expense not exceeding $5000.

The substitute order of the Council to the order for hiring certain offices for the city at 23 Pemberton square, came from the Aldermen non-concurred in.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—I move that the order be committed to the Committee on Public Buildings.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I would like to inquire if it has not already been before the committee.

Mr. Page—It has, and the committee reported in favor of the Pemberton-square site. There seems to be some difficulty in ascertaining which is the better, and I thought that possibly the committee could determine it.

Mr. Denny—I don't think the members of the Council have had the merits of the question laid before them. I would prefer to have it laid on the table for explanation and discussion, and I was going to make that motion.

Mr. Page agreed to the motion to lay on the table, and it was adopted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following papers came up as unfinished business and were passed in concurrence.

Order to pay Gas Company's bill of $259.50, for gas for halloon on 4th July, 1872.

Order authorizing erection of a bell tower on Hose House No. 12, at an estimated expense of $1500.

Order for necessary repairs and alterations to be made on Court House and Probate Building, at not exceeding $5000.

The order authorizing a stand pipe to be located in City Hall building and connected with high-service supply, being under consideration—

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said, I would like to have some explanation of this order from the Committee on Public Buildings. If such a thing as putting a stand pipe in the City Hall is in contemplation, and it is necessary, I shall vote for it. If there is no necessity for it I want to know it. As a member of the City Government I don't want to be misunderstood. If the committee do not show any necessity for the pipe I shall vote against the order.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11—I have heard nothing of this in the Committee on Public Buildings. I believe the stand pipes are in the City Hall now, and I don't know that there is a proposition to put any more in.

Mr. Shaw—If I understand aright it is n't proposed to put a stand pipe in. Then why call for the passage of this order. It calls for an appropriation of money and if the pipes are not necessary I shall not vote for it. Perhaps I don't understand the gentleman aright, and if so I should be glad to have the order further explained.

Mr. Caton—The standpipes are already in, and the appropriation is to pay for them.

Mr. Shaw—Now I have reached the point. I knew it all before. [Laughter.] If the Committee on Public Buildings are to expend five hundred or a thousand dollars, we should like to know it. I presume the gentleman is right. I undertake to say that this pipe was put in without any authority. The committee has no right to expend money on any building without authority. This is not the first instance. It was asked, a few months ago, that a certain sum of money should be expended for repairing the fire hoat. Long before that matter was brought into this room that boat had been put on the stocks and a large amount of money had been expended, and that without any authority. If the committees of this Government have inaugurated this system of expending money without orders from this council it is time that we knew it. I went over to see that fire boat and was told that seventeen hundred dollars had been expended on it. At the next meeting an order was brought in here to pay three thousand eight hundred and seventeen dollars, instead of seventeen hundred dollars. That is the way the city's money is spent. I lay this to no man's door. It is the custom to go ahead and make contracts for a considerable amount of money without any authority. I rose to ask this question to see if I was right. I saw this stand pipe in the City Hall. If this is to be the rule, why may not other committees go ahead and spend a thousand dollars or more? If the committees make the expenditures, the city is bound to pay them—that is the argument made here. And yet this matter is done without any authority. If this expense is incurred without any authority, I have no doubt but that it will be repaid, but I say it is a very bad precedent—one which should not be repeated.

There are propositions which come here day after day on the same principle as this, and we know not where we are going to land. I am not opposed to any expenditure for the protection of the property of the city, but I want each member to have the right to say whether he is in favor of it or opposed to it. It is the principle I am contending against. It is a wrong principle. It is n't right under any consideration. I don't think there is a gentleman in this Board who will say that it is right. We have had the opportunity, time and again, to pass upon this very expenditure. Why was n't it proposed before the expense was incurred? I have risen to make this inquiry that it may be understood that members of the City Government make these expenditures without any authority. I am opposed to that and shall always be opposed to it.

Mr. Caton—If I remember rightly, when this matter came up before in the Committee on Public Buildings, it was argued by the members on the part of the Aldermen that the committee had the right to do anything for the preservation of public buildings. I always supposed they had the right to do so.

The order was passed, in concurrence.

PAPERS FROM THE STREET COMMISSIONERS.

In response to the order of the Council of May 26, the Street Commissioners reported that their estimate, in gross, of extending Eustis street to Magazine street, was seventeen thousand one hundred dollars. A plan for widening Magazine street and extending it as suggested in the order, to Dudley street, has been prepared, and estimates in detail of the cost of that improvement will be furnished as soon as they can be made ready to accompany an order for that purpose to be submitted to the Council for concurrence.

The report was accepted and sent up.

The Board of Street Commissioners, in response to an order of the City Council of July 17, submitted their estimate of the cost of widening and extending Fayette court to Tremont street as $375,000, and for extending Hayward place, by the way of Exeter and Rowe places, to Kingston street, as $232,000. These figures are based upon the supposition that the abutters upon the various courts, places and alleys that would be absorbed in the above extensions would convey the land in them to the city at no cost, except Fayette court.

On motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, the report was referred to the Committee on Streets.

PETITION PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 presented the petition of Cummings & Carlisle for leave to use basement of brick building, erected by them on Albany street on land purchased of the city, for a blacksmith and machine-shop purposes. Referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

REORGANIZATION OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 presented a report from the minority of the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department, it being an ordinance for the same. On his motion it was laid on the table to be printed. The amendments to the present ordinance are as follows:

Section 1 is amended by placing the department under the control of the Board of Aldermen, instead of a joint special committee of the City Council.

Section 3 is amended as follows: The Mayor shall annually, on the first Monday of February, nominate to the City Council, and by the approval thereof expressed by the concurrent vote of both branches, appoint a Chief-Engineer and a Superintendent of Construction and Repairs.

Section 4. (The rules of the Board of Engineers are made subject to the Board of Aldermen.)

Section 8. (Amended by adding the words)—A failure to make said report as above directed shall render said Chief-Engineer ineligible to reappointment, unless confirmed by a ye and nay vote of two-thirds therefor.

Section 11. (The following is substituted): The engineer in command at a fire shall have the power to adjudge upon the necessity of pulling down and demolishing buildings to prevent the spreading of fires, and have authority to pull down and destroy them accordingly.

Section 24. (Amended by allowing members of the companies to be nominated by the Board of Engineers and confirmed by the Aldermen.)

Section 30. (Amended as follows): All the officers and members of companies shall be nominated annually, or whenever a vacancy occurs, by the Board of Engineers to the Board of Aldermen, and confirmed by the Board of Aldermen.

Section 43. (The following is substituted): No company shall have power to appoint or discharge an officer or member.

Section 49. (The following is substituted): The Mayor shall, annually, on the first Monday of February, nominate to the Board of Aldermen, and by the approval of said Board, appoint a fire marshal and an assistant fire marshal, with the rank and pay, respectively, of captain and first lieutenant of police, whose duty it shall be to attend fires, examine and make report of their origin, prevent theft, preserve order, and take all necessary measures to secure to the Fire Department all necessary facilities in the extinguishment of fires. Said marshals shall, according to rank, have command over all the police present at fires, and not actively engaged during the presence of an engineer in putting out fires. There shall be placed in each police station two or more pieces of Clark's linen hose, similar to those now attached to the stand pipe in the City Hall, of one hundred and fifty feet each in length, with couplings fitting the hydrants, and with stop valves near the nozzles; and, also, two or more small hand engines or Johnson pumps, and with suitable buckets, and upon an alarm it shall be the duty of such members of the police as may be selected for that service to repair therewith to the place where the fire may be, and there use their best skill and power to extinguish the fire; said policemen, while thus engaged, to be under the direction of the engineer, if present, otherwise, under the direction of the fire marshal.

Section 58. (A new one.) The ordinance in relation to the Fire Department, printed in the revised ordinances, adopted the 31st day of December, A. D. 1869, and all amendments and additions thereto, are hereby repealed, said repeal to take effect upon the reorganization of the Fire Department as herein printed.

SCHOOLHOUSE ON THE BACK BAY.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 moved to take from the table the motion to reconsider the vote whereby were passed the orders for erection of primary schoolhouse, corner of Newbury and Exeter streets; and for a loan of $40,000 to be applied for same.

The motion prevailed, and the question recurring on the motion to reconsider—

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 said, I remember, sir, when the gentleman from Ward 12 was speaking with reference to the filling in of the South Boston flats, he alluded in terms that struck me very forcibly, to the difficulty that outlying wards had in securing the attention of the City Council to improvements within their own limits.

I thought at the time of the desire each member had to secure fair play for his locality, and that wards farthest from the centre of the city received more attention than many others nearer. The history of this attempt to get a schoolhouse in Ward 6 seemed to be so. There is no schoolhouse on the Back Bay within two miles of the centre. An order was passed through the School Committee to obtain a lot of land on the corner of Marlborough and Fairfield streets for the erection of a primary schoolhouse. The committee, after some effort, made arrangements for a lot suitable for that purpose. After the order passed the Aldermen and was before this body for action, a remonstrance was set on foot by some people in the neighborhood who thought that their back doors would be troubled by the children. It was said at the time that a better lot could be obtained. We tried to get it and could not. We then went to what seemed to be the next best lot, and we have purchased this one. Then came the building of the schoolhouse. The order passed the Board of Aldermen without any opposition and then passed here with not a dissenting vote. That was done at the last meeting before our adjournment for the summer. Because I did not move to reconsider at that meeting, when it would have been defeated, some one else has done so since and all the driving of piles and making of plans has been delayed. It seems to me somewhat strange that Ward 6, which pays twice as much tax as any other ward in the city except two, should not be able to get a small primary schoolhouse down on the Back Bay. It is said that the children can't be found who would go to it. I don't know how they will know that until it can be tried. I have been told that if you erect a schoolhouse there children will be sent to it. At present we have only one room, and that is so crowded that several children have been turned away. A matter which has received as careful attention as this should not be delayed any longer. It is no more than due to our ward to pass this order and have the work proceed as rapidly as it can. I have asked the cost, and if there is any risk of our coming here for more money, and Mr. Tucker said there was not. We don't ask for a grammar schoolhouse now, because we don't think we can fill it.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—The gentleman from Ward 6 lays a great deal of stress on the delay which the motion to reconsider has made in the erection of this schoolhouse. I think he is much mistaken. I went down to this land some six weeks ago, and it was about half under water, and half occupied by Munson's railroad track. I am certainly willing to vote for a schoolhouse in Ward 6, as soon as they can show any need of it. This matter is before the Committee on Schoolhouses of the School Board, and they are the proper persons to decide whether it is necessary or not. They have also under consideration the subject of redistricting the whole of that part of the city. I know there are several persons on Commonwealth avenue who desire a schoolhouse there, but whether there are enough children to fill it is not known. I have no desire to defeat this except to keep it on the table, or in some position until we can be sure that there is some need of this building at the present time. It may be found that the Primary Schoolhouse may not be the best one to build and it would be better to wait until we hear something definite.

Mr. Holmes—As for assurance that this is needed I know of nothing further that Ward 6 can give. Parents have given assurance that they will send their children to school. As for the order being before the School Committee, all I have to say is it was before them two years ago and this order requesting us to buy this piece of land was passed.

Mr. Page—Last year I had the honor to be a member of the Committee on Public Instruction when this question came up. If I remember aright there was just one man who took a particular interest in this matter, and this gentleman has asked the committee this year to give a hearing on this subject again. That hearing has not been given, and I think it would be better to wait. I don't see how anything can be done at present as the land is situated on a marsh.

The motion to reconsider was lost.

CANNON FIRING ON THE COMMON.

On motion of Mr. Dacey of Ward 2, the reports and an ordinance in relation to the discharge of cannon upon the Common or public grounds (City Doc. No. 93, 1873), were taken from the table.

On the question of giving the ordinance a second reading, Mr. Dacey said—

I am obliged to differ from the Committee on Ordinances in regard to discharging cannon on the Common and in regard to taking the authority to give permits from the Mayor and giving it to the Aldermen. There never has been any complaint from persons on Tremont street. The majority of the committee say that the firing of cannon on the Common is injurious to health, yet the committee say people will be willing to endure it on the Fourth of July and Seventeenth of June. I don't think it should be taken from the Mayor, who is just as well able to bear the responsibility as we are. I don't believe in so much red tape, and I don't believe that a citizen should have to come here when he wants to use the Common for that purpose. I move to substitute the minority report (which recommends that no action be taken on the order) for that of the majority.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I don't consider this order of very great importance. It is perfectly right and should be passed. On the whole I think this firing of cannon on the Common had better be dispensed with. If it does no harm to fire on the Fourth of July and the Seventeenth of June it does no harm at any other time. I should be willing to vote for this ordinance and I hope the majority report will be adopted.

Mr. Dacey—I think that when the majority of a committee bring in an ordinance like this they should bring in some good reasons for it. I want to ask if there is any good reason for taking the power to issue permits from the Mayor and giving it to the Aldermen.

Mr. West—If the Mayor grants permission to one party he must perforce grant it to others. If it goes to the City Government there will be no personal feeling about it.

Mr. Dacey's motion to substitute the minority for the majority report prevailed, and the report as amended was accepted.

Subsequently Mr. Dacey moved to reconsider the vote, hoping that it would not prevail. The motion was rejected.

COMPENSATION TO A FIREMAN.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16 offered the following:

Whereas, James S. King a member of the Fire Department and attached to Engine Company No. 10, was seriously injured while in the discharge of his duty—

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to James S. King the sum of three hundred dollars, on account of injuries received while in the discharge of his duty as a member of the Fire Department; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—Before voting I should like to hear more of the history of this case—how it occurred and what it amounts to.

Mr. Burt—He was injured about the first of May, so that he has been obliged to remain in the City Hospital ever since, and will not be able to do anything for some months to come. He is injured in the left leg and foot very badly. The order was passed to a second reading, and Mr. Burt asked a suspension of the rules that it might be passed.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—I would like to ask the Chairman of the committee who reported that order, if that money should not come from the amount allowed to be appropriated by law, and not from the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Mr. Burt—It comes from the three thousand dollars appropriated for this purpose by the Council. If they use more than that they have to ask for more.

Mr. Pease—I don't think it should be taken from the regular appropriation. The City Council allows three thousand dollars for firemen who are injured while in the discharge of their duty.

Mr. Burt—My impression is that the especial appropriation of $3000 is set aside for the Committee on Fire Department for such purposes.

The rules were suspended and the order was passed.

THE MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

Order to cancel the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse provided it can be done by payment of expenses incurred by the purchaser, which came from the Aldermen, passed, was refused a second reading by the Council.

Subsequently Mr. West of Ward 16 moved to reconsider the vote.

Mr. West—My object is that the order may be passed to a second reading, and laid over under the rule.

The vote was reconsidered, and the order was passed to a second reading.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I hope the order will take its final reading this evening. I think this Council has voted money enough for schoolhouses to have this one remain where it is. That house could not be built for $15,000. The gentleman who bought it for $800 is willing to give up his claim by the city paying him the expenses that he has been to. It was rather a loose trade to sell the building for $800. I hope the order will pass.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11—I hope the order will lay over until the next meeting, to let the members look into the matter. If I understand it, it is an old building, right in the shadow of the new one. If the building is worth $15,000 the purchaser is foolish to give up his trade.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I hope the order will be laid over, as it was on that condition that I moved to reconsider. I understand the expenses are four or five thousand dollars, and that was what I wanted to ascertain.

The order was laid over.

THE FORT HILL WHARF PROPERTY.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 moved to reconsider the order passed the last meeting, to pay $160,000 to W. R. Clark for the Fort Hill wharf property. Mr. Shaw proceeded to give his reasons for making this motion. What he stated at the last meeting was from a general knowledge of the value of the property, and from the impression that the price was an inordinate one. He had talked with some gentlemen who are more familiar with the property than he, and held in his hand the valuation of the property for the previous three years. This wharf, now the property of W. R. Clark, contains 22,000 feet. In 1871 it was taxed for $2 63 per foot, or $58,000, and the building for $7000; in 1872, for $3 per foot, making $66,000 for the wharf and $7000 more for the building. This year, on the 1st of May, three or four months ago, it was taxed at $5 per foot, making $110,000, which, with the building at $15,000, will make an aggregate of $125,000. Now we are at the 1st of September, and it is proposed to pay $160,000 for that property. The wharf directly on the north is Packard's, taxed in 1872 at $2 37½ per foot; this year the same property is taxed at one-eighth less than that, making an aggregate of $50,000, for which sum it has been sold. Now take Snow's wharf, which in 1872 was taxed at $2 25 per foot, and this year at $3. The wharf of the James Otis heirs was taxed at $2 25 in 1872, and $3 this year. Pierson's wharf last year was taxed at $2 70, this year at $2 50; Power's wharf last year $1 75, this year $2 50. Foster's wharf, in 1872, at $1 75; in 1873 at $2 70. Rowe's wharf, the best of the whole, in comparison with Clark's and Rowe's is taxed at $3 this year. Litchfield's wharf, adjoining this very property, was taxed in 1872 at $2 25 per foot, this year at less than $3. Batchelder's wharf is assessed at $3 per foot; Dolbear's at $2 25; Prescott & Chapin's at $3, last year $2 50; Liverpool at $2 25, last year at $2. Mr. Shaw claimed that these figures sustained his previous statements, and, as he said before, if the city has not got committees sharp enough to make good bargains, they had better all resign and go home. The question is, shall the city pay thirty-five per cent. in advance of what her assessors have valued property three or four months ago. He undertook to say that the property could be bought for what it is appraised for business purposes. If W. R. Clark is a sharp man, and comes to the City Hall and makes sharp bargains, is that any reason why the city of Boston should succumb to him or anybody else?

Mr. Shaw contended that if a business man would consent to pay such a price for that property he would be consigned to the Insane Asylum at South Boston. If those who have the making of bargains for the city are not competent they had better resign.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16—I don't know whether the gentleman intended it or not, but it appears to me that his array of facts and figures are intended as a censure upon the Board of Assessors.

Mr. Shaw—I had no intention of censuring any one.

Mr. Burditt—I don't know whether there is anything in the value of the property to make it worth five dollars a foot. I do know, however, that the whole matter was fairly considered by the Committee on Streets, and their attention was called to it by the Street Commissioners. It was shown very clearly that we should need that property some time. The Street Commissioners had awarded some $50,000 for the land taken in the widening of Broad street. We should have to pay that anyhow. I am not aware that a man is obliged to sell for what his property is assessed at, and we must expect the city to pay at least twenty-five per cent. more than the market value of property. Mr. Clark is not anxious to make this trade. The wharf will be worth much more when the street is widened. He agrees to pay the city seven per cent. for the use of the property until the street is widened, and I don't see that the city is going to lose anything on the original cost. I think it will be found to be a very sound trade.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I happen to know a little something about real estate in that locality. I had the management of some real estate opposite Packard's wharf which has been taxed at $6000 this year and I sold it for $11,600. I mention this merely to show how little you can tell by going to the Assessors books. I suppose Mr. Clark is going to make some money out of his wharf, but I don't think $160,000 is a very exorbitant price. If the city does n't take it he will get permission to extend his wharf; then the city will have to pay for the improvements.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I think the gentleman has admitted all that I claim. The Harbor Commissioners have already refused to do what Mr. Clark wishes. They will never give him the right to extend his wharf and they ought not to do so. Is Boston Harbor to be encroached upon in this way? Are the rights of commerce to be encroached upon? What says my friend of Ward 16? Mr. Shaw then alluded to another insane project, the proposed widening of Atlantic avenue another hundred feet, the petition for which he had seen. These wharves must not be extended to the detriment of commerce. Mr. Shaw did n't care how much money Mr. Clark makes out of this wharf, but gentlemen had n't brought a single argument to refute what he (Mr. Shaw) had said. Mr. Shaw concluded by reiterating his statement that the price was too large, and hoped that each member would investigate for himself, as he had done. He hoped the motion would prevail.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I think the city ought to pay fair prices for land, but it is n't in the nature of things that the city can drive as sharp bargains as individuals.

Mr. Shaw—I don't know the reason why.

The Council rejected the motion to reconsider.

On motion of Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

To the Committee on Paving—James J. Grace and 68 others, representing that the condition of the sidewalk on the easterly side of Washington street, between Hayward place and Essex street, is injurious to those persons doing business in the vicinity and dangerous to pedestrians, and praying that the above difficulties may be obviated.

Jacob Bleiler et al., that edgestones be set on Mechanic street.

Joseph Forristall, to be paid for grade damages on Chambers street.

George F. Davis et al., that Warren street, from Washington to Dudley street, be paved with granite blocks.

Seth Pettee, trustee, et al., that Chatham row be repaved with small granite blocks.

Walworth Manufacturing Company, to place steam pipes under Hawley and Franklin streets.

David H. Blaney et al., that Meridian street, from Paris to Saratoga street, be paved.

James Lynch et al., that Niuth street, from E to Dorchester street, be paved.

Winthrop Railroad Company, that the fence on Saratoga street, over Breed's Island, may be set back.

School Committee, that Cove street be paved from East to Beach street, for the benefit of the Bowditch Grammar School.

Metropolitan Railroad Company, to locate tracks on Beacon street, from Gloucester street to near Brighton avenue.

THE POULTRY TRADE.

A petition was received from Nathan Robbins and seven other poultry dealers at Faneuil-Hall Market, representing that section fourteen of the city ordinances in relation to said market, passed June 3, 1859, and amended May 18, 1866, declares that "no poultry shall be sold or offered for sale in said market until the same has been properly dressed, by removing the heads, crops, entrails and feathers"; that large quantities of poultry shipped to this city arrives and is offered for sale, and sold, without having the entrails, crops or heads removed; and if said ordinance is observed or enforced the occupants of the poultry stalls in said market do not have an opportunity to purchase and sell such poultry, or to compete with poultry dealers doing business in other markets in the city, or with the established provision stores and commission houses; that the result of the enforcement of said ordinance is to take away from said market many other kinds of produce for the reason that persons sending poultry to this city generally send other produce with it, and prefer to send all their goods to one place, and the goods sent are naturally consigned or sold to such parties as have a legal right to resell or dispose of the same; that much of the poultry consumed in the United States is raised in and shipped from the Canadas before the heads, entrails, or crops are removed, and the Canadians are obliged to send their poultry to New York city and other places, where no law exists which prohibits any person from selling such undressed poultry. Wherefore the petitioners pray that said ordinance may be repealed, or so far modified as to place the dealers in poultry in said market on an equal footing with merchants in the same business in other parts of the city.

The petition was referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Markets.

STATEMENT FROM THE GERMAN CONSUL.

The following communication was received and placed on file:

CONSULATE OF THE GERMAN EMPIRE, {
6 Oliver street, Boston, Sept. 9, 1873. }

To His Honor Mayor Pierce: Dear Sir—In my letter of August 28, 1873, asking for better protection of life and property in Boston Harbor, I took the following positions:

In view of the fact that there is in existence in this city an association of sailors' boarding-house keepers, one of whom, a few weeks ago, in this office, boasted that they would get the best of us; in view of the fact that the damage these boarding-house keepers do to German trade by enticing seamen to desert, is great, etc., etc.

I have had occasion since then to satisfy myself that the sailors' boarding-house keeper had no warrant to use the language which led to the above remarks; that the "Seamen's Mutual Benefit Association" does not pursue lawless objects; on the contrary, that they endeavor to repress lawlessness among their members.

I cheerfully make the above statement in order to correct any wrong impression my language may have given of the objects and actions of the "Seamen's Mutual Benefit Association." As my first letter was laid before the Board of Aldermen and there may have created a false impression, I would respectfully ask that this letter be sent in to that body likewise.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully yours,
G. A. SCHMITT, Acting Consul.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The Superintendent of Sewers submitted statements of sewer assessments as follows: Saratoga street, between Bremer and Swift street, total cost $2666 05, assessed to individuals $1999 54; Lexington street, between Eagle and Prescott streets, total cost $2198 94, assessed to individuals $1649 21; Vine street, total cost $462 30, assessed to individuals $324 23; George street, total cost $846 22, assessed to individuals $634 67; Sawyer street, total cost $494 29, assessed to individuals $370 72.

Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

The following communications were received from the Cochituate Water Board. They were referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Water and ordered to be printed:

OFFICE OF THE COCHITUATE BOARD, {
CITY HALL, Sept. 12, 1873. }

To the City Council of Boston—By the direction of this board I inclose the report and plans submitted by Mr. J. P. Davis, City Engineer, to whom were referred certain questions regarding needed changes and additions to the present system of water pipes, detailed in an order of the Board of Aldermen to this board June 16, 1873.

The "adequate supply of water for all necessary purposes," referred to in the order, doubtless refers to an adequate supply to meet such conflagrations as occurred in November last, as the present system of supply is ample for all domestic and manufacturing purposes, while in addition it furnishes a better supply for fire purposes than is possessed by any other large city in the country.

While the supply for fire purposes is so large and generous, still it will be wise, perhaps, to incur a reasonable amount of expenditure to further increase it, so that no just cavil or criticism can be made as to the action of the City Government, or its agents having the matter more particularly in charge.

With this view this board concurs in the additions and changes which are more particularly recommended by the City Engineer, and which he estimates will cost $380,000. The additional improvements, costing some $334,000, suggested in the report, "to further augment the capacity of the general system," in the opinion of the board may be safely left to a future day, as those recommended by the City Engineer, and mostly determined upon by this board, seem to meet all the reasonable requirements of the present time. The changes and improvements which have been and are now being made will probably exhaust the appropriations for the current fiscal year; and, to the end that no valuable time may be lost in forwarding the needed work, this board recommends a special appropriation of $250,000, to be expended for the purchase of pipes and other material, and the furtherance of such needed work as may be done before the cold weather closes in this fall.

The annual appropriations for this department have usually been made so late in the spring months that much valuable time is lost before the pipe contracts are made and the delivery commences. If contracts were made in the autumn, the pipes could be made in the winter months and shipped here ready for use as soon as navigation opens, and probably better terms could be made with the manufacturers. Some $200,000 of the appropriations asked for will be needed for pipes and fixtures, and the balance may be judiciously used for work already determined upon, should the season remain open as late as it sometimes does.

This communication has been withheld for some little time, from some considerations affecting the proposed substitution of salt water for fire purposes in certain sections of the city, by an independent system of pumping works. As this is a very important matter, and one requiring careful consideration, and as the Board of Aldermen has quite recently passed an order requiring a special report upon it, it will be best to wait until the question is more carefully investigated before a definite opinion is given upon the matter. Whether the new pumping system is adequate or not, still the appropriation recommended by this board is very desirable, should the City Council agree with the suggestions submitted by the City Engineer.

For the Cochituate Water Board.

JOHN A. HAVEN, President.

CITY ENGINEER'S OFFICE, CITY HALL, }
BOSTON, August 16, 1873. }

John A. Haven, Esq., President Cochituate Water Board: Sir—The following order of the City Council was referred to me for a report, by your board, on June 19:

"IN BOARD OF ALDERMEN, June 16, 1873.

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be requested to consider and report to the City Council, as soon as practicable, what alterations in and additions to the present system of water pipes and hydrants would be required to render them of such capacity as would afford an adequate supply of water for all necessary purposes; to include the number and kind of hydrants, size and quantity of pipes, and cost, including expense of laying the same; 1st, for the city proper; 2d, for South and East Boston; 3d, for Roxbury and Dorchester. Also, what portions of the work could be completed during the present year, and whether any additional appropriation for the same would be needed."

Before giving the estimates of quantities and cost that have been prepared in answer to the above order, I desire to call attention to certain alterations and extensions of the existing system of distributing mains and pipes, that have already been either determined upon by your board or recommended to it for adoption.

A plan for repiping the "burnt district" was submitted and approved early this year, and an appropriation of $85,000 to cover the cost of the work required has been made by the City Council.

Since then your board has decided to make a number of changes and additions in other parts of the pipe system, viz., to lay a 12-inch main from Tremont street, through Dover and Fifth streets, to the South Boston high-service district; to lay a 16-inch pipe the entire length of North Charles street; to lay a 12-inch pipe in Washington street, from Boylston to Summer; to connect one with another various lines of 12-inch pipes which now terminate with "dead ends"; to replace in a number of streets and places 6 and 4 inch pipes by 8-inch, and at other points to replace 4-inch pipes by 6-inch. The estimated cost of this work is $78,000.

Other changes which were recommended to the Water Board, either verbally or in the May report of the City Engineer, are now under consideration. These are, to lay a 20-inch high-service main from the pumping works to Dover street, and a 16-inch main from Dover street to the Common, there to connect with the 16-inch pipe lately laid across the Common and through Joy street to Mount Vernon; to lay a 16-inch pipe on Tremont street, from Boylston to School; to lay 12-inch pipes in the following-named streets: Temple place from Tremont to Washington, Cornhill from Court to Washington, Hanover street from Court to Union, Commercial street from Prince to Fleet, Beach street from Washington to Federal, South street from Beach to Albany, Albany street from Way to Dover, Dorchester street from First to Second, First street from Dorchester to O, O street from First to Fourth, and Granite street from Second to Mount Washington avenue; to lay 8-inch pipes in Salem, Essex and other streets, and to lay 6-inch pipes at various places—as on the wharves, to replace those of 4-inch diameter. The estimated cost of this work is $220,000.

In addition to the above there are changes and extensions which should be made at an early day in East Boston, Roxbury and Dorchester, such as to lay 12-inch pipes in Meridian and Marginal streets, and in Blue Hill avenue; to extend the 24-inch low-service main from Upham's Corner to Field's Corner, and to lay 8-inch pipes in a number of streets. The estimated cost of this work is $91,000.

The total amount of the above estimates is $474,000, from which is to be deducted the $85,000 already appropriated. This leaves $389,000 as the amount of a further appropriation required to cover the cost of the proposed work.

Of this amount about $190,000 is for new mains and extensions, which should be laid within a year or two, at the latest, to provide for the natural increase in the daily consumption of water. The 12-inch high-service main for South Boston, the cost of which is included in the above estimate, is now being laid, at an expense of about $40,000.

The order of the City Council, in answer to which this report is made, requires that there shall be proposed such alterations in and additions to the present system of water pipes and hydrants as will render them of capacity to afford "an adequate supply of water for all necessary purposes."

The machines now in use for extinguishing fires necessitate for their supply the delivery of large volumes of water within small areas. The present tendency is not only to increase the number of engines that are brought into action at a single fire, but also to employ more powerful ones.

Experience shows that conflagrations of great magnitude may be caused by the burning of low buildings or dwellings, as well as by the burning of larger and higher ones, used for business purposes.

It therefore follows that to furnish an adequate supply for all necessary purposes, a capacity of pipes must be provided that will deliver very large volumes of water at any point of the city which is, or which may soon be, thickly built upon.

Without fixing upon a definite quantity of water to be delivered in a given time within a given area, I have endeavored to so augment the general capacity of the pipe system, by providing new or enlarged feeders to the smaller pipes, and by cutting the latter into short lengths, that a very liberal supply may be delivered at all points within the range of the distributing pipes.

The accompanying plans of Boston proper, South Boston and East Boston, and the following schedule will show the alterations and additions proposed for this purpose:

Roxbury Low Service.

To lay 570 feet 12-inch pipe in Blue Hill avenue, from Stafford to Woodville square.

To lay 2900 feet 12-inch pipe in Putnam and Cabot streets, from Dudley to Ruggles street.

To lay 1160 feet 8-inch pipe in Hammond park, from Tremont street to Shawmut avenue.

To lay 550 feet 8-inch pipe in Ball street, from Washington street to Shawmut avenue.

To lay 850 feet 8-inch pipe in Winslow street, from Dudley to Eustis street.

To lay 600 feet 8-inch pipe in Dunlow street, from Elmwood to Dudley street.

To lay 440 feet 8-inch pipe in Elmwood street, from King to Clay street.

To lay 330 feet 8-inch pipe in Clay street, from Elmwood to Tremont street.

To lay 260 feet 8-inch pipe in Bumstead lane, from Conant street to Longwood avenue.

To lay 630 feet 8-inch pipe in Vine street, from Mount Pleasant avenue to Dudley street.

To lay 720 feet 8-inch pipe in Fairland street, from Mount Pleasant avenue to Moreland street.

To lay 350 feet 8-inch pipe in Cleveland street, from Winthrop to Moreland street.

To lay 930 feet 8-inch pipe in Moreland street, from Fairland street to Blue Hill avenue.

To lay 600 feet 8-inch pipe in Alaska street, from Perrin street to Blue Hill avenue.

To lay 260 feet 6-inch pipe in Cunard street, from Cabot to Tremont street.

To set 6 Lowry hydrants.

Roxbury High Service.

To lay 1500 feet 12-inch pipe in Higbland court, from Fort avenue to Norfolk street.

To lay 1200 feet 12-inch pipe in St. James street, from Shawmut avenue to Warren street.

Dorchester.

To lay 2300 feet of 24-inch pipe in Dorchester avenue, from Adams to Pleasant street.

To lay 1870 feet of 24-inch pipe in Pleasant street, from Dorchester avenue to Stoughton street.

To lay 1450 feet of 25-inch pipe in Stoughton street, from Pleasant to Boston street.

The estimates of quantities are as follows:

Boston Proper.

9260 lineal feet of 20-inch pipe.

7180 lineal feet of 16-inch pipe.

27,380 lineal feet of 12-inch pipe.

32,710 lineal feet of 8-inch pipe.

28,980 lineal feet of 6-inch pipe.

310 Lowry hydrants.

(Part of the above 20-inch pipe intended for the Beacon Hill and South Boston high service is to be laid in Roxbury.)

South and East Boston.

45,640 lineal feet of 12-inch pipe.

17,600 lineal feet of 8-inch pipe.

10,880 lineal feet of 6-inch pipe.

224 Lowry hydrants.

Roxbury and Dorchester.

5620 lineal feet of 24-inch pipe.

6170 lineal feet of 12-inch pipe.

7420 lineal feet of 8-inch pipe.

260 lineal feet of 6-inch pipe.

6 Lowry hydrants.

The estimates of cost are as follows:

First—Boston Proper.

Pipes laid, including gates and specials.....	$325,249 00
Hydrants, on old and new pipes.....	45,290 00
House-service pipes.....	33,500 00

Total.....$404,039 00

Second—South and East Boston.

Pipes laid, including gates and specials.....	$214,520 00
Hydrants, on old and new pipes.....	29,580 00
House-service pipes.....	23,900 00

Total.....$268,000 00

Third—Roxbury and Dorchester.

Pipes laid, including gates and specials.....	$86,000 00
Hydrants, on new pipes.....	600 00
House-service pipes.....	4,500 00
Rock excavation.....	10,000 00

Total.....$101,100 00

Total amount of estimates.....$773,139 00

In the above estimate, the cost of that part of the work classed under the head of extension is $228,000. It will be seen that the cost is great, and the question arises whether the advantages to be gained from the changes suggested will warrant the expenditure of so large a sum. The system as thus modified would give no greater capacity than, in view of the very large supply of water now demanded for fire purposes, most engineers would provide for a city when the distributing pipes are not already laid. If, however, the existing system of this city be modified by the laying of the new mains and pipes, as already recommended to your board, it will form a very generous supply for all purposes.

Respectfully submitted,

JOSEPH P. DAVIS, City Engineer.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to pay John I. Brown $25,260, for land taken to widen Washington street. Passed.

Order to pave a portion of Creek square with small granite blocks. $2400. Passed.

Order to postpone the collection of certain sewer assessments until entries are made into such sewers. Passed.

Report and order for appointment of a commission of five persons to prepare a revision of the city charter.

Alderman Power moved that the subject be referred back to the committee. He made the motion at the request of a gentleman who, among other reasons assigned, expressed the desire to make a minority report.

Alderman Quincy would not oppose a motion to allow a gentleman an opportunity to make a minority report, but it seemed to him that time enough had been given to every member of the committee to make up his mind and express it. He would not oppose the postponement, but he did not wish to establish the precedent. After the matter had been before the committee and decided by a large majority, he did not see why the gentleman should at this late hour wish it referred back.

Alderman Power replied that the gentleman did not expect the report would be made at the last meeting and that was the reason the request had been made.

The motion to recommit was carried.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petition of Cummings & Carlisle was referred in concurrence to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

The following papers received concurrent action:

Report from Board of Street Commissioners that the estimated cost of widening and extending Fayette court is $375,000; of extending Hayward place to Kingston street, $232,000. Referred to Joint Committee on Streets.

Report from Board of Street Commissioners that the proposed extension of Eustis street to Magazine street would cost $17,100. Placed on file.

Order to pay James S. King, a member of the Fire Department, $300 for injuries received while in discharge of his duties. Passed.

Order authorizing erection of a bell tower on Hose House No. 12, at corner of O and Fourth streets, at an estimated expense of $1500. Passed.

FIRING CANNON ON THE COMMON.

The report and an ordinance in relation to the discharge of cannon upon the Common or public grounds (City Doc. No. 93, 1873), came up from the Council with an amendment to substitute for said ordinance the report of the minority of the committee, viz., that "no action is necessary" on the subject.

On the question of concurrence with the Council in the substitution of the minority report of inexpedient to legislate, Alderman Quincy said—

I observe that the ground taken for this substitution in the other branch, is in substance that the power to authorize the practice should not be taken from the Mayor where it now resides, and that those desirous of indulging therein ought not to be embarrassed by the red tape or useless formality of an application to the Council. As the vote shows almost unanimity of opinion on this point, I am willing to concede it and to amend the ordinance by continuing to the Mayor his present authority in the matter. The existing ordinance permits the practice when authorized "by the military authority of the Commonwealth," without specifying by whom such authority shall be exercised, thereby as I submit placing our Common at the disposal for this purpose of any officer in command of artillery who may desire to practise the same thereon, which by virtue of his commission he does "by military authority of the Commonwealth."

Now, my point is simply this, that the military authorities of the Commonwealth, whether high or low, captain or commander-in-chief, ought to be held to come here to the City Hall and ask leave of somebody before using our pleasure grounds in the heart of our city for this purpose. I have no doubt that gentlemen of the other branch will meet this issue fairly and decide according to their convictions.

The Board non-concurred in the substitution of the minority report and adopted an amendment to the ordinance continuing to the Mayor his present authority to grant permission for artillery firing. The ordinance as amended was then passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gibson, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, submitted reports and orders in favor of granting the following petitions:

Joseph F. Paul, to erect wooden building on Bristol and Albany streets.

F. Robbins & Co., to place a wooden roof over coal sheds on Carleton's wharf.

Albert F. Cole, to erect wooden ell to building No. 131 Broadway.

Patrick O'Donohue, to erect lumber shed at 434 Harrison avenue.

C. P. Clark, to erect wooden building on Boston wharf.

Patrick J. Myers, to erect wooden building on Ward street.

Davis Damon, to erect a wooden building at 64 Eutaw street.

McQuesten & Fogg, to enlarge lumber shed at 170 Border street.

The reports were severally accepted, and the orders were read twice and passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the same committee, reported "no action necessary" on the petition of R. J. Elder, to erect wooden building on Border street. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Joint Standing Committee on Health, reported on the petition of J. H. Hathorne, for change of Health ordinance relative to removal of manure from stables, that such a change is desirable, and recommended that the subject be referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

The report was accepted and the petition was so referred.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the petitions of Edward Ripley, to occupy stable on Harvard street; Joseph H. White, to occupy brick stable on Stanhope street; George A. Fuller, to occupy wooden stable on Van Winkle street, Ward 16; Patrick Norton, for stable on Pearl street, Ward 16.

Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of Charles Crosby and others, for transfer of hack licenses; of O. J. Gallagher and Nathan Whiting, innholders; of Eugene McNulty, W. S. Lovejoy and Charles Arnold, victuallers; of Joseph Baxter, dealer in second-hand articles; of J. B. Thompson, to give photographic exhibition at Tremont Temple, September 17; of Warren-street Chapel Association, to hold festival in Music Hall, October 1; of John Kasson, Charles M. Sullivan, J. L. Knox, Patrick Fardy and George H. Kuhn, for wagon licenses; of John H. Flack, George W. Crocker, Dominico Leverono and Theo. Twickler, for billiard-saloon licenses; of Annie Johnson, George L. Pierce, Rollin H. Carnes, to keep intelligence offices.

Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported orders for the construction of sewers in Rockland, Catawba and Copeland streets. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay as follows: Charlotte Brown, executrix, $20 35, on account of widening of Stoughton street; heirs of Sarah A. Brown, $6437, on account of the widening of Essex street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom was referred the petition of Nathaniel C. Nash et al., made a report recommending that the Commission on Wood Pavements be requested to make a supplementary report in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, made a report recommending that the petition of Charles Davenport, et al., that Devonshire street be renumbered, be granted. Accepted.

Alderman Power from the same committee, on the petition of Alvert Brown et al., reported the following order:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave Gouch street with small granite blocks. Estimated cost, $600.

Report accepted and order passed.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom were referred the petitions of William T. Hart and Adoniram Burrill, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the time for erecting a building upon the lot of land as decided to William T. Hart by the city of Boston January 2, 1872, be extended to September 1, 1874, upon condition that the sum of $200 is paid to the Superintendent of Public Land within ten days from the passage of this order.

Ordered, That the conditions set forth in an agreement given by the city of Boston to Messrs. Burrill and Whitney, May 15, 1869, to convey to them certain land on M and Third streets, be so far modified as will permit of the erection of a brick stable upon said land in conformity to the height and width as set forth in the petition of Adoniram Burrill, dated August 5, 1872.

The reports were accepted, and the orders were read twice and passed.

SPECIAL CITY ELECTION.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That warrants be issued for the meeting of the legal voters of this city, in their respective wards, on Tuesday, the seventh day of October next, at nine o'clock A. M., then and there to give in their ballots—"Yes" or "No"—in answer to each of the following propositions, viz.:

1. Shall an act passed by the Legislature of this Commonwealth in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-three, entitled, "An act to unite the city of Boston and the town of Brighton," be accepted?

2. Shall an act passed by the Legislature of this Commonwealth in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-three, entitled, "An act to unite the city of Boston and the town of Brookline" be accepted?

3. Shall an act passed by the Legislature of this Commonwealth in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-three, entitled "An act to unite the city of Charlestown with the city of Boston," be accepted?

4. Shall an act passed by the Legislature of this Commonwealth in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-three, entitled "An act to unite the city of Boston and the town of West Roxbury," be accepted?

All the answers to the foregoing propositions to be deposited on one ballot. The polls to be kept open until six o'clock, P. M.

Alderman Gibson offered the following:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Fire Alarms, under the direction of the committee on that department, procure a new alarm repeater for the Central Office (the present one in use being unreliable) at an estimated expense of twenty-three hundred dollars; the same to be charged to the appropriation for that department.

Alderman Clark asked if the one in present use could not be repaired for a sum much less than a new one would cost.

Alderman Gibson replied that the instrument is said to be valueless. He had himself suggested that the old one be repaired, but the Superintendent of Fire Alarms assured him that a new one would be better, as it had some improvements which made it preferable to the old one.

The order was passed.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following:

Ordered, That on and after the first day of October, 1873, the fees for measuring wheat, corn and other grains shall be one cent a bushel, which shall be in full for all services rendered by the measurer or by his deputies.

Alderman Stebbins—The Measurer of Grain is appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen, in accordance with the General Statutes. At the time the office was created the fee was fixed at three-quarters of a cent per bushel, which was good pay at the time. Now nineteen-twentieths of the grain comes here over the railroads and goes into elevators, and the amount of labor performed by the measurer at the present time is very light. He is now charging one cent per bushel, and it has been thought best to make this change in the rates.

The order was passed.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department he and he is hereby authorized to organize a steam fire engine company, to consist of twelve men, as follows: Foreman, engineer, fireman, two drivers and seven hosemen, to take charge of Steam Fire Engine No. 25, the same to be located in the temporary house on Washington square, the above company to be permanently employed; also, a hook and ladder company, to consist of fifteen men, as follows: Foreman, assistant-foreman, driver and twelve laddersmen, the same to be permanently employed and located in the same house.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding four thousand five hundred dollars, in grading and otherwise improving Orchard square, said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding two hundred dollars in the improvement of South Boston squares; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding four thousand seven hundred and thirty dollars, in payments for labor and team work in that department; said sum to be in addition to the appropriations heretofore made and to be charged to the general appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend an additional sum of two hundred dollars in erecting and furnishing a toolhouse and wagon shed on the Common; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for the Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the sums of one hundred and twenty-five and one hundred dollars be and the same hereby are abated—for cause—from the respective assessments of seven hundred and twenty and two hundred and twenty-five dollars upon the estates of Allen Putnam and Caroline Geib, for betterment, from the widening of Dudley and other streets, under an order of the Board of Street Commissioners of August 5, last, leaving the said assessments at five hundred and ninety-five dollars upon the estate of Allen Putnam and one hundred and twenty-five dollars upon the estate of Caroline Geib.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That until otherwise ordered there be allowed and paid for rent of headquarters for the Ninth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at No. 562 Washington street, the sum of six hundred dollars per annum, beginning on the first day of September, 1873.

Yeas 11, nays 0.

Ordered, That the allowance for rent of headquarters for the First Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at No. 11 Pemberton square, be discontinued from and after the first of September, 1873; and that until otherwise ordered the sum of six hundred dollars per annum be allowed and paid for rent of headquarters for said regiment in Boylston Hall, beginning on the first of September, 1873.

Yeas 11, nays 0.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave the sidewalks with brick on the south side of Cedar street, between Thornton and Hawthorn streets, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Ordered, That the Committee on Paving consider and report what measures it is expedient to take either to prohibit or to regulate the projection of hoisting beams from the fronts of stores in this city, and the raising of goods thereby.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to notify in writing the Superintendent of Sewers and the President of the Water Board before proceeding to pave or macadamize any street or place within the city of Boston.

Ordered, That the several gaslight companies whose pipes are laid in the streets or ways of the city of Boston be requested to notify in writing the Superintendent of Streets, the Superintendent of Sewers and the President of the Water Board before proceeding to open any street or way in this city for the purpose of laying gas pipes therein.

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be directed to notify in writing the Superintendent of Streets and the Superintendent of Sewers, before proceeding to open any public street or way in the city of Boston for the purpose of laying water pipes therein.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Sewers be directed to notify in writing the Superintendent of Streets and the President of the Water Board before opening any street or way in the city of Boston for the purpose of laying drains or sewers therein.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Institutions be authorized to provide suitable office accommodations for the Board of Directors of Public Institutions; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

On motion of Alderman Brown—

Ordered, That the Committee on Lamps be authorized to visit New York, for the purpose of examining the method of lighting the streets in that city; the expense, not exceeding $200, to be charged to the appropriation for Lamps.

On motion of Alderman Emery—

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be requested to report to the City Council an estimate of the cost of extending Granite street, in South Boston, from its junction with Second and Third streets on a line parallel with A street to Broadway.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the report, "leave to withdraw" on petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Company, for an additional track on Washington street, was taken from the table.

Alderman Stebbins—I move that the petitioners be given a hearing three weeks from today, instead of leave to withdraw.

Alderman Power—I should like to amend by issuing an order of notice which would give the petitioners and any one opposed a hearing the same day.

Alderman Stebbins—An order of notice is given before the committee report in favor of granting a location. It was my intention that all parties should be heard.

Alderman Power—In most cases the order of notice is issued before the committee comes to a decision. In this case the committee decided to give the petitioners leave to withdraw before the order of notice was issued. The Committee on Paving have no objection to the issue of an order of notice that will effect the object of the gentleman's motion and be satisfactory to the petitioners.

Alderman Stebbins—I shall be satisfied if the petitioners be given a hearing.

Alderman Quincy moved to amend by inserting the words "and remonstrants" and after the words petitioners.

The Chair suggested the customary term "all parties interested," which was agreed to and the order of notice was passed.

A NEW SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

Alderman Sayward submitted the following report from the Joint Standing Committee on Health:

By an order of the City Council approved April 25, 1873, the Board of Health was requested, with a view to early closing of the building now occupied as a smallpox hospital on Marcella street, to report what action should be taken to provide permanent accommodations for the treatment of persons suffering from contagious diseases. On the third of May the board reported that, in its opinion, a permanent hospital was absolutely necessary for the preservation of the public health, and upon the recommendation of your committee a bond for a deed was obtained of a lot of land which appears to be well adapted for the purpose.

The Sweet-street Hospital, which was established last year, has been abandoned as being unsuitable, in the opinion of the leading physicians of Boston, for the successful treatment of the smallpox patients. The occupation of the building on Marcella street, known as the old almshouse, has been continued to the present time because there was no other suitable place to which persons sick with contagious diseases could be sent. When the building was first taken for the purpose its occupation was not contemplated beyond the exigency which called it into use. With this understanding the people who lived, or owned real estate in the immediate vicinity, have submitted with great patience for nearly eight months to an unwholesome fear of smallpox contagion, and to the inconvenience and annoyance resulting therefrom. The paramount consideration for the public health, which justified the board in taking the action which it did, no longer exists. Justice to these people demands that different provisions should be made as speedily as possible.

It is evident that this city has now reached a point in its growth where some more permanent and extensive accommodations than have heretofore existed should be provided for the care of persons sick with contagious or infectious diseases. The extensive commerce which is carried on here with all parts of the world greatly increases the liability to epidemics, and it is of the first importance that the means should always be at hand to enable the health officers to carry out the policy of isolation which operated so effectually in preventing the spread of smallpox.

After giving a good deal of attention to the subject of a new location, the Board of Health and your committee have agreed in recommending the selection of a lot of land on Columbia street, in Ward 16, situated about three miles from State street, and containing 426,984 square feet, or about ten acres. The price for which it can be purchased is twenty cents per square foot. The site combines all the requisites for the purpose for which it is intended. The neighborhood is sparsely populated. The grounds are high and dry, ample in extent, with pure air from all quarters, good water, plenty of trees, and easily accessible from other sections of the city. There is a good building on the premises, which can be put in condition, without much expense, to serve the purposes of a hospital for some years to come. As soon as accommodations are provided in this place,—and there need be no delay in the matter,—the almshouse estate at the Highlands, containing 477,530 square feet, or about eleven acres, can be divided into house lots and sold for more than double the cost of the proposed location. The first cost of the lot on Columbia street can be considerably reduced by the sale of a large quantity of material suitable for building streets, which can be removed from it without interfering with the use for which it is purchased.

In view of the facts here presented, the committee would respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying orders.

WILLIAM SAYWARD.
N. GIBSON,
GEORGE P. DENNY.
H. W. PICKERING.

Ordered, That the Committee on Health be authorized to purchase, as a site for a hospital for contagious and infectious diseases, a lot of land situated on Columbia street, Ward 16, together with the buildings and other fixtures thereon, owned by Edward McKechine, Otis Shepard, H. S. Shepard and W. R. Chester, said lot containing four hundred and twenty-six thousand nine hundred and eighty-four square feet, more or less; the price paid therefor, including the fixtures, not to exceed the sum of twenty cents per square foot.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $86,000, to be applied to the purchase of a site for a hospital for contagious and infectious diseases.

The orders were read once and laid over.

HOME FOR THE POOR.

On motion of Alderman Power, the reports of the Committee on Public Institutions on purchase of a site for a Home for the Poor (City Doc. No. 108) were taken from the table.

Alderman Power moved that the report recommending the purchase of the Austin Farm be adopted.

Alderman Hulbert—I did intend to oppose taking this subject from the table, but instead of that I would remark that it would be better to defer the consideration of this subject for at least a week, as the printed reports have just come before the Board, and the members have not had an opportunity to examine them. I hope the report may be laid on the table a week longer at least; though I do not wish to dictate in the matter. I really did not suppose it would come up today.

Alderman Power—I would not have asked to bring this matter up today, but the gentleman who is absent has expressed to me his intention of voting for the Austin Farm, so I do not wish to take advantage of that. This matter has been before us more than a year, and all of us ought to be familiar with the subject. If any one is not, I have no desire to press this matter. The gentleman who is absent has expressed his opinion to me as in favor of the Austin Farm.

Alderman Stebbins called attention to the fact that on next Monday at 5 P. M., there would be a very long hearing before the Board.

Alderman Power—All who signed both reports urged the importance of some action being taken on this matter as soon as possible. There is not a gentleman here but is pretty well acquainted with the state of affairs at Deer Island and of the urgent necessity of some action being taken. The state of affairs at Deer Island is a disgrace to the city. If gentlemen say they are not posted I will not press the subject.

Alderman Sayward—I agree with the gentleman on my left that there is necessity for action on this matter of a home for the poor. It has been before the Council for six years, passing from one to the other without anything being done. I suppose each member has made up his mind as to which lot he will favor, but I am not so clear how the gentleman who is absent will vote. I understood that he had not made up his mind definitely. It is very seldom that I inquire how parties vote, and I don't go around inquiring whether any measure is going through or not. My preferences were in favor of the Dorchester lot, but some questions have come up in reference thereto, so that I am not so clear that I should vote for it today. For this reason I desire that it be laid over another week.

Alderman Clark—I hope the subject will be laid over another week. The committee are pretty evenly divided, four for one report and four for the other, and it may be this Board will stand that way. My mind is made up as to which place I shall vote for. If there is such need of prompt action, the committee have not shown their appreciation of it. The subject was given to them last May; yet the summer is past and the harvest is almost ended, and still they have not decided on a place.

Alderman Power—I have had considerable work to perform on many committees, and I am justified in saying that the Committee on Public Institutions have given the subject all the attention due to it. This Board can readily imagine what we have done when they take into consideration the kind and number of propositions for sites made within fifteen miles of the city, and the number of visits the committee have had to make. Other matters have caused unavoidable delay. I have no desire to press the subject, but I think the importance of the case demands speedy action. The gentleman who is absent expressed to me his opinion in favor of the Austin farm. I know nothing of how the majority are going to vote on this question, and I bring it up today simply because its importance has been so strenuously urged by members on the other side.

Alderman Sayward—I desire to say just one word in behalf of the committee, which has done better than any other of two former years, they having made a report before the close of the year. They are therefore entitled to some credit.

Alderman Quincy—I have read the two reports and am prepared to vote if it is necessary, this afternoon, although I have had no opportunity to visit the premises. The delay of a week would result in good rather than harm, it seems to me, as we would then vote as a Board more intelligently than we can this afternoon. If any gentleman would move to lay it on the table I should vote in favor of it.

Alderman Power—I would state again that all the urging has been done by those opposed to the Austin farm. As the sentiment seems to be for a postponement, I withdraw my motion.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert, the reports were again laid on the table.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

SEPTEMBER 18, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The following papers received concurrent action: Petitions of J. B. Blanchard and other police officers, Company F, W. R. Clark, E. F. Meaney and John Mullen, were referred.

Reference to Committee on Water, and ordered to be printed, report of Cochituate Water Board on supply of water for extinguishment of fires.

Reference to Committee on Ordinances of petition of J. H. Hathorne, for an amendment of health ordinance relating to removal of manure from stables.

Report no action necessary on petition of R. J. Elder, for leave to erect a wooden building on Border street, exceeding legal limits. Accepted.

Report granting leave to Joseph Robbins & Co., to place a wooden roof over coal-sheds on Carlton's wharf, on conditions named in said report. Order passed.

Reports and orders authorizing permits to be issued to Joseph F. Paul to erect a wooden building on Albany and Bristol streets; to Patrick J. Myers, to erect a wooden building on Ward street; to Davis Damon, to erect a wooden building at 64 Eutaw street; to C. P. Clark, to erect a wooden building on Boston wharf; to Patrick O'Donahoe, to erect a lumber shed at 454 Harrison avenue; to Albert F. Cole, to erect a wooden building at 131 Broadway; to McQuesten & Fogg, to enlarge a lumber shed at 170 Border street. Reports accepted and orders passed.

Order requesting Board of Street Commissioners to report an estimate of cost of extending Granite street from its junction with Second and Third streets to Broadway. Read twice and passed.

Report and order extending time for erecting a building on a lot of land deeded to W. T. Hart. January 2, 1873. Read twice and passed.

Report and order to modify conditions in an agreement with Burrell & Whitney of May, 15, 1869, so as to permit the erection of a brick stable on certain land on M and Third streets. Read twice and passed.

The following were severally read once and laid over:

Order authorizing the additional sum of not exceeding $4730 to be expended for labor and team work in the Department of the Common and Public Grounds.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $4500, to be made in grading and improving Orchard square.

Order authorizing an additional expenditure of not exceeding $1200, in erecting and repairing fences on and around the public grounds.

Order authorizing an additional expenditure of $200, in erecting and furnishing a wagon shed and tool house on the Common.

Order to allow for rent of headquarters of Ninth Regiment M. V. M., 562 Washington street, $600 per annum.

Order to discontinue allowance for rent of headquarters of First Regiment M. V. M., at 11 Pemberton square, and that $600 be allowed for said headquarters in Boylston Hall.

On the question of recommitting to the Joint Standing Committee on Ordinances the report of said committee, with an order, relating to revision of city charter, Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 inquired if an amendment would be in order. He would be willing to concur if they would make the commission three instead of five. He thought a recommitment very proper, but the size of the commission named is too large.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I should like to inquire whether there is a reasonable prospect of the report of the whole committee coming before the Council in time to be acted upon this year.

Mr. West of Ward 16—There is no objection on the part of the committee to a recommitment.

The Council concurred in the recommitment.

The order authorizing, not exceeding $2000, to be expended in improving the South Boston squares being under consideration, Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 said, I should like to ask if these expenditures have been considered and are supported by the committee, and if they are to come out of the general or a special appropriation.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—They are from the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, and the expenditure is to be taken from the general appropriation for that purpose.

The order was read once and laid over.

The order authorizing suitable office accommodations to be procured for the Board of Directors for Public Institutions came from the Aldermen passed, that Board having refused to concur in the Council's amendment authorizing the hiring of the upper stories of Niles Block.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I hope the committee will be instructed not to hire the building in Pemberton square, as this seems to be an attempt to get round that order.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would like to know what is being done now to the rooms of the Directors of Public Institutions. I have had occasion to pass that way several times lately, and noticed that a number of mechanics were at work there. I wish to ask if any order has passed the Council to authorize this expenditure of money.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—I would inform the gentleman that the room formerly used for the office of the Board of Directors of Public Institutions has been separated in the middle, and that part nearest School street is to serve as a vault for the Treasury Department. The work is being done by the Committee on Public Buildings.

Mr. Shaw—That answers a considerable portion of my question, but I want to know by what authority; if any orders have been before the Council authorizing the committee to make that change. I incorporated that in my first inquiry, and I should like to have it answered if it can be, and if it cannot I shall have something to say.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 offered the following as a substitute:

Ordered, that the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to select suitable accommodations for the Directors of Public Institutions, and report to the City Council.

Mr. Shaw—I have no objection to the substitute, because it is a very proper one. Now I want to know what authority has been given to any committee of the City Government to make any alterations in the public property of the city. I don't come here to interfere with the rights or prerogatives of any one, but to act and vote intelligently, and when I see money expended I want to know the reason. I want to know why it is that a committee can spend money and come here or into the coordinate branch and ask for money for that very purpose. I propose to speak on this question until I get some satisfaction,—to speak as I believe I am authorized to do and as I believe I am required by my oath of office. Here are committees, boards of directors, elected by this City Government, who are required to make returns of their expenditures every three months. One board, at least, has not done so, and that board is expending a great deal of money. I have inquired of the City Clerk and can't find any report from them. I also find that in case of an expenditure of over $300 they are required to advertise for proposals; I have read the newspapers and have never found any such advertisements. And yet such expenditures of this board amount to several hundred thousand dollars, right in the face and eyes of this ordinance. Now, until that board complies with the ordinance I shall never vote for any appropriation for which they may ask. I charge nobody with corruption, it may be a misapprehension on my part. They ought to know better and to comply with the city ordinances. When I know of such non-compliance with the city ordinances it is my duty to state it here. I suppose the gentlemen of whom these boards consist are friends of mine, and I don't come here to find fault with them. I come here, having mentioned this subject to several members of those boards, having told them that they are non-complying with the ordinance.

Mr. Flynn's substitute was adopted, and the order as amended was read a second time and passed.

The order authorizing a new alarm repeater to be procured for central fire-alarm office, at an estimated expense of $2300, having been read once, Mr. Upham of Ward 16 moved a suspension of the rules that the order might be passed, for this reason: The Committee on Fire Alarms in making their estimate for the year included this amount therein, as it was known that a new one would be needed. The manufacturer has one almost ready to be put in use; it is well known that it is desired by another city, and it is desirable that we should obtain it.

The rules were suspended and the order was passed.

Order for organization of a company for Engine No. 25, and for a new hook and ladder company, being under consideration, Mr. Burt of Ward 16 moved to suspend the rules, that it might be passed. He said the building and the apparatus are all ready, and much needed in that locality.

The rules were suspended and the order was passed.

FIRING CANNON ON THE COMMON.

The amendment of the Council, viz., adoption of the minority report "no action necessary," in relation to discharge of cannon on the Common or public grounds, came from the Aldermen non-concurred in and with the ordinance recommended by the majority committee, passed, with the additional words "or the Mayor."

The question was whether the Council would redecide or concur.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—I am still of the opinion that the ordinance as at present framed is sufficient. I see it comes modified by the Aldermen so as to take the authority from the military authorities, and give it to the Mayor or Aldermen. This matter has been before the City Government for some time, and, thinking that the present ordinance is sufficient, I move an indefinite postponement of the subject.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—As near as I can make out from the arguments of the gentleman from Ward 2, it is that because former City Governments have postponed the subject we should do so too. I think I can account to him for the reason that the order introduced last year met the fate that it did. There was a great deal of feeling among the citizens of Boston in regard to the unseasonable firing on the Common, late at night. I am of the opinion that if the order had been introduced at any other time it would not have been defeated. The firing was done by a party of influential citizens, and it was a matter of pride among the friends of those interested to sustain them. The committee found on examining the ordinance that all firing on the Common was prohibited. The result was that all authority was disregarded, and no one asked permission. I suppose the object of the committee is to get the thing in some intelligible shape, so that it may be done in the right way. The Governor could not undertake to say whether the firing shall take place or not, and the result is some unauthorized person will fire on the Common without authority—an exercise in which some are perhaps better competent to engage than in any other military duty. The question is, whether cannon ought to be fired within the city limits. Can the gentleman give a good argument in favor of it?

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—The gentleman from Ward 6 is now speaking for a very delicate class of people who live nearest the Common. Why, I should n't be surprised if those people should ask to have the wheels of the carriages muffled. Now for years every ship which has come into Boston Harbor has given us a salute at the North End. They wish to make the Governor come before the Council and ask permission to fire a salute, and I don't think it is necessary to require him to come to City Hall every time he wishes to use the Common for that purpose.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I take it that the governor, although he is the head of the military authority of the Commonwealth, never acts in that respect. The military authorities consider themselves the authorities. I don't know why the city of Boston, through its Government, should n't have control of its own property. I hope we shall not indefinitely postpone this matter, but agree with the other board.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I only know that in 1872 this matter was considered and the ordinance was amended so that the firing may be authorized by the military authorities of the Commonwealth or the Mayor of the city of Boston. I don't see how we can change that. If the Governor chooses to authorize the firing of cannon on the Common, I don't think an ordinance would stop the firing of blank cartridges or anything else. I would leave the ordinance of 1872 just where it is, putting the authority with the Mayor or City Council, just where it should be. I don't see the object of trying by a little ordinance to prevent the military authorities from doing so. The right never has been abused in but one instance. Once, at midnight, some firing is said to have been done, and that is the gravamen of the charge now. It has done a great deal of good. It stirs the blood of the citizens to hear the cannon fire, and we know that a large class of citizens like that peculiar way of demonstrating their joy on certain occasions. While it does no serious injury there is no reason why it should be curtailed. The ordinance of 1872 fixed it and I see no reason why we should not leave it there.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I think I can correct my friend from Ward 11. The ordinance of 1872 did not come from the Committee on Ordinances. It was adopted in this hall, and the report of the committee was afterward amended. This was the result of the action of one member of the Council, and not of the committee. The firing of cannon at midnight in the midst of the city, on the occasion of the visit of a semi-military body from Philadelphia, did frighten people, and in fact killed one person—at least one person, who was very sick, died the next day. Of course she might have died any way, but we don't want to hasten the death even of persons who live in Ward 6. The Governor is the head of the military authority of the Commonwealth, but he has nothing to do with firing cannon, except on some great occasion. In this particular case there was no authority given; they did think of getting permission from the City Hall, but could n't find any one here. All I hear is that I live in Ward 6, and I don't think that is the right way to treat an intelligent body. We control the use of Boston Common so far as playing ball is concerned, and the firing of cannon is as great a nuisance as playing ball. I defy my friend to produce any better reason for opposing this than sneers against Ward 6.

Mr. Blackmar—If the gentleman wishes us to advance arguments he should advance arguments himself. It is true this firing was done at midnight, but why were not these parties punished? It is a direct imputation against the military authorities. Something has been in violation of the ordinances, and it is said simply, "Some one has violated the ordinance, then take it away from the military."

Mr. Perkins—If the term military authorities were clearly understood I should be perfectly willing to have it so. But we don't want these obscure officers firing cannon on the Common on every occasion.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—I am one of those peculiar people guilty of living in Ward 6. It appears to me this whole argument is in a nutshell. The city takes care of these grounds and should have control of them, and it is a very good reason for these persons who wish to use these grounds to apply to the Mayor. That is in itself a sufficient reason why the ordinance should pass.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—As I understand it, the difficulty has been due to what has been referred to by my friend from Ward 6. The "duly authorized military authority of the Commonwealth" has been construed by every military company to be within its own power and control; that is, every battery would think that it was such duly authorized military authority. Undoubtedly, if you insert instead of the "duly authorized military authority" the "Governor or Commander-in-Chief of the military forces of the Commonwealth, or the Mayor of the city of Boston," then the real difficulty would be remedied. The difficulty is simply that every military company considers itself the duly authorized military authority of the Commonwealth. I would move to amend by inserting the words, "by the Governor of the Commonwealth, or the City Council or Mayor of Boston" after the words "duly authorized," and strike out the words "military authority of the Commonwealth."

The President ruled that the amendment was not in order, the question being on indefinite postponement.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I would be glad to vote for an indefinite postponement, or for the amendment of the gentleman from Ward 12.

Mr. Dacey withdrew his motion to indefinitely postpone.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 moved that the Council recede from its former action.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12—In reply to the gentleman from Ward 11, that no injury had been done by firing cannon on the Common, I would state that on the 4th of last July a neighbor of mine had a daughter who was very sick. He went out and tried to persuade the officers to stop firing, but they would not, and so great was his sympathy for his daughter that he was attacked with bleeding of the lungs. It is simply a question whether the feeling of humanity is stronger than the desire to burn powder on the Common.

The motion to recede was carried.

Mr. Dean renewed the offer of his amendment and it was adopted, and the order as amended was passed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following papers came up as unfinished business and were acted upon, in concurrence:

Order to pay Professor Joseph Winlock, Director of the Observatory of Harvard College, $500, for furnishing true time to the city of Boston. Passed.

Order authorizing the approaches to the new drops of East Boston (North) Ferry to be paved with small granite blocks, at an expense not exceeding $5000. Passed.

THE OLD MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

The order to cancel the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse, provided it can be done by payment of expenses incurred by the purchaser, coming up for consideration, Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 said, "As this is a matter which has occasioned considerable debate in the Board of Aldermen, although it don't seem to have had much interest here, I have taken some pains to look into the subject. There seems to be considerable to be said on both sides. It resolves itself into the question of expense to the city in getting rid of the property. I therefore offer the following substitute:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be instructed to ascertain and report the expense to the city of cancelling the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse.

The substitute was adopted, and the order as amended passed.

FROM THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Requests were received from the School Committee that additional accommodations be provided for a primary class in the Bigelow School District, and that a suitable tablet be placed upon the site of the old Roxbury City Hall, bearing the name of "Dudley School." Severally referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

SWETT-STREET HOSPITAL.

A communication was received from the Board of Health representing that the Swett-street Smallpox Hospital has remained unoccupied since March 15 last, and that two men have to be employed there as watchmen at an expense of $3 per day each. The board request that some disposition may be made of the building.

The communication was referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Health.

SALARY OF THE PORT PHYSICIAN.

A communication was received from the Board of Health calling attention to the duties of the Port Physician and the salary of $1000 which it was understood should be increased $600 per year, as the custom has been heretofore. The Board of Directors of Public Institutions, by the advice of the City Solicitor, have decided that they have no authority to make such an increase, and the Board of Health ask the City Council to take such action as will fully compensate Dr. Fisher for his services.

Accompanying the above is a communication to the same effect from the Port Physician.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the communications were referred to the Joint Committee on Public Institutions.

REPORT OF THE ANNEXATION COMMISSION.

The majority and minority reports of the Annexation Commission (City Doc. 105) were presented in print, accepted and sent up. The majority report is substantially as follows:

The commission was organized January 29, 1873. At various times meetings have been held, and committees from the towns of Brookline, Brighton and West Roxbury, and a commission from the city of Charlestown, appointed to advocate the annexation of their towns and city, were received and heard. As the city of Boston had no map that would convey a comprehensive idea of the geography of our city and surrounding towns, the commission early prepared one, under the direction of the City Surveyor, Thomas W. Davis, representing all the territory embraced in the order. The several towns and cities reported upon have been visited on different occasions, and inquiry has been pushed in every avenue of research open to us, in order that all the light attainable might be thrown upon the questions involved in the scheme presented.

Hamilton A. Hill, appointed on the commission in place of J. Tisdale Bradlee, resigned, having made arrangements to engage in business in England, left this country in the latter part of April. Before going he strenuously urged the commission to make their report in full immediately; but as no action had been taken in the matter, and important legislation on the subject was at that time pending at the State House, and time had not elapsed sufficient to obtain a knowledge of the facts requisite to an advised conclusion, and no opportunity having been offered of visiting the towns and cities under consideration, and particularly as no decisive action could be taken in the premises before fall, the majority of the commission deemed any report at that time premature and injudicious. But Mr. Hill, having written a report, submitted it to the Board, and this, so far as it recommends the annexation of Brookline, Brighton and West Roxbury, the undersigned unqualifiedly approve. The majority of the commission, however, feel constrained to say, that, having entered upon their duties without bias or prejudice, they justify any conclusions in which they may differ from Mr. Hill as the result solely of the investigation they have given the subject.

The task assigned to us is specific—"To carefully examine the subject of the annexation of certain towns and cities to the city of Boston, in all its bearings, and to report upon the financial, industrial and sanitary questions concerned in the matter." In the furtherance of this object, a copy of the statistical tables before alluded to was sent to the clerk of each of the following-named cities and towns: Cambridge, Somerville, Brookline, Charlestown, West Roxbury, Brighton; and, though not included in the order, to the town clerks of Everett, Revere, Malden, Watertown, Medford, Winthrop, Chelsea.

As three of the towns enumerated in the order, namely, Brookline, Brighton and West Roxbury, are without any adequate supply of water, the wants of Brookline, in this respect, being already pressing, and as the subject is one that has been regarded as of vital importance, by the municipalities of all time, we have felt justified in devoting a portion of our report to a consideration of the relevancy of this subject to the whole plan submitted to us.

Aside from the reasons suggested in connection with the water question, and independent of the advantages to be secured by receiving any one of the towns or cities named in the order, some points may be presented in favor of the annexation of all of them. By this means we would establish concert of action in projecting and carrying out improvements in which the several communities have a common interest: reclaiming and filling marsh lands; constructing systems of sewerage; laying out main thoroughfares; locating engine houses, police stations, and schoolhouses; and, in brief, in conducting the business of nearly every department of a town or municipal government, particularly that having charge of the public health, may be mentioned; for it must be admitted that the spread of contagious diseases cannot be checked by the existence of imaginary lines, and the consequences of a condition of things in one of the towns or cities under discussion which would engender an epidemic there, must, to an almost equal degree, be borne by all the rest.

The Charles River is to the city of Boston what the lungs are to the human body. Yet into this stream not only our own city, but Cambridge, Somerville, Waltham, Brighton, West Roxbury and Charlestown already empty more or less of their sewage; and Brookline is constructing a large sewer to contribute the drainage of that town to the general mass of filth; this, too, notwithstanding the remonstrances of authorities on the subject whose evidence it is dangerous to reject; who denounce the system, or want of system, at present pursued, and warn us that the river is already overloaded. This condition of things undoubtedly furnishes a factor, not inconsiderable, in swelling the death rates of our city, in which respect Boston suffers by comparison with nearly every large city in the land.

The rapid multiplication of buildings upon the Back Bay and adjacent portions of the city renders it imperative that early action be taken to prevent further encroachments upon the purity of these waters; but there can be no hope of any comprehensive plan for protection in this direction except by overlooking and regulating all the sewage entering into the river from both its banks. Either State legislation must be invoked, vesting ample power in a board of health to control the entire district, or the territory must come under the management of municipal government. As bearing upon this the report quotes from the fourth annual report of the State Board of Health, pp. 6, 7, 62, 63, 450, 451. Also from Boston (City Doc. No. 92, 1872), Report of Committee on Back Bay Drainage, pp. 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, and from the "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," of the 11th of the present month.

Finally we deem superfluous any lengthy treatment of the importance of good health to our commercial prosperity; to the influence of annexation, upon which latter topic we invite your attention. The annexation of Charlestown, Brookline, Brighton and West Roxbury would give to our city an area, population and valuation as follows:

	Taxable Area in Acres.	Population, 1870.	Valuation, 1873.
Boston.....	9,583	250,513	$693,831,400
Charlestown.....	520	28,323	*34,942,120
Brighton.....	2,370	4,967	14,548,531
Brookline.....	3,883	6,650	28,476,000
West Roxbury.....	6,627½	8,683	25,148,600
Total.....	22,983½	299,136	$793,946,651

*Last year's valuation; not made up for this year at date.

Making our city the fifth ranked by population in the United States, according to the census of 1870, and an area in comparison with New York and Philadelphia as follows:

	Acres.
New York.....	14,502
Philadelphia.....	82,560
Boston.....	22,983½

The question, considered by itself, as to when a city becomes crowded and requires more room for growth, is in its nature deponent; but it seems desirable that it should never be limited as practically to admit of a monopoly of its vacant lands by speculators, and the maintenance of prices therefor that bar men of moderate means employed within its limits from the privileges of citizenship. Perhaps nothing has stimulated the erection of so many neat and inexpensive homes in the city of Philadelphia as the broad area of that city, rendering it not poor economy to build moderate-priced houses upon their lands, while the contracted boundaries of Boston have, with exceptional instances, placed homes of their own beyond the reach of laboring men; have induced the holding of land in large tracts, keeping it out of the market, save at exorbitant prices, and have introduced a system of speculative building that has resulted in the erection of thousands of costly, narrow and inconvenient houses, unsuited to the wants of our people, and in localities wholly unfit. It is not sufficient that a city have room enough; it is further necessary that the space be in a measure equally distributed in different directions, that citizens of every occupation and locality of employment may avail themselves of its advantages.

And a still further consideration that leads your commissioners to deprecate the continued acquisition of territory on one side of our city only, is that it shifts the centre of business, causing it to move in the direction towards which the extension tends, thus increasing values in that quarter at the expense of the sites formerly occupied. Of the community of interest between Boston and the contiguous cities and towns hardly anything new can be said, though the theme, if trite, has lost nothing of its force by age and use. Aside from the industry of Boston, none of the places enumerated in the order are doing sufficient business to warrant anything like their present valuation or population; and if their interests, which centre in Boston, were removed, there is no reason why any considerable portion of their inhabitants should stay with them. Their residents are in almost everything but name our fellow citizens.

One of the principal objects in view, by the towns recommended for annexation by your commissioners, is to obtain a plentiful supply of pure water; while on the other hand the two cities with which we have considered an alliance are provided with works at neighboring lakes that yield quantities not only sufficient for their own consumption, but a large surplus to spare. Boston today is unable to furnish all of her own citizens, and is compelled to make up the deficiency by purchase from Charlestown; the construction of new conduits between Sudbury River, Lake Cochituate and Chestnut Hill Reservoir, and a new main to the city by which an adequate quantity can be obtained, it will require about four years to complete. Meantime Brookline, Brighton and West Roxbury, if annexed, would look to this source in vain. As contingencies have arisen in the past by which we have been temporarily deprived of Cochituate, and are liable to occur in the future, any arrangement by which the danger of calamities imminent in such an event might be averted is of the utmost moment.

Boston should not only have water sufficient, but in such abundance as to admit of its free use with the least possible restrictions. We could offer no greater inducement than this to the location of manufactories in our limits, "with a city rapidly increasing in population and growing daily in business, both of a merchantile and mechanical character"; it is of the highest importance to offer them the advantage of a certain and unlimited supply of water. As an illustration of this the obstruction of the screens of the Chestnut Hill Reservoir by ice two years ago, thereby depriving the city for a part of the day, cost one corporation over $500; and it must be borne in mind that this, or a similar difficulty, is liable to occur so long as we depend solely upon a single source. Happily, however, we have tendered to us, even at our gates, a perfect safeguard and a generous relief, to be secured by the annexation of Charlestown to our city.

In support of the foregoing we quote from Report of Cochituate Water Board, March 13, 1873, pp. 6, 7, 41, 42, 43.

If we look to Sudbury River alone in our extremity, as has been said, we cannot satisfy the towns recommended for annexation for three or four years the cost of the works there is to be enormous and disproportionate to the quantity vouchsafed. The Commission here quote from the report of the Cochituate Water Board, March 13, 1873, pp. 58, 59, 48, 44, from which it will be seen that Boston is not now, and for the next four years will not be, adequately provided with water; a fact which might well cause alarm to our citizens, were it not that by the proposed annexation we are offered the boon of a copious supply.

So far as quantity is concerned, it is fully demonstrated that Mystic Lake can not only furnish the cities and towns now depending upon it, but by addition of another pump of the same cost and capacity as the one put in operation last year—cost, $68,250; capacity, 8,000,000 gallons per day—and laying additional mains to connect with Boston, could also probably satisfy the wants of Boston and all the towns recommended for annexation beside, at once, and, if necessary, without the use of Cochituate at all. And when the time shall come that Cochituate and Mystic will be insufficient, we are close upon the period when Cochituate and Sudbury will be equally inadequate.

Of the quality of Mystic water, since an intelligent treatment of this topic requires the knowledge of an expert, your commissioners only submit evidence from the Fourth Annual Report of the State Board of Health. p. 453; and from report of the Cochituate Water Board, March 13, 1873, p. 66.

We would say of the places not named in the order, viz., Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Revere, Winthrop Watertown and Medford, that the general knowledge of any one acquainted with their locality and the suburbs of Boston, independent of any exact statistical information, would cause him to hesitate before consenting to incorporate any of them at present as a part of our city. It is true that if these, and all intervening, were under the control of Boston, improvements might now be projected, at comparatively little cost, which, adhered to and completed, in years to come would go far toward redeeming the city from its unhappy fame for irregularity of plan and absence of design, but this is rather desirable, than at once expedient. We believe, in the language of the order, that their annexation is only a question of time, but do not think that the time is come for such action.

There having been no legislation calling upon the people of Boston to pass upon the annexation of these cities, as is the case of Charlestown, West Roxbury, Brookline and Brighton, the expression of opinions or arguments by your commissioners in favor of these acquisitions would obviously be wholly gratuitous. We have, however, secured the preparation of the tables for these cities quite as fully as for Charlestown and the towns recommended, and we cannot forbear urging a recognition by all interested of the innumerable gains to be derived mutually from the consolidation of these municipalities with the city of Boston. In regard to the annexation of these towns, your commissioners are of one mind, both for the reasons set forth in Mr. Hill's report and others deduced from a knowledge of the facts compiled in the tables appended.

Since the undersigned have been led to conclusions differing from those arrived at by Mr. Hill as to the advisability of the annexation of Charlestown to our city, they deem it incumbent upon them to give something of the reasons they have for taking the position they hold. The area of Charlestown we have placed above at 520 acres, and these are the figures returned to the Tax Commission; but they are evidently incorrect, for the assessors lay a tax upon 23,447,220 square feet, and they of course do not include streets, the navy yard, State Prison, churches, cemeteries, city buildings, squares, etc. Railroad enterprise is also reclaiming many acres from the sea, and altogether the city probably covers an area of more than eight hundred acres. The farthest point of this territory is less than two and a quarter miles distant from our City Hall, and substantially the whole population is inclosed in a circle described by a radius from City Hall to Chester park; while the two City Halls are, in an air line, about a mile apart. To this purpose the commission quote from the argument of Hon. Ellis W. Morton, on the annexation of Charlestown and Somerville to Boston, before the Committee of the Legislature on Towns, February 27, 1871.

The statistics, coupled with the fact that Charlestown runs into and intercepts our county, afford the most substantial grounds for every argument based upon propinquity of situation. By act of the Legislature, the city of Charlestown has the exclusive right to take water from upper Mystic Lake; the yield is practically inexhaustible, being estimated at 30,000,000 gallons per day, yet their admirable water works have a capacity equal to two-thirds of this enormous supply. By these means Charlestown has not only procured an abundance of pure water, but—and in this respect it is something unique in municipal enterprise—the city has established and is carrying on a business that is paying a revenue that will eventually extinguish the water debt. Thus they have permanent contracts for the sale of water to East Boston, Chelsea, Somerville and Everett; from these and its own rates the proceeds were last year as follows: Boston, $45,397 46; Chelsea, $28,475 95; Somerville, $19,879 63; Everett, $1818 73; Charlestown, $85,672 96; Due to January 1, $20,713 87. Total for the year, $201,958 60.

To maintain the works for the year ending March 1st, 1873—cost, $63,335 54; to which add interest on Water Bonds, $77,376 91; total, $140,712 45.

This sum, $140,712 45, taken from income, $201,958 60, leaves $61,246 15; this did not give any surplus, indeed, did not equal the expenditures; for the construction not being completed, $97,071 51 had to be charged to that account; but the construction account was closed on the first day of last January, and all sums expended since that time go to the maintenance account. This, for the six months ending July 1, 1873, amounted to $47,470 41, and it will not average more than this, unless the demand be greatly augmented in the future. Doubling these figures for a year we obtain the following satisfactory result: Maintenance account for one year, $94,940 82; interest on Water Bonds, $77,376 91; total, $172,376 73, which, taken from the receipts of last year, $201,958 60, leaves a balance of $29,640 97.

In connection with this it may be mentioned that the rates in Charlestown are less than in Boston or Cambridge; thus, they charge for one closet only to each tenement house, however many there may be in fact; and to large consumers their rates are three cents per one hundred gallons, for the first five thousand gallons used in a quarter, consisting of seventy-five days; and above this, as the quantity increases, the rate diminishes to two cents per one hundred gallons, or only two-thirds the price in Boston or Cambridge, where the rates are uniformly three cents. The debt contracted for the construction of these works amounts to $1,461,259 41, nearly the whole of which is represented by bonds to run from ten to thirty years from date—over $400,000—bearing five per cent. interest, and none more than six, all interest payable in currency.

That such a reserve as this for the city of Boston would preclude the possibility of a water famine need not be urged, while without it the calamities of an hour may teach our people the dangers of relying upon a single source, and that the only way in which Boston can, with safety, dispense with this species of "foreign aid" is by making it domestic.

Charlestown has a water front of nearly three miles in extent, measuring around the city in an unbroken line. Of this the Navy Yard occupies about 4600 feet. If the length of wharves be computed, it will add nearly two and a half miles more, and improvements now being carried forward are rapidly expanding the available wharf privileges; and this suggests some consideration of the terminal conveniences which the city offers to railroad companies for handling their freight; opening to them an easy access to the finest wharves in the harbor. Some corporations have seen and taken advantage of this: The Boston, Lowell & Nashua have already expended about $300,000 in the improvement of their purchase from the Mystic-River Corporation, and contemplate a further outlay of $700,000; this will reclaim over thirty acres, and give them a water line of 4500 feet, to which a draw through Chelsea Bridge would add 2500 feet more.

The Mystic River Corporation have projected and begun work upon betterments similar to those of the Boston, Lowell & Nashua Railroad, though more extensive, and will recover about sixty acres, with a front a little broader than that of the railroad. The River Corporation reserve a connection with the railroad, and a track will run quite around their wharf, and, from its situation, it is altogether likely that some railroad company will, at no distant day, become the owner of this property. The Fitchburg Railroad now has a terminus in Charlestown. The Eastern has taken 400,000 feet near the centre of the city, on which they purpose erecting a freight depot. This company will spend about $750,000 here, and it is probable that the heavy business growing out of the system of consolidation cultivated by this road will render the accession by it of the State's prison lands desirable, or absolutely necessary, when that institution is removed, in accordance with the legislation of last winter.

These data seem to warrant the conclusion that Charlestown will become, and even now is, a principal channel through which sets the ebb and flow of a broad and extensive internal, coast and foreign trade hearing on its current the freight of the Dominions, the Northern and New England States, and a share of that of the West. The statistics show that our exports have nearly doubled during the past two years, caused principally by the augmented facilities for the shipment of grain; and the greater improvements in this respect anticipated by the Boston, Lowell & Nashua Railroad, the Mystic-River and other corporations, the building of wharves and elevators, and the early completion of the Hoosac and its connections, unerringly foretell that Boston is destined to take front rank for the exportation of the heightened products of the country.

For the furtherance and attainment of this, Charlestown affords invaluable accommodations, and a large portion of her territory will ultimately be devoted to the objects indicated. To encourage, protect, and fully develop, therefore, every material aid, it is, in the opinion of your commissioners, of the first importance that that territory should be a part of and controlled by the City of Boston. The business will require wide wharves, safe docks, harbor, Fire and Police departments, broad and solid avenues, substantial bridges; and, in general, works of a character and on a scale which a small municipality could not, and in this instance ought not to, provide, and which can only be secured by the union of the two cities. The argument of Hon. G. W. Warren, before the Legislative Committee on Towns, May 4, 1870, is quoted in this connection.

The above allusion to the navy yard suggests the reflection that exempting so large an area from taxation is an injury only to a city so limited, that it crowds out people who would otherwise be residents, and if Charlestown had enough other available lands, this institution would be no more a burden to that city than is the Common to Boston, and annexation will cure the evil in this quarter which they experience; besides, Boston cannot afford to do without the yard, for nothing else would so insure prompt and liberal appropriations from the General Government for the protection of our harbor. In detail, it can be said that Charlestown is already provided with water, paved streets, sidewalks, City Hall, police station, engine houses, schoolhouses, library, public baths, Fire Department, fire alarm, sewerage, and generally all the necessities possessed by any ward in Boston, and comparatively little extra expenditure will be incurred in consequence of this annexation.

Such action would add largely to our population and wealth, and thus to our commercial importance. As to the citizens so received, it is interesting to notice how favorably Charlestown compares with every other city and town embraced in the order.

The following table is from the United States census of 1870:

	Total	Native.	Foreign.	Colored.

Finally, your commissioners believe that the future of Boston is, to a great degree, involved in the questions herein presented. Their principal reasons for advocating the annexation of the city and towns recommended may be briefly summarized: The protection of public health, by organizing under one head a general system of sewerage, demands it; an abundance of water from independent sources will be thus obtained; concert of action in projecting improvements of mutual benefit will be secured; territory for houses at moderate cost within the city's limits will be acquired; opportunities to foster and encourage our foreign trade by rendering substantial aid, and facilities afforded; increased wealth and numbers will give us additional consideration; and a people whose objects, ventures and interests are identical will be brought together under one municipal government.

The progress of a community depends not upon felicity of site, fertility of soil, nor the command of natural resources. If it did the cities of Mexico and St. Augustine would not be more celebrated for their age than development, and Boston, without a mile of navigable internal water system, the metropolis of a country "that relies for its natural exports upon the rigor of its climate and the hardness of its soil," would not be constantly crowded for room. The enterprise of a people is the controlling factor to solve the problem of their destiny, and its unceasing exercise the sure guarantee of unlimited prosperity.

Respectfully submitted,

WESTON LEWIS,
L. FOSTER MORSE.

Boston, Sept. 18, 1873.

The minority report is signed by Hamilton A. Hill. He begins by citing the precedents for annexation both in the experience of Boston and London and says, Undoubtedly a keener interest is manifested in various propositions at the present time under discussion for enlarging the area of Boston, by the people of the suburban towns which it is sought to annex to the city, than by our own citizens, or, to discriminate more accurately, by those who transact business in Boston, but have their dwellings in the suburbs, as compared with those whose houses as well as their warehouses and offices are here. And it is not strange that this should be the case, because the former class is constantly reminded of the many inconveniences and complications which come from a divided citizenship and a twofold allegiance, and, naturally enough, seeks some way of deliverance from them. And yet, in truth, those who have their residence and cast their votes in Boston are, to say the least, as deeply concerned in every annexation project which is or may be mooted, as their neighbors beyond the city limits, and it is incumbent upon them to recognize this and to act upon it. The undersigned cannot but see that, in the broadest view, the interests of Boston and of the immediate suburbs, as effected by annexation, either in general or in particular instances, are and must be substantially in accord.

After alluding to the growth of Boston during the quarter of a century ending 1870, and giving interesting trade statistics, Mr. Hill predicts that an era of commercial growth and prosperity lies immediately before our city. It is important that the city should have room to grow. A large portion of what is now known as the city proper will shortly be devoted to business purposes, and it will be impossible to find room for all the private residences, the number of which will of course increase with the increase of business, within the present municipal limits. With no new annexation of territory, the flow of population from the city to the suburbs, although checked temporarily by the acquisition of Roxbury and Dorchester, must continue, and ultimately in greater volume than ever before.

Mr. Hill considers the scheme introduced into the Legislature last winter too arbitrary in its character, to be adopted as a whole, and not altogether practicable, in view of the number and variety of the interests which it seeks, but in his opinion would fail, should it become a law, to harmonize. The feeling undoubtedly prevails largely among our citizens that such further annexation of territory as may be made ought to take place, not as has been the case in the past, town by town, and under the pressure of an immediate necessity, but by the acquisition at one time of territory sufficiently extensive to enable the City Government to provide in advance, upon a well defined system and on an ample scale, for highways, water, drainage and sewerage, and for other wants which Boston has or will have in common with the cities and towns now surrounding it. Mr. Senator Potter's plan is generally regarded in Boston as proposing to go further and faster than is expedient or perhaps safe, providing, as it does, for a complete organic unification, the advance which it is sought to gain at once and by a simple stride, seems much beyond what it is wise to attempt.

II. Another plan now before the public is the annexation to Boston of the whole or a large portion of the remaining territory bounded by the Neponset River on the south, the Charles on the north and west, and Mother Brook on the west. The various towns inclosed by these streams, manifestly, for many purposes, form a naturally bounded district by themselves. So far as relates to drainage, sewerage and highways, if to nothing else, they ought to be under one general and comprehensive system of government. To allow them all to continue to regulate these matters, each in its own way, can only lead to permanent confusion, and, in reference to drainage and sewerage, must greatly endanger the public health. A bill now before a committee of the Legislature provides for the appointment of a commission, consisting of three competent persons, two of the number to be civil engineers, to devise and report a comprehensive plan for the grades, streets, avenues, drainage and water supply of all that territory which is inclosed by Neponset River, Charles River and Mother Brook, embracing the city of Boston, the whole of the towns of Brookline, Brighton, West Roxbury and Newton, and a portion of the town of Hyde Park; and to do the same also for the territory lying between the Charles and the Mystic. In the arrangement of the plans, the bill provides that the present and prospective wants of the territory shall be fully taken into the account.

Mr. Hill then considers the location of Brookline, Brighton, West Roxbury, Hyde Park and Newton, their relation to each other and to Boston, which are peculiarly favorable for annexation.

III. Another plan for municipal consolidation, embraced within the first which has passed under review, and although independent of, not necessarily conflicting with the second, has reference to the cluster of cities and towns lying to the north of the Charles and on the north shore of the harbor, and thus enumerated in Mr. Senator Potter's bill: "The towns of Watertown, Belmont, Arlington, Medford, Malden and Everett, and the cities of Charlestown, Cambridge and Somerville, in the county of Middlesex; the towns of Revere and Winthrop, and the city of Chelsea, in the county of Suffolk."

Much that has been said in this report upon the oneness of interest which subsists between the city and the suburbs has force in connection with the towns just named, and yet in many essential particulars these towns do not sustain such intimacy of relation to the metropolis as the other suburban communities to which reference has been made. Situated on the other side of a broad stream, they must of necessity have their own systems of drainage, sewerage, highways, and water supply. As relates to all these very important matters, they, or most of them, have everything in common with each other, but nothing in common with Boston. It is possible that the people of these cities and towns will see it to be for their interest mutually to unite together under one municipal government, and, in this way, to administer for the common good, everything relating to the district in which they reside. It is possible also that such a municipality might, in the course of time, become united with the city of Boston.

After briefly noticing the arguments in favor of annexing Charlestown to Boston, Mr. Hill says, There is no evidence that the annexation of Charlestown to Boston will induce the shipment of an additional ton of merchandise by these lines, or that it will secure the slightest reduction in the rates of freight charged upon them. The Erie and the Pennsylvania railroads have all their termini opposite New York, in New Jersey, not only in another municipality, but in another State; yet it has never been claimed that the commerce of the metropolis has suffered in any way from the circumstance. The Cunard and White Star steam vessels also stop on the Jersey shore, and it does not appear that these ships have ever found themselves at a disadvantage on this account, as compared with the ocean steam lines which come directly to the city wharves. Boston and Charlestown constitute one port under both federal and State laws, and it will make little difference to any steam lines coming hither, or to our merchants, whether the wharves at which they lie are included within the municipality of Boston or not.

Mr. Hill would not be understood as intimating that the time will not come when it will be desirable to unite Charlestown with Boston; but, however it may be with regard to Charlestown, it is not believed that the immediate annexation of that city is demanded by the best interests of Boston, nor is it judged to be expedient at the present time to extend the municipal limits beyond Charles River.

In conclusion, Mr. Hill speaks at length of the metropolitan form of Government adopted in London, and says perhaps the metropolitan form of government might, in some particulars, be adopted to advantage in and about Boston. For the territory between the Charles, the Neponset, and Mother Brook, an absolute municipal unity seems desirable. It might be well to establish a metropolitan Board of Public Works, to superintend and regulate all matters pertaining to drainage and sewerage in Boston and the suburbs, and especially for the protection of the river Charles; or these duties might be performed by a superintendent, under the direction of the State Board of Health. It is worthy of consideration, further, whether the powers and duties of the Board of Health recently organized for the city cannot be advantageously extended so that a metropolitan scope may be imparted to it, instead of the strictly municipal sphere of action to which the board is now restricted. The cities and towns in the metropolitan district, which is called Boston, have much in common in reference to all matters of health, and these matters should be regulated in the interest and for the benefit jointly of all of them.

There can be no further question about the future of Boston. Its position as a great commercial and manufacturing city is assured. It is only necessary that improvements now in progress shall be promptly completed; that the enterprise of recent years, and of the present time, shall continue to be displayed; and that the possibilities of the city for enlargement shall be steadily borne in mind by its people, and be acted upon by them. All legislation relating to the city should be in harmony with the prospective development which lies before it; and all local plans should be laid out with breadth of view, and with confidence of expectation. Especially, should the form and character and scope of its municipal government be such as shall efficiently protect its interests, faithfully foster its growth, and worthily maintain its reputation for solidity and integrity, among the sisterhood of cities in the American Union.

THE OLD FRANKLIN SCHOOLHOUSE.

A communication was received from T. J. B. House, superintendent of the Baptist Church Extension Society, expressing a desire to obtain the use of the old Franklin Schoolhouse, or a part of it, for Sunday school and other religious services on the Sabbath. Referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 presented the petition of Leonard Pickering, to erect a wooden building on Border street; referred to Joint Standing Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Mr. Weston of Ward 1 submitted the petition of the East Boston Railroad Company, to accept an act of incorporation. On Mr. Weston's motion the petition was referred to a Joint Special Committee. The Chair appointed as such committee Messrs. Weston of Ward 1, Pickering of Ward 6 and Kinsley of Ward 3.

Mr. Kelly of Ward 15 presented the petition of Timothy McCarty, for leave to erect a wooden building; referred to Joint Special Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, that an additional appropriation was needed for the new grammar schoolhouse on L street, in addition to the amount already authorized. They recommend the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the order passed Sept. 12, 1873, authorizing the Committee on Public Buildings to complete the furnishing of the grammar schoolhouse, L street, at an estimated cost of $5000, be and the same is hereby rescinded.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to complete the fitting, furnishing and fencing of the new Grammar Schoolhouse on L street, at an estimated cost of seventy-five hundred dollars.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the reserved fund the sum of seventy-five hundred dollars; the same to be added to the amount already authorized for the Grammar Schoolhouse, L street.

The orders were read once and laid over.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred the orders from the School Committee surrendering the Oliver Primary Schoolhouse, East Boston, to the City Council, reported that the building is not needed, and the time has arrived for selling the same, and they recommend the passage of an order to that effect.

On motion of Mr. Caton, the rules were suspended, and the order was passed.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, reported that a lot, containing 7600 feet, on Dudley and Forest streets, had been purchased for $11,391, and plans have been prepared and estimates received for the erection thereon of a hook and ladder house for Company No. 4, pursuant to an order of the City Council dated May 12, 1873, the estimated cost of the same to be $21,000. They therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying orders—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to erect a hook and ladder house on land owned by the city on Dudley and Forest streets, at an estimated cost of twenty-one thousand dollars.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $21,000, the same to be applied to the erection of Hook and Ladder House No. 4.

The orders were read once and laid over.

Mr. Page of Ward 9, from the Committee on Armories, presented the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $450 in repairing and furnishing the armory occupied by Company B, First Battalion of Light Artillery, M. V. M., said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

On motion of Mr. Page, the rules were suspended and the order was passed—yeas 46, nays 0.

Mr. Page, from the same committee, submitted the following:

Ordered, That until otherwise ordered, there be allowed and paid for rent of Armory for Company I, First Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., in American Hall, Ward 16, the sum of five hundred and seventy-five dollars per annum, beginning on the first day of June, A. D. 1873, said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Order to allow $1200 per annum for rent of armory of Company D, First Regiment, M. V. M., at 1806 Washington street.

Ordered, That until otherwise ordered, there be allowed and paid for rent of Armory for Company I, Ninth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at No. 544 Washington street, the sum of twelve hundred dollars per annum, beginning on the first day of August, 1873, said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Severally read once and laid over.

REBUILDING WASHINGTON STREET.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the order for issuing of permits to build on westerly side of Washington street, between Boylston and Avery streets, was taken from the table.

Mr. Perkins—The Committee are unanimously in favor of the order and opposed to the running of the street through to Fayette court, and the Street Commissioners are opposed to it also. So there seems to be no reason why people should n't have permits to build at once.

The order was passed.

PROTECTION OF CITY HALL.

On motion of Mr. Loring of Ward 12, the report and order authorizing fixtures to be placed on City Hall Building, for E. S. Tobey's invention for extinguishing fires, were taken from the table.

Mr. Loring—I understand that the stand pipes are already in the building, and the expense would be but a trifle, not more than two or three hundred dollars.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I would like to inquire whether there is any stop valve in this stand pipe. The object is to use the present stand pipe, and that does away with the objection raised before. The only objection to large standpipes is, not that they are not a protection to a building, but if they are numerous in a building the water will escape in very large quantities in case the building falls during a fire. So far as the present building is concerned the use of the present stand-pipe would answer that objection. It would be well if we set the example at the outset of having stop valves a suitable distance from the building. That would obviate a great difficulty. It has been suggested, however, that this has been attended to by the Water Board, and I will cheerfully vote for the order.

The order was passed in concurrence.

REORGANIZATION OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

On motion of Mr. West of Ward 16, the report and evidence on the reorganization of the Fire Department, and the cause of the fire May 30, 1873, and ordinance recommended therein to establish a Fire Department (printed City Doc. No. 97), were taken from the table.

The ordinance was read by the President, and on the question of giving it a second reading Mr. West said—

I do not propose to say much at this time. This committee have given a careful, full, patient and thorough investigation to this matter, and have presented their conclusions in their report, which, I trust, every member has read, so that we may all know what we are talking about, and what it is proposed to do, and that proper action may be taken.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—At last we have come to the consideration of the question of the reorganization of the Fire Department. There seems to be no one who disputes the necessity of some radical change, and the question is, What shall be done? The majority of the committee to whom the question was submitted recommend the appointment of a permanent, paid, Board of Commissioners; the minority recommend the abolishment of the present Joint Committee on the Fire Department, and in its place to establish a committee of the Board of Aldermen alone. The Standing Committee on the Fire Department in their report recommend no change in these respects, but some changes in details—increasing the strength of the department as it is.

These three reports do not conflict in their recommendations as to changes tending to increase the strength of the force and the efficacy of the water supply. The division of opinion relates solely to the management. The report of the majority is so full in its argument, favoring a Board of Commissioners, that were I assured it had received such a careful study by all the members of the Council that its points were fixed in their minds, I should deem it unnecessary to add anything here. But believing that committees should give the reasons for their conclusions in this chamber, I shall briefly state why I am with the majority in their recommendations.

The prevention and control of fires is a matter deemed of vital importance by all; and the whole community, after the experience of the past year, are keenly alive to the importance of a better protection than that which now exists. While we are threatened constantly by attack from an enemy, we should stop at nothing which would render our lives and property secure. The majority of the committee take the ground that we have the force at hand, but failing to be under a proper system of organization and supervision, it fails to render the security we must have. There is nothing new in the principle of commissioners being at the head of a department, rather than a committee. So that we are taking no step which experience has not demonstrated to be a success. The question was repeatedly asked of witnesses in the public hearings of the committee, by the Alderman signing the minority report, "Do you of your own knowledge know anything of the working of commissions?" What is a commissioner? The Alderman himself was a commissioner, but did not seem to be aware of the fact. "Worcester" says a commissioner is one empowered to act in some matter of business for one or more persons, or for a government; so that a committee is a commission, and therefore there need be no prejudice in the name.

The committee believe that the Boston Fire Department, consisting of 497 men, 23 engines, 10 hose carriages, 7 hook and ladder carriages, 80 horses, 21 engine houses, 8 hose and 6 ladder houses, all requiring constant care and attention to be kept up to the highest degree of efficiency, at an annual expense of not less than six hundred thousand dollars (including the fire alarm telegraph), and with a vast amount of detail to be looked after in the purchasing of supplies, making repairs, etc., etc., is altogether more than can properly be looked after and economically managed by any committee (either joint or that of one branch alone) of the City Government. This has been found true in all the larger cities and many of the smaller ones in this country. We have in our own experience since the great fire a to me striking illustration of this fact.

Why was a commission appointed to investigate the cause of the great fire, rather than the Committee on the Fire Department, as all matters pertaining to that department come under its inquiry? Not because there was any want of confidence in that committee, but because no committee with its other duties to perform could give proper time and attention to this question of absorbing interest and importance; and also in fairness it should be said that a more impartial body should make the investigation. Well, that commission, in their able report, made many well-considered and proper recommendations for at once increasing the efficiency of the Fire Department. Ten months have passed, and yet scarcely any of these recommendations have been carried into effect, and the reason is that authority and responsibility is so diluted between the engineers and the committee, that it takes months for a matter to be decided by them which three commissioners should and would decide in a week; and further delay is caused by questions like the purchasing of an engine or the location of a house having to be submitted to the consideration of the City Council, and again delayed for all the members of both branches to discuss it, without apparently realizing the necessity of few words and prompt action, especially when life and property are at stake.

This is but an illustration of what the committee believe to be a fault in the present system of the management of the Fire Department. It is in the hands of too many; and again, if you reduce the numbers to a committee of Aldermen alone, as the minority report recommends, you still have it in the hands of those who cannot from necessity give that attention to it that its superior importance demands. We say they cannot give the attention, because it is well known that their attention and time is divided upon a great many other public interests. The same men must be on several committees, all of which demand attention, and it is impossible for any committee to have other than a superficial knowledge of a department comprising so much of vitally important detail as this.

Your committee believe its importance demands more of time and experience than is possessed by any committee with other interests to look after and under whose supervision it would be but for a single year, which is their term of office. We not only so conclude because it accords with our own judgment, but the evidence of those who have had experience in the City Government and on the Fire Department Committee is the same; and I especially ask your attention to the testimony of ex-Alderman Plumer, on the 13th page of the majority report. I will use his own words "In my judgment (alluding to the locating of an engine house) if the matter had been in the hands of a commission, they would have accomplished the whole thing in a very few weeks. Everything is done in that way. You cannot do anything unless you have a committee of eight men present. The chairman of the Committee on Fire Department is expected to be here, or he is here, if he attends to his duty, every day. During the time I had the honor of being chairman of the committee, my first business (every morning) was to call on the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department, and see if anything was wanted. Gentlemen can readily see if this department is placed in the hands of one, two or three individuals, who are looking after it all the time, the wants of the community and the wants of the Fire Department will be better known and more speedily met than they can be under the present system, when you meet together once a week, or once a fortnight, or once a month, and the chief business is to have a dinner over at Young's or Parker's. I hope, sir, (and I have petitioned for that as one of the objects) that this department may be taken from the hands of the City Government and placed in the hands of a commission."

Then, again, to the statement of an ex-Alderman and ex-fireman, Hon. Jonas Fitch, on the 108th page. In answer to the question whether a committee of three from the Board of Aldermen alone would be more satisfactory than now, he says, "I don't know that it would. I believe that the great difficulty in the Board of Aldermen is in consequence of its changes. To have efficient management in any branch of business you want the men permanent; you want to get the proper men into the proper place and keep them there; this changing brings new men in every year and they have got to learn the business."

We had plenty of testimony in the same direction; in fact it is all one way. Even the minority themselves admit, it seems to me, not only the principle, but go farther and advocate our own views, if I understand them. They admit the principle by recommending the concentration of power and responsibility upon a fewer number, and instead of a joint committee of eight they advise a committee of but three, and also the necessity of a commission they admit, when as they say on the nineteenth page of their report, "The undersigned, anxious to obtain all the information necessary without saddling the city with the greater burden of a commission, sought for it elsewhere and were rewarded when they had examined the Birdsill Holly System at Lockport, N. Y.," etc.

Now the minority having found after their anxious investigation the right thing (they being willing as they had previously stated to do the work of reorganization which the majority proposed to hand over to a commission), do not (themselves) assume the responsibility even to recommend it—nor even that the Fire Department Committee should look into it, but recommend the "passage of the order to secure its examination by persons of skill and then report concerning the same to the City Council." Now the principal feature they bring forward, they propose to have referred to a "skilled commission," thus adopting the principle advocated by the majority of the committee.

As I stated before, on questions of detail the three reports need not necessarily conflict. Whether the Fire Department should have a greater or less number of engines, and permanently paid members, or where they should be located, or what should be their precise duties, or under what discipline, are all questions of importance, and about which we have as decided opinions as the minority of the Fire Department Committee, but we go further and say—first organize properly, and under the proper organization you will have the details best arranged; but without such organization your improvements will be but a partial success, and fall far short of what the citizens desire or the importance of the question demands.

I will but briefly allude to the objections to a Board of Commissioners, as presented by the minority. This first, that it is unnecessary, I think, has already been answered. They say we have something like a commission in the Board of Engineers; that is evidently in the minds of the minority a good feature, but the Board of Engineers have but limited authority, are elected annually, and are not permanently employed in the city's interest looking after the department, and, as a matter of course, an organization whose chief commanders exercise their authority only at fires, and who, themselves, are engaged in various avocations, cannot be up to the standard of discipline and efficiency which we believe ought to exist.

The second objection regarding the expense: We believe that instead of its being increased by a Board of Commissioners, it would be less than the same department would cost under the present system. The salaries of the commissioners placed at the maximum would be more than saved many times by the more economical expenditures required in purchasing of supplies and the repairs upon apparatus done. I will leave to other members of the committee to give statistics bearing upon this point.

The third objection, to the political power such a body would have, I think without foundation. A commissioner appointed by the Mayor—not elected by the people—would have no occasion to exercise the power even if he had it, so far as his own interests were concerned: his position is secure so long as he properly and efficiently discharges its duties; and a watchful, jealous people, who felt that their property and lives were in his hands, would see to it that political power did not interfere with his duties or their interests. There would be another influence commissioners would have to meet, which would tend to keep in check the undue desire for political power. Underwriters would watch them sharply, and would hold them up to the work of efficiently managing the Fire Department. I do not either see how such a board, a new member being appointed every year, could well become corrupt. In New York the Reform Committee did not recommend the removal of the Fire Commissioners, and the testimony before our committee of the delegation of underwriters from New York was most unqualifiedly to their honesty and efficiency.

If we in Boston can have honest Aldermen, we can have honest Commissioners. The statement of the minority that no member of the present Board of Aldermen could be hired for any service which would take his whole time, may or may not be true, but we most fortunately have heads of departments who do give their whole time and receive their salaries, serving the city most faithfully and efficiently, and we therefore propose as a head to the Fire Department, three good men, under whose management we shall have an organization well equipped and disciplined, and second to none in the world. I therefore hope that the Council after due consideration, will adopt the report, and pass the ordinance proposed in the majority report.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I don't propose to discuss this matter at any considerable length, because so far it appears to be unnecessary, and because I fail yet to have heard the first argument in favor of a Fire Commission. I understand that there is a great deal of feeling on this subject, and I have taken a great deal of interest in it. It was the endeavor of all the members of the committee to discharge their duties faithfully. A majority, however, readily saw that so far as their duty was concerned, it could be discharged by the appointment of a commission, and that undoubtedly would be so. We can appoint a commission and readily wash our hands of the responsibility for the department. But after all, is there any need of a commission? Is there anything in the management of the Fire Department that cannot be done by the City Government? That is the question, leaving out all other considerations.

Now, what is the duty of the Fire Committee, strictly? It is admitted—and the legislation of the Commonwealth has been to that end—that engineers are a body of men who are to take entire control and management during a fire. If it is admitted that a body of engineers is not particularly skilled, it must be admitted that the Chief Engineer is the one who must take charge of the management of fires. So clearly was that fixed by the people that the destruction of buildings was taken from the fire wards and given to the Chief Engineer. The talk of the Committee is that you should have some head—and where is it to be but in the Chief Engineer? The law of the land makes him supreme there. Now, what is the object of a fire commission? It is nothing but the putting of weapons into the hands of an organization which we have already got. That is all there is, and nothing else. It is putting in the hands of the Chief Engineer the proper tools with which to manage fires. Now, what is the difficulty about that?

It would be very difficult, if you went over the world, to find a better organization than the Fire Department of the City of Boston. It is certainly as large in the number of engines and men, in proportion to population, as that of any other city in the country. Nobody can fail to see this who will go to the engine houses and see the character of the men engaged in the department; so far as material and personnel are concerned they will challenge the admiration of the world. And a great deal of that is due to the fact that this has come down to us from the volunteer system. We look about us and hear such men as Jonas Fitch and others talk about the Fire Department, and we find that they followed the engines and helped to put out fires. I have heard others praise the men who compose the department. Now, is the department sufficient? There have been objections raised. Are they incurable? The minority think not. At first blush, so anxious was I to do everything possible to make the department effective, that I was ready to vote for a commission.

But I have considered the evils of a commission, and the question whether we could n't cure it without a commission. There has as yet been no tarnish on the escutcheon of the city of Boston, beyond a little junketing at Parker's or Young's. There has been no charge of fraud against the City Government, and for one I am against the importation into this city of those commissions which have been full of evil elsewhere. I do not understand why it is that there should be a readiness to acquiesce in commissions. I can understand how readily people will go for a commission, because they say they will take care of the department. But is there any necessity for the commission? We have a pretty large lot of engines, a considerable number of hose carriages and about 474 men, while the City of London Fire Brigade consists of only 473. Now what else is wanted?

Well the complaint suggested by the friends of a fire commission is that the Chief-Engineer should be nominated by the Mayor—and the minority have got that in the ordinance. And why should n't he? Why, after the great fire, although the Mayor had no more power than any member of this Council, the people looked to him and thought he ought to have done something. But he could n't. He was powerless. He left it where the law put it. Yet, Mr. President, he is the chief executive of the city, and he has less power than as Mayor he ought to have. It seems to me that the chief executive should have power over the Chief-Engineer to put him in nomination. It seems to me that the power ought to be in both branches of the City Government where the remedy can be more readily reached when an evil is suggested.

Now you propose to place this power in the hands of three men, to let only one of them go out at a time, to give them control of five hundred men with substitutes, and expenditure of half a million of money annually. The men of the department have got to stand by the Commissioners. If one undertakes to oppose, the majority still remains. It has always been so. It is true that we have a fire commission now, but they have not this power over men and money. Now it has been suggested that the police should be under a commission. Suppose they are. It would be seen that these men have control of this money. Who of us has not been to New York and seen the Court House creeping up inch by inch and all this corruption known to exist. The importation of that sort of rule is not the sort of thing for the City of Boston. It is n't necessary. Now, can you do without it?

The putting out of fires has got to be left with the department. Commissioners might intervene, and if they did they would do so mischievously, and do evil. Can the city of Boston, with all its own organization, supply the Fire Department with the requisite men and means? That is all of the question. If it can, why try this hazardous experiment, and why pay large salaries for the purpose? This is the simple question, and it is unnecessary to make any great speech about it. Can it be done efficiently? I submit that it can. And is there any objection to it? If the Chief Engineer is nominated by the Mayor and the City Council elects, then the City Council has its proper voice, and the chief executive has his proper voice. The Chief Engineer ought to be somewhat under the control of the Chief Executive of the city, and he is the one who should have the nomination of the man who is to take charge of the city's property. It has been suggested that this Council would not consent to give the control of this matter to the Board of Aldermen. A while ago it was in the Board of Aldermen and it was suggested that it should be given to the Common Council. It was readily yielded by the Board of Aldermen. It seems to me, under all the circumstances, that the other was the way. Now the question is with reference to what we can do without a commission. Can we give the Chief-Engineer of the department and his assistants the requisite machinery and appointments? It seems to me that we can. But it is said the commission would have done it in a week. If it is something that can be done in a week, it would have to be undone.

With regard to the erection of buildings, so far as my experience goes, the Fire Department have told where their buildings should be. The Committee on Public Buildings erected them, and I don't know that there is any objection to giving the power to the Fire Committee and letting them have control of it. And so with the fire-alarm telegraph—though I don't understand that there is any evidence of necessity for that. What is it that we want, then? The Engineers have the control at fires, and all they can ask of you is to give them the requisite machinery to work with, the requisite engines and the necessary water. Does the City Government need to relinquish all its power? I think not. The committee gave this matter a great deal of attention, and yet they were some time in making their report.

Although I differ with the majority I accord to them one earnest desire to accomplish in the best way the object submitted to them, and that was the best reorganization of the Fire Department. But it does seem to me that the commission is entirely unnecessary. We are more readily reached by the people than a commission would be. We are here because the people at our backs urge us on to it. What people want is an effective department. The people as a people do not want a commission, and they would not if they could understand the matter. There are some who, for various reasons, are urging it all the time, I know. But what we need and what all want is an effective department. Now can we do it? If we cannot do it without a commission, then I would go for a commission.

Now I see it is suggested that the Holly system should be adopted. The minority can see no difficulty in the Holly system. It consists of a system by which, with great engines, water is driven into the mains without the necessity of stand pipes, and the amount of pressure is regulated by a proper mechanism attached to the engine to regulate its work. Suppose it should be adopted in the Burnt District, it would equal 150 engines. If you adopt what is recommended by the chief officer of the London Fire Brigade you will adopt the high service every where about the city, and then you will have an effective department. There is another thing, Mr. President. In a place like the city of Boston, where there is a great deal of inflammable material, when it is known that the quick and certain placing of water is the true remedy, there should be a large number of men somewhat skilled at putting out fires in their early stages. And for this you can have an effective aid in the machinery of the Police Department. The people themselves should be educated to deal with fires, and when a fire has started there should be people throughout the whole city having the requisite means for the management of hose, that fires can be readily extinguished in their incipiency. All that can be adopted without the aid of a commission. You have already got some machinery which has never been used. You have got police stations and small engines that have never been used. All these suggestions only go to show that wherever you turn the committee of the City Government can do everything that a commission can.

Let us suppose that you have got the Holly system, the requisite number of engines and men, and what has a commission to do? You get all the engines, machinery and men into the hands of three men. It has been said that political influences has been at work. The great trouble in that respect has been with the repairs, and if you have a repair shop, all that evil is done away with. Is there a need of a commission to do that? We have submitted an ordinance for that, and an order has been introduced for the committee to select a place for the building. What need have you for a commission after that? You will spend fifteen or twenty or thirty thousand dollars for men to superintend a department that is absolutely complete, and if it is not complete you can make it so in a day—and the City Government put it beyond their power to control it at all.

Would the citizens be better off? They reach us quicker than they could a commission, and if we do the work as well, they will be as well suited as they would by a commission. I did not propose to say as much as I have, but what I have said is upon the necessity of a commission. These are the dangers of a commission. The fact is the City Government can supply the men and the material. Now my suggestion is that if it is necessary let us have a special meeting of the Council to consider the recommendations in detail. Let us take up the ordinance, and go on, step by step, and let the gentlemen show where it can be improved, and let us go on and take time and do it right. It isn't going to be done in a week. Let us take time enough. Let us give the requisite work to this matter, and see that it is rightly done.

The men of the department have always manifested a proper degree of subordination in the discharge of their duties. It is enough to say that they have sealed their service with their lives. I do not think the companies should have the choosing of their foremen, and if they are nominated by the engineers it takes away that trouble. Now there was a great fire in Chicago, and that was under a commission. Let us deal with the common sense of the thing. We had a great fire here, too. We were naturally inclined to criticise, still it was after all such an event as all great cities must experience. Well, there came another, and we were undertaking to condemn the system. Just now we have had another great fire in Chicago under a commission. The Board of Engineers does not suffer by that comparison. Now I will grant that if you do appoint a commission and do get good men, they will do well. But if you have the right Board of Engineers, they will do well too, and they are the ones, after all, who actually control the department. Are we not willing to take the time, make the investigation, and give the Board of Engineers everything they need? Of course we are. Then we well know that we have done it, that we have given them the requisite needs to accomplish this purpose.

I have no particular connection with the Fire Department. I neither want to be Chief-Engineer nor commissioner. I simply stand here ready to spend all the time that is requisite over this ordinance in detail for the purpose of securing what is right, requiring that the requisite means shall be placed at the disposition of the Chief-Engineer and his associates. I go for the Mayor having the nomination of that officer. There is no reason why when our attention is called to it that we shouldn't take hold of this department and cure it, wherever we may find there is any trouble; with the pressure of duty upon us it seems to me that now is the time, here is the body and these are the men to take this matter in charge and give us the most efficient department in the country, if not in the world.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—I move the further consideration of this subject be specially assigned to next Thursday evening at half-past eight o'clock.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I have prepared some statistics which I should like very much to present at this time, and I hope the Council will give me an opportunity. As one of the gentlemen has stated, this is an important matter, and requires immediate action, and when members of the Standing Committee on the Fire Department rise here and propose delay it comes with a bad grace.

Mr. Pease—Inasmuch as the gentleman seems so exercised, I withdraw my motion.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I thank my friend for withdrawing his motion. Some three or four months since petitions were presented to the City Council, signed by upwards of 8000 of our citizens and taxpayers [Mr. Shaw read the petition for a Fire Commission] and not a single individual of all our population of 275,000 has ventured a remonstrance against it. The petitions were referred, as we all knew, to a joint special committee, and the committee has given long and patient hearings to everybody who offered to say a word on the subject, after having advertised in all the leading papers of Boston that public hearings would be held. A large number of our most intelligent citizens came before us, a considerable number of whom addressed the committee, giving us their views, and it is safe to say that of thirty persons who spoke twenty-five advocated strongly the appointment of a commission, while of those who said they did not quite believe in a commission—the facts they stated were altogether in favor of it, but that whole number even can be counted on one-half the fingers of your right hand. The fact is, the suggestions made by this half a handful of men were in reality substantial arguments in favor of the reorganization, as an examination of the evidence will show. Another fact is patent—the whole community expects this change, and even demands it.

Now, Mr. President, that is all I have to say on general principles. I have a few figures to present at this time, and if they are not complete answers to the gentleman from Ward 12, I will give up my position.

In 1860, the population of Boston was 177,840, and in 1872, 270,000, an increase of fifty-five per cent. In 1860, the total valuation was $276,861,000, which by regular gradation increased to $682,724,300, in 1872, the increase being 147 per cent. In 1860, the losses by fire were $617,213, which, in 1872, (not including the great fire of November,) was increased to $1,516,549, an increase of 144 per cent., and that not including the great fire.

Now let us see what has been the increase in the expenditures for the Fire Department for the same time. In 1860-61 the expenditures for the Fire Department were $112,098 53; in 1861-62, $84,656 07; in 1862-63, $107,555 74; in 1863-64, $126,429 68; in 1864-65, $158,177 31; in 1865-66, $151,922 65; in 1866-67, $177,743 81; in 1867-68, $230,554 53; in 1868-69, $284,753 03; in 1869-70, $344,558 64; in 1870-71, $418,507 21; in 1871-72, $468,843 50; in 1872-73, $661,842 25—an increase, exclusive of the great fire, of 317 per cent. Those are figures, gentlemen, which speak for themselves. Fifty-five per cent. increase of population, 147 per cent. increase of valuation, 144 per cent. increase of losses by fire, and 317 per cent. increase in expenditures for the Fire Department.

In this estimate I have given only the current expenses of the department, without including the cost of hose and engine houses and land. I will give you the expenditures for hook and ladder and engine houses from 1861 to 1872, which are $516,829 56, no part of which has been charged to the Fire Department, and there is yet unpaid, for unfinished buildings, $46,768 57; which, added to the amount already given, makes a total of $563,598 13. The cost of the fire alarm from 1860 to 1870 has been over $80,000; and we have the grand total of $643,598 13 from 1860 to 1872, exclusive of all current expenses for the department.

Now I want to show you the current expenditures of the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department. In 1860 they were $440 52; in 1861, $286 55; in 1862, $1639 95; in 1863, $2108 99; in 1864, $379; in 1865, $754 40; in 1866, $233; in 1867, $518 45; in 1868, $2144 96; in 1869, $4040 60; in 1870, $6779 94; in 1871, $6700 20; in 1872, $7357 07, a total of $33,683 63—the sums from 1868 to 1872 inclusive including the expenses of parades of the department authorized by said committee; and all this does not include one dollar for the extraordinary expenditures consequent upon the November fire. These figures are taken from original sources in this building. This increase has been at the rate of 1570 per cent. from 1860 to 1872, not including the extraordinary expenses growing out of the great fire.

It would, perhaps, be enough to rest where I am, but we have a minority report here which my friend from Ward 12 has been advocating. What does it provide for? If I understand him aright he proposes changes in the department—to prune it. Mr. Shaw read extracts from the minority report, one the quotation from the Transcript of two boys who were weeding a garden and the quotation from Hon. William B. Spooner's evidence before the committee. Now the conclusions arrived at by the gentleman this evening are but a repetition of what he states in the minority report. He criticizes the Board of Health, and then upon the next page he quotes what that board has done greatly to the interest of the city.

Mr. Shaw read other selections from the minority report, and was proceeding to answer the arguments therein, when Mr. Wells of Ward 3 raised the point of order that a quorum was not present. Immediately afterward a quorum appearing to be present, business was resumed.

During Mr. Shaw's remarks, he had been asked by Mr. Wells of Ward 3 to yield the floor for a few minutes. Mr. Shaw having again obtained the floor, said that when courteously requested, he would give way for any regular business, but he would never do so when the request was made in such a manner as it had been. It is a very great want of courtesy for any gentleman to rise here and make such a motion, and when it is repeated I rise here to protest against any such action.

Mr. Dean—I hope the gentleman will proceed with his statements.

Mr. Jones expressed the same wish; he would stay till morning.

Mr. Shaw positively declined.

On motion of Mr. Dean, the subject was assigned specially for next Thursday evening at half-past eight o'clock.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 offered the following, which was referred to the Committee on Public Instruction:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Public Buildings furnish additional accommodations for a primary school in the vicinity of Marlborough and Fairfield streets.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 rose to personal explanation. He said, "The gentleman from Ward 5 (Mr. Shaw) bore very heavily upon me in his remarks. I did nothing but what I had a right to do, and what any gentleman has a right to ask. I had a right to ask the gentleman to give way. He may be very well versed in parliamentary usages, for which, I have no doubt, he can bear off the palm in this Council. But I still hold that right, nevertheless, and he must n't expect to stand up here and browbeat any one. The gentleman has done the same thing here twenty times.

Mr. Shaw—I have never done so since I have been a member of this Council, and this is the first time I ever rose here to ask the privilege of a personal explanation. I undertake to browbeat anybody! I undertake to defend myself when the gentleman interrupts me. He knows that he was wrong. I know his animus and I know his connection with the Fire Department. Let the galled jade wince. [Laughter.] I beg the pardon of the Chair.

The President ruled the discussion out of order.

On motion of Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 the following was passed:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be requested to consider the expediency of making the plans for the new station house in Ward 16, so that part of the building may be used for a branch of the Public Library.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
SEPTEMBER 22, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

JURORS DRAWN.

Twenty traverse jurors for the Superior Court (first session) to appraise value of land of Merchants' Insurance Company near the Post Office; four additional traverse jurors for the September term of the Superior Criminal Court; thirty-two traverse jurors for the October term of the Superior Court, second session, and thirty-two traverse jurors for the October term of the Superior Court, first session, were drawn.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Drivers in the Fire Department—William B. Lottridge, Clement W. Smith, Martin B. Kimball, Christopher J. Burrell.

Special Police Officers Without Pay—John P. Lyman, Jr., Union Safe Deposit Vaults; John N. Capen, Wesleyan Association Building and its vicinity.

Undertakers—Joseph Weekerle, Joseph B. Cassidy. On motion of Alderman Gibson, the following nominations of constables were referred to the Committee on Police:

Francis M. Adams, Arthur F. Anderson, James Ball, John R. Barry, *Phineas Bates, Francis J. Baxter, *Jacob T. Beers, Morrill P. Berry, William W. Blake, Gideon B. Blasland, Charles S. ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The order of notice for a sewer in Washington street, between Summer and Franklin streets, was considered, and there being no objection offered the subject was recommitted to the Committee on Sewers.

On the order of notice for a sewer in Gouch street, Mr. Snow appeared for the estates generally on the westerly side of Crescent place, and specially for No. 1 Crescent place, which had been drained by a private drain having its outlet in South Margin street. The facilities for drainage are and have been sufficient, and if the city requires an enlargement of this drain there is no reason why the estates he represented should be assessed therefor. The subject was recommitted to the Committee on Sewers.

On the order of notice on petition of John Stetson, Jr., to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at 4 Alden street, no one appeared to object, and the petition was recommitted to the Committee on Steam Engines.

On the petition of Blackmer, Mandell & Co., to use a steam engine at 48 Bedford street, an order of notice was issued for a hearing Oct. 13, at 4 P. M.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

To the Committee on Paving. William H. Richardson, that the grade of Savin-Hill avenue be established near his estate.

Samuel P. Loud, to be paid for grade damages on Dorchester avenue, Ward 16.

Horace Billings & Son et al., that projecting signs be prohibited on High and Summer streets.

Abbott & Howard et al., for plank walks upon the Oliver-street extension.

Benjamin James et al., that Gold street be graded and paved from D to E street.

James Devine, for sidewalk at corner Eighth and E streets.

C. H. Callahan, for sidewalk at corner Third and H streets.

M. J. Ryder, that Bolton street be paved with wood between D and E streets.

Boston & Albany Railroad Company, that the grade of Albany street be revised.

To the Committee on Licenses. Chase, Shute & Co., for removal of hack stand from 31 Kilby street.

To the Committee on Sewers. James Parker et al., for a sewer in Sturgis street, from Pearl street to Oliver street.

Ariel Snow et al., for sewer in Moreland street.

To the Committee on Health on the part of the Board. Addison P. Wheelock, to occupy wooden stable on Hancock street, near Columbia.

Thomas & Griffiths, to occupy wooden stable on Drake's wharf.

James McGraim, to occupy stable on Everett street, at No. 75.

Bolton, Dewar & Fieldhouse, to occupy stable on Reed street, rear lead works.

Noyes & Walker, to erect stable at 5 North Centre street.

Fred Pope, to erect two brick stables on Fairfield street.

To the Committee on Claims. Samuel C. Davis, for compensation for injuries caused by obstructions in Dudley street, opposite the old Roxbury City Hall. Defendant was thrown from his buggy and seriously injured. He has been obliged to pay $100 for repairs on his buggy.

To the Committee on Lamps. James H. Upham et al., for lamp on Bowdoin street, Ward 16.

To the Committee on Common, etc., on part of this Board. Sidney B. Morse, for removal of a tree from sidewalk of 21 Camden street.

To the Committee on Public Lands on the part of this Board. Stanley, Gore & Co., to alter certain buildings on their Albany-street wharf.

To the Committee on Faneuil Hall. A. O. Brewster et al., for use of Faneuil Hall on October 8 for a political meeting.

REMOVAL FROM THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

A communication was received from Chief-Engineer Damrell transmitting the cause, viz., intoxication, of the removal of Thomas C. Soesman from the Fire Department. Placed on file.

FROM THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

A proposal was received from the School Committee to hold a joint convention with that body on Tuesday, the fourteenth day of October, 1873, at 7½ P. M., to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of William O. Johnson, a member of the committee from Ward 4. The Board concurred.

FROM THE STREET COMMISSIONERS.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Essex street at the corner of Washington street, by taking land of H. Hollis Hunnewell, at an expense of $750.

Alderman Clark—I would explain that this is no new undertaking. This 22 feet should have been taken at the time of the original extension, but through some mistake of the surveyor it was omitted, and this additional space is now proposed to be taken to make the widening of Essex street complete at the junction with Washington street.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the order was read twice and passed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to pave Gouch street with small granite blocks, at an estimated cost of $6000. Passed.

Order to lay brick sidewalks on southerly side of Cedar street, from Thornton to Hawthorn street. Passed.

SITE FOR A SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

The report of Joint Standing Committee on Health with orders to purchase 426,984 square feet of land on Columbia street, Ward 16, with all the buildings thereon, at a cost of $86,000, as a smallpox hospital establishment, came up as unfinished business, the question being on the passage of the orders.

Alderman Clark—It seems to me that there is hardly any occasion for us to go into the expense of purchasing a site for a smallpox hospital, inasmuch as we already have a good location which was selected a year ago, after a great deal of looking about, and which, if properly graded, would answer the purpose for years to come. There are many objections to this lot, which I do not propose to mention. In order to settle the question at once I move an indefinite postponement of the subject.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman opposite decides that there is no necessity for a smallpox hospital. If that is the fact I am perfectly satisfied. The committee to whom this matter was referred have been urged by his Honor the Mayor and various citizens of Boston to make a report of a site for a smallpox hospital. That report has been made and the reasons are given. The gentleman was on the committee which purchased the Swett-street lot, and I was on that committee also. The location of a hospital there affected the citizens of Ward 13, as the gentleman very well knows. Now this, no doubt, affects residents of Ward 16, of whom I am one. I suppose it will affect them as much as it did those in Ward 13. The only question for this Board to decide is whether this is a proper place, whether it interferes with as few people as any other locality. He says there are many objections besides this one of locality. Now is there a necessity for the city of Boston to spend seventy-five thousand dollars for a site for a smallpox hospital? It was stated when the disease was raging here that the city did nothing for the afflicted. Now it happens that no persons are suffering from the disease and it is the time for the city to decide. We have a communication from the Board of Health that a smallpox hospital is necessary and an order is before us for the sale of the Swett-street Hospital. The board was in consultation with the Mayor, and after deciding that Swett street was not a proper place for the hospital, they seized the old Roxbury Almshouse, with the understanding that it should be done away with as soon as possible. If it is not necessary to have one I shall very cheerfully vote for a postponement. My friend knows that he was as anxious as any one could be for a hospital when the disease was raging here. He visited this place more than a year ago and decided that it was as good a site as could be obtained, and would interfere with as few people. But the Swett-street plan had gone so far that that lot of land had to be taken. I want this matter to come fairly before the citizens of my ward and every other ward. If the citizens who object to this can find a better place I am in favor of taking some other site. But there seems to me to be a need of a smallpox hospital, and I should like to know the various reasons of which the gentleman speaks.

Alderman Clark—I would state that one of the very best reasons in the world is that we own the best site for a hospital in the city, which we purchased at an expense of eighty thousand dollars, and erected a building thereon in ten days. This building the physicians decided was not suitable for a smallpox hospital. I believe we should have such a hospital besides the one at Gallop's Island. We already own this location, and have made an appropriation to erect thereon a suitable institution. I admit that physicians said the smallpox hospital was not a good one, but their reasons were on account of the building and not of the locality. I have talked with some of these physicians this week, and they say if the land is raised to a proper grade there would be no objection. Some months ago I introduced an order to have this land on Swett street raised, expecting that some order of this kind would come in. If the street sweepings had been put on Swett street, it would have been already raised to a sufficient grade. It is not necessary to go into the various reasons for objecting to the Columbia-street site this afternoon, except to state that the principal reason we did not take it last year was because we found a better place. Here is a place so isolated that no one can raise any objection to it, and still within twenty minutes' ride of any part of the city. If this motion for indefinite postponement is passed, I propose to introduce an order to raise the grade of the Swett street property, and erect thereon a first-class smallpox hospital.

Alderman Sayward—I don't like to have the gentleman quibble about this matter. It was not only the building but the location that caused the decision of the physicians. If the physicians have changed their minds I have nothing to say. We acted in communication with the Board of Health, and have to take whatever stigma there is attached to it. I have done what I believe no other Alderman, except a very few, would have done, for almost any one would have reported in favor of locating the hospital in any ward except his own. This place was located there because it was favored by the Board of Health. The gentleman says that this site was not selected a year ago for various reasons. I never heard of any reasons except that Swett street was a little nearer to the city than any other site proposed. If it is decided by the Mayor and the physicians, I am willing to indefinitely postpone, and let this matter be fixed. I am not anxious to have a smallpox hospital near me in Ward 16. My friend knows whether I have worked for smallpox patients. I visited Gallop's Island when I venture to say that he would n't have done it. Now I know I have displeased some of my neighbors in Ward 16. I know where these objections are, and one of them has come to me. If Swett street is the proper place, I can't see why the Mayor was so anxious for us to report for a site for a smallpox hospital, and it is at his solicitation and of citizens outside of this Board that we have made this report. I don't care whether it is in Ward 16 or not, but we should be Christians enough to consent to have it located within a mile of us.

Alderman Clark—I am willing to give the Alderman credit for having worked with all his power to suppress the disease. He did several things which I would not do individually. I give him credit for having done everything in his power, and I don't wish to throw out any insinuations that he has acted in any other manner in this report than what he believes to be strictly in his line of duty. But it does seem to me that there is no occasion for us to purchase any more land. We own land in various sections besides on Swett street, which might be utilized for this purpose. We already have an admirable location, and I had almost supposed that the Alderman had agreed to it. At all events we have it, and it is in almost as healthy a locality as we can expect to have a smallpox hospital located in. If a location where you can get a water view is desirable, as it seems to be on Beacon street, that on Swett street when it is raised to a proper grade will have precisely the same, and there can be no objections on that score. I mention facts when I state that I have got statements from physicians who were opposed to this location last winter, who now say that if it is raised it will be just as good as Beacon or Brimmer streets.

Alderman Sayward—I say that I agreed with the gentleman last year that Swett street was the best location then. I take only the statements of those whose opinions in regard to the location of the hospital are known. I have no other view, and I argued in favor of it in the Board of Health last year. I argued then that the patients should go to the island, that there should be provision for them to go there as easily as they could anywhere else. I argued that the city should have ferry drops, as at the East Boston ferries, that the patients could be easily and comfortably transported. This is still my view, but the physicians opposed me, and if they oppose me now I am willing to yield. I will offer an amendment that my friend may bring in any location he pleases. I move to lay the motion on the table.

Alderman Clark—Does this take precedence of my motion to indefinitely postpone?

The Chair—It does.

Alderman Clark—I hope the matter will be disposed of this afternoon, and I hope it will not be laid on the table.

Alderman Sayward—If any gentleman desires to say anything I have no objection, and will withdraw my motion for that purpose. I made this motion to give the gentleman an opportunity to bring in the order to grade Swett street.

The motion to lay on the table was defeated.

Alderman Clark—I now renew my motion to indefinitely postpone the order and request the yeas and nays thereon.

Alderman Power—I hope this matter will not be postponed, but that it will be definitely and finally settled at the present time. I think the gentlemen of this Board are as well prepared to settle this question now as at any other time, and if it is in order I would like to say something on this location of a smallpox hospital.

The Chair—It is perfectly proper to debate the question.

Alderman Power—I am opposed to this proposed location of a smallpox hospital, for the same reasons that I gave against taking the Marcella-street site, and I haven't yet had occasion to change my mind. I think the taking of that lot caused more injury than good, for it is well known that one life was sacrificed. I do not wish to put upon the citizens of Ward 16 what I tried to prevent being put upon the people of the Highlands. If there is any sacrifice the city should bear the burden equally. It is well known that if this hospital is located in Ward 16 it will ruin property in the vicinity. The exigencies of the case do not require its location there now. The smallpox has abated entirely. I always thought that the Swett-street Hospital was in a proper place. If the wealthiest of our citizens can live on made land, such as that at the foot of the Public Garden, I think that Swett street can be made suitable for smallpox patients. At any rate there is no reason for afflicting the residents of Ward 16 with such an injury now. I think the Board is ready to settle this question today, and I hope the question will be taken on its merits.

Alderman Clark—I am certainly ignorant of my intention if an indefinite postponement does not settle the matter so far as that location is concerned. I suppose that kills the subject, and if it does not I am willing to have a yeas and nay vote on the passage of the order.

Alderman Sayward—I think an indefinite postponement would settle this matter for all time. But my friend wants to see whether there is any one in favor of this location or not. I don't know whether he will accomplish it as well this way as in any other. He says he don't wish to put a smallpox hospital on any one place. Let me ask him if there were not objections when it was located on Swett street.

Alderman Power—It is reasonable to suppose that the gentleman who advocates a measure here is going to vote for it. I want to have the matter settled definitely. I supposed it was the easiest and best way to have the matter stand on its merits, and vote it down or pass it, and not get round it by a postponement. I supposed that my way was the easiest to settle the matter entirely.

Alderman Clark—I would call for a vote on my motion to indefinitely postpone, and on that I ask the yeas and nays.

Alderman Gibson—It is well known that I have been an advocate of the Swett-street Hospital site from the commencement, and I believe that if it were raised to the proper grade it would be satisfactory. From the representations of the committee who have visited this proposed site, it seems to me that it is a first rate locality. But if the Board thinks best to come back to Swett street and raise the grade I should prefer it to taking the other site; I think the Marcella-street site very objectionable. I know of many people in Ward 16 who feel that their property would be injured; some say it will depreciate property a million and a half dollars in the next five years.

Alderman Sayward—Gentlemen may now see the dilemma in which the committee is placed. We have voted in committee for this lot of land, and I propose to stand by my report unless gentlemen will allow us to lay this report on the table and show us a better location. We have voted upon every location, and now you refuse to lay this matter on the table till a better one can be found. If this is the rule I must abide by it.

The vote on indefinite postponement was then taken, with the following result:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutler, Emery, Hulbert, Power, Quincy, Stebbins—9.

Nays—Aldermen Gibson, Sayward—2.

So the order was indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Clark moved a reconsideration of the vote, hoping it would not prevail.

The motion was rejected.

Alderman Clark offered the following:

Ordered, That the Joint Committee on Health be directed to raise the grade of Swett-street Hospital territory and provide suitable drainage therefor, satisfactory to the Board of Health; the expense to be charged to the existing appropriation for a Smallpox Hospital.

The rules having been suspended and the question being on the passage of the order, Alderman Sayward said—

I don't object to the passage of the order if it is a proper one. I don't know but I may be mistaken. It appears to me that the Committee on Health will have no power to grade the Swett-street-Hospital territory. If the gentleman is fully satisfied that the order is right I will have no objection to it.

Alderman Clark—I have no doubt the Committee on Health have the right to raise that grade if they are so directed by the City Council. The order was written by a party who understands it thoroughly, and I have not the slightest doubt but that is the proper location for a smallpox hospital.

Alderman Sayward—If the gentleman has asked information of some one informed it may be proper. But that property is in the immediate charge of the Board of Health. We should think it a little singular if the Committee on Common could be directed to grade that property. The Board of Health have control of that building and land, and they are very anxious to have it transferred to the Committee on Public Laws. As chairman of the Committee on Health I am perfectly willing to do anything, but I don't wish to infringe on anybody else's duties.

Alderman Clark—The Committee on Health are the proper parties to have charge of this matter. They have charge of the street sweepings, the ashes and the offal. I am perfectly right, I think; at any rate I am willing to take the risk.

Alderman Sayward—I suppose the gentleman is a little tender of his appropriations. We do have charge of this matter of street sweepings, I know.

Alderman Clark—The expense is to be charged to the erection of a smallpox hospital, to the unexpended appropriation.

Alderman Hulbert—As this is a matter of considerable importance and deserves better consideration than I am able to give now, I move that it be laid on the table.

Several Aldermen desiring to speak, the motion was temporarily withdrawn.

Alderman Clark—I am always anxious to accede to the request of the Alderman from Ward 15, and all others, when the public interest will admit of it. But as this matter has been thoroughly ventilated this afternoon, and as it is necessary that we should have this territory graded in season to erect a building on it this fall, delay would be detrimental to the public health. If that territory is raised before we shall have occasion to use a hospital again, we can have a building in all respects suitable for the taking care of patients.

Alderman Quincy—I should like to urge that the matter be laid over. I cannot agree that the taking of the Marcella-street Hospital was unjustifiable. I think it was justifiable as a war measure. If I can be assured by the gentlemen that competent medical authorities are in favor of the location of a smallpox hospital on Swett street I will vote for it.

Alderman Sayward—I am extremely surprised that my friend is so anxious to build a hospital on Swett street. What is the cause of this great anxiety not to have this matter laid on the table another week? There is something behind all this anxiety for a particular locality to be graded up all at once.

Alderman Clark—I consider it ungentlemanly and unhandsome to make such a charge as this. It is the old cry raised again that if a man is anxious for a measure there must be some motive behind it. I suppose I could hurl this charge back at the gentleman, but I will not. I don't propose to discuss this question whether the taking of the Marcella-street Hospital, which I was opposed to at that time, was judicious or not. But I do hold that we own a piece of land well adapted for a smallpox hospital. True, last year the Board of Health did a public service, and if vaccination is looked after thoroughly we shall not have much trouble from the smallpox in the future. There is nothing whatever behind this. I don't make a dollar on this lot; I don't propose to bid for the contract for the building of this hospital, even if it is to be of brick.

Alderman Stebbins—Mr. Chairman, I call for the special assignment for five o'clock.

Alderman Hulbert renewed the motion to lay on the table, and it was defeated.

Alderman Clark—I call for the vote on the passage of the order.

Alderman Sayward—I have a word more to say. The gentleman says I have used ungentlemanly language. I made no particular charges, and if he feels hurt I beg his pardon. Now, sir, so far as the building is concerned, I don't think there is much money to be made out of it. I don't propose to build it, as I am a member of the City Government, and so far as the gentleman is concerned, he can't build it, because he don't know how. [Laughter.]

Alderman Power—I don't see why any gentleman here should object to the passage of that order. It does n't go any further. It is simply for the grading of the land, the value of which will be improved. Therefore I don't see why any one should vote against it.

Alderman Clark—The order says it shall be graded to the satisfaction of the Board of Health. At all events the raising of the grade of that land, which can be done at no expense to the city, will greatly improve it if we wish to use it hereafter.

Alderman Hulbert—That order may be right and it may not. I don't know but all the other members of the Board have looked into it and are perfectly ready to vote, but I am not. I think it should be laid on the table, and until I can look into it I shall not vote in favor of it. I think I should like to vote for it if I could look into it.

Alderman Sayward—I move to take up the special assignment.

The motion was carried—5 to 3.

Alderman Power—I move that the special assignment be postponed till six o'clock.

Alderman Stebbins—I hope it will not be postponed, as there are several parties here who have engagements later in the evening. It would accommodate them better to be heard now, and we can finish our business later in the evening.

Alderman Power—I appreciate this matter of time, but this subject before us is an important one. Everybody here is posted in regard to the value of this land. That order simply covers the matter of improvement. I don't see why it can't be settled.

The motion to postpone the special assignment was defeated, and the Board took up the special assignment. Subsequently the subject was again considered.

Alderman Clark—Inasmuch as some of the Aldermen wish this matter laid over a week in order to satisfy themselves of the practicability of raising the grade of Swett street, I will not press a vote this evening, but will agree that it go over. I therefore move that it be laid on the table for one week.

It was so voted.

ENFORCEMENT OF THE PROHIBITORY LAW.

The special assignment of the day, viz., the hearing of W. H. H. Murray, A. A. Miner and two thousand other male and female petitioners, for the enforcement of the existing Prohibitory law, by the municipal authorities of this city, was considered.

Rev. A. A. Miner, D. D.—I think we who ask this action may claim to ask a disinterested request. I see by the reports of your Chief of Police that this measure for the welfare of the city is embodied therein. It is not my purpose to deliver a temperance lecture; if I assume that the concurrent judgment of the community is that three-fourths of our pauperism and crime are from the liquor traffic, I could show that the deterioration of the labor force of the State is more than fifty million dollars a year by the liquor traffic. So long as Boston holds the position she does in regard to the liquor traffic the law cannot be enforced elsewhere. This is not a law-making power. We have a law-making, a judicial and an executive power; one body makes the laws, another construes and another executes them. We are under law in theory and not under rulers who are the instruments of the law. The law-making power says, "any mayor, alderman, selectman, chief-of-police, deputy chief-of-police, etc., may, without a warrant, arrest any person found selling, etc., any liquor," and "the several officers aforesaid shall enforce or cause to be enforced the penalties provided by this law." That law has been substantially passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States. You, gentlemen, have no power to stand between your chief-of-police and this law. Now it has been thought that though this enactment is on the statute book that another to create the constabulary exonerates officers from enforcing this law, but this act provides that it shall not be construed to relieve the other officers from executing this law. This law says you shall enforce the law. I understand that you appoint the Chief-of-Police, and it is not right that you should stand between him and the enforcement. What he did after the great fire he ought to do every day under your sanction, and you have no right to stand between him and this law. It is your duty to say to him that the laws in relation to the manufacture and sale of liquors in this city must be enforced impartially and thoroughly. I hold it to be the bounden duty of this body to command the Chief-of-Police to enforce this and all other laws. I have no doubt you have your personal opinions, and if, after years of study, you think the principle of prohibition is adverse to the interests of Boston, you have a right to that opinion; but when you stand up as Aldermen you have no right to stand as a dead weight between the law and its enforcement. Your duty in this case would be to resign. I know that liquor selling is one of the most infamous forms of enterprise in existence. I could not hold up my head and be an Alderman in Boston and see the law not enforced. I don't know but a twenty years' trampling under foot of law has caused it to cease to be a law. The title lives in Boston, however. In this matter the city does not occupy an enviable position. For some reason or other this Board stands in as bad a position as any defalcator. There is no question considered more vital than this. Boston for twenty years has said she won't suppress the liquor traffic. What right has she to say that? This being law, you have one of two ways left—its open, frank enforcement, or resignation. With an eye to the corrupting influences, you cannot innocently neglect to do one or the other.

And I would as leave you would do one as the other. If Boston has n't Aldermen who hold themselves obedient to the laws, I suppose they could have. In the name of God, gentlemen, do one or the other, and the hour should not strike six before you have made up your minds. Dr. Miner cited the case of the Mayor of Milwaukee, who refused to require bonds of city officers, and remarked that he did n't know but the best way to settle the question would be to bring the Board before the courts for dereliction of duty. If an order were passed to instruct the Chief-of-Police to enforce the law I have no doubt all the bar rooms would be closed in twenty-four hours. We all want the liquor traffic reduced to a minimum, and why not take the action that will do it. Who doubts that if ordered to close Mr. Young, Mr. Parker or Mr. Richards would hesitate to obey? I know it is impracticable to absolutely suppress any crime; we have murders and other crimes, but it is conceded that preventing the use of liquor would reduce the tendency to such crime. A license law makes exemptions; it complicates the facts on which actions must be based. But the Prohibitory law puts the matter completely into your hands. It seems that in every view of the law it is clearly the duty of this Board. If you continue to hold your office you have no right to disregard this law any more than I have to steal your horse, and if I were speaking of grades of crime I should say you were the greater criminals. There ought to be virtue and integrity in high officials. I sleep by night and walk the streets less securely by reason of this traffic permitted. I know how men in office feel about this. Pullers at the coat tails are not givers of the law; to the law you owe allegiance. The interest is committed to your hand, and do not let any word I utter fail to prevent you from looking at this question as fairly as if your son were on the bring of perdition. You have no right to talk of fanaticism; the Legislature has made the law and the Supreme Court sustains it. You have no alternative.

Rev. George H. Vibbert—I thought it well for us to take up a subject, after this discussion for preventing a dread disease, which affects the weal or woe of thousands. Mr. Vibbert read a selection from Herbert Spencer and said, if you are interested in the prevention of noxious diseases for the body, then you ought to be interested in the prevention of broken hearts, disrupted families and ruined souls. Chief-Justice Taney decided that he could see nothing in the law to prevent a State from prohibiting any traffic which appears to be disastrous to the people, on the principle of the old maxim that "the health of the people is the supreme law." As private individuals you agree that we have an undoubted right to suppress the traffic by law. Let me ask you what would your real estate be worth if there were a distillery here, a distillery there, and a lager-bier shop here? Any gentleman when he thought of his home interests would say no, a thousand times no. That is all we ask, gentlemen. I remember that in England a justice could not be found who would license a drinking saloon in his vicinity. I wish every advocate of a license law could be concentrated in the vicinity of all the distilleries, and how soon do you suppose it would be before every citizen would rise up against it? It is a principle of law that the dram shop is a nuisance, whether in School street or North street, and we ask you to abate every one in the city. I am surprised that no leading man of the Board of Trade is here to plead our cause, because we know there is no traffic so deleterious to business. Mr. Vibbert related instances of the effect of drinking liquor upon laboring and business men in this city, in Maine and Rhode Island. In Great Britain it was decided that one day in six was wasted on account of the drinking habits of the people; in this country we waste about one in fifteen. Did you ever think of the waste of grain and land by the growing of grain for beer? I find that the brewers of New England used a million bushels of grain last year, and this amount would have made fifteen million four-pound loaves of bread. You may tell me that this law can't be executed, but you can't go to your Chief of Police and tell him so with a straight face. He will say, "Let the orders come, gentlemen." I say, in other places, this law has been executed with good results. In Vineland, N. J., where they have 10,500 inhabitants and no liquor, it cost them from 1867 to 1872 for police—in 1867, $50; in 1868, $50; in 1869, $75; in 1870, $75; in 1871, $150; and in 1872, $25. For the poor, since 1867, the most it has cost in one year was $425; in 1872, $350. Close these doors to corruption and how long would it be before your police and pauper expenses would be decreased? In last year, of all the arrests less than four hundred were for violating city ordinances. In answer to the argument that the law had never been enforced but in a corner, Mr. Vibbert instanced communities in England and Ireland, where liquor could not be purchased for miles around. He next alluded to the great army of broken-hearted women, and made an appeal for statesmen who cared for homes, who would put away this rock of offence. Gentlemen, do your duty, put this stone out of our way, and we can go on in our civilization.

Dr. Miner said that several other gentlemen had been expected to be present, and asked whether the Board, on account of the lateness of the hour, would prefer to give a portion of another day to the subject.

Alderman Clark hoped the petitioners would proceed for half an hour or an hour; he would be happy to listen to them.

That was taken to be the sense of the Board.

Rev. Mr. Lewis of South Boston—I do not intend to go over the ground of the gentlemen who have preceded me. I take it for granted that in reference to your sworn duty we cannot differ one from another. I will call attention to a few things transpiring about us. The law is not executed. When attempts are made to execute it, obstacles are thrown in the way. At Pemberton square the commissioners will tell us that they get discouragement from the municipal forces in enforcing the law, and on several occasions only the wise actions of the State Constables prevented a riot. Under a great emergency, when the alarm struck deep into the hearts of the city, this law was enforced, and if it could be enforced ten days it can be for ten hundred days. Summon before you your Chief-of-Police and he will tell you that if he felt that this honorable Board was behind him he would enforce the law, and not a dram shop would be open in ten days. Mr. Lewis instanced the case of a policeman who had undertaken to enforce the law and been removed from his beat. He knew that the Boston police would say they could execute the law but when they do undertake it, something is in the way. In a certain ward the policemen determined that a certain shop, part news stand and part confectionery shop, was the cause of all the trouble in that ward, and they determined that on one day it should be closed—the Lord's day. They found enough evidence there to send a dozen men to the House of Correction. One man who held about thirty votes went to a prominent city official who wrote to the Chief Executive stating that that prosecution must be stopped; the first did not succeed, but after a second letter saying if the prosecution was not stopped there would be trouble, it was stopped. Those letters are now in the breast pocket of one of the police captains of the city, and any Sunday you can go to that place and get a dram at any hour. Mr. Lewis next alluded to the manner of executing the law in the courts. What is the reason that juries refuse to give a just verdict in the face of patent facts? It is because here sits a jury which refuses to give a just verdict in the face of patent facts. Alexander did not stop to untie the Gordian knot, he cut it; we call upon you to take the sword of justice and cut this Gordian knot, and say this law shall be executed.

Rev. Dr. Miner thanked the Board for the patient hearing accorded the petitioners. He called attention to the fact that in some cities the law is being executed with partial fairness, while others await the action of Boston. We stand much in fear of each other in this world. I could name a dozen business men who wish you would pass such an order, but when you bring them a petition they say they don't know what will come back on them if they do. Can it be that your philanthropic Chief-of-Police in a moment of danger shall lack your word of command? Can it be that Boston is in rebellion against the Commonwealth? That the Mayor and Aldermen shall hold five hundred policemen at bay?

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, who said the petitioners desired to have a still further hearing, the petition was referred to the Committee on Police.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The following papers received concurrent action:

Petitions of Leonard Pickering et al. were referred, in concurrence.

Request from Board of Health that the Swett-street Hospital may be sold. Referred to Committee on Health.

Petition of East Boston Railroad Company for acceptance of their charter (Chapter 66, Statutes of 1873). Referred to Messrs. Weston, Pickering and Kingsley, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join. The Board concurred, and the chairman appointed Aldermen Hulbert and Power on the committee.

Order that plans for Police Station in District Eleven be so drawn as to provide accommodations for a Branch Public Library. Passed.

Order authorizing suitable office accommodations to be procured for the Board of Directors for public institutions came up amended so as to provide for a "report to the City Council" on that subject. The Board concurred.

Order for issuing permits to build on the westerly side of Washington street, between Boylston and Avery streets. Passed.

Order to cancel the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse, Ward 16, provided it can be done by payment of expenses incurred by the purchaser, came up with an amendment to ascertain the probable cost of cancellation. The Board concurred.

Order to allow Company E, First Artillery, $450 for repairs and furniture in their armory. Passed—yeas 11, nays 0.

Request of Board of Health that a full salary of $1600 per annum be allowed the Assistant-Resident Physician at Deer Island. Referred to Committee on Public Institutions.

Requests from School Committee that additional primary school accommodation be furnished in the Bigelow District; that a suitable tablet be placed on exterior wall of the Dudley Schoolhouse; that additional temporary accommodations be furnished for primary scholars near Marlborough and Fairfield streets. Severally referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

Report of special commissioners on annexation of adjacent territory. (City Doc. No. 105.) Placed on file.

The report and order for the sale of the Oliver Primary Schoolhouse on Sumner street, East Boston, was, on motion of Alderman Hulbert, laid on the table.

Alderman Sayward expressed the desire that members would take notice of the order and make their objections before it was passed. Sometime ago a schoolhouse was sold and some objections were raised afterward.

FIRING CANNON ON THE COMMON.

The report relating to discharge of cannon on the Common, or public grounds, and passage of the ordinance recommended by the majority committee, with the additional words "or the Mayor," came up with a further amendment, to insert "or the Commander-in-Chief of militia."

Alderman Quincy—I hope we shall concur with this amendment, although in principle I don't subscribe to it. The authority will then be taken from all inferior officers and vested in the Commander-in-Chief, although in principle I don't see why the Commander-in-Chief shall not be required to come to City Hall for permission to use the Common as much as he would have to come to me for leave to use my back yard.

The Board concurred in the amendment, and the ordinance as amended was passed.

FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SEWERS.

The Superintendent of Sewers submitted an assessment of the expense of constructing sewer in Dudley and Dennis streets. Total cost, $9388; to be paid by individuals, $7041. Referred to Committee on Sewers.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Committee on Water, to whom was referred an order requesting the Cochituate Water Board to consider the expediency and report the cost of supplying the business portion of the city proper with salt water on the Holly system, for fire and sanitary purposes, made a report recommending the passage of the order.

Alderman Hulbert—I would ask what is the expense involved in doing this.

Alderman Stebbins—I am hardly prepared to answer that question, but I suppose it would involve the expense by the Water Board of an investigation by visiting other places and seeing tests. I would state, however, that the City Engineer and President of the Water Board have already visited New York and made an investigation, and are prepared to state the cost.

Alderman Hulbert—This is a very important thing. We are constantly patching up the Fire Department, and I would like to have the order lay over that I may look into the subject.

Alderman Stebbins—There is no objection.

The report and order were laid over.

Alderman Stebbins, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Samuel R. Russell, for an appropriation to cover the expense of giving an exhibition of his apparatus, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department be authorized to make an arrangement with Samuel R. Russell for an exhibition of his fire apparatus, at an expense not exceeding three hundred dollars, including the cost of the water; to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Report accepted and order passed.

— Alderman Stebbins, from the same committee, to whom was referred an order requesting the Water Board to place fire reservoirs at the junction of such streets as shall be agreed upon by the said board and the engineers of the Fire Department, reported that the order ought to pass.

Report accepted and order read twice and passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported favorably on the applications of Valentine Harding, S. W. Harvey and J. G. Chandler for innholders' license; and Simon S. Rankin, James P. Bell, Daniel Callahan, H. A. Stoehr, Henry P. Bambour, James Keenan, T. F. & J. A. Myers for victuallers' license; M. R. Noble, to give dramatic entertainment at Oakland Hall Sept. 24-26; T. F. Shaughnessey, et al., to give dramatic entertainment at Institute Hall Sept. 26; Thomas Connolly, for hack stand on corner of Boylston and Clarendon streets; A. B. Davis, for hack stand at High and Hartford streets; John V. Farrar, to exhibit panorama at Institute Hall Sept. 24, 25; William M. Maynard, for pawnbroker's license at 19 Brattle square; Banchi Barber, and ten other applicants, for bootblack and newsboy licenses; Daniel Brosnahan, to deal in second-hand articles at 44 Lincoln street; W. F. Holman, for transfer of intelligence office license to J. S. Starrett; Joseph Kyle, George M. Glazier, Daniel Doherty, F. H. Phillips, N. D. Farnam for wagon licenses; G. C. Coswell, T. Sullivan, W. Billings for transfer of wagon license; Marcus Griner and Charles D. Luckie for billiard license; Henry S. Harris and George N. Armstrong for auctioneers' license; Mary F. Welsh, to keep an intelligence office. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported unfavorably on the applications of E. F. Ramsell and Henry Mason for victuallers' license. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported orders of notice for hearings on next Monday at 4 P. M. on the petitions for sewers in Bremen street, between Brooks and Porter streets; in Crescent avenue and Carleton street; in Barton street, between Barton court and Poplar street; in Franklin street, between Walnut and Taylor streets; in Taylor street, between Franklin and Water streets, and in Water street, between Taylor and Walnut streets; in New Heath street, between Pynchon and Centre streets, and in Centre street, between Heath and Cedar streets. Severally accepted and orders passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported orders for the construction of common sewers in Washington street, between Franklin and Summer streets; and in Gough street, between South Margin and Green streets. Orders passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported "no action necessary" on the petition of John P. Squire & Co. for a commission to consider the subject of sewerage in Miller's River. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, submitted reports of sewer assessments and orders for the collection of the same as follows: George street—total cost $846 22, to individuals $634 67; Saratoga street between Bremen and Swift streets—total cost $2666 05, to individuals $999 54; Sawyer street—total cost $494 29, to individuals $370 02; Lexington street between Eagle and Prescott streets—total cost $2198 94, to individuals $1649 21; Vine street—total cost $432 30, to individuals $324 23. Reports accepted and orders passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Streets, reported an order to pay Nancy Shove $262 50, damages on account of the Washington-street extension. Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders as follows: Giving notice to James G. Groves to repair sidewalk on Washington street; notifying abutters on Washington street, between Essex street and Hayward place, to remove obstructions within ten days; directing the Superintendent of Streets to close Federal street, between Milk and Broad streets. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported the following orders, which were read once and laid over:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed in the execution of the order passed by the Board of Aldermen, December 11th, 1872, for the widening of Warren street, between Washington and Dudley streets, to pave the roadway of said street with small granite blocks; the expense thereof, not exceeding five thousand dollars in addition to the amount already appropriated, to be charged to the appropriation for widening Warren street.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to gravel Condor street, between Brooks and Glendon streets. Estimated cost, $2500.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to set the edgestones and pave the gutters on the northerly side of Egleston square, between Shawmut avenue and Walnut avenue; also to grade and surface drain said square. Estimated cost, $4000.

Ordered, That the street leading from Oliver street to Broad street, heretofore known as Sturgis street, be hereafter called and known as Franklin street, and that the Superintendent of Streets be directed to number said street in continuation of the street now known as Franklin street.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported leave to withdraw on the following petitions: Weston Gray, to be paid for grade damages at No. 81 White street; Henry Souther, for the removal of the tracks of the South Boston Railroad into the centre of Emerson street; C. Schwaaz et al., for removal of steps from the Maverick House; Howland Otis, Jr., and John Winn, to be paid for grade damages on Paris street; and no action necessary on petition of Winthrop Railroad Company, that the fence on Saratoga street, over Breed's Island, be set back. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported orders to pay grade damages as follows: Timothy Madden, $200, Paris street; Daniel and Patrick O'Connor, $410, Paris street; Thomas Lane, $400, Paris street. Severally read twice and passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the sum of $35 90 be abated from the assessment levied upon George Adams's heirs for a sewer in Newman and Lowland streets.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the armory of Company I, Ninth Regiment of Infantry, at No. 544 Washington street, be and it hereby is approved as a suitable and safe place for the deposit of arms and equipments.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Ordinances consider the expediency of amending the ordinance in relation to city deeds, by empowering the Mayor to execute all legal instruments necessary to recovery to persons entitled to redeem the same lands sold and bid in by the city for non-payment of taxes or assessments.

COLUMBUS-AVENUE EXTENSION.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, to whom was referred the petition of Jeffrey Richardson et al. for the discontinuance of a portion of Columbus avenue, between Providence street and Park square, submitted the following report: The portion of Columbus avenue lying between Ferdinand street and Church street was laid out as a public highway on the 9th of October, 1868; and the portion between Ferdinand street and Northampton street was laid out October 26, 1869. Although the city was not committed in any way to the extension of the avenue in a straight line to Park square, there seems to have been a general understanding on the part of the owners and occupants of estates southwesterly of Church street that the extension when made was to be in a straight line and of the full width of eighty feet.

In the latter part of 1871 the negotiations which had been carried on a number of years with the Boston & Providence Railroad Company resulted in the purchase by the city of the lands owned by the corporation lying between Church street and Pleasant street, Madison place and Providence street. The indenture which was entered into between the city and the railroad company recited that the purchase is made for the purpose of extending Columbus avenue to Providence street and Park square, as shown on a plan by the City Surveyor, dated December 1st, 1870; and the conveyance is upon the condition that Columbus avenue shall be laid out within the year 1871. It appears by referring to the plan mentioned in the indenture that the extension of the avenue in a straight line was intended, as the northerly line is drawn straight across the back yards of the estates on Boylston street, and the areas taken from each defined.

On the 21st of December, 1871, the Street Commissioners, after the usual notice and hearing to all parties interested, laid out Columbus avenue in a straight line, eighty feet wide, from Church street to Park square, and submitted their action to the City Council for consideration or rejection. When the matter came before the Board of Aldermen a remonstrance was received from Jeffrey Richardson and others, representing the six estates on Boylston street, portions of which were taken by the action of the Street Commissioners. A hearing before the full Board was assigned for the following week (Dec. 26) and the remonstrants then appeared and a portion of them stated their objections in full; the others withdrew their opposition when they learned the avenue must be laid out before the first of January, or the lands purchased by the city would be forfeited, but they expressed a wish to be heard at a future time on the discontinuance of a portion of the avenue laid out over their property. The plan of the Street Commissioners was then adopted unanimously by the two branches of the City Council.

In the following year, Mr. Richardson and the other owners of estates on Boylston street, petitioned the Board of Street Commissioners for the "discontinuance of a portion from the northerly side of Columbus avenue, at its entrance to Park square." After due notice in the daily papers a public hearing was given to the petitioners and all other persons interested. The owners and residents on the avenue appeared in opposition to the petition, and submitted a protest in writing against any alteration of the lines of the avenue, representing that the faith of the city was pledged to furnish a straight thoroughfare. The commissioners having declined to make any change, the Board of Aldermen, on the 12th of May last, ordered the occupants of estates on Boylston street to vacate the lands which projected over the line of the avenue as established in 1871. Upon this the petition now under consideration was presented, asking in effect, that the City Council would exercise the authority conferred upon it by the statute of 1872, and direct the Street Commissioners, by a two-thirds vote, to discontinue a portion of the avenue between Providence street and Park square.

The petitioners claim, and, as appears from the foregoing statement, with good reason, that the City Council has never had an opportunity to act independently upon this question. It may properly be inferred, however, from the action preceding the actual laying out of the avenue in 1871, that even if ample time had been allowed for independent action on the part of the City Council the result would have been the same. In considering the matter at this time we cannot ignore the fact that the avenue has been formally laid out and dedicated to the public use and that the burden of proof is upon the petitioners to show that the public safety and convenience would be promoted by the discontinuance of any portion of it. This they fail to do.

Although a slight deflection in the line at Providence street for the purpose of preserving the back yards of the estates on Boylston street might not interfere very seriously with the view from the avenue and the Common, it would in the opinion of the remonstrants tend to depress the value of estates abutting on the avenue. If any such change was made it would undoubtedly be used as an argument to secure a reduction of the assessments for betterments which are to be laid this fall on account of the extension to Park square. In contesting the matter before a jury it is not unlikely that the city would lose a larger sum in this way than it would incur for damages to the Boylston-street estates from the extension in a straight line. For these reasons the committee would recommend that the petitioners have leave to withdraw.

The report was accepted and sent down.

THE BACK BAY LANDS.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered that the Board of Street Commissioners in conjunction with the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, be requested to confer with the owners of the unfilled lands and flats lying between Beacon street, Western avenue, Longwood avenue, and the Boston & Providence Railroad, and prepare a plan for laying out streets and avenues over said district, and connecting these with other streets and avenues in the city. Passed.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Alderman Clark offered the following:

Ordered, That the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department be and he hereby is authorized to reorganize Engine Companies Nos. 4 and 7, so that they shall each consist of twelve men, as follows: Foreman, engineer of engine, fireman, two drivers and seven hosemen, the same to be permanently employed.

Alderman Stebbins explained that one of the engines is located on Bulfinch street and the other on East street.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark offered the following:

Ordered, That the sum of fifteen hundred dollars be and hereby is appropriated to pay for repairs made upon Steam Fire Engine No. 8; the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Ordered, That the sum of fourteen hundred and fifty dollars be and hereby is appropriated to pay for repairs made upon Steam Fire Engine No. 15; the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Alderman Clark—I would state that these two engines were disabled while going to fires. This is one of the most prolific sources of expenditure in the department, and it will be so until this City Government initiates the custom of making its own repairs.

A repair shop has been asked for by the Fire Department several times during the few years past, but it has never been obtained.

The orders were passed.

The order authorizing the Superintendent of Public Buildings to erect a bell tower on Hose House No. 12, at the corner of O and Fourth streets, South Boston, at a cost of $1500, passed at the last meeting, came up on a motion to reconsider offered by Alderman Gibson, who said—

My reason for making this motion is this: The present state of the Fire Department is unsettled. If we have a commission this bell tower will be entirely useless. It seems to me that until that question is settled we ought not to trammel the Fire Department by anything of that kind. If it is agreeable, I propose to move to lay the matter over till some further action is taken. It will cost about fourteen hundred dollars to put this bell tower on, and if the City Government should think fit to inaugurate a fire commission that money will be lost.

Alderman Stebbins—I don't see why, if we get a commission, it would necessarily do away with the bells.

Alderman Gibson—In New York they do not use the bells at all; no one knows anything of a fire there by the ringing of bells.

Alderman Emery—If there is going to be such a reorganization of the Fire Department as to do away with the bells, I am willing to vote to lay this matter over. But the citizens want something to tell them when there is a fire. If there is any part of the city where such an alarm is necessary it is where it is proposed to put this bell. I know of an occasion when there was a second alarm sounded, and some gentlemen who are members of the department were at work on that very house didn't hear the alarm.

Alderman Gibson—I think we have everything arranged for the Fire Department till it is reorganized.

Alderman Stebbins—If I understand the argument, it is that the Joint Special Committee have reported in favor of making the department permanent. I don't understand that the committee have had the courage to do this. This would at once add the sum of $500000 (speaking in round numbers) in salaries alone to the expenses of the department. I don't understand that the committee propose to do any such thing, but to put a portion of the department in the city proper on a permanent basis. The Joint Committee on the Fire Department are laboring for the same end, and an order passed this Board a few days ago to make the company in the burnt district a permanent one. I don't think the order ought to be reconsidered.

Alderman Quincy—If the gentleman who was last up had read the report of the committee with more care he would have seen that a permanent force is distinctly recommended. It was the intention in writing this report to recommend that the whole force should be permanent, but I do not think it follows necessarily that it would be best to table this matter of the bell tower. It might be a good thing to dispense with the system of public alarms, but that was a mere suggestion of the committee. Whether the Commissioners would agree to that suggestion is a question. If we have a commission it must be some time yet before it is organized. Until that time comes, it is certainly essential that the men should be notified of a fire in the most efficient manner, as the want of proper notification to them might result in more loss than this bell tower would cost.

Alderman Power—In addition to what the Alderman on my left has said I would say that I don't believe it is proper for the City Government to stand still while this question is in abeyance. At South Boston Point, where it is proposed to put this bell, when a moderately strong breeze is blowing from the eastward no alarm can be heard. This matter should go through as intended. An alarm bell is needed there very much. I don't think we should stop perfecting the department simply because a commission is talked of. It may be some time before that commission is settled upon, and even if one is appointed there is no immediate prospect of this alarm system being done away with.

Alderman Gibson—It does seem to me that we should know what we are going to do. We have bell towers up here and there at haphazard, without regard to system. I move to reconsider simply to lay the matter on the table till we can see what we are going to do. No additional jeopardy would be put on property by it. We are travelling on at a very expensive and reckless rate, to say the least. Here are petitions granted right off, and it is time that we had begun to look them over. We ought to do away with hundreds of miles of these telegraph wires, I think. It will be a very short time before this matter is decided since it has been reported by the committee.

Alderman Clark—The question is whether the bell is necessary in any emergency, whether there is a commission or not. If the proceedings in the Common Council, last week, are a criterion, it will be some time before the subject will get through that body, and it may take some time to get through this branch. In the meantime we may have a very large fire. It is our duty to look at this matter in a judicious manner, keeping the expenditures within a reasonable amount, but at all events to make the department as efficient as we possibly can, notwithstanding the possibility of our having a commission within the next three or four months. I don't believe in delaying these things. It is our duty to permanently man most of the fire engines in the city proper, and the people expect and demand it of us. I hope we shall not delay a single item, because it is in contemplation to have a commission. In my opinion we will do nothing that a commission would undo.

Alderman Emery—I can perceive no new light brought upon this subject. It has been talked over and examined, and if there is anything new I for one think we had better not take the back track. If there is a necessity for a bell tower anywhere it is down there, for when the wind is in a certain direction you will find it impossible to hear an alarm there. We have a fire over at Rainsford's Island tonight, I am told, but the alarm has not been heard here even. I hope the matter will not be laid over.

Alderman Stebbins—I have one single point to make. The Committee on Fire Department propose that the permanent men shall do patrol duty, the same as policemen. Now how could these men know when there is a fire except by having bells to sound an alarm. I am in favor of the men doing patrol duty, and think it will have a good effect on the community generally. I stated just now what would be the increase in the expense of the system, by having all the men permanently employed. The present pay roll is $263,000; to make the entire department permanent the pay roll would be $633,594.

Alderman Gibson—I want to remind gentlemen that the people haven't got confidence in the department. Now we shall have to leave the reorganization for some one else to do. Four thousand of the heaviest taxpayers have petitioned for a commission. I only move this reconsideration simply as an economical measure. I know there is no more danger for want of this bell than for want of any other. We have got the biggest department by half that there is on this continent today, and yet the public haven't got confidence in your ability to manage it. I fall back on the petitioners who say to the Board of Aldermen and the Common Council, you are not competent to manage the department.

Alderman Stebbins—As a member of the Joint Committee on Fire Department I propose to do my duty to the best of my ability as I understand it. I am not prepared to say I shall vote for or against a commission. I am looking at the case as it stands today, and I am willing to make, and wish to have, an effective department.

Alderman Sayward—The only question is whether we want a bell tower there or not. I believe there are bells enough. There are so many bells now that they conflict with one another. This new house is just completed and it will hardly pay, if the department is to be reorganized, to put the tower upon it at this time. It will mar the appearance of the house very much. There is a bell inside every engine house, and the men are not dependent on the alarm from the outside.

Alderman Clark—The order for this bell did not originate with the Committee on Fire Department. There is a Committee on Fire Alarms, and I would ask the gentleman from Ward 1 whether it is a fact that there is a necessity for this bell? We are not here to consider whether there is to be a commission. It may be that when the question comes up I shall hold up both hands for a commission. But that has nothing to do with making the Fire Department efficient at the present time. That question may come before us in a short time; it may go over to another year. Nine months have elapsed since the great fire and we are told that we have done nothing to make the department efficient. There is no doubt we have too small a department. There is no doubt that the number of our steam engines is too small, and that we have not men enough to work the apparatus properly. It is our duty as a Board of Aldermen to make this department efficient.

Alderman Quincy—We shall have time enough to discuss the question of a commission when it comes up. The question now is simply whether under the present system is there need of a bell to notify people in that vicinity of a fire. I assume that there is, as it has been recommended. If that is so it is clearly our duty, in order to complete our present defences, to vote for it. It is our duty to go on strengthening our lines of defence with the best means irrespective of the future. Unless I shall hear some authoritative statement that the bell is not needed in that part of the city I shall vote for it.

Alderman Power—I don't suppose it matters much whether people over here can hear an alarm from a South Boston bell or not. The committee went to the spot, viewed the site, thought it was needed, and reported in favor of putting the bell on that house. When the wind blows stiff from the east no bells can be heard over there. Those who live in that vicinity believe a striking bell is much needed there.

Alderman Gibson—Some men may think it right to put out millions of dollars from the pockets of the tax payers, without regard any to the fact of its being needed, but I do not. I want just what is substantial, right and equitable in all parts of the city. The people have not confidence in the ability of this Board to manage the department and have petitioned for the establishment of a Commission. And it is our duty to abide by and perform the wishes of the people.

Alderman Power—I think the gentleman has no warrant for making any such remarks. I don't think the public has lost confidence in this board to manage the Fire Department. It is the opinion of the whole country that this department had been well managed up to the time of the great fire. Because some of our citizens have sent in petitions asking that the department may be taken from the City Government and put into the hands of a commission, is no reason for him to say so. It is a way they have of communicating with the Board. I expect the gentlemen here will give this matter proper attention, and if we think it should be given to a commission the public will be satisfied; and if we decide that the department had better remain in the hands of the City Government there will be no want of confidence in this body. Although a member of it, I may say that this City Government is the best Boston has had for years, and I can add with truth that the government of this city in the past has been a pattern to city governments all over the Union.

Alderman Gibson—I don't think the gentleman has made anything particular by his remarks. We have petitions here that speak for themselves, and the evidence given in the other room proves pretty conclusively that the people had no confidence in the management of the Fire Department by the City Government. I don't believe there is any one who wants any additional light on this subject. I believe we have as good a city government this year as we ever had in many particulars, and I believe a little better in most of them. But the people demand something better in the Fire Department. As the sentiment of the Board appears to be adverse to a reconsideration of the order, I withdraw my motion.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom was recommitted the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Company for leave to extend their location by the construction of tracks in Stoughton street, Ward 16, reported the accompanying order of location:

Ordered, In addition to the rights heretofore granted to the Metropolitan Railroad Company, to lay down tracks in several of the streets of the city of Boston, said company shall have the right to lay down a double track on Stoughton street, from Hudson street to Hancock street, and to connect said double track with the tracks now laid on down Stoughton street, near Hudson street, and on Hancock street at Upham's Corner.

The right to lay down the tracks located by this order is upon the condition that the whole work of laying down the tracks, the precise location of the same, the form of rail to be used, and the kind and quality of pavement to be used in paving said track, shall be under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Committee on Paving and the Superintendent of Streets, and shall be approved by them.

Also upon the condition that the said Metropolitan Railroad Company shall accept this order of location, and agree in writing to comply with its several conditions, and file said acceptance and agreement with the City Clerk, within thirty days of the date of its passage: otherwise, it shall be null and void.

The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Company for leave to lay their tracks in Beacon street, reported an order of notice for a hearing of all parties interested on Monday, Oct. 13, at 4 o'clock P. M. Report accepted and order passed.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
SEPTEMBER 25, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

On motion of Mr. Collins of Ward 2, the roll was called, and thirty-four members answered to their names.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Petition of Samuel C. Davis, for damages, referred to Committee on Claims.

The report (leave to withdraw) on petition of Jeffrey Richardson et al., for a discontinuance of a portion of Columbus avenue, between Providence street and Park square, which came up accepted, having been read, Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 said that in this connection he would like to present a petition, which was from Jeffrey Richardson, William B. Spooner and Newell S. Thompson, representing that they believe a misapprehension exists as to the effect of modifying the order of the Street Commissioners laying out Columbus avenue in a straight line on its westerly side; they ask for a hearing before the Common Council to show how great expense can be saved the city and great inconvenience to the petitioners can be avoided by a slight deflection from a straight line upon said side of said street.

The President stated the question to be on the acceptance of the report.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I would state that both the petitioners and remonstrants had separate hearings before the Committee on Streets, who are unanimous in the report submitted.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16—I desire to say in the same connection that I present the petition to the Council as requested, and that the committee are unanimous in their action.

The report was accepted, and on motion of Mr. Flynn the petitioners were given leave to withdraw.

Order for Committee on Ordinances to consider the expediency of amending the ordinance in relation to City Deeds, by empowering the Mayor to execute all legal instruments to reconvey to persons entitled to redeem lands bid in by the city for non-payment of taxes. Passed, in concurrence.

The order appropriating $1500 to pay for repairs on Steam Fire Engine No. 8 being under consideration, Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said—

I would like to ask some explanation of this matter. It is for repairs of Steam Fire Engine No. 8. I wish some one would explain what the repairs are and when they are to be done.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—It is done by authority of the Committee on Fire Department. The engine is at the repair shop; the machinery was out of order, and the order to have it repaired was given in the usual course of committee business, and is perfectly proper.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—That does not answer my question. I want to know when it is proposed to make the repairs. It is a proper question and I want a proper answer.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—If the office of the Chief-Engineer were open I could answer the question exactly. I think the engine was sent there last week. It is not proposed to let an engine lie idle when the Council is not in session, and there may be use for it.

Mr. Shaw—That satisfies me that the Committee on Fire Department are constantly doing what they have no right to do. Why come here at all when they have the right to make repairs on the engines? Why don't they come here and ask for money when it is needed? Nothing was said of the condition of this engine till after the work was done. This is perhaps a small matter, but it is the same principle on which I have spoken two or three times. It is the same principle on which the stand pipe was put up. If I would tell the whole truth I could tell the reason. It is against the principle of right and justice for the committee to have work done until they have got authority from the City Government. That is why I ask this question, and I hope this order will not pass. I have been into the Auditor's office and have found out a good many things and have the records here in my pocket. It is the principle which I am contending for; it is demanded by the people that before contracts are made for the spending of money the proper authority shall be given by the City Council. This matter, in itself, don't amount to much, but it is the principle that I desire to attack and which attack I hope to maintain.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—If the gentleman knows so much about why these engines were put into the repair shop, he need not have asked anything about it. I think the people of Boston don't want an engine to wait two or three weeks doing nothing, when it is likely to be called into use at any time. It is competent and proper for the Committee on Fire Department, when any engines are out of repair, to have them repaired. The gentleman has thrown out insinuations two or three times about repairs being made by the Committee on Fire Department, and if he knows so much I wish he would state the facts.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—I don't believe this Council wants to stand here and split hairs about small matters. If an engine breaks down Thursday night going to a fire, I don't believe the people want her to remain idle until the next week. For my part I am willing to take the responsibility, and if the gentleman from Ward 5 wants to rake down the Committee on Fire Department I am willing he should.

Mr. Shaw—I don't propose to rake anybody down. If the gentleman wants to get excited he may. Now, sir, it is not only that an engine is at the repair shops. There are a great many more matters. There was the case of the fire boat, which was put on the stocks by order of the committee, when there had been no competition as to the work, and there came an order in here to pay the expenses. I was called over to see the trial of the engine and hose. While I stood there at the wharf I was told the boat was to cost $1700. Within three days the bill was brought in for $3700. I don't charge the gentleman with trying to deceive me. Nevertheless, that is a fact. The boat was put on the stocks weeks before the order was sent in. I find in the Chief-Engineer's report that the expense was $19,000 for the fire boat, when the fact is it cost $30,000. I want to see things in black and white, and I intend, when I am not satisfied, to ask some explanation. And I am not going to be snapped up here in this sort of a way and told that I am looking after the Committee on Fire Department. My attention has been called to many matters, and when the proper time comes I propose to state what I know, notwithstanding gentlemen in this Council are interested in them. I charge no member of this present City Government with corruption, but I propose to have my say upon such matters.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I am tempted, Mr. President, to make one remark at this time, because it seems quite opportune. When a committee of the City Government takes any action, that action is liable to inquiry. So on this occasion, when the Fire Committee has ordered an engine to be repaired, or when the fire boat has been repaired, it is always liable to immediate investigation on the part of the members of the City Government. So the gentleman from Ward 5 very properly asks for information, which has been given him, why an engine and a fire boat have been repaired. That, Mr. President is one of the great advantages of having the business of the Fire Department conducted by committees of the City Government. But while the gentleman claims the right at all times to require information regarding the conduct of the committees, he must admit that if all the power of the City Government was given to a commission it would be beyond his power to make any inquiries regarding the expenditures of the commission, whatever. They might be as extravagant and as wild as possible; he could make no inquiry, while the committee of the City Government are always ordering expenditures at their peril. It seems to me that the position of the gentleman from Ward 5 is an argument for retaining the control of the department in the hands of the committee of the City Government, and he will vote for it if he votes according to the position he has taken.

Mr. Shaw—I presumed that we were not arguing the question of a fire commission. I notice the animus of my friend and I have witnessed his legal acumen. I shall vote in accordance with my convictions and the dictates of my conscience. I shall not place myself so out of the pale of parliamentary practice as to debate the subject of a fire commission under the head of the matter which we are now discussing. I don't come here as a special pleader for anybody or anything. But I propose to speak plainly.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—The gentleman from Ward 5 frequently gets up here and says he don't mean to bring charges of corruption, but he keeps insinuating that there is something wrong in the Fire Department.

Mr. Shaw—I distinctly stated that I charged no man.

The President—Does the gentleman from Ward 14 yield the floor; the Chair decides that it is not a point of order.

Mr. Jones—Well, I invite the gentleman to go up and investigate the affairs of the Fire Department; he will find the whole thing recorded, the accounts for every engine in black and white, and I think it would be better for him to investigate before coming here and insinuating that some one is making a dollar out of the Fire Department, for that is all it amounts to.

Mr. Shaw—The gentleman is in error. I distinctly stated that I charged no one with corruption. If the gentleman construes my language that way he is wrong. I have not been peeping into the matters of the Fire Department, as some members have been doing over to Parker's to see if the Joint Special Committee have been there to dinner. Chickens will come home to roost, sometimes.

Mr. Train of Ward 13—I would like to know if this is a new appropriation.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—It is to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Mr. Train—Then it seems to me that there is no necessity for any further discussion. If we have a Committee on Fire Department we cannot ignore them altogether. If they are not competent to bring in bills, they had better be discharged. I move the previous question.

The main question was ordered, and the order was passed to a second reading and laid over.

The order appropriating $1450 to pay for repairs on Steam Fire Engine No. 15 having been read once, Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said—

I should like to know what this is; what is to be done with that engine, where she is and how long she has been in the repair shops, if at all. The committee are not obliged to answer any question unless they desire to. I have heard something of this and I have reason for making the inquiry.

The order was passed to a second reading and laid over.

The three following papers were severally read once and laid over:

Order authorizing Engine Companies 4 and 7 to be reorganized so that each shall consist of twelve men.

Report and order authorizing an arrangement to be made with Samuel R. Russell, for an exhibition of his fire apparatus, at not exceeding $300.

Resolve and order from Street Commissioners for the widening of Essex street, at corner of Washington street, at an adjudged expense of $770.

Report in favor of the preamble and order requesting the Water Board to place fire reservoirs at the junction of such streets as shall be agreed upon by them and the engineers of the Fire Department. Report accepted and order passed, in concurrence.

Order requesting the Street Commissioners, with the Committee on Streets, to confer with the owners of unfilled lands and flats between Beacon street, Western avenue, Longwood avenue, and the Boston & Providence Railroad; and prepare a plan for laying out streets and avenues over said district.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—At the suggestion of one of the Board of Street Commissioners I move to amend by inserting the word "principal" before the word "streets," so that it shall read "prepare plans for laying out the principal streets and avenues over said district."

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12—I move to still further amend by striking out all after the words "Boston & Providence Railroad" and adding the following: "Also between South Boston, Dorchester, Dorchester Bay, Savin Hill and Dorchester avenue, and prepare plans for laying out streets and avenues over said district."

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I should think that perhaps one piece of work for the Commissioners was enough at a time. Can't the amendment come in as a separate order? I did n't know that they were laying that territory out.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12—In regard to the importance of this matter, I would say that parties are now at work grading some hundred acres of marsh land in that section of the city. They have made preparations and have already commenced the work of dredging to lay a sea wall on Dorchester Bay. The land on the Back Bay is simply for dwelling houses, and I am sorry to say that we have not had a City Government in seven years, except the last one, which has comprehended its duty in regard to the development of the commercial resources of the city of Boston. Here is a tract between Dorchester and Savin Hill which is ten times as important as those mud holes on the Back Bay. As the work of filling a portion of that land is now going on, it is more important to the city that the Street Commissioners should take into consideration the matter of laying out streets in that section. I think it very important that the amendment be attached to the order.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—It seems to me that we had better not grasp too much at one time. I have no objection to the amendment of the gentleman from Ward 12 as a separate order, but if we have that mud hole on the Back Bay, it seems to me that we are entitled to have it filled up. Let the one having the most pressing necessity take precedence.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—Inasmuch as this subject of laying out streets in Dorchester Bay is new to most members of the Council, I think it would be better to come in as a separate proposition and be referred to the Committee on Streets to consider.

Mr. Loring's amendment was adopted—20 yeas, 13 nays.

The order, as amended, was then passed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The five following papers came up as unfinished business and received concurrent action:

Order authorizing not exceeding $2000 to be expended in improving the South Boston squares. Passed.

Order authorizing the additional sum of not exceeding $4730 to be expended for labor and team work in the Department of the Common and Public Grounds. Passed.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $4500, to be made in grading and improving Orchard square. Passed.

Order authorizing an additional expenditure of not exceeding $1200, in erecting and repairing fences on and around the public grounds. Passed.

Order authorizing an additional expenditure of $200, in erecting and furnishing a wagon shed and tool house on the Common. Passed.

The orders to complete the furnishing of Grammar Schoolhouse, L street, at an estimated cost of $7500, and for a transfer of said amount from the Reserved Fund, was rejected—yeas 36, nays 0; two-thirds of those present not voting in the affirmative. Subsequently, on motion of Mr. Caton of Ward 11, the vote was reconsidered and the orders were laid on the table.

The following papers were first laid on the table on motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, and subsequently on motion of Mr. Page were taken up and passed—yeas 34, nays 0:

Order to allow for rent of headquarters of Ninth Regiment M. V. M., 562 Washington street, $600 per annum.

Order to discontinue allowance for rent of headquarters of First Regiment M. V. M., at 11 Pemberton square, and that $600 be allowed for said headquarters in Boylston Hall.

Order to allow for rent of armory of Company D, First Regiment of Infantry, at 1806 Washington street, $1200 per annum.

Order to allow for rent of armory of Company I, First Regiment of Infantry, in American Hall, Ward 16, $575 per annum.

Order to allow for rent of armory of Company I, Ninth Regiment of Infantry, at 544 Washington street, $1200 per annum.

Orders authorizing erection of a hook and ladder house on Dudley and Forest streets, at an estimated cost of $21,000; and for a loan therefor.

Mr. Train of Ward 10—I would ask of this hook and ladder house whether it is proposed to put a new apparatus or to move one into it now stationed at No. 4's house. I can't see the propriety of having a new hook and ladder house there when there is enough already in the neighborhood. I move to lay the order on the table.

The motion prevailed.

REORGANIZATION OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 called up the special assignment of the evening, being the report and evidence on the reorganization of the Fire Department, and the cause of the fire May 30, 1873, and ordinance recommended therein to establish a fire department. (Printed City Doc. No. 97.) Minority report on same subject. (Printed City Doc. No. 106.) Ordinance and orders accompanying said minority report. (Printed City Doc. No. 109.)

The question was on giving the ordinance reported by the majority a second reading.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—At the last meeting of the Council I was interrupted in the course of my remarks, and was compelled to stop where I was. I will say, however, that if my worthy friend from Ward 3 had let me alone, I should have concluded what I had to say in five minutes. I shall probably take a little more than that now, because of facts which have come to my knowledge today. Before giving those figures and facts, I desire to make a personal statement. It was industriously circulated at the last meeting by those opposed to the reorganization of the Fire Department, that I had prepared a speech which would take three hours to deliver; consequently some parties left. I don't suppose I could make a speech two hours in length, which I would be glad to read in the papers. It has also been circulated industriously that the great interest which I take in this matter is for selfish ends; that I expect to be appointed on this Board of Fire Commissioners. One is just as true as the other. I am not a candidate for any office of the kind. I hope people of tender consciences and large corns on their feet will remember that, and give me credit for candor at least. I was discussing the propositions made by the gentleman from Ward 12. I will not now bore the Council with any repetition of those matters except to refer to some of the statements in the minority report. I find here that somebody is charged with going to the State House and getting a law passed. I don't know of any law that is referred to, and my honorable friend who is a member of the committee ought to know better. I think the statement on the fifteenth page of the report, if written by him, is a mistake. [Mr. Shaw read from minority report in regard to the political design of the commission.] This is one of those statements which no one can answer because there is no foundation for it. The statement of my friends is that his great objection to the appointment of a commission is that it will be a political machine. Now it is proposed that the Mayor of the city, whoever he may be, shall nominate or appoint three men as commissioners, one to hold place for one year, one for two, and one for three years; that the nomination or appointment shall go to the City Council for confirmation. I see nothing political so far. Where does the political influence come in? The gentleman then offers the proposition that a committee of three of the Board of Aldermen shall take this whole matter of the department in charge. Everybody knows that the committee are to be elected every year, while the commissioners are to be appointed one for one year, another for two and another for three. The commission is not elected by the people, but is in the hands of the City Government. Now show me how the political influence is there. This one man is to be appointed by the Mayor and confirmed by the City Council every year, and the three men go before the people to be elected each year at the polls. Are not those gentlemen who go before the people three times as much political as the one who is appointed? The question answers itself, and I leave my friend's argument, and the minority report in that way. Now I hear my friend quoting what is done in New York, and speaking of the corruptions of commissions. Let us see what George T. Pope, president of the Continental Insurance Company, who had thirty-eight years' experience, says—[Mr. Shaw read from Mr. Pope's evidence before the joint special committee in regard to the work of commissions.] Now who are the gentlemen who came before the committee to oppose the commission? Why my friend from Ward 3 did us the honor to give his advice. [Mr. Shaw read the testimony of Mr. Welts of Ward 3, before the joint special committee, in opposition to a commission.] Why, that is the very argument I have been using against that of my friend from South Boston, and almost in so many words. Well, there is one other gentleman, and he is my friend of about three hundred avoirdupois, Mr. Josiah Dunham of South Boston. It is a most singular fact, that all this minority report comes from South Boston, with its broad avenues and thrifty population. It is singular that Mr. Dunham should come before the committee, and says he would not have a commission unless appointed by Judge Ames of the Probate Court. The whole gist and substance of what the opponents say is a very strong argument in favor of a commission. The gentleman from Ward 12 said our department is composed of the best men and the best apparatus in the world. I admit it all, and I have a few statistics that will prove it. It is a fact that with all this enormous cost of $680,000 paid for buildings and apparatus in the department for the last twelve years, not including the current expenses of the department, we have obtained one of the best departments in the world, but why have we sustained such great losses? There is a screw loose somewhere. Nobody in Boston would complain of these enormous expenditures if we had corresponding results. I trust the Council will bear with me while I give the figures, which I suppose will be criticised as the others have been. I have given a great deal of time to the investigation of this subject. Many are asking the question why I am about the City Hall so much. Well, perhaps it will develop itself by and by. We have twenty-three organized fire companies, each with steam fire engine, and one engine with no organized company, making twenty-four, in first-class condition. We have three or four "spares," old engines which can be used in an emergency. We have seven hook and ladder trucks and twelve hose carriages. In addition to all this, by orders voted by us this year, we have four first-class engines, costing $18,000, five hose carriages costing $4500, one hook and ladder truck costing $1800, ordered to be added by vote of the City Council this year. The population of Boston is 270,000, and the area is 9902 acres. New York has thirty-eight steam engines, fifteen hook and ladder trucks, for a population of 983,284, to an area of 14,500 acres. New York's population is 264 per cent. greater than Boston's and her area 4600 acres more. The present apparatus and organizations of Philadelphia are twenty-four organized companies, each with steam fire engines, three engines without companies, five trucks and hook and ladder companies, three small hand engines in the suburbs. Philadelphia's population is 706,569, with an area of 82,560 acres. The population of Philadelphia is 161 per cent. larger than Boston, and Philadelphia's area is 700 per cent. greater than Boston. Philadelphia is more than two and a half times as large in population as Boston, and eight times as large in territory. The present apparatus and organization of the Fire Department in Brooklyn, N. Y., consists of sixteen companies, each with steam fire engine, five hook and ladder trucks. Brooklyn's population is 434,929; area 12,800 acres. Brooklyn's population is sixty per cent. larger than Boston, and the area 3000 acres larger. And yet the Fire Department of Brooklyn in 1871 cost $277,963 48, while that of Boston cost $418,507 21. Brooklyn's department in 1872 cost $319,550 49; Boston's in 1872 was $468,843 50. Brooklyn's appropriation for 1873 was $317,800; Boston's for the same year was $550,000. Now we will go abroad a short distance, over to London, which in the city proper covers 725 square acres, but her jurisdiction in fire matters extends over the metropolis, covering more than 78,000 square acres, and her population is 3,340,000, while Boston had, May 1, 1872, 29,736 houses and 734 unfinished houses, making in all 30,470. There were built in London during the ten years ending in 1872, 149,905 houses, or in other words, about five times as many houses were built in London during the ten years last past as there were in Boston altogether May, 1872, and yet the expenditures for supporting the Fire Department of Boston for 1872 were $100,000 more than the expenses of the London department for same year, and this exclusive entirely of the extra expenditure on account of the November fire. Now we come to the expense per capita in the several cities.

	Population.	Exp's of Dep't.	Per capita
London.....	3,340,000	about $30,000	5d
New York.....	983,000	997,266	$1 01½
Philadelphia.....	706,000	*377,191	53½
St. Louis.....	360,000	166,315	46½
Chicago.....	380,000	382,000	1 00
Baltimore.....	281,000	160,635	57
Boston.....	270,000	450,000	1 66%
Cincinnati.....	221,000	281,935	1 27

*On same basis as Boston accounts are made up, not including $30,546 37 for rents and repairs in Philadelphia—in Boston those charges are for Public Buildings, say whole expense in Philadelphia $407,737 45, less $30,546 37, leaves $377,191 08.

The Fire Department of Boston (current expenditures exclusive of the great November fire) for 1872 cost every man, woman and child in Boston 1.66%; while in London it cost only 5d and Philadelphia 53½ cents.

Now I think these figures will speak for themselves and I ask for them the criticism of the sharpest of the sharp. I am ready to meet any other proposition they may bring. I know that the people of Boston, the merchants and mechanics, professional men, women and children are looking to us for relief. It is expected that we will meet this matter manfully. We want no dodging because we happen to be on the same committee, nor because we belong to any other organization. Nobody is to be intimidated; I do not propose to be intimidated because a member says, "I will demolish you when I get the floor." I suppose, because I have looked into this matter with great interest, that I am to be trampled upon. Perhaps it is. I propose to do what I believe to be right, and I think we are not doing right by the citizens of Boston if we delay the passage of this matter. I hope we shall act fairly, and that every gentleman will rise in his place and meet the issue, and not be standing around talking of men's private interests. Let us face our constituents. I am ready to face mine and give a reason for the faith that is in me. If the measure is to be defeated, it will not be because I have not advocated its passage, and if any member has anything to say of the active stand I have taken, I am ready to meet it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I have listened to the gentleman with great pleasure and interest. He seems to be the best member of the City Government for getting into a small space and crawling out of it. The gentleman tries to forestall everything. I have taken some interest in this matter. It is true I have not had the time to spare that the gentleman has. My time spent in this building has n't been as great as his. But I have been in the Council eight years, and I think I know where to hunt for figures as well as the gentleman from Ward 5 does. He claims to be a representative of the people. Well, I represent in part a constituency of seven hundred votes, which place me in this position; he has but 250 to place him where he is. In reading a certain paper I find it says figures don't lie. But the makers of certain figures make mistakes. I have certain figures here, giving the cost of the Boston Fire Department, which I will read. [Mr. Wells then read the following tabulated statement, the column headed "Mr. Shaw's figures" being those given by that gentleman at the last meeting:]

Years.	Mr. Shaw's Figures.	From the Auditor's Report.
1860-61.....	$112,098 53	$105,894 72
1861-62.....	81,656 07	80,419 51
1862-63.....	107,555 74	96,936 10
1863-64.....	126,429 68	114,704 13
1864-65.....	158,177 31	142,877 57
1865-66.....	151,922 65	165,605 21
1866-67.....	177,743 81	151,624 63
1867-68.....	230,554 53	180,218 46
1868-69.....	284,753 03	229,047 43
1869-70.....	344,558 64	286,275 29
1870-71.....	418,507 21	383,283 11
1871-72.....	468,843 50	399,249 63
1872-73.....	661,842 25	605,310 90

During the years 1860 and 1866, inclusive, the engine, hose and hook and ladder houses were in charge of the Boston Fire Department, and the expense of building new houses and repairing old ones is included in the Auditor's figures.

In 1866-69 Roxbury was annexed, bringing into the department three additional assistant engineers and five extra companies.

In 1870-71 Dorchester was annexed, bringing into the department six additional assistant engineers and eight extra companies; the City Council also voted to pay the Water Board $54,990 for the care of hydrants and the use of water for extinguishing fires.

In 1871 there was paid the Water Board $59,730 for care of hydrants and for water.

During the year 1872-3 the following extra expenditures occurred; Paid the Water Board $73,382; for fire boat, $31,002 39; on account of fire Nov. 9, $29,185 25; expenses of Coliseum, $2551 30; horse distemper, $1327; making a total of $137,447 94 for extraordinary expenses, which is included in the Auditor's report.

Now, the gentleman's figures—where he got them I can't tell, neither do I care—may tell us about Baltimore or New York fire departments, but they do not tell the truth about Boston. I told the gentleman that the expense of the Baltimore and New York fire departments was greater per man than that of Boston, and I believe he telegraphed for the information, but he don't give it to this Council. He has quoted my saying before the committee. I still hold to that view. I am opposed to a commission. The gentleman stated that the expenses of the Joint Fire Committee were so-and-so. I happen to have the honor of having been on that committee two years, and that committee never spent anything in proportion to what the joint special committee has. And figures won't lie either. I would ask the gentleman if every member of this Council should undertake the job of hunting up the doings of the other, where would they bring up? He can undertake to hunt up my record. I stand clearer than he does, if he does preach honesty and economy. If the gentleman wishes me to state what I know I can do it. If he does undertake to be a commissioner he can never get my vote. Good men don't look for those positions. They are obtained by some old hacks who can't get an honest living outside, who have n't got the manhood to take off their coats, who want an elevator and ask for it every year. If the gentleman has devoted so much time to hunting up figures they don't compare well with those of the Auditor.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—The gentleman has referred to me personally. I referred to him by his published record. Now he brings out his slang upon me personally. I'll say to him, "Come on, Macduff." If he has got a charge to bring, let him charge it before me in this Council if he dares. I say it plainly, distinctly, possibly at the expense of being called to order. He charges distinctly that my figures don't agree with the Auditor's. I challenge him to show one single item a cent different from the auditor's. They are figures which I got from the Auditor's books, and I have them here in my package. Now let the gentleman come home, Don Quixote as he is.

"Let the Don Quixote of Ward 3
Aim his fiery shafts at me,
Feeble shadow that I am.

[Laughter.]

Let him play his game of bluff,
Give him length of rope enough,
He's sure to hang himself."

[Laughter.]

What do the gentleman's figures show? Has he shown one item of proof that my figures are not correct? It is out of place to say he will not vote for me. He is out of place to come here and intimate that I will ask his vote. There is honor among men, or there should be. I can listen to the gentleman with admiration and delight when he talks good sense. But when he makes an insinuation because I happen to take an interest in a matter as it is my duty to do, I don't want to say it is n't gentlemanly. It is out of place. Now, the gentleman says I have expended more than the Joint Fire Committee. I know where he gets his information, and I know who is instigating him. It is not a member of this Council. I have no jobs with the city; I don't work for the Fire Department. I never received a cent from the city in my life, except, perhaps, when I may have been on a jury some time ago. I don't want to make a charge here against any one, but when a gentleman flings an insinuation at me about some two-penny job, in which the committee joined with me, and authorized me to do, it is small potatoes to proceed from the gentleman from Ward 3, and any gentleman would scorn such a mean contemptible slur. Let him show the dollars and cents which have been expended by me and the committee of which I have the honor to be a member. I have almost a good mind to call for an investigation, and we will have an investigation of the Committee on Fire Department. I am not to be cowed down and bluffed down by any such propositions. When I get up here and argue a subject to the best of my poor ability I expect to be respected. When they begin to fling at me they will find that a game at which two can play.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I have always understood that my friend from Ward 5 was an old warrior, but I am not an old man, and have been in the business but a short time. I will stand by those figures, and if they are not correct I will resign my seat in this Council. Now he dares me to make a charge. I was not born in the woods to be scared by an owl—

The President—I would remind the gentlemen that this personal discussion must not go on any longer. The Chair does not understand that any charge has been made.

Mr. Wells—I made no charge. I said that his figures were not correct.

The President—Gentlemen will avoid any personalities.

Mr. Wells—I stand by those figures. Anything I have stated I will stand by. He can overhurl the committee; they will stand before him and their constituents too. I say that the expenses of each member of the Committee on Fire Department are not as large in proportion as those of the gentleman. He stated that he dared me. I will state for the information that I saw a bill passed into the Alderman's chamber of a hundred and some odd dollars on a prize drill, and I don't know whether it is paid or not, and I should like to ask the gentleman on whose authority that bill was run up.

Mr. Shaw—Does the gentleman desire an answer?

The President—An answer will not be in order, as it does not appertain to the question under discussion.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—I had no idea that such a hornet's nest was going to be stirred up, or that we should have had to take notice of which of the committees had eaten dinner. I think we have more important business before us. I have listened attentively, and I trust profitably, to all the arguments on this subject, and I have decided to vote in favor of the majority report; and I am happy to say that I have arrived at this conclusion without feeling obliged to find fault with, or to abuse, any one connected with the Fire Department as at present organized. I do not profess to be an expert in these matters, and I am therefore willing to rely on those who are. I readily admit that we have a body of able and experienced engineers and firemen—an equipment of engines and apparatus said to be equal to that of most other cities—in short, a working force well adapted for the work to be done. And yet there is evidently something necessary to meet promptly and efficiently the public demand. Now a large and in-ought to be able to get a vote at the next meeting. The question is assigned for half-past eight. I move that the question be taken at half-past nine o'clock on the adoption of the ordinance.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—I am in favor of the motion, but the limitation is too near. I would prefer ten or half-past. I move to substitute half-past ten.

Mr. Denny accepted the amendment, and the motion to take the vote at half-past ten was carried.

PETITION FOR DAMAGES.

Mr. Thacher of Ward 15 presented the petition of Joshua H. Pitman, representing that he is the owner of house and land No. 89 Charter street; from which he derived an income by renting to tenants; that in January last the Board of Health ordered the house to be vacated, that it might be used for a smallpox hospital, in consequence of which the proprietor has suffered loss and damage in loss of rents, and repairs made and other expenses incurred, amounting to $493 85, which sum he asks may be allowed to him as compensation for the actual loss and damage sustained in consequence of said action of the Board of Health. Referred to the Committee on Health.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Committee on Public Buildings, reported inexpedient on the petition of the Baptist Church Extension Society for the use of the old Franklin Schoolhouse, for Sabbath services, the building being in use by the city. Accepted.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred that portion of the report of the Trustees of the Public Library relating to the better protection of the library building against fire, reported that some of the precautions recommended in the report are now being made, and the committee are of the opinion that with the additional protection of a standpipe carried to the roof, with a proper means for raising hose on the outside wall, together with the covering of the lights with iron netting, the building will be as secure as is possible, unless, as is suggested by the Examining Committee of the Trustees, double iron shutters be added to the outside. The committee favor the idea of Mr. Justin Winsor, Superintendent of the Public Library, that the present iron shutters can be made secure against fire by the placing of wet blankets or sailcloth between the shutters and the windows, furnishing a safer and better protection to the building than the outside row of iron shutters would be without the wet blankets or cloths. They recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to place Hyatt lights with raised wire netting, to protect the same, upon the roof of the Public Library Building, and provide the central lantern with iron shutters; also that the water pipe be extended to the top of the building so that a hand hose can be attached; also to provide suitable apparatus to hoist hose to the roof from the outside of the building, at an estimated cost of seventy-five hundred dollars; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

On motion of Mr. Caton, the rules were suspended and the order was passed.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 offered the following:

Ordered, That the bill of John L. Cook, police officer, for extra services performed, amounting to $25, be allowed for payment by the Auditor of Accounts, provided it is approved in the usual manner.

Mr. Pickering—I would like, if there is no objection, to have the rules suspended, that the order might be passed tonight. The bill is for extra services for transporting the mail from the Post Office to the City Hall.

The rules were suspended, and the order was passed.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 presented the following:

Ordered, That the order passed by the City Council and approved by the Mayor September 17, 1873, for the purchase of W. R. Clark of the Fort Hill wharf estate, so called, be and the same is hereby amended so as to allow the conveyance of said estate to the city of Boston, subject to a mortgage of fifty thousand dollars bearing interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, said sum to be deducted from the amount of $160,000 authorized to be paid by said order.

Mr. Flynn—I would state that the party who holds the mortgage is desirous of still retaining it there, and does not want to release the right. It runs out in May, and draws seven per cent.

The order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12 the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
SEPTEMBER 29, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

JURORS DRAWN.

Thirty-six traverse Jurors were drawn for the October term of the Superior Criminal Court for Suffolk County.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Constables—Dennis J. Gorman, Elbridge G. Wallis. Special Police without pay—Henry A. Davis. Undertaker—William R. Whitney. Members of the Fire Department—William Chapman, Charles R. Classes, Henry B. Phillips, Dennis McCarty, William J. Large, Edward H. Sawyer, Erastus E. Jeffrey, James E. Dooley, William G. Whitney, John H. Marks, Frederick Hill, Henry M. Dole, Thomas F. Lyons, John A. Ryan, Charles A. Ryams, Charles E. Ramsdell, James J. Hughes, Stephen W. Fletcher, Almon H. Egerton, George F. Marden.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The orders of notice for sewers in Crescent avenue and Carlton street, in Bremen street, in Barton street, in New Heath street, in Franklin, Taylor and Water streets, were severally considered, and there being no objection offered, the petitions were recommended to the Committee on Sewers.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

To the Committee on Claims. Mary O'Neil, to be paid for personal injuries received in Essex street on December 8, owing to defect in the sidewalk, by which she fell, dislocated her hip and broke her thigh bone.

To the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings. Third Religious Society of Dorchester, to make a wooden addition to their edifice at corner of Richmond street and Dorchester avenue.

R. T. Paine, for change in the building ordinance.

To the Committee on Health on the Part of the Board. Jacob Morlock, to occupy wooden stable for one horse on Lougwood avenue, No. 74.

Parker Bryant, to occupy wooden stable for three horses on Dunreath place.

George Souther, to occupy wooden stable for one horse on Dorchester avenue, No. 671.

Cornelius Regan, to occupy wooden stable for one horse on Alger street near Middle street.

Otis S. Pierce, to occupy wooden stable for one horse on Auburn street.

George E. Willete, to occupy wooden stable for one horse on Grant street, Ward 16.

To the Committee on County Buildings. Giles H. Rich and other members of the bar, for a new court house for the Southern District, representing that the present location of the court room is entirely out of the way, inconvenient to reach by horse cars, as well from nearly all parts of the district as the city proper, and greatly to the disadvantage of lawyers, clients and the public generally. They desire a more central and convenient location.

To the Committee on Lamps. Stephen M. Allen et al. for gas lights in Beech Glen avenue.

William Gray, Jr., et al., that Howard avenue and Hartford street be lighted.

To the Committee on Paving. James Collins, to be paid for damages caused by change of grade in Paris street.

Boston Society of Natural History, that the city construct sidewalks on the grounds of the petitioners.

Timothy J. Dacey, et al., that Charter street, from Hanover street to Henchman street, be paved with wood.

Joseph Griffin, et al., that I street, from Sixth to Eighth street, be paved or macadamized.

Dudley Pray, et al., that Athens street, between C and D streets, be graded and put in order.

Frederick J. Strater, that the city adopt his method of wood pavement.

E. D. Emerson, et al., for a sidewalk from Fifth street to the Chapin Schoolhouse.

George A. Hebard, et al., that Seventh street be graded from I to K streets.

Remonstrance of Henry W. Wilson, et al., against proposed change of name of Dorchester street.

To the Committee on Armories. Colonel B. F. Finan of the Ninth Regiment, for an appropriation for fitting up regimental headquarters.

To the Committee on Public Lands. Abraham S. Foss et al., for change in conditions of sale of land on Seaver and Summer streets.

To the Committee on Sewers. Zelotes Prince et al., for sewer in Paris street, from Marion to Bennington street.

Leonard Ware, to maintain a wooden shed in rear of Purchase street, near Oliver.

JAIL EXPENSES.

A requisition was received from the Sheriff of Suffolk County, for the sum of $2086 30, for the current expenses of the County Jail for the month of September, which being properly audited, were ordered paid by the City Treasurer.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The Superintendent of Sewers submitted assessments for the construction of sewers as follows: Silver street, between A and B streets, total, $887 85; to be paid by individuals, $665 89; Bolton street, between D and E streets, total, $654 95; to be paid by individuals, $491 21; Tudor street, between D and E streets, total, $585 45; to be paid by individuals, $441 35. Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

A communication was received from his Honor the Mayor, transmitting a communication from the Overseers of the Poor, announcing the fact that a vacancy exists in that board, caused by the decease of Dr. Thomas Blasland, whose term of office will expire in May, 1875. Referred to the Committee on the Overseers of the Poor, with directions to nominate a person to fill said vacancy.

The communication, which is addressed to his Honor the Mayor, and is signed by Hon. F. W. Lincoln, chairman of the Board of Overseers of the Poor, is as follows:

"It is my painful duty to officially inform you, and through you the City Council, that a vacancy exists in the Board of Overseers of the Poor, caused by the recent decease of Dr. Thomas Blasland of South Boston. Mr. Blasland died on the fifth instant, at his residence, after a short illness, in the seventieth year of his age. He early in life came to Boston to learn the rudiments of a business education. On maintaining his majority he established himself in his chosen pursuit, which he prosecuted with honor and success until his death. While discharging all the obligations which appertained to his private life and profession, he also met those of a more public nature which appealed directly to his sympathies, particularly those which affected the welfare of his less-favored fellow beings. He was for seven years one of the Overseers of the Poor for Ward 12, under the old organization, and about the same number of years a member of the present Board. He was also for a long period an almoner of the charities of the Howard Benevolent Society and other kindred associations. His experience and counsel were of great value in the official deliberations of this Board, and its surviving members mourn in his death the loss of an esteemed friend and associate as well as a faithful public servant."

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to continue the name of "Franklin street" through Sturgis street, and to renumber said street. Passed.

Order to pave Condor street, from Burks to Glendon street, at a cost of $2500. Passed.

Order to pave a portion of Warren street, from Dudley to Washington street, with small granite blocks, at a cost of $5000. Passed.

Order to set edgestones and grade Egleston square, at a cost of $4000. Passed.

The following papers received concurrent action: Petition of Joshua Pitman was referred to the Joint Committee on Health.

Report (inexpedient) to allow the use of the old Franklin Schoolhouse by the Baptist Church Extension Society on Sundays. Accepted.

Order to pay bill ($25) of John L. Cook, a police officer, for extra services. Passed.

Order to amend the order to purchase estate of William R. Clark, on Fort-Hill wharf, so as to permit the conveyance of said property to the city, subject to a mortgage of $50,000 at seven per cent. interest. Passed.

Report of Committee on Public Buildings, with order to make suitable provisions for the effectual preservation of the Public Library building from fire, at an estimated cost of $7500. Report accepted and order passed.

The following orders were passed, in concurrence—
years 11, says 0:

To allow for rent of armory of Company D, First Regiment of Infantry, at 1806 Washington street, $1200 per annum.

To allow for rent of armory of Company I, First Regiment of Infantry, in American Hall, Ward 16, $575 per annum.

To allow for rent of armory of Company I, Ninth Regiment of Infantry, at 544 Washington street, $1200 per annum.

The order requesting the Street Commissioners, with the Committee on Streets, to confer with the owners of unfilled lands and flats between Beacon street, Western avenue, Lougwood avenue, and the Boston & Providence Railroad, and prepare a plan for laying out streets and avenues over said district, came up with an amendment to include also "the streets and avenues between South Boston, Savin Hill and Dorchester avenue." The amendment was concurred in and the order as amended passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Mrs. S. T. G. Webber for damages for injuries to her house in Hayward place, caused by the removal of a dangerous wall after the fire of May 30, 1873, made a report recommending that the petitioner have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on Public Lands on the part of the Board, to whom were referred the petitions of Stanley, Gore & Co., Cummings & Carlisle and Edward F. Meany, submitted reports recommending the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That permission be granted to Stauley, Gore & Co. to alter certain buildings now standing on that portion of the hospital wharf leased by the city to them Sept. 1, 1873, for dwellings and storage purposes, provided the same is done under the direction and supervision of the Inspector of Buildings.

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be and he hereby is authorized, for and in behalf of the city, to execute and deliver to Nathaniel Cummings and Ira B. Carlisle an instrument to release the land owned by them on Albany street, corner of Sharon street, of so much of the fourth condition expressed in the deed from the city to them of said land, recorded with Suffolk Deeds, lib. 1163, fol. 153, as shall be necessary to permit the use by them of the basement of the building now on said land, for blacksmith and machine-shop purposes, all the conditions in said deed otherwise to remain in full force.

Ordered, That Edward F. Meany be permitted to erect a temporary wooden shed upon a lot of land purchased by him of the city June 1, 1868, on Wareham street, provided the same is done under the direction of the Inspector of Buildings, and upon condition that the same shall be removed whenever directed by his Honor the Mayor, or the Committee on Public Lands for the time being of the city of Boston.

The reports were accepted, and the orders were read twice and passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Public Buildings, submitted a report stating that an additional appropriation of $3000 is needed to procure the heating apparatus for the engine house in Ward 14, and they recommend the passage of an order appropriating $3000 for that purpose; also, an order authorizing the Auditor to transfer that amount from the Reserved Fund to the account for an engine house in Ward 14.

The orders were read once and laid over.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Markets, submitted a report representing that an additional appropriation of five thousand five hundred dollars will be required to cover the expenses of their department during the present financial year. Since the estimates were made, the market accommodations have been enlarged by obtaining the use of the lands owned by the proprietors of India wharf, between India street and Atlantic avenue, until May 1, 1875. The city is allowed to occupy the lands to that date free of rent; but some expense has been incurred in preparing them for occupation, and this necessitates the present application for an additional appropriation. The occupants of stands on these new market grounds have already paid into the city treasury the sum of six thousand dollars, which is placed to the credit of the Sinking Fund. All receipts in excess of this first expense of putting the grounds in order will represent a clear profit to the city.

The following is a statement of the expenses to date: Salaries of Superintendent, $1250; Deputy-Superintendent, $750; Weigher, $360; Watchman, $3046; Furniture, etc., $95 24; gas, $273 37; repairs on stoves, $8 37; electric bells and small items, $112; expenses of committee, $39 20; India-street market, filling, teaming, lumber and carpenter's work, $5006 53. Total expenditure, $9940 71. General appropriation, $10,000; expended, $9940 71; remaining on hand, $59 29. The committee recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer the sum of five thousand five hundred dollars from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Markets.

On motion of Alderman Brown, the report was accepted and the order was read twice and passed—years 11, says 0.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, to whom was referred the nominations of constables made by His Honor the Mayor, reported a list of names which they recommend for confirmation. [The list includes all published in the report of the last meeting except the names of Henry M. Hunter and George H. Phillips.] The report was accepted and the appointments were confirmed.

Alderman Hulbert, from the Joint Committee on Public Institutions, to whom were referred communications from the Board of Health and the Port Physician, relative to the salary of the latter, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That until otherwise ordered the salary of the assistant resident physician to the institutions on Deer Island be fixed at the rate of six hundred dollars per annum, beginning on the first day of April A. D. 1873, said sum to be in addition to the amount paid to the present assistant for his services as port physician and to be charged to the appropriation for Public Institutions.

Report accepted and order read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, submitted orders to pay as follows: G. E. W. Reed, $5313, on account of widening of Warren street; Ann J. Phillips, $567, on account of widening Stoughton street; George Lawton, $11,110, on account of widening Federal street; David Snow, $80,535, on account of widening Broad street; Levi L. Tower, $16,052, on account of widening Milk street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Bigelow, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the following applications: American Roofing Company, W. De Blois, S. Field, W. Linton and W. E. S. Carter, for transfer of wagon licenses; James A. Berry, for carriage stand at 6 Somerset street; Warren Kent, for victualler's license at 876 Washington street; Jacob F. Katzman, for hack stand at 1493 Tremont street; Wilbur & Locke, to run two hacks at stable 336 Fourth street; George F. Bonney & Co., for transfer of hack license to Albert F. Giles; E. J. Sullivan, to keep a bowling alley at 291 Dorchester street; Joseph Roberts, to keep a billiard hall at 123 North street; Bernard McAleer, 144 Prince street, S. B. Holman, Somerset near Beacon street, Kelham, Fitz & Co., 159 Friend street, H. B. Austin, 26 Causeway street; B. F. Gerry, 154 Northampton street, for wagon licenses; John E. Kenney, to deal in second-hand articles at 528 Washington street; A. O. Brewster, et al., to use Fanenil Hall for a political meeting on October 8; C. Conlon, 26 Fulton street, and A. J. Breed, Park square, for hack license; M. T. Skiff, to exhibit Mirror of Ireland at Wait's Hall, October 6. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom was referred the order relating to the use of hoisting beams in the streets, reported that it is not expedient to prohibit entirely the use of hoisting beams, but that the use should be regulated by such restrictions and limitations as the public safety may require, in accordance with the law of the Commonwealth, set forth on page 614 of the laws and ordinances. The committee recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Chief-of-Police be and he is hereby directed to notify all persons using hoisting beams in the streets of this city to discontinue such use until duly authorized by the Board of Aldermen.

The report was accepted and order passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders directing the Superintendent of Streets to furnish and set the edgestones on Dale street, between Shawmut avenue and Warren street; to pave the sidewalks on I street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, and to report a schedule of the expense to this Board. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported an order directing the Superintendent of Streets to notify the owners and abutters on Columbus avenue, between Providence street and Park square, to remove all obstructions in front of their estates within ten days. Passed.

Alderman Quincy, from the Joint Committee on Ordinances, who were instructed to consider the expediency of empowering the Mayor to execute all legal documents necessary to reconvey to parties entitled to redeem the same, estates sold and bid in by the city for non-payment of taxes or assessments, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying ordinance:

Be it ordained, etc.—

Section 1. Whenever any person having lawful authority to redeem an estate sold for non-payment of taxes or assessments, and purchased by the city, shall make application to the Mayor for such purpose, the Mayor shall have power, on the payment of the sum of money due on said estate, made to the treasurer of the city, to execute in behalf of the city any and all deeds or other legal instruments of release or quitclaim that may be necessary to invest such person with the city's title to said estate.

The report was accepted and the ordinance read twice and passed, after an explanation from Alderman Quincy that parties are now waiting to have an estate conveyed to them.

Alderman Quincy, from the Joint Committee on Ordinances, to whom was referred the petition of J. H. Hathorne relative to the removal of manure from stables, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying ordinance:

Be it ordained, etc.—

Section 1. The sixtieth section of the ordinance relating to the public health, passed December 2, 1872, is hereby amended by adding the following words: "Without a written permit from the Board of Health."

Section 2. The sixty-first section of said ordinance is hereby amended by adding the following words: "Without a written permit from the Board of Health."

The report was accepted and the ordinance was read once and laid over.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, made a report, confirming the assessments made for sewers in Dudley, Dennis and Stafford streets, and recommending the passage of an order for collection. Report accepted and order read once.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported orders rescinding the order of January 2, 1872, whereby an assessment for sewers in Lougwood and Bellevue streets was confirmed, and ordering the collection of assessments (appended in a schedule) for sewers in Longwood and Bellevue streets, and Lougwood and Brookline avenues, submitted by the Superintendent of Sewers. Total cost, $7848 19; to be paid by individuals, $5886 14. Severally read once. Alderman Power offered the following:—

Ordered, That the sum of $22 27 be abated from the assessment of A. J. Patterson for a sewer in Forest street. Read once.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported orders of notice for hearing on Monday next, at 4 o'clock P. M., for the construction of a sewer in Clifton, Albion and Hudson streets, and in Cottage street between Clifton and Stoughton streets, and in Moreland street two hundred feet east of Cleveland street. Report accepted and orders passed.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That notice be given to A. B. Bancroft, William Somes & Co. and Oliver Bennett, that portions of their respective houses on Marcella street project beyond the line of said street, and that they be directed to have said portions of said houses cut off or set back to the line of said street.

Ordered, That permission be given to the Walworth Manufacturing Company to lay steam pipes under and across Franklin and Hawley streets upon condition that said Walworth Manufacturing Company shall first give to the city an agreement in writing satisfactory to the City Solicitor, holding the city harmless against any and all claims for damages, costs or expenses, on account of or in any growing out of the laying and maintaining of said pipes in said streets; also upon condition that said Walworth Manufacturing Company shall remove said pipes when ordered so to do by the Board of Aldermen.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That in addition to the sum of fifteen hundred dollars heretofore appropriated for repaving Dover-street Bridge, a further sum of five hundred dollars be appropriated for that object; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Bridges.

REVISION OF THE CITY CHARTER.

Alderman Quincy, from the Joint Committee on the Ordinances, submitted the majority and minority reports of the committee on the subject of the revision of the City Charter. On his motion they were laid on the table to be printed.

Majority Report. A greater and more important increase in area and population than any which our city has yet experienced would seem to be undeniably imminent, and his Honor's recommendation in substance is that the machinery of our Municipal Government be subjected to a searching examination by those whose ability and experience best fit them for the task, with a view of deciding where the increasing strain will probably be felt, and of suggesting what, if any, changes or modifications will best enable the same to be successfully borne. The report, embodying such suggestions, this committee understands to be placed before the City Council for exactly such action or non-action thereon, in whole or in part, as we or our successors may think fit to take. We can deal with the same at our leisure and in detail, either directly or by committees, standing or special, as we may decide; we can reject everything that fails to commend itself to our judgment, and no man can say us nay.

Why should we object to receive counsel from the greatest ability and experience which our city contains, reserving the right to follow just so much as seems good in our eyes? One argument against so doing may be stated thus: Why commit to outsiders the task of examining the working of the machinery of Municipal Government, of pointing out defects and suggesting, present and prospective changes, while we, members of that Government, by reason of our longer or shorter experience therein, can better perceive such defects or shortcomings, present or prospective, and better judge of the nature of the remedy which should be applied? Why, indeed, if this were so? But the committee cannot agree to the position. They cannot agree to that, because as we happen at this moment to be of the City Government we are necessarily better judges of its merits and its failures; that we necessarily know better where the shoe pinches than any persons of whatever previous experience or acknowledged ability, who are now living under it.

They believe, on the contrary, that the municipal shoe often pinches where City Hall feels it least of all, and that past improvements have been and future ones will be suggested by exactly that class of outsiders from whom will be selected the persons of whom we now propose to ask advice. These commissioners must serve, as did those on annexation, whose valuable report now lies before us, without compensation, and the expense will be, so far as we can see, comprised in the items of clerk hire and stationery. It is said, however, in substance, that the machine has run pretty well so far; let us wait until something goes wrong and then we can judge of the remedy and apply it. But an engineer, who acted on this principle instead of examining to see where the increasing strain has been felt, and devising means to meet it beforehand, would be clearly unfit for his position. That "an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure" is a homely maxim. To assume that we shall be in danger of making uncalled-for changes, and of abandoning known and tried systems which have worked well, on a mere suspicion of future inadequacy, seems to the committee something like self-stultification.

Common sense would surely teach us to reject such advice by whomsoever offered. If we have to a certain extent outgrown our city charter, it by no means follows that it is to be discarded in its entirety, like a garment, for the adoption of something strange and unknown in its stead. The commissioners, if men of sense, will recommend as few changes as possible, consistently with as good government for the Boston of the future as has been enjoyed by the Boston of the past; and if not men of sense, the committee have little fear that their recommendations will be adopted. Nor can the committee agree that by the appointment of this commission we are in any sense avoiding our own work. It is one thing to think and transfer to others labor which our constituents expect us to perform in consideration of the honor of the offices which we hold; it is another thing to accept counsel and assistance from the highest sources, to aid, not to supplant, our own judgment in important alterations in our form of government. The committee is willing that the public should decide as to the purpose of this order. It will be observed that the order contemplates an examination of the city charter and subsequent legislation.

Perhaps some members of the Government do not realize how much of this there is and how difficult it is at the present day to decide, without going to a lawyer, in what state the actual powers and functions of various bodies or officials really are left by the effect of such subsequent legislation and judicial decisions bearing thereon. Some powers are given directly, as the Mayor's power to remove policemen; some are decided to exist by implication, as has been a like power of removing firemen. The question of how much power remains to the Aldermen as Surveyors of Highways since the act appointing the Street Commissioners, is one which we must ask a lawyer to answer. And so, in regard to such other legislation which has been obtained at the State House from time to time by various parties in pursuit of no settled policy, but just as the desirability of this or that change happened to strike different persons. Sometimes the change has been petitioned for by the City Council; sometimes by individuals; sometimes, as happened last winter in relation to Sewer and Paving committees, by members of the Legislature itself. Sometimes petitioners have obtained what they asked for, and that of which they may be supposed to know the effect; sometimes, in the wisdom of the State House, something very different which may act in an unexpected direction, and on which lawyers must again be consulted.

Now the committee submit that if these commissioners suggest no change which we decide to adopt, yet if a result of their examination of this mass of legislation shall be its codification into one instrument, which shall show under appropriate heads the various powers and functions of the Government under existing laws and decisions, they will have given us something worth many hundred times the money which we propose to expend. But is it true that no existing defects and probable remedies have been suggested for this commission to consider? It seems to the majority of your committee that from time to time there have been a good many. In the first place the subject of longer terms of office has been before the Council within the last dozen years. In 1860, '62, '64 and '65 joint special committees reported strongly in favor of an increase in the tenure of office for both branches and for the Mayor.

The committee appointed on the same subject in 1868 tell us that these recommendations failed, not from objection to the increased terms, but from disagreement upon minor points, which delayed matters until the Legislature adjourned, and it seems that their own report, which embodied the same and other important alterations in the charter, met a similar fate. The order was passed and the petition duly presented, but, owing to the illness of a Senator, it was pigeon-holed until too late for action, and went over. Another subject is that of a Metropolitan Board of Works. Whether, when the anticipated increase of area and population comes upon us, we shall be able to undertake the increased labor without the assistance of some such body.

His Honor the Mayor has also strongly expressed his opinion that the incumbent of his office should be in some manner relieved from the duty of making the police appointments, which now occupies by far an undue portion of his time. Then, again, it has been questioned whether it would not be an advantage to still further separate the functions of the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen, abandoning the analogy of town governments, and following out that of larger bodies politic, where the executive has no place in the legislative branch, and committees are appointed by the presiding officers whom the legislators elect from their own number.

These are a few of the points on which it seems to the majority of the committee that the opinion and suggestions of such a commission as is proposed would be of value to us, and we think the public will understand why it is that, in such important matters, we do not disdain asking advice and counsel to aid in guiding and forming our own judgment. The committee recommend the passage of the accompanying order. For the committee,

SAMUEL M. QUINCY, Chairman.

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to appoint a commission, consisting of five persons, to examine the act incorporating the City of Boston, and all other general or special statutes now in force concerning the government of the city, and report to the City Council what, if any, changes are or will become necessary or expedient, in view of the prospective increase in the area and population of the city; the expense attending such examination and report to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Minority Report. It could not be expected that the committee should report in favor of the appointment of a commission to revise the charter written by the late Chief-Justice Shaw, and under whose provisions the city has grown and prospered, without being informed in what respect it is deficient, in what respect it has "outgrown its proportions," and in what respect it "must soon fail to meet the requirements of our rapidly increasing population and multiplying interests." There should appear some good reason and some loud call for so important a measure. The committee not being able to discover any such reasons, and anxious to give full consideration to the subject, and desiring to accede to the suggestion of his Honor the Mayor, waited upon him by a sub-committee.

His Honor, however, was pleased to inform the committee that there was no particular feature of the charter which had occurred to him as requiring change, but that it had occurred to him that, perhaps, owing to the increasing size of the city, it might be well to revise the charter. The Mayor had another interview with the committee, but though informed of the desire of the committee, carefully to consider any reason in favor of the measure which he could suggest, the committee were not favored with any recommendation. The question then is, Shall we send to commissioners, for revision, our charter of which we have been so justly proud, without having discovered in it any imperfections or defects? Is it worth while to move at all without having some reason therefor?

The charter makes the inhabitants a corporation and defines its powers. Its Government is made to consist of a Mayor, Board of Aldermen and the Common Council. The charter provides for their election. It also provides proceedings in case there is no choice at elections, and for the filling of vacancies. It also provides for the election of a City Clerk, Clerk of the Common Council, and for the choice of its presiding officers. It provides for the election of ward officers, the choice of assessors, the collection of taxes, a Board of Health, Surveyor of Highways, a City Treasurer, Overseers of the Poor and a School Committee. Nearly all the other provisions of law affecting the city and the powers of its officers are contained in general statutes, most of which are applicable to all the cities of the Commonwealth.

The charter contains little else than the requisite provisions for the working of the corporations. Those provisions are as applicable to the city of 300,000 inhabitants as to a city of 30,000. The undersigned do not see how it has outgrown or how it can outgrow its proportions. It is a form of government well suited to municipal corporations of great size, and was expressly adopted for that reason. Without the suggestion of weighty reason therefor, the undersigned cannot agree with the majority of the committee, and recommend the appointment of a commission to revise the city charter.

HOME FOR THE POOR.

On motion of Alderman Power, the reports of Committee on Public Institutions on purchase of a site for a Home for the Poor, (City Doc. No. 108) were taken from the table; the question being on the motion of Alderman Power to adopt the report recommending the purchase of the Austin farm.

Alderman Power—I suppose this matter is so well understood by the members of this Board that it is unnecessary to waste any time in the discussion of the merits of the Austin farm. All the gentlemen have visited the place, and have made up their minds, so that I suppose any remarks of mine would be superfluous.

Alderman Hulbert—As one of the committee to whom was committed the duty of making the investigation and reporting to this Board a suitable site for a Home for the Poor, I would say that the bulk of the examination of the various estates which were brought before this committee were made in my absence in Europe. On my return I found that the committee had narrowed the matter so that their decision lay between two sites and as an act of courtesy they held the matter in abeyance and requested me to make an examination of both sites, that I might come to a conclusion in order to act with them in the final decision. I did so, and as I am opposed to the adoption of the site recommended by the portion of the committee whom the Alderman who has just spoken represents, I will briefly state my reasons for my opposition to the Austin farm. In the first place, I think we ought to consider what the city wants. I suppose that most of the members of the Board, who have taken the pains to make themselves acquainted with the condition of affairs at Deer Island, can hardly feel otherwise than that it is our duty to make provision somewhere and in some way for the proper maintenance of the poor and for the neglected children. As we are all aware, they are now placed on the same island and come in contact with the criminal classes, which is certainly not proper. His Honor the Mayor called attention to this in his inaugural address, and I think it merits prompt action. We may as well understand that while the poor have been provided for at Deer Island it has been done at a minimum expense to the city. The attractions at Deer Island were so limited that no one would go there unless the urgency was extreme. In making provision elsewhere I look for a very material increase in expenditures in taking care of the poor. For when we come on to main land, erect new buildings and separate the poor from the criminal classes, and make this home comfortable and easy of access, I have no doubt the patronage of the institution will be largely increased; and the number of the poor will never again be so small as it is now. Therefore we ought to look to see what is best for the city. I suppose the legitimate name for this ought to be almshouse. It may grate harshly on the ear, but I think a personal acquaintance with the people whom we send there from the city would make the name appear not inappropriate. It seems to me that the idea more or less prevalent is hardly in keeping with the situation. It is contemplated to erect a large and elaborately appointed building at an expense of hundreds of thousands of dollars, and the matter of site, an elevated position, a fine view, are all in the minds of the members of the City Government, as I have heard them expressed, and seem to be uppermost. The same pains are to be taken as if we were to erect a fine public building for a university. I think we should have a site that is healthful and elevated, with proper drainage and good exposure as a sanitary measure. I would make health an element of importance. I think it is very important that to be supported there will be at least five or six hundred and perhaps seven or eight hundred. The supplies must go there from the city, and of course the transportation is a very heavy item. It is essential to secure the cheapest transportation from the city proper. Then it is very important that the means of visitation from the city and the means of communication be easy and rapid, and the accessibility should be good. These are considerations more essential than whether the inmates can have a fine view. The convenience of the city officials and the expense that the city is to be put to should be considered. Then I don't believe there is any necessity for getting a very large amount of land. I think thirty acres would be abundant, sufficient for every purpose. When you get more land than is required it only becomes a matter of annual expense for its care and embellishment. My objection to the Austin farm, in the first place, is this: The quantity of land that it is proposed to purchase is more than is required—it being some fifty acres, and one quarter of it, at least, is low, wet meadow land,—they call it meadow, but only rank grass can be raised upon it. It is a low wet spot that cannot be drained, or never has been. If the city is to purchase this whole estate of fifty acres, this twelve or fourteen acres is only available by being filled up at an enormous expense; on the other side of the road is a deep, wet morass, unavailable and undrainable. I hold that for the reason of health alone this site is not suitable. In the second place, the expense of the land is exorbitant. The property as it stands is worth no such price in my opinion. I can say here that a man on the same street, and very near this estate, owns an estate which can be bought at less than three cents a foot, and I feel warranted in saying that the price proposed to be paid for this one is exorbitant, and we will not be warranted in paying for it. Furthermore, if the city wishes to go in that direction—I will allow that West Roxbury will be annexed—for a Home for the Poor, there are localities more accessible than the Austin farm, situated upon or so near the railway as to have all the facilities of transportation, which can be reached in less time than this, the nearest station to which is little less than a mile, as I reasonably believe. There are sites equally desirable for location, far better in point of accessibility, which can be reached in much less time from City Hall and which can be had for a price much less than is asked for this. Setting aside the preference I may feel for other sites, I fail to see that the City Government is warranted in going so far away from facilities for access and in paying double, while another can be had for so much less a price. Therefore I say we are not warranted in incurring any such expense. I think we ought to guard, never more than now, against the tendency which I think members of this Board will unite with me in saying, prevails in this city at the present time. I mean in the matter of expenditure. I think we are going beyond what is a liberal expenditure in our public buildings. I think we are getting beyond the liberal into the extravagant. The talk I have heard in reference to this Home for the Poor, of an expense of a million of dollars to be incurred, is too extravagant. What we want is a building adapted to the wants of an almshouse, where all the inmates can be made comfortable. But I do protest against the erection of a building that shall be palatial and better than one-third of our population live in. Whoever has charge of this building will have his hands full not to overload the city with an enormous expense. I see no reason for making this a most attractive spot or making attractiveness the chief element in the selection of a site. Furthermore I know there has been a great pressure brought to bear in reference to having this place taken by the city. Last winter there were intimations that the owner rather more than hoped that the city would take this property for this purpose. I have no doubt it would be a great disappointment to the owners if the city does not take it. I don't think that comes in as an element here why we should make the purchase. Therefore, as a member of the committee, I am opposed to the purchase of this Austin farm, for the reasons I have named, and furthermore, believing that there is not one valid reason why we should make the purchase of that estate. For the present I will say nothing of the other estate.

Alderman Power—I did not suppose it was necessary to discuss the merits of either place, supposing that gentlemen, having examined this place themselves, had fully made up their minds. But the gentleman has made some remarks which call for a reply. The most important is that he says that places equally as good can be got for one-half the price. I think the committee will bear me out unanimously when I say they could find no such place. This matter was thoroughly advertised in the papers; we had many places offered to us, and no one was so near to the City Hall, and at so low a price as this. The committee used their best exertions to make the gentleman name such a price that they could conscientiously recommend it, but we could find none at a price that they could recommend. Gentlemen are talking now about what they could do, but we have never had an offer we could rely upon for what we could get a place nearer the city. Now, as to the expectations of the gentleman who owns this place or who bought it with the expectation of selling it to the city, I don't believe there is a gentleman in this Board who was at all influenced by that matter. I did not consider it worth alluding to. In relation to the distance from a depot, the committee have made no mistake when they say five-eighths of a mile. The land is as dry today as any place on the Neponset lot. There are two acres of marshy land on the Neponset lot which are not worth $25, while the Austin farm is well drained by strong sewers running through it. I agree with the gentleman that the attractions of the Austin farm will be greater than Deer Island, and that we shall have seven hundred or more inmates. The affairs at Deer Island justify the committee in laying before the City Government the plan of getting a place on the main land, and as to our tendency to extravagance, it is a well-known fact that no city has in that department such a state of affairs as we have. I don't think any city places its poor and prostitutes and criminals together in one place. In that respect I don't think the city has been extravagant, and the sooner we venture on a little extravagance the better it will be for the city. As to drainage, I will say and can prove, that the centre of this Neponset lot is no higher than high-water mark, nor never was, and I don't refer to the marshy part of the land either. In spring and winter there is always water there. The hill is of clay and springy, and always spongy. One of the principal reasons I recommend the Austin farm is the cost. There are fifty acres there and thirty in the other. There are some hundred of valuable fruit trees, and with the improved land and buildings I have no doubt fifty thousand dollars have been spent in the last twenty years. It will cost the city more than fifty thousand dollars to put the Neponset place in the same condition as the Austin farm is today. Then as to its being without the municipal limits, is no importance at all. We know Mount Hope lies much farther into another town, but there is no difficulty of getting to it from the city.

Alderman Stebbins—I came here prepared to vote on this measure, but after the remarks made this evening I think the Board have only one course to pursue, and that is to recommit both the reports to the committee with instructions to report a place for a Home for the Poor.

Alderman Power—I have no other object in advocating the Austin farm than the interests of the city of Boston. I did not understand the gentleman to say any place has been named to him for the same price or at any less price. But if the gentlemen are in earnest it is about time to come to some conclusion. If this is a ruse to kill it, it might as well be stated fairly. If there is any place better than the Austin farm I want to hear it authoritatively stated by somebody, and if it is a bona fide thing I am willing to recommit.

Alderman Hulbert—I don't wish to be misunderstood. I am informed that there is an estate of thirty acres on the same street as the Austin farm, which is offered at forty thousand dollars. In my own mind I have no doubt that it is equally as well adapted for the Home for the Poor; it is near the railway and can be had at an expense at least half what is asked for this one. I have nothing definite in my mind, but I know what I say. That ought to settle the question so far as the Austin farm is concerned.

Alderman Power—The expense of getting supplies to this place has been alluded to. I don't think the contractor would put on much extra for the distance. No proposition came to us of property so near City Hall at a price so fair as this. We were offered property far off at a great deal less, but it seemed to be the unanimous wish of the committee to get a place much nearer the city. That is why the committee finally settled down to these two places. If there is a place nearer the city I want to get it! But if this is simply a ruse to carry Nepouset, I don't propose to put this matter off. It is imperative that we waste no time in getting a place.

Alderman Stebbins—I disclaim any intention of killing this matter. I assume that the fall has so far advanced that no building could be erected, and I thought best to refer it back to the committee, to secure another place. I have been in favor of the Austin farm, but if the committee can secure another place for $40,000 I am willing to vote for that one.

Alderman Gibson—I would ask the chairman of the Committee on Public Institutions whether all the buildings at Rainsford's Island are occupied.

Alderman Hulbert—I understand they are. There may be one building that might be altered over and made serviceable.

Alderman Gibson—I now understand that only the poor are sent to Deer Island. I don't know that we have criminal persons there. We send men there for intoxication, and truant boys who run away from school. I don't think they can properly be ranked as common criminals. Now, in the present state of the market, with the amount of money we have spent this year, we have buildings enough at Deer Island which would be far better than many of the poor in this city have, and better than many families live in. If we have buildings unoccupied, it appears to me that we should set an example of economy and use them. We can't build a mansion house with a garden round it for every poor man or woman. Give them a good, warm building and something good to eat. Real estate is settling down and next spring we could buy cheaper than we can now. I would like to have this committee take another look and see if Rainsford Island can't be used another year.

Alderman Hulbert—It may be well for the Board to understand that the city owns the Winthrop farm, as it is called, and I have reason to say that farm can be disposed of for the amount that we would reasonably incur in purchasing on the main land. There is the appropriation made for erecting a building, which has not been used. I feel that the mixing in close contiguity of the poor and the people we send to Deer Island is neither right nor humane. On the other hand we have got to guard against carrying it the other way. I think the best name is "the Almshouse"; it is much better than "Home for the Poor." The idea should be specially for an almshouse and a home for neglected children, and all arrangements should be made with reference to that end, and not for a palatial structure. I for one should be glad to see this question of the Austin farm disposed of, and as it is up for consideration I am willing to abide by the result. I should like to have an expression of opinion upon that question, and I press no other lot for the present.

Alderman Power—I suppose the question of the necessity for a Home for the Poor has been settled long ago. If we are not to have this lot and it is thought that additional accommodations could be built on Deer Island, I should have thought the City Government would have accepted Winthrop farm. But that was not considered a suitable place. It was thought to be too far away, and that idea was abandoned. As to the position of things at Deer Island, if gentlemen call a place healthy where the corridors are piled up with mattresses and people sleeping on them, and if they can call prostitutes and night walkers anything less than criminals, I should consent to some other charitable name. We have three hundred thousand dollars' worth of land in South Boston which could be made into taxable property, if we have a Home for the Poor somewhere else.

Alderman Gibson—I don't propose to occupy Deer Island for any considerable length of time, but to husband our means to some extent. If the appropriation is already made, that doesn't help us any at all, we take it from the Reserve Fund. We have to pay interest any way. As we can't do anything this fall, we have got to go into the market and borrow this money. There is no question but real estate will succumb, and next spring you can buy at two cents a foot less than you can this fall. Wait till next spring and it will come down a cent a month for the next six months. There is a vast amount of land lying idle in Ward 16, and parties must have to carry it for some time before they can get the prices they ask for it. Now as we can't do anything to advance the cause, is it right for us to go on in these paperky times and lay out such a great expense? If those buildings could be fitted up for a very little expense it would be better.

Alderman Hulbert—What I meant to say is that I don't expect to erect the building this autumn, but this question has been before us a long time, for two or three years. As we are getting towards the end of our time it seems to me a plain case that the plan of the city should be defined, and we should decide to procure a place for an almshouse and settle the question. I still think it is the duty of this City Government to take this step, but I perfectly agree that we can't do much this fall. But if we take the step, and define our position, it will be doing a great deal. If it is n't done now it will be left for the City Government to do something next year.

Alderman Stebbins—I withdraw my motion to recommit, that a vote may be taken on the question. But I wish to give notice that if the motion of Alderman Power is defeated I will then move to recommit the whole subject back to the committee.

Alderman Emery—This thing has been under consideration so long I think it best that we should come to some decision; and rather than not decide I would prefer to have the place accepted that I should not vote for. It is indispensably necessary to do something. This committee have visited various sites within and outside the limits of the city. It was considered last year, and we have never come to any conclusion. I hope we shall come to a vote before we adjourn.

Alderman Gibson—Gentlemen ought to recollect that we would have had an almshouse at Deer Island but for some technicality in the wording of the order by which the money was n't to be spent in that direction. We have purchased Deer Island and Rainsford's Island, and I supposed at the time we were to have a Home for the Poor there. They say it won't do for a hospital, what is it good for? We got a site for a smallpox hospital and have abandoned that. We ought to utilize what we have.

Alderman Power—I think the Winthrop farm was a good purchase for the city and the same may be said of Rainsford's Island. I should like to take it off the city's hands. But that matter has been definitely settled before. It is a very poor argument to keep waiting for land to go down. In my opinion it is just as likely to rise again in Ward 16 as it is to fall.

Alderman Clark—I fully agree with the Alderman from Ward 12 in regard to the wants of the city for a Home for the Poor. The city requires that some money should be expended for properly taking care of the poor of Boston. I don't believe in sending the virtuous poor to live with criminals. Therefore I think we should early select a place at a moderate cost where we could erect buildings suitable for the wants of the poor. I regret very much that the committee did not take into consideration the fact that there are other places in West Roxbury besides the Austin farm. One of the most magnificent places in the vicinity of Boston, the Home farm, occupied by Colonel Russell as a summer residence for several years past, was passed over lightly because it was out of the precincts of the city. That was one of the strongest arguments against its purchase. The Home farm lies no more than two miles further from the city than the Austin farm. It is on a splendid road, and is not a mile from the depot, is on an elevated position, and is one of the most productive tracts of land any member of this Board ever looked upon. There are thirty-five acres all lying in one field, high land, with a magnificent view, and there are some sixty acres, with splendid barns, all that would be necessary for the next ten years. Now this entire property can be purchased for the insignificant sum of forty thousand dollars. The land is in a high state of cultivation. The objections raised against this farm were, that it was in the town of West Roxbury and we should have to pay taxes to that town. Now, West Roxbury may be annexed within the next thirty days. There are thirty-five acres in one field, and, if that is not enough, we have got sixty acres we can sell after having erected our building, for the sum of $40,000, and can thus get land enough for a Home for the Poor without the expense of a single dollar, and that in the town of West Roxbury. We propose to make the poor a home in a desirable locality. Here is an opportunity to get a hundred acres of magnificent land, in a splendid location, at no cost at all. This has been wholly overlooked on account of the fact that it is in the town of West Roxbury. The committee propose to have us buy land for $150,000, some of it morass, which would take more gravel to fill it up than has been used on the Back Bay. The Austin farm is a mile from the depot, and six miles from City Hall. The Home farm is a mile from a depot, and eight miles from City Hall; and the committee can buy the Home farm for $40,000. The Home farm is adapted to the raising of vegetables, enough for 600 people, and there is pasturage enough to supply them with milk and butter; and you have all these facilities for $40,000. You have a good enough home for any one to live in for the next thirty years. Is it common sense for twelve gentlemen to sit round this board and vote to pay $135,000 for fifty acres of land, fifteen of which are good for nothing, when we can get a hundred acres for $40,000 two miles further off. I submit that we must pay a stricter regard for the finances of the city than to show such wilful waste as to vote to pay $135,000 for the Austin farm, when we can buy the Home farm, which is so soon to be annexed, and at the same time has twice the number of acres, and all for only $40,000. I was glad to hear the gentleman say that the mere furnishing of supplies was a drop in the bucket. The only objection the Committee could see to the Home farm was that it was a little further off. The two places are no more to be compared with each other than the brightness of the nooday sun is with midnight darkness.

Alderman Power—The gentleman says there are fifteen acres of the Austin farm which are worthless. I would like to know whether it is as barren, if there are rocks sufficient to erect buildings; the meadow is as good as any portion of the Home farm. The sole objection to the Home farm was the distance from City Hall. The committee did not ignore that place. All acknowledged that the price was reasonable.

[At this point Alderman Gibson obtained permission to have read an invitation from George Clarke of Squantum to the members of the City Government, to visit his estate to consider its adaptability for a Home for the Poor.]

Alderman Brown—I move to amend the order as reported by the committee by substituting "$125,000" for "$135,000."

Alderman Clark raised the point that it was inadmissible.

The Chair stated that the amendment was admissible.

Alderman Stebbins asked if the place could be bought for that sum.

Alderman Brown said he had understood that it could.

Alderman Clark—It is n't right to be treated with in that way, and this should receive the unanimous veto from this Board. It is n't but a year since this same property sold for $97,000. If this is the way bargains are to be made—first $150,000, then $135,000, and then $125,000—then this thing should be unanimously vetoed.

Alderman Power—This argument don't hold good. The gentleman himself sold the Home farm for $15,000 and he is now urging it upon us for $40,000. I don't think the gentleman has his information from the owners of the property.

Alderman Clark—It is a different thing to have sold property for $15,000 and treat with members of the City Government for $135,000, and then to offer them the same place for $125,000 when there is a slight chance of its not being carried through. I sold the Home farm for $15,000; since then it has been sold for $23,000, and now it is worth $40,000.

Alderman Power—I don't think it was any detriment to the Home farm that it was sold at $15,000, because there is no proper person can determine its value today and its value ten years hence. If the Alderman on my left will get up here and say any of the owners have told him that the Austin farm can be bought for $125,000, I will cheerfully vote against it.

Alderman Brown—Whether the gentleman owns the land now or not, I am not able to say; he did own it once.

Alderman Stebbins—Did n't he intimate that that is all the property is worth?

Alderman Brown—There is no doubt, from all the facts stated, that if the committee are authorized to purchase that farm that $125,000 will buy it, and if they cannot they can report to this Board and be authorized to report again. I will say to the Alderman from Ward 6 that if there is a decline in real estate there we had better wait till next spring and purchase the Austin farm. Real estate must decline from 25 to 33 or 37½ per cent. Why should the city purchase this property now when it can be purchased for much less? I think no great harm will be done if the Board will amend the order. If it can't be purchased for that sum the committee can report again.

Alderman Clark—I don't know when I ever knew where the price of a farm declined ten thousand dollars in three hours. I should hope if we buy the Austin farm at all, we should pay $135,000 for it, so that this Board can maintain its dignity.

Alderman Brown—I desire to say that there is a great deal of talk influencing members of this Board. I understand that efforts have been made to induce members to vote to purchase this place. I have n't the least doubt but that if we instruct the committee to purchase for that it can be bought.

Alderman Power—I don't know anything about what gentlemen have heard.

Alderman Clark—I merely wish to state that I get my information from the Alderman from Ward 4, that he is reliably informed, that if we vote to pay $125,000, we can get the place. I submit if that is n't good reason for vetoing it.

Alderman Power—It seems that Mr. Austin, the former owner, has some particular spite to think that the property may be sold for $135,000, and he is the person who is running it down. This is a very dubious interest for a person to take. If the farm could be purchased for $125,000 I should be just as glad for the city to get it as not. I know nothing further than the written propositions from the owner of the land.

Alderman Gibson—I would ask the number of acres required for the almshouse?

Alderman Hulbert—There has been a difference of opinion as to the quantity required, which has never been fixed upon. I simply stated my own conviction.

Alderman Gibson—The idea I had was we could buy ten acres much cheaper than fifty. If we want to go to farming, we had better go to a farming country, on some of the trunk railroads, and buy a place for ten thousand dollars.

Alderman Stebbins—As bearing on this point, I would state that I had occasion to ask the Directors of Public Institutions whether any of the inmates worked. He said no; if you put a shovel in their hands they desired a ticket to go up to the city, saying if they had to work, they preferred to go up to the city.

Alderman Gibson—That is an argument for buying a small place.

The question being taken on Alderman Brown's amendment, it was carried by a rising vote—7 to 2.

Alderman Stebbins moved to further amend by adding after the words $125,000 the following: "Payable in notes or scrip of the city, having twenty years to run and bearing six per cent interest."

The amendment was adopted, and the question recurring on the adoption of the report and passage of the order as amended, it was defeated.

Yeas—Aldermen Brown, Emery, Gaffield, Power, Quincy—5.

Nays—Aldermen Bigelow, Clark, Cutter, Gibson, Hulbert, Stebbins—6.

Alderman Stebbins moved to take up the orders to buy the Neponset farm, and he then moved to recommit the report on the Neponset farm to the committee, and at the suggestion of Aldermen Clark and Gaffield, the motion was amended so as to instruct them to report in fifteen days.

Alderman Power did n't wish anything more to do with the Neponset lot.

Alderman Brown asked if Long Island had been considered; he had only had an opportunity to consider the two places named in the report, and it did n't require much exercise of judgment to say which was the better.

Alderman Quincy said that unless it was shown that the committee had neglected their duty, he should vote against recommitment.

Alderman Stebbins further amended his motion by adding "to report a place suitable for a Home for the Poor within fifteen days."

The motion was adopted by a rising vote of 6 to 4, and the report was recommitted.

Alderman Clark, in order to settle the matter of the Austin farm, moved a reconsideration of the vote rejecting the report, hoping it would not prevail.

Alderman Power charged that this was simply a disposition to kill off this place.

Alderman Clark disclaimed any such intention. He wished to vote for a Home for the Poor before his term expired, and he was willing to vote for Neponset farm. He made the motion in order that the gentleman would not be giving notice of a motion to reconsider next.

Alderman Power thought that it was an effort to prevent members from exercising their judgment.

Alderman Clark simply wished to prevent the Austin farm from being brought up again next Monday.

Alderman Power thought it would prevent the committee from bringing in the Austin farm again.

Alderman Clark contended that it would not, and inquired of the chairman.

Aldermen Gaffield and Brown both hoped the motion would be withdrawn.

Alderman Brown inquired the effect of a refusal to reconsider, and the chairman stated that as the committee were requested to report on some place within fifteen days, it would be perfectly proper to bring in the Austin farm at a different price.

Alderman Power hoped the motion to reconsider would prevail, and the vote being taken it was carried.

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Emery, Power, Gaffield, Quincy—6.

Nays—Aldermen Clark, Cuttcr, Gibson, Hulbert, Stebbins—5.

Alderman Brown moved that the matter be laid on the table, but, after brief informal discussion, it was withdrawn, and Alderman Stebbins moved that the orders relating to the purchase of the Austin and Neponset estates, together with the whole subject of a Home for the Poor, be recommitted to the committee. The motion prevailed.

THE NEW POLICE STATION IN WARD SIXTEEN.

Alderman Hulbert inquired what action had been taken by the committee on the order of last week providing for a change in the plans for Police Station Eleven, so as to allow for a branch of the Public Library in the same building. He thought the people had had no expression of opinion on the subject. He regretted not having given more attention to the order when it was passed.

Alderman Gibson said the matter had been discussed in the committee, but no final action had been taken.

Alderman Clark hoped the citizens of Ward 16 would have an opportunity to express their wishes on the subject. A police station is not a proper place for a public library.

Alderman Emery was present when the matter was discussed in committee, and the architect is now preparing plans.

Alderman Hulbert offered the following, and on his motion it was laid on the table.

Ordered, That the order of September 23, authorizing the plans for a police station in Ward 16 to be so amended as to provide for plans for a public library, be and hereby is rescinded.

SWETT-STREET HOSPITAL.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the order for the grading of the Swett-street Hospital territory was taken from the table. The order was passed.

EAST BOSTON SCHOOLHOUSE.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the order providing for the sale of the Oliver Primary Schoolhouse in East Boston was taken from the table.

Alderman Gibson explained that there is no prospect of its ever being needed.

Alderman Brown asked if it is proposed to sell the house simply or the land.

Alderman Gibson replied that the order embraced the whole territory.

The order was passed, in concurrence.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

OCTOBER 2, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held at half-past seven o'clock this evening, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The following papers were acted upon, in concurrence:

Various petitions were referred.

Reference to Committee on Overseers of Poor (with instructions to nominate a candidate to fill vacancy) of a communication from the Mayor, transmitting a letter from said overseers, announcing a vacancy in the board, caused by the death of Thomas Blasland.

Report (leave to withdraw) on petition of S. T. G. Webber, to be paid for damages to her house in Hayward place. Accepted.

Report and order authorizing the Mayor to release to N. Cummings and I. B. Carlisle certain land on Albany street, corner of Sharon street, from a portion of the fourth condition in the deed thereof. Accepted and order passed.

Report and order authorizing Edward F. Meany to erect a wooden shed on land bought by him of the city, on Wareham street. Accepted and order passed.

Report and ordinance in addition to an ordinance in relation to deeds. Accepted and ordinance read twice and passed.

Report and order fixing the salary of the Assistant-Resident Physician, at Deer Island, at $600 per annum, in addition to the amount paid him as Port Physician. Read twice and passed under a suspension of the rules on motion of Mr. Prescott of Ward 9.

Order for the grading of Swett-street Hospital territory, and for drainage thereof satisfactory to the Board of Health. Read twice and passed under a suspension of the rules on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7.

Request and order for a transfer of $5500 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for Markets. (City Doc. No. 113.) Read once.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following papers came up as unfinished business and were severally acted upon, in concurrence:

Order appropriating $1500 to pay for repairs on Steam Fire Engine No. 8. Passed.

Order appropriating $1450 to pay for repairs on Steam Fire Engine No. 15. Passed.

Order authorizing Engine companies 4 and 7 to be reorganized so that each shall consist of twelve men. Passed.

Report and order authorizing an arrangement to be made with Samuel R. Russell for an exhibition of his fire apparatus, at an expense not exceeding $300. Passed.

Resolve and order from Street Commissioners for the widening of Essex street, at corner of Washington street, at an adjudged expense of $770. Passed.

PETITIONS REFERRED.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 presented the petition of the First Company of Cadets, for increase in the allowance of rent for armory, and on his motion it was referred to the Committee on Armories.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 presented the petition of Captain P. Houghton of Company A Ninth Regiment, and on his motion it was referred to the Committee on Armories.

TAKEN FROM THE TABLE AND PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Train of Ward 13, the orders authorizing erection of a hook and ladder house on Dudley and Forest streets, at an estimated cost of $21,000, and a loan therefor, were taken from the table.

Mr. Train remarked that when he moved to have the order laid on the table at the last meeting he was not informed as to its feasibility, but since then he had taken pains to inform himself and found that it is absolutely necessary. He hoped it would pass.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I don't object to authorizing the erection of this hook and ladder house, but I do object to the method of paying for it, in getting a loan of $21,000 for the purpose. I don't think the city should appear in the market as a borrower for such small sums. It should be covered by some appropriation, and if there is no appropriation of this kind we should wait until another year till one is made to cover it. It does n't look well for any city to go into the market borrowing so small a sum as $21,000. It would be like an individual doing a large business borrowing money to pay his market bills at the end of the month. I don't believe we ought to go to any expense of this kind unless it can be put to some particular appropriation. I shall object to this unless payment can be provided for in some way other than by a loan.

Mr. Train—It was only from the extreme necessity of the case that I moved to take it from the table, and that was the object of my motion at the last meeting. I was opposed to the city making a loan for that purpose. As to the raising of the money, if the gentleman can suggest anything that will relieve us from the obligation of borrowing, I should be glad to have him do so. There is no mistake about the absolute necessity of having this house there. We are not going to the expense of putting a new hook and ladder company there. It is transferring an old company into a new location.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—It is from the mere fact of the necessities of the case that the city should have some other way of getting the twenty-one thousand dollars than by a special loan. If the gentleman will take the pains to ascertain by next Thursday if the matter cannot be provided for in some other way, it would be best to have it lie over. It is this providing for small sums by a special loan that brings the city so much in debt. I object very decidedly to loans of this character.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I agree with the remarks of the gentleman from Ward 9 and will move to strike out the words, "Treasurer be authorized to borrow under the direction of the Committee on Finance," and insert the words, "Auditor be authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund."

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. Adams of Ward 14—It seems to me to be immaterial how we get the money, so we get it honestly. This location overlooks a very large extent of territory and it is absolutely necessary to have a company there. I hope the order will pass.

The order was passed—yeas 47, nays 0.

On motion of Mr. Caton of Ward 11, the orders to complete furnishing of grammar schoolhouse, L street, at an estimated cost of $7500; and for a transfer of said amount from the Reserved Fund, were taken from the table and passed—yeas 49, nays 0.

ASPHALT WALKS ON THE COMMON.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 16 called attention to an order referred to the Committee on Common relative to asphalt walks, with instructions to report thereon. He asked if there had been a report, and if not that there might be one made this week.

Mr. Perkins said his impression was that the committee did report last summer that no more asphalt walks would be laid and therefore no action was necessary. He would however consult the committee's records and ascertain whether the committee had reported in full or not.

REORGANIZATION OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the Council reconsidered the vote whereby the discussion of the ordinance to establish a Fire Department, recommended in the Report and Evidence on the Reorganization of the Fire Department, and the cause of the fire May 30, 1873, (Printed City Doc. No. 97), was assigned for half-past eight o'clock, and on motion of Mr. Denny of Ward 9 it was voted to proceed to the immediate consideration of the question.

The question was on the amendment submitted by Mr. Denny of Ward 9 at the last meeting.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 moved that the recommendations of the minority report be substituted for those of the majority, and proceeded to speak on the subject. He took up the ordinance and went through with it, explaining the amendments which had been made to the ordinance as it now stands, and also the rules which had been added. He thought the old ordinance contained many most excellent provisions for the management of the Fire Department, and that it contained in a very considerable degree what was needed for its wants, excepting, perhaps, some few which had been brought up by discussion in consequence of the late excitement caused by the great fires that unfortunately occurred. The gentlemen from Ward 6 had thought the tendency should be to have the power come into the hands of the Council instead of the Board of Aldermen. He did n't consider that to be essential, but it could easily be so changed that it should be so. He thought if there was any prerogative that the Mayor should have, it should be the nomination of his chief executive officers. If a commission were established this power would immediately be taken from the Mayor, and placed in a body which would have a continual majority. He is likely to be opposed in the selection of the men whom he is to look to for assistance in the efforts which he makes for the welfare and protection of the city. Immediately upon his election he finds himself all at once in antagonism to a board of commissioners. It had been said that the expenses of the present Fire Department were extravagant. In what respect? Was it in respect to number of men? They had already voted to increase the number of men. Was it in their salary that the department was extravagant? That had already been increased. They could not say it was unduly extravagant in the number of machines, because they had this year voted for four new ones. In what respect, then? If it was in the annual parades, the City Council can take care of that at any time.

If it was in the matter of repairs, the majority and minority both agree that the city should have its own repair shop. If it was in junketing, that was a comparatively small thing, although it had been carried in some instances to excess. What else would the Mayor have to do except to veto a bill or two once or twice a year, if he had not the power to appoint his police and govern the Fire Department? With regard to the 49th section, he thought all would agree that it provided an excellent thing in bringing the police into action in the extinguishing of fires when they first break out. It seemed to him that with the improvements which had been made and with those proposed in the Water Department everything that could be suggested as an improvement had been provided for. If there were any other improvements he would be glad to know what they were, and thought they could easily be provided for. He thought the City Council should take the present ordinance and cure any defects that might be found to exist; but why should they throw their power all away and place it into untried hands?

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—I have read with care the majority and minority reports. I cannot agree with the majority when they recommend that a fire commission should be appointed. Nor can I agree with the minority when they recommend that the matter should be intrusted with the Board of Aldermen. In other words I am satisfied with the present management of the department in most respects. I cannot believe that the department will do better in putting out fires than it does at present. Nor can I believe that a commission will run the department better than the gentlemen who constitute the Joint Committee on Fire Department. I believe that there should be some change. I have no objection to the Mayor having the appointment of the Chief-Engineer and assistants, and the Engineers the appointment of the firemen. I cannot see what great results a commission has achieved elsewhere. It did not prevent the large fires in Chicago and Baltimore, nor do I believe it would have prevented the great fire here. Some of the gentlemen should remember that it was the building of houses with lumber sheds on top of them that caused the fire. The commission would have nothing more to do with fires than have the present committee. Before the great fire in November there was no occasion to find fault with the department. Everybody praised it. I am just as much opposed to the minority report as to the majority. There never would be a time when we can find three men who would manage the department better than it is at present, and I should like to have an opportunity to vote on that question.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—Whatever may be the decision of the Council in regard to the establishment of a fire commission, I think it is quite certain that we shall not vote for the minority report and surrender what power we have to the Board of Aldermen. It seems to me this would be undesirable for two reasons. The Board of Aldermen have already too much power as compared with this body, and they have too much to do. Now I believe it is one of the good things of legislative government that the two branches should be as nearly equal as possible. In that regard we know that this is not the case. The Board of Aldermen have the exclusive control of the police and other departments; and here we are asked by the minority to give up another great department, one more important than the others, into their exclusive control. Now the gentlemen of the minority speak of the dangers which will arise if we place this immense power of the control of the Fire Department into the hands of three men. It seems to me that if this is dangerous, it will be much more dangerous to put it into the hands of the Board of Aldermen. It seems to me that it will be much more difficult to take back this power if it does not work well, than it would to take it away from a commission. If we put the power in the hands of the Board of Aldermen we cannot take it back unless the Board will concur, and I don't suppose they would do that. Again, sir, in regard to the other point that the Aldermen have too much to do, I find that one member of the Board is on twelve different committees, of which he is chairman of five. Two or three are on eleven committees, and another is on no less than eight different standing committees, of one of which he is chairman; and this does not include the special committees which are appointed. I say they already have more to do than you can expect twelve gentlemen to do and give their services to the city. Now the minority undertake to answer this argument by saying that the Board of Aldermen attend to their duties with singular zeal and fidelity. I do not question that, but this is not a question of fidelity; it is a question of possibility. They also say that the present Board of Aldermen are gentlemen of leisure. That may be so, but it is nothing permanent. The next Board may be composed in a large measure of active business and working men. Again, they say that the Board of Aldermen are larger men than we can obtain for pay. Very well, it may be so. I have sometimes thought that it might be my privilege to vote for some member of the present Board of Alderman for Mayor; but if this is true I cannot do it, for we pay our mayors for their services, and, of course, if the Aldermen wont work for pay we can't elect them to that position. It seems to me that this is a slur on the salaried officers and heads of departments which is entirely unwarrantable. I would like to know if any one will say that our City Clerk, Auditor and Treasurer do not perform their duties just as ably and faithfully as the Board of Aldermen; and are we not warranted in expecting or hoping that if we have a fire commission the gentlemen composing it will perform their duties just as faithfully and as ably as they. It seems to me it would be in the highest degree impolitic to place in the hands of the Board of Aldermen, already overburdened, one of the most important—the most important department of the City Government. The gentleman from Ward 12 has said that there has not been any argument presented in favor of a commission. I think I may say this, that of all that has been said against a fire commission not a single valid objection has been raised against it, when carefully considered. I suppose all the objections to it have been epitomized in the minority report, but I cannot find anything against it yet. The gentlemen arguing against a fire commission, in support of their arguments cite the proceedings of other commissions. But, sir, if you look at this argument you will find it amounts simply to this. They argue against commissions because certain gentlemen who happen to be commissioners have in some respects not acted as they should. They take the action of the Harbor Commissioners in regard to the matter of the South Boston flats. There is something a little significant in the fact that both the gentlemen who sign this report come from South Boston and take a great interest in the South Boston flats. I think they have been led to look at the whole subject through colored glasses.

It presents itself in colors and shapes which do not belong to it. They speak of the Board or State Charities and of the Board of Public Works at Washington. They also make an attack upon the Board of Health, though it is made in the very courteous terms of the diplomatist. Then again they say that the introduction of the fire commission would be an importation from a sister city which has been the cause of all their woes. Then again gentlemen argue against a commission on the ground that there are certain gentlemen who aspire to the position of commissioners. This may be so or it may not. No one has come to me with any petitions. I have not heard of any one who has been approached; and even if it is so, what does that have to do with the question. Because a man is a candidate for office is it any argument for not establishing the office? I suppose you will find at the Mayor's room two or three thousand applications for appointments on the police force. Does that signify that we should not have any police? The gentleman has frequently said that there is no necessity for this. It strikes me that this is simply a begging of the question. That is a question before us. And in illustration of his argument upon this point, he says that our firemen are of the best material and of good quality; therefore, why establish a commission? The gentleman, the other night, took occasion to eulogize the Fire Department. Well, we all admit their virtue; we applaud their heroism and their many noble deeds of daring, and for one I will not yield to the gentleman in respect to adoration of them. But it seems to me that is one argument in favor of a commission. Why could not you say on the theory of the gentleman, "What is the use of having a president, superintendent and board of directors of a railroad after you have got your rolling stock, engines and cars and your conductors and engineers appointed? What is the use in having a board of directors? The successful contest with a fire depends on the engineer and his assistants. So it does after the fire begins. Just so the successful running of a train depends upon the engineer and his assistant. You might as well ask the use of an expensive war department when the men were in the field and the officers were at their head. It has been asked further, "What is there that a commission can do that we cannot do?" I say that this is the same argument with which conservatism has met every reform in the world's history. Whenever an institution becomes defective and a new institution is proposed, conservatism says "What is the use of a new institution? We can do just as well under the old. I wonder if the gentleman from Ward 12 had lived in this country a hundred years ago, I wonder whether he would have been a Revolutionist or a Tory. If he had the same sentiments that he has now he would have been on the British side, and would have asked what is the use of a new government here? the old government can repeal these things just as well as the new. I think this department can be better managed by a commission than by the present committee. I don't say this for the purpose of finding fault with the government, but because I think the subject is large enough to engross all the attention of those who are in the management of it. The gentleman has said that the trouble is in our tall buildings. Well, let us have three gentlemen appointed to solve the question whether we can protect tall buildings, and if we cannot let some one tell us so. Again, it is said that the people don't want a fire commission, and we have learned how thoughtlessly people sign petitions. But who are these men whose testimony was so unanimous in favor of a commission but those who lost their hard-earned fortunes, the accumulations of years, by the great fire of the ninth of November? But even if this commission should not enhance the safety of property in this city, I should believe in its establishment for the establishment of confidence in the Fire Department of Boston. There is no doubt that there is a great want of confidence in the people of Boston, and it is injuring business, increasing the rates of insurance and keeping capital from coming to our city. It is imperilling the business interests of the city, and I believe it is our duty to do something to relieve the anxieties of the people upon this subject. I think we should establish it at once, and in that way reestablish the confidence of the people in the Fire Department of the city. It may be defeated here or not. I don't know how the vote will be; but, sir, if it is, I believe that the people will take the subject into their own hands and make it one of the issues in the next municipal election, and send here men who will establish it. Believing that it is our duty to establish this commission at once, I hope the majority report will be adopted.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 asked whether an amendment to the minority report would be in order, and the President said it would.

Mr. Mahan—Then I move that wherever the words "Board of Aldermen" occur in italics in the ordinance submitted by the minority, the words "City Council" be substituted, so that the City Council and not the Board of Aldermen, shall have control of the department.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—The gentleman from Ward 10 has done me the honor to suggest that if I had been living in the time of the Revolution my conservatism would have led me to be a Tory. Now, my objection to this commission is that it is simple, direct Toryism, and the majority report says so when speaking of standing armies as repugnant to our form of government and citizens look upon them with distrust. And they propose to go back to Toryism, to abandon all our Republican notions, to abolish all our town meetings, to have a city government have nothing to do with the business, and appoint a commission permanent in its character and established a Tory oligarchy in the place of Republicanism. That is the argument. I am on the Republican side. It is proposed to give our men, machinery and money to three men who are to be appointed, one each year, and cannot be removed except for cause. How can you remove them then? The gentleman from Ward 16 says they can be removed at any time for cause, but you cannot remove a man except for malfeasance in office, or some heinous crime, after he is once appointed, and not then until he is convicted by a jury; so that it is coming back to Toryism to take it from the Mayor, whose duty it is to look after the city property. The gentleman from Ward 5 suggested the other night that it was taking it out of politics. The objection is the same that was urged against the Board of Public Works in Washington, who, having control of the men and means, also control the votes of the men. That is the collar we are undertaking to put about our necks. Men who cannot be removed, except for malfeasance in office, could secure a majority of the City Government by having control of the votes. If we had a street and police commission, why just before election you would see large numbers of men employed and great works going on all over the city, and your hands bound so that you cannot do anything. There is Toryism. I call attention to the fact that the majority report recommends every alteration that the majority does except putting it out of your power and into the hands of those that you cannot control. You have said that we have done nothing for the protection of the city. Haven't we had a law passed to prevent Mansard roofs being constructed so that the city shall be saved? Has n't everything been done that could be done? I admit that I am a little conservative. I don't expect to get up a panic when I see people crying in the streets. People all sign petitions. It reminds me of Æsop's fable of the frogs who were dissatisfied with King Log, and Jupiter sent them a stork for a king, and the stork ate them all up. The moral of the fable is to caution people to take care of their liberties. That is what we say. Hold on to your liberties, and cure your Fire Department of every defect at the same time. Let your Chief-Engineer be nominated by the Mayor. Establish your repair shop, appoint a fire-marshal, do everything you can, but maintain control over the department. It is true you cannot run a railroad without a board of directors, but having got your board, your president and engineers, you wish to put them under a commission, so that on this principle each road in the Commonwealth shall be under a commission. You have a commission now, to all intents and purposes, and it is responsible to the City Government.

Mr. West of Ward 16—The gentleman seems to have found that a commission is going to eat people. It takes two to make a bargain. The city cannot be eaten up by a commission. If the commission becomes corrupt the City Council can repeal the ordinance. But I don't believe that they are going to be corrupt. If it is, why have almost all cities in the United States adopted this form of working the department and won't change it? He proposes to take this ordinance up in detail. Well, it is now the first of October, and by January we should get half way down the list, and then a new set of people would come in and they would have to go over it all, and by the next January they might get three-quarters done. There are a great many things in this; for instance, it requires Clark's linen hose to be placed in the police stations. Mr. Clark would be glad to have this, but the trouble is there are others who make linen hose, and they would doubtless like to supply their style too. How would the gentleman manage a law case if he had to consult every Harvard student about it? We are not afraid of the responsibility of recommending the commission, and have done what we deemed for the best interests of the city. We heard all the arguments, and gave ample time for the remonstrants. The gentleman says it would n't be safe to put this thing into untried hands. What is this City Government composed of but untried hands every year? A commission would soon be masters of the situation if they prove to be such men as I suppose we should get. Now he says what can a commission do that the Board of Aldermen cannot do? Well, the Board of Health has investigated 5000 nuisance cases, which is more than the Aldermen ever did, whether they could or not. They know that the public is looking after them. I propose that the City Government shall look after the commissioners, but I would have every important department managed by three men, hired to look after details and do the work. I don't believe in so many hughbears. If the Aldermen could be relieved of all the detail and trouble of these departments, and have that work done by men hired for the purpose, you could get better men in that Board. You can't get the best men to serve as Aldermen now, because it takes so much of their time. We are not always prompt at our committee meetings. We can't be. The gentleman says he has heard no argument in favor of a commission. I certainly have heard none against it. I hope the minority report will not be substituted, and I hope the majority report will be adopted. The people demand this thing and the press are a unit on it.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—It seems to me that the gentleman who last spoke has struck the key note of this question, and brought us right back to the real issue. He says he should like to have all the matters of the City Government managed by commissions. That is the point. I fully sympathize with him and heartily echo his sentiments when he says the important departments should be managed by commissions. The details should be managed by hired servants, but those elected from year to year should have joint supervision of them. If that were the case we should get a better class of men into the Board of Aldermen and Common Council. It seems folly to argue this question further, so much having been said that it is almost impossible to urge anything new either for or against it, because every member must have made up his mind by this time. Still it may be well to refer to one thing which seems to me is of the most vital importance in this consideration. That is the fact that the gentlemen who have advocated the minority report with great ability have all appealed to our pride as members of this body, and threatened or rather warned us that we were losing our prerogative in letting slip the right to manage the various departments of the City Government. It is a fact that every one of us will not deny, that we cannot properly attend to the city's business. We come here without pay and devote all the time we can to our business, and go away from City Hall feeling that we have not properly done our duty. What is the result? It is not pleasant to contemplate, but the efficient clerk of the committees, and the heads of departments have more influence in the committees than many of us would like to acknowledge. Many of the petitioners know that as well as we do. Every year sends a new set of men into this and the coordinate body. The President of the Council does the best he can in making up the committees; he must take the material furnished him by the voters. In some instances we know that the very best men are not furnished. They are utterly unfit to perform the duties assigned them the first year. It takes a year to learn how to act properly, and it is our experience that the old members and the very able clerk of committees do the most of the work, and I fear had we not such an able clerk our business would not be so well done as it is. In saying this I do not mean to reflect upon members of the Council. We devote much valuable time to the city's business. But our minds are on our private affairs and the city's interests are not properly attended to, which was probably not so all the time. When the city was under a town government the selectmen could talk matters over at their tables. We have outgrown many of the institutions as at first organized. We have grown into an immense municipality, and it is simply impossible for the members of the City Council to deal justly with the affairs of the departments. We have to have paid clerks and heads of departments to attend to details. If I understand this plan it is to get the best talent, to obtain men who will devote their best knowledge to serve the city in this direction. It has been said that it will deprive us of great power, that we will be bound hand and foot. Now we do give the details and hire them done. But we are at the head of the machine. We hold the sinews of war in the purse strings. They must report to us. That we do not propose to give up. The gentleman from Ward 12 speaks very eloquently of the people and of defending their liberties. This comes right home here. Shall we have business done by properly paid commissions who will give attention to the subject? I do not pretend to reflect on the Fire Department. But those arrangements which formerly existed under a small city cannot do the work of what is now called Boston. The Board of Aldermen is composed of good men, but the number of good men who can be obtained is small. Unless we adopt some plan to get rid of caring for the departments, we shall drive good men from the City Government and leave it in the hands of men who have no employment, who are making a profession of politics, or of old fossils who should be laid upon the shelf. There is danger of drifting to this extreme, and it is too much to expect of men who are not paid for their time. The work is not attended to properly and will not be. In saying this I do not mean to reflect upon any members of the committees. I believe we do work hard and save the city money by our care of its interests. But in my opinion it often happens that we see the necessity of more investigation. But still we have a great deal to do, which takes a great amount of time and which keeps us busy. I hope that this minority report will not prevail, and that we shall comply with the wishes of the eight thousand petitioners, and appoint a commission. If they did not know what they were signing, they knew that something was wrong and radically wrong, that there is so much to do unless we have a paid commission our business will be terribly neglected.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5—I did not propose to be drawn into this discussion, but preferred that the Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department should submit their views to this Council. But the committee are not unanimous, and as one member of this body I desire to give my reasons for my vote. Both reports have been ably presented, and there is something good in each. But I cannot agree entirely with either one or the other. Therefore I must act for myself, and for this reason made the amendment to the minority report that I did. I also propose another amendment to section 24, where it says the Board of Engineers shall be confirmed by the Board of Aldermen. I propose that the words "City Council" be substituted for the "Board of Aldermen." I do this not for the purpose of distracting attention from the merits of either of the reports, but to test the feeling of the Council in that matter. I propose to be thoroughly democratic; to put the responsibility where it should rest, not with one branch of the City Government but with the City Council who are directly responsible to the people. I think the minority report is made better by this amendment. The question is, whether a commission shall take the place of the present system, or whether we shall go on and rectify any mistakes that have been made, and whether we are able to adopt these measures, or allow the department to go into the hands of three men. The last speaker said the member from Ward 16 struck the key note. If that is the idea the quicker we centralize power the better. Abolish the City Council and Mayor and centralize power in the commissions. The more talk you hear of this commission the more you see the cat in the meal. We have men who talk about salary and Credit Mobilier; they are the very men who put their hands into the city treasury and enrich the commissions. I believe in reform, and the man that would have turned out every commission in this State was defeated by the same men who are advocating commissions. They are talking of reform, but do not mean it. We are drifting into Toryism, and it was Toryism that defeated the man who favored reform. People who signed those petitions did not know what they were signing. Responsibility amounts to nothing if you are on the side of the Tories. I believe in dealing with matters which come before this Board in the light of reason, and if I cast my vote I shall give my reason for it. It is not because a president of an insurance company wants me to vote. Threats have gone out that men could not be returned to this Council unless they vote for a commission. Where is your respectability? Are your Jay Cooke's and Clewises more competent to decide this matter than we?

Gentlemen have been in the Fire Department who don't climb ladders with kid gloves. They don't stand off and say, "If I had charge of this matter how I could manage it." The Fire Department of Boston is the best in the country. A gentleman has referred to the loafers and fossils, but my experience of commissions is there is considerable of fossilism about them. It is certainly a cumbersome institution at the present time. We have three gentlemen on the Board of Health drawing money from the treasury, when they might be in better business. I believe the Board of Health is a failure. It is a paid commission, and ought to be abolished. Instead of instituting new commissions, we ought to get rid of some we have. All the good argument that has been used for a commission is in the minority report. What is needed are two fire-marshals confirmed by the City Council, men who can be removed at pleasure. But we want no more commissions. If we are to have them, let us abolish this City Government, and set up that which the people have said they would not tolerate.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I don't think it possible for any member of the City Council to have a deeper interest in the Fire Department than myself—that interest that will make the department the best ever known. Knowing the workings of the department as only one can who has been an active member, I feel that I know its wants, weakness and failings as well as any member of this body. The Board of Commissioners, appointed to investigate the cause of the November fire, accorded all praise to the firemen, and well they might, for I fully believe that no city or State has a superior force in regard to intelligence, ability, fidelity to duty and bravery. And yet, the majority of the Committee on Reorganization tell us we have not the drilled, disciplined and trained professional skill in the men now that we should have if we were all a regular department. And in support they refer to the testimony of ex-Alderman Fitch, who was nine years in the Hand-Engine Department, eight and one-half of which he was foreman. On his and similar testimonies they have made their report. With all due regard to the ex-Alderman, in old hand-engine times only about one-tenth of the members were firemen—the third foreman and those on the leading hose. The foremen and those who worked the brakes of the engine certainly were not as good judges of fighting fires as those who today look at the same from the sidewalk. Today all firemen are firemen, in the full sense of the word, and those who say that the present men do not fight fires as bravely and as skilfully, and from the inside of buildings, state what cannot be substantiated by facts, as any one who will investigate at succeeding fires will be convinced to the contrary. Previous to the fire of November 9th, what body of men commanded the confidence of the community more than the Boston Fire Department? Was it not always acknowledged that the Chief-Engineer and his assistants were masters of their business, that our firemen were equal to any emergency and able to cope with any fire? Unfortunately the confidence was so strong that any requests made for additional apparatus or for an increased water supply passed by unheeded, and the chief of the department was often told that he was trying to magnify his department in asking for what he and his assistants well knew was urgently demanded. And I well know that when the alarm rang out from certain boxes, it carried terror and anxiety to the officers and members of the department, they well knowing what the chances were to stop the devouring element with their facilities should it attain a great headway.

My eloquent friend and statistician from Ward 5 has endeavored to show by figures the increased expense of the Fire Department as compared with other cities, but his figures will not bear analysis. In City Document No. 107 the Committee on Fire Department presented a table of expenditures of the different fire departments. I hope every member has carefully read it. I have prepared a few figures, Mr. President, which I think show that our department has admirably managed all fires, as the following table will show:

Name.	Date.	No. of Fires.	Total Loss.	Loss at each fire.
Chicago.....	From 1866 to 1869	1,478	$479,940	$5,737 00
St. Louis.	" 1868 to 1872	797	3,701,400	4,664 00
New York..	" 1866 to 1872	7,130	26,247,154	3,681 25
Philadelphia	" 1871 to 1873	1,240	3,635,963	2,932 25
Boston.....	" 1866 to 1872	2,712	4,725,953	1,742 60

This statement does not include the loss by the great fire in Chicago or the loss by the fire of November 9, and only part of the loss of November 10. All of the above departments were and are now under a board of fire commissioners except St. Louis and Boston. To attempt to change the ordinance (a relic of old hand-engine times) was only to meet with rebuff, as it has always been said that it has worked well and there was no need of a change. Allowing that the fires of November 9 and May 30 had not happened and the committee had reported expedient to place an engine and ladder company on Fort Hill, would it not, as had been previously the case in another locality, have been voted inexpedient? Would not the press (even had the order been passed favorably) sent forth in their strongest manner their denunciation of uncalled-for expenditures?

Again, if the Committee on Fire Department previous to last November had asked the City Council to pass an ordinance giving the right of way to engines going to a fire, I think it very doubtful if it would have been passed, as I am led to believe from the following article taken from the Boston Journal of April 21st, 1871, viz.:

"An alarm of fire sounds; before the location of the fire is indicated a second time, from steam fire engine houses and hose houses the machines dart out, drawn by one, two and three horses. The gongs are sounded to clear the way for these rolling fire annihilators. It may be a large warehouse stocked with valuable goods, or it may be a feather-bed in Mrs. Mulloney's attic, which is the cause of all this commotion. The firemen are equally anxious to be in season. If Hose No. 2 should get a stream on sixteen seconds before Hose No. 3, the pride of the fireman's heart would be touched. The engines and hook and ladder carriages dash on at a fearful rate of speed, through crowded thoroughfares and narrow streets. Human life, horseflesh and vehicles appear to be of little consequence, and so far as there is any evidence, the whole material of our streets, animate and inanimate, may go to everlasting smash, so that Engine No. 100 can outstrip Engine No. 200 in the race. It is a source of surprise to every one that some accident has not happened before this. There was no intent, of course, on the part of the driver of the hook and ladder carriage to injure any one, but the city authorities are responsible for permitting this species of insanity, which seizes firemen whenever there is an alarm of fire, to continue unchecked. It is supposed that our Steam Fire Department is so scattered throughout the city that no section is left unprotected, and there is no spot so far distant from an engine that it may not be reached in five minutes. Where then is the necessity for this reckless haste, when not one-half of the engines which attend a majority of the fires ever put on a stream?"

Since last November the people have realized that the Fire Department is one of the most important departments under the control of the Government, and that its growth has not been in keeping with the increased demands. We have been led to believe that the department were equal to any and all emergencies. And the commanding officer, as I said before, equal to any. And in support of this statement I need only to refer to a very few paragraphs from our own papers. The Boston Transcript of February 14, 1871, says—

"The unanimous reflection of John S. Damrell as Chief-Engineer of the Boston Fire Department is a deserved compliment to his efficiency and rare administrative ability."

On the same date the Boston Post has the following article:

The Fire Department. The Board of Aldermen paid our excellent Chief-Engineer, John S. Damrell, a well-deserved compliment Monday by unanimously reflecting him for another year; under his administration the department has reached a degree of discipline and efficiency which puts it at the head of fire departments in this country, and makes it a credit to the city. No better evidence of its efficiency is needed than the splendid manner in which it handled the fire at the Adelphi Theatre a week or two since. Our citizens have abundant reason for feeling proud of the Fire Department of Boston."

And the Post of Feb. 8, 1871, says—

"The generosity of Messrs. Hovey & Co. is alike creditable to that enterprising firm and to the reputation which our Fire Department so deservedly holds. There is no branch of the public service requiring more vigilance, endurance, promptness and hard work than that department, or in which more energy and real ability is displayed. The Fire Department of Boston is an institution in which we have both pride and satisfaction, on account of the able manner in which its duties are performed, and the undoubted security which it affords every citizen. Both in its management and in the details of its practical workings, where each man's individual exertion tells, it is worthy of all praise. In making so liberal a contribution to the charitable fund of the department, Messrs. Hovey & Co. have shown a generous appreciation of the value of the service which hard-working men render the community, which every citizen will heartily indorse, and which will doubtless be gratefully remembered by those to whom this contribution will be of the greatest value because elicited by the bravery, integrity and efficiency of the firemen of Boston."

Many more of the same kind I could read if necessary. I well know, Mr. President, that many changes can be made in the government of the department that will add to its efficiency; and in the report of the Committee on Fire Department (City Doc. No. 43) part of such changes are recommended.

In the minority report they say—

"The majority tell us the things they want done; they desire to appoint a commission to do them. Will the commissioners do these things? We don't know. If we are agreed as to what should be done, why not do the things we are agreed ought to be done? And then we shall be sure they are done, and done quickly and cheaply. Why put an additional expense of from fifteen to thirty thousand dollars per annum upon our taxpayers, when by a little extra labor we can save it all, and get exactly what we are agreed we want; certainly, what we are asked to appoint commissioners to do?"

Did not the commissioners of the November fire report that the engines were in good order, that the hose was generally excellent? What could a board of fire commissioners do more than keep the apparatus in good condition and ready for use? I is not proposed for them to fight fires, and I would ask if this Council is not fully competent to judge who are capable of fighting fires as well as any three men that may be appointed? And how far, in case of failure of any of the men they may appoint, does the responsibility rest? Do we propose to put them under bonds that no fires shall occur in this city? The whole thing is absurd. It is simply that some one wants a commission, and for what? To do just what the commissioners say was well done—everything kept up to the maximum. Perhaps it may not be generally known that on Sunday morning, November 10, a corps of mechanics from Manchester was at work, and they brought with them link-blocks, springs, leathers, valves, etc., to repair all damages that occurred the previous night. And on Monday night, November 11, the whole department was in as good working order as at any time since its organization. Could a board of commissioners do more? It is claimed by some gentlemen that they want some one who is responsible for the management of the Fire Department. We can satisfy them if that is all they want by having the Mayor, Chairman of the Board of Aldermen and President of the Common Council added to, or having them a part of said committee. We can do all that a board of commissioners can possibly do, and can make the Fire Department as complete in efficiency as it is possible to make it. It has been argued that we must have the men always ready for duty at the several houses. I believe, in the business portion of the city where the men are likely to be away during the day, and at night where they will be obliged to sleep on the extreme outskirts, we should employ permanent men, and I would do more; I would divide the city into, say six districts, in each of which I would have an assistant-engineer appointed permanently, whose duty it would be to have the entire charge of the men in that district, to examine all places where combustible materials are stored, and to make himself perfectly familiar with the construction of all buildings, and to post himself in the best way to attack fires, occur where they may. I would have them report to the Committee on Fire Department at their regular meetings every two weeks, and there make such suggestions and reports as will in their judgment be for the interest and safety of the inhabitants in their several districts. The commissioners, if appointed, will (for they will be obliged to do as the majority recommend it) make the whole department a permanent force; this will increase the expenses over the present cost $353,029 50 over that recommended by the Committee on Fire Department $315,580 75, an amount I think uncalled for. I don't think the people today are in favor of commissioners. We now have the health, public institutions, Mount Hope, water, City Hospital, ferries, Public Library and streets under commissioners,—all are too far removed from the people. After the commissioners are appointed they can snap their fingers at the wishes of the people. If we are to have commissioners, let it be done by the vote of the citizens; and at this time, Mr. President, I think it proper to state what the Committee on Fire Department have done since November last, as it is often stated that they have done nothing to increase its efficiency. They have located a steam fire engine on Northampton street, one on Parker street, one on Washington square, one horse hose company on Fourth street, one hook and ladder company on Washington square; have changed some, and are constantly having the horse hose carriages altered so as to convey the firemen to the fires—have placed horse hose carriages to run in connection with Engine companies Nos. 4, 7 and 8, and will locate steam fire engines on Mason street and Warren street, as soon as the houses are completed; they have also ordered horse hose carriages to be manufactured to run in connection with all of the engines in place of the small tender now drawn behind. I concur in the recommendation for a repair shop submitted by the minority. I heartily advocated that in committee last year. In answer to the gentleman from Ward 10, in regard to insurance, I have it from the presidents of two companies that the rates in Boston are no larger than in any other city. I only hope, Mr. President, that all will vote according to the dictates of their own conscience, and not do as one of the majority Committee on Reorganization told me only a short time ago, that he thought the Fire Department was all right, that the officers were competent, and it was well managed, but the people or press was demanding a change, and he was willing to cater to their wishes.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—The gentleman who has just taken his seat calls my attention to figures. I am very glad to have him do so. When I can't answer his figures then I will give up the argument. I shall not undertake to controvert a single statement that he has made. He gives me credit of being a statistician and having presented some figures which may be unanswerable and have been denied here. I desire to read a response to a letter of mine from the Auditor of Accounts.

Mr. Shaw read a letter addressed by him to the Auditor of Accounts, inquiring if the statistics of the expenses of the Fire Department, presented at the last meeting by Mr. Wells of Ward 3, or those given by Mr. Shaw at the previous meeting were correct. The reply was as follows:

CITY OF BOSTON, CITY HALL, }
Office of Auditor of Accounts, Sept. 29, 1873. }

George A. Shaw: Dear Sir—In reply to yours of this date, I would state that the statistics are correct in conformity with your request. As regards those of Mr. Wells, I can only say that they were not compiled in this office, and the method of the compiler as to what is contained in the figures in reference to expenses, I cannot say.

Yours truly,

ALFRED T. TURNER, Auditor.

Mr. Shaw—So much for the denial that my figures are correct. Now, while I am on my feet, I want to add a few more words because information has come to me today which has determined me to make this statement. I want to give the percentage of increase of expenditures of the Fire Department from 1860 to 1873 on the basis of Mr. Wells's figures, which I now quote. Mr. Wells takes from 1860-61 to 1872-73, while I carefully stated that 1872-73, with its enormous expenditures, was excluded from mine. By the calculation of Mr. Wells he gives the expense of the department in 1872-73 as $605,310 99, avoiding the expense of the fire alarm which is as much part and parcel of the department as a wheel is a part of a coach.

Carefully avoiding the extraordinary expenditures of 1872-3, I take the amount included therein, exclusive of $137,000, which Mr. Wells claimed as extraordinary, of 1872-73, and we have an increase on the cost of the department of 340 per cent., while all I claimed by my figures is 317 per cent. If Mr. Wells's figures prove anything they prove too much. He makes the increase 340 per cent. instead of 317. If gentlemen will bear in mind that the increased amount of population is but fifty-five per cent., and the increase in valuation of taxable property is only 147 per cent., and the increase in loss by fire 144 per cent., you will see the enormous difference in the cost of the department, which has increased 340 per cent. according to Mr. Wells's figures.

The President—The Chair would remind the gentleman that the hour (half-past ten) has arrived at which the Council has voted to take a vote on this question.

Mr. Shaw—I would ask permission to give a few more figures.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I move that the gentleman be allowed five minutes to close in.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I understand there are other gentlemen who desire to be heard on the other side of the question.

Mr. Dean—I move the time be extended to eleven o'clock, when the vote shall be taken.

Carried by a rising vote of 23 or to 17 against.

Mr. Shaw said he had been inquired of by many persons in regard to the figures concerning the city of London, read at the last meeting, and he had fortunately received a report from Colonel Henderson, the Commissioner of Police for the metropolis of London. From this he found the number of houses built in London last year was five times as many as there are in Boston today. Between the years 1849 and 1872, inclusive, 254,876 houses were built in London, so that the proportion between London and Boston, today, is about 400,000 against thirty-one thousand and perhaps five hundred in Boston—London has twelve times as many inhabitants as Boston, eight times as much area, and from twelve to fifteen times as many houses as Boston. And yet the amount appropriated last year, and expended for the purpose of a Fire Department in London, was only about $340,000, and the amount appropriated this year is about $350,000, while we have appropriated this year $550,000. At the rate we are going on unless more economy is used in the purchases for the Fire Department, and unless there is more responsibility given to or taken by somebody, or exercised by some parties, I think we shall run over $550,000. I have been trying for some time to get at facts. Complaints have been made to me that certain expenditures were made for apparatus purchased at figures higher than the market price. I hold in my hand a letter to show why I have been doing so. Mr. Shaw then read a letter from a merchant, whose name he declined to give, stating that one thousand feet of eight-ply hose was sold to an outside party for 77½ cents a foot, which was immediately afterward resold to the Fire Department at $1 25 per foot. The writer also thought that grave mistakes had been made in the kind of hose used. In reply to another letter from Mr. Shaw the same gentleman wrote that he had reason to believe the hose above mentioned had passed through the hands of two or three parties before reaching the city, but he declined giving the name of the party to whom it was sold. Now, continued Mr. Shaw, I have been bluffed at every quarter in getting information. Long and frequent correspondence with officials had elicited no direct replies, only evasive answers. At the proper time I have a communication to make to the City Government, though as at present advised, I will not now charge corruption upon any one. But I do assert there is at least unlimited license about the management of the affairs of the Fire Department. While that is the case I find members of the department about City Hall making their trades and bargains to defeat this measure before us. I charge no man at present on the committee with corruption; but there have been men on the committee for whom I cannot say so much. In conclusion, Mr. Shaw hoped the substitution of the minority report would be defeated.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12—I wish to speak briefly and explain my reasons for voting against a commission. The gentleman from Ward 9 stated in substance that he had adopted the sentiment of the man who said "I know of no way to judge of the future but by the past." I too have adopted that sentiment; and judging from the past what can we expect of the future. I regret exceedingly the necessity which compels me to speak plainly of some of the commissions which have had charge of the interests of our city. I will allude to the work of the Trustees of the Public Library. From the time Mr. Ticknor and Mr. Everett left that board there was a sad tendency to hoard books, and keep them from the people. At the time when an attempt was made to remove the library to the extreme northwestern portion of the city, near Brookline, for the purpose of making it a place of retirement, and of depriving the people of the liberty of using it, the gentleman from South Boston was the only man who appeared before the Committee of the Legislature to oppose that scheme. He did it for the interests of the people. The trustees in advocating their cause before the legislative committee to determine on a site for the library stated the great advantage it would be to the students and the professors of Harvard College if the library was placed nearer that institution, forgetting wholly the interests of the people and the fact that the poor people of Boston would be compelled to go a mile or more through summer heat and winter snows to reach the advantages intended for them. The trustees at that time learned that they must act in accordance with the public sentiment of the people, and from that date to this I am happy to say that they have endeavored to popularize the institution and circulate the books for the benefit of the class of people for whom they were provided. The Boston Fire Department has been pretty severely criticised; but has any one of our number heard one word against the Water Board of the city of Boston who, in my opinion, are more to blame for the spread and extent of the fire of November 9th than any of the other boards which have been criticised for inefficiency. On the sixteenth of June last I had the honor to offer an amendment to an order calling upon the Water Board to report to the City Council as soon as possible what alterations in the water pipes and hydrants would be required to furnish an adequate supply of water to the city for all necessary purposes. I hold in my hand their report. They submit to the Council the report of the City Engineer, who recommends that not less than six miles of twenty-inch pipe, two of six-inch, five of twelve-inch and five of six-inch are required in the city proper, eight of twelve-inch, three of eight-inch and two of six-inch in East and South Boston; more than a mile of twenty-four-inch, one of eight-inch and one of six inch, in Roxbury—in all more than thirteen miles—to make alterations to afford an adequate supply of water to the city of Boston. Now in regard to the Directors of Public Institutions, I believe that no recommendations of theirs for years in regard to any feature of the city institutions has been carried through the City Council. I think that is evidence that that board is not in accord with public opinion. I am unwilling to vote for a fire commission, or any other commission until the people and the City Council of Boston require the present boards to come up to the point of efficiency at which they should be. And yet I must say that the gentlemen composing the two boards to whom I have alluded are, in my opinion, men who have a high sense of honor and duty, and obedience to the laws of God and man, but as boards they have fallen far short of their duty.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I move, when the question is taken on the substitute, it be by yeas and nays.

The motion was carried.

The motion was put on the amendment of Mr. Mahan of Ward 5, and as the President was about to announce the result, Mr. Denny of Ward 9 called attention to the order of the Council requiring every member to vote. He asked that the rule be enforced.

The President called upon members to vote, and the question was again taken by a rising vote. The result was 37 in favor and 22 against, and the amendment was declared adopted.

The question recurring on Mr. Dean's motion to substitute the minority for the majority report, it was adopted, yeas 33, nays 23, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Abbott, Anderson, Bleiler, Brennan, Burt, Collins, Dacey, Dean, Doherty, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hine, Hughes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Loring, Madden, Mahan, Marston, Martin, McCue, McKenney, Morse, Pease, Thacher, Train, Upham, Warren, Wells, Weston, Woodward—33.

Nays—Messrs. Adams, Barnes, Bicknell, Blackmar, Boardman, Brackett, Burditt, Caton, Cudworth, Darrow, Denny, Hall, Harrington, Holmes, Lamh, Page, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Shepard, Tower, West, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods—28.

The question being on the giving the substitute a second reading, it was ordered by a vote of 33 yeas to 23 nays, precisely the same as the previous vote.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 moved that the ordinance lie on the table. This was defeated by a rising vote of 23 in favor and 35 against.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 moved an amendment to the fifty-eighth section, by striking out the words "said repeal to take effect on the organization of the Fire Department as herein provided." The amendment was carried.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved the vote giving this ordinance a second reading be reconsidered, hoping it would not prevail.

The motion was lost.

On motion of Mr. Mahan, the ordinance was read the second time by its title, and the question being on the passage of the ordinance, Mr. West of Ward 16 said he hoped the friends of the minority report would not press the question tonight. It ought to be taken up section by section, as its advocates urged. He hoped to see it discussed in detail.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—We have a full Council tonight, and if the gentlemen who have charge of the majority report will agree to do what they can to amend this ordinance and to perfect it without undertaking to attempt to carry the commission, I will agree to anything. But if they only wish to filibuster, to make it go at a small meeting, of course I will not consent.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I was totally unprepared for the passage of the ordinance tonight, and I do not believe the members of the Council can act correctly upon this question now. We have got to a point where we cannot reconsider. We should discuss this ordinance. Some members would have been in favor of placing the department in the hands of the Aldermen if they could not get a commission, while the gentleman who presented the minority report voted to keep it in the City Council. If I could not have had a commission I should have joined hands with the gentleman in giving it to the Aldermen. But he controverts the spirit of his report. I think we ought to have time to consider this matter specially.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 read extracts from Mr. Dean's speeches in the Council in favor of discussing the ordinance in detail, and if necessary to have a special session. He expressed the hope that time would be allowed for discussion.

Mr. Dean—My belief is that this ordinance is as perfect as it could be made. I am content, however, to debate the proposition if all will agree to it, but don't undertake to fight on the commission again. This is my proposition: Instead of going for a commission, try to perfect the ordinance. But if you undertake to pass the commission I shall object.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—The gentleman and myself may be considered as standing opposite each other on this question. He comes in here with a report, and the radical change which he proposes in the organization of the Fire Department is that it be under the supervision of a special committee of the Board of Aldermen. He has sustained it in his speeches in this hall and in committee. Now he wishes to oblige us, if he waives this point, to give up the desire to press the commission. He is not right in urging that after making a breach of faith—I do not intend to use the term offensively.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—If they will accept the proposition that was made, I shall certainly agree to it, so that we can go over this ordinance at any length of time, and afford an opportunity for amending it.

Mr. Denny—Will the gentleman be willing to have the question he proposed put again?

Mr. Dean—I will agree to anything but the discussion of a commission.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—This matter has been discussed for some time, and I don't believe the Council wish to listen to any more arguments. I therefore move the previous question.

The main question was ordered—40 to 16,—and the ordinance was passed.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 moved to adjourn. Lost.

Mr. Flynn moved a reconsideration of the vote whereby the order was passed, hoping it would not prevail.

Mr. Brackett moved that the motion lie on the table. Lost.

Mr. Flynn moved the previous question and the main question was ordered—40 yeas, 16 nays.

The motion to reconsider was lost.

On motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14, the Council, at half-past eleven o'clock, adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
OCTOBER 6, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

JURORS DRAWN.

Four Grand Jurors were drawn for the October term of the United States Circuit Court.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Constables—Aaron F. Nettleton, T. Wilson Stratton. Special Police, without pay—John McLean, at Howland Athenæum.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Denny, Rice & Co. and others, for leave to use hoisting beams at their premises.

Francis Richards et al., that obstructions be removed from the archway on Chapman place.

To the Committee on Sewers. George A. Ellis et al., for sewer in Putnam street, from Bennington to Chelsea street.

J. A. Kohler et al., for sewer in Parker street, from Gore to Delle avenue.

To the Committee on Health on the Part of the Board. James McGraun, for stable in rear of 75 Everett street.

Remonstrance of Charles A. Wiener et al., against enlargement of stable at 134 Eighth street, owned by Mrs. Mary Hurley.

Thomas B. Cox, 606 Bennington street; R. A. Upton, 90 Zeigler street; Cornelius Driscoll, 1 Michigan street; John W. Dorsy, 547 Saratoga street; C. F. Spencley, Sawyer street; Isaac S. Burrell, 620 Munroe street, to occupy stables.

Remonstrance of Alfred P. Rockwell et al. against erection of stables by Fred. Pope on Marlborough street.

John Roessle, to occupy stable on Pyncheon street, Ward 15, until May 30, 1874.

Noyes & Walker, to erect wooden stable at 5 North Centre street.

To the Committee on Public Lands. Executors of George W. Blake, for change in condition of sale of land to him.

To the Committee on County Accounts. D. S. Gilchrist, to be paid for work on Probate Records of Suffolk County.

To the Committee on Lamps. Michael Travers et al., that Alger street be lighted.

To the Committee on Armories. Company A, Second Battalion Infantry, for increase of armory rent.

To the Committee on Licenses. Abram French & Co., for the "privilege of using a carriage for the transportation of customers to and from their store, 151 and 153 Milk street (the condition of said street at present being very bad, and during the fall and winter months being almost impassable) with the privilege, also, of standing on Milk street, at the corner of Washington street."

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The orders of notice for sewers in Moreland street, two hundred feet east of Cleveland street; in Clifton, Albion and Hudson streets, and in Cottage street, between Clifton and Stoughton streets, were severally considered, and there being no objection, the subjects were recommitted to the Committee on Sewers.

On the petition of Atherton Brown, to use steam engine at 167 and 169 Summer street, an order of notice was passed for a hearing October 28, at four o'clock P. M.

QUARTERLY REPORTS.

The quarterly report of the Inspector of Lighters, was submitted, accepted and sent down. During the quarter ending September 30, there have been inspected, 251 vessels, which delivered 19,367 tons; the fees for weighing, marking and inspecting which were $1376 25; office expenses $32 30; leaving a balance to be divided of $1343 95.

The quarterly report of the Paymaster of the Soldiers' Relief Committee for the quarter ending September 30, made the following exhibit: Balance on hand July 1, $954; received from the Treasurer, $18,500; disbursed during the quarter, $19,049; balance on hand, $405. In July there were 1160 applicants; in August, 1125; in September, 1199. Amounts disbursed during the same period—July, $6411; August, $6126; September, $6512. Report accepted and sent down.

The quarterly report of the Chief of Police was received, accepted and placed on file. It makes the following exhibit: Arrests, 7635; males, 6106; females, 1529; American, 2536; foreigners, 5099; non-residents, 1466; minors, 1590; commitments, 5467; lodgers, 5383. Property taken from prisoners and lodgers and restored to them $14,660 73; ditto reported stolen in the city, $16,818; do. recovered, $15,719 42; fines imposed by the courts $17,896; amount of imprisonment by courts 442 years 11 months; witness fees earned by officers, $3968 68; larcenies reported 682; arrests for same 446; amount received for dog license, $1369. The expenses of the department for the quarter have been $170,298 96.

WOODEN PAVEMENT COMMISSION.

The Wooden Pavement Commission, who were requested to make a supplementary report, in conformity to the petition of N. C. Nash et al., submitted a communication declining to make such a report, believing that their report already printed and accepted is practically full and complete. Accepted and placed on file.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

Assessments for the construction of sewers were submitted by the Superintendent of Sewers as follows: Sixth street from H to I, total $861 54, to be paid by individuals $646 16. Dorchester avenue, Shamrock and Commercial streets, total $11,194 98; to be paid by individuals, $8022 44. Prescott street, between Princeton and Lexington streets, total $709 94; to be paid by individuals, $532 45. Third street, total $411 18; to be paid by individuals, $308 39. Fruit street, total $646 20; to be paid by individuals, $484 65. Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

INVITATION ACCEPTED.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE BOARD OF TRADE.

A communication was received from Cornelius G. Attwood, secretary of the Board of Trade, transmitting the following resolutions passed by that body at its annual meeting today:

Whereas, In consequence of the late disastrous fires, attention has been called to the Fire Department of this city, and an examination into the system on which it is based proves it to be radically defective and inefficient; and

Whereas, Its continuance is the source of apprehension and distrust, involves the payment of high rates of insurance, results in inadequate protection from fire, and is otherwise detrimental to business interests; and

Whereas, More than ten thousand citizens and taxpayers petitioned for an independent board of fire commissioners, which experience proves to be the best safeguard against fire; and

Whereas, The ordinance reported by the majority of the committee appointed to consider the subject, provides for the appointment of a paid and independent commission, and has the approval of business men, underwriters, the press and others, whose interests are at stake: therefore be it

Resolved, That the Boston Board of Trade, in behalf of the commercial and mercantile interests of the city, respectfully urges upon the members of the Board of Aldermen and of the Common Council the adoption of the said ordinance without further delay, believing its adoption is in accordance with the desire of the citizens generally, will reestablish confidence and secure the best possible protection from fire.

The communication and resolutions were placed on file.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD.

The special assignment for five o'clock, being a hearing on the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad, for leave to lay an additional track in Washington street, between Boylston street and Temple place, was taken up.

Colonel E. O. Shepard appeared for the railroad, and stated that unless there are remonstrants he would not take up the time of the Board, but would agree that the subject be recommitted.

The Chairman said the question was on the acceptance of the report (leave to withdraw) of the Committee on Paving.

Alderman Power moved that the counsel for the railroad have permission to speak if he desires it. Carried.

Colonel Shepard said he was not aware that the committee had reported. The reason this location is asked for is for the purpose of distributing the horse-car travel more equally than it is at present. Under the present system the whole down travel centres at the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets. The Highland, Washington street and South Boston cars run into Tremont street at that point, and greatly obstruct travel at that corner. The method by which this was proposed to be obviated was to run through Chauncy street, and it did partially. A portion of the cars were enabled to run down Washington street to Temple place, and thence pass up into Tremont street, which relieved the crowd somewhat. But Chauncy street is very narrow, and there are complaints that business is obstructed by the horse cars running through there. By laying this double track, Chauncy street will be relieved of a considerable portion of that travel, and the cars can then pass down to Temple place, instead of turning up into Boylston street and thus instead of increasing the crowd in that direction, the travel will not all be between Boylston street and Temple place. When Washington street is widened it will give room enough on each side for a double track. There will be no point between Boylston street and Temple place but which will be wide enough for a vehicle to pass on each side of the tracks. In one place there will be twelve feet on each side, and in no place will it be less than eight feet.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield the report of the committee was accepted.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, it was voted that when the Board adjourn it be to Thursday next at four o'clock P. M.

REORGANIZATION OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The ordinance in relation to the Fire Department, reported by minority of Committee on Reorganization of the Fire Department, being City Document No. 109, came from the Council adopted, with amendments to insert "City Council," in place of "Board of Aldermen," in italics, and also at end of Section 24; also, to strike out from Section 58 the words, "said repeal to take effect upon the reorganization of the Fire Department, as herein provided."

The question being on concurrence with the Council, Alderman Stebbins said—

I desire to offer a substitute for the ordinance adopted by the Council, and which comes up before us this afternoon. I have listened to the communication which has been read from the Board of Trade, and to the various debates which have been held on this subject, and as the result of it I have prepared an ordinance, which I now submit. This ordinance provides for the election of a board of seven fire directors, similar to the boards which now govern the Public Library, City Hospital and public institutions. It provides for the appointment by the Mayor of four directors, who shall serve without pay, one of whom shall be the representative of the underwriters of the city of Boston, which great interest should be represented.

It also provides for the election of two members of the Common Council and one member of this branch, who are to act with the four to be appointed by the Mayor. It also provides for the appointment of a Committee on the Fire Department who shall make the estimates for the annual appropriations for the department. The Mayor has the power of appointing the Chief Engineer and Superintendent of Repairs. There is also a Board of nine District Engineers instead of fourteen as at present, with one each for South Boston, East Boston, Roxbury and Dorchester, the Chief-Engineer to have the same power as at present. The fire alarm is to be under the control of these directors, the office of superintendent being retained as at present. The appointments of the companies are to be made by the Board of Directors and the foremen are to be appointed by the Board of Engineers instead of being elected as at present. There are various details which are copied from both the majority and minority reports, and others from the London and New York departments. I move that this ordinance be printed, and that the whole subject be specially assigned for next Thursday, at 4 o'clock P. M. I may say frankly that there are matters of detail in the majority report which I do not approve of. So long as we can have men who will serve the city without pay, I think we ought to get them. I do not want a paid Board of Directors. We can have better men than we can hire for five thousand dollars a year. I doubt if we could get the Alderman from Ward 1 for that sum, to give his exclusive attention to the ferries, and yet he gives his time to that work for nothing. The gentlemen of the Water Board have committed to their care some nine hundred thousand dollars a year, and they give their whole time to the care of that department without cost to the city. Now, if we intend to establish all these boards as paid commissions, well and good, but unless that is so, I shall not vote for a paid fire commission.

Following is the substitute ordinance offered by Alderman Stebbins:

Be it ordained by the Aldermen and Common Council of the city of Boston, in City Council assembled, as follows:

Section 1. The Fire Department of the city of Boston shall consist of a board of seven directors, a chief-engineer, a first assistant-engineer, nine district-engineers, a superintendent of fire alarms, and as many foremen, engineers, hosemen, hook-and-ladder men, telegraph operators and other persons as the City Council may from time to time deem necessary for the public service.

Sec. 2 There shall be appointed annually in the month of January a Joint Committee of the City Council on the Fire Department, consisting of two aldermen and three councilmen. It shall be the duty of said committee to examine as often as once in each month the records and accounts of the Board of Directors and the Board of Engineers of the Fire Department; and also to examine all applications for appropriations for the Fire Department, and report thereon to the City Council.

Sec. 3. In the month of November, in the year 1873, or as soon thereafter as may be, the City Council shall elect by concurrent vote of the two branches, one member of the Board of Aldermen and two members of the Common Council, to be members of the said Board of Directors of the Fire Department, and to hold office during the remainder of the municipal year, and until others are elected in their place, unless they are sooner removed.

In the month of January, in the year 1874, and annually afterwards, in said month, the City Council shall elect by concurrent vote of the two branches, one member of the Board of Aldermen and two members of the Common Council, to hold office as members of said board during the remainder of the municipal year in which they are elected, and until others are elected in their place, unless they are sooner removed.

In the month of November, in the year 1873, or as soon thereafter as may be, the Mayor shall appoint, subject to the approval and confirmation of the City Council, four persons, one of whom shall be a member of the Board of Underwriters of Boston, who, with the three members of the City Council elected, as hereinbefore provided, shall constitute the Board of Directors of the Fire Department. No member of the City Council shall be eligible to appointment by the Mayor on said board. Two of the persons appointed by the Mayor shall be appointed to hold their office until the first Monday in May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and two until the first Monday in May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six. In the month of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and thereafter annually in the month of April, the Mayor shall appoint, subject to like confirmation and approval, two persons, not members of the City Council, to be members of said Board of Directors for the term of two years from the first Monday of the following May.

Any member of said board elected from the City Council shall, at any time, be subject to removal by the City Council for cause; and any member appointed by the Mayor shall, at any time, be subject to removal by the Mayor for cause. All vacancies occurring in said board, from any cause, shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointments are herein directed to be made. A majority of the whole board shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Sect. 4. The said board shall organize forthwith, upon the first appointment of its members, and thereafter annually on the first Monday of May, by the choice of one of their members as chairman. They shall also choose a clerk, who shall not be a member of the board; and they shall make such rules and regulations for their own government and for the government of all other officers and members of the Fire Department, including the fire-alarm telegraph, as they may deem expedient, provided that said rules and regulations shall not be inconsistent with the ordinances of the city. Except where otherwise provided, the said board shall have the care and management of the Fire Department, and shall be responsible for its efficiency.

Sect. 5. The said Board of Directors shall annually, on or before the 15th day of February, send to the City Auditor an estimate in detail of the appropriations required for the maintenance of the Fire Department during the next financial year. All bills for expenditures from the appropriations for the Fire Department shall be drawn for by the said board, examined by the Auditor, and approved by the Committee on Accounts, before they are paid by the Treasurer. The said board may fix the compensation of their clerk, and the compensation of other members of the department not otherwise provided for; but the expenditures of said board shall in no case exceed the appropriations made from time to time by the City Council for the enlargement or maintenance of the department.

Sect. 6. The said Board shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, present to the City Council a report, made up to and including the last day of the preceding month, containing a chronological statement of the number of fires in such month, with the causes thereof, a general description of the property destroyed or injured at each fire, with the names of the owners or occupants and the amount of insurance, if any, specifying the portion of the force and apparatus called into action at each fire, with the name of the officer in command, also a statement of all fatal or serious accidents to members of the department or others, on account of fires or alarms of fire during the month, together with such other information or suggestions as they may deem proper. They shall also, annually, in the month of May or June, present to the City Council a report made up to, and including the thirtieth day of the preceding April, containing, in addition to a consolidated statement of the facts contained in the monthly reports of the preceding year, a list of the causes of fire, alphabetically arranged, a statement of the income and expenditures on account of the department during the preceding year, a schedule of all the property belonging to the department, with a statement as to its condition on the date of the report, and an estimate of its value, also a statement of the number and location of the fire-alarm boxes; together with such other information or suggestions as they may deem proper.

Sect. 7. As soon as may be after the first organization of the Board of Directors of the Fire Department, as hereinbefore provided, and annually afterward in the month of April, the Mayor shall appoint, subject to the approval of the said Board of Directors, a chief engineer and a first assistant-engineer of the Fire Department, to hold office until the first Monday in May in the year next ensuing, and until their successors are appointed or they are removed, and either or both of them may be removed at any time at the pleasure of the Mayor; and vacancies from any cause shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointments are herein directed to be made. The said Chief and First Assistant shall perform such duties in addition to those hereinafter designated, keep such records and make such reports as the said Board may direct. For their services they shall receive such compensation as the City Council may from time to time determine.

Sect. 8. The Chief Engineer shall have the sole command at fires over all other engineers, and all officers and members of the Fire Department, and all other persons who may be present at fires, and shall direct all proper measures for the extinguishment of fires, protection of property, preservation of order, and observance of the laws, ordinances and regulations respecting fires; and it shall be the duty of said Chief Engineer to examine into the condition of the engines and all other fire apparatus, and the houses connected therewith; and of the engine and all other houses belonging to the city and used for the purposes of the Fire Department; and of the companies attached to the said department, as often as circumstances may render it expedient, or whenever directed so to do by the Board of Directors.

Sect. 9. In the absence of the Chief-Engineer the First Assistant-Engineer shall perform the duties of the office and shall have full authority as chief officer for the time being; and whenever the engines or other apparatus used in the department, except the fire-alarm telegraph, require alterations, additions or repairs, the said first assistant shall, under the instructions of the Board of Directors, cause the same to be made.

Sect. 10. As soon as may be after his first appointment under this ordinance, and thereafter annually in the month of May, the Chief Engineer shall appoint, subject to the approval of the Board of Directors, nine District Engineers, of whom two shall be residents of East Boston, one of South Boston, one of the Roxbury District and one of the Dorchester District. The said District Engineers shall hold office until their successors are appointed, or they are removed, and either one or all of them may be removed at any time at the option of the Board of Directors, and vacancies from any cause shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointments are herein directed to be made. For their services they shall receive such compensation as the City Council may from time to time determine.

Sect. 11. The Chief-Engineer, the First Assistant-Engineer and the District Engineers shall constitute the Board of Engineers of the city of Boston. The Chief-Engineer shall preside at all meetings of the board at which he is present. In his absence the First Assistant-Engineer shall preside; and in the absence of the Chief and First Assistant, a temporary chairman shall be elected by ballot. A majority of the whole board shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The said Engineers may make such rules and regulations for their own government and in relation to the various matters under their control as they may deem expedient, subject however to the approval of the Board of Directors.

Sect. 12. The said Board of Engineers shall, at their first meeting after appointment under this ordinance, and thereafter annually on the first Monday in May, choose a secretary, who shall hold his office until the first Monday in May of the year next ensuing, unless sooner removed, and he may be removed at any time at the pleasure of the Board of Engineers, and a vacancy from any cause may be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment is made. For his services he shall receive such compensation as the City Council may from time to time determine.

Sect. 13. The said secretary to the Board of Engineers shall keep a full and complete record of the acts of said board, and shall perform such other duties as said Board of Engineers and the Board of Directors may designate. He shall keep an account of the appropriations made by the City Council for the use of the Fire Department, and of the expenditures on account of the same; and shall compare his account monthly with the Auditor's books, and see that the expenditures of the Fire Department do not at any time exceed the amount of the appropriations at its disposal. He shall also keep a separate account of the expenses of each engine, hose carriage, and hook and ladder carriage, and of the horses, furniture and apparatus thereto belonging, and all other incidental expenses; and shall present to the Board of Directors, monthly, a full and detailed statement thereof.

Sect. 14. The Board of Engineers shall be responsible for the discipline and good order of all subordinate members of the department. They shall have control of all the officers and members of the several companies attached to the Fire Department, and all persons present at fires; and also of all the engine and other houses used for the purposes of the department, and all the engines, hose carriages, hook and ladder carriages, extinguishers, horses, furniture and apparatus thereto belonging.

Sect. 15. The said engineers, whenever a fire breaks out in the section of the city to which they are assigned for duty, shall immediately repair to the place of such fire, wearing such badge of office as the Board of Directors may designate; they shall take proper measures that the several engines and other apparatus be arranged in the most advantageous situations, and duly worked for the speedy and effectual extinguishment of the fire; they shall require and compel assistance from all persons, as well members of the Fire Department as others, in extinguishing the fire, pulling down or demolishing any house or building, if occasion require, in suppressing all tumults and disorders, removing furniture, goods, or other merchandise from any building on fire, or in danger thereof, and shall appoint stewards to secure the same. They shall also cause order to be preserved in going to, working at, or returning from fires, and at all other times when companies attached to the department are on duty. The assistant engineers shall report their absences from fires to the secretary at the regular meetings of the board, with the reasons therefor, and he shall keep a record of the same, and, once in every month, and oftener if required, make a report thereof, stating all the facts, to the Board of Directors.

Sect. 16. The Engineers shall report to the Board of Directors the name of every person, not a member of either of said companies, who may, contrary to law, refuse or neglect to obey any orders of an engineer, given at any fire.

Sect. 17. The engineer in command at a fire shall have the power to adjudge upon the necessity of pulling down and demolishing buildings to prevent the spreading of fires, and have authority to pull them down and destroy them accordingly.

Sect. 18. The engineers shall inquire for and examine into, all shops and other places where shavings or other such combustible materials are collected or deposited, and report at the regular meeting of the board the condition in this respect of the district to which they are assigned, and whenever, in the opinion of any two of them, the same may endanger the security of the city from fires, they shall direct the tenant or occupant of said shops or other places to remove such shavings or other combustible materials; and in case of such tenant's or occupant's neglect or refusal so to do, they shall cause the same to be removed at the expense of such tenant or occupant, who shall, in addition, be liable to a penalty of not less than two or more than fifty dollars for such neglect or refusal; any person who shall obstruct the engineers, or any of them, in carrying out the provisions of this section, shall also be liable to a penalty of not less than two nor more than fifty dollars.

Sect. 19. The power of making and establishing rules and regulations for the transportation and keeping of gunpowder within the city of Boston, and of granting of licenses for keeping and sale thereof in the city, according to the provisions of an act entitled "An act for further regulating the storage and safe keeping, and transportation of gunpowder in the city of Boston," and of any other act or acts on the same subject, shall be exercised and performed by the Board of Engineers, and the power and duty of seizing any gunpowder kept or being within the city or harbor, contrary to the provisions of the said act or acts, shall be exercised and performed by the said engineers, or any of them; and in case of any seizure being made by any engineer other than the Chief, he shall forthwith report the same to the Chief-Engineer and the Chief-Engineer shall cause all gunpowder which may have been seized as aforesaid to be labeled and prosecuted in the manner prescribed in the said acts; and all other powers and duties granted and enjoined in and by the said act or acts shall be performed by the said Chief or one of the other engineers.

Sect. 20. All moneys received for fines, forfeitures and penalties arising under this ordinance or the laws of this Commonwealth regulating the storage and transportation of gunpowder, or the erection of buildings within the City or Boston, or the prevention and extinguishment of fire, unless it is by such laws otherwise specially provided, shall be paid into the treasury of the city, to be applied in such way as is provided in the acts of this Commonwealth.

Sect. 21. No license shall be granted by the said Board of Engineers for the sale of fireworks within the city of Boston, without the approval of the Board of Directors.

Sect. 22. The regular officers and members of the several engine, hose, hook-and-ladder and extinguisher companies and the insurance brigade, in service at the time this ordinance is passed, shall continue to hold the positions to which they were severally appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen, and to receive the compensation heretofore established by the City Council, until removed by the Board of Directors. And whenever vacancies occur from any cause in any companies at present organized, and whenever any increase of the force is authorized by order of the City Council, the Board of Engineers shall appoint, subject to the approval of the Board of Directors, suitable persons to fill the places created or made vacant. The compensation of the officers and members of companies shall be fixed from time to time by the City Council.

Sect. 23. The Board of Engineers shall report from time to time to the Board of Directors the names of such subordinate officers and members of the department as in their judgment should be removed, with their reasons therefor. Any member of the Fire Department, except the Chief and First-Assistant-Engineer and the Superintendent of Fire Alarms, may be at any time removed or dismissed by the Board of Directors, or deposed from any office that he may hold therein. No company shall have power to appoint or discharge any officer or member.

Sect. 24. No person under twenty-one years of age, and no person who is not a legal voter in the city of Boston, shall be an officer or member of the Fire Department.

Sect. 25. Every subordinate officer, and every member of the Fire Department shall sign the following agreement, to be deposited with the Board of Engineers: "I, A. B., having been appointed a member of the Boston Fire Department, hereby signify my agreement to abide by all the ordinances of the City Council, and the rules and regulations of the Board of Directors and of the Board of Engineers relating thereto." And any officer or member who shall neglect or refuse to sign the same shall not be entitled to any compensation whatsoever.

Sect. 26. The officers and members of the Fire Department shall be paid monthly, except when otherwise ordered by the City Council; and, except in case of sickness, death, or removal from the city, every officer or member thereof who shall not serve the whole of the month, or who shall be removed from the department or deposed from his office for cause, shall forfeit any and all compensation that would otherwise have been due to him at the time when such service ceased, or such deposing or removal took place.

Sect. 27. Every person who shall have served according to law in the Fire Department for seven successive years, shall be entitled to receive a certificate thereof, signed by the Mayor; and all persons who shall receive said certificate shall be entitled to wear the badge of the department, and to do duty therein, when desired so to do by the Board of Directors.

Sect. 28. Whenever any person has received a certificate of appointment to any office under this ordinance, he shall be thereby immediately invested with all the authority conferred, and subject to all the duties imposed by the laws, the city ordinances, and the rules and regulations of the Fire Department; and whenever a vacancy occurs in the department, the same shall be filled as soon as conveniently may be.

Sect. 29. The engineers, officers and members of the several companies shall, when on duty, wear such badges or uniform as the Board of Directors may from time to time designate, the badges to be furnished at the expense of the city; and no other person shall be permitted to wear the same, except under such restrictions and regulations as the Board of Directors may approve.

Sect. 30. The Board of Engineers shall have authority to divide the city into fire districts, and form the companies into battalions to work the apparatus in said districts; and they shall require the foremen and hosemen who are permanently employed to perform patrol duty, and to render such services in connection with the police and the department for the survey and inspection of buildings as they may deem expedient; the rules and regulations relating thereto to be subject, however, to the approval of the Board of Directors.

Sect. 31. Whenever any fire occurs in either of the adjoining cities or towns, only such and so many of the engineers shall repair thither as may have been previously designated for such purpose by the Board of Engineers. And no company shall leave the city in case of fire in either of the adjoining cities and towns, except by the express order of the Chief-Engineer or the First Assistant, or one of the District Engineers. And no company shall leave the city for any other purpose, except by permission of the Board of Directors.

Sect. 32. No associations, or organized societies or clubs of firemen, as such, shall be allowed in the department, except by the express permission of the City Council.

Sect. 33. No company shall be allowed to impose fines upon its members. For every absence or tardiness there shall be deducted from the pay of the absent or tardy officer or member the sum of one dollar, which amount so deducted shall be paid over at the end of each quarter to the treasurer of the company to which such officer or member shall belong, to meet the incidental expenses of the company. And if any officer or member shall have been absent or tardy at more than one-third of the fires, or alarms of fires, occurring during the month, if more than five, except in case of sickness, such absence or tardiness shall be considered good cause for his discharge from the department.

Sect. 34. The Board of Engineers, notwithstanding the provisions herein contained, may, with the approval of the Board of Directors, grant to any officer or member of the Fire Department, if they think it compatible with the interests of the department, a vacation not exceeding two weeks in any one year, upon such terms as they may think expedient.

And the Board of Engineers, with the advice and consent of the Board of Directors, may, if they see fit, whenever any member or officer of the Fire Department shall not, by reason of such vacation or sickness, or otherwise, attend to his duties in the department, appoint a substitute to act in his place during his absence.

Sec. 35. As soon as may be after the first organization of the Board of Directors of the Fire Department as hereinbefore provided, and annually afterwards in the month of April, the Mayor shall appoint, subject to the approval of the said Board of Directors, a Superintendent of Fire Alarms, to hold office until the first Monday in the year next ensuing, and until his successor is appointed or he is removed, and he may be removed at any time at the pleasure of the Mayor, and a vacancy from any cause may be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment is herein directed to be made. For his services he shall receive such compensation as the City Council may from time to time determine.

Sec. 36. The said Superintendent of Fire Alarms shall have power to appoint, subject to the approval of the Board of Directors, such number of persons as may be necessary to operate and maintain the said telegraphic fire alarm; and he may, with the approval of said board, discharge any of said persons at any time. The compensation for persons employed in the said Fire Alarm Department shall be fixed by the Board of Directors.

Sec. 37. The Board of Directors shall designate the persons to whom shall be intrusted the keys of the signal boxes; and shall locate new boxes and discontinue any of those heretofore in use whenever they may deem expedient. And they shall moreover have authority to make rules and regulations under which alarms shall be given by the police and others intrusted with that duty.

Sec. 38. The Superintendent of Fire Alarms shall have the general care and management of the fire-alarm telegraph, subject to such rules and regulations as the Board of Directors may adopt; and he shall be held responsible for the good order and condition of that branch of the Fire Department.

Sec. 39. No person shall open any of the signal boxes connected with the fire-alarm telegraph, for the purpose of giving a false alarm, nor interfere in any way with said boxes, by breaking, cutting, injuring or defacing the same, nor tamper or meddle with said boxes or any part thereof.

Sec. 40. Any person who shall be guilty of a breach of any of the provisions of this ordinance, except as otherwise specially provided in any section thereof, shall forfeit and pay a fine of not less than two dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each offence.

Sec. 41. It shall be the duty of the members of the Police Department to aid the Fire Department by giving alarms in case of fire in such manner as the Fire Commissioners may direct, and in clearing the streets or grounds in the immediate vicinity of the fire, so that the members of the Fire Department shall not be hindered or obstructed in the performance of their duties. If any policeman refuses or neglects to give an alarm as directed in the manner aforesaid, or refuses to obey the orders of the chief officer in command at a fire, he shall forfeit and pay a fine of not less than five nor more than twenty dollars.

Sec. 42. The ordinance in relation to the Fire Department, printed in the revised ordinances, adopted the thirty-first day of December, A. D. 1869, and all amendments and additions thereto, are hereby repealed, said repeal to take effect upon the organization of the Board of Directors as herein designated; provided, however, that the present Chief and Assistant-Engineers and the Superintendent of Fire Alarms shall continue to hold their offices until their successors under this ordinance are appointed.

Alderman Quincy—I move to amend the substitute by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting instead the sections of the ordinance reported by the majority of the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department. I offer this amendment for the purpose of bringing the vote first upon the ordinance as reported by the committee. I do not propose, Mr. Chairman, to occupy the time of the Board by a recapitulation of arguments in favor of this measure, which must have become familiar to each member by this time, and which the committee have endeavored to present in their report, which all are supposed to have read as clearly as was in their power. I shall confine myself to a brief examination of the soundness of some of the positions assumed in opposition thereto in the minority report and the reported arguments of the signers of the same in the other branch.

With the minority's opening statement concerning the duties of the committee and their true course of action all must heartily concur. It would have been easy to grant the prayer of the petitioners on account of their numbers and to get rid of a difficult subject, but most highly culpable so to do "unless after careful consideration our own convictions demand it." That after careful consideration the convictions of the majority did so demand it the minority cannot have intended to call in question or to insinuate the neglect or careless consideration which they deprecate. The majority did undoubtedly decide that to visit other cities would delay their report without changing their convictions upon the main question to which the public were demanding an answer, but so far as time, labor and investigation bestowed on this subject at City Hall are concerned the committee cannot think that they have failed in their duty. With the exception of one member who was out of the country the chairs most often vacant at our meetings were not those of the majority, and if there was neglect or carelessness anywhere we think our skirts are clear.

We agree most heartily in the minority's definition of the true course, viz.: "To adopt measures for the permanent security of the city rather than for the temporary alleviation of present fears." Our difference is only on the somewhat important question of "which is the justice and which the thief?"—which of the two plans contemplates permanent security, and which a mere temporary relief? Could we in any manner leave this vexed question for the public to decide on the showman's appropriate principle of "you pays your money and you takes your choice," the majority would most cheerfully abide the result. For we cannot but think that these petitioners pretty fairly represent the public in this matter, and the ingenious argument twisted out of Mr. Spooner's evidence, to the effect that they did not know what they were asking for, and did not want it if they did, seems to us almost too weak to stand alone.

The position assumed by the minority, and which they endeavor to adduce arguments to support, is that the appointment of a commission would be a devolution of our own duties, which we abundantly able to perform, into unknown hands, who may perform them or may not. Instead, therefore, of devolving these powers and duties of the committee of the City Council to the unknown hands of a board selected, appointed and paid for the performance of these duties, and these alone, the minority would devolve them upon, as they contend, the better known, more reliable and efficient body of a committee of three Aldermen, annually elected to perform work of which this will be but a fraction, without pay. If there is to be a devolution of powers, which both sides admit, which would be the least known and most uncertain hands to which to commit them—a permanent board selected and paid for this and no other work, or three of each year's Aldermen elected on whatever political issue may turn up and liable to lose their seats in twelve months on some other? The majority do not consider that the weakness of the present system is to be ascribed particularly to the fact that the committee is joint, and the italics quoted are not theirs, but that it is temporary, liable to continual change on all sorts of issues and unpaid. No business man would employ such servants to do his work.

Because no member of the present board could be hired for work claiming his whole time for a commissioner's salary, it by no means follows, in our opinion, that he would make a better fire commissioner than many a man who could be hired. Because a man is a good average alderman, is a fraction of his time worth more than the whole time of a commissioner, paid to make it the business of his life? That such a commissioner could show zeal to keep himself in office otherwise than by showing zeal in the performance of his duties, we cannot regard as likely; but if he did, we are convinced that the first-mentioned zeal would be properly appreciated by the appointing power, and receive its due reward. That a permanent and paid board would be, as the minority confidently assert, public servants less looked after by their masters, whose property they protect, and more likely to become obstinate and indifferent than changing committee men, whose reflection may depend on a hundred possible issues sooner than their record in this particular regard, I, for one, cannot agree. It is, on the contrary, because I believe that such a board will be known and looked after by their masters the public to a degree in which changing and unpaid committees never have been or can be, that I propose to vote for its establishment. One of the chief objections to a commission is stated on page 8 to be the fact, that their power of appointing members would give them the complete control of five hundred voters, and that in consequence it would not "take the department out of politics." A frank admission by the gentlemen of the minority that it is now to some extent in politics. Now, if it were proposed that the office of commissioner should be elective, it is easy to see why they should aim at popularity with their subordinates to secure a continuance in office. It would seem, therefore, as if nothing would more effectually "take the department out of politics" than putting at its head officials utterly independent of its votes. If it is not now in politics, if members of the City Government have never sought or obtained its influence to obtain reelection, then we have no fear of seeing its five hundred voters led or driven to the polls by appointed commissioners.

But let us look over our testimony in regard to the experience of our sister city upon this point. Previous to the appointment of the commission the department was volunteer and under the control of the City Council, who, of course, opposed the change. Mr. George T. Hope, president of the Continental Insurance Company, and a practical fireman for many years, says, on page 123—

"The Fire Department was too useful to them as a political machine, and they used it from end to end. Without exception, the companies were debauched and used for political purposes, as long as there was a volunteer department in any degree. An act was passed by the Legislature, which provided for the appointment of commissioners. The chairman of the committee has alluded to the effect of commissions. To us in New York, and to those in other places, that such a thing should be questioned seems strange. It seems strange that there should be any question as to whether there should be a commission, or whether a number of men, though they may be the best men that Boston or the earth can furnish, shall take the position of volunteer supervisors of the Fire Department. It is a matter of such great breadth and importance as to require the constant, incessant and closest application to know what can benefit and extend the use and efficiency of the department; and no man, no matter who he is, or where he is, will do that as a volunteer affair, or ever did, in Boston or out of it."

We find, then, the main intent and object of the New York commission was to take the department out of politics, or, in the words of Mr. Heald on page 152, "to secure at least one arm of the public service which is removed as far as possible from political influence in its administration." And certainly it was high time that this step should be taken, for the good citizens saw plainly enough that the political influence of the Fire Department in the Municipal Government was the first rung of the ladder by which the captain of Big Six, Mr. William M. Weed, ascended to his present pedestal of infamy. How, then, has the experiment succeeded? I quote again from Mr. Heald's testimony on page 152:

"I desire to make one statement so as to correct an impression that may be derived from some of the remarks which have been made, which is this: that during the changes in that commission from seven to five and from five to three, during all the changes from the time of Governor Fenton's first appointment until the present time, one thing is true; and that is, that the Fire Department essentially, the Fire Department as such, has shown no perceptible political complexion—that during all these changes, while the commissioners have changed, and the majority has been Democratic, or Republican, as I believe it was at first, there has been no perceptible influence of either party in the administration of the duties of the Fire Department. I have been a great observer of the internal politics of New York, although not a voter. I do not know when I have ever heard any complaint that the department has taken on a political character. If, therefore, we are liable in the change of politics and change of parties to have the commission itself changed, if so be that the administration of that commission standing before the public as an isolated commission, chosen for a particular and specific object, confines itself to the honest administration of its duties, irrespective of the character for voting purposes of its members, or the human machine which it uses, then certainly we have made a great advance in removing it thus far, apparently, at any rate, from the influence of politics."

This seems to be pretty direct testimony from a close observer, that the New York Commission, during the years of its existence, has confined itself to the honest administration of its duties, irrespective of the character for voting purposes of the human machine which it uses. Now, I think it hardly complimentary to our citizens to infer with the minority that in official positions, wherein the walk of New Yorkers has been upright, that of Bostonians will be in danger of becoming like that of Mr. Pherandiwud "slantindicular," and that the human machine will be used by appointed and paid commissioners, as it has not been by elective aldermen and councilmen, that is to influence elections instead of defending the city against fire. We now come, Mr. Chairman, to a matter of insinuation and innuendo which, in my opinion, is rather deserving of ridicule than the indignation which, in some quarters, it seems to have excited. The existence of a cunning and deep-laid plan, not to say plot or conspiracy, is darkly hinted at whose nefarious purpose is the obtaining of political power at the expense of the liberties of the people. We are first told of a rumor that the commissioners were already selected and circulating, or causing to be circulated, the petitions which came before us. Next that "those managing this great change," that is, these selected commissioners, with, it is to be presumed, their selector the Mayor, "not content when it should be successful, that the commissioners should appoint the Chief and Assistant Engineer, and expend half a million of money annually, and receive large salaries for doing so; but, anxious for the political power the control of many men would give them," did as a "result of careful study and cunning design" procure the passage of an amendment to the act providing for the appointment of engine men, etc., by the Mayor and Aldermen exclusively, "by adding after the word 'exclusively' these words: 'unless the said City Council shall by ordinance otherwise provide for their appointment'; and the majority report does provide for the appointment by the commissioners."

This amendment we are told "was not asked for by the city. Its Committee on Legislative Affairs knew nothing about it, except the chairman, and he does not know who proposed it; but, thinking it unimportant, did not acquaint the committee with it."

That is true, Mr. Chairman. I did not acquaint the committee with it. A well known Democratic Senator from Suffolk, whether himself a conspirator or merely made use of by others, accosted me one day, saying that he heard much talk about putting the Fire Department under a commission. "Now," said he, "if you do so before the next Legislature meets you will find this provision of law in your way, and we propose an amendment, just adding the words, 'unless the City Council otherwise provides.' Then if you decide for a commission it is out of your way, and if you don't no harm is done." In my confiding innocence, Mr. Chairman, I believed that Democratic Senator. I smelt no rat. If the cat's whiskers protruded from that meal I failed to see them. The Legislative Committee, one of whose members at least would have detected the villany, was not convened, and the deed was done, the "careful study and cunning design" was apparently rewarded with success.

Apparently only, Mr. Chairman, for we now see how this cunning device against popular liberty has returned to plague its inventors. Intended as a step towards saddling the citizens with an odious commission which should ride them like an old man of the sea and suck their pockets dry, it has not only failed of that effect, but has been skillfully used by the Councilman from Ward 12 and his supporters, to obtain for the popular branch of the Government powers never before enjoyed. This ordinance which they have sent us would have been impossible without the amendment so cunningly obtained by the would-be commissioners and their selector. I don't know whether I need say, like Artemus Ward, that some of my allusions to the alleged conspiracy are sarcastical, but such is certainly the case.

I believe this cunning arrangement and deep stratagem to be all in the eye of the gentlemen who think they have discovered it. It's a mare's nest which they have found, Mr. Chairman, if that is any consolation for not finding a Mayor.

In the reported argument of the member of the minority in the other branch, he states his position thus: "Now what is the object of a fire commission. It is nothing but the putting of weapons into the hands of an organization which we have already got. That is all there is and nothing else. Can the city of Boston with its own organization supply the Fire Department with the requisite men and means? That is all the question." I don't think it is quite all, Mr. Chairman. To carry out the excellent illustration of a gentleman in the other branch, supposing that during the rebellion Congress had proposed to abolish the War Department with its cumbersome machinery, and to run the army by a joint committee. The same argument would have been worth just as much. It is only putting weapons into the hands of an organization which we have already got. Cannot Congress supply the army with the requisite men and means. The general commands in the field, not these bureau-men in Washington. What is the good of them?—or the Horse Guards in London?—or the war ministries of Europe? The answer is, that to keep the complex machine of an army, or on a smaller scale the Fire Department of a large city, in the highest state of combative efficiency, there must be men making it the profession of their lives at home, in addition to the general who commands in the field. We believe that the efficiency of the London Fire Brigade is due to its system of organization and government, and not to the accidental qualifications of its commander, important as they are, just as we believe that the War Department would have made just as good an army if General Grant had never existed. That the present system of government and administration of our Fire Department is open to some extent to the objections urged against that of King Log in the fable all hands would seem to admit, but the gentleman from Ward 12 tells us in so many words that these poor frogs of petitioners are ignorantly begging for King Stork in his place, who will gobble up their liberties, control elections, and inaugurate a system of swindling and corruption, beside which Tammany will pale its ineffectual fires. But I don't believe, Mr. Chairman, that either Messrs. Tweed, Conolly or Hall, or men of their stamp, will ever be appointed by a Boston mayor or confirmed by a Boston council. Not only that, but I believe that no mayor will dare, with the underwriters and the public after him, to use these positions to pension off fossil politicians and played-out party hacks with, as I heard an opponent of the measure predict. There will be not only live men, but the best brains and business energy which our city can command in the places, or the public will know the reason why. I have heard the attitude of the underwriters in this matter severely criticised by gentlemen of both branches. Well, Mr. Chairman, I certainly don't desire to submit to either dictation or threats, and if the insurance men have used either they have most fatally blundered. But I do believe generally in the selfish shrewdness of the breeches pocket, and when the large business class whose pockets are directly depleted by every conflagration that occurs give a measure like this their unanimous and earnest support, I think that their selfishness, if you choose to call it so, at any rate their desire to make money at their trade, shows us where our safety lies.

In one assertion concerning these petitioners, made in the other branch, I most heartily concur, though it was not intended as a compliment. Their "respectability," made the object of such withering sarcasm, I fully agree to have been precisely the same respectability which defeated General Butler for governor, the man who promised to knock over commissioners like uinepins. Eight thousand men of such respectability will not be permanently disposed of either by comparisons to frogs or by sneers at kid gloves, or vests as white as that worn by the gentleman who so eloquently denounced such badges of a bloated aristocracy. I might close, Mr. Chairman, by asserting that I failed to see the first argument on the other side, and a jury of more than average stupidity might take it for granted that there were none because I said so. But I am convinced that this Board would not. I do see arguments to which I concede a certain force, but I contend that they are far more than counterbalanced and outweighed by those which the majority have endeavored to present.

Alderman Hulbert—If there ever was a question this Government should consider in regard to the expressed feelings of the community, this one is before us now. The request itself is not groundless. It was very plain to any looker-on at the time of the great November fire that our Fire Department failed just where it ought not to have failed; and when I say this I don't charge the department with things which don't belong to it. I walked around that fire, and have n't yet changed the convictions I then formed. One thing is certain; the citizens at large demand a change, and they intend to have it. I think it will be followed up until there is a change in the management of this department. There is an intense feeling about it; every stroke of the fire alarm only deepens it and every premium that is paid makes men feel that a change ought to be made. My being an Alderman does not of itself render me wiser than thousands of our best and most intelligent and practical citizens, in this so publicly considered matter, whose names have been sent here on that petition. As I understand it, the question before us is whether the change so desired and expected, shall be made by establishing a commission, so called, instead of by the City Government as heretofore, I am very glad, in discussing this question, to say that the Joint Committee on the Fire Department is probably as good a one as this city has had for years. On the part of this Board there are three hard-working members of that committee, who devote as much time as any gentleman can be expected to. We have the best showing this year that we can expect to have for the Fire Committee. The department presents its best today. In less than ninety days they will all go out, and new and raw recruits who have n't had the experience may come in to have control of the department, and the experience of this committee, valuable as it is, is likely to be lost in this incoming City Government. And yet that new committee are within the next month after coming into office, to make up the annual appropriation required for that department for the current year. What knowledge are they of themselves likely to have of what is needed? This early making of estimate I think is a mistake in my judgment. I came in here last January, and what did I know about the appropriations for the next year? I blundered along, but if I had had ninety days longer I could have become better acquainted with the necessities of the case. As to the mode of electing Chief-Engineer, from what I saw of its working this year, it seemed not right. Certainly my confidence in the best results being obtained in that way was not strengthened. There are members of this Board who told me that they should be glad to see a change, and there ought to be a change, in the Chief-Engineer, but they did n't know who to have. More than one said to me, If you will show us a better man I am ready to vote for him. I say the city of Boston is large enough to find a man if it wants him, instead of sitting here like a huge Miewaher, waiting for a man to turn up. I say find the right man. I think no three discreet men, with responsibility to the public, would have dared to do what this City Council did last spring—I voted blank—I mean men who are free from prejudice, for I don't believe we can be free from prejudice when we come to reelect men who have held the office before. Now, can you safely do what a few men would n't do, nor take the responsibility of doing? I have been here not many months, but long enough to feel that the longer I am here the more unhappy I am. Not a day passes that I am able to do half what I desire to do, and yet I give the majority of my waking hours to city affairs. And there are gentlemen here who it seems to me are always at work. I don't think there is any Alderman here who will say he is satisfied with his looking into the workings of his department. There is no use disguising the fact that the present good working of some of the departments is owing largely to the excellent heads of those departments, and citizens are to be congratulated on the men that are in those positions. But for them, the raw recruits annually coming in to manage the complex machinery of this Government would in many cases make a sorry mess of it.

Every man is indebted to the heads of these departments. Now, without discussing the questions of how far commissions should be introduced, I want to say something about the practicability of bringing a commission into the Fire Department. Like every other department it has its peculiar wants. The annual expenses are enormous and are growing enormously, with the various projects brought up here, and likely to be brought up, and adopted, for the whole world has got an idea about putting out fires, and we are going to have a still further enormous increase of expense, in my judgment. Every thing that the department wants now it must have and always has had. In the opinion of the public it does not meet what it is organized to be—and do—and the public and every man of property should be heard. There are, of course, some questions that we can understand better by being in City Hall, but of this question the public knows as much as we do. In my opinion the department does n't meet the public wishes; the insurance companies are not satisfied with it, and we are paying for it every day. All agree that changes are needed, but what, is not settled. The minority report is more full of changes than the majority's. It is endless in its suggestions—new apparatus, good men are needed.

Why we have n't got money enough in the treasury to meet the changes they propose. Many varied, novel and expensive suggestions are made, and investigation is needed to determine their adoption or rejection. New appliances are coming up for extinguishing fires. We want cool heads to make it a business and a study, so that whatever we do we shall not have to take any back tracks. Now I contend that although the appointment of a commission may tend to increase the improvements, it will not necessarily tend to increase the cost of protection. Ask any manufacturer, and he will tell you he was compelled to adopt costly, improved machinery, but in the end it more than paid the cost by the superiority of the work.

The expenditures are to be considered, but I contend that this item of salary will be a mere trifle. Suppose we pay each member five thousand dollars a year? I venture to say that any member of this Board, if intrusted with that department, would save more than that amount in one year. Economy has n't been the leading trait of that department for many years. We want concentrated intellect, we want the labors of intelligent men, on this subject. We want improved appliances for putting out fires, efficiency and responsibility where we can find it. You can't find responsibility now. We undertook to find it last fall, but couldn't. Another thing: I do not think a committee would be intelligently inventive enough to look into this subject thoroughly and treat it properly. The working is such that we don't give matters brought before us the attention they should have in many cases. Let us stop and try and find out where we are. We need now what no committee are likely to do—a body of sound, practical men, who will take this department and make it a business to work it, prune it, improve it, and make it what only such attention can. I don't want any more commissioners appointed who have anything else to do. I want men who will give their whole time to it, and who will do their work under a sense of responsibility to the City Government. If these commissioners are to be appointed by the Mayor, I contend he will be blamed if he does n't find them, and not select from the small fry who float into City Hall, where there is a place offered with a salary of $500. It is marvellous to see the small trash which runs in here when such opportunities are offered. It does n't take the highest form of talent, but it requires a good level head well applied. I am glad the Mayor is to appoint. The City Council should confirm, but never elect. The weakest, poorest work that has been done this year is the election of the persons to perform subordinate, yet important work of the assessors. I refer to the outside parties employed as assistants. I am ashamed of what I did. I inquired and did the best I could. It is astonishing that the work of assessing should be placed in the hands of such men. I say nothing against them as men—I am talking of them as assessors. No three men, made responsible, would have dared to do what we in our assembled wisdom did. Political pressure is brought to bear, and they get in. I am ashamed of what I did; I don't know whether you are or not. Now, a commission is set between the public on the one side and you on the other. There is no likelihood of their going astray, watched on both sides. We are not New York yet. Citizens have spoken very plainly. Reference has been made to Albany and New York in regard to the expense of conducting commissions, but I don't think if such commissions were appointed here the Mayor would be easy if he kept them in office thirty days. The wretched state of affairs in New York are something that good citizens are to be blamed for. They began to clean out the stables, but only half did it. A City Government, or a committee of it, or a commission, let alone, unwatched, uninvestigated, is likely to go wrong. Eternal vigilance is the price of municipal purity and honor. Our people have begun to exercise it, and with good results. The only hope for our city is for good citizens to stand up and say it is n't right; for the press to criticise, and when they get hold of a wrong expenditure, out with it. The moment the citizens let this Government alone you will have trouble. Good men have let it alone too much. But we are getting waked up a little, and there is our safety. I contend that the City Government in its committees cannot give the time and attention which are requisite to producing in this Fire Department what may be done for the proper protection of your property and mine and what it requires. We are spending more money today than any other city in the world to guard against fire, and in some respects we have got as weak an organization as can be found, and in some respects we have as good a one. We have urged upon us the necessity of great despatch at a fire—the using of pails of water, but no attention is paid to that now. I contend that no committee could give the Fire Department proper attention. Look at the committees which each Alderman is on. Divide up the hours of the day, giving six for sleep, and see how much an Alderman would have for the Fire Department. The City Government is growing larger every year. It should continue to be the supervising power. It should never let go of the expenditures. The members have n't time to study up the details, and they will not do it. Paid, steadily employed men must do this, and an unpaid City Government must supervise and correct it and make the appropriations. Albany and New York have been quoted. I look at something that we know about. Go up into the Street Commissioners' office. You can get any information you want on the subject of streets, and I venture to say that no three men could have given better satisfaction than those three gentlemen have. I have seen them under a variety of circumstances, and that commission is a success. But there is one danger, that of magnifying the office. Looking at one thing all the time, they may think of doing too much. That is what the City Government is here for—to check any department when it goes too far. They come annually from the people and can do this perfectly. I am on the Committee on Paving; we have an appropriation and can use only so much. Now I say that a commission would take the appropriation and do better with it than a committee can. Therefore I am in favor of a commission. I dare not stand up against the men who know better than I do what is best, and I don't believe this Board will do it.

Alderman Power—I don't propose to take up the time of the Board at any length by relating my views on this subject, which have been pretty fully set forth in the minority report. The gentleman representing the majority has dwelt on the importance of the evidence which came before the committee. I have yet to learn one single person who testified that he knew the first thing about the working of a commission. A gentleman from New York eulogized their present system, dwelling on its great advantages over the old system. And well he might, for it is simply the system of a paid department, in place of the old volunteer system. The most intelligent gentleman said they always took the example from Boston and followed in our wake, and they did when they abolished the old volunteer department. Anybody will admit the superiority of our present system over the old one. One very important thing is the taking of the department out of politics. One New York gentleman, who professed to know more about the workings of the commission than any other, testified that commissioners were frequently removed for political causes. It cannot be denied that it is the political machines which have ruined New York. Its system of commissions is the curse of New York today, and they have n't yet rescued the city from the rule which was inaugurated by that system. The gentleman talks about the time of Aldermen. That is the only real argument I have seen for a commission. I don't know what interpretation gentlemen put upon the oath they took when they came here. I took an oath that I was to give all my time and attention to the city so far as it is required. That is the interpretation I put upon it. If gentlemen wish to plead guilty to having neglected duties they swore to perform, I don't. I propose to attend to the city's to the neglect of my own business. The gentlemen with whom I have been connected in the Fire Committee have done the best they could. All say it is the best committee we have had. Now, great stress is laid on the number of committees which a member is on. Well, the Committee on Fire Department is required to meet twice a month, which is as often as is necessary to transact all the business. There is no difficulty about it. Every gentleman has given, and does give, all the time that is necessary. I am opposed to a commission, because I dread its influences; and I speak from a knowledge of their workings in other cities. In reference to the ordinance offered by Alderman Stebbins, I would state that it is well known that when the question came up of organizing the Board of Health, several gentlemen said they would take it if it was without pay, but would not accept the position with a salary. The gentleman opposite has referred to the heads of departments. I take it that the committees cannot do anything for the city unless they have good men at the heads of departments. It has been understood that Mr. Damrell was the best man that we could get for Chief Engineer. I have said if we could get a better man I am ready to vote against Mr. Damrell, and if we can find a better man it is our duty to elect him. In relation to the eight thousand petitioners, I have yet to find one who said he knew anything about the workings of a commission. They signed a petition, they say, which said on its face that it looked to the improvement of the Fire Department. They are all under the impression, because we have had a great fire here, that our department is not what it should be, and if improvement can be made without a commission, they will be perfectly satisfied. The gentleman said we are not yet like New York. I am glad that we are not, and I think we are not likely to be, but if you go on appointing commissions you will be approaching the status of affairs there. Some of the underwriters who appeared before the committee tried particularly to impress upon us that they had instructions from foreign offices, on account of the great fire, to cut down their risks here. A gentleman from New York said he had no instructions in regard to Boston that did n't apply to every city in the Union. It is unnecessary, Mr. Chairman, to take up the time. This matter has been discussed privately and publicly, and everybody knows my sentiments as expressed in the minority report. I hope the majority report will not pass.

Alderman Gaffield—I hope the majority report will pass. I pretend to know something of the sentiment of the city of Boston. There are only two of us here who were born in Boston, and the other one has been emphatically in favor of a commission. I know something of the solid men of Boston who signed that petition. We did n't have that fire on the 9th of November without having convictions burned into the hearts of the community. One was that we did n't have our buildings put up right, that was fixed by the Building law. Another conviction was that some improvement should be made in the Fire Department, and gentlemen whom I have met have said they wished a fire commission. If there is anything the merchants of Boston want it is a commission to take charge of the department. I had the honor to be on that committee some years ago myself, and it is my belief that it should be under the control of a commission. I will say, in deference to the gentleman who has last spoken, that gentlemen cannot attend to all their duties here. In the last two weeks the gentleman himself has not been present at two committees. One gentleman told me that he attended eight committee meetings a day, and many of us have several a day. Every member must be upon from five to twelve committees, and it is impossible for him to give to every matter that attention it deserves. If there is any department which needs all the attention it can get, it is the Fire Department. We need a commission who shall give their whole attention to the subject. They will have enough to keep them busy all the time. The men who compose such a commission should be above political influences. Some political influence is used by this Fire Department, and I don't propose to cater to it. But I do propose to listen to such petitions and to such resolutions as have been sent by the Boston Board of Trade, and any gentleman who does not heed them will have the same lesson taught him that was taught the Board last year, when eight gentlemen were left out. I have seen half a century in Boston and can state something of the Fire Department. My own dwelling was near one of the engine houses. They managed fires well in those days, but finally it became necessary to have a paid department, and there was great opposition. Mayor Eliot had the courage to disband the department. The old members went away. People were naturally conservative and opposed to radical changes. For awhile some of the best men in Boston ran with the engines, stood at the handles and managed the department, but in a few weeks the old firemen came back, and I don't believe they have ever been sorry for the change. Then came the change for a steam department. It was established, and we all know what a cry was raised about it. Now has come the time for another change to a paid commission. With the rapid growth of the city we need changes in all our departments. The progress of the age calls for change. We need men in charge of the department who don't know so much that they can't be taught. I believe we can find men who will know more the longer they live. Therefore, I say, let us choose a fire commission and let us vote upon it tonight. One strong argument of the minority is, why put on this extra expense of twenty or thirty thousand dollars a year? This is the paltry sum we are asked to save. We lost in the fire eighty million dollars. It took two or three million dollars to reinsure again. The money did not come altogether from the rich men of Boston, but from poor widows as well. Millions of dollars had to be spent immediately. Now what is the fact today? I have consulted with careful insurance men. Our valuation, personal and real, is about seven hundred million dollars, and I suppose that we have in Boston an insurance of two hundred million dollars. I was connected with a careful insurance company myself, and the president told me that the average rate was one per cent.—call it three-quarters. We all know that the insurance rates have been increased from fifty to a hundred per cent.—take the smallest average, seventy-five per cent.—and today we are paying over $1,125,000 more than we did on our old rates. It is an extra tax on us day after day. And yet gentlemen say we will spend fifteen or twenty thousand dollars extra! While many a firm must be paying out that amount extra every year. It is a business investment for these merchants. What are one or two hundred thousand dollars added to our annual expenses? It adds one or two per cent. to our taxes. In this connection I will read a letter from a prominent insurance gentleman in New York, to a gentleman in this city, who sent it to me:

"Anticipating that your City Council would act favorably on the reorganization of the Fire Department for its increased efficiency, I have been willing to write in Boston, but their short-sighted policy tempts me to decline any further risks. Will it remain so?"

And the Boston gentleman adds, in his note to me—

"I fear that a failure to appoint a commission will tax the merchants with still higher rates than now prevail for insurance."

Will it remain so? I believe public opinion is strong enough to move this Board. If we adopt that ordinance, and send it back to the other branch, I believe they will pass it on the sober second thought. Pass this ordinance and a thrill of joy will go through the community and through the insurance companies. We have great respect for the insurance companies today. Who will go and put his ten or twenty thousand dollars into an insurance company today? They come here and ask us to appoint three intelligent men on the fire commission. If we don't do it we are derelict in our duty. Let us adopt this ordinance, and I have no doubt the Council will adopt it also.

Alderman Power—When the citizens of Boston did me the honor to reflect me to this Board I thought they did so because they thought I was a man who had some opinions of my own and had independence enough to stand up for them. I don't think they made any mistake. The gentleman tells me if I don't vote for a fire commission the people will send me home. The newspapers have told me so and gentlemen in this room have told me the same thing. I don't propose to be influenced by the whip and spur. I propose to act according to the convictions of my conscience. I don't propose to be driven to it by threats. The gentleman tells me substantially that if I don't vote for a commission I can't come back here. Since I have been here I have done my duty according to the oath I took to give the city business the preference at all times. I say that I have had time to learn more of the workings of the Fire Department than any gentleman outside of this Government. If any gentleman in this Government is not competent to look after this department he has not done his duty. He came here specially to give his attention to the duties and wants of the city, and to the expenditure of money. When gentlemen talk of being ashamed of voting for an improper man I don't plead guilty of that charge. I have not felt ashamed yet. There might be advantages in a commission with proper men, and gentlemen who sincerely think so ought to vote for one. I say to the gentlemen of this Board, do your duty; do what you are sent to do. There is no need of a commission at all if gentlemen act fully up to the oath they took when they came here. Commissions are contrary to the spirit of this Government. It was against that system that our forefathers rebelled and gained their independence. If the people think I have not done right by opposing a commission they will have the privilege of voting against me at the next election. They will have the privilege of voting against a man who did his duty. When you make commissions you tie up yourselves, you get four or five commissions here and you hand five or six thousand men together to elect whom they please. I have never entered to the Fire Department nor any other department since I have had a seat in this Board, and I have always maintained my independence above them. I don't allow their errors to go uninvestigated; and I don't propose, no matter what the pressure is brought against me, to vote other than as I think. I came here as an independent man and sacrifice my time for the city, but I don't propose to sacrifice my honor and independence.

Alderman Gibson—I rise to move to lay the whole subject over, and make it the special assignment for next Thursday afternoon, and likewise to have the ordinance, offered this afternoon, printed. I know something of the gentleman who originated that ordinance, and perhaps we may find something there that the Board is not aware of. I believe the time the gentleman has spent on that ordinance is worth something. If we find it is not anything special after we have examined it, we can reject it. There will be, nothing lost, as the Council meets on Thursday evening and can then act on the question again. I hope the gentleman will agree to lay the subject over. I will withdraw the motion, however, if any gentleman wishes to speak.

Alderman Quincy—I think that further delay in this matter is the policy of cowardice and nothing else. There has been too much delay and the public are justly indignant. What exactly are the merits of the new ordinance, submitted in writing, we don't know. We do know all about that which these petitioners and the public demand, and we have all made up our minds whether we ought or ought not to give it them. Now let us stand up in our boots and give them the answer, yes or no, which they demand. If it is honestly no, then I will give my whole attention to the next best thing, whatever that may be, but until that question is answered this proposition for a mixed commission is nothing but a compromise.

We are offered a compromise in the shape of the ordinance providing for a mixed board upon the model of the Water Board, consisting of members of the City Council and citizens serving without pay. There are occasions when a compromise is the most sensible and proper course to be taken, as there are others where men of principle, convinced that they are right, should utterly scout the idea. Which is here the case? In the first place, with whom is this compromise made? With the opponents of the measure, of course. Who and what are they? I am inclined to believe those newspapers which answer, "The Fire Department and its political influence." Now, convince me that this measure which the public ask of us is unwise and dangerous, and I will certainly vote to refuse it and consider the next best plan of improvement. But if you fail so to convince me, don't ask me to compromise, because the Fire Department won't swallow the dose, and something must be compounded which they will. I have not been in the City Government long enough to know whether this political influence which the papers talk about is much or little at the present day. Perhaps I may find out at some time. It may be argued in favor of the compromise, that because it has been tried and found good for water it would succeed with fire. I can't see the logic there. The business of a water board is essentially peaceful, that of a fire board warlike—the former employs laborers, the latter commands fighters, who are expected to risk their lives, and who do it. Changing City Councilmen and unpaid citizens may constitute a body of sufficient strength, energy and promptitude to run the water works, but the public has asked for and the majority believe in giving them something far more permanent and responsible as a head to the fire army.

But has the experiment of mixed commissions in the City Government been a success so far? The gentleman from Ward 12, Mr. Loring, in arguing against a fire commission, criticises in so many words the Water Board and the Public Library Board as the most inefficient of all our boards and commissions, and then because these elective and unpaid bodies have, according to him proved a failure, he argues that an appointed and paid fire commission would but follow in their footsteps. I can't see that, Mr. Chairman, but if mixed and unpaid commissions have in reality proved themselves too weak to deal with books or water, for heaven's sake don't ask them to fight fire.

We think that we see the line, Mr. Chairman, on which it is our duty to fight this thing out, and, thinking so, a compromise would be for us similar to that defined in the "Gospel of Peace," published in war times, and from which I will venture a quotation. In the fourth chapter of the first book, the question being of a compromise between the men of the North and the Phiretahs of the South, it is said in verse 13—

"Now in the land of Unculp'salm when a man humbled himself before another which threatened him he was said to compromise. And they said, Let us compromise ourselves again unto our Southern brethren, and it shall be well with us. For behold, then they will remember that we have compromised unto them, and they will again be gracious unto their servants and will admit us unto a share in the Government, and we shall rule the land as aforetime."

I should have to be convinced, Mr. Chairman, that the compromise before us was something widely different from that here spoken of before I should vote for it.

Alderman Clark—This subject is of very great importance and should receive our careful consideration, inasmuch as it is proposed to change our entire system of managing the department. Eight thousand of our citizens have petitioned for a change of some kind. They probably did not know exactly what kind of a change would be for the best interest of the city. Every member of this Board is desirous of having a radical change in the department. A committee was appointed, and I presume they reported with as little delay as possible. It went into the other branch, where it originated. After a long and exhaustive debate, with a full Council, a yea and nay vote was taken and the minority report was adopted. It is our duty, therefore, if we believe a change is necessary in the management of the department, to adopt such changes as we believe will be for the best interest of the city, and such as will be likely to be concurred in by the other branch. The Alderman from Ward 8 has introduced an ordinance this afternoon to have a board of directors appointed on the management of the Fire Department instead of a commission. We have a dozen institutions which have been long and ably managed upon precisely such principles as proposed by the gentleman from Ward 8 for the Fire Department. No member of this Board or City Council can, at the present time or in the past, find fault with the government of the public institutions which have had among the directors some of our best citizens, devoting no less than half their time every day to them, serving year after year without pay. We have also the Public Library, which ranks first in this country, and is managed by some of the best men in the city, men who are elected by the members of this City Government. I believe there has been no fault found with the management of the library by men serving without pay. Our institutions are managed by men without pay, and do you suppose that you could get any better man at their head than Mr. Bradley? Now, it is not impossible that in the ordinance which it is proposed to have printed, something may be obtained which will be acceptable to the people, for I believe that the will of the people should be listened to. I do not believe we can stand up against the entire press of the city and country and against eight or ten thousand business men of the city of Boston, and refuse to make a radical change in the Fire Department, or any other department when the public demand it. I do not propose tonight to discuss the qualifications of the Chief Engineer. It is not called for. Neither do I propose to discuss the question whether the Fire Department has been well managed during the last two years, or whether it has not. I believe, with the Alderman from Ward 15, that we have none but honest men at the heads of departments. And I doubt whether the expenditure of the city would be any less if managed by honest heads of departments or by commissions. For the reason that I am in favor of a radical change in the Fire Department I shall vote to lay this matter over until next Thursday, and to have the ordinance reported this afternoon printed so that we can look it over and try to adopt an arrangement which will be satisfactory to the community, and one that will pass both branches of the City Government. I hope the motion to lay over will prevail.

Alderman Power—The gentleman says in effect that nobody opposes a commission except those under the influence of the Fire Department. I have nothing to do with the Fire Department, and have never set myself up as its champion. I think I stand here as independently as any member of this Board, and while I have the highest respect for every gentleman's opinion, I state that I act on this according to the best of my belief, and for the best interest of the city of Boston, and not through fear or love of the Fire Department.

Alderman Stebbins—The ordinance which I submitted does not emanate from the Fire Department nor from the Committee on Fire Department. No member of this Board heard it read, and no one has seen it except Mr. Bugbee, the reporter and myself. Since I came into this Government I have endeavored to make the Fire Department a study. I read the report of the commission appointed after the great fire, also the reports made and the evidence taken by the Joint Special Committee. I am in favor of a change in the Fire Department, and the only question in my mind is whether to have a paid commission or one uniform with present system of commissions in this city. In my judgment the wiser course will be to have a board of directors such as has been mentioned. Still, if a majority of this Board is in favor of a paid commission I shall vote for one. But I want every member to see the ordinance which I have offered. It may have merits which will commend it to the public generally. The gentleman from the Highlands says the Fire Department is managed mostly by a board of engineers, who arrange all the details. These men have studied fires all their lives. Now if we elect three men they have got to learn the business. Establish the department in this way, and there is no reason why the Water Board should not be paid. Those gentlemen are all giving their time to the city for nothing, and are doing more in one year for the city than the Fire Committee can do in five. I hope the matter will be laid over until Thursday next.

Alderman Clark—I will corroborate the statement of Alderman Stebbins in regard to the knowledge of the ordinance by the Fire Committee. I know nothing about it, so there can be no connivance on the part of the Fire Committee or Chief-Engineer, or of the majority or minority. I believe some change can be instituted whereby we can have exactly what the people want without going to the expense of a paid commission. Thursday comes after the election, and if annexation takes place to any considerable extent it may be that some other radical changes in the majority report would have to be made. Delay will not injure the matter much, and it may be that we and the entire community will come to the conclusion that if the Fire Department can be managed as well as the City Hospital or Public Library or the public institutions or the Water Board, which are now managed by outside directors elected for terms of from one to three years, it will be all that will be required, a great expense be saved, and perhaps it may be carried through both branches of this Government and still give the people an immediate and radical change in the Fire Department.

Alderman Quincy—I should be sorry to have been understood as saying that any gentleman had been influenced by the Fire Department. I meant to say that the strength of the opposition lay in the Fire Department, and any compromise would be a compromise with the opposition of that department.

Alderman Gibson—I hope the chairman of the committee will not press this thing. I have no interest for anything but for the taxpayers of the city.

Alderman Power—The gentleman from the Highland District said he found in the minority report a basis which influences him for a commission. I think the minority report proposes more radical changes than the majority has. I think the large fires have shown conclusively that great improvements can be made in the department. I am anxious to make it, as it was before, a pattern for all the departments in the country. I say here that I might vote for such a board as has been proposed this afternoon because I think gentlemen above suspicion would accept such positions who would not accept them if they were on a salary. I think we can get just that class of men who would be very valuable.

Alderman Gibson—Under this ordinance, the Mayor appoints four directors and continually has four in the board. On the other hand, he appoints three. I presume that if the Mayor believes he can't find the right men, he will say so. But I did n't propose to discuss the merits of the question. Mr. Chairman, I renew the motion to lay on the table.

Alderman Quincy called for the yeas and nays, and the vote was as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Sayward, Stebbins—9.

Nays—Aldermen Bigelow, Gaffield, Quincy—3.

The subject was laid on the table.

ENFORCEMENT OF THE PROHIBITORY LAW.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, to whom were referred the petitions of W. H. H. Murray, A. A. Miner et al., for the enforcement of the Prohibitory law, submitted the following report: The Prohibitory law, so-called, passed in 1869, provides, among other things, that any mayor, alderman, selectman, police officer, constable, etc., may, without a warrant, arrest any person whom he finds in the act of illegally selling, transporting or distributing intoxicating liquors, and seize the liquors, vessels and implements of sale. It appears from this that so far as the aldermen have anything to do in the matter, it is as individuals and not as a board. It can hardly be expected that the members of this Board will, in person, make arrests and seize liquors. The petitioners do not ask that, but they assume that the Board stands between the police and the enforcement of the law, and they ask, in effect, that this obstruction may be removed—that the police may be permitted to execute the law. In reply to this request, it is a sufficient answer to say that in no instance has this Board instructed the police, either officially or unofficially, not to enforce the law. It is the duty of the police to enforce impartially all the laws which come within their purview. It is not necessary, nor is it proper, that certain offences should be singled out, and special instructions issued for their prosecution. The rules and regulations for the government of the Police Department provide that "the chief-of-police shall see that complaints and prosecutions for violations of the laws and ordinances are instituted in all proper cases, and use his best efforts to bring offenders to punishment," and "whenever a disregard of any law, ordinance or order prevails to an extent prejudicial to the well being of the city, he shall cause the said law, ordinance or order to be published in the newspapers of the city," etc. If the police have failed to show as much energy in the execution of the Prohibitory law as they have shown in the execution of other criminal laws, it is because that law, in its present form, is obnoxious to the sentiments of the community, and not because of any influence on the part of this Board. The petitioners themselves are not without responsibility in this matter, as it is provided in the law which they ask that the police be permitted to enforce, that if any sheriff, deputy-sheriff, chief-of-police, deputy-chief-of-police, constable or police officer, after being furnished with a written notice of any violation of the law, neglects to institute proceedings thereon, any person who thereafter makes complaint shall be entitled to all fines imposed and collected for said violation. As it appears from the foregoing statement that the Board of Aldermen is not responsible for the failure to enforce the Prohibitory law, the committee are of opinion that no further action is necessary on the petitions.

JOHN T. CLARK,
L. R. CUTTER.

The report was accepted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Joint Committee on Public Instruction, to whom was referred the requests of the School Committee for additional accommodations in the new grammar school district; for a tablet in the new school house on the site of the old Roxbury City Hall; and for additional accommodations for a primary class in the Bigelow District; submitted reports severally recommending the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide temporary accommodations for pupils in the new grammar school district, Washington Village; the expense attending the same to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide temporary accommodations for primary pupils in the Bigelow School District; the expense attending the same to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to procure and place in the new schoolhouse now in process of erection on the site of the old Roxbury City Hall a suitable tablet bearing the name of the school; the expense attending the same to be charged to Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

The first order having been read, Alderman Gaffield moved that it take its second reading and be passed.

Alderman Hulbert hoped it would be laid over.

Alderman Gaffield stated that the request had been before the committee some time, and had been referred to a sub-committee with the view of purchasing a lot. There is a surplus of nine hundred and seventy-five pupils out of the schoolhouses, some of whom are in the streets. But it was decided not to borrow any more money, and the plan of buying a lot was abandoned. The taking away of Fort Hill has sent a great many children to South Boston, and this order is simply to authorize the Committee on Public Buildings to furnish additional accommodations, which are greatly needed.

Alderman Hulbert said he asked this because he thought the expenditures by the School Committee are getting too large. It may be all right, but we are putting up a class of expensive buildings. We should look more into matters before we go much further. He desired to know the expense.

Alderman Gaffield—The rent will be about $2000 a year.

Alderman Sayward—In addition to the $2000 rent, it is necessary to spend $1500 to put the building in proper condition.

Alderman Hulbert waived his objections, and the order was read twice and passed, as were also the two succeeding orders.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the applications of L. C. Chase, Michael Moore, Thomas & Griffin, Bolton, Dewar & Fieldhouse, Addison P. Wheelock, Jacob Morlock, George Souther, George C. Willets, Cornelius Regan and Otis S. Pierce, for leave to occupy stables. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of Hampton Students, to give concerts in Tremont Temple; proprietors of Wesleyan Hall, for renewal of license; James J. Prendergast, to run hackney carriage; Davis & King and ten others, for transfer of wagon license; Henry Baker, James Howell, Thomas C. Cooper and others, for wagon license; Gilman Brothers, for druggist license, at 24 Custom House street; Martha T. Beatty, 69 and 71 Beach street, inholder; Joseph L. Noyes, 197 Cambridge street, James F. Moran, 264 Federal street, victuallers. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the applications of Peter Gafrey, victualler, 38 Cooper street; William Randolph, 290 North street, victualler. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported no action necessary on the petition of Horace Billings & Son, that projecting signs be prohibited on Summer and High streets, for the reason that the erection of projecting signs without a license from the Board of Aldermen is already prohibited by section 23 of the ordinances in relation to streets. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, submitted an order notifying owners and abutters on Arch street, between Franklin and Summer, to remove all obstructions within ten days. Read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay as follows: Thomas Hills, $501 20, on account of extension of Prescott street; Massachusetts General Hospital, $1290, on account of extension of Devonshire street; Ariel Low and Charles W. Hersey, $10,106, on account of widening of Federal street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Sayward submitted the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to sell by public auction that portion of Engine House No. 12 which projects over the line of widening of Warren street, together with the land, and that portion of the building remaining; said building to be removed immediately, and the proceeds of the sale to be paid into the City Treasurer.

Alderman Stebbins inquired how much land would be left to sell.

Alderman Sayward was unable to state exactly, but it was a very small amount.

Alderman Stebbins—It is a very valuable piece of land, and it might be better to hold on to it for a while.

Alderman Sayward—The committee have the assurance that it will bring a very good price if sold at this time.

The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported orders for the construction of sewers in Cresecent avenue and Carleton street; in New Heath street, between Pynchon and Centre streets, and Centre street, between New Heath and Cedar street; in Paris street, between Marion and Bennington streets; in Bremen street, between Brooks and Porter streets; in Franklin street, between Walnut and Taylor streets; in Taylor street, between Franklin and Water streets, and in Water street, between Taylor and Walnut streets. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, to whom were referred the schedules of assessments for sewers in Tudor, Bolton and Silver streets, reported that they were correct, and recommended that orders for collection be passed. Reports accepted and orders passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported an order of notice for a hearing on October 28, at four o'clock P. M., on the petition of John Roessle, for leave to use a steam engine on Pynchon street. Passed.

Alderman Stehbins offered the following, which was read once:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court at its next session, to establish a State normal school within the limits of the city of Boston.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That that part of Dorchester street lying between Dorchester avenue and Boston street, be hereafter called and known as Boston street.

Ordered, That the superintendent of Streets be directed to pave Meridian street, between Paris street and Central square, with small granite blocks. Estimated cost $17,000.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That in addition to the sum heretofore appropriated for repairing the draw of Meridian-street Bridge, there be allowed the sum of twenty-five dollars and twenty-one cents; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Bridges.

CONSTABLES' BONDS.

Alderman Stehbins presented the bonds of forty-six constables for the year ensuing. Having been examined and certified by the Treasurer, on motion of Alderman Stehbins they were approved by the Board.

HOME FOR THE POOR.

Alderman Clark moved to reconsider the vote whereby this Board agreed to recommit the report and orders respecting a site for a "Home for the Poor," with instructions to report in fifteen days.

Alderman Power could not see the propriety of a reconsideration. The subject had been thoroughly discussed, and a majority of the Board was decidedly in favor of recommitment, and he hoped the vote would not be reconsidered.

Alderman Clark thought it evident that Alderman Power intended the present City Government should not choose a home for the poor unless it takes the Austin farm, and the obnoxious institutions in South Boston are removed. It is the city's duty to take care of the poor by providing a suitable home for them, and if the reconsideration prevailed he would move that the report favoring the Neponset lot be adopted.

Alderman Power replied that while feeling that the institutions at South Boston are a detriment to that locality, his anxiety to get rid of them should not permit him to spend the city's money where he thought it was not for the city's interest, and he was not afraid to have the citizens of South Boston hear it.

Alderman Emery's choice was the rejected Austin farm, but he hoped the matter would be left with the committee, and that the motion to reconsider would not prevail.

Alderman Sayward would be glad to have the matter settled; he favored the Neponset lot. No one knew the necessity of a Home for the Poor better than he.

Alderman Clark alluded to the possibilities of delay, and that if the Neponset lot were not selected, no Home for the Poor would be secured this year. If the gentleman is as anxious as he seems to be for this measure after the vote we have had, he will yield the Austin farm and vote for the Neponset lot.

Alderman Power disclaimed any local feeling; he did not think it for the city's interest to purchase the Neponset lot, and should not vote for it.

Alderman Gaffield hoped Alderman Clark's motion would be withdrawn and the committee would make another report.

Alderman Clark did not propose to have it charged that those who voted against taking the West Roxbury site prevented the Board from selecting a Home for the Poor.

Alderman Sayward hoped the reconsideration would prevail and the vote be taken directly on the question whether they would select a home for the poor or not.

Alderman Hulbert thought the subject in proper shape now. If Brookline or West Roxbury are annexed there is no doubt that a lot could be obtained for half the amount proposed to be paid for the Austin farm.

Alderman Quincy voted against a recommitment before, but now was inclined to think a better place might be secured yet, and thought the matter had better remain as it is.

Alderman Gibson would prefer to have the committee look further; he would rather go twenty miles into the country on one of the trunk railway lines, where land could be bought a great deal cheaper. The committee ought to have some instructions as to the number of acres.

Alderman Sayward thought twenty-five acres or less would do.

Alderman Power thought not less than fifty acres should be selected.

Alderman Clark withdrew his motion to reconsider.

THE ANNEXATION VOTE.

On motion of Alderman Stehbins—

Ordered, That a committee of two be appointed to examine the returns of votes to be cast tomorrow, in this city, on the annexation questions, and to report at a future meeting of the Board.

The Chairman, appointed Aldermen Stehbins and Quincy as the committee named in the order.

WOODEN PAVEMENTS.

On motion of Alderman Power, the report of Commissioners on subject of Wooden Pavements (See City Doc. No. 100) was taken from the table.

Alderman Power explained the position of the commissioners. A petition had been sent in asking for a supplementary report on this subject. The commissioners said they were ready to give as many reports as the city would pay for.

Alderman Stehbins moved to refer the report to the Committee on Paving.

Alderman Power said that committee had had this matter before them. The commissioners had asked for additional compensation, but the Committee on Paving declined to give them any more pay, and therefore the commissioners declined to make any more reports.

Alderman Stehbins thought the report contained a great deal of information useful to the Committee on Paving, and that was the proper committee for the report to go to. He renewed his motion to refer.

Alderman Gibson wanted to know how many dollars the commissioners had received.

Alderman Hulbert said the Committee on Paving had considered the report and did not desire to have anything more to do with it. There is no appropriation for any further report.

Alderman Gibson—I would like to know what the report cost.

The Chairman—Five hundred dollars.

The Board voted to refer the report to the Committee on Paving.

THE HOLLY SYSTEM.

On motion of Alderman Power, the report and order for the Water Board to consider the expediency and report the cost of supplying the business portion of the city with salt water, by means of the Holly system, were taken from the table.

Alderman Stehbins hoped the order would remain on the table until Alderman Hulbert had finished his investigations.

Alderman Power—My reason is this: The chairman of the Water Board has informed me that the order had better be disposed of soon, as it is proposed to make some changes in the district named, and the order might affect those changes one way or another. It is simply for them to look into the matter, and it will not take them long to make a report. I understand the President of the Water Board and the City Engineer have been to Lockport and examined the system, and are prepared to make a report.

The order was passed.

THE USE OF HOISTING BEAMS.

Alderman Hulbert offered the following:

Ordered, That the City Solicitor be instructed to prepare a suitable form for a license to be issued to those parties who receive permission from this Board to use hoist beams projecting over the public ways, under the provisions of chapter 90, section 4, of the acts of the year 1816, so that the city shall not be held liable for any injury to persons or property which result from such use.

Alderman Hulbert explained that under the present statute no person is allowed to use hoist beams, although the Board of Aldermen may permit their use under certain conditions. The Committee on Paving have instructed the Chief of Police to notify all persons not to use them without a permit from this Board. The idea is that the city shall be held harmless from any injury that may arise from their use.

The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned till Thursday, 9th inst., at four o'clock P. M.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
OCTOBER 9, 1873.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD.

A communication was received from the directors of the Metropolitan Railroad accepting the location (35th) granted by the Board, September 22d, to lay double track in Stoughton street from Hudson street to Harvard street, etc. Placed on file.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

Assessments for the construction of sewers were received from the Superintendent of Sewers as follows: Shawmut avenue, between Circuit and Cedar streets, total cost $2474 10; to be paid by individuals, $618 58. Warren street, total, $4985 91; by individuals $3739 43. Chelsea street, between Brooks and Putnam streets, total, $428 05; by individuals $321 04. Summer street, total $12,693 50; by individuals $9520 13. Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

THE VOTE ON ANNEXATION.

Alderman Stebbins, from committee appointed to examine the returns of votes cast in the several wards on the 7th inst. on the question of annexation, reported that the returns appear to be properly made, with the exception of that from Ward 4, which is not signed by a majority of the Inspectors of Elections in said ward. But as no other informality exists, the committee have not deemed it expedient to reject the vote from that ward, especially as the election was conducted in good faith and the general result is not affected thereby. The results of the election are correctly recorded in the book kept for that purpose, from which it appears that the yeas and nays are as follows:

FOR BRIGHTON.		FOR CHARLESTOWN.
Yeas.....	5596	Yeas.....	5960
Nays.....	2165	Nays.....	1868
FOR BROOKLINE.		WEST ROXBURY.
Yeas.....	6293	Yeas.....	5110
Nays.....	1484	Nays.....	1663

The committee recommend that the results be certified to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, as provided by law.

The report was accepted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on County Accounts, to whom was referred the bill of D. S. Gilchrist, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered. That there be allowed and paid to D. S. Gilchrist, for work done on the probate records of Suffolk County, by direction of the Judge of Probate, the sum of seven hundred and fifty dollars; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for County Expenses.

The order was read once.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Armories, offered the following, which was read once:

Ordered. That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend the sum of seventy-two dollars and fifty-three cents in repairing the armory of Company K, First Regiment Infantry, M. V. M., in South Boston, said sum to be in addition to the amount appropriated for that purpose in 1872; to be charged to the Appropriation for Armories.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported orders for the construction of a common sewer in Moreland street, east of Cleveland street; in Clifton, Albion and Hudson streets; and in Cottage street between Clifton and Stoughton streets. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported an order of notice for a hearing on the petition for a sewer in Franklin street, between Pearl and Oliver streets, at four o'clock P. M. next Monday. Passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, to whom were referred the several schedules of assessments for sewers in Prescott street, Sixth street, Dorchester avenue, Shamrock and Commercial streets, Third street and Fruit street, reported that they are correct, and recommended the passage of orders for collection. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported the following, which was read once:

Ordered. That the sum of $88 31, assessed upon Caleb Thompson for a sewer in Seventh street, be abated, and the same amount assessed upon Patrick Coyne and Daniel Briscoe.

Alderman Gibson, from the Joint Committee on Inspection and Survey of Buildings, to whom was referred the petitions of Timothy McCarty, the Third Religious Society of Dorchester, Leonard Pickering, for permission to make additions to wooden buildings, and of W. R. Clark, to erect a coal elevator on Foster's wharf, submitted reports recommending the passage of orders for the issuing of such permits in accordance with the applications therefor. Reports accepted, and orders severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the same committee, reported, on the petition of Leonard Ware, to maintain a wooden shed in Purchase street, that said building was erected in violation of law, and that the City Council have no authority in the matter. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Public Buildings, reported that in compliance with an order of June 9, the committee had purchased a temporary building suitable for the accommodation of a steam fire engine, and the men and horses connected therewith, and they are now occupied by the Fire Department. The committee are now in receipt of a communication from the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department asking that accommodations be furnished for a hook and ladder carriage, together with the men and horses, and a building in the immediate vicinity of the one occupied by the steam fire engine. They recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered. That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to purchase, hire or erect upon lands owned by the city in the immediate vicinity of the temporary engine house No. 40 Washington square a building suitable for the temporary accommodation of a hook and ladder carriage, and the men and horses connected therewith, the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

Alderman Clark moved that the order take its second reading at this meeting.

Alderman Sayward said that with these frequent calls on the Committee on Public Buildings another appropriation might have to be asked for before long; he hardly thought enough is left to pay for what has already been ordered.

Alderman Clark said it is necessary to have money to build engine houses. We have got a hook and ladder company, and there is no place to put it. The burnt district must be properly protected with a Hook and ladder company, as well as engine and hose carriage.

Alderman Stebbins said it is understood that this is for a temporary structure. An order has already been passed for a temporary building on the burnt district, but it was found to be not large enough. The horses made so much noise during the night that the men cannot sleep there. An order has also been passed for a permanent house on Fort Hill.

Alderman Sayward was not opposed to the appropriation, but merely wished to show the state of the finances. These orders are constantly coming up, and if the committee should have to ask for more money he desired that the Board should know it previous to their coming.

The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay as follows: Hanford Lockwood, Smith Fowler and Mary D. Fowler, $1050, for estate surrendered to the city under the extension of Prescott street; William Wood, $1033 20, on account of the extension of Prescott street; John T. Mills, $15,500, on account of the widening of South Market street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the applications of Thomas B. Cox, 606 Bennington street, and R. A. Upton, 90 Zeigler street, for leave to occupy stables. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of John B. Sherwin, to give concerts at St. Mary's Institute, October 14 and 15; Abram French & Co., for hack stand corner Milk and Washington streets, and Charles Crosby, for hack stand at 41 Devonshire street. Severally accepted.

THE CITY MILITIA.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Armories, who were directed to consider what change in the amounts heretofore allowed for rents of armories will be advisable in view of the provisions of the statute for the reorganization of the militia recently passed, reported that the committee consider the passage of the statute in question due to a growing recognition in the community of the necessity in our form of government, which repudiates a standing army, of supplying its place with a reliable, disciplined and efficient body of citizen troops ready for action when called on, a more reliable, disciplined and efficient body than we have had since the close of the war, for now that the natural reaction which occasioned its neglect has passed, our war experience shows more clearly than ever before wherein true discipline and efficiency consist, and the public, which now appreciates these qualities, demands them for the militia. An important feature in the law is the prohibition of the use of armories for other than their legitimate purpose. Such uses have beyond doubt a demoralizing tendency, but have been excused on the ground that rents could not otherwise be paid without such assessments upon the soldiers themselves as would drive much of the best material out of the service. There is much force in this argument if supported by fact, for certainly poverty ought to prevent no man from serving the State as a soldier if he so desires. To obviate this objection the law provides an important increase in the State allowance for this purpose, and the question is whether the city should not adopt a similar course and thus join hands with the Commonwealth in its policy in support of the militia. The committee regard this duty as incontestable. The larger the city the more indispensable is it that its militia be properly quartered where they can give the most efficient protection if called on. In other words, they must be where they can be got at. Their rallying points should be centralized and no longer scattered without plan, wherever cheap accommodation can be found. Fires, riots, and all occasions wherein we look to the militia for protection, come upon us unannounced, and unless the latter can be promptly called into action they come too late to prevent mischief, and of this none are better aware than the criminal classes, who can calculate to a nicety how much time will elapse before the military arm can be used against them. And the fact that the company, and not the regiment, has been regarded as the unit in the militia, has been, in our opinion, the latter's greatest weakness, as it renders the enforcement of an uniform standard of discipline next to impossible. The conclusion to which these considerations have brought this committee are, briefly, that the protection of the city, no less than the interests of the militia, alike demand a concentration of the armories, or rallying points, of each regiment or battalion under the same roof. To this policy, more than to any other, we ascribe the reputation of the New York regiments, with which ours cannot as yet court comparison. The existence of petty independent commands is, we think, to be deprecated. Without considering, therefore, what may be the comparative excellence of existing organizations, or suggesting in any manner upon what nucleus it might be best to form others, the committee are fully of the opinion that it would be a great step towards competing successfully with our sister city if the infantry within our city limits could be organized into two full regiments, each to be quartered under one roof, without expense either to men or officers. Should such reorganization be effected by the State authorities, the committee think that it would be a measure of direct economy over the present system, should the city, selecting appropriate sites, build, furnish and keep in repair, like other public buildings, such regimental armories, with quarters for each company and a hall large enough for wing drills, commanding officers could then be held responsible for the behavior of their subordinates with something like military system, applications to the City Hall would be made through the proper channel and only with the knowledge and approval of superiors who would have no excuse for not knowing the real needs of their command. There would be an end to the present slipshod and discreditable system, if such it can be called, which results in a rivalry of companies, each bent on getting the most out of the city treasury. With the increased State allowance and the rent of the lower stories of such buildings, the committee cannot but think that they would soon become a source of income instead of expense to the city. For small cities and towns the company quarters and rallying points may suffice; for the metropolis, which can hardly be supposed to call for less than a battalion, the regimental armory seems a necessity. Should these views meet the approval of the City Council, the committee would recommend that the same be communicated to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and his military advisers with a view of obtaining concert of action, and to that end would respectfully present the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Armories be instructed to communicate the views contained in the foregoing report to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief as those of the City Council of Boston, and to express to his Excellency their firm conviction that when the militia infantry of Boston shall receive a permanent regimental organization the City Council will take immediate measures to provide them with such regimental quarters as shall conduce to their comfort and their reputation as Massachusetts soldiers.

On motion of Alderman Quincy the report and order were laid on the table to be printed.

THE FIRE COMMISSION.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the Board took up the special assignment, being the reports and ordinances relative to the reorganization of the Fire Department.

The Chair stated that the question was on the amendment offered by Alderman Quincy to the substitute of Alderman Stebbins.

Alderman Stebbins—When I presented this ordinance last Monday I stated that I desired to secure for the city the most effective fire department. I believed then and believe now that a board can be secured who will render to the city more valuable service than any paid commission will. At the same time I stated that if the majority of the Board thought otherwise I should so vote. My only wish is to secure an effective department, and now, as it is understood that the majority have agreed to the majority report, I desire to draw attention to some of the defects in it. In the ordinance I drew I guarded against what I think is a serious omission of the majority. Section one of the majority report delegates the organization of the Fire Department to a Board of Fire Commissioners. The General Statutes provide that the City Council may establish a fire department by ordinance, with such regulations as the City Council may from time to time prescribe. I am no lawyer, but have asked the best legal authority whether I am right. The City Solicitor said the City Council cannot grant to any board the power to designate the number of men in any department. Section one is therefore defective. Section four provides that the Commissioners shall have the control of fires. That power is conferred upon the Board of Engineers by the statutes. I wish to call attention to these defects, which are serious and must be corrected before it can pass.

The office of Superintendent of Fire Alarms, one of the most important we have, is also abolished. It is certain that we have one of the best electricians in the country in this office. The report also omits providing for the appointment of any committee on the part of either branch who shall have any knowledge of the department. This is unprecedented. There is a committee to supervise the Water Board, the City Hospital and the Board of Health. Another fact is, by the adoption of this ordinance all previous ordinances are repealed. By this the office of Chief-Engineer and every other office expires before vacancies could be filled. In the ordinance which I provided these officers were to hold office until their successors were appointed, and in general terms it was in conformity with the tone of the statutes.

Alderman Quincy—Do I understand the Alderman to abandon the substitute?

Alderman Stebbins—I do not, but will vote for the majority when it is put in proper form. I cannot withdraw the substitute.

Alderman Quincy—Do I understand that if the majority ordinance is put in proper shape he will vote for it?

Alderman Stebbins—I shall

Alderman Quincy—If that is so before we consider the suggestions which I am prepared to meet with proper amendments I wish to have a word or two on the subject of the compromise ordinance.

Now that Aldermen have had an opportunity of examining in detail the plan for a mixed board of directors in place of a paid commission as petitioned for, I hope and believe that they must have convinced themselves that it is anything but the radical change which the Alderman from Ward 6 agrees that the public demand. The Alderman from the Highland District well and forcibly stated last Monday that the great trouble with the present system was that you could not find responsibility when you looked for it. Now in place of any argument against the weaknesses of the system here offered as an improvement I will simply read an imaginary dialogue held under its operation between a citizen in search of responsibility and in turn a director and an engineer.

Citizen in Search of Responsibility—Why is not there a company stationed somewhere within two miles of my warehouse?

Director—They are all needed where they are.

C. I. S. O. R.—Then why don't you organize another if you have not enough to protect the city?

D.—We can't organize new companies; that is left to the City Council.

C.—Then why don't you district the city better, and change the organization of your battalions?

D.—We have nothing to do with districting or organizing the battalions; that is left exclusively to the engineers.

Alderman Stebbins—I should like to have the opportunity to answer in that dialogue.

Alderman Quincy—After I am through the gentleman can have an opportunity to proceed.

C.—Then why don't you select engineers who know their business better?

D.—We don't select engineers, that is the Chief's business. We only confirm.

C.—Then why have we got a Chief who selects incompetent men?

D.—That is the Mayor's lookout, not ours. We can neither appoint nor remove him.

C.—Then why don't your patrol ever come down my way; there 's a nest of carpenters' and painters' shops, and the nearest hydrant in no concition to work?

D.—Ask the engineers; that 's their business under the ordinance.

C.—If it 's their business why don't you see they do it?

D.—Because I can't spare more than wo hours a day for this work and support my family beside. Here comes an engineer; ask him.

C.—Mr. Engineer, why don't your patrol come down my way?

Engineer—We have n't men enough.

C.—Then enlist some more for this special duty.

E.—We can't; the ordinance prescribes exactly who shall do it,—permanent foremen and hosemen, and we can't even use hook and ladder men instead.

C.—Some of your foremen are too permanent. Why was n't that one who was drunk on duty the other night discharged the next morning?

E.—Step this way a little and I 'll tell you; I don't want him to hear. We heard the case and recommended his discharge, but you see he 's a pretty big man in ward politics, and when it came before the directors the Councilmen insisted on a rehearing to enable him to prove he was n't so very drunk, and the end of it was they voted a reprimand instead, and there he is, still swearing he 'll pay us off yet.

C.—Why did n't you go to the Mayor? can't he discharge firemen? he used to.

E.—Not under the new ordinance—he discharges only the Chief and assistant. [Here the alarm strikes from the box on the citizen's warehouse and he suddenly abandons his search for responsibility.]

From pillar to post, Mr. Chairman; everybody accusing some one else till it reminds one of the children's game of forfeits. "What, I, sir? Yes, you, sir. Not I, sir. Who then, sir? Mr. Blackcap. What, I, sir," etc.

I fully agree with the opinion expressed in one of this morning's papers that in many respects the present state of things or the minority ordinance itself is preferable to the compromise. I mean, of course, the minority ordinance in its original shape, before the astonishing about face executed by its signer in the other branch. To that shape I presume we could restore it if necessary, for I cannot suppose that any Alderman, even to avoid a commission, is desirous to swallow his own arguments in order to jump gracefully from the frying pan of a joint committee into the fire of the whole City Council. But I have no fear that we shall come to that. I have so much confidence in the good sense of this Board and in their willingness to abandon a prejudice when fairly convinced that it is unfounded, that I fully believe that the majority ordinance will pass.

Now, as to the objections the gentleman made to the ordinance. I had proposed to offer an amendment which I have here. In the first section, insert after the word "Chief-Engineer" the words "Superintendent of Fire Alarms." I propose also to fill up the blank with the words "not exceeding five hundred and fifty men." I have no doubt that the City Council have power to delegate the formation of battalions to any board they choose.

Alderman Stebbins—The statute prescribes that the number of enginemen shall be fixed by the City Council.

Alderman Quincy—If that is the opinion of the City Solicitor I bow to it. I relied on the general provision that the City Council can act directly or by delegation of the power to some of the boards. Unless the City Solicitor can explain it to me otherwise, I shall think it comes under that general provision.

Alderman Stebbins produced a letter from the City Solicitor in support of his assertion.

Alderman Quincy—I hope the gentleman is prepared with an amendment.

Alderman Stebbins—I am not; I leave that to the committee.

Alderman Quincy—I now propose to offer the amendment pending in the other branch providing for the appointment of a Committee of the City Council. [The Alderman submitted the amendment to the majority of the ordinance offered in the Council by Mr. Denny of Ward 9.] If the gentleman has decided to support the principle of a commission, these amendments can be adopted this evening. I hope the objection will not be insisted upon, and that we shall adopt the ordinance without further delay.

Alderman Stebbins—The gentleman has not touched upon the section concerning the powers of the commissioners and engineers.

Alderman Clark—When I advocated laying this matter on the table last Monday, it was for the purpose of considering it carefully and comparing the report of the majority with the ordinance introduced by the gentleman from Ward 8, as was my duty as a member of this Board. I have come to the conclusion that it is the duty of this Board to vote for the appointment of a commission. The additions to the territory which have taken place within the last few days are a very strong reason why any member who was not in favor of one before that, should favor it at the present time. I believe the limits of the city have outgrown the attention and time that has been devoted to them, and require more time than any committee which can be appointed by the City Council can give. The business community evidently demand the commission: capitalists demand it, and it seems to me as though there is but one opinion. Within the last few days I have tried to find those who suppose that the commission is not necessary to the proper management of the Fire Department. I have the honor of being a member of the Committee on Fire Department this year, and was also a member last year. I have endeavored to do my duty as a member of that committee, but I do believe that its requirements are such that if we can get three practical, straightforward, upright business men, who do not desire this position for the purpose of making money, who will make it a study and give their whole time to it, the department can be managed better than it can be in its present form. I do not mean to say that my faith in the department has grown any less than it has been in years past. I believe that the city of Boston has as good and efficient Fire Department as there is in the country, and it is n't but a short time since it had the confidence of the people and the support of the entire press of the city, and that was the opinion of the underwriters of New York who came here, to whom it seemed that Boston was under the special care of Divine Providence, because we had no fires. But times change. We have had a big fire; we had two big fires; we have had a good many fires since; and in my opinion the fires since the great fire have been well managed, but that may be no reason why we should refuse to grant the petition of people who come here and ask for a change, or for the appointment of a commission, if you so desire. As I said before the annexation of Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton—I am sorry I cannot say Brookline also—will require the attention, certainly, of some parties a great many hours a day during the present and coming years to organize and look after, and I for one have made up my mind that the city wants, demands and is bound to have a commission, and it is our duty not to stand in the way. Therefore I shall vote for the appointment of a fire commission. If the ordinance is defective, as it evidently is, it should be recommitted into the proper hands and put into proper shape. It seems to me that we can vote to accept the report and recommendations of the majority of the Committee on the Reorganization of Fire Department, and recommit the ordinance with instructions to have it properly prepared. I would ask whether that would be a proper motion.

The Chair—There is no report before the Board to be accepted.

Alderman Power—I can't let this question be decided without saying a few words. I don't get up to make an apology. Never have I done anything that I felt ashamed of. I simply get up to defend my course on this question. My reasons are given in the majority report. The principal reason shown here for a commission is that the Aldermen did not attend to their duties or give this subject the time it deserves. I don't propose to plead guilty to shirking my duty, nor acknowledge that I have been false to the oath I took to attend to the city's business first when the citizens of Boston did me the honor to elect me to this Board. If these gentlemen did their duty there would be little need of a commission. I have given some attention to the Fire Department, and I pretend to say that I do know more about it than outside people who have no more intelligence than I have, and I am more competent to judge of what we want. If I have been deceived by members of this Fire Committee, when they told me repeatedly that we had the best department in the country—and the New York underwriters said we were a pattern for the country—if I have been deceived, I have no apology to make. But it will be some excuse for me for voting against a commission. I believed the citizens of Boston thought they elected a reform Board of Aldermen. [Mr. Power here read from the remarks of Alderman Clark on the question of raising the salary of the Chief-Engineer to $3500, which the latter claimed was due for his efficiency.] If Alderman Clark sincerely believed in this statement, why does he stand up here and vote for a change? Do citizens think we are to be turned by every change of the wind, or did they think we would vote according to the dictates of our own consciences, no matter how great the pressure? My confidence is shaken, and I don't wonder that of the public is too. The principle of commissions is opposed to the sentiment of our institutions. Boston has been looked upon as a pattern for integrity, and I have no reason to doubt it. I have seen no corruption since I have been here. Another thing. A gentleman said he had been here a year and did n't profess to know anything more about the business of City Hall than if he had been outside of it. I don't think that applies to the rest of the members. He has been compelled to be away on account of a sad event, for which he had the sympathy of his associates, but the rest of us must have been about here attending to our business. If they don't attend to their business I don't blame the public for wanting a commission.

Alderman Clark—I have said nothing against the management of the Fire Department, nor the Chief-Engineer. I was honest in the statements made last spring, and have had no reason to change my mind at the present time. Nor do I suppose it is intended to entirely change the present department. I understand that the commission is to take the place of the Fire Committee. I cast no reflection on the members of the department, which I believe to be as efficient as any in the United States. I would remind the gentleman that, a year ago, he reported an ordinance for a Board of Health, at the head of which department is one of the best men who could be had, and he is retained, and the commission is over him. So we have a most excellent precedent established by the gentleman himself. I believe the Board of Health has worked as a general thing to the satisfaction of the community. I do not apologize for any shortcomings of my own. I have labored according to the best of my belief. If I have failed it is unintentional and for lack of ability. I have endeavored to do my duty as a member of the Fire Committee, and if the Alderman from Ward 12 has lost confidence in any of the members I have not lost confidence in him. I think he did a good thing in establishing an independent Board of Health, and if this commission is appointed the results will be equally satisfactory.

Alderman Hulbert read from his remarks at the last meeting to correct a misapprehension on the part of Alderman Power.

Alderman Quincy—I agree to the point of law decided by the City Solicitor, but I do not think the ordinance for that reason should be sent back. All the other errors are covered by the amendments I propose to offer. There is no doubt the City Council cannot delegate the power of prescribing the number of engineers. I therefore propose to strike out the words "said engineers shall deem necessary" and insert instead "City Council shall deem necessary." The other objections, I think, are answered and the ordinance can be put into as perfect a state as possible.

Alderman Stebbins—I stated before that I should vote for the ordinance when it is amended, but I cannot vote for it in the shape it will be in. It is the best plan to perfect it here. In the other branch it met with a majority quite large against it. The Board of Engineers are the persons provided by the statute to have charge of fires. You may undertake to say that three commissioners may have charge of fires, but you cannot do it legally; it comes back to the engineers. Another provision in my substitute was that the permanent men shall render assistance to the department for the survey and inspection of buildings, and I hope the chairman will consent to have that feature incorporated.

Alderman Gibson in the chair.

Alderman Cutter—I have the high honor, Mr. Chairman, of being the chairman of the Committee on the Fire Department, and have thought that at this particular stage of proceedings I might be indulged in a few remarks on this subject. I had supposed that my associates were honest enough to speak what they believe, and that they believed our Fire Department equal in strength, and equal in power, to do today more than it has been able to do any day since the charter of the city was granted. We have improved it this year. We were found fault with by the underwriters, who held up their hands and said we were doing nothing. We were not spending money enough. Then we bought four new engines, and organized four new companies for the city proper, which will cost Boston $150,000 a year. And I tell you, gentlemen, the taxpayers have got something to say about this.

The underwriters can control some men, perhaps, but they cannot control the votes of the taxpayers, and it is the taxpayers who are going to control this question. So far as this Board undertaking to shuffle their duties off upon a body of commissioners and taxing the people to pay them is concerned, I think they will say that a different class of gentlemen is needed here, who will perform these duties without any shuffling. I did expect that this City Government would not be led, like the federal and State governments, into commission after commission, until we have so many office-holders that we cannot vote to turn out a President, because, in spite of you, he can elect himself through his own agency. I did n't suppose this state of things would come from a republican form of government. Now, I say the nearer you bring these things to the people the better it will be for the taxpayers of the city.

The gentleman from the Highland District says, without qualification, that we have excellent heads of departments in this city, and when in this Board the question came on voting for Chief-Engineer, he had the manly independence to cast a blank ballot. He is welcome to all the glory he can gain from a cartridge of that dimension. I never fire blank cartridges, but do my duties as best I can and this is my third consecutive year in this body. My first fight was against adorning the members with badges, costing $40 each, paid for by the people's money. The records will show that gentlemen now wear a badge costing $2 50 each, paid for with their own money. And the Mayor, whom we have elected, was presented by the Board with one costing $50. Gentlemen, I have labored for the taxpayers of this city, and have been affected somewhat in the rates of taxation.

There was no fault found with the Fire Department until this unfortunate fire came upon us. And do you undertake to lay that to the department? The horses were all sick; was that the fault of the department? The gentleman who occupies the chair was right when he said it was worth $10,000 to manage that fire. It got into a lot of lumber sheds built upon storehouses and insured as first-class risks, and when the fire got into those sheds, like that covering yonder hotel, do you think it was in the power of the department to stop it? The gentleman from the Highland District says it was here that the department failed where it should not have failed. Well, what did the Chief of the Fire Department do? The citizens came here and held a meeting, and what did they recommend? They wanted something beside water used. They wanted powder, and I believe they would have mobbed him then and there if he had refused them. But what did the Chief say? He said—and I must confess I never had so much respect for him as I have had since—he said, "Gentlemen, I don't approve of using powder." But they did use powder and he consented to it. The question then came, "How are you going to use it?" Well, each Alderman must take a keg under his arm and lug it out into the street. Said I, "Gentlemen, I am not in the habit of using powder in such quantities as that." The gentlemen went down there and used powder, and came up the next day and thought they had done some great thing by it.

But when they found that they were perhaps liable individually they backed out and said they did n't do anything with it. You cannot find the man that touched off the first keg. Gentlemen came in here and undertook to tell what should be done. An Englishman of large size and small brain undertook to say that the first thing to be done was to blow up State street the whole length. Gentlemen, when you have a head of the Fire Department that will act as coolly as our present head did on that occasion, and who will say I know where I can stop it; I can stop it on Washington street at the Old South; I can stop it where the old-fashioned buildings are; it won't go past State street if it touches it, and then the result proves to be what it was, we should support him. Referring to the Health Commission, Alderman Cutter said, I tell you, gentlemen, those of you who are so proud of the Commission on Health and who voted to change the ordinance so that the commissioners may go on with their regular business and still draw their pay, that commission has cost the citizens of Boston $118,000 more than the department cost last year to purify the air we breathe.

Has it been any purer? Gentlemen, you must stare these things in the face. Now, gentlemen, I don't wish to say a word upon the manner in which this committee was appointed. But I do know one thing. I know that it was a put-up job. It was a blow aimed at the head of the Fire Department; that is what it means; nothing more and nothing less. And the gentleman on my right who sits in committee with me knows that as well as he knows that he sits there, and who would agree with me up to the time of the annexation of the different towns. That has given him wisdom all at once, and he has taken a back track from what he believed before. I don't claim to be any wiser because these different towns are to be annexed than before, but I do propose to oppose commissions. If you want to have commissions, taxpayers, vote for them yourselves. We will put the question to you. If you decide to put the duties of the Aldermen, who don't attend to them, into the hands of commissions, I have nothing to say about it. I have had the honor to visit Albany, which is run by commissions, and I found that the taxes were $4 on $100. They have six engines there, and commissions enough to take care of sixteen.

Their engines are very well manned and well built, but they cost the city dearly. I told them, as far as the efficiency of your Fire Department is concerned, I cannot find any fault if the citizens are willing to pay the taxes of running such an extravagant department. I hate to see my associates take a hack track in this matter. I hate to see the press intimidating the babies of the City Council, for I can call them nothing more nor less. They must have some object in it, or else they lack backbone. I don't like to see a man stand and hold up his hands in holy horror because everything don't go just right. I say that instead of waiting for some Micawber to turn up we should hold on to the men we have. I saw a man that it was said would make the best chief engineer in the world. I took him into the Mayor's office and what did he suggest? He suggested ten new companies and ten new engines in the city proper, and I figured out the cost of what he enumerated, and I found it would cost $1,000,000, and that was enough for me. That was the kind of a Micawber I turned up. I tell you, gentlemen, never fear a petition that comes in here. Who cares for a petition?

Did n't members of this Board vote against two thousand petitioners for cheap mercantile buildings, and did n't they say that people would not remain in the city? And in less than two weeks afterwards they said those men were the only two heavy men in the Board. I say, gentlemen, you are here this afternoon to carry a point at all hazards. Right or wrong you are ready to carry it, and if anybody in this Board dares to oppose you he is to be hurled out of here. The whip and spur is to be put to him; the papers are all ready, and I think that would be a good title for them to use—"Whip and Spur." I think I have seen a paper of that name in New Hampshire. It is intended to whip and spur the members of this Council into line to vote for a commission and to tax the people two, three or five hundred thousand dollars for the sake of putting out one man. That is what it is for. If you have n't got the courage to fight against it, have somebody else. I propose to do my duty here as I know it, and not as petitioners may ask. Two thousand petitioners came here to ask that the boys might play ball on the Common, but we did n't allow them to do it.

Two thousand petitioners asked us to enforce the Prohibitory law; but we did n't do it. But if the papers had demanded of us as they have in relation to the Fire Department, somebody would have taken a hack track. That is the difficulty we labor under. Gentlemen, if there is a spark of value in the republican form of government never, never destroy this sovereignty that the people should always have and enjoy. Nothing remaining, however potent, would balance that. I can say to you as I did last fall, that I had paid my respects to the people at City Hall, and they could pay theirs to me at the polls. They worked against me, and I said, gentlemen, you have the right to do so. But I want to tell you, gentlemen, that if you stand up here and take an independent stand and not fear the Fire Department or the people, you will gain as I have every year more than 2500 votes. Of the gentlemen who voted upon the increased pay of the police only those four who voted against it are here today. So you need not fear. You need not take a hack track in these things. Stand up and maintain what you know to be right. Never fail to maintain it. Under any circumstances never miss that. That is the policy my experience teaches.

Alderman Hulbert—We should stand up here and stand by our convictions, and I propose to do so, and I would like to give a few reasons why I prefer a commission. I don't suppose that many members are looking to the future in deciding their positions. I claim that the commission can do some things that no board of directors or committee can or will do. It lays the foundation for planning for the future, and providing so that the accrued experience from year to year is made valuable in the future. In less than ninety days, as the thing is now carried on, a new Committee on the Fire Department will be appointed. Possibly some of the present members will be elected, but we can't be sure of it. The experience they have obtained is of no avail to the city. I want such a policy adopted that the accumulated results of years can be used. It works well in private business, and I don't see why it should not here. This commission will make a careful examination of all the means and appliances which the city now owns for the extinguishment of fires, and consider the best mode of managing them. Drill and discipline will be maintained, which cannot be as it is now, and means will be arranged for the economical conduct of affairs. They will consider the various means of putting out fires. If they are discreet men—and it will lie at the Mayor's door if they are not—they will be able to analyze carefully all new modes and methods, and give a good reason for their adoption. They will prevent fires. In many places in this city it is simply a question whether to prevent fires or put them out. And they will find localities where fires are liable to break out. They will find out what is requisite for the public safety and in what streets business detrimental to the public welfare in this respect is carried on. Like any other men with their minds on one thing, they will discuss all things that will prevent fires. There are streets where everything is arranged for a splendid conflagration. Establish this commission and your building laws will be well digested. They would consider what secures the most prompt attendance on fires, which ought to be attended to. If there is any place where men need to be controlled by military rule it is in the Fire Department. You cannot have it now. Men's influence is felt in every department of the city. A commission's rules will be enforced, and the discipline of the department will be looked after. The responsibility will be divided. The present Chief-Engineer has had more upon his back than he ever ought to have. The commission will be to us what General von Moltke was to the Prussian Government. He knew all about the strong and weak places in France, and this commission will know the strong and weak places for fires here, which is a very important thing in this city. I can hardly enumerate the variety of services that will accrue from a commission of good, true and honest men. I think three a great deal better than five or eight. Estimate the worth of the experience of three such men, and compare it with the worth of any committee for one year. Take the gentlemen on the Fire Committee who have spoken this afternoon and compare the results of their experience with that of the men who come in and go out year after year. I would like to know what an ordinary Committee on Streets would have done this last year in that department. I know there is no committee of the present Government that could have done what the Street Commissioners have done, and I don't say this to praise the commission, but merely to state facts. I assume that we shall have good men, which the citizens demand. We can't select men from those who come in here and proffer their services so cordially when there is a vacancy. In this case I would insist that the Commissioners shall give their whole time to the city. Annexation has caused a large increase of territory, and I say and mean that there is n't a member of this Board who can render in any one of the departments that care and attention and interest which would be desirable. The management of the affairs of the city is getting to be a very large interest. I am not for delegating any power that we can perform; but when we can't perform it I think it is manly to get up here and say so. At the same time I would advocate that no department must be out of the control of the City Government as to the amount of the expenditures. The City Government should hold the neck of the purse and never give it up to a commission or board. Now why should n't we meet this thing today? If we do there is no danger. The community ask for it and business men feel the necessity for it. Should n't this thing prove a success there does n't live a man who will lay any blame to the door of this Board for doing so.

Alderman Quincy—I propose to put this ordinance into shape in three minutes. I offer a simple amendment to strike out the words "said commissioners may deem necessary" and insert "City Council may from time to time provide." Then I propose to add at the end of the last section the words "all such officers shall hold office till their successors are appointed."

Alderman Cutter—I trust we shall not put an imperfect thing in here to hasten through. I will agree to insure your property for the next twenty-four hours. It has been said that certain insurance offices have proposed to leave this city because our department is so weak. I wish to show you a statement. I own some houses in this city. They have volunteered to send it to me. I did n't go to them. They have offered to insure my property at less than I have been able to obtain it for the last ten years. Here are their figures and they stand by them. Where I have paid $150 for five years they offer to do it for one dollar in as good offices as you can find in State street. Where I have paid $250 they offer to take for $2. Where I have paid $175 they will take for $1. The gentleman from Ward 3 undertook to make us believe here that the insurance companies would not insure in the city. Well, now they are a little in by this fire. They have learned that first-class risks do not consist in mercantile houses closed up from Saturday afternoon till Monday morning. These men have profited by the ability of the Fire Department. They have been fattening and paying twenty-percent dividends right along. A gentleman connected with an insurance office said that he lost $60,000 which he had before the fire; he might have divided all the dividends in his office and pocketed $60,000, and he wished he had done it. Now, sir, if they undertake to dictate to us how to manage our Fire Department and make our citizens pay for it; if they calculate to shake the bush and for them to catch the bird, I tell you that wont go down in this city. If you do it this year you will abolish it next. The gentleman from the Highland District undertakes to doubt the military discipline of the Fire Department. He is the last man I would go to learn military of. He is the last man to whom I would go to learn what is necessary for the Fire Department; a man who has not crossed the threshold of the Fire Department office this year. And he undertakes to talk here with a written speech manufactured by insurance agents, in my judgment, if you will allow me, and to tell us what is needed and what is to be done. We have been at work in there. We have had our coats off. You, my friends, will bear with me that we have time and again sought information concerning our department ever since we have been on that committee. You undertake to tell me that the Mayor is better capable of appointing a good commission than a committee. Perhaps the present Mayor is, but he is not going to be the next Mayor. I tell you the Mayor and the President of the Common Council have been more to blame than any other two persons in this city for placing upon the Fire Department Committee men of extravagant notions. There was a certain gentleman placed on that committee who resigned because he could not do as he wanted. He was a gentleman worthy to sit on that committee. I tell you it was no duty of his to resign. But when he had resigned, another gentleman went in there and you know his record. I tell you that is the fault of the Mayor of Boston and the President of the Common Council and of nobody else. If you undertake to place the responsibility upon them, look out that you are not hanged with the rope that you have manufactured yourselves. I believe the Fire Department as a department never has been forced into any political use to govern any other department. But there is not an Alderman outside of the city proper that does not show a little inclination to favor his particular locality. But I tell you that when you blame the Fire Department for favoring their own interests you blame them when you should not. But as regards this last fire being a bugbear, I would rather risk my buildings today without any insurance at all than to have a commission appointed and keep up a running fire every twenty-four hours; for I tell you, gentlemen, if you don't have fires their mission is gone. The fires must exist. But many of them would not occur if the insurance men would insure property as they do in Paris; that is, if a fire originates among your own goods you get no insurance; but is it in your neighbor's and yours are destroyed, you receive it. That would teach you to look out for your own goods and houses. But now, if a gentleman comes to Boston to set up in business, he will get trusted for goods for, perhaps, $2000; he then gets insured for $5000, and when he gets into a tight place the building gets on fire. I don't say who sets it, but I do say somebody is induced to set it. It is the insurance companies that do these things. They sit in their nice offices, and don't look at the man or his goods. They take his statement and his money, and that is all. I beg of you, gentlemen, to believe that you have an engineer and a Fire Department just as good and better than is to be found in any city in this Union today. I shall vote against commissions. I shall decidedly object to voting for a commission on the Fire Department. You don't need it any more than you need one on public buildings or any other department. Since you have had a commission on streets what an amount of money have you spent on their account! And if you did n't spend it their mission would pass away. We had to nearly strip them of their powers after we elected them. The Commission on Health, you, gentlemen, perhaps in a year and perhaps in less time, will believe with me that it is an expensive affair. They don't purify the air. They sit in their offices and employ sixteen or twenty assistants to do what has been done during the last year. They went to work and seized the Marcella-street Hospital. Well, they are welcome to that. They have destroyed other buildings, then they have destroyed a most excellent neighborhood and driven our citizens from it to place our smallpox patients there when we had ample room for them, and when this had been done and the papers had stopped saying anything about it, the smallpox was abolished.

Alderman Quincy called attention to a statement obtained from the City Registrar's office showing a decrease in the number of deaths during the summer months this year, which must have been caused by the absence of uncleanness and improved drainage. The number was six hundred against eight hundred for the same time last year.

Alderman Power—I don't propose to say anything against the Board of Health, but would like the gentleman to state what that Board has had to do with good drainage. If there is any credit to be obtained from good drainage it belongs to the Department of Sewers.

Alderman Quincy—It was caused by enforcing the rules for cleanliness.

Alderman Clark—The ground has been pretty well gone over, but in order to get this ordinance—if it is going to be adopted—as perfect as it is possible to make it, I shall be in favor of still further delay. I want it to be distinctly understood that I am in favor of a commission, but do not favor the ordinance fixed up here unless it is right. I shall therefore move to refer it to the Committee on Ordinances, with directions to report the majority ordinance in a new draft and legal form.

Alderman Quincy—I would vote for this if it is necessary; but the matter can be fixed in three minutes. Only one valid objection has been offered, and by making the simple change I proposed that will be met. The other objections can be met in various ways. The defects are so simple that every member can see them at once. Then we have till the commissioners are appointed to decide how many we will have.

Alderman Clark—I only wish to delay the matter to get it right. It has been reported three or four weeks. The chairman of the committee is a lawyer. One of the best lawyers in the city was a member of the committee, and yet they have come in here with an ordinance that is pronounced illegal by the City Solicitor. The alteration of a simple word or two may make it all right, but I am not lawyer enough to say so. If the Board see fit to vote upon an ordinance which the City Solicitor has pronounced illegal, well and good.

Alderman Stebbins moved to amend Alderman Clark's motion by adding the words "and approved by the City Solicitor," which Alderman Clark accepted.

Alderman Gaffield suggested that it be recommitted to the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department, which Alderman Clark agreed to.

Alderman Gaffield—I ask the gentleman from Ward 6 if he would not consent to pass the ordinance, in view of the sensitive condition of public feeling on this subject, which has been nearly twelve months before us. There is only one slight legal form which needs correcting, and that can be done in half an hour. Let us adjourn for that time, and if the City Solicitor says it cannot be done, we can refer it to the joint special committee. If it be possible to pass this ordinance tonight, the hearts of the people will thrill with joy.

Alderman Clark—I don't think the hearts of the people will thrill with joy if we pass an ordinance that is illegal. We bow to the will of the people, but I don't believe the community would be satisfied with patching up the ordinance, and I don't think the gentleman would be in favor of doing so.

Alderman Hulbert—I hope Alderman Clark's motion will prevail. The vote indicates plainly to the community how we stand. It is of no importance whether it is passed tonight or on Monday. It should be made clear and satisfactory to the City Solicitor.

Alderman Clark accepted Alderman Gaffield's proposition to refer to the Joint Special Committee.

Alderman Gibson suggested that an amendment be made so that the patrolmen assist the Department for the Inspection of Buildings, as it might be a saving of money.

Alderman Stebbins called attention to section 30 of his substitute ordinance, which embodied that idea. Unless something of that kind is embodied in the majority ordinance, he should move to so amend it.

Alderman Quincy—I shall object to such an amendment. We propose to leave this whole matter to the commission, and we don't propose to dictate to them that such and such men shall be for such and such purposes.

Alderman Gaffield—I agree with the Alderman perfectly that I would not have a piece of patchwork go through the Board, and agree that the report may be recommitted to the joint special committee, with instructions to report on next Monday.

The Chair stated Alderman Clark's motion to be "That the subject of reorganizing the Fire Department be recommitted to the Joint Special Committee, with instructions to report the ordinance recommended by the majority in a new draft and legal form, and approved by the City Solicitor."

The motion was put, and carried unanimously.

Alderman Quincy moved to take from the table the report and order in relation to a revision of the city charter, but at the request of Aldermen Cutter and Clark, he withdrew the motion.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
OCTOBER 9, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at half-past seven o'clock, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE ALDERMEN.

The following papers were disposed of in concurrence: Petitions of Company A, Second Battalion, E. Goodfellow and executors of George W. Blake were referred.

Recommitment to the Committee on Public Institutions, with instructions to report in fifteen days, of the report and orders on the subject of a site for a Home for the Poor. (Printed City Doc. No. 108.)

Report in favor of passage of the order requesting the Water Board to consider the expediency and cost of supplying the territory bounded by Eliot street and the other streets, named in said order, with salt water, on the Holly system, for fire and sanitary purposes. Report accepted and order passed.

Order to rescind the order of September 23, authorizing the plans for Police Station, Ward 16, to be so amended as to include accommodations for a branch of the Public Library. Passed.

Report and order to provide temporary accommodations for pupils in the new Grammar School District, Washington Village. Passed under a suspension of the rules on motion of Mr. Warren of Ward 12.

Reports and orders to allow Third Religious Society of Dorchester and Leonard Picking to make additions to buildings, and W. R. Clark to build coal elevator on Foster's wharf. Severally passed.

Report that Leonard Ware has violated the law in erection of wooden building, on Purchase street. Accepted.

Report and order to allow Timothy McCarty to build wooden addition to building on Tremont street. Passed.

The two following were severally read once:

Report and order to procure and place in the new schoolhouse, on the site of the Old Roxbury City Hall, a suitable tablet bearing the name of the school.

Report and order to provide temporary accommodations for primary pupils in the Bigelow School District.

The order authorizing that portion of Engine House No. 12, which projects over the line of widening of Warren street, with the land and the portion of the building remaining, to be sold by public auction, being put upon its passage—

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 asked an explanation from the committee. Public property had repeatedly been sold under restriction that it should be removed in ten days from the time of sale, and for that reason brought a very low price, but his attention had been called to the fact that the rule had been applied only to the payment of the price, and instead of the building being removed, it was allowed to remain in its position for days and weeks and sometimes months after the ten days had elapsed. If that is the state of things he wished to inquire into it. Of one case he had been informed within a few days where buildings have been sold with the ten days' removal restriction and then remained several months; this was on the extension of Washington street, and since they were sold the buildings stand where they were before. He wanted to know if that was an agreement between the city officers and the purchaser. He wanted the citizens of Boston to know these facts that the treasury should be protected. Mr. Shaw alluded to the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse, which was assessed at $20,000 and within three months was sold for less than $1000. When any committee sanctioned such doings he should raise his voice against it.

The order was passed in concurrence, Mr. Shaw voting nay.

The report and orders to furnish steam-heating apparatus and a fence for the yard at engine-house (Ward 14) at an estimated cost of $3000, and for a transfer from the Reserved Fund to pay therefor, if not exceeding that sum, being under consideration.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 asked what was proposed to be done with this money. The order was for $3000. Nobody replying, Mr. Shaw said he was told that it is supposed to be necessary to build 129 feet of fence, at $7 a foot, making $903, and he was informed that the heating apparatus would cost $1100. Now it is proposed to appropriate $3000 for an expense of $2000. It may be right, but members of the Council don't generally transact their private business in that way. Mr. Shaw said his information was derived from the Superintendent of Public Buildings. If all the appropriations were made at the rate of fifty per cent. above the expenses, the citizens ought to know it. This is a little matter, but there is a principle involved. As Mrs. Sigourney says, and little by little these expenses creep up from hundreds to thousands, to hundreds of thousands and millions, and as the old Scotchman, from whom I descended, says, "Many a mickle makes a muckle." If there is no corruption there is certainly a very loose manner of expending the city's money. Why is it necessary to appropriate $3000 for an expense for which the honest man who manages the public buildings says $2000 is enough? If it is proposed to furnish that building why not say so in the order? He hoped some gentleman would explain the necessity for it.

"Little by little the bird builds her nest,"

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 thought the order should be explained after the statement by Mr. Shaw.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4 said he supposed some margin had been given in the estimate. Everybody knows that if there is anything left over it goes into the Sinking Fund. The Superintendent of Buildings made the estimate for the committee.

Mr. Shaw said he had an interview with Mr. Tucker today and he was responsible for the figures. He had also called upon the manufacturers of the heating apparatus, who informed him that the cost might possibly be $1200. If arm chairs are to be provided for, and gas fixtures, why not say so, and let the people understand it?

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4 repeated his statement that the Superintendent of Public Buildings made the estimate for what is necessary to finish the building.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 said it was n't known exactly what the expense would be. Gas fixtures, heating apparatus, etc., were to be put in. The order says not to exceed $3000.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said Mr. Shaw was correct. The report comes asking for steam heating apparatus etc. As he understood it, chairs, carpets, etc., were to be furnished for this building. The gentleman asks if the appropriation is to cover that expense, and the committee has evaded that particular question. In view of that fact he moved the order be referred back to the Committee on Public Buildings, with instructions to report items of expense.

Mr. Train of Ward 13 hoped the motion would not be pressed; the building is nearly ready to receive the heating apparatus.

Mr. Flynn hoped the motion to refer back would prevail, if there is a discrepancy between the estimate of the Superintendent and the amount named in the appropriation. No member has denied that there is a discrepancy.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 did n't understand that there is a discrepancy. The Superintendent has n't made any different statement to the committee, and the gentleman from Ward 5 might possibly be mistaken in the amount given him.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 thought the order had n't been worded just as the committee intended, and, was meant to include the gas fixtures, etc., which are not named in the order. If the committee do not intend to spend $3000, the order could be amended by making it $2000.

Mr. Bowles of Ward 12 asked if the order came in the usual way; if it did, he hoped it would pass, and the committee treated with respect. Place it in the worst light you please, and it is only a few hundred dollars, and it is unjust that this thing should be driven to so close a point. It should be treated in the usual manner.

Mr. Adams said they had already voted to sell the old house, and in order to arrange the new one the order should pass tonight.

The Council refused to recommit by a rising vote of 13 to 25.

Mr. Shaw asked what it is proposed to do with the difference between $2000 and $3000.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4 said the committee propose to use what is necessary and turn the rest into the Sinking Fund in the usual way.

Mr. Flynn said then he would object to this appropriation. The committee have no right to ask for $3000 when they only need $2000.

Mr. Bicknell said the balance would go into the Sinking Fund.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 had seen the Superintendent of Public Buildings, an hour before coming to the Council, and was told by him that his estimate for the heating apparatus and fence was $2600.

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 moved that the order lie on the table for one week, as there seems to have been two stories told by the Superintendent.

The motion was carried unanimously.

Subsequently Mr. Jones of Ward 14 moved to take the order from the table, and it was lost, 12 to 21.

The report and ordinance to amend an ordinance relating to the public health, in regard to removal of manure from stables, being under consideration—

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 inquired if the ordinance had been before the Joint Committee on Health; he had no knowledge of it.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 stated that it had.

The Chair explained the course the ordinance had taken, and after explanations by Mr. Denny of Ward 9 and Mr. Dean of Ward 12, the ordinance was read twice and passed in concurrence.

The report and order for hook and ladder house on Washington square was passed in concurrence on motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14, under a suspension of the rules.

THE FIRE COMMISSION.

The reports and ordinances in reference to the re-organization of the Fire Department came from the Aldermen recommitted to the joint special committee, with instructions to report the majority ordinance in one week, in a new draft and legal form, and approved by the City Solicitor.

The question being on concurrence, Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 moved to amend by striking out all the instructions to the committee.

On this motion Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 called for the yeas and nays.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 the previous question was ordered.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 desired to make an explanation, but was ruled out of order by the Chair.

The motion to amend was lost, 21 yeas, 30 nays—as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Jacob Abbott, Thomas J. Anderson, Hiram A. Bowles, George L. Burt, Patrick Collins, Timothy J. Dacey, Benjamin Dean, Pierpont Edwards, James J. Flynn, Francis M. Hughes, William H. Jones, Harrison Loring, John Madden, John W. Mahan, James F. Marston, Robert McCue, William McKenney, William G. Thacher, James H. Upham, Michael F. Wells, W. Elliot Woodward—21.

Nays—Messrs. Ebenezer Adams, Hillman B. Barnes, William E. Bicknell, Wilmon W. Blackmar, J. Q. A. Brackett, Charles A. Burditt, Asa H. Caton, Samuel S. Cudworth, Charles Darrow, Charles G. Davis, George P. Denny, Andrew J. Hall, Henry W. Harrington, Edward J. Holmes, Abraham J. Lamb, William Morse, Cyrus A. Page, Frederick Pease, William E. Perkins, Henry W. Pickering, Charles E. Powers, Washington L. Prescott, George A. Shaw, Moses B. Tower, William G. Train, Alouzo Warren, William H. West, David Whiston, Edward P. Wilbur, Edwin H. Woods—30.

Absent, or not voting—Messrs. Frederick Bleiler, Halsey J. Boardman, Thomas Brennan, Neil Doherty, Michael J. Flatley, Elijah B. Hine, Michael Kelley, George P. Kingsley, John B. Martin, Frederick S. Risteen, Joshua Weston—11.

The question being on concurring with the Aldermen in recommitting the report with the instructions, it was carried—yeas 38, nays 9—as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Ebenezer Adams, Hillman B. Barnes, William E. Bicknell, Wilmon W. Blackmar, Hiram A. Bowles, J. Q. A. Brackett, Charles A. Burditt, George L. Burt, Asa H. Caton, Samuel S. Cudworth, Charles Darrow, Charles G. Davis, George P. Denny, James J. Flynn, Andrew J. Hall, Henry W. Harrington, Edward J. Holmes, William H. Jones, Abraham J. Lamb, James F. Marston, Robert McCue, William McKenney, William Morse, Cyrus A. Page, Frederick Pease, William E. Perkins, Henry W. Pickering, Charles E. Powers, Washington L. Prescott, George A. Shaw, Moses B. Tower, William G. Train, James H. Upham, Alouzo Warren, William H. West, David Whiston, Edward P. Wilbur, Edwin H. Woods—38.

Nays—Messrs. Thomas J. Anderson, Patrick Collins, Timothy J. Dacey, Pierpont Edwards, Francis M. Hughes, John Madden, William G. Thacher, Michael F. Wells, W. Elliot Woodward—9.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Jacob Abbott, Frederick Bleiler, Halsey J. Boardman, Thomas Brennan, Benjamin Dean, Neil Doherty, Michael J. Flatley, Elijah B. Hine, Michael Kelley, George P. Kingsley, Harrison Loring, John W. Mahan, John B. Martin, Frederick S. Risteen, Joshua Weston—16.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 moved to reconsider the vote just passed, hoping it would not prevail.

The motion was lost.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Request and order for a transfer of $5500 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for markets. (City Doc. No. 113.)

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 had waited for some time for an explanation of this question. If no other gentleman would sacrifice himself he would. He had conversed with the members of the committee on this subject which literally touches the vitals of the community. Mr. Shaw reviewed the system of leasing stalls in Faneuil Hall and Quincy markets, which he thought allowed a few men to monopolize the business. The policy is detrimental to the interests of the city.

Mr. Davis of Ward 14 doubted if the stalls could be taken away with justice to men who had been thirty years building up a business.

On motion of Mr. Shaw, the order was laid on the table.

Subsequently, on motion of Mr. Davis of Ward 14, the order was taken from the table and made the special order for next Thursday evening at a quarter before nine.

THE HOLLY SYSTEM.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 called for action on the first of the two orders submitted with the report of the minority of the Joint Special Committee on the Re-organization of the Fire Department, that the Cochituate Water Board consider the cost of the Holly system and its comparison with other systems.

The order was passed.

PETITION.

Mr. West of Ward 16 presented the petition of J. A. Johnson, for the lighting of Norfolk street. Sent up.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 moved to reconsider the vote of the last meeting appropriating $300 for an exhibition of S. R. Russell's water system.

After explanations by Mr. Page, Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, Mr. Thacher of Ward 15 and Mr. Jones of Ward 14, the vote was reconsidered and on motion of Mr. Page the order was indefinitely postponed.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

Mr. West of Ward 16 moved to take from the table the order for the closing of the Normal School room in the Girls' High School building. Carried.

Mr. West said the School Committee would not object to the passage of the order, as then the matter could be brought before the courts and an issue be made at once.

On motion of Mr. Brackett of Ward 10, the order was made the special assignment for next Thursday evening at half-past eight o'clock.

On motion of Mr. Marston of Ward 10, the report and orders authorizing a lot of land to be purchased on corner of Shawmut avenue and Upton street, at a cost of $14,000, and the erection thereon of a hose house, and for a loan of $30,000 to be applied therefor, were taken from the table.

Mr. Marston said there were strong objections to the location, and the title to the property was not such as the city could expect. On his motion the order was indefinitely postponed.

A POLICE COMMISSION.

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 offered the following, and on his motion it was referred to the Committee on Ordinances:

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to inquire into the expediency of reporting an ordinance establishing a Commission on Police.

Subsequently Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved to reconsider the vote referring the order.

Mr. Harrington was much surprised at the motion, as the order was simply one of inquiry.

Mr. Flynn thought the Council a better judge than the committee.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 thought it best to wait until the revision of the city charter could take place.

Mr. Harrington said the order amounts to nothing, but he was sorry if he had tread on anybody's corns.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said if it was referred there would be a minority report. He wanted the Council to understand that the proposition to create commissions, was to propose to get into ruts. He thought that the agitation of a Police Commission would eventually lead to the establishment of a Metropolitan Board of Police.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 could not see the impropriety of an order of inquiry, though he could see no necessity for such a commission.

Mr. Harrington thought there were abuses in the Boston police system which need correcting. Men are abused and knocked down, and can't get a hearing.

Mr. West thought the time when the charter is revised would be the proper one for considering this topic.

The vote was reconsidered, and on motion of Mr. Flynn the order was indefinitely postponed.

THE OLD MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Committee on Public Buildings, submitted a report inclosing a communication from the purchaser of the old Mather Schoolhouse, stating that the expense to the city of cancelling the sale of said schoolhouse would be $2000, including the price of the building ($800). Accepted.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 offered the following:

Ordered, That the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse be cancelled, provided it can be done by the payment of $2000; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 hoped it would not prevail; it would cost $1500 to move the building and it would cost $5000 to put in a cellar and foundation. It seems that the purchaser wants to make a few hundreds out of the city.

Mr. Burditt thought there might be some mistake in the management of this case. He was informed that the building would be needed for a primary schoolhouse in that district within a year, and it would be cheaper to take back the building.

After a brief discussion by Messrs. Perkins, Caton, Flynn and Shaw, the order was laid over.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the Council adjourned.

William Macomber, for lamp at the corner of second and Athens streets.

To the Committee on Common on Part of the Board. Mary Sawyer, for removal of trees from sidewalk of 122 Eustis street.

To the Committee on Claims. Frederie S. Way, to be paid for injuries to himself and carriage by alleged defect in Border street.

THE FIRE IN BERKELEY STREET.

Alderman Stebbins presented the remonstrance of Stillman B. Allen, Alexander Blaikie and Charles W. Slack, respectively, for the Berkeley-street Congregational Church, the First Presbyterian Church and the proprietors of the Parker Memorial Meeting House, protesting against the reconstruction or rebuilding of Hayes's stable in close proximity to the places of worship of their respective societies.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins the remonstrance was referred to the Joint Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

In this connection Alderman Stebbins, said he would offer the following orders which, on his motion, were passed:

Whereas, The wooden stable used by Martin Hayes & Co. and occupied by them for the keeping of horses on Berkeley and Appleton streets, was destroyed by fire on the 11th instant, and

Whereas, In the opinion of this Board the rebuilding of said structure would be injurious to property in the vicinity, it is hereby Ordered, That the permission heretofore granted to Martin Hayes to erect a stable on the premises be revoked.

Whereas, In the opinion of this Board the remaining portions of the stable belonging to Martin Hayes or Martin Hayes & Co. on Berkeley and Appleton streets, which was almost totally destroyed by fire on the 11th instant, are now in a state of nuisance and offensive to the neighborhood, and should be removed forthwith: it is hereby Ordered, That notice be given to said Martin Hayes or Martin Hayes & Co. to appear before this Board on Monday next at 4 o'clock P. M. and show cause why said portions of the burnt stable should not be removed as a nuisance.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

Upon the petition of the Boston News Company to use a steam engine at 142 Washington street, an order of notice was passed for a hearing on Tuesday, November 4th, at 4 P. M.

The orders of notice for sewers in Franklin street, Paris street and Parker street, were severally considered, and there being no objection the petitions were recommitted to the Committee on Sewers.

Upon the order of notice on petition of Blackmar, Mandell & Co., to use steam engine, no objection was offered, and the petition was recommitted to the Committee on Steam Engines.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD IN BEACON STREET.

The order of notice for a hearing on the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad to locate tracks on Beacon street, from Gloucester street to near Brighton avenue, being under consideration, Mr. W. A. Field appeared for the railroad company and asked a postponement for two weeks for the reason that they had negotiated for land on Parker street, which, if obtained, would enable them to extend the track on Marlborough street, and might enable them to withdraw the petition. The company did not wish to go on Beacon street unless it is absolutely necessary, but it must be apparent to every one that a railroad could not be run successfully without a stable in that vicinity.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the hearing was postponed for two weeks.

CELLARS BELOW GRADE.

A communication was received from the Inspector of Buildings in response to an order of July 29, 1873, stating that the following-named persons are constructing cellars, the bottoms of which are below mean low water mark: Martin Beatly, Cazenove place, near Candler street, three buildings; Samuel Stubbs, Chandler street, corner Cazenove place, one building; Joseph R. Bassett, east side Tremont street, between Dover and Chapman streets, one building. Referred to the Committee on Health on the part of the Board.

CONSTABLES' BONDS APPROVED.

The bonds of Samuel T. Munroe, William T. Pindell and others, constables of the city of Boston, being certified by the City Treasurer, were approved by the Board.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to pay John F. Mills $13,500, for South Market-street damages. Passed.

Order to pay William Woods $1033 20, for Prescott-street damages. Passed.

Order to pay Hanford Lockwood et al. $1050, for Prescott-street damages. Passed.

Order to abate $88 31 from assessment on Caleb Thurston for Seventh-street sewer, and to assess the same upon Patrick Coyne and Daniel Briscoe. Passed.

Order to allow Company K, First Regiment of Infantry, $72 53 for repairs on their armory, in addition to previous sum allowed for that purpose. Passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

Report and order to allow D. S. Gilchrist $750, for work done on Probate Docket and papers. Passed.

Order for the Mayor to petition the next Legislature for the establishment of a State Normal School in this city.

Alderman Hulbert—I have looked into this thing as much as the limited time would permit, and I fail to see sufficient reasons for passing such an order. As I understand it now the State has four normal schools in successful operation, and a building is in process of erection for another at Worcester. With these enlarged facilities there will be sufficient to meet all emergencies, and in my opinion the time for such a school in Boston has not come, and there are weighty reasons against such a school here. In the first place the expense of conducting and attending such a school in a large country town is much less than it would be in Boston, and it is my opinion that the expense is a particular item with those persons who will attend them. If such a school building is erected here it can't be done except at a very great expense, and there is no need of our being deceived by asking the State to do this. I anticipate that with our enlarged territory we are to pay not less than forty-two or forty-three per cent. of the State tax, and it is a question with me whether we are ready to go into that expenditure. There seems to be no emergency, no call for it. Boston doesn't lack teachers. The best in the market are offered if we wish them. The School Committee will tell you that we don't lack applications for all the positions vacant. Furthermore, I never have seen any satisfactory statistics showing how many graduates of these schools are made available as teachers. Until we can know more of how far the State gathers in the results of these schools, I see no reason for asking for the erection of another building here or of its being carried on at a very largely increased expense to the taxpayers of this city.

Alderman Stebbins.—As I introduced this order, it may be proper to make a single suggestion in regard to it. It is true the State has four normal schools already, but I suppose it is understood to be the settled policy of the State to furnish as many such institutions as may be demanded. Many of the teachers teach in Massachusetts, and many go to other parts of the country. It is true that the city pays forty per cent. of the tax for schools, and it is also true that the city has been conducting a normal school, paying the entire expense. This school has been declared illegal, and it has been thought wise, by many of its friends to have such a school established by the State in the city of Boston. In fact, since the order was introduced the call has seemed to be louder than ever before, because we have annexed so large a territory. There are about fifty or eighty pupils in the normal school here, and I have no doubt if the order shall pass and the Legislature deem it expedient to establish the school, it will prove not only an honor to the State but will gather within its walls a still larger number of pupils. Certainly they will be sure to come here to Boston in preference to other places, and scholars can attend here at a less expense than elsewhere, for most of them can board at home. I hope the order will pass.

Alderman Gaffield.—I heartily concur with the gentleman who has last spoken. No gentleman of this Board has ever questioned the value of the normal school which has been established in this city for many years, but which has been declared illegal. To show the necessity for such a school, I will state from the report of the Superintendent of Public Schools that we have 340 primary school teachers, 456 grammar school teachers and 70 high school teachers, making 866 in all, and there are about 36,000 pupils in Boston. As we hope to have the best schools in the Commonwealth, that we may secure them we desire to have a normal school in our midst, as we always have had. We have lost the capstone of our educational system. We have our primary, grammar and high schools, and we want a normal school to complete the educational system which we all want. No one will have cause to regret putting forward this petition, and I hope it will be granted by the Legislature.

The order was passed.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Report from Committee on Public Buildings that the expense of cancelling the sale of the Old Mather Schoolhouse, in Ward 16, would be $2000.

Alderman Sayward.—The committee have reported all that they were required to. If they had been permitted, they would have reported against cancelling the contract. I would inquire what would be the proper disposition of the subject.

The Chair.—The order to sell remains in force.

Alderman Sayward.—The committee have sold some time ago.

The Chair.—If the committee have done their duty that is all that is required of them.

The report was accepted, in concurrence.

Order for the Cochituate Water Board to consider and report upon the expediency of introducing the Holly system, in whole or in part, of water supply and fire prevention. Passed, in concurrence.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom were referred the assessments for sewers in Summer, Chelsea and Warren streets and Shawmut avenue, reported that they were severally correct and recommended the passage of orders for their collection. Reports accepted and orders passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported the following orders:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to build a drain with necessary cesspools on Walnut avenue and Cochden street, in order to provide for the surface drainage of said avenue. Estimated cost $2000.

Passed.

Ordered, That the South Boston Railroad Company be and they are hereby directed to lower their tracks on Fourth street between M and O streets to conform to the grade of the edgestones on said street.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Board establish the grade of Division street between Dorchester avenue and Foundry street, as shown on a plan and profile drawn by the City Surveyor, dated Oct. 8, 1873, and deposited in the office of the said City Surveyor.

Read once.

Ordered, That the Old Colony & Newport Railway Company be and they are hereby directed to erect a gate on Neponset avenue, at the crossing of the Dorchester & Milton Branch Railroad, and to station an agent to open and close said gate whenever an engine crosses said avenue.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be and he is hereby directed to notify the owners and abutters on Division street, between Dorchester avenue and Foundry street, to remove within thirty days all obstructions in front of their estates extending over the line of said street.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages as follows: Ann E. Richardson, $247 60, widening Blue Hill avenue; Peleg W. Chandler, $13,909, widening Washington and Essex streets; Patrick Donahoe, $22,814 50, widening Hawley street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported favorably on the following applications: Robert C. Caspole, 53 Long wharf; Edward Corrigan, 806 Washington street; D. H. Rowe, 37 Bromfield street, for victualler's license; 5 bootblacks and 17 newsboys; Abraham Troeder, for pawnbroker's license, 139 Harrison avenue; James Kelley, Augustus L. Cilley and James Brosnahan, for wagon licenses; B. F. Hebard & Son and 11 others, for transfer of wagon licenses; William Troy, a minor, for leave to drive a haek. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the applications of Cornelius Driscoll, Isaac S. Burrell, John Roessle, John W. Dorsey and T. C. Wait, and against granting the applications of Silas Potter and C. J. Spencely, for leave to occupy stables. Severally accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of William Curtis in behalf of the executors of George W. Blake, reported the following order, recommending its passage:

Ordered, That whenever the requirements as set forth in an agreement given by the city of Boston to Blake and Rand, and dated April 17, 1871, for the conveyance of a lot of land on East Dedham street, has been complied with, and a deed is called for, then the eighth condition contained in the agreement is to be left out, and the following inserted instead: "No building exceeding twelve feet in height shall be erected or placed within ten feet of the sixteen-foot passageway."

REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF PRINTING.

Alderman Power presented the annual report of the Superintendent of Printing for the year ending Sept. 1, 1873.

The amount of bills certified to by the Superintendent during the year was $43,010 34; stock storage, etc., for the year and three and a half months previous, $1172 50; printing destroyed by fire, paid by order of City Council, $1392 52; total, $45,512 36. The bills for the month ending August 15 comprise a class list for the Public Library, $3225 80; the Auditor's report, $2242 80; and the School Report, $1868 10. The closure of these large items leaves in the printing office the minimum amount of uncompleted work, in midsummer, therefore at the most favorable time for completing an annual report.

The report for the first year stated the consumption of stock at $11,062 32. The second year shows an increased consumption of $1,129 14, not including the loss by fire ($12,191 46)—an increase corresponding to the increased amount of printing. Following is a comparative summary of the expenditures of the year:

Printing, for the last year, (including storage, etc., and excluding loss by fire).....	$43,910 34
Stock consumed the last year, (excluding loss by fire).....	12,191 46
Stationery for the last year.....	10,732 56
Total.....	$66,834 36

Aggregate of preceding year, per Second Report.....	$56,983 97
Subsequent allowance for storage, etc.....	900 00
	57,883 97

Net increase in Printing, Stock and Stationery.. $8,950 39

The last report by the Superintendent showed a saving for the first year of his official term, amounting to over $20,000, above all cost of his office and salary. Taking the same basis of comparison for the second year of his term, and averaging the increase in quantity proportionally, a gain ensues in the city's favor exceeding $23,000—being a gain for the two years during which the office has existed, exceeding $43,000, the total expenditure for the two years being $124,718 33. To this expenditure should be added the Superintendent's salary of $2500 per year. His office, occupying but a small portion of a room of common use for other purposes, without in any way interfering therewith, can hardly be considered as even a rental expense.

The expenses for counting, printing and stationery are as follows:

	Printing	Stationery
Superior Court—Criminal Session....	$525 83
“ “ Civil Session.....	$74 48	1,551 07
Supreme Judicial Court.....		321 52
Municipal Court—Criminal Session..	1,202 50	217 30
“ “ Civil Session.....	800 66	197 23
	$2,747 64	$2,812 95

making a total of $5560 59, which is not comprised in the Auditor's table of printing and stationery, and has no supervision by the Superintendent of Printing; although paid by the city on county account.

By suggestion of the judges, the Committee on Printing have taken this subject under their advisement, and it is probable that this part of the county expenses will be placed upon the same footing as those portions now superintended by the proper city officials.

The report was accepted, and sent down.

INVITATION ACCEPTED.

Alderman Stebbins presented an invitation from the chairman of the Committee of Arrangements of Post 7, for the City Council to attend the dedication of a monument at Mount Hope Cemetery.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins the invitation was accepted, and sent down for concurrence.

THE STATE ELECTION.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That the City Clerk be directed to notify the legal voters of this city that the new voting lists of the several wards are now completed, and that copies thereof will be posted upon the several ward rooms, and that all legal voters be requested to see if their names are properly registered thereon, and that the office of the Board of Aldermen be open for the purpose of correcting said lists of voters every day until the third day of November next inclusive, from nine o'clock A. M. to five o'clock P. M.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be directed to indicate upon the lists of voters any names found thereon of persons who shall not have paid before November 4 a tax assessed upon them within two years, pursuant to law; the expense to be charged to the Registration of Voters.

Ordered, That warrants be issued for meetings of the legal voters of this city, in their respective wards, on Tuesday, the fourth day of November next, at 8 o'clock A. M., then and there to give in their ballots for a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary, Treasurer and Receiver-General, Auditor and Attorney-General of the Commonwealth; also for Councilors for Council Districts two, three and four; six Senators for Suffolk District, and two Senators for the first and second Norfolk Districts; thirty-three Representatives for Suffolk County, and six for Norfolk County; also for a Register of Deeds, for a Register of Probate and Insolvency for Suffolk County; also to notify the voters of those wards of this city comprising the Third Congressional District, to bring in their votes for a member of the present Congress, in place of William Whiting, deceased. All the foregoing to be voted for on one ballot. The polls to be kept open until 4½ o'clock P. M.

ANNEXATION.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court at its next session, to change the boundary line between Newton and Boston, so as to include the Chestnut Hill Reservoir within the limits of the city of Boston.

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court at its next session, to annex to the city of Boston as much of the town of Brookline as lies north of the southerly line of Brighton avenue, in order to form a connection between Brighton and the old portion of the city. Severally read once.

THE FIRE COMMISSION.

Alderman Quincy, from the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department, to whom was recommitted the reports and ordinances on that subject, with instructions to report the majority ordinance in a new draught and legal form, approved by the City Solicitor, reported that, having waited upon the City Solicitor, and requested that officer's opinion as to the power of the City Council to delegate to a commission the power to fix the numbers of the Fire Department, the Solicitor replied that, although under one construction of the statute such power would seem to exist, yet that it was in his opinion safest to assume that it did not. On examination of the ordinance he found no other legal objections thereto. Under the instructions received, the committee do not feel authorized to change the ordinance any further than is necessary to remove the legal objections thereto, and, therefore, report the same with the necessary alteration in the first section. They would, however, recommend the adoption of the following amendments:

To insert after the words chief-engineer, in the first section, the words "a superintendent of Fire Alarms."

To fill the blank before the words "assistant-engineers," with the number.

To fill the blank before the word "men" at the end of the first section, with the number.

To insert after section nine a new section a new section as follows, and to make the last section eleven.

"Section 10. There shall be appointed annually in the month of January a joint committee of the City Council on the Fire Department, consisting of two members of the Board of Aldermen and three members of the Common Council. It shall be the duty of said committee to examine as often as once in each month the records and accounts of the Board of Commissioners on the Fire Department, and also to examine all applications for appropriations for said department, and report thereon to the City Council."

To add to the last section of the ordinance the following words:

"All officers and members of the department at the time of such repeal shall hold their several offices until their successors are appointed."

[Accompanying the report was a printed copy of the ordinance with the proposed amendments in italics.]

Alderman Quincy said he had two other amendments to offer, which did not come from the committee, but which commended themselves to the committee.

Alderman Stebbins called attention to the fact that the ordinance provided that the number of men in the department "shall" be 550.

Alderman Quincy replied that it was providing a maximum, and the commissioners could appoint that number if they chose.

At the request of Alderman Stebbins, who desired to ascertain the number of men employed in the department at present, the subject was laid on the table for half an hour, and at the end of that time its consideration was resumed on motion of Alderman Quincy.

The Board voted to accept the report of the committee, and on motion of Alderman Stebbins the ordinance was taken up section by section.

The first section was read.

Alderman Stebbins—The present number of men in the department is 521, and there are ten telegraph operators. There will have to be twelve more employed for a new company, which will make the whole number 543.

Alderman Power—I don't propose to delay the Board any length of time, as I suppose the public and the Board think we have already had too much discussion of this subject. Still, I cannot allow this ordinance appointing a commission to pass without saying a few words in addition to what I have already said. I have already stated my views pretty clearly, and I think the gentlemen who comprise this Board will at least concede that I am honest and my intentions are good in the stand I have taken here in relation to every subject that has come before us. I have opposed this commission from the beginning because I did not think it was for the interest of the city of Boston to inaugurate such a system. I believe that it is a bad system; that it has proved bad in every city where it has been inaugurated; that its results have been corrupting in every place where it has been adopted. I have on former occasions stood up here in opposition to what seemed to be public pre-sure, and I did not have to live a great while to receive public indorsement of the stand I took. I trust that I may not have to live long to find that I have been mistaken and that the adoption of a commission may prove all that its best friends hope it will. Yet, however great the temptation to be popular and to vote on the side that seems popular, the sacrifice would be so very great to me that I don't think I could be repaid in this world, and I certainly would stand a poor chance of being repaid in the next. I cannot vote for it, and I wish I could prevail on members of this Board to go with me to defeat the adoption of a commission, because I sincerely believe that Boston will be better off without one. It does not follow that the system of government which is absolutely necessary in New York is suitable for Boston. Therefore I hope the adoption of this first clause will not be indorsed by this Board.

Alderman Clark moved that section one be adopted. Alderman Power called for the yeas and nays and the section was adopted—yeas 8, nays 4—as follows: Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy, Stebbins—8.

Nays—Aldermen Cutter, Emery, Power, Sayward—4.

Section two was read by the Chairman.

Alderman Hulbert moved to amend by inserting after the word "May" the words "the persons so appointed shall devote their time to the duties of their office, and shall not actively engage in any other business."

Alderman Quincy—I wish the Alderman would define what he supposes will be covered by the words "actively engage in any other business." If he means that the commissioners shall make this the business of their lives I will go for the amendment. But if he means that a man shall not be an executor or trustee, by which he might make some money, I think it would be too much to ask. I presume it is intended that the duties of the commissioners shall be paramount.

Alderman Hulbert—I mean more than that. I want men who are going to attend to the duty; I mean that this shall be a man's business just as much as it is the business of other persons in other branches of the City Government, such as the Auditor or Treasurer. If a man has property, this doesn't prevent him from attending to it.

Alderman Power—I hope the amendment will pass. If we are going to have a commission let us have a good one; but I don't see how you can have it if the commissioners are allowed to carry on any other business. I thought this of the greatest importance when the Board of Health was established. I think the great benefits which were expected from the Board of Health have certainly been defeated by the changing of this clause. If the Board of Health has not met the best expectations of everybody, I think to that alone can be traced the cause. I hope, in this case, there will be no such loopholes left, and the commissioners will be required to give their whole time to the business. As the gentleman has said, the proper definition of that would be to give their whole time to the city, as the Auditor, Treasurer or Superintendent of Streets do.

The amendment was carried, and the section, as amended, was adopted.

Section three was read and adopted.

Section four was read.

Alderman Quincy moved to amend by inserting after the word "apparatus," in the tenth line, the words "to establish a fire patrol by detail from the department which shall render service in connection with the police and the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings."

Alderman Stebbins—I like the amendment, but would prefer to have the detail from the permanent force of the department. There might be a clashing of interest if such detail were made from the members of the department not permanently employed. I move to amend by making it the "permanent men" of the department. I wish to give the permanent men something to do; otherwise they will be wandering about the streets or sitting in the engine houses all day.

Alderman Gaffield asked if the gentleman noticed that it means that the detail is to be from the members of the department.

Alderman Stebbins—I want it to read definitely "from the permanent men in the department." It is well known that in the last three weeks we have organized three companies and these men have nothing to do but assist in putting out fires.

Alderman Quincy—The idea of the committee was not to tie the hands of the commissioners by stating from whom the patrol should be made. If they see fit to detail from the permanent men, they may. We mean simply to say "detail from the department" so that they shall not have to go outside for another force, and we mean to leave their hands free.

Alderman Stebbins—The Alderman forgets that the men who are not permanently employed are only paid so much per year to run to fires. It looks too much as if it were to establish an independent patrol force. I can easily see where there would be a clashing of interests.

Alderman Quincy—I fail to see how the words can be twisted in that way.

Alderman Gibson—I hope the amendment will prevail. Men sitting about engine houses all day will not attend to fires as well as if they have something to do. Keep their bones and muscles at work and you will have men fit for service. In my opinion that is the cause of so many horses breaking down. Men want something to do, to work ten hours a day to keep their muscles right. I had rather have fifty men working ten hours a day than a hundred men doing nothing—they will work better when called on. We can't expect to get any but permanent men for this patrol without an additional expenditure.

Alderman Quincy—I am not very particular about this. No doubt it is what the commissioners will do. They would no doubt use the permanent men first, but if there is occasion to use more I don't want to tie their hands so that they shall not use any other men of the department.

Alderman Gibson—We don't propose to tie their hands. We have tied their hands in certain things; why not have it left just as fair as we have in other things.

Aldermen—I think the amendment a proper one. It settles the question in regard to what is expected by the city of permanent men. I hope it will pass.

Alderman Clark—If we are going to have commissioners that we can trust, we may as well leave this in their hands as to tie them up. They have the privilege of employing the men, and it is in their power to make this entire five hundred and fifty men permanent if they so desire, and then they can have that number on patrol if they wish. Now, I understand that we intend to have forty or fifty permanent men in the city proper. It may be necessary, as it was in November, to have a certain number permanently employed. I believe in Alderman Hulbert's amendment, but not in so tying the commissioners' hands more than any member of this Board would wish if he should become a member of the commission. The commissioners have it in their power to make the entire department permanent, if they see fit.

Alderman Stebbins—They are limited to the amount appropriated for the current year. They could not make all permanent men without making an additional appropriation of four hundred thousand dollars. The number of permanent men already appointed will exhaust the present appropriation.

Alderman Clark—I admit all that. Still it does not prevent them from making the men permanent; but it rests with the City Government to make the appropriation. It is left to the commission to make a greater or less number as is required.

Alderman Quincy—It is desirable to have as few permanent men as possible, but it is necessary to have the patrol.

Alderman Clark—If the commissioners did not first use these permanent men for the patrol I should consider they were not doing their duty, and it would be necessary to dismiss them summarily.

Alderman Gibson—I would like to know how much of the city it is desired to patrol, and how long it is intended to keep them out.

Alderman Gaffield—I hope the chairman of the committee will yield the point and let us pass the amendment in the shape requested by the gentleman from Ward 8. Everything has gone on so harmoniously so far.

Alderman Quincy—I would like the sense of the Board upon it, and will be just as harmonious if it is decided against me.

Alderman Gibson—I suppose it would be an object to exercise the men, who ought not to be kept shut up in the house. They should be made useful about buildings in which they are to work during fires. It is necessary for them to have exercise every day. Now, to what extent is it intended to patrol the city? If it is going to be done throughout the whole city, we have got to employ the department during the whole year, and the people in their turn will have to pay the bill.

Alderman Stebbins—The regular detail would do duty in the same way as the police. The men now employed are in the burnt district and have already done efficient service. It don't seem necessary to have them in any but the business portion of the city. I called upon the Inspector of Buildings and asked his advice on the subject, and he stated that such a patrol from the Fire Department could be made very efficient; he could then do with less men than now. It is well known that most of the men employed in the other companies are mechanics and well informed on such subjects.

Alderman Stebbins's amendment was carried, and the amendment of Alderman Quincy, as thus amended, was adopted.

Alderman Sayward—I presume it is the desire of the committee to have the ordinance as perfect as possible, and I think there should be an amendment to section four, where it describes the duties of the commissioners in regard to purchasing apparatus and supplies. A great many horses will have to be bought, and there is no provision for buying them. I move to amend by inserting after the word carriages, the word "horses."

Alderman Stebbins suggested that it should be put in after the word purchase.

Alderman Power suggested that the horses be put before the carriages, as that is usually the proper place for them.

Alderman Sayward had no objection to the place, only he wanted to get the horses in, for it appeared to him that in this matter the Committee on Fire Department have been shaving the city more than in anything else.

Alderman Sayward withdrew his first motion and moved that the word "horses" be inserted after the word "purchase" which was carried, and the section (4) was adopted.

Sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, were adopted without debate or amendment.

Section 11 being under consideration, Alderman Stebbins noticed that it repealed all the other ordinances in force and the rules for governing the department. Of course it would be some time before the commissioners get into working order, and I move an amendment to the section, "and until otherwise ordered by the Fire Commissioners, shall be subject by the same rules and regulations now in force governing the officers and members of the Fire Department."

The amendment was adopted.

Alderman Quincy moved to amend still further by adding at the end of Alderman Stebbins's amendment, "and the present Joint Standing Committee of the City Council on the Fire Department shall perform the duties named in section 10 during the remainder of this municipal year."

The amendment was adopted.

The section was still further amended, on motion of Alderman Stebbins, by inserting after the word "officers," "at the salaries established by the City Council."

Section 11 was then adopted as amended and the ordinance as amended was passed.

Alderman Quincy moved a reconsideration, hoping it would not prevail. Lost.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That the Committee on Salaries be requested to report an order establishing the salaries of the permanent members of the Fire Department recently appointed; and also an order establishing the salaries of the Commissioners on the Fire Department.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, it was voted that the ordinance which had just passed be printed as amended before being sent to the other branch.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert—

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to the city treasurer, for extra clerk hire on account of the collection of taxes for the present year, a sum not exceeding $3000; said item to be charged to the appropriation for Salaries.

REVISION OF THE CITY CHARTER.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the report, with order for appointment of a commission of five suitable persons to report upon a revision of a city charter (City Doc. No. 115) was taken from the table.

Alderman Quincy—I propose merely to very briefly notice a few of the changes to which attention is called in the report. If this order contemplated an abandonment of our own private judgment in any shape or manner no one would be more against it than I. But the recommendations of the commissioners are to be laid before us to take just such action upon as we like. We can take as much as we like or none at all. Alderman Quincy read from the report of a previous committee on this subject the recommendation for longer terms for city officers, and continued, "This is the third or fourth committee who have strongly recommended this thing, but for some reason it has always failed. Another subject is a metropolitan board of works. The gentlemen who signed the minority must have forgotten that the Mayor recommended such a board as this. The Mayor also thinks that the incumbent of that office should be relieved from making the police appointments. I can easily understand that. At the close of the late war I was appointed military mayor of New Orleans, and had to do something to check the crowds who sought appointments on the police. But the regulations then adopted could hardly be done under the peaceable administration of City Hall. Alderman Quincy read from the majority report the recommendations relative to separating the duties of the Mayor and Board of Aldermen. I might have added, he continued, following out the analogy, by extending the appointing power of the Mayor to some officers who are now elected. I agree with the Alderman from the Highland District in regard to the manner in which some of the elections are conducted. If there are half a dozen men after a place, I feel it my duty to see who is the best man for the position. But if I am one of seventy-six, and an election is sprung upon me in a hurry, I take the word of the next man to me, who says his brother went to school with the candidate. But the Mayor must take the responsibility. The public know who appoints worthless men, but not who votes for them. I say of this matter that I fail to see any argument against it.

[Alderman Gibson in the chair.]

Alderman Cutter—I have a seat in the Committee on Ordinances. The gentleman signs his report "For the Committee," but not for the majority of the committee. I have never had this matter committed to me, and I think it is due to this committee that it be recommitted. I don't think we should adopt a report of a committee without its having been adopted by the committee. We didn't see any argument for changing the city charter. If we appoint the commission we have got to pay them. As we enlarge the city we shall of course have to amend the ordinances, but I don't believe in wiping out the charter prepared by Judge Shaw, and I don't see any reason for appointing a commission to change the ordinances, because there is no reason why there should be a change at this particular time. The only reason I have heard was that the Committee on Paving should be a joint committee. Now I don't believe we can carry eight men around every day to look after our duties. Such a committee would be cumbersome, useless and paralyzed. It is due to the members of this committee that this subject should be recommitted to them, and they should have a chance to read the report and understand it before it is produced here.

Alderman Quincy—This has been twice recommitted, the last time for the purpose of allowing a member to prepare a minority report. It was distinctly understood that no action should be taken to change the majority report. A member of the minority suggested that the only thing he wished was to prepare a minority report. The meeting was called, and the gentleman was there with his report, but did not read it. The chairman said he would prepare the views of the majority. It has been discussed over and over again before the committee, and no possible good can come of its being recommitted. It is a subject which calls for immediate action.

Alderman Cutter—The members were desirous of having the report read to them. If the majority of the committee think the same as the report, they should have the opportunity to sign it. It is due to them that it be recommitted. We made a report as a minority. I move to recommit the report to the Committee on Ordinances.

Alderman Stebbins—I shall vote for that after the statement made, out of courtesy to the committee.

Alderman Quincy—I fail to see how courtesy comes in. The matter was recommitted to allow the minority to make a report. The chairman stated that he would put in a majority report, as there was to be a minority report. If requested to present it before the committee he would have done so. He considered himself authorized by the majority to put their views in the best shape he could.

Alderman Stebbins inquired if the members of the committee ever saw the majority report.

Alderman Bigelow—I did not see it, but concurred with the committee and would have signed it had I seen it.

Alderman Sayward inquired if it was n't customary to sign as the majority or the minority.

Alderman Clark—It is nothing more than just to the committee to have this recommitted. The majority report has been put in here signed by the chairman "for the committee." Now I do not understand that the other members of the committee of this Board were aware of the purport of that report. I am in favor of a commission to revise the city charter. I think we have outgrown the old one; very many things need changing and I shall vote for a commission to see if there is any necessity for revising or altering the present charter. I have no doubt that when the present city charter was made it was the best that could be made for the city as it then was. But were Judge Shaw alive at the present time I doubt very much if he would write a charter for the city as it stands today.

The additions which have taken place are good reasons why it should be revised. The Board of Aldermen, the Council and the School Committee must remain as they now are until the charter is changed. It is for the commission to look over the charter and see what improvements can be made for the city as it now exists. Therefore, I shall vote for the commission, but as an act of courtesy to the entire committee we should recommit this report that they may report in a new draught.

Alderman Quincy—I had supposed that the vote of the committee was the vote of the committee; and if the majority vote to request its chairman to present their views he can do so. There is only one report. The minority put in their report, and it might have changed the minds of the majority if it had been read to them.

The Board voted to recommit the report.

[Alderman Cutter again in the chair.]

CONGRESS SQUARE.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the street leading from Congress street to Kilby street, now known as Lindall street, be hereafter called and known as Exchange place, and that the street leading from Devonshire street to Congress street, now known as Exchange place, be hereafter considered a part of Congress square.

OBSCENE PUBLICATIONS AND EXHIBITIONS.

Alderman Hulbert—I have two orders to offer, the object of which will commend itself to every good citizen and member of this Board. It is probably something that has occurred to all of us as citizens. I refer first to the class of newspapers that are for sale at the railway stations and on the streets, so that children cannot pass without seeing them. They are exposed for sale on almost every street. One of the orders refers to the matter of theatrical exhibitions in this city, which are, in the estimation of every decent man, of a nature wholly impure, indecent and directly calculated to hurt public morals. In reference to the matter of objectionable newspapers and prints, there is a statute on the subject; but in its adaptation to the city, I thought, perhaps, there might be some additional legislation needed. I refer to this because I think it is a proper subject to come up here. We spend time here upon matters referring to the preservation of the public health. This has reference to the preservation of public morals. Having had experience during the past year with public men, I know there is no greater cause for alarm in the city than this. This vice commences to rot a man in the centre, and when it appears on the surface he falls in. I feel it is a perfectly proper subject to bring up here, and I, therefore, offer the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be requested to consider and report what additional legislation, if any, is needed to effectually prohibit in this city the sale or distribution of newspapers, prints, pictures or other things manifestly tending to the corruption of the morals of youth.

Alderman Hulbert—In reference to theatrical matters I mean to say that this board is directly responsible. We hold the responsibility if we license exhibitions which are vile and corrupting to youth, and I for one don't propose to take that responsibility. I therefore offer the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Licenses be requested to consider the propriety of inserting in all licenses issued by this board for theatrical performances, or other performances or exhibitions of a like character, a condition that no performance or exhibition which is manifestly impure and directly tending to the corruption of the public morals, shall be permitted.

Alderman Hulbert—It is known to you, gentlemen, that in our own city during the past two or three years there have been exhibitions that the public sense would be shocked at. It is one of those things that this Board should decide so that it shall not again be repeated.

The orders were passed.

Alderman Quincy gave notice that he intended at the next meeting to bring up the report of the Committee on Armories.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
OCTOBER 16, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at half-past seven o'clock, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALBERMEN.

Third report of superintendent of printing. (City Doc. No. 114.) Filed.

The following papers received concurrent action: Invitation of Post 7, G. A. R., to attend dedication of monument at Mount Hope Cemetery. Accepted. Petitions and remonstrances referred.

Recommitment of report of Committee on Revision of City Charter (City Doc. No. 115), to Committee on Ordinances.

Report and order to omit the eighth condition in an agreement to convey to Blake & Rand certain land on East Dedham street, on terms named in said order. Passed.

Order for Committee on Legislative Matters to consider what additional legislation should be had in regard to the sale of immoral prints. Passed.

The following orders were read once:

Order to allow not exceeding $3000 for extra clerk hire in treasurer's office.

Order for Mayor to petition next Legislature for establishment of a State normal school in this city.

Order to allow expenditure of $75 for repairs for armorv of Company K, First Regiment, M. V. M., in addition to the amount appropriated for 1872.

THE FIRE COMMISSION.

The report of the Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department was accepted and the amended ordinance to establish a fire department (City Doc., No. 119) was read by the President on motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12.

The question was on giving the ordinance a second reading.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—This matter has been before us a considerable time, and as I suppose every gentleman's opinion is fixed, a discussion would change no one. The ordinance has been before the City Solicitor and approved by him. I hope the matter will be settled tonight, and I therefore move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered, and the ordinance was passed to a second reading.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 moved to suspend the rules that the ordinance may take its several readings tonight.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—It is impossible to conceive of any more curious motion than that made by my esteemed friend, a member of this committee. We have before us a matter of immense importance, and after very lengthy and elaborate discussion, this Council has passed upon adversely to the ordinance before us. And although the Council, after very careful and mature deliberation, and after lengthy discussion, has passed upon this matter adversely, one member gets up here, makes a little speech and moves the previous question before anybody can say a word about it, and then another moves the suspension of the rules whereby it can take all its readings at this time, just as though it were a matter of no earthly concern to us, to be passed over as a mere bagatelle. We are therefore asked to pass upon a matter of the utmost importance to the city.

We are asked to change the entire system of our City Government; to whiffle around and change our minds; to swallow our convictions; vote for what we don't believe, and do what ought to make a laughing stock of us. Now, I suppose, Mr. President, that when this Council, after mature deliberation and careful discussion, passed upon this matter, they passed upon it according to their convictions. I suppose that a majority at that time, if a majority ever did, passed upon it according to their convictions. For, sir, every influence that could be brought to bear in the other direction had been used. Every person of weak knees and white liver had succumbed. I don't allude to all the gentlemen who voted with the minority at that time, because I know that some from the start had their convictions fixed. But I do know, Mr. President, that if ever there was an instance in which an organized body of men, self constituted, stood forth and undertook by the whip and spur to drive another body of men who had jurisdiction over a matter they were discussing, and the only body that had jurisdiction over it, that was the case with regard to this question.

I say an organized body of men, Mr. President, because I find it frankly stated in the Daily Advertiser. In an issue some time since it is stated that "for nearly four months an organized effort has been made to change the management of the Fire Department. In this work are enlisted the leading merchants, the largest taxpayers, and many of our most respected citizens." An organized body of men! An organized effort made for the purpose of accomplishing this great change. At one time came out an article as if it were written by somebody who held the whip over the heads of the members of this board, headed, "No dodging." No dodging. Here is the whip; no dodging. And when finally a compromise was offered, the whip comes again—"No compromise!" That is the language; that is the leading item of the article. When it is before this body every Thursday, out comes an article; and when it is before the Board of Aldermen every Monday, out comes an article reminding them that they must mind their business and take care of themselves.

And the threat is beld out that if they don't act according to the behests of the writer they wont have the chance of appearing in these halls any more. Now, that is a fact, Mr. President. An organized body of men start out and pay two cents apiece for petitioners—that is the price—two cents apiece for petitioners, and then the members of the City Government, after they have got petitioners at two cents each, say, "We have got a great quantity of petitioners; the people are all in one direction"; mind, "No dodging." "No compromise." "An organized effort to accomplish this purpose"; be very careful. Now, then, Mr. President, I for one, at any and all times and on any and all questions, should be pleased to hear any argument in favor of any proposition, and if I could see any new light, if I could see the proposition differently from what I had seen it before, I should be proud to retract any previous words or convictions, and acknowledge that I had seen new light.

At the same time, Mr. President, I should feel ashamed of myself, sent here under oath to pass upon every question according to my own best judgment, i., without argument and without reason, I should yield to the whip and spur. If I should be told that I could not come here again, severe, terribly severe as the penalty would be, I still should be strongly inclined to follow out my own opinion, according to the dictates of my own conscience, and feel that no writer of any newspaper should compel me to act according to his wish in a matter of this importance. Now, then, Mr. President, to come to the question before us. It is on a motion to suspend the rules. I don't think the rules ever should be suspended, except in the clearest case, or in matters of trivial importance.

I don't know how the members of this Council view this matter, but in my judgment this is a matter of very great importance, of no less importance than inaugurating a great change in the way of doing our city business, because we are already told that other commissions are expected to follow—a board of public works, a commission on the Police Department, and the Lord knows what not, until it will be very difficult to find out where to put a finger upon anything, or to find where we are, where there is any responsibility, or how the city is governed. But the project is to start in a direction the end of which we cannot exactly foresee. Now while this matter is before us the suggestion is on the one hand to shut off discussion on this question, and on the other to pass it all at once and take no further time to deliberate upon it. On that motion it is supposed that the majority of the Council are to turn around and change their minds under the pressure which is brought against them.

Now the great claim that is made is that somehow or other the Fire Department has proved entirely inefficient. Now that has been challenged heretofore, and I yet have to learn in what respect, with reference to anything that a commission is called upon to do, that the Fire Department, as a department, is deficient. It is said that the system is an inefficient system; that it produces inefficiency. Why, Mr. President, I made up my mind, the other day, to go over again the report of the learned commission—and I think it was a proper commission—to investigate the cause and management of the great fire. That commission stated what has been stated and reiterated again and again, that with reference to the fire apparatus of the city and the men composing its department, there was no fault to be found. The men were unexceptionable, and the apparatus was, on the whole, excellent. The only question with reference to what was referred to them was that of the management of the fire. One criticism was upon the dangerous character of the buildings.

I wish to go over this in detail, in order that this City Government and the city of Boston may know exactly what has been done under this most efficient of all systems. Now, then, it is claimed that the architecture was dangerous. That, certainly, was not the fault of the Fire Department. If, Mr. President, there is any body of men that is responsible for the dangerous character of the architecture of the city of Boston, it was the fire underwriters of the city of Boston, who insured this dangerous property in preference to any other. They gave it character, value, by their indorsement. If you add to them many of the business men of Boston, they lie in the same bed—they are guilty of the same crime, if it is a crime; it is not for them now to say we are entirely guiltless, and are going to throw the fault upon the Fire Department.

But it was said there was a delay in the arrival of engines. That might have been a fault—it was a fault. But, as you look back to that time, what man of all those who would undertake to grapple with it, is quite certain that he would have done more than was done in that regard. I think the man that would be so positive that he would have done more is not an exceedingly modest man. The next criticism was the want of water. But the want of water, so far as it is concerned, belongs, if to anything, to a commission. But I don't propose to criticise anybody with reference to that. It is no criticism to be made upon the Fire Department. It was stated that there were more engines wanted. That has been remedied, if more were wanted. But I think there is no person in the city of Boston who would say it would be wise to reorganize the Fire Department for the purpose of being in a condition to combat only with a fire like that of the 9th of November, to be able to float such a fire when it got fairly under way.

Nobody expects that we are going to have a Fire Department that can put out in the twinkling of an eye a fire extending over one hundred buildings of dangerous architecture. You expect the department to stop it before it gets there. Then there are a quantity of miscellaneous recommendations made by the commission. Now, then, what has been done? Why, sir, every one of these evils has been cared for, sliding valves have been put in the gas pipes; streets have been immensely widened at an enormous expense; the architecture of the city has undergone a great change for the better; additional engines have been procured, so that the department is in better condition and stronger than it has been before, and the danger from conflagration has been immensely diminished. Under such circumstances, it seems to me we are not in condition to be called upon to pass anything under the suspension of the rules. That is the last thing that should be done.

We are in condition to take time, and I trust that the members of the Council, seeing themselves under necessity for no strange or undue haste, will look the matter fairly in the face and consider it calmly and carefully, and decide what on the whole is best to be done. It seems to me, Mr. President, that while we have a system which is capable of being made perfect, and that would in my judgment give us all the efficiency to be found in a new system, it seems to me it is much better to retain it than to start off on a new programme, establish a new board, and wait for experience to perfect it. It seems to me that the proper way is to take care of the old; improve it; stand by it; do everything we can to perfect it. At any rate, I trust the Council is not ready to let this be passed upon at this time under a suspension of the rules.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—If any apology were needed for the extraordinary course that the majority has taken, I think it has been given in the fact that the gentleman has been unable to bring up a single argument in favor of his position. Moreover, this course has been justified by that which the minority took when the matter first came up in the Council, when he succeeded in forcing their ordinance through two readings and sending it to the Board of Aldermen. If we take a leaf out of their book the gentleman has no reason to complain. Moreover, the gentleman says a majority of the Council have decided against the ordinance. But at the last meeting he and his friend from Ward 5 made a test vote on striking out the instructions to the committee, and the result showed that a majority were in favor of this ordinance. Some plan must be adopted. The citizens are anxious, a majority of the Council are in favor of this ordinance, and the question is, whether we shall be worried out, as has been done on the revision of the city charter. That subject was brought up at the beginning of the year, and has been delayed again and again. Those same tactics seem to have been tried on us now. It is the duty of the friends of this ordinance to take the final vote on its adoption tonight. I therefore move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered, and Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 asked for the ruling of the Chair on the question.

The President stated that the question was on the suspension of the rules, and on that the yeas and nays had been called for.

The vote was as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Barnes, Bicknell, Blackmar, Bleiler, Boardman, Brackett, Burditt, Caton, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Lamb, McCue, Morse, Page, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Shepard, Tower, Train, West, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods—36.

Nays—Messrs. Anderson, Brennan, Burt, Collius, Dacey, Dean, Doherty, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hughes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Loring, Marston, Martin, McKenney, Thacher, Upham, Warren, Wells, Weston, Woodward—24.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Bowles, Madden, Mahan—3.

The motion to suspend not having received a two-thirds vote, was lost and the ordinance was laid over.

The order for Committee on Salaries to fix salaries of permanent men already appointed in Fire Department,—also, of the proposed Fire Commissioners, was, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, laid on the table.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Report and order to procure and place in the new schoolhouse, on the site of the old Roxbury City Hall, a suitable tablet bearing the name of the school. Passed.

Report and order to provide temporary accommodations for primary pupils in the Bigelow-School District. Passed.

Order to cancel sale of Old Mather Schoolhouse, provided it can be done by the payment of $2000. Passed—34 to 11. A motion to reconsider, by Mr. Flynn, was lost.

PETITIONS REFERRED.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 presented two petitions from Company A, First Regiment, M. V. M., for additional appropriation for rental and fitting up of armory. On motion of Mr. Blackmar, they were referred to the Joint Committee on Armories.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Perkins, from the Committee on Common, reported the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars in grading and improving Washington park; said sum to be in addition to the appropriation heretofore made for that purpose and to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Mr. Perkins explained that the committee had not exceeded the appropriation heretofore made for Washington park, but of the original amount $2500 was devoted to some other purpose, and this order was to carry out the original intention. It is desirable that the work be done as soon as possible.

On motion of Mr. Perkins, the rules were suspended, and the order was passed.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11, from the Joint Committee on Claims, to whom were severally referred the petitions of John Mullen to be paid for damages to his team and harness caused by an accident at Federal-street Bridge, and Henry P. Tallant for damages to his property on account of the location of the smallpox hospital on Marcella street, submitted reports recommending that the petitioners have leave to withdraw. Severally accepted.

Mr. Page of Ward 9, from the Joint Committee on Armories, to whom were referred the petitions of Colonel Finan, Ninth Regiment, First Company of Cadets, and Company F, First Regiment, submitted reports recommending the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding three hundred and seventy-five dollars in fitting up the headquarters of the Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., at No. 562 Washington street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding four hundred and fifty dollars in repairing and furnishing the armory occupied by Company F, First Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at the junction of Warren and Palmer streets; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Ordered, That on and after the first of October, 1873, until otherwise ordered, there be allowed and paid for rent of armory occupied by the First Company of Cadets, M. V. M., at 99 Tremont street, the sum of twelve hundred dollars per annum; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

The orders were severally read once.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Committee on Public Buildings, reported that there will be required to complete Engine House No. 12 the sum of $3500, $1400 of which is the difference in price between the original contractor and the present builders; $1100 for heating apparatus, $400 for edgestones and paving driveway; $350 for hoisting apparatus; $175 for fixtures; making a total of $3425. The committee recommended the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered. That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund an amount not exceeding $3500, the same to be added to the amount already authorized for Engine House No. 12.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 asked for an explanation. He had been told that the expenditure had been already made, without a particle of authority, and now at this late day the Council is called on to pass an order for it. He called for details of the expenditure.

Mr. Bicknell replied that they were pretty clearly stated in the report.

Mr. Shaw said he only asked whether the expenditures had been made. If they have or have not, the committee can say so and he would be satisfied. Such an explanation was due to the Council. Mr. Shaw moved to lay the report and order on the table.

The motion was defeated, and the order was passed to a second reading and laid over.

Mr. McKenney of Ward 1, from the Joint Committee on East Boston Ferries, reported on the petition of Joseph B. Blanchard and other police officers, to be allowed to pass over the ferries free of tolls, that it appears that since the ferries came into the possession of the city tickets have been furnished from time to time to such of the officers connected with the station at East Boston and the Harbor Station, as were called upon to pass over the ferries in the discharge of their official duties. It is proper that all members of the police should be furnished with tickets at the expense of the Police Appropriation, whenever they have occasion to go to or from East Boston in the performance of their official duties; and the Committee on Police have authority to furnish such tickets without any action on the part of the City Council. The members of the department stationed at East Boston are obliged to use the ferries so frequently that it would be more convenient to furnish general passes to them than it would be to furnish single tickets, and the accompanying order is presented to authorize the directors to furnish such passes at the expense of the Police Department. There is no more reason for supplying the members of the Police Department generally with free passes to use when they are not on duty than there is for supplying passes to all the employes of the city:

Ordered, That the directors for the East Boston Ferries be instructed to furnish passes over said ferries to the Chief-of-Police, the Deputy-Chief-of-Police and the members of the Police Department attached to the station in East Boston; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for Police.

The order was read once.

ENGINE HOUSE IN WARD FOURTEEN.

On motion of Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, the report and orders to furnish steam heating apparatus and a fence for the yard at engine house, Ward 14, at an estimated cost of $3000; and for a transfer from the Reserved Fund to pay therefor, if not exceeding that sum, were taken from the table.

The question being on giving the order a second reading, Mr. Bicknell made a statement of estimates for the details of the expenditure: Heating apparatus $1000; fence, $900; hoisting apparatus for hose tower, $350; block stone for paving the driveway, $300; gas fixtures, $175; edgestones, $125; total, $2950.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said if Mr. Bicknell would move an amendment to the order covering the details, he would vote for it; as the order read then he could not, as it was for work that according to the gentleman's own estimate would cost only $2000. It is a duty to those voting away the people's money that they should know what it is for.

Mr. Bicknell had no objection to the amendment.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the order was laid on the table, and, subsequently being taken up, Mr. Bicknell offered an amendment to insert after the words "heating apparatus" the words "hoisting apparatus for hose tower, block stone for paving, driving and laying same, gas fixtures, edgestones in brick sidewalk in Quincy street."

The amendment was adopted, and on motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14, the order was specially assigned for half-past eight o'clock next Thursday evening.

MASON-STREET ENGINE HOUSE.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings be requested to consider and report upon the expediency of repealing an order which passed this Council September 4, 1873, to make alteration on the building formerly occupied by the Natural History Society on Mason street, to accommodate a steam fire engine, etc., and also to consider and report as to whether a more suitable location cannot be procured in the immediate vicinity.

Mr. Page—I have heard it stated that a much better location than the one contemplated by the passage of the previous order can be found, and which it would be better to use than the portion of this schoolhouse, from which considerable furniture has got to be moved. The passage of this order will not delay matters at all, as the plans will not be ready for a week and the committee can consider the subject and report in that time.

The order was read twice and passed.

TAKING GRAVEL FROM LONG ISLAND.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Joint Committee on Boston Harbor inquire into and report under what authority, to what extent and under what circumstances, gravel has been taken from Long Island in Boston Harbor and furnished to the city of Boston during the present year.

Mr. Shaw—I think it is due to the Council to give some reason for this order, I am a member of the Harbor Committee. At the first meeting of that committee in the month of January I had a respectful invitation to attend and did so. The first question raised was that the chairman of the committee be authorized to approve the bills. [Laughter.] I had been told that such was the custom at City Hall, but to me it did not seem to be democratic, nor to partake much of the principles of justice and right, which the people who send us here have a right to demand of us. There are gentlemen who were present at that meeting who will, if they remember rightly, recollect that I questioned the propriety of such action. It was there stated that all it proposed was to authorize the chairman to approve the payroll of the day laborers on the ice. I stated that if that was all I should not object. At a subsequent meeting the subject of taking gravel from Long Island in the harbor was brought before us, considered and passed upon. It was there stated that a Mr. Dunbar held a permit to take gravel from that island. It was the unanimous verdict of that committee that the permit should be taken away. From that day to this I never have heard of it from the committee or anybody else; but it occurred to me that it required looking into. I find no action on it in the records of the committee. Yesterday, in reply to a note, I received a letter from the Harbor Master. Mr. Shaw read the letter of the Harbor Master, which stated that gravel had been taken from Long Island to the amount of ten or twelve thousand tons, by Richardson & Co., contractors, who conveyed it to T wharf, from June 1st till September 15th. Mr. Shaw then read a certified copy order of the Board of Aldermen of January 30th, 1871, giving the permit to remove gravel from Long Island, and another of May 13th, 1873, revoking that license. Mr. Shaw said that early in the spring he read in the newspapers an advertisement for parties to make proposals for supplying the city with gravel; it proposed that gravel should be taken outside of Boston Harbor, and he believed he was correctly informed that the contract has been made by a certain party, whose names he did not then know, to supply the city with gravel from outside of Boston Harbor. Yet in the face of this is the communication from the Harbor Master, stating that ten or twelve thousand tons had been taken from Long Island, and supplied to the city of Boston at a certain price. There were contractors who proposed to furnish gravel for the city whose bids were thrown out, and who bid with the distinct understanding that they were to furnish gravel outside of Boston Harbor. The party who received the contract agreed to furnish gravel from outside of the harbor. And that is not the only instance where the city of Boston has done entirely different from the contracts given to people to bid upon. I can cite instances of payments upon just the same principle. It is perfectly well understood that the city and State are interested in the welfare of Boston Harbor; the protection of the harbor is a subject of deep concern to the merchants of Boston, and it has been decided again and again that it is against the interest of Boston to allow gravel to be taken from the harbor. If gravel is to be taken away and the currents and tides are to be affected thereby, it is for the interest of every citizen to know whether the city is to be hoodwinked by making contracts the terms of which are not complied with. I have called attention to this matter because it is of vital importance. We have a Committee on Boston Harbor, and I am aware that the protection of the harbor is left to the Board of Aldermen; but if the committee do not attend to their duties, then I have a right to raise my voice and protest against it. I hope the order will be passed without a dissenting voice.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—It is very true, as the gentleman states, that the Joint Committee on Harbor voted that the license granted to Mr. Dunbar ought to be revoked. Having occasion some time since to go down the harbor, I saw some gravel being taken from Long Island. I was informed by the chairman of the committee that an order had been passed allowing Mr. Dunbar to take gravel from the harbor. I can't understand how it can be, but both the Aldermen on the committee said it was in consequence of a previous order which had never been repealed. Therefore Mr. Dunbar had continued taking the gravel. I don't believe in taking gravel from the harbor, and I do believe in taking whatever action is necessary to protect the harbor.

The order was passed.

PLACED ON FILE.

On motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14, the recommendations of the Joint Standing Committee of the Fire Department (printed City Document No. 107) were taken from the table and placed on file.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the Council adjourned.

F. W. Lincoln et al., for plank sidewalks on portions of Boylston, Berkeley and Clarendon streets.

To the Joint Committee on Health. Charles H. Jenkins et al., that the protracted use of locomotive whistles on the Old Colony Railroad, near Dorchester-street Bridge, may be abated.

M. HAYES & CO.'S STABLE.

The order of notice for M. Hayes & Co. to appear and show cause why the remaining portions of their stable on Berkeley and Appleton streets should not be removed as a nuisance was considered.

In this connection was presented an application from M. Hayes & Co., that the order revoking the permission to build his stable he rescinded, and that permission be granted to rebuild.

The remonstrance of Dexter Smith and seventy-eight others, against the rebuilding of the stable with outside walls of brick, was received.

Alderman Sayward presented the petition of James M. Huse and two hundred other residents of the vicinity, in aid of M. Hayes & Co.'s petition, stating that the stable had never been a nuisance. Alderman Sayward asked that the petitioners might have a hearing before the Board or some committee.

W. A. Field appeared for M. Hayes & Co., and said that a week ago last Saturday morning the stable was greatly damaged by fire, and on the following Monday the first permission to erect the stable, granted nine years ago, was revoked without the knowledge of Mr. Hayes. An order was also passed that he should appear here and show cause why this building should not be removed as a nuisance. This is strictly the question before the Board, but underlying it and forming the main issue was the question whether he should be permitted to rebuild. Mr. Hayes has appeared with a petition signed by over two hundred persons saying that his stable has never been objectionable. The proceeding before the Board had no reference to the stable, but to the dilapidated building. Undoubtedly if any part of that building interferes with the physical comfort of people, the Board have a right to order its removal, and Mr. Hayes can appeal to a jury. During the past week Mr. Hayes would have had this building partially rebuilt had it not been for the order of this Board. If he can be allowed to repair the stable he will remove all the burned parts and replace the walls with brick. He went there some nine years ago, owning a large part of the land, and has been there ever since. The Berkeley-street Church was then there, but these other churches represented in the remonstrance were not. Mr. Hayes's business requires him to keep a large number of horses, and in the opinion of every one there it was never a nuisance, and the two hundred petitioners have no objection to its continuing. It is not likely that that part of Berkeley street between Tremont street and the Providence Railroad bridge will ever be occupied by private dwellings. Everybody knows that the property in the vicinity of the stable must go into business purposes or halls, and everybody also knows that the time has not come yet for deriving a profitable rent from buildings for business purposes there. There is not a place which the community desire to have a stable in more than this. If Mr. Hayes cannot restore it or repair it, his business must go elsewhere. It is a better place for a stable than many others where stables are kept, and ninety-nine out of a hundred people owning property in that vicinity desire to have it continued there for some years at least. Mr. Hayes is willing to tear down all the burned part of the stable that render it a nuisance under the statute, but he wants a hearing before this Board or some proper committee, and will submit evidence that it is a suitable place for a stable. He thinks that the license should not have been taken away without notice. He would have torn it down by this time could he have known what he was to erect in its place.

On motion of Alderman Gasfield, the remonstrants were given an opportunity to be heard.

Charles W. Slaek, chairman of the Standing Committee of the Parker Memorial Meeting House, said he did not quite understand whether this is a final hearing or whether it was to be submitted to a special committee. If the general question is open and the decision is to be made by the Board, the society he represented was ready to put in its statement.

There are several other churches and dwellings interested. Mr. Slack inquired what would be the disposal of the matter.

Mr. Field said Mr. Hayes did not suppose the question of permitting the erection of the stable could come up before the Board, and he had not his witnesses here.

The Chairman stated that the question before the Board was the nuisance; he thought perhaps it would be well for the subject to be laid before the Committee on Health on the part of the Board.

Alderman Sayward said his object in presenting the petition was that it might be heard before a committee, and he moved that it be referred to the Committee on Health on the part of the Board.

The motion was carried.

ORDER OF NOTICE.

On the petition of Ross Manufacturing Company, to locate a steam engine and boiler at 72 Dorchester avenue, an order of notice was issued for a hearing November 10 at 4 P. M.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

Assessments for the construction of common sewers were submitted by the Superintendent of Sewers as follows: Arch street, total, $690 95—to individuals, $518 21; Folsom street, total, $613 50—to individuals, $460 13; Harrison avenue, total, $498 50—to individuals, $249 25; Kingston street, total, $1162 04—to individuals, $871 53; Clifford street, total, $3917 94—to individuals, $2938 46; Eighth street, from Old Harbor street to G street, total, $2488 29—to individuals, $1866 22. Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

CONSTABLES' BONDS APPROVED.

The bonds of James R. Stone, Chase Cole and William P. Cook et al., constables, being duly certified by the City Treasurer, were approved.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to establish the grade of Division street between Dorchester avenue and Foundry street. Passed.

Order to provide for the surface drainage of Walnut avenue and Cobden street. Estimated cost, $2000. Passed.

Orders for Mayor to petition the next Legislature for the annexation of a portion of Brookline to Boston; and also for the annexation to said city of the portion of Chestnut-Hill Reservoir which is located in Newton. Passed.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The following papers from the Common Council received concurrent action:

Petition of Company A First Battalion. Referred in concurrence to Committee on Armories.

Order for Committee on Common, etc., to expend $2500 in grading Washington park, in addition to amount heretofore allowed for that purpose. Passed.

Report, "leave to withdraw" on petitions of Henry P. Tallant for injury to his property from location of Smallpox Hospital in that vicinity, and on petition of John Mullin to be paid for injury to his horse on Federal-street Bridge. Severally accepted.

Order for the Committee on Harbor to inquire and report by what authority gravel is removed from the beaches of Long Island and sold to the city. Passed.

OLD MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

The order to cancel the sale of the Old Mather Schoolhouse, Ward 16, provided it can be done for $2000, came up for concurrence with the Council in its passage.

Alderman Sayward moved that it be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Power—I suppose this question has been thoroughly ventilated and every gentleman understands it. I don't see that the merits of the case have at all altered; on the contrary, the Common Council have seen fit to concur in what seemed to be the will of this Board as tested here by two or three votes on previous occasions. I don't know that it is necessary to say anything more than has been said. I think the interest of the city of Boston demands that we should concur in the passage of the order for the purchase of this building. It was stated before as the best reason why we should purchase it that the building will be needed inside of a year for school purposes. With that fact before us there is nothing left us but to concur with the Council in ordering the purchase of this building for two thousand dollars. I don't know that any one has any new argument why we should not purchase it, and the fact that I have mentioned is a good reason for concurring. There is plenty of land owned on the hill there by the city upon which the building can be moved. I hope the motion will not prevail.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman has a right to his opinion the same as any other member of this Board. He says the schoolhouse will be wanted there. I know it will not. He desires to carry out the object upon which he has started, and I do not blame him for that. I only blame him for having started for that object. The Committee on Public Buildings have had this matter before them—not to consider whether it is proper to cancel the contract, but to make inquiries as to the cost of cancelling it. They reported to the Council the cost of purchasing this building back again. I don't believe in throwing away twelve hundred dollars to the party who bought this building. What may have been his object in leaving it there is more than I can see. But it does seem to me that somebody expects to make some money out of this matter. I can't conceive what is the object of the gentleman on my left in proposing to have the city take back a building that we don't want. Where is the land that we can put it on? Is it the land on which are the sheds, which is in dispute, and we don't know whether it is owned by the city or the First Parish? The note that the gentleman read from the Chairman of the School Committee, Dr. Cushing, was used for other purposes than was intended it should be. The committee are unanimous in the opinion that it is not best to cancel that contract.

Alderman Power—On a former occasion I produced and read here a letter from the Chairman of the School Committee for that district, stating that it was for the interest of the city to keep that building, that it would be wanted for school purposes within a year, and it was considered that he, at least, was the best authority as to whether or not that schoolhouse would be wanted. On a former occasion the gentleman partially acknowledged that more school accommodations would be needed, and the committee proposed to alter the old almshouse to accommodate the scholars. If there is any dispute about that land on the hill, the sooner it is settled the better, and it would be one advantage, if no other, to have it settled in this way. There is an old hook and ladder house on that land, but I don't understand that there is any dispute about it. Suppose it is conceded not to belong to the city, there is other land enough there to put this building on. I have the authority of the Chairman of the School Committee for saying that it will be needed within a year, and my persistency in this matter is for the reason that I believe it for the interest of the city of Boston to keep the building, as we will within a year be called upon to spend ten or fifteen thousand dollars for a new school building. For this reason I think the Board of Aldermen should concur with the Council. I am not actuated by any motive to carry a point; I see no proof here that a schoolhouse will not be needed there, and the Chairman of the School Committee says it will be. If it was shown that I am in the wrong I would give way.

Alderman Sayward—It certainly appears to me that the gentleman has the idea of carrying this point, and in order to do so he accuses me of partially acknowledging that the schoolhouse would be needed. I said if there was a necessity for one, which I don't believe there will be in five years, there was a stone building which cost less money than it would to put this one back on that lot. I doubt very much whether he has ever seen the almshouse. It will cost less money to put the old almshouse in proper condition than to put this building on that lot. It might appear that there is some division in regard to this matter in the School Committee. But there is none now; they are unanimous in the opinion that we should not cancel this contract. Then it appears that somebody is trying to make some money out of this. I don't accuse any one, but it does seem strange that anybody desiring to have that building should go there and bid it off by auction and at the suggestions of some parties wait until this time without moving it. I hope the order will be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Power—I don't know to whom the gentleman alludes when he says somebody will make money out of it. It don't appear to be the purchaser, who went to work and excavated the cellar and made arrangements to put the building upon it. I have been all over the ground and certainly don't think the price named pays him very well. So I don't see how any one is going to make money out of it. I think the purchaser really meant to take the building, but he was stopped by this Government from taking it away. I suppose as soon as he gets liberty to do so he is ready to take it away, though I don't know much about that. If the School Committee are unanimous that there is no further accommodations wanted, why have n't they been here to tell some of us? Why have n't they sent a communication to us? If the chairman of the committee is an unreliable man I am content to let his communication go. If he is a gentleman of truth and veracity, I say this Board ought to be governed by the communication from him, as it stands in evidence before us. If the committee thought otherwise, why haven't they sent a communication here to that effect? No one has come here, and it is the duty of this Board to act upon the evidence that we have before us.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman persists in stating things somewhat out of the usual course. He says the purchaser has been prevented from moving that building by this Government. This Government has taken no steps to prevent him from removing that building. He has a right to move it today. The gentleman says, also, that the purchaser has n't made money out of it. I ask what has the purchaser done that will cost him over a hundred dollars? As to the veracity of my friend, Dr. Cushing, I will heartily testify to it. But he is liable to make mistakes. The gentleman asks why no one has been here to oppose the order; I say no one has been here to ask for it; I think the committee who have this matter in charge are the proper judges.

Alderman Power—I am perfectly familiar with the almshouse and schoolhouse, and I say the almshouse is totally unfit to be used for school purposes, and cannot be remodelled without an expense of $10,000. This structure was built for a schoolhouse, is well adapted for one, and is as good a one as can be built of wood. The purchaser has injured it somewhat, and it may cost $1500 to repair it, and four or five hundred to move it.

Alderman Sayward—What would it cost for the cellar?

Alderman Power—It is not necessary to have a cellar under a schoolhouse for temporary purposes. If there is the least prospect of wanting that schoolhouse for temporary purposes, the city will be a gainer by keeping it. The gentleman asks what has the purchaser done that will cost him a hundred dollars? He has excavated for a cellar, contracted with a party to move the house, and the contractor already has the material on the ground and begun to move it, and I don't know how much, if any, he will have to pay that contractor. I can see where the purchaser has spent a considerable money. The appropriation will certainly not more than cover the expense he has been to. He has been prevented by this Government from moving it in this way; he petitioned for permission to move it, and the City Government has not given that permission.

Alderman Sayward—I don't think the purchaser has ever petitioned this Government. I think he put a petition in to the Committee on Paving, and that petition was laid on the table in that committee. Then the gentleman says he knows all about the poor house. I did n't know that he had ever been in a poorhouse. I have been there many times. I have been in Boston about forty-three years, and know quite as much about localities as the gentleman does. If that building is put upon the lot, as he proposes, you have got to build a cellar for it.

Alderman Gaffield—This is a question on which members of the Board honestly differ. One of the gentlemen says the School Committee unanimously desire more accommodation there. Now, the Committee on Public Instruction, of which I am a member, have received no application for a new schoolhouse there; still there may be a desire to have one, and for the purpose of getting information I move that this matter be referred to the Committee on Public Instruction. If the Council shall concur in this reference, we can have a meeting on Friday evening, and have all the members of the School Committee in that district before us.

Alderman Sayward—I have no particular objection to the reference, but it does appear to me that if there had been any necessity for such reference, the matter might have been settled long before this. The schoolhouse which has been built to take the place of this one cannot be taken until this one is moved away. There can be no more light obtained than has been already. The gentleman refers to the unanimous feeling of the School Committee. There has been no unanimous expression by the committee, and for the last five or six weeks we have had no School Committee men before this Board on this matter. I think the reference would be a waste of time.

Alderman Power—In that same communication it was stated that every seat in the new schoolhouse was spoken for and there were scholars enough to fill every seat in the schoolhouse. I am content to let this matter go to the Committee on Public Instruction and let them summon the School Committee before them. And if they say there is no prospective need of this schoolhouse I am content to let this matter go. I acted on the recommendations of the chairman of that district. I did n't obtain it through any improper influences, and I told him that I wanted him to state plainly whether there was any prospective need of a schoolhouse in that district, and he said there was. Until that is contradicted I think we ought to retain this building.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman is willing to do anything; to let it go to one committee this week and next week to another. I have said before that the truth and veracity of Dr. Cushing is not to be doubted. If he says it will save the city anything by taking that house he never was more mistaken in his life. There are but six classes in the present school, and they can't fill but six rooms. There are two vacant rooms, notwithstanding what Dr. Cushing says.

Alderman Clark—I hope this order will be referred to the committee, and that they will consult the School Committee of that district whether more school accommodations will be required, and if they are whether it would be best to sell it or let it remain there. It is a matter which should be disposed of in some manner immediately, for the credit of this Board. It has been here some two or three months, going backward and forward between the two branches. We have had the evidence of Dr. Cushing that there will be more accommodations needed. He has long been a resident of the ward, is a physician, and ought to know what are the needs of the neighborhood, present and prospective. I hope they will consult the School Committee and every physician in regard to the present accommodations and prospective wants.

Alderman Sayward—I have no objection to the gentleman praising Dr. Cushing, as he has many other gentlemen since he has been a member of this Board. I would like to know whether Dr. Cushing is his family physician. He is mine, and no one can praise him more than I can; and if he judges by my family there will be no future accommodations needed.

The motion to refer prevailed.

Order for Committee on Public Buildings to consider and report upon the expediency of repealing the order to locate a steam fire engine, etc., in the Mason-street building, came from the Council passed.

Alderman Bigelow—If this order is adopted it will defer this matter some time longer. The plans for the engine house are all made, and the building can be altered for the very moderate expense of fifteen thousand dollars, or within that amount. If a new location is purchased it will cost fifty or seventy-five thousand dollars, and perhaps it will not be any better than this one. I hope the present plan will be permitted to go on, and I move the indefinite postponement of the order.

The motion prevailed.

SALE OF A FERRY BOAT.

Alderman Stebbins presented a communication from the directors of the East Boston ferries, stating that the ferry-boat Jefferson could not be repaired except at great expense, and requesting permission to sell the same. Referred to the Committee on Ferries.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gibson, from the Joint Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, reported an order authorizing the Inspector of Buildings to issue a permit to E. Goodfellow to enlarge his building on Dorchester avenue, according to his application on file. Order read twice and passed.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Committee on Bridges be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars in repairing Mount Washington-avenue Bridge, said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Bridges.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported leave to withdraw on the petitions for grade damages of George Doherty, Warwick and Meridian streets; Samuel P. Loud, Dorchester avenue; John Haggerty, Commercial street, Ward 16; Henry Humphreys, Stoughton street; Hart Bailey, Stoughton street; F. C. Hersey, Summit avenue, Robert McDevitt, Athens street; Joseph Forristall, Chambers street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported no action necessary on the remonstrance of Henry W. Wilson against the change of the name of Dorchester avenue. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to raise and reset the edgestones and repave the gutters on the northerly side of Dudley street, between Winslow and Dearborn streets, and to regrade the sidewalks and a portion of the roadway of said street. Estimated cost, $1000.

Read once.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to remove the trees and the projecting banks on the easterly side of Walnut avenue, between Rockland street and Pickering place, and to build a retaining wall on the line of said avenue. Estimated cost, $1000.

Read once.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to raise and grade Cabot and Weston streets according to the established grades of said streets, and to reset the edgestones and repave the gutters and sidewalks on said streets. Estimated cost $6000.

Read once.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to build the cesspools necessary to provide for the surface drainage of Ruggles street, between Tremont and Parker streets. Estimated cost $1200.

Read once.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave with brick the unpaved sidewalk on Tremont street, between Ruggles and Parker streets, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Read twice and passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported favorably on the applications of Washington Pipe Works, Skillings & Whiting Brothers, and Dyer & Gurney, and leave to withdraw on applications of Parker Bryant (at his own request) and James McGramon, to occupy wooden stables. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, to whom was referred the communication of the Inspector of Buildings relative to certain cellars below grade, reported the following order:

Ordered, That Martin Beatty, Samael Stubbs and Joseph R. Bassett be and they are respectively hereby directed to alter and construct the cellars under their respective houses, viz.: Martin Beatty, Cazenove place, near Chandler street, three buildings; Samuel Stubbs, Chandler street, corner of Cazenove place, one building, and Joseph R. Bassett, east side of Tremont street, between Dover and Chapman streets, five buildings, so that the grade thereof shall not be less than twelve feet above mean low water, as provided in the order of the Board of Aldermen approved December 24, 1872, and in default of such alteration and construction by either of said parties, within ten days after the service of this order as provided by the third section of chapter 377 of the acts of the year 1872, proceedings will be commenced against him pursuant to law.

Order read twice and passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, to whom was referred the communication of Joshua H. Pitman, for damages on account of Smallpox Hospital, made a report recommending that the same be referred to the Committee on Claims. So ordered.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported favorably on applications of John Fleming, 1013 Tremont street; Silas C. Read, 655 Washington street; E. F. Ramsell, 55 Pleasant street, for victuallers' license. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported orders for the construction of sewers in Franklin street, between Pearl and Oliver streets; and in Parker street between Gore and Delle avenues. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported "leave to withdraw" on petition of W. V. Hutchings, et al., for sewer in Island street, for the reason that the street is unaccepted by the city. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the sum of $47 29, assessed upon Adolphus Weis for a sewer in George street, be abated, and the same amount assessed as follows: George E. Bozman, $9 85; Bridget Killian, $18 72; Karen Madbury, $18 72.

Passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported favorably on the petition of Pascal Girard, to give exhibitions of magic at East Boston, South Boston and Roxbury; A. Chapin Southworth, for auctioneer's license at Walnut street, Ward 16; T. F. McHugh, 24 East Concord street, for hack stand; William B. Haynes and others, for transfer of hack licenses; B. Mack, for pawnbroker's license, at 172 Dorchester avenue; H. F. Hataway, A. H. White, A. J. Brown G. & W. Wright, for wagon licenses; J. Nolan & others, for transfer of wagon licenses; S. E. Hayward & Co., 37 Tremont street, and Hinds R. Darling, 9 Maverick street, for auctioneer's license. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages as follows: W. L. Putnam executor, $26,783 34, widening Lindall street; Joseph N. Fiske and W. L. Putnam, trustees, $41,216 66, widening of Congress street.

Severally read twice and passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the City Engineer be authorized to make soundings and borings to ascertain the character of the foundations required for the Eastern-avenue Bridge; the expense therefor not exceeding $2000, to be charged to the appropriation for Streets.

Alderman Clark said it was necessary, in the opinion of the City Engineer, that the soundings should be taken as soon as possible, on account of the lateness of the season.

Order read twice and passed.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Committee on East Boston Ferries, to whom was referred the petition of Campbell & Brooks for an investigation of the award for building the new ferry boat, reported that it appears upon a careful examination of all the facts in the case that the directors of the ferries were fully justified in their award of the contract, and the committee would therefore recommend that the petitioners have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward from the Joint Committee on Public Buildings, reported that $350 will be required to complete the furnishing of the new Mather Schoolhouse, also $1000 to properly grade the grounds around the same and fill the cellar of the old building, and the committee recommend the passage of an order for the same at an estimated expense; to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Order read twice and passed.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following: Pursuant to the provisions of Section One of Chapter 177 of the acts of 1872, it is hereby Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board, as the agent of the city of Boston, be and it is hereby directed to take, hold, and convey to, into and through said city, all the water of Sudbury River, so-called, said water to be taken at any point or points within the town of Framingham, or higher up on said river, and the water of Farm Pond, so-called, in said town of Framingham, and the water which may flow into and from said river and pond, and to take any water rights in or upon said river or pond, in or above the town of Framingham, or connected therewith. Said Cochituate Water Board is also hereby directed, as the agent of this city, to take and hold by purchase or otherwise, in connection with said sources of supply, any lands and real estate necessary for increasing or preserving the purity of the water, or for laying, building or maintaining aqueducts, water courses, reservoirs, dams, buildings, machinery and other structures and appliances, with their accessories, for conducting, elevating, purifying, storing, discharging, disposing of and distributing water; and also to take and hold any land (excepting any in the town of Framingham heretofore taken or purchased by any railroad company) on the margin of said sources of supply not exceeding five rods in width from the high-water line of said river, storage reservoirs or pond, so far as may be necessary, in the opinion of said Water Board, for the preservation and purity of the same, for the purpose of furnishing a supply of pure water for the city of Boston. The expense of the taking of said waters and lands aforesaid to be charged to appropriation already existing therefor.

Alderman Stebbins—By authority of the statutes of 1872 the Cochituate Water Board were authorized to take water from Sudbury River, and it was supposed till within a few days that they had the power to do so, but it is thought by the City Solicitor that they have not that power until it is conferred upon them by the City Government. This order is to authorize them to do so.

Alderman Power—I have not any doubt about the necessity of taking this water, but this Government should, if it has not already, have some idea of what the cost of this order is going to be to the city of Boston. We ought to have some figures telling us about what it will cost before we pass the order. I don't think it would be creditable to pass an order of that kind unless we knew about how much it would cost.

Alderman Clark—There has been an estimate made of the cost of bringing water from Sudbury River into the reservoirs through the new conduit, which is about five million dollars. That was exclusive of mill damages, as it would be impossible to tell what claims might be put in and with what success they might be carried out.

Alderman Gibson—That don't exactly answer the question. The gentleman opposite would like to know what would be the entire cost.

Alderman Clark—It is merely to confer upon the Water Board authority to go and take what the Legislature granted to the city. The right has already been conferred upon the City Government.

Alderman Gibson—In taking property we should make some approximate estimate of the cost. We ought to treat with a man before taking his property. I think the city has lost millions of dollars by first going and seizing property without treating with the owner. I understand that river is running into the lake now, and I supposed that we controlled Sudbury River. But if this is a new route I should not be willing to vote for that order.

Alderman Stebbins requested permission to ask the City Engineer a few questions, in order to obtain the desired information.

Alderman Power—I think there is no question about the necessity of this measure, but for the expenditure of such an immense sum of money I think it is certainly not very creditable to pass this order till we know somewhere near what it is going to cost. If it is necessary, all well and good, but I don't think it looks creditable to pass the order without some figures to go by.

Alderman Stebbins—In City Document No. 29 the Alderman will find the information. The cost is $4,788,318. This does not include damages upon the line of the river. If the City Engineer is allowed to answer a few questions I think the Board will be satisfied.

The permission was given.

Alderman Stebbins—Will you please state the probable cost of the land and mill damages upon the route?

City-Engineer Davis—This estimate includes the land damages, but not the mill damages. I have made two estimates, one of which, in which I placed myself in the position of the city, amounts to half a million dollars; the other is about a million and a quarter. There are no decisions of the courts to enable one to make an estimate upon a definite basis.

Alderman Stebbins—As to the necessity of the passage of this order?

City-Engineer Davis—We supposed we had the right to seize the river; five hundred thousand dollars have been appropriated to build the works, which are no use to us unless we can have the river. We are in a position to make the seizure now.

Alderman Gibson—Have you already seized land upon the river.

City-Engineer Davis—No, sir.

Alderman Gibson—Are the works going on.

City-Engineer—They are. We have not yet seized the river, but have turned the water in.

Alderman Stebbins—In view of what the newspapers have said, that since the annexation of Charlestown work on the conduit should be suspended, I would like you to state in regard to the water supply from Mystic Lake.

City-Engineer Davis—I don't know whether I can give much more information on this point than is contained in the last report of the Water Board. [The City-Engineer read an extract from the report to show that the supply from the water shed of Mystic Lake will be required for the inhabitants of that territory.] Annexation has taken place, and I cannot give an official opinion without making surveys. We have expended some $80,000 in the Sudbury-River project, and have already contracted for $340,000 more work.

Alderman Gibson—Do you know how much more water there is in Mystic Lake now?

City-Engineer Davis—It is getting down to a very low point, and unless we build storage reservoirs upon it we can't get any supply. It would be a large expense to take a small amount of water.

Alderman Clark—The passage of this order will involve no additional expense?

City-Engineer Davis—No, sir.

Alderman Clark—You have no doubt as to the necessity of the city going on?

City-Engineer Davis—The most you can do is to postpone it for a few years.

Alderman Clark—What can be done with the supply from Mystic Lake?

City-Engineer Davis—In order to get Mystic water you must go to a large expenditure.

Alderman Stebbins—How much?

City-Engineer Davis—I should guess, in round numbers, a million dollars.

Alderman Brown—How long has it been since water was taken from Sudbury River to supply Lake Cochituate?

City-Engineer Davis—A year ago last September.

Alderman Brown—And you cannot take any more from the river now; and that is the reason this order is put in here?

City-Engineer Davis—It is.

Alderman Clark—You have no right to take it unless there is an order authorizing it?

City-Engineer Davis—No, sir.

Alderman Hulbert—How long will it take to complete this contract?

City-Engineer Davis—It will be about the first of 1877 before we can get this water into the city.

Alderman Gibson—No water has been taken from Sudbury River this year?

City-Engineer Davis—None.

Alderman Gaffield—Do you think it necessary that water shall be taken from Sudbury River?

City-Engineer Davis—Yes, sir.

Alderman Brown—Is there any purpose in withholding the water, except that it can't be taken unless the order is adopted?

City-Engineer Davis—If we had turned it in this year it would involve us in mill damages, which we have got to pay for the water we took last year.

Alderman Brown—How many establishments are there upon the river, that the city will be liable to damage?

City-Engineer Davis—Some thirty, I think; all those in Lawrence; all those in Lowell, on the Concord River; two at Billerica, and one at Saxonville.

Alderman Brown—Have the corporations intimated what amount of damages they would claim?

City-Engineer Davis—Only what they said before the legislative committee last winter, when they intimated that it would be a large sum. That was one of the strong arguments against our taking it.

The Chairman—Is the conduit large enough to convey the water here?

City-Engineer Davis—We have run the conduit as full this summer as we dared to. Chestnut-Hill Reservoir has been drawn down, but we are keeping it about even now. We only keep up our supply by drawing it down through the summer and filling it up winters. The conduit does not give as much in summer as the city consumers.

Alderman Brown—When Charlestown is annexed will there be any addition to our supply after they use what they require for their own purposes, for East Boston and other places?

City-Engineer Davis—With their present works, I suppose, they can't supply us with two millions a day the year round. But by putting up proper machinery, new pipes and pumps and reservoirs, the supply could be made about eight million gallons; but that quantity would be diminished every year as the consumption on the other side of the river increased.

Alderman Stebbins—Your estimate of the cost of that is a million dollars?

City-Engineer Davis—I call it a guess but not an estimate.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me that if we can delay this work six or seven years it would be worth while to look around and see what can be done. As the lake has held out during this entire season, it seems that it would hold out longer. If we can raise the dam at least four feet, it will enable us to stand it through another summer. It would cost but very little to raise it up. There are twenty feet of space where it could be raised.

Alderman Cutter—It is impossible to raise it any more. The City-Engineer will give the information if the gentleman desires it.

Alderman Gibson—At the point I know of it can be raised.

Alderman Stebbins—What is the objection to that?

City-Engineer Davis—It was raised two feet and if the dam was raised more it would flood the cellars at Natick.

Alderman Gibson—This order ought not to pass for an additional expenditure until we look round and see if something better cannot be done.

Alderman Hulbert—We have already voted over six hundred thousand dollars for this very work.

Alderman Gibson—Things have changed since that time.

The Chairman—This is nothing new, but was neglected to be done when the appropriation was made.

Alderman Power—I suppose there is no doubt in the mind of any one who has given this subject any attention, what the conveying of water from Sudbury River to Boston is going to cost. The reason I had for commencing this discussion was, I thought we ought to know what the cost of flowing these lands and dispossessing the rights of those mill owners on the river is going to be. We ought to get some definite figures. As I understand it now the passage of this order doesn't necessarily require that we should go on and incur any additional expense in that direction until the City Government can get at the approximate expense.

[Alderman Gibson in the chair.]

Alderman Cutter—The necessity of passing this order is owing to the neglect of its not being done before. It was an oversight of the Water Board. Recently they discovered that they needed this authority. It is no new thing; there is no question but that we need water, and we can't get it from Cochituate Lake. We have annexed Brighton and West Roxbury, and will probably annex Brookline, all of which will want to be supplied with water. I am fearful that Sudbury River will not be sufficient to supply us with water if we go on laying pipes in the towns annexed, and if they use water as freely as Dorchester and Roxbury have done. We shall need a very large supply. It is well-known that during a dry time every man who has a little garden or yard uses the hose freely. It doesn't become us to economize on this subject of procuring a water supply, but it does become us to go on and get all the water that we need.

The order was passed.

REVISION OF THE CITY CHARTER.

Alderman Quincy, from the Joint Standing Committee on Ordinances, to whom were recommended the report and order in relation to a revision of the city charter, reported that having reconsidered the subject, they recommend that the order printed on the eighth page of City Document 115 of the present year ought to pass.

Alderman Quincy—I don't propose to take up the time by repeating the arguments on this subject, but will merely call attention to the fact that this is the fourth time this order has been reported. If it commends itself to the good sense of the Board they will pass it, and if not they will not. The majority of the committee are desirous that this game of battledore and shuttlecock shall be stopped.

Alderman Clark—I move to amend by making the commission consist of three instead of five, as the expense would be several thousand dollars less.

Alderman Quincy—If this is to be a paid commission, and economy would thereby result, I would accept the amendment. But I understand that these commissioners are to serve without pay, as the commissioners on the great fire and the Annexation Commission have done. It is desirable that the various professions shall be represented on the commission, and it was considered that five would be the best number. Unless some better reason is given, I shall oppose the proposed change.

Alderman Clark—I don't suppose we are going to get three men who are so anxious to give their services to the city as to revise the city charter without pay. I have an idea that three would do it as satisfactorily as five, and a smaller commission would act more expeditiously than a large one.

Alderman Power—I have n't seen the necessity for the appointment of any commission or heard any good reasons given. But I do think the members of this Government are perfectly competent to perform the duties. The only reasons I have heard were that the School Board and the Common Council are too large and that the Board of Aldermen should be increased; and that the Aldermen should serve two or three years and be paid. There is a great difference of opinion on this subject, and this Government is perfectly competent to make all necessary revision. If we think the School Board or Council too large we can go to the Legislature and get it changed—we are just as competent to settle those questions as any commission that can be selected. I have talked with a gentleman in the Government who I should suppose is the best authority—one who has the honor to preside over the city as Mayor for some years—I refer to the father of the gentleman who introduced this order—and he said it was a very dangerous thing to introduce this order. He said the Government was competent to make the changes, and it is very dangerous to meddle with the charter as it now stands. He thought it could n't be bettered, and many little things might do great wrong to the city, and it should be very seriously considered before we appoint such a commission. I have heard no reasons except those I mentioned, and therefore I think we should hesitate before interfering with the charter, which has been considered by everybody as such a great instrument, and has been so extensively copied all over the country. I think the charter is just as good for the city today as it has ever been. We can get the changes from the Legislature, without having a commission to patch up the existing charter.

Alderman Gaffield—I think that our charter, good as it is, should not be looked upon as the laws of the Medes and Persians, which cannot be changed. Certainly, the time has come when it ought to be changed. It was perfect for the City Government of years ago. It was my duty and pleasure to serve with the Committee on Ordinances to revise this very charter in 1865-6, and after working hours and hours, it did not pass. That was the result of the work of a committee. I think the result of the work of a commission would be more satisfactory. A great many questions arose then and will arise now—such as the tenure of office of the Mayor and Aldermen and Councilmen, whether they should serve one, two or three years; whether there should be four councilmen from a ward or not. Of course four gentlemen from a ward are not going to vote to cut down their representation. Let us have an honorary commission, who, putting all their experience together, will give us the best instrument that they can, one fitted for the enlarged wants of the city, and I have no doubt an intelligent City Council will pass it, and if they don't like it they will not pass it. When the present charter was adopted we were a small town. In ten days we have almost doubled our territory. We may have future annexations, and the time has come when we should have a new charter. There are many able and honorable men who will serve gratuitously; while twelve men in this Board and sixty-four men in the Council give their time to the city, it would not be very honorable if three or five men could not be found to serve five months on this work, and I hope we will give them the opportunity to do so.

Alderman Hulbert—I don't think that in passing this order we commit ourselves to changing the charter. The order is simply one of inquiry, and it is a proper inquiry to make. I am inclined to favor five persons in this case, although ordinarily I would rather have three on a commission. This is a thing to be well considered. Having five persons enables us to secure men from the different walks of life, men experienced in different ways. On this account I should prefer five.

Alderman Quincy, in reply to statements made, read extracts from the report on pages two and five, and said if the Board were to shut their eyes and blindly swallow what was recommended he should oppose the commission as vigorously as he advocated it.

Alderman Stebbins—The Alderman from Ward 3 has referred to the fact that this matter was before the City Council some time ago. My recollection of that was that the whole thing died of too much respectability. It was not got up entirely by the Ordinance Committee, but was referred to a distinct commission, and Judge Curtis reviewed it. The commission was not familiar with the workings of the City Government, and I fear it will be so in this case. The Mayor will appoint five persons, and I fear they will not know the changes which are needed. I have an amendment which I will offer, which tells who the commissioners shall be, and who will at once engage on this work. I move to strike out the words "his Honor the Mayor be requested to appoint a commission, consisting of five persons" and amend so that it will read, "That John P. Healy, Samuel F. McCleary, Alfred T. Turner, Leonard R. Cutter, James M. Bugbee, Samuel M. Quincy, Benjamin Deau, Thomas Hills, and Edward O. Shepard, be a commission," etc. On this commission every department of the City Government will be represented. The gentlemen named must furnish the bulk of the information that the commission will desire. This amendment commends itself to my judgment, and I think it will to the citizens generally.

Alderman Gaffield—I would simply recall to the memory of the gentleman from Ward 8, and ask if he does n't remember that just such a committee expended a great deal of time in preparing the charter. It was submitted to the City Solicitor to be put in legal form, was then returned to us, acted upon, and immediately rejected.

Alderman Stebbins—The Alderman is correct. I think on the first motion the charter was rejected. It was because the matter was originated and carried through in a way that did not commend itself to the members of the City Government.

Alderman Clark withdrew his amendment.

Alderman Quincy—I should have no objections to giving labor to the city, if I thought the committee proposed would do it better. It is not necessarily a fact that the gentlemen will have to come to City Hall for information. [Alderman Quincy read another extract from the report to show why the work should be done by those not at present actively in the City Government.] I think we can secure something more valuable if it is suggested from a class of persons whom it is supposed his Honor the Mayor will appoint.

Alderman Stebbins—I wish also to call attention to the fact that not only are all branches of the City Government represented, but also both political parties, so that we can have no minority reports. I think these gentlemen can agree upon something which will commend itself to the City Government. I think the amendment a correct one.

Alderman Gaffield—I believe it was a celebrated philosopher who said, give me a place to stand upon and I will move the world. We must choose people outside of the Government to make the proper improvements in the charter. The argument of the gentleman from Ward 4 is very strong. No person inside the City Government can always judge best what is needed outside. If we could see ourselves as others see us, sometimes, we might do better. I have no doubt the gentleman from Ward 4 would much prefer to have his father serve on that commission than himself. I think it would be better to have a commission from outside City Hall.

The amendment of Alderman Stebbins was lost by a rising vote of 5 for and 6 against, and the order as originally reported was passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote just passed, offered by Alderman Quincy, who hoped it would not prevail, was rejected.

REGIMENTAL ARMORIES.

On motion of Alderman Quincy the report of Committee on Armories in favor of the establishment of regimental armories in this city, (City Doc. No. 118.) was taken from the table.

Alderman Quincy—This order, it will be observed, Mr. Chairman, is but an expression of the opinion of the present City Council. It binds neither us nor our successors, and if passed will be taken at the State House for exactly what it is worth. Let us consider first the matter of economy, and secondly that of efficiency. We now spend beyond the State allowance $12,000, yearly, for armory rents in the city. This amount must, under the new law, and the present system be greatly increased, if not doubled. The statute makes it our imperative duty to furnish each company with a suitable armory, and prohibits its use for other purposes. Companies can no longer pay the excess of rent above the allowance, letting their halls for balls and other purposes. The city must pay the whole or drive from the service all but the rich companies. Under the present system, the Armory Committee and not the regimental or battalion commanders are expected to be posted as to the actual needs of each company, which now in defiance of all military principle and system ignores the channels and comes directly to City Hall with its demands, extravagant or reasonable as the case may be, and which is oftentimes the case I leave the Board to imagine. The committee does its best, and its sub-committees in the other branch run all over the city in order to see that we are not imposed upon, and neglect their own business to perform work properly belonging to regimental commanders, who if they had to do it could save the city a hundred dollars where the committee does fifty. A committee of the City Government should not be expected to employ masons and carpenters and audit their bills in order to be sure that the amounts voted are properly expended. And yet such is now the case.

The economy over the present system of the regimental armory owned and kept in repair by the city, we believe to be such that in a very few years the first outlay would be far more than compensated, and we shall only wonder why the present cumbersome and expensive system, or rather want of system, was so long endured.

Next the matter of efficiency. It does not need in my opinion military experience to perceive at once the great advantages of the system proposed as enabling commanders to establish and enforce a regimental standard of discipline and of drill. I mention these qualities in the order of their importance, for although they ought to go together, they are by no means identical. For example, the Seventh Regiment of New York has or had the reputation of being the best drilled command in that city, but on the occasion of the July riot the Twenty-second made for itself a record of discipline of which regular troops might well be proud. Receiving, as the casualty returns show, their full share of the brickbats during the riot, they marched back to their armory when it was over without having fired a shot. The fact that others yielded to their excitement and fired without orders need not condemn them, for regulars have often done the same when opposed to a mob. The red coats did it in State street when the crowd were pelting them and the two massacres of the Paris boulevards by which in turn Louis Philippe lost a throne and Louis Napoleon waded to one, were both caused by troops of the line firing without orders. But to American militia, who can show steadiness superior to that of European regulars, all honor should be allowed. Now my point is, that this discipline, this coolness and self command is largely due to the confidence which the companies have in each other and their regimental officers—a confidence impossible to expect when they are brought together only during a three days' muster. And in the matter of drill what incentive more powerful than the emulation resulting from contiguity? The best-drilled company would labor to preserve their reputation, the worst drilled one lose theirs, to the manifest elevation of the whole. The committee have called attention to the self-evident fact that when the services of the militia are needed, their prompt arrival is no less essential than that of firemen at a fire. When they shall be concentrated as proposed what more simple than to call them together in the same manner, by an established stroke of the bells as a signal for either or both?

It has not surprised me, Mr. Chairman, that one assertion in the committee's report has elicited, in some quarters, expressions of indignant disbelief. It is that to the effect that our regiments cannot as yet court comparison with those of New York. There are among us, Mr. Chairman, certain peculiar Bostonian institutions which are held in a manner sacred, and to whose defects or doubtful influence eyes must be resolutely closed. To doubt the propriety of the jury exemption enjoyed by the Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company is as high treason as to question the divine right of kings. But our militia are not ancients or templars or sons of Malta, but something widely different from either, and that is, soldiers—soldiers of the Commonwealth, who may be ordered tomorrow to stand between us and the criminal classes, or to protect our property from pillage. With soldiers we cannot safely follow the amiable course of being to their faults a little blind and to their virtues wondrous kind, or, when the day of trial comes, we may find that we lean on a rotten staff. I have just received a communication from a gentleman of high position and long experience in the militia, who speaks of the concentration and consolidation proposed as the only plan which will rescue the militia from the plight it is in now. And our day of trial, Mr. Chairman, may not be far distant. The elements of danger are not wanting. A year ago we complacently believed that a Chicago fire could never happen to us, and today we think the same in regard to a New York riot. We have been pretty roughly shaken out of one delusion, and should do well to arouse ourselves in time from the other.

Alderman Stebbins called attention to the fact that it is customary to intrust the matter of petitioning the Legislature to his Honor the Mayor.

Alderman Quincy—If the gentleman would move an amendment to that effect I will accept it. I presume the Committee on Armories will be put in communication with the commander-in-chief in regard to this subject. I will, therefore, move to strike out the words "Joint Standing Committee on Armories," and substitute the words "his Honor the Mayor."

The amendment was adopted, and the order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Power, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
OCTOBER 23, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at half-past seven o'clock, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Petitions were referred, in concurrence.

Reference to the Committee on Claims (recommended in a report of the Committee on Health) of the petition of Joshua H. Pitman, to be paid for damages on account of Smallpox Hospital.

Reference to Committee on Public Instruction of the order of 16th inst., to cancel sale of Old Mather Schoolhouse.

Report (leave to withdraw) on petition of Campbell & Brooks, for inquiry into award for building new ferry boat. Accepted.

Report and order authorizing a permit to E. Goodfellow to enlarge his wooden building, Dorchester avenue. Passed.

Report and order of Committee on Armories in favor of the establishment of regimental armories in this city, on certain conditions [City Document No. 118,] with an amendment to strike out of the order the words, "the Joint Standing Committee on Armories," and insert "His Honor the Mayor." Passed.

Order authorizing soundings and borings to be made to ascertain character of foundations required for Eastern-avenue Bridge, at not exceeding $2000. Read once.

Order requesting Mayor to petition Legislature to change boundary line between Boston and Newton so as to include Chestnut-Hill Reservoir within limits of Boston. Passed.

Report and order authorizing the new Mather Schoolhouse to be furnished, and to complete filling and grading around said schoolhouse at an estimated cost of $4500. Read once.

ANNEXATION.

The order requesting the Mayor to petition the next Legislature to annex to Boston so much of Brookline as lies north of southerly line of Brighton avenue, in order to form a connection between Brighton and the old portion of the city having been read once, Mr. Jones of Ward 14 moved to amend to strike out all between the word "lies" and insert the words "north of Muddy River as far as Longwood avenue and north of the southerly line of Longwood avenue and north of the southerly line of Beacon street to the old line of the town of Brighton."

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would inquire some reason for this proposed change. This is a proposition to cut the town of Brookline in two; and if that was intended it should be so understood. The proposition which came from the other branch was to run a line out on the line of Beacon street, so that Brighton may be absolutely connected with Boston. If it is intended to cut Brookline in two, I shall vote against it. If we are to have anything, we had better have the whole town of Brookline. I have no interest there [laughter], although my friends tried hard to give me one. I have not been in that town over fifteen minutes but once for fifteen months.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—If any one will take the trouble to examine the map prepared by the Board of Commissioners on Annexation he will find that the land proposed to be taken by the other branch is a narrow strip. It only gives a part of the road from Brookline to Beacon street, and thence to the reservoir. This proposition gives a direct avenue to the reservoir and the town of Brighton.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—If that were all I would not say a word. But it is not. There are certain parties, real-estate speculators, owning a large part of the town of Brookline, who want to be set off to Boston at the expense of the whole town. I hope that we, as representatives of the city of Boston, will not commit ourselves to a certain line of policy, which we do not understand. I have been in favor of annexation throughout, although I believe the whole thing, so far, is illegal. I have no objection to cutting off a little piece of Brookline, but I do think a great many of the citizens of that town will object to being cut up in this way until the people are allowed to come up here and be heard.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—I hope the amendment will prevail. All of us are convinced of the importance of annexing some part of Brookline in order to connect with Brighton. The people of Brookline will have a chance to oppose it before the Legislature. The question is whether 7000 people are to intervene to prevent what will be demanded by three hundred thousand. Mr. Brackett read extracts from the Commonwealth and Traveller indorsing the plan indicated in the amendment, and he thought it would commend itself to a larger portion of the citizens of Boston.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I know nothing of real-estate speculators, but after an examination of the map I think this plan will commend itself to the members of the Council.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—A question of so much importance ought to be understood a great deal better than this one is before the Council commits itself. I consider it of no importance whether we describe the lands or leave it to the Legislature to say which will be best. I think it ought to go before a committee, but I think an amendment should be offered which would leave the lines open a little, to be fixed by the Legislature.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—I feel that I am voting in the dark, and I would prefer to have the order in more definite shape. I propose to substitute the following:

Ordered, That the Mayor be requested to petition the Legislature to annex to Boston so much of the town of Brookline as may be necessary to form a suitable connection between Brighton and the old portion of the city.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 accepted the amendment.

Mr. Perkins objected to the withdrawal of Mr. Jones's amendment.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 thought the amendments were the same in substance, and the one offered by the gentleman from Ward 6 should be adopted.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 the subject was referred to the Joint Committee on Legislative Business.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

Order authorizing the Water Board to take and convey into the city the water of Sudbury River, and to hold by purchase, or otherwise, any water rights and lands connected therewith necessary for the purpose, on the conditions set forth in said order.

On the question of giving the order a second reading, Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said—

This is a matter of too much importance and involving too much expense to be passed over without consideration; no one knows to what expense it may lead. Since I have been a member of any legislative body no such sweeping order has ever been offered. It covers everything between here and Sudbury River, the rights of railroads, manufacturers and the people. Mr. Shaw read an editorial in the Boston Herald and an extract from another in the Advertiser advocating a postponement on account of the great expense and calling for a thorough investigation into the capacity of Mystic River. Mr. Shaw next read the City Engineer's statements before the Board of Aldermen on the subject of the Mystic River water supply and continued. In city document No. 29, the report of the Cochituate Water Board, I find the following figures:

	Gals.
The daily supply of water from the Cochituate Lake, "in a year of light rainfall" is.....	12,000,000
[See page 6, Cochituate Water Board's report March, 1873, City Doc. 29.]
The daily supply from Mystic Lake, "in a year of minimum rainfall" is.....	17,500,000
[See page 66, same document.]
Total.....	29,500,000
Territory now supplied by water from Lake Cochituate daily.....	16,000,000
Territory now supplied from Mystic Lake.....	5,113,930
Total.....	21,113,930

Deduct amount consumed, say 21,113,930 from 29,500,000 and we have left 8,386,070 as the surplus of present ready supply, over the quantity consumed, and this without anything from Sudbury River: thus leaving a sufficient quantity of water to supply, according to present rate of consumption, 150,000 more inhabitants than we now have, or about 450,000 people.

Chapter 177 of the acts of the Legislature of 1872 provides for the taking of water from Sudbury River upon the terms of chapter 67, acts of 1846, section 6, and chapter 187 of the acts of 1849 and chapter 16, acts of 1850, make similar provisions. [Mr. Shaw read the acts.] Now it is evident that without disturbing Sudbury River at all, we have a sufficient quantity of water to supply 150,000 more inhabitants than we now have.

The expenses of laying a new conduit, which the Water Board say with contingent expenses will be $4,788,318, if we take the Sudbury River water will be absolutely required, and the present conduit is now taxed to its utmost capacity to conduct the present supply from Lake Cochituate. Again, direct damages on the whole line of Sudbury River will be claimed, and collateral damages on Concord River and by the large manufacturing companies at Lowell, they being affected in their source of supply.

Better then stop this work, cast about and see where we stand, and even if at some slight expense, rather than run the gauntlet, with a liability of claims upon the city from corporations and individuals, perhaps to the amount of millions.

I have made these statements to show to what we are tending. I have been told that it was impossible for the City Engineer to estimate what the damages will be. If it is, let us know it. This matter should be properly referred and understood. If a matter of this kind is to be considered in this off-hand manner I think some one else ought to come here and sit in our places. I am as much in favor of an additional supply of water as any man in Boston, but when we are going into a thing of this kind without its being properly understood, I feel that I ought to raise my voice against it.

Mr. Thacher of Ward 15—The gentleman speaks of this matter as being a new thing. I hold in my hand the journal of the Common Council, March 20, 1873, when the report of the Cochituate Water Board was referred to the Committee on Water; on April 4, 1873, the report came back from the Water Committee and the order took its first reading April 10; one week later, the order authorizing the loan of five hundred thousand dollars to take water from Sudbury was passed, and among the yeas I find the name of the member from Ward 5. This order does not ask for an appropriation of money. The appropriation was passed April 10. What we ask is to confer on the Water Board, as agents of the city, the right to seize the land and river. It was supposed, until within a few days, that the Board had that right, but it was at the suggestion of the City Solicitor that the order was introduced. I will call attention to one fact, stated in the article read from the Herald. It says that 25,000,000 gallons are wasted daily over the dam at Mystic Lake. I went to the Mystic Board myself, and found that not a drop had gone over that dam in five months. This year the lake has been lower than ever before. It has lowered seven or eight feet.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I have been surprised to hear some of the figures that the gentleman has given us, and we should consider the subject very carefully. One of the most serious questions is that of a water supply. The terrible picture drawn by the gentleman cannot be questioned, but it cannot be compared with the still more terrible result of a city falling short of water. We must have water and the obtaining of fresh water is one of our problems. It is easy to find fault, but can the gentleman suggest where to look for a supply of water, where it can be found cheaper. We should not forget that we are a great municipality, growing very rapidly, especially if annexation is voted in such a wholesale manner as has recently been done. It appears that the Committee on Water looked carefully over the whole matter and reported Sudbury River as the most available. We acted upon that report. The initial expenditure has been made, the ground has been broken, plans have been made for going on, and now they come here to ask for authority that they supposed they had. Taking this view of it and the fact that the gentleman has figured up a few thousand gallons more than the actual demands of the city require, it makes little difference. The city is growing. If that committee has not been mistaken in its report the expense is not large enough to compensate for the loss the city would suffer if the water was not sufficient in case of any emergency. I hope we shall realize that we are a growing municipality and need more water.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I agree with the last speaker. We must have water; we have got it in Mystic River. I have been all through the arrangements, and I find that the supply of water in Mystic River will be all that is necessary for Boston and the adjoining towns. Woburn is supplied. The waste water alone is enough to supply Boston. The city should build a reservoir to hold that water. I have no doubt in my mind but that the water supply of Mystic River is enough to give us all that is needed without damming the river. A great cry was raised about Mystic water. We have got it; the pipes are connected with the city, and I can't see what object there is in taking water from Sudbury River when we have a good supply.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—This matter was fully canvassed by the Water Board more than a year ago, when the supply in Lake Cochituate was so low that the water was below the conduit. The Engineer made a very careful examination of the various sources in the State, and finally came to the conclusion that Sudbury River was the most available. The Committee on water fully concurred with him and so reported. The Water Board asked for an appropriation of $500,000 to commence operations. That appropriation has already been made, a contract has been made to build the tunnel four thousand feet long, and work on it has already commenced. But at a late day the board supposed that by chapter 177 of the acts of 1872 they had authority to go ahead and make the necessary surveys, etc., but in consultation with the City Solicitor, he gave the opinion that it is necessary for the City Council to vote authority to the Water Board to do it, and this order is simply to give the board the authority which the Legislature of 1872 gave them authority to do. If we are to have Sudbury River it is time this order was passed. If we are to take the back track and get Mystic, that is another matter. This water supply is the greatest question that we have had before us, or will have for years to come. Boston will require all that she can get from both Mystic Lake and Sudbury River.

Mr. Snaw of Ward 5—I don't come here to make a fool of myself, nor do I bring figures that won't bear the test. I am aware it is unpopular about City Hall to speak against these extravagances. I have n't a word to say in favor of this measure. I was in the Legislature when this bill was passed, and I did n't vote for it because I thought no sound lawyer would consider some of its provisions legal. It is brought here in plausible shape, but I am looking at the collateral consequences when the legal heads of Middlesex County shall claim for the corporations of Lowell a million dollars damages, and the city cannot keep from paying it. It is illegal for the city to undertake to take the land and water of people living on the banks or on the line of the river. The press does n't take hold of this matter without some knowledge of it. It is foolish economy, which is practised by many, to keep down proper improvements; but it is proper economy to look into every order which is proposed here. It isn't that people are not willing to pay money, but they don't properly examine the case. It is the millions we are to pay by and by. The people have n't had a chance to pass upon this matter. My friend from Ward 11 says it is easy to find fault. We are within two months of the session of the Legislature. It is easy for us to go there and get some modification of this law, without the liability of being mulcted in millions for damage. We have been urged to annex Charlestown, and water was the great desideratum. Now we have got the water we are told that to make it available we have got to spend a million or two of dollars. I was n't going to be humbugged into voting for the annexation of Charlestown on such a proposition. If I stand here alone I do not propose to take any back track. I have common sense enough to see that we are marching along in a straight line toward being mulcted in from five to six millions at least from the corporations in Lowell. If these considerations are worth no thought I am willing to abide by the result. Unless it can be shown by this report that I am wrong, I shall stand up against this proposition.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—It is distinctly understood that there will be great damages, and that matter was fully understood at the State House, and the Committee on Legislation had to fight it through. We know we can't do it without paying great damages. I am surprised when the gentleman reads articles from the newspapers that he reads but one side. He ought to have read an article from the Journal in favor of this plan, which I am sorry I left at home.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I don't know that any one has urged this matter to be pushed through tonight. I only ask the gentleman to give some substitute. He does n't give us any plan. I don't see how he can get the Legislature to relieve us from paying damages. If the committee haven't hit the right source, let us get some other. We admit all the gentleman says, but can it be done cheaper? It must be done.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the consideration of the subject was further postponed until next Thursday evening at half-past eight o'clock.

REVISION OF THE CITY CHARTER.

Report of the Committee on Ordinances recommending the passage of the order on the 8th page of City Doc. No. 115, 1873, for the appointment of a Commission to examine and report what changes are necessary in the Charter and Laws for the government of the city, in view of the prospective increase in area and population.

The order was read once.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I hope the Council will concur with the Board in passing this order. It has been conferred upon three or four times and everything has been said that can be said. It is simply an order of inquiry, and does n't commit us to anything. When that report is made it will be time enough to discuss it. I have been very patient all summer for this thing and have consented to a recommendation, and I shall not consent to any more. I am done with it.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I had the honor to sign a minority report for the reason that to my mind there had been no reason given why any such commission should be appointed. It was suggested that the city had grown large and was getting a great deal larger and for that reason it was like a boy who had outgrown his breeches—and that was the only reason given. Our system of city, State and national government are all borrowed from the constitution of England, and all have three departments, one executive and two legislative bodies, and that is substantially all that a city charter amounts to. It has something about the election of Assessors and the School Committee, but the great necessity of a charter is that it provide for a municipal corporation. It provides for a Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council, and for filling vacancies when they occur. And what more will it do when it is revised? In these times of annexation it is rather curious to recur to the history of the metropolis of London, which has no more inhabitants than it had in the time of Charles the Second. If we have got a good charter which answers our purpose, it is best to hold on to it, unless some reason is given for a change. We have been going on just as if it were impossible to have steamers come to our harbor unless we annexed more territory. I only speak of this because once in a while people get an idea of change and when once started they go ahead until they have to take the back track. Everybody deems the charter excellent except for the size of the city. You have got something working well, in some directions, and if you get a new thing, as I said in regard to the Fire Department, you don't know how it is going to work. This charter is a thing of which we may justly be proud. I should hold on to it, adding what is necessary each year, but making changes as they are needed. I remember reading some years ago of some learned men who undertook to frame on paper a good system of government, but they found out their mistake. That is the best which, on the whole, works well, that answers your purposes and enables you to go through with the practical affairs of this life. See where the charter can be amended. I think it might be desirable in view of the increase of this body that it would be well to lessen the representation. But who can judge of that better than this body itself. Why should we have a commission to overhaul this venerable charter which seems to answer every purpose? Well, a Metropolitan Board of Public Works is suggested by the majority. That is the mischief of getting an idea started. When you start on one of these notions of improvement your hobby horses have to be ridden. We have a Board of Health and now we are to have a Commission on the Fire Department, and now here comes up the proposition to have two more, a Board of Public Works and a Police Commission. By and by you can't tell how this thing is governed. At the State House there are so many commissions that it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to find out how things are done. Why should this great change take place without some better reason being given for it? The gentleman from Ward 16 says it is a matter of inquiry, and don't amount to much. Why don't you make inquiries about your city charter that you are proud of without sending it to a commission to tinker and fuss over?

Mr. West of Ward 16—I said this was a matter of inquiry, and could n't do much harm and might do much good. The Philadelphia lawyers may be puzzled, but the Boston lawyers appear to be raising the objection. I move the previous question.

Lost by a rising vote—3 for and 41 against.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I want to say something on this question. The gentleman from Ward 12 makes a very happy illustration. The city charter is like the snowball with which the boys play. It began in 1822 when the city contained 49,000 inhabitants. It was accepted by the people and served their purpose until 1854, when the people were wise enough to have it remodelled. Now, sir, I have some more figures [laughter]. In 1873, we have 275,000 inhabitants, exclusive of the territory voted to be annexed. The gentleman says some one has proposed to do away with one branch of the City Government, as if such a thing had ever been thought of. I never heard any such suggestion made. In 1822, when this charter was accepted by the people, Boston had only 3000 acres of territory. That was fifty-one years ago. In 1854 when it was remodelled and revised, Boston had 3100 acres, and 153,000 population. That was nineteen years ago. Now we have a territory of 9902 acres. The expenditures for the fiscal year 1822-23 were $172,369 70; for 1853-4, when the charter was revised, $3,367,418 92; in 1872-3, $16,087,393 95. The debt of the city in 1822-3 was $101,388 65; in 1853-4, the consolidated debt was $7,415,869 05; in 1872-3, the consolidated debt is $31,841,156 44, to which must be added the five million which have been passed upon and have not yet gone into the funded debt, which makes the actual debt of Boston today about thirty-seven million dollars. It has increased from $101,000 when the charter was first adopted, to $37,000,000. In 1822 the police force consisted of six men; in 1854 there were two hundred, and now everybody who has tried to get a friend on the force knows there are 575 men. In 1854 we had n't any horse railroads; now the number of miles of track is seventy-five, and the passengers carried over them in 1872 were thirty-seven millions. I leave out of this statement the whole of the travel over the steam railroads. The gentleman says he sees no cause for building up the little charter made in 1822 and revised in 1854, when there has been this immense increase in population and property. These figures show there is reason enough. In 1854 the imports into Boston were $45,985,545; in 1872-3, $68,083,267, showing a gain of fifty per cent. since the last revision. The exports in 1854 were $16,408,341; in 1872-3 they were $27,038,929, showing a gain of seventy per cent. So much for figures. Now I am going to refer to a matter to which I have referred once before. Mr. Shaw then reviewed his statements at the previous meeting relative to the approval of bills by the chairmen of committees, which should never, in his opinion, be allowed. I don't know, said he, that any chairman has ever done wrong, but I say it is a dangerous tendency. If for nothing else, I think the city charter should be revised for the purpose of inserting a clause that every appropriation brought before a committee shall not be carried except by a majority vote. That is what the people mean, and propose to have it done. There should also be a Joint Committee on Expenditures, to examine every expenditure before it shall be acted upon, so that the committee shall be able to say what it is proposed to do, and when an explanation is asked here, an intelligent answer may be had. People are dissatisfied with the management of their representatives in the City Government. Let us try to make such laws for the control of the city as will work for the best interest of the city and the citizens.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I listen to the gentleman with very great pleasure when he talks about the people. I am opposed to a revision of the city charter, if it is going to oppose giving the chairman authority to approve bills. What is needed is a good chairman at the head of a committee. It will stop junketing. I stand here as clean as the gentleman from Ward 5 does. What does he take us for? a pack of thieves? [Laughter.] I fail to find any of the people making this hue and cry in any ward. So far as this revision of the city charter is concerned, I hope it will never take from the chairman of a committee the power to approve bills. Your Republican party, which has a majority, should put up some honest men, and if you have n't got any, they can come to the Democratic party. For my part I would like to have this matter go to a commission go to the people.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I fail to see how any single member of the Council should object to the passage of this order. It does n't specify or recommend any changes in the city charter. If the word commission had not been used the gentleman from Ward 12 would n't have made this chronic objection. He says there are changes needed in the charter. If so, why does he refuse to have the commissioners appointed? When the changes are recommended we can act upon them. I understand the gentleman in one place to say that the charter is well enough, but in another place he says if changes are needed let us do it here. When the changes are recommended the discussion of them will come in very properly. It is taking up time for nothing. I have just read over the minority report, and the only thing they say is that it was drawn by Chief-Justice Shaw, and it would be perfectly absurd to make any change in it. I don't know that we should be called upon to make any changes, but if the gentleman himself was on that commission, I think we should have some changes recommended. It is only for the commission to examine and see whether any changes would be in place.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—The gentleman from Ward 9 has exactly stated the case. He gives no reason why a commission shall be appointed. He says he don't know that there will be any changes made, and yet why not appoint a commission? I never said changes were necessary, but I said when changes become necessary then make the specified change. I don't know any changes which are necessary. You don't need to revise the charter for the purpose of enlarging or diminishing the City Government. We have lived and prospered under this venerable charter, and from a small population we have got to be hundreds of thousands; until our valuation is immense. The gentleman comes up with an array of figures, but gave not the slightest reason in the world for a change. He would have something to prevent committees permitting the chairmen to approve bills. That is the great maggot in his brain. The majority have stepped outside of the recommendation of the Mayor and bring in this matter. It would be an enormous expense to codify the laws, general and special, relating to the city of Boston. If you do that you have got to have all the laws relating to the towns, for the Board of Aldermen have the same powers as the Selectmen.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The gentleman tells us that we should not adopt this order for the commission to revise this charter, because we have lived under an instrument drawn by Chief-Justice Shaw. I have never seen the original charter, but all that I have seen was the one adopted in 1854. Now in that charter there appears to be six sections affected by legislation. People are supposed to know what changes are needed in the charter, and all that is proposed to do is to have the Mayor select some wise-headed citizens who shall present to the Legislature, after it has been approved by the City Council, a charter to be adopted. The gentleman says the city of London has not changed its population for a certain time. He knows very well that the city of London, which lies within the circuit of its old walls, is not the city we are accustomed to read of in history. London is governed principally by a Board of Public Works, appointed by Parliament, and yet the gentleman would have us believe that the old city charter suffices for so many changes. London is not comparable to Boston in the completeness of its charter. People who live in that metropolis recognize this fact. Practically London has no City Government at all, but is governed by a board appointed by Parliament. All of us have our views how the city charter ought to be amended. I have heard my friend on my left say that it ought to be amended by increasing the terms of members of the City Government. I think the Mayor and Aldermen should have longer terms of office and the members of the Council should be reduced. I think we should have a Board of Public Works, but we can't expect to come here and vote on the plans first as if we were in town meeting. When gentlemen say the city charter does not need revising, they do so in opposition to the views of their friends and neighbors. We must either refer this matter to a committee or to a commission, and the opinion seems to be that you can get better talent outside of the City Government than you can within. The simple question is, How shall we do it? When it comes back we will say whether we will approve of it. One thing is very clear: if the city needs a revision of the charter, it will be revised by the Legislature when it is appealed to by the citizens of Boston. The reason our action has been so patiently awaited by the people is because it is thought we will ultimately do as the people wish. I regard it just as I did the Fire Commission. If we don't do this, the next City Council will.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—The gentleman from Ward 12 says we have grown rich under the present charter, and asks why we should wish to amend it. The case is something like the reformation of the borough system of England. Sidney Smith tells of a physician who said to his patient, you have grown rich and prosperous with the gout, why should you wish to change it? I don't mean to say that our charter bears the same relation to the city as this disease did to the patient, but to say that we have been rich and prosperous under it is no reason why we should not improve it. We grew rich and prosperous with narrow streets, in the burnt district, but is that a reason for not widening them? The gentleman says no argument has been advanced in favor of the change. This style of argument is getting to be very chronic with him. In the debates on the Fire Commission every night he has stated that no new argument has been made for one. I think the Board of Aldermen should be enlarged on account of the increased size of the city, because don't think the number is sufficient to give proper representation to the outlying sections of the city.

East Boston, Dorchester, Roxbury and South Boston each want an alderman, and the city proper does not obtain sufficient representation. There are many other matters, but I don't wish to take up time or cut off debate, and in order to give gentlemen time to discuss it, I move further consideration be post-posed till a quarter before nine o'clock next Thursday evening.

It was so ordered.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to allow not exceeding $3000 for extra clerk hire in Treasurer's office. Passed.

Order for Mayor to petition next Legislature for establishment of a State normal school in this city. Passed.

Report and order to furnish passes over the East Boston ferries to the Chief and Deputy-Chief of Police, and to the members of Police Department, in East Boston. Passed.

Report and order authorizing a transfer of not exceeding $3500 to be added to amount authorized for completion of Engine House No. 12. Passed—yeas, 53; nays, 0.

Orders, authorizing $72 53 to be expended in repairing armory of Company K, First Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., in South Boston; authorizing not exceeding $375 to be expended in fitting up headquarters of Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., at 562 Washington street; authorizing $1200 per annum to be paid for rent of armory of First Company of Cadets, M. V. M., at 94 Tremont street; authorizing not exceeding $450 to be expended in repairing and furnishing armory of Company F, First Regiment, M. V. M., at junction of Warren and Palmer streets. Severally passed—yeas, 55; nays, 0.

THE FIRE COMMISSION.

The ordinance to establish a Fire Department (City Document No. 119) came up on its second reading, and on motion of Perkins of Ward 6 it was read by its title. Mr. Perkins then moved the previous question.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 thought this would be unfair to all parties.

Mr. Perkins withdrew his motion.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—I desire to say a few words on this subject inasmuch as I was at first opposed to the passage of this ordinance. This is the first time in all my experience in this Council that I have felt compelled to vote for a measure of which I did not really approve. In common with many others who foresaw what would be the inevitable result of adding largely to the territory of Boston I voted against all annexation, but on opening a paper, on the 8th of October, I found to my regret that Charlestown, Brighton and West Roxbury had been added to the city, and that the people of Boston had thus virtually surrendered the right which they had enjoyed so long, of managing their own municipal affairs, and that the arguments against a commission, which were valid before, were then worthless, because the whole scene had changed. I did not arrive at this conclusion by the great array of figures introduced by the gentleman from Ward 5, nor his comparisons of our department with those in other cities, nor by the arguments of gentlemen who favor a fire commission, nor from fear of the whip and spur which has been held over this Council so long by one or more of the newspapers of our city; but, sir, in my judgment, after next January it will be absolutely impossible for either the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department, the Committee on Paving or the Common Sewers to perform their duties satisfactorily either to themselves or the people. Well then, what follows? Why, the duties of these committees must be performed by paid agents who will devote their entire time to the city; and so it will be with the Water Board. To my mind it is folly to suppose, with this enormous amount of territory added to the city, and with the duties of the Aldermen increased so largely, that we can go on as we have done. I do not take any stock in this idea of reorganizing the Fire Department for the purpose of economy, for the expenses of the department will be nearer $1,200,000 than $500,000. Our department will be larger than that of New York, and the estimated cost of that department for the next year is one and a half millions. Nor do I believe that the department will be any more efficient than it has been, for I believe from what I have seen and learned since I have been upon the Joint Standing Committee that the department stands as high as any department in the United States, and with the changes which have been made (not by the new ordinance, as one of the newspapers would have the people believe), but changes which have been made by the committee, together with those made by the Water Board in substituting large pipes and Lowry hydrants, in my opinion the department is better able to extinguish fires than it has ever been. But if the people by their votes annex territory to Boston to such an extent that the duties of the City Government must be farmed out in order to have them properly attended to, it is not for me to hang back in the hreeching and try to prevent it.

There will be just as much need of a department of public works after next January as there will be for a fire commission, and although I have always opposed commissions, and believe they are capable of producing much mischief, yet I do not see how we can help ourselves, for Boston has drawn an elephant, and the people will sooner or later learn to their sorrow that annexation is a dear whistle.

For these reasons it has appeared to me that a change is demanded, and I shall be compelled to vote reluctantly for this measure.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5—I presume, from the vote that has been taken, that for some reason or another members of this Council have made up their minds that a commission is necessary. What influences have been brought to bear—whether it is the pressure of public opinion, or fear of the newspapers, I do not know. It makes no difference to me. I am not a member of the Committee on Fire Department, and never have been and when I voted on the question I voted from my own opinions, regardless of what anybody might think, and I am certain that before twelve months some of these gentlemen who have shown the weak knees in this matter will find that this dear people don't believe in commissions. The Legislature appropriated ten thousand dollars just simply to publish a list of the vertebrate animals. There should be a special appropriation next year for publishing a supplementary list, giving a list of the animals which had weak knees and back bones. But I don't propose to be among them. I have n't heard any argument to win over any man who voted against a commission before. It is true some of the newspapers said some members of the Council were not above the level of their constituents. I am not above the level of the people. The idea has been circulated about that the people are not able to legislate for themselves. It may do for imperial France and for the crowned heads of Europe to make directories and commissions, but if I understand the institutions of this country we don't believe in directories to take charge of our liberties. If it is taken for granted that we are going to have a commission, why rush it through the Council? The gentleman from Ward 6 is usually very polite; he is usually the very essence of politeness; he comes from a place where politeness is to be found. He is generally very fair. I am glad to say that he was wrong only for about a minute. I have an amendment which I wish to submit, and I move it be substituted for section two—it is as follows:

Section 2. The qualified voters of the city of Boston shall, at the annual municipal election next, after the passage of this ordinance, be called upon to give in their votes for three able and discreet men, being inhabitants of said city, who shall constitute the Board of Fire Commissioners of said city; one of whom shall be an experienced civil and military engineer, and one of whom shall be chosen for the term of one year, one for the term of two years, and one for the term of three years, from the first Monday of January next ensuing, and until their successors are chosen and qualified; and, at any subsequent annual election, the qualified voters of the city shall choose one person, qualified as aforesaid, to be a member of said board, to serve for a term of three years. The person so elected shall devote his time to the duties of the office and shall not actively engage in any other business. No member of either branch of the City Council shall hold the office of Fire Commissioner. For their services the Fire Commissioners shall receive such compensation as the City Council may from time to time determine.

Mr. Mahan argued at length in support of the amendment, dwelling upon the workings of the Street Commission and the importance of keeping the Government as near the people as possible.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 raised the point that the amendment was not legal as the "Fire Commissioners" could not be elected, those officers not being specified in the City Charter, and unless they are the Board of Aldermen cannot validly order such an election. He asked for the ruling of the Chair.

The President ruled that the amendment could be entertained, although he was aware that there is some authority for the presiding officer to rule an order out because it is illegal.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—Such an amendment would render the ordinance inoperative and kill the whole thing. It provides that the commissioners shall be chosen at the election subsequent to the passage of the ordinance. Suppose the amendment is legal, which can be settled by competent authority. It can be bandied about between the Aldermen and Council till next December. Then the election of these officers would take place in 1874. Even if it should be legal the delay is against it.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—If this amendment had come from an advocate of a commission it would have more weight with me. By adopting it we should fall into the difficulty we are trying to avoid by throwing these important offices into politics. Mr. Denny was sure every member had made up his mind, and he hoped the Council would vote squarely on the question. Whatever the decision he would stand by it.

Mr. Upham of Ward 16 offered an amendment to section four, which he deemed very much needed on account of the immense power the ordinance puts into the hands of the three commissioners in the expenditures of money. He moved to insert in the fifth line, after the words "appoint," these words: "a Chief Engineer, a Superintendent of Fire Alarms, and fix their compensation, subject to the approval and confirmation of the City Council"; also to insert, after the word "came" in the eighth line, "except that the discharge of the Chief Engineer and the Superintendent of Fire Alarms shall be subject to the approval and confirmation of the City Council." If the Council, said he, will adopt that amendment one very great objection to the ordinance will be removed, and I would vote for it. I wish to say, also, that I have consulted no member of the City Government.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 said the legal objections to his amendment had suggested themselves to him, and he had n't time to settle in his mind whether they are valid or not. If the City Solicitor should say it is illegal the Legislature could give the Council the power in January. There is no need of haste. I offer this proposition in good faith. Let us consider this proposition, and if there is anything good in it let us adopt it, and, if not, let us reject it.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said, For goodness sake let us take a vote. Even the gentleman himself has doubts about the legality of the amendment.

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 called for the previous question, and it was ordered. Mr. Flynn called for the yeas and nays on the amendment and the main question.

The vote was first taken on Mr. Mahan's amendment, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Abbott, Anderson, Bleiler, Brennan, Collins, Dacey, Doherty, Flatley, Flynn, Hughes, Kingsley, Madden, Mahan, Martin, McCue, McKenny, Thacher, Upham, Warren, Wells, Woodward—21.

Nays—Messrs. Adams, Barnes, Bicknell, Blackmar, Boardman, Brackett, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Jones, Lamb, Marston, Morse, Page, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Shepard, Tower, Train, West, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods—36.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Bowles, Dean, Edwards, Kelley, Loring, Weston—6.

So the amendment was rejected.

The vote was next taken on Mr. Upham's amendment.

Yeas—Messrs. Abbott, Anderson, Bleiler, Brennan, Burt, Collins, Dacey, Davis, Dean, Doherty, Flatley, Flynn, Hines, Hughes, Jones, Kingsley, Loring, Madden, Mahan, Marston, Martin, McCue, McKenny, Pease, Thacher, Upham, Warren, Wells, Woodward—29.

Nays—Messrs. Adams, Barnes, Bicknell, Blackmar, Boardman, Brackett, Burditt, Caton, Cudworth, Darrow, Denny, Hall, Harrington, Holmes, Lamb, Morse, Page, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Shepard, Tower, Train, West, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods—30.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Bowles, Edwards, Kelley, Weston—4.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. West of Ward 16 desired to offer an amendment, but the Chair ruled it out of order.

The ordinance was then passed, by the following vote:

Yeas—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Barnes, Bicknell, Blackmar, Bleiler, Boardman, Brackett, Burditt, Caton, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Lamb, Marston, Morse, Page, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Shepard, Tower, Train, West, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods—36.

Nays—Messrs. Anderson, Brennan, Burt, Collins, Dacey, Dean, Doherty, Flatley, Flynn, Hughes, Jones, Kingsley, Loring, Madden, Mahan, Martin, McCue, McKenny, Thacher, Upham, Warren, Wells, Woodward—23.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Bowles, Edwards, Kelly, Weston—4.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 moved to reconsider the vote just passed, hoping it would not prevail.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table, and called for the yeas and nays, which were ordered.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved to adjourn, and the motion was lost—yeas 24, nays 34.

Mr. Mahan's motion to lay on the table was rejected—23 yeas, 35 nays.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 moved the previous question and called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved the Council now adjourn, and called for the yeas and nays. Lost—23 yeas, 33 nays.

Mr. Mahan moved to lay the motion for the previous question on the table.

The Chair ruled the motion out of order.

Mr. Mahan doubted the vote.

Mr. Shaw raised the point that the gentleman did not rise to doubt the vote.

The Chair ruled that the point was well taken.

Mr. Mahan moved the Council adjourn.

The Chair ruled the motion out of order.

Mr. Flynn asked if the gentleman from Ward 5 desired to lay the motion of the gentleman from Ward 6 on the table.

The Chair said the question was on taking the main question.

Mr. Mahan raised the point that the motion to adjourn always takes precedence of the previous question.

The Chair said that no business had intervened since the last motion to adjourn had been rejected. They had called the yeas and nays, and that was not business. The motion was a repetition, and only the yeas and nays had intervened. One fifth of the members have a right to call for the yeas and nays; they had done so, and that was the only thing which had been done.

Mr. Mahan rose to a question of privilege. His motion was that the motion to take the previous question be laid on the table. That he understood the Chair to decide out of order. After that had been decided by the Chair the yeas and nays were called for upon the previous question and were ordered. Then after that had been done, he moved to adjourn, and this question of privilege was that business had intervened between those two motions.

The Chair said that was all that had transpired between the motion to adjourn and the motion to adjourn previously made. The motion to adjourn was ruled out of order, because no business had intervened.

The yeas and nays were ordered on the question, "Shall the main question be put," and it was ordered—37 yeas, 17 nays.

Mr. Mahan moved to adjourn and called for the yeas and nays. Lost—yeas 32, nays 35.

The Chair said the question was now on reconsidering the vote passing the ordinance.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 suggested that as the majority was determined to have the vote taken tonight it would be best not to make any dilatory motions.

The motion to reconsider was rejected, 22 yeas, 36 nays, the same members voting against reconsideration who voted for the passage of the ordinance.

On motion of Mr. Mahan of Ward 5, the Council adjourned.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

On the petition of Haley, Morse & Co., for leave to locate steam engine at 411 Washington street, an order of notice was passed for a hearing on Monday, November 17, at four o'clock P. M.

On the hearing on the orders of notice on the petitions of John Roessle, to use steam engine on Pynehon street, and Atherton Brown to use steam engine at 167-169 Summer street, no objection being offered, the petitions were severally recommitted to the Committee on Steam Engines.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD.

The special assignment, being the hearing of all parties interested in the proposed location of the tracks of the Metropolitan Railroad on Beacon street, from Gloucester street to Brighton avenue, was taken up.

Hon. Harvy Jewell, counsel for the Metropolitan Railroad, after alluding to the postponement of two weeks ago, by which it was hoped a lot of land could be secured for the stable without the necessity of crossing Beacon street, said there were, however, certain restrictions on the lot which prevented the erection of a wooden building upon it. They supposed until last Thursday that they could secure a release of these restrictions, but a gentleman who had some houses fronting on Beacon street said that a stable there would be detrimental, and his relations with Mr. Braman were such that the latter has declined to lease to the railroad. They had asked the Water Board to lay pipes from the corner of Hereford street, and their plans were all ready. Since then they have been in negotiation with Mr. Braman and others who own land on the opposite side of the way, but on this property there are restrictions too, and the same individual believes that the maintenance of a stable on the opposite side of Marlborough street would be detrimental to his interests. They are not without hope that we may carry this last project through. If not, there is a possibility that another site may be obtained temporarily, which will involve much less use of Beacon street than was at first asked for. If a lease of Pray's stable can be obtained, and they can get authority to cross Beacon street at that point, they will be accommodated. Except that 4500 feet of land, this site on Parker street is the only one not under restrictions against being used for a stable. If any persons object, of course we cannot go against them. They hoped not to touch Beacon street at all. Mr. Jewell suggested that the matter be laid over, and on motion of Alderman Power further consideration of the subject was postponed till Tuesday, November 4, at four o'clock P. M.

CHANGE OF BOUNDARY LINES.

Notice was received from James Greenough, William H. Foster and Charles Foster, inhabitants of Brookline, of their intention to petition the next General Court to change the boundary line between Brookline and Boston. Referred to the Committee on Legislative Affairs.

FROM THE STREET COMMISSIONERS.

A communication was received from the Street Commissioners transmitting the accompanying order, adopted by that Board, for concurrence by the City Council:

Whereas, Charles G. Greene, James H. Beals, N. G. Greene and J. G. Beals, for themselves and all other owners, owning the estate on Water street, at the corner of Devonshire street, which is hereinafter described, object to being assessed to pay a portion of the expense of widening Water street; and having surrendered the said estate to the city, pursuant to the statute in such cases provided, and in the opinion of this Board the public convenience and necessity require that the said estate should be taken for the said purpose, it is therefore hereby Ordered, That the said estate be and the same hereby is taken for the purpose aforesaid, bounded as follows, viz.: eastwardly by land of Edward A. White and others, trustees, and by land now, or at one time, of the heirs of George Howe, seventy-five and forty-three hundredths feet; southwardly by Water street, fifty-one and fifty-five hundredths feet; westwardly by Devonshire street, seventy-three and eighty hundredths feet; and northwardly by land now or formerly of the said heirs of George Howe, forty-eight and seven hundredths feet; containing thirty-seven hundred, sixteen and fifty hundredths square feet, more or less; being shown on a plan in the City Surveyor's office, dated January 24, 1873. And this Board doth adjudge the expense of taking the said estate will amount to two hundred and seventy-eight thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents.

The order was read once.

A communication was received from the Street Commissioners, in response to the order of September 15, 1873, transmitting their estimate of the cost of extending Granite street, in South Boston, from its junction with Second and Third streets on a line parallel with A street, to Broadway, which they estimate will be $39,000.

On motion of Alderman Emery, the communication was referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

A communication was received from the Street Commissioners stating that they have received important petitions asking for the extension of either D or E street, in South Boston, across the Old Colony Railroad to Dorchester avenue. Whenever the streets are laid out, but not before, the railroad corporation or the city may require of the Board of Railroad Commissioners an adjudication upon the necessity of other than a grade crossing of the railroad company's tracks, and if the Railroad Commissioners determine that such a necessity does exist, then a special commission is to be appointed to decide who bears the expense—or it may be divided. At a hearing on an order of notice for the extension of D street, October 1, 1873, the urgent need of a street to Dorchester avenue at this point was clearly shown, and it would have been at once laid out but for this crossing of the railway tracks. The counsel of the Old Colony corporation said at the hearing that they should apply, if the street was extended across their road, at once, for other than a grade crossing, to the Railroad Commissioners. Should their application be successful the expense to the city would in the opinion of this Board be ten times in excess of what it would cost with a grade crossing, and as this expense would in a large proportion be chargeable to appropriations not set apart for the use of the Street Commissioners, they beg leave to ask the honorable Council's advice upon the laying out of the street.

Referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

JAIL EXPENSES.

A requisition for $2289 05, for expenses of Suffolk County Jail for month ending Nov 1, was presented by the Sheriff, and being duly certified, was ordered paid.

The bonds of Richard F. Andrews, John D. Reed, et al., constables, were presented and approved.

FROM THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Requests were received from the School Committee for a primary schoolhouse at City Point; for additional primary-school accommodations in the Everett District; for a primary school-site in the Gibson District; for additional primary accommodations in the Gibson District; for an office for master in the Lincoln Schoolhouse. Severally referred to the Joint Committee on Public Instruction.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to construct cesspools for the surface drainage of Ruggles street, between Tremont and Parker streets, at a cost of $1200. Passed.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to reset edge-stones and repave gutters and sidewalks on north side of Dudley street, between Winslow and Dearborn streets, at a cost of $1000. Passed.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to raise and grade Cabot and Weston streets, and repave the gutters and sidewalks, at a cost of $6000. Passed.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to pave with brick the unfinished sidewalks on Tremont street, from Ruggles to Parker street. Passed.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The order for the Mayor to petition the next Legislature for the annexation of a portion of Brookline to Boston came up referred to the Committee on Legislative Affairs. The Board concurred.

The report and orders to furnish steam heating apparatus and a fence for the yard at engine house, Ward 14, at an estimated cost of $3000; and for a transfer from the Reserved Fund to pay therefor, if not exceeding that sum, came up with amendments to insert "for hoisting apparatus for hose tower, block stone for paving driveway, gas fixtures, edge-stones and brick sidewalk on Quincy street." The Board concurred.

Report and order authorizing a transfer of not exceeding $3500 to be added to amount authorized for completion of Engine House No. 12. Passed—yeas 11, nays 0.

Orders authorizing not exceeding $375 to be expended in fitting up headquarters of Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., at 562 Washington street; authorizing $1200 per annum to be paid for rent of armory of First Company of Cadets, M. V. M., at 94 Tremont street; and authorizing not exceeding $450 to be expended in repairing and furnishing armory of Company F, First Regiment, M. V. M., at junction of Warren and Palmer streets. Severally passed in concurrence—yeas 12, nays 0.

Report and order to furnish passes over the East Boston Ferries to the Chief and Deputy Chief of Police, and to the members of Police Department in East Boston.

Alderman Hulbert—I don't quite like this thing. The course hitherto adopted is the best. It has been the custom that each department shall take care of itself. If one use any material from the other an account is kept. If the Committee on Police think it best to furnish policemen with tickets they should do so; but I trust the matter of passes will not be introduced. This is only the entering wedge to a form of trouble which I think had better not be entered upon. I trust the old custom will be continued, and if the police require free passes I hope the committee or the Chief will purchase tickets as before, and let each department stand on its own basis.

Alderman Emery—This subject was before the Committee on East Boston Ferries on a petition of certain police officers, that they might be furnished with passes or tickets, and the Committee on Ferries, of which the gentleman who last spoke is a member, had quite a long hearing and examined the subject pretty thoroughly. They had before them the Chief of Police, and would have had some members of the Committee on Police if they could have been found at the time. After looking the matter over pretty thoroughly they concluded it would be best to furnish a certain number of passes, as is very clearly set forth in the report of the committee. The committee thought the passes very much preferable for those who have to use tickets very frequently. As to each department paying its own expenses that matter was talked over, and I believe the order provides for that. The expense of the passes is to be charged to the Committee on Police. All the committee present were unanimously in favor of passing the order.

Alderman Clark—That order covers the ground taken by the Alderman from the Highland District. It proposes to furnish the chief of police and certain members of the department with tickets, the expense of which shall be charged to the appropriation for the Police Department. It is nothing more than proper that those men should have such expenses paid by the city, and it should be charged to the Police Department.

Alderman Hulbert—The ground is not covered. I have no objection to the department purchasing tickets, but I do object to inaugurating the system of dead heads. It makes no difference to the department that they shall have tickets instead of passes. I object to introducing the system of passes because it will not end with the Police Department. We shall have dead heads, and they will soon begin to multiply. We will furnish tickets and they should use them. If the system is once begun it will not be confined to the police, and it will be merely the entering wedge for dead-heading the employes of the other departments.

Alderman Gibson—I fully indorse what Alderman Hulbert says. The present plan is very simple. The tickets are all printed and are liable to be counterfeited. The Chief of Police has authority to buy tickets for the policemen and take it out of the appropriation. We are now running under a very straight system, and so long as we keep it as it is it will be better to stand by the ticket system than to make a change. We have had but one difficulty so far—some of the tickets unavoidably stepped out one day. If we multiply them and get different kinds there will be more opportunity to make others. The police can be supplied if the Chief sees fit to purchase them and deal them out from time to time as they are demanded.

Alderman Emery—It was to obviate this very difficulty of abuse of the ticket system that the system of passes, so far as those few individuals were concerned, was recommended by the committee. The matter of issuing tickets can be abused, as every gentleman knows, because the person for whom it is designed can use it or it can be used by his family or any one else. But the pass is only for the party having it, and is to be issued only by the Chief of Police or his assistant.

Alderman Quincy—If these passes are to be paid for, I don't see that they are anything more than season tickets, and I don't see the necessity for making the change.

Alderman Stebbins—The chairman of the committee has stated this case very plainly. He also states why the committee report in favor of the passes instead of season tickets. These passes are to be issued at the rate of $12 a year, and they will be given to the officers of the stations who cross the ferries oftener than any other. There is great danger of abuse in furnishing tickets to policemen by the Chief or his assistant. This pass is required to be shown at the ferry by the owner when he is passing over, and as the policemen are all known by the tollmen, they will see that the pass is used by none other than the person to whom it is issued. A majority of the committee from the other branch were in favor of issuing free passes to the entire Police Department, but the members from this branch objected to it, and it was decided to issue them in this form, and they will be issued as the Chief of Police shall direct.

Alderman Gibson—The greatest objection with me is that the policemen would be a privileged class. If gentlemen had had the experience we have had in this matter, they would see how it works. I don't wish to bar policemen from free passes if the Committee on Ferries want to give them, but I believe it is best to have one kind of ticket. As the Chief has leave to buy as many tickets as he pleases, it is a question whether it is best to have only one kind of ticket or more. Money would be saved by buying tickets by the package.

Alderman Emery—It is claimed that there is great abuse in the use of these tickets, and great pressure has been made for the passes. It was represented before the committee that the abuse could hardly be avoided. They have to furnish a certain amount, and there is great pressure for many more, and it was thought best to give them what they ought to have and not let them get any more. It was desired by many that the whole Police Department should go free, and some were very tenacious in their views. But we finally agreed to report exactly as we have done.

Alderman Hulbert—If this is so, then so much the worse for the Police Department. If the Chief of that department can't manage its affairs I don't think the East Boston Ferry Department should be required to help him do it. You may start this thing today with free passes for the policemen who have to go across the ferries frequently, and next year you will be asked for passes for policemen who live in East Boston; and so on next year there will be something more. I believe the Chief of Police can take care of the men in his department and resist the pressure. Besides, it is best that the East Boston ferries should remain as they are. What I object to is the giving of free passes. The ferries are improving every year, and East Boston people are better served today than they ever were before—better than they would be if the ferries were free. And I think the people over there are coming to see that this is so. If I were a citizen of East Boston I would not prefer free ferries. We are giving them better and better accommodations, and now if we inaugurate anything that looks to the matter of free passes we will make a mistake. This is why I oppose it. I want each department to stand on its own basis, and I am decidedly opposed to introducing passes in any form.

Alderman Quincy—I don't see so much harm in this order since it has been explained, but I should vote against it until it is shown that there is a necessity for it. Why instruct them to sell season tickets of any sort when the Chief of Police can go or send there and buy them at any time? If it can be shown that there is necessity for the order I will vote for it, but at present I can't see the use of it.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the order was laid on the table.

OVERSEER OF THE POOR.

Alderman Brown, from the Committee on Overseers of the Poor, made a report nominating Alvan Simonds to fill the vacancy in the Board of Overseers of the Poor, caused by the death of Thomas Blasland. The report was accepted.

On motion of Alderman Brown, the Board proceeded to ballot, and Alvan Simonds was unanimously chosen to fill the vacancy.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

Alderman Stebbins—At the last meeting of the Board I presented an order conferring upon the Water Board power to seize lands upon the line of Sudbury River. I expressed the opinion then that an order of inquiry might be very properly substituted, but the emergency of the case was such that the order was passed. Considerable discussion has ensued, both in the other branch and in the press, and statements have been made in the newspapers which may be construed into an attack on the City Engineer, and which I believe not to be true. I think those statements are made upon a wrong basis. But delay has ensued, which may be better, after all; and I now offer the following order:

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be requested to furnish information to the City Council as early as practicable, upon the following points, namely: The present condition of water in Mystic Pond, as regards quantity and purity; the approximate cost of obtaining a supply from said pond for the city of Boston; the objections, if any, to relying upon the same as a source of supply; the condition of the present conduit from Lake Cochituate, as regards capacity and safety; and the changes needed to prevent any waste of the present supply.

Alderman Stebbins—The Water Board, anticipating the passage of this order, have already commenced the inquiry called for, and as soon as a statement can be prepared it will be laid before the City Council. I have also seen statements in the press that the Mystic water is perfectly pure. I have here a specimen of what Mystic water does for steam boilers (exhibiting a solid collection of sediment taken from a boiler) and it is a subject of general complaint in East Boston. Pipes which ought to last ten years now last only three, five or six or eight months. Another point which I have no doubt will be brought out is that the Mystic water is brought here over a wooden bridge. Both bridges between Boston and Charlestown are connected with large lumbar yards, and it is easy to conceive of a great conflagration turning up those yards and the water pipes with them. Then, in severe gales, the bridges may be broken down. But I have no doubt that the Water Board and the City Engineer will give good and sufficient reasons for introducing the water from Sudbury River.

The order was passed.

Alderman Quincy—In this connection I wish to offer the petition of George B. Upton et al., that here final action is had in regard to the project of taking water from Sudbury River and Long Pond, the whole subject be referred to a judicious committee to report, first, upon the expense; second, whether a supply for many years cannot be had from the Mystic, and the expense attending that introduction.

Alderman Quincy asked that the petition be referred to the Committee on Water.

Alderman Stebbins—I would call attention to the fact that the petitioners ask just what is meant to be done by the order I have offered.

Alderman Quincy—I merely offer the petition, which asks that the subject be referred to a judicious committee.

Alderman Stebbins—I would suggest that the petition go to the Water Board, as they have this subject under consideration.

Alderman Gihson—I would suggest that a judicious committee had better be appointed. If they have got good pumping capacity at Mystic Lake, it would be best to look into it.

Alderman Stebbins—This is precisely what I contemplated in my order. It is very well to say we have plenty of pumps and pipes, but I take it we have got an able Water Board and one of the ablest City Engineers in the country, and it is his intention to call to his assistance other engineers, and make a report entirely satisfactory to the citizens of Boston.

Alderman Quincy—I think it would be better to refer it to the Committee on Water, because it is a committee of this Board.

Alderman Stebbins—I would like to make further inquiry about that petition, and I move that it be laid on the table. Carried.

GAS PIPES IN THE STREETS.

Alderman Power offered the following:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court at its next session for the passage of an act authorizing the Board of Aldermen of Boston as surveyors of highways to require the gas companies located within the limits of this city to lay down pipes and furnish gas in any public street or way of the city whenever in the opinion of said Board the public safety and convenience require the lighting of any street or way.

Alderman Power—My reason for offering the order is this: I don't know that gentlemen are acquainted with the facts in the case. In East Boston, and in South Boston more particularly, there are many streets which are entirely huilt over, and yet are in total darkness, from the fact that the gas company will not furnish light without a private guarantee to them. The city is likewise responsible for any damage to persons from falling into holes or breaking limbs. Now there are many old streets there, which are huilt over, and people can't have lights there because many of them are too poor to have gas in their houses. I never heard any complaints in the city proper. It seems to me the city ought to have the right to compel the gas company to put lamps there when they deem it necessary for the public good to do so.

Alderman Gibson—That street in East Boston has been built up for fifteen years, and the company has laid its pipes in about two-thirds of the street. Some time ago I asked them to finish the work that we might have street lamps. They refused to put the pipes down because the city refused to raise the rates of gas. I told them it was a pretty small way to manage.

Alderman Emery—I hope the order will pass. The object contemplated is a good one and is called for. It has come under my observation frequently, in parts of the city where I reside, that there is a great lack of gas pipes. I think legislative action should be had that the people may be accommodated with light.

Alderman Power—A great many citizens think it is the fault of the city and complain of our extravagance and want of system. We get a street nicely paved, and then the next day the streets are dug up for the gas pipes. In South Boston they refused to lay the gas pipes because they could not make enough out of the shutters to pay for the interest. If we had this power we could have the pipes put there.

The order was read twice and passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom were referred the petition of A. H. Foss and the remonstrance against the same, reported leave to withdraw. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $700, in repairing and furnishing the armory of Company I, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., at No. 544 Washington street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Read twice and passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid for rent of armory for Company I, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., at No. 98 Kingston street, for the two months ending August 1, 1873, the sum of $52; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Passed.

Alderman Hulbert, from the joint special committee to whom was referred the petition of the East Boston Railroad Company, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the act entitled "An act to incorporate the East Boston Railroad Company," approved March 8, 1873, be and the same is hereby accepted.

The order was read once.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of Owen Kennedy for hack stand at 87 Chestnut street; Davenport Brothers, to give entertainments at Tremont Temple; D. H. Cunningham for pawnbroker's license at 92 Court street; D. A. Nason et al. for transfer of wagon licenses; W. H. Hawley, P. Collins, S. T. Snow, and Edward Welch, for wagon license; Timson Brothers, for license to deal in second-hand articles at corner India street and Atlantic avenue; John Morrell, 124 Pleasant street, Louisa Jones, 137½ Dover street; William H. Andrews, 34 Crescent place, for victuallers' license; Abraham Troeder, for leave to deal in second-hand articles at 139 Harrison avenue. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of John F. Bagley, 96 Merrimac street, for victualler's license.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Faneuil Hall, reported in favor of granting the petition of L. L. Thaxter, for leave to use Faneuil Hall for a reunion of the Fusileers. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported favorably on the applications of S. B. Ryder, rear of 245 Lexington street; C. E. Hall, Castle street, for leave to erect wooden stables; and no action necessary on remonstrance of Charles A. Wiener, et al., against enlargement of stable at 134 Eighth street. Severally accepted.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Public Buildings be authorized to expend the sum of one hundred dollars in addition to the amount already authorized for music stands, the same being for music racks and fixtures, and to be charged to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses.

Passed.

Ordered, That the order passed May 6, 1873, charging the expense of procuring plans for the new police station house, South Boston, to the appropriation for Public Buildings, be and the same is hereby rescinded.

Passed.

Ordered, That the bill for Plans and Specifications for the new police-station house, South Boston, between K and I streets, be charged to the special appropriation for that building.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Committee on County Buildings be authorized to expend in addition to the sum of five hundred dollars appropriated for the fitting up of the Municipal Court room, Southern District, a further sum of eight hundred dollars, being the amount necessary for extending the heating apparatus for suitably heating said rooms, and said sum, with the sums previously appropriated for expenses on County Buildings during the present municipal year, being in excess of five thousand dollars; said amount to be charged to the appropriation for the County of Suffolk.

Passed.

Alderman Hulbert, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Institutions, to whom was referred the recommendations of the grand jury of Suffolk, reported that in regard to the transportation of prisoners to the City Prison and thence to the houses of detention, they would recommend that the female prisoners be kept separate from the male prisoners, and that they be transported in vans under the control of the Police Department, and that the horses therefor be kept at the city stable. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert—

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be requested to consider the expediency of making some arrangement by which the delay now caused in sending to the City Hall for permission to shut off or let on water in the outlying wards may be obviated.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay H. H. Hunnewell $770 on account of Essex-street widening, and the heirs of Jonathan Brigham $2239 on account of the widening of Essex street. The orders were read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom were referred the assessments for sewers in Arch, Clifford, Folsom, Kingston and Eighth streets and Harrison avenue, reported that they were correct and recommended the passage of the accompanying orders for collection. The orders were read twice and passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported an order of notice for a hearing on Tuesday, Nov. 4, at 4 P. M. on the petition for a sewer in Sixth street. The order was passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported no action necessary on the petition of P. S. Briggs for Sewer in Westminster street; inexpedient on the petition of the Superintendent of Public Buildings for a sewer in Highland street; and no action necessary on the petition of F. Bleiler and others, for sewer in Heath street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom were referred the petitions of E. A. Cushman,

Boston Society of Natural History and others, submitte reports recommending the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to grade Ruggles street, between the Providence Railroad and Parker street, to the established grade, and to reset the edgestones, pave the gutters and macadamize the roadway of said streets. Estimated cost, $6000.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave the sidewalks on Centre street (Ward 15) from Eliot square to Highland street, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to set the edgestones, pave the gutters and macadamize the roadway of Linwood square. Estimated cost $1500.

Passed.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the Rowe's Wharf Corporation to remove within twenty days so much of the building standing on their premises as extends over the lines of Atlantic avenue and Broad street.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave the sidewalk on the westerly side of Berkeley street, between Boylston and Newbury streets. Cost $200.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to set the edgestones and pave the sidewalks in front of vacant lot on Winthrop street near Warren street, and to report to this Board a schedule of the expense thereof.

Passed.

Ordered, That this Board establish the revised grades of Liberty square, Water, Batterymarch and Milk streets, as shown on a plan drawn by the City Surveyor, dated December 31, 1872, and deposited in the office of said City Surveyor.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported in favor of granting the application of O. L. Gillett, for leave to project a sign at 141 Hanover street. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported an order to pay Thomas J. Garrigan $200, for grade damages on Paris street. Passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department be and he hereby is authorized to organize a steam fire engine company, to take charge of steam fire engine No. 24, the same to be located in the house corner of Warren and Quincy streets, Highland District, said company to go into service November 1, 1873.

Passed.

Whereas, John A. Fynes, a member of the Fire Department, and attached to Extinguisher Corps No. 1, was seriously injured at a fire while in the discharge of his duty.

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to John A. Fynes the sum of fifty dollars on account of injuries received while in the discharge of his duty as a member of the Fire Department; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to purchase a lot of land on Albany street, between Beach and Dover streets, and erect thereon an engine house for the accommodation of a steam fire engine and the horses and men connected therewith.

Passed.

BROOKLINE'S WATER SUPPLY.

Alderman Quincy presented the petition of William I. Bowditch, John W. Candler, George Griggs and Horace N. Fisher, asking that in consideration of the fact that by the recent annexation of Charlestown the supply of water is more than sufficient for all the wants of the inhabitants of the city, and of the fact that one of the reservoirs is in the town of Brookline, and the pipes of both the Cochituate reservoirs pass through, that the Cochituate Water Board be authorized to negotiate with the town of Brookline to supply the said town with water, under the acts of 1872, chapter 177, section 8.

Alderman Quincy—Before this petition takes its reference to the appropriate committee, I desire to take occasion to explain to the Board and through the reporters to the public in a very few words, the circumstances of its origin. It is proposed at the next town meeting in Brookline to authorize borrowing half a million dollars or considerably more to bring water from Charles River for the supply of that town. The act of 1872 authorizes the City of Boston to supply Brookline with Cochituate water on such terms as may be agreed upon. As the petition states one of our reservoirs is in Brookline and the pipes from both pass through it. Now would it not be better if the town of Brookline should so vote for us to sell her the water she wants directly out of our pipes which pass through, rather than that a large sum should be added to her debt, which may be ours in no distant future in order to establish a separate system of pipes for a separate supply from Charles River. If annexation does take place then we shoulder the debt and have a system of pipes which we don't want, and which it is more than likely may interfere with the metropolitan plan for a comprehensive system of sewerage and drainage. If annexation never takes place, yet Brookline remains in the area which it is universally agreed should adopt such single and comprehensive plan of sewerage, drainage, and water supply, and it would certainly seem an advantage for us to sell her what water she wants, thus making her water supply a part of the general system. If this petition had been circulated it would have obtained hundreds of the best signatures in Brookline, but it was drawn and presented today, in order that public attention might be called to the matter before any decisive action in town meeting.

On motion of Alderman Quincy the petition was referred to the Committee on Water.

HAYES'S STABLE.

Alderman Hulbert asked for a suspension of the rules, that he might move to reconsider the order passed October 13, revoking permission to Martin Hayes to build stable on Berkeley and Appleton streets.

Alderman Stehbins asked for an explanation.

Alderman Hulbert—I think the vote passed at that time is illegal, and I desire a reconsideration that the question may be opened again.

The rules were suspended—11 for and 1 against.

Alderman Hulbert moved that the vote by which the order above referred to was passed be reconsidered. Carried.

Alderman Hulbert—Independent of the merits of the question, I think from what I have been informed that it was not in our province to pass that order. I understand that the City Solicitor has expressed the opinion that when permission has once been granted to a person to build a stable that license cannot be revoked and the person has a vested right therein of which he cannot be deprived.

The question recurring on the passage of the order, Alderman Sayward moved that it be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Clark—I don't exactly understand this question, and should like an explanation.

The Chair said the question was on the passage of the order to revoke the license of Mr. Hayes to erect the stable.

Alderman Hulbert—As I understand the case, it is this: Although the stable was partially burnt, it did not destroy the right which the owner had to have a stable there. As I understand it, we had no right to pass the order revoking the license. Believing that to be the case, I bring it before this Board that we may act advisedly. The question is whether we have this right to revoke the license? I quote from a letter from the City Solicitor written in 1870 on an entirely different matter. If gentlemen prefer to lay this matter on the table to consult about it, I will not object.

The motion of Alderman Sayward to indefinitely postpone was carried.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, to whom were referred the petition of Martin Hayes, for permission to rebuild his stable on Berkeley street, reported that they had heard the parties in interest. It is contended by parties in aid of Mr. Hayes's petition, that a stable in that locality is absolutely required, and their experience has shown that for cleanliness, good order and gentlemanly deportment of attendants, together with good light and ventilation, it has not been equalled by any stable in the city. The remonstrants generally acknowledge that the stable has been well conducted; yet they oppose a continuation of the same for the following reasons: 1st, that a stable is objectionable in that locality from the fact that it would lessen the value of real estate; 2d, its close proximity to three churches; 3d, if permitted to remain, the rates of insurance must naturally be increased; they are also of opinion that other locations better adapted for stable purposes can be obtained in the neighborhood. In conclusion, your committee are of the opinion that no positive injury can arise by granting the request of Mr. Hayes, and would recommend that said request be granted, with such restrictions as shall be acceptable to the Inspector of Buildings and Committee on Health.

Alderman Stebbins asked if an order requiring a license had been reported.

Alderman Sayward—No order is required. The committee recommend that he have permission to repair the stable. If the report is accepted by this body Mr. Hayes can repair his stable under the direction of the Committee on Health.

Alderman Stehbins—I notice that some of the remonstrants are present and desire to be heard. I move they have permission to say a few words on the subject.

Alderman Sayward had no objection to the remonstrants being heard, but the committee had given notice to all parties and they were heard, still if there is anything new he would be glad to hear it.

Permission being given the remonstrants to be heard, Hon. Charles W. Slaek, on behalf of the proprietors of the Parker Memorial Meeting House, said, "The aspect of this question has very materially changed by the orders passed this afternoon. A new question seems to have been raised, whether Mr. Hayes should be allowed to build a stable in that vicinity again."

It is not for me to question or dispute the opinion of the City Solicitor, but if that is correct law you cannot revoke any license which you give to anybody. The application of this doctrine prevents you from revoking his license. What I desire to say on the main question is that we have built an expensive building in the confident expectation that the stable would be only a temporary inconvenience to the neighborhood, and we have understood that Mr. Hayes desired to remove it soon; yet from this action it appears that he has the right to remain there. All we can say is, we trust he may be permitted to repair the old stable and not build a new brick building. If a wooden building is allowed to remain there, the rise in the value of land will be prevented. We have had quite a manifest improvement in the character of the vicinity since Martin Hayes's stable was put there. There are the Odd Fellows' Hall, the Parker Memorial Building, the Berkeley-street Church, and the Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. Father Blaikie is pastor. The streets in the vicinity have all grown up with fine buildings. Gray street, Warren avenue and Appleton street are all filled with very worthy residents. These streets converge into this immediate vicinity, and we all feel that our property there would be increased in value if the stable were removed. We all know that Mr. Hayes has contemplated the erection of a Music Hall on that site, and he has consulted architects and the proprietors of the Music Hall in regard to seating capacity. He does not contemplate remaining there very long. In regard to the store property all we can say is that the stores in the Odd Fellows' Building were leased long before the building was finished. It is the centre of streets connecting with all parts of the city, from South and East Boston and Roxbury. We expect Mr. Paul will erect a new building next spring, and on the other side Messrs. Bailey & Jenkins will remodel the building on their site. If we are to have a permanent stable there, all that property from which the city will derive a handsome income, will not be improved in the manner in which it will be if the stable be not removed. Therefore we would like the Board not to issue a license of such a nature that the stable shall be a permanent structure. On our own part we think the stable ought to be removed. If this order had not been passed this afternoon, we should have stood on our legal rights and not allowed the stable within a hundred yards of the meeting house. I would like to ask Mr. Wheaton a few questions as to the prospective damage to property there in case the stable remains.

Alderman Sayward—I don't object to taking all night, if necessary, but at the committee meeting no parties appeared for the Odd Fellows' Hall or for Berkeley-street church and the party who appeared for the other church withdrew all his objections. As to the power of this Board to revoke the license, I presume that when this Board declares Mr. Hayes's stable a nuisance, the permit will be revoked by the Board of Health.

Mr. Slack called Mr. Wharton, who was interested in the Odd Fellows Building, who said a permit to repair would be preferable to a permanent stable building there. The stockholders of the Odd Fellows' Building were much opposed to the stable remaining there, and think it would be detrimental to real estate.

The report was accepted.

Alderman Sayward moved a reconsideration, and it was rejected.

THE OLD MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Joint Committee on Public Instruction, to whom was referred the order to cancel the sale of the old Mather Schoolhouse, reported that the order ought to pass.

Alderman Gaffield—As it was thought best not to present a long report, which might furnish the text for another protracted discussion, it may be well to give a brief statement of the reasons which led the committee to recommend the passage of this order. The three gentlemen of the Mather School Committee residing in Dorchester were notified to attend the hearing, and two were present, the other being ab sent at the West. The subject in all its bearings was fully considered during a session of more than two hours. The testimony of Dr. Cushing, the chairman of the District Committee, confirmed, with a slight exception, every statement of his letter to the Alderman of the Twelfth Ward, which I will read, as it very briefly and truly covers the whole ground.

DORCHESTER, Aug. 9, 1873.

Dear Sir—In answer to your request for information as to the expediency of keeping the old Mather Schoolhouse for a primary-school building, I reply that every room in the new building will be occupied in September, and, in my opinion, we shall need additional accommodations for primary scholars, in the course of the coming year. I understand that it is the intention of the Superintendent of Public Buildings to fit up the old almshouse for this purpose. It is, in my opinion, unfit for a schoolhouse, the rooms being low, and the building itself standing on the south side of a high gravel bank, and with no proper playground about it. By moving the old schoolhouse about one hundred feet you will have as good accommodations as could be wished for for three hundred children, who will then be more immediately under the eye of the master. While I should myself prefer to see all buildings—except the old meeting house—removed from the hill, thus making it an open common, I must allow that, by keeping the old schoolhouse for future needs, a very considerable sum of money will be saved to the city.

Yours respectfully,

BENJAMIN CUSHING.

To Alderman Power.

The slight exception referred to was in regard to the expense of placing the schoolhouse in its new position on the hill. If it should cost the city a very large amount, Dr. C. might prefer to expend that amount in erecting small primary schoolhouses in various portions of the district. But at an expense of $5500, or even $7500, he thought it would be wise economy to preserve upon Meeting-House Hill a building which would accommodate three hundred primary pupils, and answer the wants of the district for several years. The simple facts in the case are these. The new Mather Schoolhouse has ten school rooms and an exhibition room. When the ten rooms are filled to the maximum allowed by the rules or practice of the School Committee, of forty-nine in primary classes, fifty-six in the lower grammar classes, and thirty-six pupils in the two upper ones (this being a school for boys and girls), there will be 499 pupils. On Wednesday last, according to the list furnished me by Dr. Cushing, four hundred and forty-two were connected with the school. The ten rooms are now occupied by seven grammar and three primary classes. The primary classes are already over-crowded. By promotion from these primary classes, about eighty new grammar pupils are added every year, while a much smaller number graduate and enter the high schools, so that it will sooner or later be necessary to use the new building entirely for grammar-school classes. When this necessity arises, in order to provide for the nearly two hundred primary scholars now accommodated in the new building, the city must adopt one of three plans.

1. To purchase a suitable lot of land, and build thereupon a new schoolhouse, at a cost of $30,000 to $40,000.

2. To alter the old almshouse for school purposes at an expense of about $5000.

3. To save the old Mather School building, and remove it upon land owned by the city, within a few rods of its present location on Meeting-House Hill.

The first plan received no favor in the committee. The second is opposed by the School Committee, the Committee on Public Instruction, and many of the best inhabitants of Dorchester. The old school building is preferable to the old almshouse, however it might be improved, and its healthy and commanding location on Meeting-House Hill is unrivalled, if not incomparably superior to that of any other school edifice in Dorchester. The committee by a vote of two to one decided in favor of the third plan, and therefore report that the old building although somewhat damaged by preparations for moving, is still in such good condition from its original excellent construction in 1856, that it can be moved, repaired and put in perfect order for use at a small fraction of the cost which would be incurred for a new structure in another location. It is, therefore, true economy to pass the order recommended by the committee.

Alderman Sayward—Mr. Chairman, a fact is one thing, an opinion another. Now, sir, when I state what I believe to be a fact, and that statement is contradicted, I must endeavor to give some reason for such a statement. I have more than once said that we have no use for this old building, of which so much has been said. To prove this, gentlemen, I have to say that, at the request of the School Committee, the city of Boston has provided much better accommodations for the Mather School District, and all that will be needed for some years to come, in my opinion; and this opinion is strengthened by the evidence of Dr. Cushing, who says that the committee have not asked for additional accommodation, and do not intend to for the present, but can get along with what they have. Now, sir, I should think they would get along with what they have, not having occupied this splendid new schoolhouse more than six weeks. A house, sir, with every convenience, and plenty of spare room, ought to satisfy any committee, at least for a few years.

Now, sir, during the whole time of preparing plans, erecting and completing this schoolhouse, not one member of the committee or a teacher has ever intimated that it would not accommodate all the pupils in this district for some time to come. On the contrary it has been asked several times during its erection, Why build so large a house? And further than this, sir, from the time the order passed the City Council to sell this building, up to the present time, no member of the School Committee has asked either the committee or Superintendent of Public Buildings to retain this building for school purposes. Then why this great cry about selling an old wooden building which we have no further use for? Is it because the local School Committee want it to remain as an ornament to the new house or to Meeting-House Hill? No, sir; the evidence given by the member of the School Committee was, that the absent member, Mr. Sanford, did not think it judicious to have the building remain on the hill, and he himself would prefer to have it removed, and if it must remain, there was but one place for it, viz., where the hook and ladder House stands. This is the opinion of Dr. Cushing, so that the old sheds need not be removed for this. And as this old schoolhouse is not to take the place of the sheds, Dr. Cushing having distinctly said this could not be considered a proper location, and as the party who opposed the moving of the building through the street finds it is not to take the place of these sheds that my friend on the left is so much troubled about, he will waive all objection and give the Committee on Paving a chance to grant the request of these petitioners, and allow Mr. Sanborn to move his building in as many or as few pieces as in their judgment may be for the best interest of the parties concerned. And now, sir, I desire to say that I hope this matter will be indefinitely postponed for the following reasons, together with those I have already given: First, Because it was stated by my friend on the left, last Monday, that Dr. Cushing said that every seat in the new schoolhouse was spoken for, and there were scholars enough to fill every seat in the schoolhouse. Now, sir, this is not a fact. I said "There will be two vacant rooms notwithstanding what Dr. Cushing says." Now, gentlemen, in saying this I did not, for one moment, doubt the word of Dr. Cushing. No one can hold that gentleman in higher esteem than I do. But this was not his language. His language was, as he has stated to me, that "every room would be occupied," and this, sir, is true, and if there were but fifty pupils every room could be occupied, but they are not full now. My argument that we did not need any further accommodation in that district was based upon the report of the Committee on Accounts of the School Board of 1873, just out. This gives the average number attending the Mather District, to be 308. With this number for the basis, how many seats would be unoccupied in a schoolhouse with ten rooms, with seats for fifty-six scholars, in each room? Well, sir, if I can figure correctly, there will be 252 seats unoccupied. Now, gentlemen, it is said this report of the School Committee is not to be relied upon. Let us take it as given to me by the master of the Mather School, and see if I have not made a correct statement when I say the house is not full, and that they can and ought to get along with their present accommodation for some time to come.

Statement from Master:

Grammar Teachers.	Pupils.	Seats.

Then, there is a large hall in this building which will accommodate at least a hundred more. Now gentlemen with these facts before you, together with the changes which are now being considered by the School Committee of Ward 16, the city will not, in my opinion, be warranted in spending one dollar for the purchase of this old building which we have no use for, and never shall have, in this district or in any other district in Ward 16 for years to come, if the plan of the School Committee is adopted for primary schools, which seems to be a very sensible one for that locality. Dr. Cushing's opinion is that they may want the building; but it is only an opinion.

Mr. Chairman, there are many reasons why we should not take this building back, and the most potent one of all is that we do not need it; and I make this statement not simply as an opinion, but from evidence obtained from Dr. Cushing. He says the committee have not asked for further accommodations, nor will they for the present. He also says that for Ward 16 it is impossible to get a large number of small or primary children in any one building. Now, sir, if there was to be any need for further accommodations, in the course of a year, more or less, it would only be for a primary class, and that can be provided for without any expense to the city, right in this new schoolhouse, with a little management by the committee and teacher. This is so, not because I say so, but it is admitted both by committee and master. Now, sir, whatever may be the call for additional room, it can be provided without expense to the city, and shall we stick up this old house as a target for the children to fire at, at an expense of several thousand dollars, to start with, and then to keep in repair for years to come, without any possible chance of ever wanting even one single room to use? As I have before stated, Dr. Cushing says we cannot get any large number of small children in one locality to fill such a building. And then, again, should we mar the appearance of the new house and the hill by putting this useless nuisance upon a spot designated by my friend on the left, when Dr. Cushing says it is not a proper place, and that there is but one place that it ought to stand upon, and that is already occupied by the hook and ladder house?

Now, sir, if it is the desire of this Board to be prudent in the expenditure of the city's money, do not vote to keep what we do not want and have no use for. But do as we do in every case where there is an old building or land that we have done with. Sell to the highest bidder, as we have within the last few weeks sold an old brick schoolhouse, and if any one should apply to move this one, I suppose these gentlemen who are blessed with such superior judgment and are so much more anxious to save the money of the city than the Committee on Public Buildings are, that instead of granting or refusing permission to move, would take the course they have taken in this case, which, to say the least, is a very uncourteous one, and uncalled for, as it appears that the Committee on Public Buildings have done what is for the best interest of the city, namely, sold this old house to the highest bidder. And if this matter were left with them to decide, with these facts and opinions before them, they would unanimously decide not to cancel this contract, unless they could be allowed to sell again with the assurance of the Committee on Paving that the party buying it should have permission to move it either whole or in sections. And even with this privilege it would be a losing operation for the city to buy it back, although by so doing they might put money in the pocket of a party who thought he had so much influence at the City Hall that he could get permission to move this old building whole, notwithstanding the terms of the sale were that it should be taken down. And this, sir, accounts for the large price the building brought—a much larger price than other buildings have brought which the city has sold in other localities under the same circumstances. Now, sir, I believe that is pretty much all I have to say. I believe still stronger, since this examination, in the position I have taken, for I am better posted. This is the building which they say will accommodate three hundred scholars. Is it best to put it on that hill, as a monument which every one will regret to see. If you wish new accommodations they can be had in the almshouse. The gentleman says the circumstances have changed. Dr. Cushing's views have changed since that letter was written. He has the same views in regard to altering this building that I have. I desire to say a single word in reference to the poorhouse. My friend says it is not a fit place for a schoolhouse because it is low studded.

Alderman Gaffield—I made no remark about its being low studded. I said it was an improper place no matter how it might be altered.

Alderman Sayward—I admit it is low studded, but there is plenty of room in that building. They have got more school room in that district than they would have got had they remained in the town of Dorchester for a hundred years to come. Dr. Cushing's argument against this old house is that the building was formerly occupied as an almshouse. Well, we had six or seven paupers, respectable old ladies and men. Out of that number but two had to be taken to Deer Island. Now, Dr. Cushing says the people would send to that place because it is a disgrace. If this is Dr. Cushing's opinion I pity him, and if that is the feeling of the people of Ward 16, high or low, rich or poor, it is time we stopped giving them such fine school accommodations. This matter has been back and forth from one committee to the other. The gentleman on my right has fully changed his opinion, but for what reason I can't see. I can only hope for the interest of the city of Boston that this order will not pass, and I hope so not to gratify any personal feeling about it. I have spoken the truth, and if there is anybody who doubts I would like to hear from him.

Alderman Gibson—We have spent a good deal of time on this schoolhouse. Since this discussion commenced I have made an estimate of what I say it is worth to be put into a dwelling or schoolhouse. I value that schoolhouse for a dwelling, when we come to dollars and cents, at from three thousand to thirty-five hundred dollars, if you have got land within a hundred feet of it to put it on. For a schoolhouse it is worth five hundred more. The question is whether it is wanted for a schoolhouse or not. If it is, that house is just as well worth five thousand or five thousand five hundred as one cent is worth another. It is called old, but it is not. It is a substantial building, and there is very little to do to change it into a good schoolhouse. As the Chairman of the Committee on Public Instruction says, there is no doubt we ought to move it upon the land, and if we want it for a schoolhouse there is money in it to keep it for that purpose.

Alderman Gaffield—I have put in my report all the points which I supposed relevant to the matter. The gentleman says there are so many seats in the building. [The Alderman read the rule of the School Committee requiring not more than forty-nine pupils in a room.] He says I have changed my opinion; and whether I have or not, I shall vote as I think right. In the gentleman's remarks he omitted the primary school accommodations.

Alderman Sayward—I have it here and forgot to mention it. In Miss Howe's room, 46; Miss Drake's, 57; and in Miss Brooks's, 81—making 184. One of these is for little children who have just entered school, and had better be at home. If these little chaps have to climb over those hills, the master says it will be better to put them into the almshouse. Put them there, and you will have plenty of room.

Alderman Gaffield—There are three primary and seven grammar classes, making 453 scholars. The maximum number is 499, leaving 46 vacant seats. A gentleman told me they had about forty new scholars every six months. Last year they graduated sixteen for the higher schools, and according to a fair estimate this school would need more accommodations in six months. [The Alderman read from the testimony of Dr. Cushing before the Committee on Public Instruction, "he thought it better to have small buildings for the primary schools but would prefer the old Mather Schoolhouse to the Almshouse."

Alderman Sayward asked what was Dr. Sanford's opinion.

Alderman Gaffield—Dr. Sanford was not there. Mr. Moseley testified that "it would be a great saving to the city to put the old Mather Schoolhouse back again."

Alderman Sayward—Dr. Sanford thinks that this old schoolhouse ought not to remain there, and Mr. Moseley is desirous that one of those small schoolhouses should be down at Savin Hill, which would relieve this new house somewhat. The School Committee ought to have more economy. It is something very unusual for this Board to be in advance of the School Committee. When they come to build a schoolhouse on Savin Hill, there will be plenty of room in this new building. There is another schoolhouse in Dorchester, on Columbia street, having six rooms and a large hall in it. They might manage to get more of their scholars in the Columbia-street school. It was the best economy to build one in that neighborhood and it will be all they need for some time to come. Gentlemen may talk of it just as much as they have a mind to, but it is plain to me there is no need of this building there.

Alderman Gaffield—I will call the Alderman's attention to Dr. Cushing's opinion, "several small schoolhouses should be built." This could not, in my opinion, be carried out in the city of Boston. He would like to have a primary schoolhouse for every fifty or a hundred pupils. Of course we can't entertain that idea. The School Committee say they will want more accommodations in one year. This building is valued on the books of the School Committee at $20,000. What troubles the members of this Board is that there is a building which cost $20,000, which is at present in good condition, has been sold for so small a sum, when there is evidence that it will be needed. The committee thought it would be better to save it, even if we shall not want it tomorrow.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman's opinion is that Dr. Cushing's idea can't be carried out. If it can't be carried out the small schoolhouses can't be built. One thing is sure, this district never will want that schoolhouse.

Alderman Power—As I stated at our last meeting, I was not content to let the matter rest on the evidence which might be brought before the Committee on Public Instruction. But I supposed the report of that committee would have settled the question. It is fully proven here that this schoolhouse is going to be wanted. The question is how many primary scholars there are—they are the ones, it was asserted, for whom it would be wanted. The primary schools are crowded now. Nobody ever said it would be wanted for anything else than a primary school. I know from the class of people who reside about there that further accommodations will be needed. The neighborhood is getting to be very thickly populated. Dr. Cushing has said emphatically that all the rooms in the new building are full. I made a mistake when I said that every seat was taken. I found by reference to the letter that he stated that every room is occupied with scholars. Now, as to the schoolhouse marring the appearance of that hill, it will be as good looking an house as the new one, when the damage that has been done to it shall have been repaired. There can be no difference of opinion as to the almshouse, as a site for a school. There is no comparison as to the fitness of the two locations. No one would ever think of repairing the old almshouse for a schoolhouse. But as I said before I am content to leave it to the Committee on Public Instruction, and I think this Board should be governed by the report of that committee.

Alderman Hulbert—I would like to inquire of the members of the Fire Committee what reasons there are for dissatisfaction with the hook and ladder house, whose removal is contemplated in connection with the removal of this schoolhouse.

Alderman Clark—The building occupied by the hook and ladder company is entirely too small; the horses are not kept in the building, and it is impossible for the driver to ride out of the building on the carriage, because the building is so low. It is inadequate to the wants of the department, and it is proposed to erect a new building near the present steam engine house in that district.

Alderman Hulbert—From what was stated on this subject before, I was led to have an indefinite idea of the damages that the treasury will sustain by cancelling the sale to Mr. Sanford. One member remarked that he would receive $1200. I would like to be informed.

Alderman Sayward—The $2000 includes the price paid for the building.

Alderman Hulbert—Do I understand that we pay him a bonus of $1200 to give up the contract?

Alderman Sayward—Yes, sir.

Alderman Power—That twelve hundred dollars will not more than make him whole. He has prepared the land to put the building on. He may have to pay the contractor who was to move it.

Alderman Sayward—I don't blame any one for getting all he can from the city, but I don't believe he has spent more than a hundred dollars, except in digging his cellar; my friend has intimated that the contractor would have to be paid something. The contractor put those timbers under the house on the strength of encouragement he got from some one representing the Committee on Paving. Those timbers have been under there ever since. There are certain other parties, beside Mr. Sanborn, who have had something to do with this building. They were led to give more for it on account of the influence which the party is supposed to have at City Hall, and this is their reason for wishing to have it taken down.

Alderman Power—The best proof that the person's influence didn't amount to much is the small amount he is to get for the building. I don't know anybody in the transaction but Mr. Sanborn, and I don't know any other parties to whom the gentleman alludes.

Alderman Sayward—I stated just what has been said to me. If the gentleman don't know those parties I can't tell him.

Alderman Quincy—If the question for us to decide were whether we shall sell this building or not, I should vote against it. But the question is whether we shall pay $1200 and back out of our bargain, and therefore the burden of proof is on those who desire to have it sold. In view of the absence of stronger testimony I shall vote against the order.

Alderman Power—I don't know what kind of proof the gentleman wants. The order for buying it back passed the Common Council 34 for, to 11 against it, and the committee were unanimous in favor of it. I don't think there is need of any further proof.

Alderman Gibson—Every member of this Board is satisfied as to whether this building is fit for a schoolhouse or not. We have spent time enough on it. If it is wanted for a schoolhouse I go for keeping it there.

Alderman Sayward called for the yeas and nays on the acceptance of the report, and the vote was as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Power—8.

Nays—Aldermen Emery, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins—4.

The report being accepted, the question was on the passage of the order to authorize the cancelling of the sale at an expense not exceeding $2000.

Alderman Sayward—Now, sir, if this order is to pass I desire to have it amended. There is no money to pay for this in the appropriation for public buildings. I desire that provision shall be made for it. The question will come up if you adopt this order. What is to be done with it and how does the matter stand? I ask the chairman of the committee to state in regard to it.

Alderman Gibson—I think the money could be provided. It is a fair transaction. The purchaser comes and offers to sell the building and take his offer.

Alderman Stebbins—Has the $800 been paid for the building?

Alderman Gibson—I could n't say.

Alderman Sayward—The building has been paid for and the money has been put into the treasury. We have got to get the $2000 somewhere. Where is it to come from? And how will the matter stand after you have got the $2000 and paid for the schoolhouse?

Alderman Gibson—From the evidence we have I think we certainly made a mistake in selling that house. It is as good a one as we can build in the next twelve years. If we don't want to have another schoolhouse there, and the city doesn't want to speculate in private dwellings, let it be sold again. There is no trouble about the money, although money is short just now. The members of this Board are able to put their fingers in their pockets and make the payment.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman is president of a bank, and the banks I know have been very liberal of late.

Alderman Gibson—Does the gentleman mean to say that the house isn't worth rebuilding if it is wanted by the city.

Alderman Sayward—I think if it is wanted for school purposes it is n't policy to keep that old building to accommodate the scholars in the new one.

Alderman Gaffield repeated Dr. Cushing's evidence before the committee, previously read.

Alderman Sayward—I am not speaking of economy. The gentleman wants to put up a monument on Meeting House Hill to be looked at. He says they can get along for a couple of years. It is only a matter of opinion whether any more schools will be wanted there. If it is wanted it is n't policy to keep that big building at such an expense as we will have to do.

Alderman Power called for the question, and the order was passed.

Alderman Power moved a reconsideration hoping it would not prevail. Lost.

Alderman Sayward—I desire to ask how this schoolhouse is to be disposed of? How is the money to be provided? What is the next thing to be done? The old house stands right up against the new building. I want to know whether we shall pay for this building or fall back upon the original order, under which the Committee on Public Buildings will have power to sell it again.

Alderman Gaffield—If the Committee on Public Buildings should dare to do such a thing, in my opinion it would be wrong, after what has passed in this Board and in the Council. When the appropriation is exhausted I take it there is wisdom enough in the committee to come to this Government and ask for more.

Alderman Sayward—The Committee on Public Buildings dare to do anything which this Government directs them to do. I only stated this to the Board to show how it stood. That original order stands ready to be carried out.

The Chairman stated that this order is to cancel the sale previously made, and will have to go to the Council for concurrence.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins it was voted that when this Board adjourn, it be to Tuesday, November 4th, at four o'clock P. M.

On motion of Alderman Gibson the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

OCTOBER 30, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Petitions of Hersey Brothers and others, and requests from the School Committee were referred in concurrence.

The following papers also received concurrent action:

Reference to Committee on Streets of a communication from the Board of Street Commissioners placing their estimate of the cost of widening Granite street, from its junction with Second and Third streets, on a line parallel with A street to Broadway, at $39,000.

Reference to the same committee of a communication from said commissioners asking the advice of the City Council in relation to the extension of D street.

Report (leave to withdraw) on petition of Abraham S. Foss et al., for change in conditions of sale of land on Seaver and Sumner streets. Accepted.

Order to allow John A. Fynes $50, on account of injuries received as a member of the Fire Department. Passed, under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Anderson of Ward 3.

Orders to rescind the order of 6th of May last, charging expense of plans of new Police Station House, South Boston, to appropriation for Public Buildings, and that the bill for plans and specifications for said station house be charged to the special appropriation for that building. Passed.

Report of the Committee on Public Instruction in favor of passage of the order to cancel sale of Old Mather Schoolhouse. Report accepted and order passed.

Order that Water Board be requested to consider expediency of making some arrangement by which the delay in sending to the City Hall for permission to shut off or let on water, in the outlying wards, may be obviated. Passed.

The following were severally read once:

Order for expenditure of $100 in addition to amount authorized for music stands.

Order that the further sum of $800 be authorized to be expended for the fitting up of the Municipal Court Room, Southern District.

Order to pay for rent of armory of Company I, Ninth Regiment, Kingston street, for two months. $52.

Order authorizing not exceeding $700 to be expended in repairing and furnishing armory of said company at 544 Washington street.

The order authorizing a steam fire engine company to be organized to take charge of Engine Twenty-four, to be located at house corner of Warren and Quincy streets, Highland District, having been read once, Mr. Jones of Ward 14 moved to amend by inserting after the words "Chief-Engineer" the words "and Board of Engineers." The amendment was adopted.

Mr. Jones moved a suspension of the rules that the order might pass.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I don't see any necessity for suspending the rules. Why is it that, in the face and eyes of the ordinance for the reorganization of the Fire Department this order should be passed? What is the necessity for it? It seems to be boys' play, since the whole department is to be reorganized.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—My impression of the ordinance is that all members of the department who are in office shall remain till others are put in their places.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I admit that, but why give the appointment to men who may be deposed from their offices the next day. Why this haste to have it done tonight? It is not reasonable. It may be that the same men in the Fire Department will be reappointed. What is the great desire to rush it through now? I hope reasonable time will be given for the consideration of all these matters, whether it is for the old organization or the new one. I have no idea who is to be appointed commissioners or to work the apparatus, but when the department is to be reorganized, why get up and appoint men to places from which they must necessarily be deposed, whether they are reappointed or not. I hope the rules will not be suspended.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—My explanation of the reason for asking a suspension of the rules is that the engine house is completed and ready to be occupied tomorrow. It is the intention to place a company in that house immediately, and for the last four weeks we have had this order for the appropriation before us.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would not say a word against this if the department was going on in its present shape. If it were to reinforce the old department I would not object; but it would be foolish to appoint a new set of men, and get them into uniform, when by and by they may have to give up their places.

Mr. Davis of Ward 14—The location of the engine house demands that the company should be organized there immediately. We have an engine in the house and no men to take care of it. I hope the order will be passed this evening.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—Unless the Fire Department is better managed than it was last evening I hope it will not pass. I was at the fire in State-street Block before the alarm was sounded. I saw a ladder put up on the building, and it was ten minutes before a man went up on it. Others saw it beside myself. There is something wrong in the department; there is no head to it, or else there is no organization. That was a fire which need not have burned ten minutes, if it had been properly managed; I happened to be very near it when the fire broke out. I want to see no more companies organized under the present management. We have got more men and apparatus than any other fire department on the globe. The difficulty is not with the men but the direction.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I believe the gentleman is making statements which cannot be proved.

Mr. Shaw—I can prove every statement I have made.

Mr. Flynn—There are gentlemen in this building who will state that there was a stream on that fire before the alarm was sounded. There are gentlemen present who were at that fire, and they know there was a stream on the fire at that time. It may be very well for the gentleman to attack the engineers now that the ordinance for a fire commission has passed, but he would not do it before.

Mr. Shaw—I beg the gentleman's pardon. I never attacked the engineers. I said the department was not properly organized. His Honor the Mayor was present and gentlemen of the Council who are members of the Joint Committee on Fire Department.

The rules were suspended, and the order was passed, in concurrence.

A motion to reconsider, by Mr. Jones of Ward 14, was lost.

The order authorizing a lot of land to be purchased on Albany street, and for the erection thereon of an engine house for a steam fire engine and horses and men connected therewith, having been read once, Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said, This order giving such authority to the Committee on Public Buildings is unprecedented, so far as my knowledge of the business in this Council goes. They are given full authority to purchase land without informing the Council of the cost thereof, or where the engine house is to be located. I hope the committee will give us some information on these points.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I think the order is worded wrong. The Committee on Fire Department recommended the location of the engine house there, and I suppose from the form of the order that the committee on Public Buildings considered the cost. It was thought best to put a steam fire engine in place of the hose company.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 moved that the order be committed to the Committee on Public Buildings.

Mr. Flynn suggested an amendment that the committee be instructed to report the cost of purchasing the site.

Mr. Caton accepted the amendment, and the order was recommitted.

Order requesting Mayor to petition General Court for an act authorizing Board of Aldermen to require gas companies within the city limits to lay down pipes and furnish gas in any public street where the same may be required.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—Before that order passes I suppose gentlemen will understand that what it proposes cannot be legally done. The city cannot compel a private corporation to do that thing. I say this that it may go upon record as my opinion.

The order was passed, in concurrence.

The report of the Committee on Overseers of the Poor, nominating Alvan Simonds as an Overseer of the Poor, in place of Thomas Blasland, deceased, and the certificate of the election of said Simonds as such Overseer by the Board of Aldermen, was received.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—At the request of Mr. Simonds I wish to state that his name is used in con-nction with this office without his knowledge. His business is such that he cannot accept the office, and he requested me to withdraw his name.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—Inasmuch as the gentleman nominated declines to serve, I move the report be re-committed.

It was so ordered, and on motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9 the certificate of election of Mr. Simonds was laid on the table.

Order that the Water Board be requested to furnish information on the condition of the water of Mystic Pond as regards quantity and purity, the cost of obtaining a supply, the condition of the present conduit from Lake Cochituate, etc., etc. Passed under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order authorizing soundings and borings to be made to ascertain character of foundations required for Eastern-avenue Bridge, at not exceeding $2000. Passed, in concurrence.

Report and order authorizing the new Mather Schoolhouse to be furnished, and to complete filling and grading around said schoolhouse, at an estimated cost of $4500. Passed, in concurrence.

PETITIONS.

Mr. Thacher of Ward 15 presented the petition of Edward Gallagher, for leave to erect a wooden building at 632 Harrison avenue within the building limits. Referred to the Joint Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 presented petitions from Colonel B. F. Finan of the Ninth Regiment M. V. M., for suitable armory accommodations for a regimental organization, and from Battery A, First Battalion Artillery, for a new armory and for an appropriation of $600 for new stoves and furniture. Severally referred to the Committee on Armories.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 presented the petition of M. Drinan & Co., for leave to erect a wooden building within the legal limits. Referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

SALARIES.

On motion of Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, the order for Committee on Salaries to fix salaries of permanent men already appointed in Fire Department,—also, of the Fire Commissioners, was taken from the table and passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Committee on Public Buildings, reported that in order to seat the Common Council of 1874 with its addition of ten new members, new desks and platforms will have to be provided and arranged in such a manner as to provide accommodation for the Board of Aldermen when joint sessions of the Government are to be held. It is estimated the cost for providing the proposed furniture will be two thousand dollars. The committee submit herewith a plan of the Council Chamber with the furniture arranged as proposed, and recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide new desks and platforms for the same for the Council Chamber at an estimated cost of two thousand dollars; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

The order was read once.

On motion of Mr. Prescott of Ward 9—

Ordered, That the Committee on the Suffolk-street District be authorized to procure estimates of the expense of filling the cellars, back yards and vacant lots on the Northampton-street district to the grade of twelve feet above mean low water; also of filling the public and private streets and courts thereon to such grade as may be established by the Board of Aldermen.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be requested to prepare plans for laying out, widening and extending such of the streets on or adjoining the Northampton-street District, so called, as the said board may adjudge that the public safety and convenience will require in view of the proposed improvements on said district—and submit said plans, together with an estimate of the expense thereof to the City Council as early as possible.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund a sum not exceeding five thousand dollars, to cover such expenses as may be incurred in procuring surveys, plans and estimates for the contemplated improvements on the Northampton-street District.

Read once.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to grade the land in the rear of the Minot Schoolhouse, Ward 16, recently purchased for a yard—also provide a fence to inclose the same, at an estimated cost of $2500; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

The order having been read once—

Mr. West of Ward 16 said, I ask a suspension of the rules in this case. There is a retaining wall to be built, one portion of which is on a marsh, and it is necessary to get at the work before frost comes.

The rules were suspended and the order was passed. Mr. Dean of Ward 12 offered the following: "Be it ordained, etc., That the ordinance in relation to the records of public institutions and departments, passed May 24, 1872, is hereby amended by inserting in said ordinance, after the words 'Water Department,' the words 'Fire Department.'"

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—The ordinance to which reference is made provides that the records of the several boards having charge of the institutions at Deer Island and South Boston, the Public Library, Water Board, etc., shall be kept open for inspection and examination, so that any person may take cognizance of everything that is done. This ordinance is to place the Fire Department under the same rule. The ordinance was read twice and passed.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, from the Committee on Claims, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of Mary O'Neil for compensation for injuries received on Essex street, in December, 1872.

Accepted.

LOWRY HYDRANTS.

On motion of Mr. Loring of Ward 12, the order for placing of Lowry hydrants on the main water pipes and the street crossings of the city, was taken from the table.

Mr. Loring—As the Water Board have already provided the hydrants, I move the order be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was carried.

WATER IN FARM POND.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 offered the following: Ordered, That the Water Board be requested to report to the City Council the condition of the water in Farm Pond, as regards its purity, and to furnish an analysis of the same.

Mr. Pickering—My object in introducing this order is this: I have heard today from two different parties diametrically opposite accounts. The water of Sudbury River falls into Farm Pond, and connects with the works at Lake Cochituate. One gentleman who resides in that vicinity stated to me that the water of Farm Pond was extremely impure, while another said it was exactly the reverse. I am also informed that an analysis of the water has never been made. In view of the important work contemplated, I think an analysis of the water would be one of the best things that could be done.

The order was read once.

MANAGEMENT OF FIRES.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances report an ordinance which shall so amend the ordinance for the reorganization of the Fire Department as to provide that the Fire Commissioners shall not interfere with the engineers while extinguishing fires.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would like to ask if that is not diametrically opposite in its terms to the ordinance already passed. My friend nods his head and says it is. So the ordinance passed is thereby nullified. If that is so it had better be understood. If this Board of Commissioners about to be appointed are not to have any control of the engineers I don't know what is the use of them. If my friend from Ward 12 expects he is going to get in another ordinance nullifying the provisions of the previous one it had better be understood.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—It was on the supposition that some person might entertain such an idea of the duties of the Fire Commissioners that the order was introduced. The fourth section of the ordinance provides that the Fire Commissioners shall have the duty of "extinguishing fires and protecting life and property" in this city, etc. Now there is one view taken of this, that it did not authorize the commissioners to extinguish fires except indirectly by the appointment of the officer. The commissioners might take the same view of their powers that the member from Ward 5 has done. That view is contrary to the statutes of the Commonwealth. As I understand the statutes, when the engineers are engaged in extinguishing fires no man can meddle with them under the law. If this ordinance is not amended it may conflict with the statute and do much mischief. I called the attention of the majority to the fact that the ordinance would not be legal to pass in that form. It has passed. I felt it my duty to fight it as hard as I could, and now I wish it to do as little mischief as possible. It would be very injurious to have a conflict of authority between the engineers and the commissioners. If the view of the gentleman is proof of the construction put upon that ordinance it is clear to me that it should be amended.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I have n't the statute before me, but I should hardly suppose that it could be such that the Fire Commissioners could exercise no discipline over the engineers or other members of the department. Suppose the commissioners found an engineer drunk at a fire, it would be their duty to dismiss him at once. I want them to have power to bring men to some account. I think the order would be very injurious as it reads now.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would suggest that the order is of too much importance to pass upon hastily, and I think the proper reference would be to the Joint Special Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department.

Mr. Dean accepted such an amendment of the order. The suggestion of the gentleman from Ward 6 does not go to the pith of the matter. If the commissioners can interfere with a man because he is drunk they can interfere with him for anything when they think he is not discharging his duty properly. You want them to exercise the authority at any time to dismiss them. If they can arrest a hook and ladder man when drunk, they can dismiss a chief-engineer because they may think he has not managed a fire according to their notions. That would put an end to all efficiency. They could require them to blow up a building, because it is a recognized means of putting an end to fire. Now we have got a law which says the Chief-Engineer shall have charge of that.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—By the ordinance the Fire Commissioners have the creation of the engineers and an engineer ceases to be such when the commissioners tell him to go. To that engineer the Legislature gives certain power, but I suppose there is no law which says an engineer shall be independent of the body which creates him and removes him. I don't see why the commissioners cannot remove a man at a fire as well as the next day. If they see that his conduct is injurious to the city they should remove him forthwith.

Mr. Shaw suggested an amendment that the committee "consider the expediency of reporting," etc., which Mr. Dean accepted, saying he didn't care about the form and wished the order to meet the approbation of all.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 asked if the Joint Special Committee on Reorganization of the Fire Department exists, as they have made their report and it has been accepted.

Mr. Shaw had expected some one would raise that point. The committee is not discharged, either by parliamentary practice or by direct vote.

Mr. Jones—I did not raise any question; I only asked for information.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I rise to a point of order, that the committee have been discharged, inasmuch as their report has been accepted.

The President—The Joint Standing Committee on the Reorganization of the Fire Department having discharged all the duties committed to them, and their report having been acted upon and finally disposed of, the committee has ceased to exist.

On motion of Mr. Dean, the order was amended to read as follows:

Ordered, That the Joint Committee on Ordinances consider the expediency of reporting, etc.

The order as amended was passed.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

On motion of Mr. Thacher of Ward 15, the special assignment for half-past eight o'clock, being the order authorizing the Water Board to take and convey into the city the water of Sudbury River, and to hold, by purchase or otherwise, any water rights and lands connected therewith necessary for the purpose, on the conditions set forth in said order, was taken up.

On motion of Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11, the order was laid on the table.

MARKETS.

On motion of Mr. Davis of Ward 14, the request and order for a transfer of $5500 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for Markets (City Doc. No. 113), was taken from the table and the order was passed, yeas 45, nays 0.

REVISION OF THE CITY CHARTER.

On motion of Mr. Holmes of Ward 6, the special assignment for a quarter before nine o'clock, being the report of the Committee on Ordinances recommending the passage of the order on the eighth page of City Document No. 115, 1873, for the appointment of a commission to examine and report what changes are necessary in the charter and laws for the government of the city, in view of the prospective increase in area and population, was taken from the table.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—As one of the minority of the committee, it seems to me, that if this city charter needs tinkering this Council is just as competent to do it, as any commission that can be appointed. If any gentleman in this branch thinks any change is required, what is easier than for him to put in an order directing the Mayor to petition the Legislature for such a change. This Council is composed of sixty-four gentlemen, some of them with two, four or six years' experience in city affairs, any of whom could offer such an order if he deemed a change necessary. The majority speak of a Board of Public Works, of longer terms of the Aldermen and Mayor. Now if they think these changes are needed, why don't they put in an order to that effect? We have a Board of Health and a Board of Fire Commissioners created this year. When we need such changes they are made, and when they are made it is without the aid of any commission. It is not so much that the charter was written by Chief-Justice Shaw that I object to the order, but because the majority have shown no reason why a commission would do any good. The burden of proof is upon them, and they have not shown any good reason for a change.

Mr. West of Ward 16—If it would be any gratification to the gentleman I might introduce many orders for changes in the charter, but I don't propose to take up the time of the Common Council by doing so. I would have the terms of the Board of Aldermen two or three years, and I would increase the terms of the Councilmen from each ward. I would have a Board of Public Works, and there are plenty of things which could n't get through in several months. That is why I prefer this commission. If they see any reason for making a change we can act understandingly about it. We would then have the whole thing in a nutshell. If each member here were to introduce changes we would never arrive at a conclusion. The easiest way is to appoint a commission. If they recommend anything we can adopt it or not, as we choose. It would be a great saving of time, rather than to attempt it ourselves.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 offered an amendment to substitute for the words "five persons" the following: "His Honor the Mayor, ex-officio, N. B. Shurtleff, J. M. Wightman, Frederiek W. Lincoln, J. B. Healy, S. F. McCleary, Alfred T. Turner, James M. Bugbee, the chairman of the Board of Assessors, the chairman of the Joint Committee on Ordinances on the part of the Aldermen and Common Council."

Mr. Shaw—I was as much in favor of appointing a Fire Commission as anybody else, and I am in favor of this commission; but I see no real necessity for appointing five persons for revising the charter. All those gentlemen I have named are entirely competent to revise the charter. They are men of great ability—some have experience in the legal profession, and all have a thorough knowledge of city affairs. They would better understand the requirements of the charter than any others in the community. Both branches of the Council and the heads of departments are represented. Such a commission would take pride in revising the charter. I have consulted nobody, and have written this since I came into this hall.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I think the gentleman has made one omission. I move to amend by adding the name of ex-Mayor Jerome Van Crowninshield Smith.

Mr. Shaw—Mr. Smith is not a resident of this vicinity.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6—If the gentleman expects such a body as that would bring a report to this Council within a century, he expects more than any one else. If you want a report you must have a small body. I agree with the gentleman from Ward 12, that perhaps there is no good reason for amending the city charter. It is only one statute out of many for the government of the city. But I think I have seen defects in the different offices of the City Government. I think, also, that the recommendation of the chief executive officer of this government should be entitled to some respect. I think I could write out a number of changes which are necessary, but if we were to proceed in that manner, and every man were to suggest all the changes he thought proper we should do nothing. We must have a body of men to consider all these changes and report what is the best way to remedy the difficulties now experienced in carrying on this government. If the report bound us to any action I should be very slow to pass the order. Very much time would be gained by the appointment of a commission.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I hope neither of the amendments will prevail, because the gentlemen named already have too much on their shoulders to take any thing more. The order reads properly now, leaving the Mayor to appoint five proper men to consider all the subjects bearing on the City Government, and give us something to guide us.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I must object to the amendments. Such a commission would be unwieldy. We can safely trust his Honor the Mayor to make satisfactory selections.

Mr. Shaw—I was aware that every legal gentleman in this Council would disagree with me. I know it is contemplated to have a commission of legal gentlemen. Now here is a practical matter; here is a working body proposed. My worthy friend who has just come fresh from the shambles opposes it. If it is put into the hands of five lawyers they will make a report in five years. I want the treasury guarded. Do gentlemen have any authority for saying that John P. Healy or James M. Bugbee or any of those named in the amendment are too much engaged, or will refuse to undertake the work? The Assessors' Department is represented, and what is more important than the subject of valuation. These gentlemen are more competent to revise the charter than any five lawyers who could be found in Boston.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—I hope the amendments will not prevail for the reasons already given, and because a similar amendment in the Board of Aldermen has been voted down. This is not a good argument usually, but in this case a similar amendment adopted here would only secure delay. It has been delayed too long already. The gentleman from Ward 5 says the legal gentlemen would not do this business as well as the gentlemen named. Great stress has been laid upon the fact that Chief-Justice Shaw, who was not a member of the Council or Board of Assessors, wrote the present charter, and it is very generally admitted that he succeeded very well. I am informed that Judge Curtis, one of the most eminent lawyers in the nation, would be willing to undertake the duty if it is tendered him. It would be best to leave the appointment to the Mayor, and if he wishes to take members of the City Government he can do so.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6—The precise reason why I oppose this amendment is that the commission is too large. They may be the best men who could be found, but to the Mayor should be left the appointments. The gentleman's insinuation against lawyers is a very small matter.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—I think the members of the Council have made up their minds on this question, and I call for the previous question.

The previous question was ordered—24 for and 10 against.

Both the amendments were rejected, and the question was on the passage of the order.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I wish to offer a simple, commonsense suggestion in regard to this matter. The majority say in their report, "It is said, however, that the machine has run well so far; let us wait till something goes wrong," etc. Now the statement of such general doctrine is applicable to a great many affairs of life. "It is excellent doctrine. 'An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.'" But when you apply it to a form of government the argument should be, "Wait until you see that there is something wrong, till you see that it does need mending." It might be that, by and by, we should see something that needed mending. When you do, I say, amend it. If there is sickness in the City Government send it to the doctor. My friend told of a doctor, the other night, who said that because a man prospered with the gout, let the gout alone. If he is going to apply that to the City Government, it would be very like insisting upon curing a man with the gout when a man has n't got it. Now, before you are aware of anything that needs mending, you are going to the expense and trouble of sending the charter to a board of commissioners to be doctored. In 1866 I had the honor to be a member of this body, and then a proposition was made to amend the charter. It was referred to the Committee on Ordinances, and it was curious then to see the various suggestions made. Any one can make suggestions. I had some ideas which at first blush I thought might be incorporated into the charter, and I was at first disposed to press them. But it was curious to observe after discussion of the various suggestions how they gradually vanish. When this matter was before the committee I inquired, "What is wanted? wherein does n't the thing go right?" and until the report came in there was scarcely a suggestion made. Now the question is whether it is really worth while to incur this expense and undertake this experiment. I think his Honor should be entitled to courtesy. The Mayor was respectfully waited upon and the minority of the committee came to the conclusion that there was no necessity for the change. And now, after all this discussion, I fail to see any reason for it. I have urged my opinions in regard to this matter. My judgment has been averse to it, and I now simply recall to the members of the Council the exact status of the matter.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—The gentleman says no defects in the city charter have been pointed out. I don't know that there are any defects, but there are points to which objections may be raised. One is in regard to the Board of Aldermen, whether it would not be better to have a larger number, and to change the manner of electing them. I think there are objections to the present system of electing them, which often causes complications, often resulting in the election of men whom we would not wish to see elected, while others are often defeated because they did not get on a sufficient number of tickets. Again, I think the two branches of the City Government ought to be equalized. It has been found that there ought to be two branches, and on the same principle they should be coördinate, which they are not now. I think every measure which passes the City Government ought to be discussed by both branches. Then it is a principle of good government that the executive and legislative branches should be distinct, which they are not now. The idea seemed to be in framing the present charter to retain many features of the old town government. The powers of the selectmen are retained by the Board of Aldermen, and the rights of the town meeting are delegated to the Common Council. This may do very well for a small city, fifty years ago. But when we consider the growth of the city and its population, would n't it be better to have a City Government founded after the plan of the Legislature of the State than after that of the old Town Government, and to have the Executive Department vested in the Mayor and the Legislative Department vested in the City Council? Charters of all growing cities need to be revised, just the same as the constitutions of States and nations. I believe there are greater reasons for having the charter revised now than at any other time. I believe these questions are proper to be considered by a commission of wise and experienced gentlemen. I presume there are other suggestions that might come before them, but I suggest these in order to show the gentleman that changes have been mentioned as needed.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—It was a felicitous comparison which the gentleman has made of the sick and gouty man, and to carry out the analogy I would suggest to the gentleman from Ward 12, who says wait till the gout comes and then apply the remedy, that a diagnosis of the case had better take place in season. I would venture to say that he has sent for a doctor and said, "I don't know what is the matter with me; I want you to tell me and when you find it out, apply the remedy." We want this commission to act in the place of the doctor. We can't state what the trouble is, nor what is the remedy. But we don't feel exactly well, and we want these gentlemen to tell us the difficulty, and what they propose for a remedy. Then, after the prescription is written, we can throw it out of the window if we see fit.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I am very much in favor of the order, and I want to record my name in favor of it. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the order was passed, yeas 31, nays 13.

Ayes—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Anderson, Barnes, Bicknell, Blackmar, Bleiler, Brackett, Brennan, Burditt, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Flynn, Hine, Holmes, Jones, Martiu, McKenney, Page, Pease, Perkins, Powers, Prescott, Shaw, Tower, Train, West, Whiston, Wilbur—31.

Nays—Messrs. Boardman, Burt, Collins, Dacey, Dean, Edwards, Kelley, Loring, Thacher, Warren, Wells, Weston, Woodward—13.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Bowles, Brennan, Denny, Doherty, Flatley, Hall, Harrington, Hughes, Kingsley, Lamb, Madden, Mahan, Marston, McCue, Morse, Risteen, Upham, Woods—18.

A motion to reconsider by Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 was lost.

On motion of Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
NOVEMBER 4, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held today at four o'clock P. M., Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Constables for duty in the Health Department—James W. Wayland, John MacConnell.

Special Police without pay—Patrick Magoveran, 35 Hawkins street and its vicinity; William Shedd, Oakland Hall, Mattapan.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The orders of notice on the petitions of Boston Daily News for leave to locate and use steam boiler and engine at 142 Washington street; and James Mitchell et al. for sewer in Sixth street, between O and P streets, were considered, and their being no objection the petitions were severally recommended.

On the petition of Charles Roberts to use steam engine and boiler at 21 Chardon street; and Winchester & Hight to use steam engine at corner of Dorchester and First streets, orders of notice were passed for hearings on Monday, November 24, at 4 o'clock P. M.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD.

The special assignment, being the hearing of all parties interested in the proposed location of the tracks of the Metropolitan Railroad on Beacon street from Gloucester street to Brighton avenue, was taken up.

Alderman Power moved that it be postponed until Monday next at four o'clock P. M.

Alderman Clark—I should like to know the object of a further postponement.

Alderman Power—The company are trying to negotiate for a place that they hope will not be objectionable to the people in that neighborhood, and they wish this hearing postponed until they can see whether they can secure that place or not. If they do secure it they will withdraw the petition.

The hearing was postponed.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

To the Committee on Police. Right Rev. John J. Williams et al., that liquor saloons be closed on Sundays.

To the Committee on County Buildings. Charles R. Train and other members of the Suffolk Bar, for extension of accommodation in Clerk's office, Superior Court, Civil Business.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Report and order to accept the charter of the East Boston Railroad Company (chap. 66 of acts of 1873). Passed.

Order of Street Commissioners to take the estate surrendered by Beals, Greene & Co., on Water street, at a cost of $278,737 50.

Alderman Brown—I desire to ask, Mr. Chairman, if there has been any negotiations by which the owners of this estate accept this award, or whether this is an award made by the Street Commissioners only.

Alderman Clark—This is an award made by the Street Commissioners only. I move the order be referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

The order was so referred.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions were referred, in concurrence.

Report (leave to withdraw) on petition of Mary O'Neil, to be paid for personal injuries received in Essex street. Accepted.

The order authorizing a lot of land to be purchased on Albany street, and for the erection thereon of an engine house for a steam fire engine and horses and men connected therewith, came up referred to the Committee on Public Buildings, with directions to report the estimated cost. The Board concurred.

Order for Committee on Ordinances to consider the expediency of so amending the ordinance in relation to the Fire Department as to provide that the Fire Commissioners shall not interfere with the Engineers at fires. Passed.

Petitions of Colonel B. F. Finan, that a regimental armory be provided for the Ninth Infantry; of Battery A, First Battalion, for a new armory; also for new furniture for present armory. Referred to Committee on Armories.

The order for the organization of a new company for Engine No. 24 by the Chief-Engineer, came up with an amendment to insert "and the Board of Engineers." The Board concurred.

Order for Committee on Suffolk-street District to procure estimates of cost of filling yards and cellars on the Northampton-street District. Passed.

Order for Street Commissioners to prepare plans for laying out, widening and extending the streets on the Northampton-street District. Passed.

Order for Committee on Public Buildings to grade the land in rear of Minot Schoolhouse, Ward 16, and to provide a fence for the same, at a cost of $2500. Passed.

Ordinance to amend the ordinance in relation to records of departments by inserting "Fire Department." Passed.

The report in favor of the election of Alvan Simonds as an Overseer of the Poor came up recommended, he having declined to accept that position. The Board concurred.

CONSTABLE'S BOND.

The bond of William G. Tyler, constable, being presented duly certified, was approved.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the petitions of Arthur Brown, Blackmar, Mandell & Co., and John Roessle, for leave to locate and use steam engines and boilers. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported that an additional appropriation of thirty thousand dollars will be required to finish the sewers considered necessary for the health and convenience of the citizens, and to provide for the ordinary expenses of the department till May 1, 1874. The original appropriation was $200,000. There now remains in the treasury $18,029 40.

It will require to finish work deemed necessary... $38,000
For running expenses of department to 1st May... 10,000

$48,000

Less amount on hand..... 18,000

Balance needed.....$30,000

The increased expense has been caused by the urgent solicitation of property owners for drainage facilities, and three-fourths of the expenditures on this account are reimbursed to the city within twelve months.

On motion of Alderman Power, the report was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported favorably on the applications of two bootblacks and eleven newsboys, for licenses; William McNeil, agent, to exhibit panorama of Ireland at Sumner Hall, Nov. 5 and 6; Elizabeth A. Slater, to keep an intelligence office at 71 Cambridge street; John L. Nason & Co., for auctioneers' license at 21 School street; Henry M. Snell, for auctioneers' license, at 5 Pemberton square; Howard Slade, for transfer of billiard license to George S. Jones; Butler & Hoyt, et al., for transfer of wagon licenses; Otis & Co., Edward D. Gibbs, James Finnerty and Henry W. Stillings, for wagon licenses. Obadiah S. Edgerly, 152 Hanover street, Frank H. Bearse, 97 South Market street, Michael J. Kane, 8 Merrimac street, Edward Corrigan, 806 Washington street, and Frank H. Bearse, 8 North side India wharf, for victuallers' license; Boston Hotels Coach Company, for license for seven carriages at the Old Colony Depot; John O'Neil, for transfer of second-hand articles' license to John Morgan; Boston Catholic Union, to give a concert at Music Hall, Nov. 13 and 14; Harvard Musical Association, to give a series of symphony concerts at Music Hall on Thursday afternoons. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Faneuil Hall, reported favorably on the petition of E. M. Chamberlin et al., for use of Faneuil Hall on Nov. 5th, for a public meeting. Accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on East Boston Ferries, to whom was referred the request of the directors of the ferries for permission to sell the ferry boat Jefferson, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the directors of the East Boston ferries be authorized to sell the old ferry boat Jefferson by public auction, and pay the proceeds into the city treasury.

The order was read twice and passed.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of A. S. Foss, reported the following order:

Ordered, That the conditions as set forth in the agreement given by the city for the conveyance of certain lots of land on Seaver and Sumner streets, be so far modified that the buildings to be erected on said lots shall front on Seaver street, except two in the rear of the lot fronting on said Sumner street; that such buildings may be erected of a width of not less than twenty feet ten inches, instead of twenty-five feet, that said buildings shall be two and one-half stories in height, besides the basement, and may have a Mansard roof. And his Honor the Mayor is hereby authorized to execute and deliver in behalf of the city of Boston, such instruments as shall be necessary to effect such modifications.

Read twice and passed.

Alderman Emery, from the same committee to whom was referred the remonstrance of B. L. Crocker against any modification of the conditions in above-named sale, reported leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages as follows, Samuel Thompson, $230, for land taken from Arnold W. Taylor by the widening of Stoughton street; John J. Newton, $1200, for land taken in the name of John F. Newton and George A. Wilson, in widening Warren street; William Gray, $15,335 10, West Chester park extension; trustees under will of Robert C. Hooper, $271 90, widening of Cottage street; Hattie F. Bartlett, $300, widening Warren street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark from the same committee reported an order directing the heirs of Alfred T. Gray to remove obstructions from St. James street in ten days. Passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins,

Ordered that the Committee on the Suffolk-street District on the part of this Board be requested to prepare plans and profiles of ten public and private streets and courts on the Northampton-street District, and report the necessary orders to establish the grade thereof, as provided by the sixth section of chapter 340 of the acts of the year 1873.

Passed.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Committee on Water, to whom was referred the report of the Cochituate Water Board on the subject of making additions to the present system of water pipes for the extinguishing of fires, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be authorized to contract for the delivery of water pipes and other materials required, in order to provide an adequate supply of water for all necessary purposes, the expense for said pipes and other materials not to exceed the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, payment to be made therefor on the 10th of May, A. D. 1874.

The order was read once.

Alderman Stebbins from the Joint Committee on Water, to whom was referred the petition of William L. Bowditch and others, that the Cochituate Water Board be authorized to negotiate with the town of Brookline to supply said town with water, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That whenever a majority of all the legal voters of the town of Brookline shall, at a meeting duly called for that purpose, by a ye and nay vote, authorize the Board of Selectmen or a committee of said town, to make application to the city of Boston for a supply of water from the Cochituate Water Works, with authority to make a contract for that purpose, the Cochituate Water Board is hereby empowered, acting for and in behalf of the city of Boston, to execute a contract with said town to furnish for the period of ten years, a supply of water for domestic purposes and for the extinguishment of fires; provided, however, that the water rates for water furnished to said town for domestic purposes during the continuance of said contract, shall be the same as those charged to the inhabitants of this city, and water used for the extinguishment of fires shall be paid for at such rates as shall be mutually agreed upon.

Ordered, That the City Clerk cause attested copies of the foregoing order to be served upon the chairman of the Board of Selectmen and the town clerk of said town of Brookline.

The orders were read once.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders for setting estgestones and grading Buckingham street at an estimated cost of $4000; to establish the grade of Buckingham street between Columbus avenue and Dartmouth street, and to establish the grade of Copeland, Thornton and Waverley streets, and of Ocean, Roslin, Walton and Harley streets in Ward 16.

Severally read twice and passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, that the Superintendent of Streets be directed to lay plank walks on portions of Clarendon, Boylston and Newbury streets.

Passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported favorably on the petitions of D. S. Jordan, Frederic Pope, L. D. Cardell, J. P. Fenno & Co., Abbott & Fernald, Charles H. Bacon, P. Campbell & Co., John Kehew, Parker Bryant and Joseph Ham, for leave to erect stables. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported that the wooden bridge on Dartmouth street, over the Albany and Providence railroads, is so badly decayed as to be unsafe for public travel, and that it will be necessary to build a new bridge as soon as practicable. The present structure can be repaired and strengthened so as to last during the coming winter, and be used as a support during the building of a new bridge. The City Engineer estimates the cost of an iron bridge at $157,646, and the cost of repairing and strengthening the existing structure for temporary use at $2000, making a total cost of $153,646. The committee are of the opinion that at the present price of iron, etc., a contract can be made with more advantage to the city than at any future time. They recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Paving be authorized to build by contract an iron bridge with stone abutments on Dartmouth street over the Albany and Providence railroads, and to repair and strengthen the present bridge on said street for temporary use, the expense thereof not to exceed one hundred and fifty-five thousand dollars.

Ordered, That the City Treasurer be authorized, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, to borrow the sum of $155,000 to defray the expense of erecting an iron bridge with stone abutments on Dartmouth street.

The orders were read once.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to fit up the Bowditch School Building, South street, to accommodate the branch of the English High School and Evening School, now located in the city building on Mason street, said building being about to be altered for an engine house by direction of the City Council. The expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses and Public Buildings.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported an order for the construction of a sewer in Sixth street, between O and P street. Read twice and passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That $16 54 be abated from the assessment of P. J. Griffin for a sewer in Hammond street, and the same amount assessed to W. H. Wallace. Also, that $70 71 be abated from the assessment of the Union Oil Works for a sewer in Saratoga street, and the same amount assessed upon Owen Garvey; also that $14 14 be abated from the assessment of James Stewart for a sewer in Saratoga street.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That for cause the betterment of $180 assessed for the widening of Dudley and other streets by an order of the Board of Street Commissioners of August 5, 1873, on the estate of Mr. Calvin Bird on Stoughton street, be, and the same hereby is, reduced by the sum of $50; leaving the assessment upon the said estate $130.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Common, reported in favor of granting the petitions of James B. Aiken, for removal of two trees on Norfolk street; F. R. Shattuck, for removal of tree from sidewalk on Forest and Vine streets; Sidney B. Morse, for removal of tree from sidewalk at 21 Camden street. Severally accepted.

THE NEW FERRY BOAT.

Alderman Stebbins presented a communication from the Directors of the East Boston Ferries, asking for the passage of an order authorizing the Auditor to pay extra bills on the new ferry boat, an amount not exceeding three thousand dollars; the same to be charged to the general appropriation for East Boston Ferries. The communication, on the motion of Alderman Stebbins, was referred to the Committee on East Boston Ferries.

IMMORAL EXHIBITIONS.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, who were requested to consider the propriety of inserting in all licenses issued by this Board for theatrical performance, etc., "a condition that no performance or exhibition which is manifestly impure and directly tending to the corruption of the public morals shall be permitted," reported, that it is provided by the general statutes of the Commonwealth (chapter 88, section 74), that the mayor and alderman "may license theatrical exhibitions, public shows, public amusements and exhibitions of every description, to which admission is obtained upon payment of money or delivery of any valuable thing, or by any ticket or voucher obtained for, money or any valuable thing, upon such terms and conditions as they shall deem reasonable, and they may revoke or suspend the same at their pleasure." Under this authority the Board has established certain regulations (a copy of which is appended) providing for the public safety in case of fire or a disturbance of the peace. It has not been considered expedient heretofore to adopt any general rules in regard to the character of the performances or exhibitions to be given under the licenses, for the reason, obviously, that it would be impossible to apply general rules upon such a subject to particular cases. The promoters of pugilistic exhibitions would not be deterred from applying for a license by any general statement that this Board will not license immoral exhibitions. They do not believe that their exhibitions are immoral, or that it would be contrary to public policy to encourage them. Under some circumstances such exhibitions would not be objectionable; under others they would be highly objectionable. It is necessary to pass upon each case as presented. The power of the Board in this matter is an arbitrary one, and must be exercised with extreme caution. The line between what is moral and what is immoral is often so shadowy that the most cultivated persons would be unable to agree in defining it. What one person with strict notions of morality would regard as "manifestly" impure—a copy of an antique statue, for instance—another with a more cosmopolitan taste, would pronounce to be a teacher of the higher morality. As it is apparent, therefore, that nothing would be accomplished for the protection of the public morals by inserting the condition named in the order, the committee are of opinion that it would be inexpedient to do so.

The question was on accepting the report.

Alderman Hulbert—The statutes and ordinances place this matter of theatrical performances and exhibitions entirely within the control of the Board of Aldermen of this city, and the responsibility rests directly upon us and no one else. Now what is the object the order I introduced designs to accomplish? The fact is, within the last two or three years, there have been theatrical or other exhibitions in this city, in places licensed by the Boards of Aldermen which have preceded us, which have been grossly indecent and manifestly tending to the corruption of the morals of the public. The fact is notorious. The class of exhibitions to which I refer is patent to the public. What may come up for the balance of the current year I know not. But we as a Board are responsible for them, and it does seem to me perfectly proper to look at this thing just as it is. If it is not practicable to insert something like that in the license, something else may be done. All I wish to do is to plainly set forth the opinion of the Board of Aldermen in regard to these exhibitions which are, on all hands, admitted to be impure and indecent. The report which has been offered here states that it has been left for us to pass upon things as they come up. Yet they are not passed upon. My idea is that if there are any things which would not be tolerated in any other community, we should give warning to the proprietors of such amusements that they will not be tolerated here, and if they occur again that their licenses will be revoked. I claim that by the statutes of this State this Board is responsible for the occurrence of such exhibitions as have been given here in the past two or three years, and which I believe no member of this Board will stand up for or approve of. In introducing the order with reference to having something inserted in the license, my object was, that when a person took out a license it was to be understood that this City Government would not allow exhibitions which are known and felt to be impure. In this I don't raise the question of theatres or no theatres; I simply take up that class of exhibitions which are admitted to be detrimental to the public morals. I would like to be set right upon this question. I don't want to be held responsible for such things. I believe that the evils alluded to in the order are the worst of our time. I have had experience with large numbers of young men and know what the tendency of these things is. I will say here that ten years ago such abominations would not have been tolerated. The worst thing I have had to contend with in young men was this class of exhibitions. What is the result of them? Take the defalcations and breaches of trust, today, and all that form of dishonesty, and I will venture to say that if the truth was known more than half of them arose from the demands of this vice. There is no vice that will impel a man to defalcation and breach of trust more than this. Young men can't go through the streets without having exhibitions of impurity before them. They are equal to anything ever found upon the ruins of Pompeii, and I feel that the real responsibility for them is here, because we have control of this thing. I have no more sons to be influenced by them, it is true. I am thankful that the only son I had was not contaminated by them. But other citizens who have sons have a claim upon us that we should not allow such contaminations put before them. It can't be overestimated at this time. There is a laxness and looseness which is lamentable. If this thing goes on we shall reap the whirlwind. It is a very serious matter and permeates all classes. I don't come here to reform public morals, but as the responsibility is placed upon us, I don't want to take the responsibility of throwing seductions in the way of the young. And I would sooner cut this right arm off than give permission for a repetition of those exhibitions which have been seen here. I have walked the streets of this city at midnight pleading with young men to leave the paths of ruin, and the greatest obstacle they have to contend with are these exhibitions. I don't propose to discuss the report, out of respect for the committee. My object will be attained if this Board will indicate its opinion in this respect.

Alderman Sayward—It would seem that something should be said in defence of the Committee on Licenses of this and last year; what has been done before that I do not know. This order has been fully considered by the committee and they find it is hard to discriminate. They see no better way than what is recommended in the report. When parties violate the law we have power to revoke a license—when an immoral play is given to the public—and if the gentleman knows of any such case it is his duty to make complaint to the Committee on Licenses. We have not granted all the licenses which have come here this year. A great many petitioners have had leave to withdraw when the exhibitions were not for the public good. So far as regulating the class of theatre performances that is not in the power of the committee to do.

Alderman Hulbert—I referred to what has transpired within the last two or three years, and not to anything that the present committee had done. It was with the idea of giving proprietors of theatres what the opinion of this Board is. The order will provide for the balance of the current year, for the reason that these things have occurred here and they may come up again. I do not desire to reflect at all upon the Committee on Licenses.

Alderman Gibson—This is a very delicate question. It is the duty of our police when anything appears that is improper to report it at once and check it. To undertake to anticipate what is going to take place is impossible for this Board to do. Theatres and playhouses ought to have full liberty. They are a great attraction for young men to come here. There is great competition between New York, Philadelphia and Boston, to get business men to come here, and you must give them the largest liberty. They would not go where there is no amusement. When we come to lay down any particular rule, it is utterly impossible to carry it out. I approve of the object spoken of by the gentleman, but I can't see how he can attain it. There are plays coming up every week which we don't know about at all. It is the duty of the Committee on Licenses to make proper inquiries, but we all know that no chairman can find out beforehand what a play is going to be. If the play is immoral it is the duty of the police to attend to it at once.

Alderman Hulbert—I can judge of the future only from the past. Everybody knows that there have been plays here within the last two or three years that are a disgrace to the community. All that I embrace in my order is that this city shall not have repeated here again those outrageously indecent plays which have been played here. There are certain plays that the public and the press have denounced, and I wish to stand here correctly upon that question, and I offer the following order:

Ordered, That whenever under any license issued by this Board for theatrical performances or other performances and exhibitions of a like character, any performance or exhibition which is manifestly impure and directly tending to the corruption of public morals shall take place, it shall be deemed a sufficient cause for the revocation of such license.

Alderman Hulbert—We virtually say that certain things cannot be repeated. We are not drawing small lines. The line over which I propose to go is blacker than midnight, and it is from no mock sentimentalism that I bring this matter forward.

Alderman Gibson—I don't know anything of the character of the plays in the theatres for I have not been to any of them for two years, except once when I went to see a gentleman on private business, and then I did not go in.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert the report was laid on the table, and the order offered by Alderman Hulbert, having been read once, was laid over.

HAYES'S STABLE.

Alderman Stebbins—I rise, Mr. Chairman, to a question of privilege. At the last meeting of the Board, the Alderman from the Highland District moved to suspend the rules, that a matter which had been previously passed upon might be taken up for reconsideration. When I asked the reason for such extraordinary action, he said the action previously had been illegal and could not stand. The rules were suspended, and the Alderman moved a reconsideration, and stated that he did so on the ground that the previous action of the Board was illegal giving as authority an opinion of the City Solicitor in 1870, from which he read an extract. The matter was passed upon nearly unanimously, only one member voting in the negative. It seemed to me then that the subject had been passed upon hastily. After the Board had adjourned, I read the letter of the City Solicitor, and felt then that a wrong construction had been placed upon it. I immediately addressed a letter to him, giving the statements as contained in the official report of the Board, and asked his opinion on this matter. In reply I received a communication, a portion of which I will read—

“CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE,
2 Pemberton square,
BOSTON, November 3, 1873.”

Dear Sir—In reply to your communication of this date I beg leave to say, that the question of the right of revocation by the Board of Aldermen of a license granted by the Board for the erection of a stable in this city, upon which I gave an opinion under the date of May 24, 1870, and the question recently raised upon the petition of Mr. Hayes to the Board for leave to erect a new stable upon the site of one which was built under a license and has been destroyed by fire, are, in my view, essentially different in their character; and the opinion I gave upon the former question has no application to the one raised in Mr. Hayes's case.”

Alderman Stebbins—I state this opinion for the benefit of the members of the Board, that the aldermen who voted to reconsider may take such action as they may think proper.

Alderman Sayward—I understand that the opinion is upon a new stable. The petition is to repair an old one. We asked the opinion of the City Solicitor in regard to building a new stable, and he gave the same opinion, also that he can repair an old one.

Alderman Stebbins—I will read the remainder of the letter—

“In the absence of statutory prohibition a stable might be erected in any locality, but it is provided by statute that no person shall hereafter erect, occupy or use any building for a stable in the city of Boston, except in such place as the Board of Aldermen of said city shall first in writing approve and direct.” When this approval and direction have been given to any person, he is at as full liberty to erect and use a stable in the present place as he would be if the statute had no existence. If the approval could be and were subsequently revoked, great injury and wrong might be the consequence. A building legally and properly erected, or in process of erection, at a large expense, might, by the revocation, become of no value. Therefore I gave the opinion referred to.

But the approval and direction provided by the statute have reference only to the building then to be erected. They authorize the use of that building for the purposes of a stable so long as it remains; but if that building is demolished or destroyed, they do not authorize the erection of another to be used for the same purposes. The location of a stable in a given place today, may be reasonable; years hence under changed circumstances, it may be unreasonable; and therefore the Board of Aldermen must pass their judgment upon this question every time a new structure is contemplated.

Thus you will see that, in my opinion, Mr. Hayes cannot legally erect another stable under the license formerly granted to him. The recent action of the Board of Aldermen, according to the official report of their proceedings, does not amount to a renewed license, and further action, as full as though no former license had been given, is requisite to authorize the rebuilding of his stable. I am with great respect
Your obedient servant,

J. P. HEALY.

Mr. Alderman Stebbins.”

On motion of Alderman Stebbins the letter was placed on file with the other papers in the case.

Alderman Stebbins, in the same connection, presented a memorial from a committee appointed by the Twenty-Eighth Congregational Society, worshippers in the Parker Memorial Building, protesting against the location of a stable in closer proximity to a church than is allowed by the statutes. The stable is 80 feet from the building, and the statutory limit is 170 feet. The memorial was referred to the Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

SALARIES OF THE FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Special Committee on Salaries, who were requested to report orders establishing the salaries of permanent members of the Fire Department, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the salaries of the foremen of engine and hook and ladder companies, who are permanently employed, shall be at the rate of three dollars and twenty-five cents per day, beginning at the date said officers are appointed for permanent duty, and payable monthly; also that the salaries of the hose-men of engine companies and the assistant foremen and members of hook and ladder companies who are permanently employed, shall be at the rate of three dollars per day, beginning at the date said persons are appointed for permanent duty, and payable monthly.

The order was read once.

Alderman Stebbins, from the same committee, who were directed to report an order fixing the salaries of the Fire Commissioners, made a majority report, recommending the passage of an order fixing said salaries at four thousand dollars per annum, payable monthly, to date from the organization of the Commissioners. The majority report is signed by Alderman Stebbins and Councilmen Wilbur and Risteen.

The order was read once.

Alderman Gaffield, from the same committee, presented a minority report, signed by himself and Councilman Loring, recommending the passage of an order fixing the salaries of the Commissioners at five thousand dollars.

Alderman Brown—I hope both reports will lie over for a week. It is an important matter, and I think members of the Board ought to have time to make inquiries.

Alderman Stebbins—I have no desire to press the matter today.

On motion of Alderman Power the subject was specially assigned for next Monday at half-past four o'clock.

Subsequently on motion of Alderman Gaffield the vote was reconsidered, and on motion of Alderman Stebbins the subject was taken up for discussion.

Alderman Brown—I am as ready to vote now as I shall be at any other time unless I could get an intimation of the class of men who are to be nominated for the office. I should like to know who the gentlemen are who are being negotiated with.

Alderman Stebbins—The gentleman proposes to find out who the commissioners are. I propose to vote for the salaries of the commissioners without knowing who they are to be, which I think is right.

Alderman Sayward—I agree with Alderman Stebbins that we should n't know who these men are; we should fix the salary and leave the rest to the Mayor.

Alderman Brown—It is intimated that I propose to ask the names of the gentlemen to be nominated. I don't propose to do any such thing. But I think there is an opportunity to know the character of the men to be nominated, and whether they are worth $3500, $4000 or $5000, and if I can be satisfied on that point I should be willing to vote for any amount up to five thousand. I suppose there are men known to be perfectly willing to serve in that capacity, and I simply desired to learn who they are.

Alderman Gaffield—Gentlemen will admit that we have a first-class Mayor, and he will make first-class nominations. I have no intimations who they are to be. If he gives us any intimation it will be that if we give $3500 he can obtain one class of men, that $4000 will secure another class, and $5000 another. I am strongly of the opinion that $5000 will meet the views of the public, and if we make it a lower sum I feel that we shall make a mistake. I have seen a gentleman today who was opposed to having a commission at all, and heard him say, let us have first-class men. He would be willing to give ten thousand dollars, and he has signed his name to the minority report, recommending five thousand dollars. We are starting a new and important work. It is highly important that it should start well. One of the most important things is whether we should give the commissioners a good salary. One argument is, that the Board of Health have $4000. We put an unfortunate clause into that order, giving the commissioners an opportunity to transact other business. These commissioners are to study all the matters relating to the putting out of fires. I do not know who the Mayor will nominate, but I do know it is an important work, and deserves a good salary.

Alderman Stebbins—In my opinion four thousand dollars will secure to the city the services of first-class men who can perform all the duties which will be incumbent upon them, as well as for any higher salary that may be voted. If we vote five thousand dollars I am of opinion that it will be voted down in the other branch, where the commission has only a bare majority. I hope the order placing the salary at $4000 will be retained.

Alderman Power—My reason for wishing to defer action on this matter was that I have heard it intimated that his Honor the Mayor did n't think the salary named would enable him to get such men as he would desire, and I thought I should like to inquire into the matter. I have opposed the commission from beginning to end; but if we are to have one I want the best talent that can be procured. If the Board of Health receive four thousand dollars, an efficient fire commission are worth five thousand. I am not strenuous on this point, because I see another way out of the difficulty. If men are nominated who are not worth five thousand dollars, I shall vote against them. We should have men who would be above corruption, and if such men are nominated I am ready to vote five thousand dollars or more; and if such men are not nominated, I shall take my privilege of opposing them to the best of my ability, as I did the commission.

Alderman Emery—I should like to pay a fair price according to the size of the men; I should prefer men worth five thousand dollars, to others worth only four thousand. There are men now employed at the heads of the various departments, who are not paid so high a figure as that, except his Honor. Whether we should get any better material or any better class of men than those now at the heads of the departments, I don't know. If we are to have men whose services are worth more, we ought to pay them more. I shall vote for five thousand dollars, and take the chances that the Mayor will select better men than he would if we adopt four thousand. As my friend on the right remarked, if we are dissatisfied, we can get out of it by voting against the men.

Alderman Sayward—The difficulty seems to be in deciding what constitutes the best means. I was opposed to a commission and to a Board of Health. But whatever salary you may have given them you could n't have got three better men than you have on the Board of Health, and they are employed pretty much all the time.

Alderman Power—I did not mean to reflect on the character of the Board of Health, but I do say there is no comparison between the simplicity of the labors they have to perform and the important duties that will fall upon a fire commission, who will have power to spend a million of dollars. They are invested with arbitrary powers, which the Board of Health have not. I have not the slightest doubt that the Board of Health have performed all their duties allotted to them just as well as any other gentlemen can. But there is an important clause which gives them liberty to carry on other business independent of the city's business, which the Board of Fire Commissioners cannot. Although I opposed this commission, I do not wish to throw any obstacles in the way of his Honor the Mayor procuring the men whom he thinks necessary to be procured for the position. I am willing to vote for any salary he would recommend. I have heard it intimated that it will be necessary to have the salary at five thousand in order to secure the men his Honor wishes to appoint.

Alderman Gaffield—I am very glad to hear the remarks of the gentlemen from Ward 12. I move to substitute the minority report for that of the majority. In New York the salary of the chairman of the Board is $7500 and the other members have five thousand each. If we make it five thousand we should not go beyond the bounds of economy. It is false economy to pay small salaries.

Alderman Stebbins—Will the gentleman state the salaries of the Fire Commissioners in Philadelphia?

Alderman Gaffield—They work for the honor of the position, and for pay they have an inward consciousness of the good they have done their fellow citizens.

Alderman Quincy—I assume that all the members of the Board honestly desire the success of the experiment which we intend to try. As little as some believe in it, they desire it to give us a better Fire Department rather than have it fail for the sake of saying, "I told you so." I take it that this is the case of the members of this Board, and the gentlemen in the other branch who opposed the commission will have a good example before them. If we give a fair salary, then the experiment will be fairly tried, and I hope we shall vote for five thousand dollars.

Alderman Gibson—I hope we shall pay them four thousand. We can get just as good men for that as we can for five. We have had a good committee this year, who have put the department in perfect working order. These men will not be employed all the time. They will have a chief-engineer who is capable of running the Chief-Engineer himself. The Chief-Engineer will have seven assistant engineers, and they will have thirty-odd captains. It is n't a big job they have got to do. If we could get one smart business man and pay him $15,000, and put in another at $2000 a year to do outside work, it would be best. We can't get a first-class business man who is making money to take such a place. I hope the salary will be fixed at four thousand, which is five hundred more than I want it. Let these men make themselves valuable, and let us increase their salaries $250 a year if they deserve it. We don't know who they are to be. Four thousand dollars is a splendid salary for such men as drift about here. No matter who you get, they will become lazy, and you cannot get them to stay in City Hall but a short time each day.

Alderman Gaffield—It strikes me that if the gentleman wishes to raise the salary to fifteen thousand dollars, five thousand dollars is a small amount to begu with. I propose to vote against bummers. I would ask the gentleman what there is for the president of a bank to do. Has n't he got his cashier, tellers and board of directors? And yet I will ask the gentleman what there is in these panicky times for a president to do. We want good men here, just the same as we want good bank presidents—as the gentleman from Ward 1 makes himself.

Alderman Power—Gentlemen have touched upon the way the Committee on Fire Department have done their duties. That reminds me that there are two ways in which to get the right men. One is to get a Board of Directors who would accept the position for the honor. The next best way is to give salary enough to make them accept it. I haven't thought that any bummers will be thought of for the position. The commissioners will have more to do to satisfy public opinion than any other three men in Boston. Gentlemen said the public haven't confidence in the present management of the department. I don't believe bummers will restore confidence. It has been remarked that heads of departments do not get this salary; but it does n't follow that they don't deserve it. In many private corporations men get more than five thousand dollars. I propose to do all I can to enable his Honor the Mayor to select the right men. It is said we ought to have an insurance man on the commission; now I know several insurance men who get more than five thousand dollars a year.

Alderman Gibson in the chair.

Alderman Cutter—I had the honor of being chairman of the Committee on Salaries in 1872. We had before us the salary of the Board of Health, which we thought should not exceed that of the Street Commissioners. I did n't see why they should. We don't expect every commission to be made up any better than the Street Commissioners are. We pay them $3500 a year, and we know what a hustling about there is when the office is vacant. It was desired by the Mayor, last year, that we pay the Health Commissioners $5000, but who of us believes if we had that we should have improved that commission? Haven't the press extolled the Health Commissioners for doing their duty without favor or fear. I must agree with the gentleman, in saying I don't see what the Fire Commissioners have got to do. All that they have got to do is to sit there and send their subordinates about to see what is necessary to be done. I agree with him that it is time economy put salaries where they belong. We have men in these departments,—such as the superintendents of sewers and streets,—and we pay them $3600. Do you suppose they are going to sit quietly in their seats when they see men of no greater calibre than they are getting five thousand. It is an insult to bring in three green men here and put their salaries as high as the Mayor receives. If I had been the chairman of that committee I would have insisted upon putting in a report for $3500 a year. Last year gold was ten per cent. higher than it is now, and if you give these commissioners four thousand, you give them ten per cent. more than you gave the Board of Health last year. The Superintendent of the Public Library sent in here last year and wanted a thousand dollars more. We voted him down; but have we lost him? No, sir. If he had got it very easily he would have come again and tried for more. We are not going to get men in these positions who have been successful in business. I believe the Fire Commission is a piece of extravagance, and that such a commission would prove just as valuable if we didn't pay them a cent. The commission in Albany do n't receive a cent for their services. When we paid the assessors nothing they served us best. That is the way to obtain competent men.

Alderman Hulbert—I differ with the Alderman who has just spoken. Now that it is settled I believe it is our duty to do nothing that will prevent his Honor the Mayor from selecting such men as meets his approval. In placing the salary at five thousand we do that, and in placing it at four thousand we do not. None of us know who the Mayor is trying to reach. We should n't place any obstacle in the way of having good men selected. Place the salary at five thousand, and the community will say we have acted correctly. This is unquestionably the cheapest money that we spend. An order to build a bridge at a cost of $150,000 is a small item. But the moment anything is said about salaries there is talk about it. My opinion is that all the men at the heads of departments are illy paid. But I can understand it, because they have grown up in the place. We are not treating them fairly. I should be willing to advance their salaries and go before the taxpayers on that issue. What we want is brains. The market price of brain is very different from that of muscle. I can see work enough for three men for all the time they can spend on it. I can see that the city is to be benefited as a whole, not merely in the extinguishing of fires merely, but in preventing them. I am willing to vote for five thousand dollars, but not for a less sum. I am glad to hear the gentleman from Ward 12 say let us have the best talent we can. There is more than a thousand dollars difference between four and five thousand a year, as men regard it.

Alderman Clark—I believe we should be willing to pay such a salary as will secure able and competent men. In regard to what the Commission has got to do, why there are a great many things. One thing, they are going to order larger water pipes and have them put in; they are going to order another fire boat and have it put in. Had we had the same appliances on the 9th of November which we have in the city today, we would never have had that fire. It is a fact that cannot be contradicted that suggestions were made to this Government three years ago which were not acceded to. We wanted a fire boat and the only way we could get it was by putting in an estimate for twenty thousand dollars, when it would cost thirty thousand. What is the result? The citizens would n't be without that boat today for anything. There is power put into the hands of this commission. We want able men to manage the expenditures of the department, which are not to be decreased. They have the power to do certain things and they will do them. They will order the Lowry hydrants, the efficiency of which was demonstrated yesterday afternoon, when one hydrant was opened and three engines were playing from it, and by the assistance of the fire boat the fire was confined to one building. This thing was recommended to the City Government years ago. The commission will take charge of one of the best departments in the world. We have nearly doubled it in the last year. We have now sixteen engines, and four companies permanently manned. They are ready to fight fires at the first sound of the gong. The commission will take charge of a well-organized department. In regard to salaries I believe we should pay such a salary as will secure the services of the best men who can be had. I believe Boston pays its officers too small salaries all through. We should pay them good salaries, not just enough to skin along on through the year. Such officers as the City Auditor and City Clerk should have enough to pay their expenses and lay up a little for a rainy day besides. It does n't follow that because we have one of the best city clerks and city auditors that they get sufficient salary. I am not only willing to pay these commissioners five thousand dollars, but will increase the salaries of other officials fifty per cent. if it is necessary. We pay the Street Commissioners three thousand five hundred dollars, which is wholly inadequate for the services rendered. The salary of the Board of Health is too small for the arduous labors performed. They have rendered very effective services during the past year. There is no question but that thousands of men in the city receive larger salaries than five thousand dollars a year who do not begin to have the responsibility that the Fire Commission will have. They have something to do besides coming into their offices in the morning and remaining there during the day. If the commission proves a failure it is within the province of this Board to abolish it entirely, as no doubt it will be when it proves to be of no service. I cannot for a moment suppose that the Mayor will appoint or this Board confirm, such a class of men as has been intimated have been hanging around here and seeking office. I have no doubt men of integrity and capacity will be appointed. It is our duty to reject bad appointments, and moreover I do not think it is our duty to support men whose services are not worth more than five thousand dollars a year.

Alderman Cutter—I was in hopes that we should hear some argument from the gentleman in favor of five thousand. He has pointed out the duties of the Fire Commission, and it would seem that they are to discharge those of the Water Board by putting in Lowry hydrants and larger pipes. They will have arduous duties in that direction, for the work has been done already. The gentleman says he favors high salaries all through. He must have forgotten his record last year. I think there was a handbill circulated saying he voted against the salary bill, but the people sent him back here. I am not going to vote the heads of departments five thousand a year and vote the laboring man only a dollar and a half a day. The laboring men are the bone and sinew of the country, and I don't know why the man who puts out fire with the hose should not be considered worth as much as a commissioner. Begin to raise the salaries down there. It is easy to advocate an increase of salaries; that is the atmosphere of this hall. A man is respected here who advocates high salaries. But he is not respected out of here so much. From the financial condition of the country at present it is not best to increase salaries.

Alderman Sayward—The present heads of departments came here at low salaries and they have worked up, we know, their worth, and I am willing to raise the salary of those men. But we don't know who the commissioners are. Let us give them $4000, and if they are valuable enough, I will vote to give them ten thousand; but I am not ready to raise their salaries to begin with.

Alderman Cutter again in the chair.

Alderman Gibson—If the Fire Commissioners are coming in here to take the whole business, I am willing to vote for five thousand. But if they are to be confined strictly to the Fire Department, four thousand is the most that should be given. If you want to elevate mankind why don't you begin to raise the salaries of those who handle the broom on the street? These commissioners will come in here and receive more than any of these men now receive who have been there all their lives. It is unreasonable and unjust. I don't believe these men are going to be worth four thousand dollars.

Alderman Power—The gentleman must think the commissioners are going to be green men, who will know nothing about the business. I have n't any such idea that any such men will be confirmed by this Board if they should by any possibility be nominated by his Honor the Mayor, which I have n't the slightest idea will happen. I shall never vote for the city to pay higher salaries than private corporations pay for the same labor. I know many men whose duties are not more arduous than the heads of our departments, who get more pay, and I have no doubt our heads of departments could obtain more if they would break up family ties and go to other cities. But because they don't receive what they deserve is no reason why we should n't give these commissioners what is requisite to secure the best men. They will have a large amount of money to spend, and I don't believe they will cut down the running expenses of the department. It behooves us to get men above suspicion, independent men, who will do their duty without fear or favor.

Alderman Clark—I have no idea of the men who are to be nominated, all I have heard is from the papers. One thing is sure, the Fire Commissioners must be men of business, and they are going to accept a responsible position if they undertake to fulfil what is expected by the public at large. It is expected that fires will cease to a certain extent, and the rates of insurance be decreased to a very great extent. There is no doubt a very large amount of work for them to do.

Alderman Emery—The only reason I would consent to vote for a large salary is because I wish the Mayor to be untrammelled in selecting the men for this important position. I don't expect he is going to get better men than we have now at the heads of the departments. I am satisfied he cannot. But I believe sufficient inducement should be held out to attract men to come here and take bold of this work.

Alderman Gaffield called for the yeas and nays and they were ordered.

On the motion to substitute the minority for the majority report, the vote stood yeas 8, nays 4, as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Emery, Gaffield, Hulbert, Power, Quincy—8.

Nays—Aldermen Cutter, Gibson, Sayward and Stebbins—4.

The order fixing the salary at $5000 was then passed, and a motion to reconsider by Alderman Gaffield was rejected.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE GREAT FIRE.

Alderman Clark said that he thought it no more than proper that some notice should be taken of the anniversary of the great fire. This had been suggested by a great many, and it really should be done, for Boston has in one year rebuilt that vast mass of houses which were destroyed, with capital entirely her own. He therefore offered the following order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor, and the members of the Common Council, boards of directors and heads of departments be invited to meet this board at the City Hall, on Monday next, the 10th of November, at twelve o'clock, noon, for the purpose of inspecting the improvements which have been made during the past year on the territory covered by the great fire of the 9th and 10th of November last.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, it was voted to request the City Clerk to invite the citizens generally to take part in the celebration.

ELECTION RETURNS.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the Chair appointed a committee consisting of Aldermen Stebbins and Quincy, to examine and report on the election returns.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the Board voted to hold an adjourned meeting at one o'clock P. M. on Friday, and on motion of Alderman Clark the Board adjourned till then.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
NOVEMBER 6, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, at half-past seven o'clock, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The quarterly reports of the Overseers of the Poor and the City Registrar were placed on file.

Petitions of W. H. Baldwin et al., F. B. Meigs, and J. F. Atwood & Co., and remonstrance of the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society, referred in concurrence.

The following papers received concurrent action:

Request of the Directors of Ferries for an appropriation for new furniture for ferry boat of not exceeding $3000; referred to Committee on Ferries.

Request of the Committee on Sewers for an additional appropriation of $30,000 (City Doc. No. 121.); referred to Committee on Finance.

Communication, preamble and order from Street Commissioners to take the estate surrendered by Beals, Greene & Co. and als., for the widening of Water street; referred to Committee on Streets.

Report and order on the petition of Abraham S. Foss et al., for modification of conditions of agreement for sale of certain lots of land on Seaver and Sumner streets. Order passed.

Report and order to authorize the sale of the old ferry boat Jefferson by public auction. Order passed under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Collins of Ward 2, who said it was desired to dispose of the boat as soon as possible.

Order accepting "An act to incorporate the East Boston Railroad Company," approved 8th March, A. D. 1873. Passed.

Report (leave to withdraw) on remonstrance of B. L. Crocker et al., against any modification of conditions of sale of land on Seaver and Sumner streets. Accepted.

The order authorizing the fitting up of the Bowditch Schoolhouse to accommodate the branch of the English High and Evening schools now located in the city building, Mason street, was read once.

SALARIES OF THE FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

The majority and minority reports of the Committee on Salaries, and the order of the minority fixing the salaries of the Commissioners on the Fire Department at $5000 each per annum, which had been passed by the Board of Aldermen, were considered, the question being on giving the order a second reading.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I am not in favor of the report which has been accepted by the other branch. I have had something to do with this matter of a Fire Commission. I am in favor of paying the commissioners a proper sum, but I know of no head of a department of the City Government who receives over four thousand dollars per annum. Under the circumstances four thousand dollars is enough, in my opinion. I believe, Mr. President, that we should get better men—men better fitted for the duties of that office—for four thousand than we could for five thousand. That may seem a singular proposition, but it is one that I believe in. We require for that position, not gentlemen who have been educated to the learned professions, but practical business men. I don't believe the City Government or the people of Boston desire to place in that position gentlemen with white vests and kid gloves, or white cravats, who shall sit in their seats and direct what shall be done, with their subordinates to carry out their orders. We need practical business men who shall go to fires if it is desired. And I wish to say a word here in regard to a matter which I suggested to the committee which it was not thought proper to put into the ordinance, but was left to the discretion of the commission when organized. It was that one of those commissioners shall be required to be on duty at all times, day and night. I would have them alternate, and the rules should require one of them to be present at the headquarters of the commission day and night, so that in case of complaint from any quarter that commissioner shall be prepared to answer, and be responsible for his answer. I don't believe in appointing three men who will take the place because the salary is five thousand dollars, and would not accept if it were four thousand, or who would not be willing to stay on duty all night, if necessary. The men who would serve for four thousand would be a better class than those who would serve only for five thousand. I am in favor of paying good salaries. The salaries are ordinarily fixed in April. It will be time enough to fix the salaries of the permanent commission when we shall have learned better what are the duties to be performed by them, and whether their services are worth five or four thousand. I am satisfied that four thousand will bring as good men as can be found in Boston for the place.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I do not know what intimation the gentlemen may have of who are the candidates for Fire Commissioners. I have n't heard the first word mentioned, but I am very much surprised at the reasons he gives why the salaries should be four thousand instead of five; I venture to say not a member of the Council knows what his reasons are. He says better men can be found for four thousand than for five thousand, but he don't tell us why. For the same reason you might say that better men could be secured for three thousand than for four. But it isn't good logic. No one wants men to sit in their chairs and do nothing. No one supposes the Mayor will appoint such men. It is too late in the day to say that the Fire Commissioners shall be on duty all night. They may be, after they are organized—no one knows to the contrary. In New York the chairman of the Board of Fire Commissioners receives seven thousand five hundred dollars and the two subordinates receive five thousand. The salary fixed upon by the minority is not considered extravagant, and is not higher than was mentioned in the debates in this Council while the question was before us. It is not a surprise to any member of this Council that five thousand was fixed upon rather than four thousand, and the gentleman himself presents no proof of his assertion that better men can be obtained for four thousand. I can't see any logic in it.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—I am not in favor of throwing away money or paying needlessly high salaries. It is time to economize as much as possible but true economy does n't consist in reducing salaries to the minimum for men who can perform the duties of this office. It has n't anything to do with the question whether a man wears a white vest or not. If he should wear a white vest he might be more efficient than one who had on a black vest or a fireman's cap. What we want are the right men, and if they are to be on night and day, that is the very reason why they should have more salary than those commissioners who are allowed to do other business, as is the case of the Board of Health, who receive four thousand, and that is considered a moderate salary. It strikes me that this office is to be a more arduous one than the Board of Health, especially if they are to work at night, and it appears to me that five thousand would be a very reasonable sum, at which I hope it will be fixed.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—I don't look at this matter of a Fire Commission with as much importance as some others do. I suppose the commissioners will do pretty much as they do in New York. I presume they will go down to their office at ten o'clock in the morning, get through with their work and go home as soon as they please. The chairman of the New York board told me they never went to fires. To my mind it would be unfair to the other commissioners to give these officers five thousand. We can find good men who will perform the duties for four thousand, and I think the Mayor has selected men who will be willing to serve for that sum. I move to substitute the majority for the minority report.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I think no gentleman has labored harder than I have for the establishment of a fire commission. Members of this board will agree to that. I have spent as many hours studying this matter as any one in this Council or any one in the City Government. I know something of what is required of these men, and whether my friend or my right, one of the able members of the committee, can see logic in my argument or not, I gave what every man here understands to be good and substantial reasons why men who are to be appointed at four thousand will be better fitted for the practical duties of that position than gentlemen who may be appointed at five thousand. I have n't the least idea who is to be appointed. I have only seen a list of names in the newspapers of persons spoken of for the position. I have never exchanged a word with his Honor the Mayor, (though it may have been thought from the position which I have taken that I would have done so,) or with any one else. But I still adhere to the proposition that those duties will be better performed by practical, every-day, common-sense men, than by scholars, many of whom are now applying for the place. I hope the majority report will be substituted. We are going to pay them higher than any other commission which has been established in the Commonwealth, to say nothing of the city of Boston.

To have good, substantial pay is enough, to begin upon, at any rate, when we have got to regulate salaries within the next six months. I don't believe any of those three commissioners are to work as hard as many gentlemen here do for less than that sum. My friend says the pay is $7500 in New York. What is the pay in Philadelphia, which covers one hundred and twenty-nine and a half square miles as compared with the pay in New York, which covers twenty-two and a half square miles? In the other cities the pay is very small compared to what is proposed here. In Baltimore I think there is no pay for the commissioners. I believe in a paid commission and a paid department, but I want to see the salaries of the men who go to fires and chew the cinders—the men who labor and put out fires—I want to see the salaries of those men raised. Let us equalize that matter somewhat, and advance the pay of the men who risk their lives in the protection of property. If the pay of the commissioners is n't enough, it will soon be shown and the City Council in its liberality will increase it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I am glad to hear the gentleman from Ward 5 speak as he does. They say chickens come home to roost. I agree with him though. When they talked commission I opposed it. I oppose it today. Let us see what this commission has got to do. They have got to come to this hall and expend this appropriation. We all know they are not to run to fires. They are obliged to appoint a chief-engineer and assistants, and they are to do the duty, while the commissioners are to spend the appropriation which this Council will give them. And if any of those gentlemen wish to go to any section of the city, he will have a carriage to take him there, just as every head of a department does today. It seems strange to me that men will stand up here and wish to pay five thousand dollars to these Commissioners, when we have a Chief-Engineer who has done this duty for years, and there is not a blot on his record to lay your finger on. I say there are good men, not white-cravat men either, who can fill those positions for $3500, and put out fires as it ought to be done. I would therefore move to amend further by making the salary $3500.

Mr. West of Ward 16—We must n't forget, Mr. President, that these commissioners are to have great responsibility—greater than any commission in this City Government. They are to have sole control of the Fire Department. My friend says we ought to pay the men more. That rests with the commissioners. For four thousand dollars we might get good men, but I can't agree with my friend that we can get just as good men for four thousand as we could for five thousand. If the salary is placed at five thousand His honor would have a larger field to select from. There is no question about that. He says we want practical men. That is true. But there are many good, practical mechanics who would n't look at the place for four thousand a year. They can make more than that in their business. I think we should not prejudice this movement by a false start. It is true five thousand is a large salary, but this is an exceptional case. The commissioners are bound to give their whole time and attention to their duties. I don't believe it will be good economy to make the salary too small. Five thousand is little enough.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I heartily agree with the remarks of my friend from Ward 5, and partly, also, with those of my friend from Ward 3. Good commissioners would find plenty to do from morning till night, and if the commissioners attend to their duties, they will be at fires day or night. But I think it is unfair to the heads of departments in the City Hall, who have done their duty for years, to place these salaries at five thousand dollars. If we start at four thousand it will be enough. I think it will be impossible to go outside of the department and find men who will do the duties as well as men in the department. I hope the motion to substitute will prevail.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I don't propose to vote on this question out of any feeling of courtesy for the heads of departments. That is not our duty. Our duty is to fix the salary at such a sum as will enable the Mayor to fill the offices with the best men, and we ought not to have the slightest feeling of courtesy for the heads of other departments in voting. Now, why should the salary be more in this case? The gentleman from Ward 16 has put it just right. These officers are almost the only ones who are to assume great responsibility. They will have arduous labors to perform that the others don't have. Many gentlemen at the heads of departments are perfectly able to take responsibility, but as the City Government is constituted they don't have to take it. The City Government is run by committees, and the superintendents merely advise. I would be willing to pay a thousand dollars extra to a man to take the responsibility. The Board of Health have four thousand a year. That office is easier than a Fire Commissioner. They are not deprived by the ordinance from engaging in other business, and the restriction against engaging in other business is worth another thousand. If the salary of the Board of Health is any criterion, five thousand is just the sum we should pay the Fire Commissioners. The increase would be none too much. As for this sort of demagogical talk about increasing the pay of the men who chew cinders, that shouldn't influence us, for we are not trying to get votes now. Even the gentleman who used that argument is relieved from it. He has gone up higher. Let us not use any consideration like this. Let us make the commission a success, entirely regardless of the heads of departments or anything else except the public good.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9—I think the salary of four thousand dollars would get good men enough for the position. We need good men, but in such times as these a salary of four thousand is equivalent to more than what four thousand was last year when the Board of Health was appointed. I can't see what this commission is to do more than the Board of Health. One of that board has devoted all his time to the work, and the others, although having other business, are occupied about all the time. I can't see any good reason why we can't get good men for a salary of four thousand dollars.

The Chair—I observe that the original order which comes up from the Board of Aldermen is precisely, word for word, the same as the gentleman from Ward 1 has moved to substitute, with the exception of the sum named as the salary. According to the rules of the Council, the vote will first come upon the order to pay five thousand dollars. If that is defeated then the question will be upon the order making it four thousand.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. Pease—I will withdraw my motion to substitute if it is in order.

The Chair—The question will first be put on five thousand.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I did n't propose to say anything upon this question, but the yeas and nays have been called for, and it is proper for me to state the ground I take. Now I am not for low salaries. If I could succeed in getting good men for any place I should go for paying them well. I should like to have had this department organized so that the Chief-Engineer, if it was deemed necessary to make a change, should be a superior, able man, and whatever money was necessary to secure such a man should have been paid to him. It has, however, been decided to have a Board of Commissioners. What has a commission got to do? What can they do, and how can they spend their time? Now, so far as the machinery for the management of fires is concerned, it is like every thing else in the arts and sciences. That machinery goes on improving, year by year. As mechanics see that they can improve machinery they do so, and thus you go on from one engine to another, until you have got these magnificent steam engines. Then you have got to look for smaller apparatus, and then you would come to do just what the minority recommended—the best of all others,—and that is a standing high-pressure service. I trust it will come to that. But in regard to the management of such things there is very little labor. As far as I can understand, the time of these commissioners can't all be taken up in any duty coming legitimately and properly within their province. My opinion about it is, that the ordinance in that respect will have to be modified. I advocated that modification of the ordinance in regard to the Board of Health. It is better as it is. I don't think there is enough for the commissioners to do. The management of fires belongs to the Chief-Engineer, and if a commissioner comes round and interferes, the engineer can order him into the ranks. Such is the law, but of course he would n't do it with the ordinance as it is now. I make this remark simply to show the distinction between their duties. My belief is that the ordinance ought to be altered and that the commissioners should be able to attend to these duties and do something else besides. I think, then, you would get abler and better men. Any one who would take the position at four thousand dollars would do so with the expectation that the ordinance would be altered; you cannot expect that for four thousand or five thousand dollars you are going to get a Board of Fire Commissioners that will surpass Aldermen Cutter, Clark and Stebbins, and if you come to this Council you will find men equally competent. You have, in the gentlemen I name, men of excellence that we know, and the chances are that we are not going to get better ones. It seems to me that these commissioners will get very large salaries, under such circumstances, at four thousand dollars.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the question was first taken on five thousand, and resulted—yeas 14, nays 35, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Blackmar, Brackett, Burditt, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Holmes, Loring, Martin, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, West—14.

Nays—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Anderson, Boardman, Bowles, Brennan, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Dacey, Dean, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hine, Hughes, Jones, Madden, Marston, McCue, Morse, Page, Pease, Risteen, Shaw, Thacher, Train, Upham, Wells, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward—35.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Barnes, Bicknell, Bleiler, Doherty, Hall, Harrington, Kelley, Kingsley, Lamb, Mahan, McKenney, Tower, Warren—13.

The question was then taken on four thousand, and it resulted 47 yeas, 2 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Ahott, Adams, Anderson, Blackmar, Boardman, Bowles, Brackett, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Dacey, Darrow, Davis, Dean, Denny, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hine, Holmes, Hughes, Jones, Loring, Madden, Marston, Martin, McCue, Morse, Page, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Train, Upham, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward—47.

Nays—Messrs. Thacher, Wells.

The Chair—The motions made were in such a form that under the rule they were not absolutely put, but the effect is precisely the same. The last vote was equivalent to the substitution of the majority for the minority report and the question now is upon giving the order a second reading.

The order was read the second time, and on motion of Mr. Caton of Ward 11 the rules were suspended and the order was passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote fixing the salary of the commissioners at $4000, offered by Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, was lost.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order requesting the Water Board to report on condition of water of Farm Pond. Passed.

Order authorizing new desks and platforms to be provided for Common Council Chamber, at an estimated cost of $2000. Passed.

Order that the further sum of $800 be authorized to be expended for the fitting up of the Municipal Court Room, Southern District. Passed.

Order to pay for rent of armory of Company I, Ninth Regiment, Kingston street, for two months, $52, and order authorizing not exceeding $700 to be expended in repairing and furnishing armory of said company at 544 Washington street. Passed—yeas 35, nays 0.

Order for a transfer from Reserved Fund, of not exceeding $5000, to cover expenses for surveys, plans and estimates for contemplated improvements on Northampton-street district. Laid on the table on motion of Mr. Prescott of Ward 9.

Order to appropriate $100 in addition to amount previously appropriated for music stands. Passed, in concurrence.

AUDITOR'S MONTHLY EXHIBIT.

The Auditor's exhibit for the month of October (City Document 122), was presented in print and sent up. Following is the recapitulation of the expenditures for the month:

	Appropriations, Revenues, etc.	Expended.	Unexpended.
General.....	$11,051,852 60	$5,442,728 08	$5,609,124 72
Special.....	9,245,872 21	4,526,736 75	4,719,135 46
	$20,297,725 01	$9,969,464 83	$10,328,260 18

PETITIONS.

Mr. Prescott of Ward 9 presented the petition of William Pope & Son, for leave to erect a wooden building within the building limits on Albany street. Referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Mr. Whiston of Ward 8 presented the petition of Company D, First Battalion, M. V. M. for additional appropriation to furnish a gun rack, closets, etc., or in lieu thereof an armory suitable for State and company property.

Referred to Committee on Armories.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, to whom were referred the petitions of M. Drinan & Co., James Frame and Hersey Brothers, for leave to erect wooden buildings within the building limits, reported orders granting the same. The orders were severally read twice and passed.

Mr. Caton, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of Edward Gallagher. Accepted.

A PUBLIC PARK.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 offered the following:

Ordered, That a joint special committee, consisting of five members of the Common Council, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, be appointed, who shall consider the expediency of laying out a public park upon a scale hefitting the present public demand and the prospective increase in area and population by additional annexation of cities and towns to Boston, and to report upon the same, with such suggestions and recommendations as in their judgment the best interests of the metropolis may require, said committee to be called the Committee on Public Works.

Mr. Shaw—In introducing this order, Mr. President I wish, as is my custom, to give a reason for it. I think, Mr. President, that the time has arrived when the city of Boston should commence to make arrangements for laying out a public park. I think public opinion has reached that point, and I had almost said it had demanded of the City Government that action should be taken in the matter. The order which I have introduced contemplates the appointment of a joint special committee to consider the expediency of the project, and report to the Council the result of their investigations as may seem proper. Now, Mr. President, it is very well known that the public parks, or the Common and squares of our city are very small in area. We have in the Common forty-eight acres, and in other squares enough more to make an aggregate of seventy-five acres for the city of Boston.

The city of Brooklyn, N. Y., has in Prospect Park 619 acres, or thirty per cent. more than the whole area of Charlestown. In addition to this she has several smaller parks, which increase the area to 666 acres. And, by the way, she has a most admirable way, in my judgment, of providing for the expense of those parks. She taxes her horse railroads, which the city of Boston ought to do, and the income from that source is enough to pay the whole expense, so that, in fact, within five years the city of Brooklyn will not have a dollar to pay for her public parks. The city of Baltimore has in Druid Hill Park some 700 acres—fifty per cent. larger than the whole area of Charlestown, and in addition to that she has two smaller parks, making an aggregate of 775 acres of public parks. She pays for her expenses in that line in a similar way to that of Brooklyn.

The city of New York has in Central Park 1000 acres, and in addition in smaller parks 800 acres, making in all 1800 acres of public parks, which is only 300 acres less than the whole area of Roxbury. The city of Chicago has 2000 acres in her parks, and she has three boards of commissioners to manage them. The city of Philadelphia has 2740 acres in her parks more than five times the area of Charlestown and 120 acres more than the aggregate area of Charlestown and Roxbury. Now compare all these cities in this country with the city of Boston with 75 acres only, I don't remember, at the present moment, the size of St. James Park, London, but I know it is large. Neither do I call to mind the area of the Bois de Boulogne, in Paris, nor the grand boulevard around the city of Brussels, situated almost like the city of Boston, which has a large territory admirably adapted for such a purpose. Such a boulevard the city of Boston might well have, especially with the annexation which she has recently carried and is likely to carry hereafter. Now, Mr. President, it seems to me that while upon this subject I may say that the plan of Mr. Crocker, submitted two or three years ago for a public park, in my opinion, was a grand one for the beginning.

I don't think it was comprehensive enough, but it was upon a scale which might be enlarged. It proposed to take in that beautiful hill in Brookline called Corey's Hill. Now, Mr. President, if I were to have my idea in laying out a public park, I would commence with a similar plan with that adopted in the city of Brussels, so that our great avenues from the centre of the city might lead into a grand boulevard or park. Our city can surround itself with a park at any time, Mr. President, which in time will reach from Everett or Revere Beach on the east, around to Squantum on the south; that is not too large an idea for us to comprehend.

By taking this plan, or adopting one which may take in some of the surrounding hills, especially Corey's Hill, it would afford a most fitting place for a high-service reservoir. It may be remembered that one week before the fire at the corner of Essex and Washington streets, this Council was invited to visit Parker Hill, for the purpose of investigating as to whether it was a fit place for an additional high-service reservoir. After the investigation I felt it my duty to rise in my seat and object to carrying out that plan. My reasons were that we had had one terrible fire, which showed this necessity for a higher service, so that the hydrants might be more generally used, and with greater effect. Had those hydrants been available the fire never would have crossed Washington street.

Now, sir, we have in Corey's Hill a most beautiful elevation, 263 feet high, while Parker Hill is only 222 feet high, making a difference of 41 feet in favor of Corey's, which would make an immense difference in the pressure that might be applied to water that should be carried into the city, if upon that hill were placed a proper reservoir. That hill might be adapted for that purpose, and a grand boulevard or street, or whatever it might be called, might surround it, and both ends be accomplished. I have noticed in the public press some allusions to the Bussey Woods as a place that might be procured of Harvard College for this purpose. I think it is a proper place, but I would not establish a park there except in connection with a grand boulevard round the city. I hope this matter will be taken into consideration, because I think the public is ready for it. I think there is a demand that we shall begin to investigate the matter, so that we may have something of which the city of Boston may be proud.

There is no city in this Union with such surroundings as Boston, and I think that at a very moderate expense which could be continued along for a series of years, and this or some other plan may be carried out. I commenced three years ago an examination of this matter and placed myself in correspondence with different cities in the Union, and also with some in Europe, and have been receiving their books and documents, facts and figures. It seems to me, Mr. President, that there is no better time than now for us to commence an investigation of the matter. This question of additional annexation is sure to come up again in the Legislature, and it should be definitely settled whether the surroundings of Boston are to be annexed. I think they are. I am in favor of further annexation than has yet been proposed. I hope this matter may be examined into and an intelligent report made, so that the people of Boston may be satisfied that the City Government have their interests at heart, and are ready to act as they may dictate.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I entirely agree with the gentleman, and would suggest a slight amendment to the order. What I want is to have parks available for all parts of the city. Instead of "a park" I move amend by inserting "one or more park."

Mr. Shaw accepted the amendment.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—It seems to me that it is like crowding the mourners, as they say. I have heard of this park business for the last eight years. I heard of it in the Legislature in 1870. That is a cunning device—"one or more public parks." I hold that we have surrounded the city of Boston with a park. Will the gentleman go back to where a park was to be located in Roxbury? I had the pleasure of riding out on that tall hill, too. We have the territory today, and Boston is taking care of the roads, and there is a driveway, and we have them without paying for it. The gentleman cites Baltimore, but he don't say anything about Philadelphia and how that city came with its park. It was presented to that city, but they don't propose to present any here. If they do the gentleman ought to use his influence in Brookline, where Corey Hill is located. He says we should have a driveway around the park. Does he forget that we have a driveway around Chestnut-Hill Reservoir? All we have got is to get a part of Brookline in order to pass into Brighton, and then the city will have charge of the entire driveway. I would rather drive out there and see the styles of architecture than to see shrubbery. I think the gentleman told me that that locality could be bought for a poor farm, and the heart of Brookline could be taken for much less than they propose to pay for a poor farm today. Now, why would n't it be a good idea to buy that for the city of Boston? It would pay to have that farm. The city of Boston is not ready for a park yet, because we have parks. The only park we have the gentleman voted to cut off a part of it and put it into the street. If the Committee on Common and Squares could get sufficient appropriation we would have parks enough. I move the order be referred to the Committee on Common and Squares.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6—I don't see the necessity of referring this order to the Committee on Common. No appropriation of money is intended. It is simply an order of inquiry. It is very apropos at this time, to consider where and how we may lay out a system of public parks. We have got to have land for parks in one place or another, and it is just the time to consider where they will have them. It is remarkably apropos, but I hardly think the committee would desire that this order be referred to them.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I do n't think the committee have any desire to have it referred to them. We can consider it now.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—I feel satisfied that the city of Boston should have a public park, but it seems to me that, as the year is drawing to a close, this order is not in place. There is hardly time, in the few remaining weeks of the year, for a committee to look into this matter intelligently. Next year we will have representations from Brighton, West Roxbury and Charlestown and the representatives of those sections should have a voice in the matter. I think the order ought to be referred to the next City Government.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—The gentleman from Ward 5 says public opinion is in favor of a public park, and now is the time to do it. I am perfectly thunderstruck at the remarks of the gentleman. Does he suppose that two or three articles in a newspaper represent public sentiment, when it is well known that the city cannot borrow money at the legal rate of interest to pay the current expenditures? Does he think we want a public park when we have got to pay millions for water in the next year to come, whether we use Mystic or not? I am perfectly surprised that any gentleman should advocate such an expenditure when the city of Boston has such difficulty in borrowing money.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I never lived a day without learning something new, and I have learned something new tonight. No matter what the rate of interest is, Boston can and will obtain all the money she needs, and she will never repudiate an obligation brought in the proper place and at the proper time. The gentleman says I said, "Now is the time to do it." Did n't I say that in my judgment now is the time to commence an examination of the question? The gentleman is stopping over. He opposed as lustily as he knew how, and with all the vigor he possessed, the establishment of a fire commission, and when the time came for voting for it, he saw that public opinion was too much for him, and he turned round and voted for it. I have no doubt that his good sense will, by and by, show him that a public park is demanded by the people, and if any committee should ever report in favor of it, I have not a doubt but that my friend from Ward 1 will vote for it. Notwithstanding that he is isolated and has prayed for free ferries, which I have long advocated, and notwithstanding the expense the city has been to give him fresh water—and good water too—notwithstanding all these things, he rises now and opposes what is looked upon by the whole people as a good matter. I don't propose to have the park built this year, but what I desire is that a proper committee shall investigate this matter. My friend talks about time. Why there is time to make a world between this and the first of January. I am aware my friend from Ward 3 is about to leave the City Government, as well as myself, unless they count us out; but when such a great question shall be brought up to the State House for legislation I have no doubt he will favor the plan. He is a public-spirited man, as well as my friend from Ward 1. The astonishment is on my part. If there is a city in the world that maintains its credit it is the city of Boston, notwithstanding what my friend from East Boston, with her forty thousand inhabitants, says. I had the pleasure, today, of driving over to East Boston, and I went over to Breed's Island, where a miniature city adjoins the Island Ward. A large population will be settled on that territory in the next twenty-five years, and I shall be glad then to see East Boston in the heart of the city. When my friend opposes a measure of this kind I can hardly believe my senses. I don't believe now that he is in earnest. When I saw the beautiful streets of East Boston—those broad avenues and extensive territory were once high hills—when I found there that the enterprise of himself and his neighbors has brought that territory into such a position that we may be proud of it, I say again that I am surprised to see my friend rise here and say what he has. I think he would be glad, at the proper time, to give the citizens of Boston a breathing place.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—I am not disposed to stop over. I say this in all candor that the treasurer has difficulty in obtaining it at the legal rate of interest. The remark I made was n't intended as any slur upon the city. The gentleman has spoken of my changing my position on the question of a fire commission. I distinctly said that while voting against all annexation, I find that one city and two towns had been annexed, and the whole thing had been changed. And acting upon the principle that a wise man changes his mind and a fool never does, I said it was impossible for the city to manage the departments as has been done. Public opinion did n't change me at all. I never change my mind in view of public opinion. If I could have my way I would put those towns and that city back again and then vote against a commission. Public opinion is not in favor of a park, and in this case I think the gentleman is entirely mistaken.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—If I understand this order it is a very harmless one, and it has given rise to a needless amount of discussion. It is merely an order of inquiry. It is true the city is unable to borrow money at six per cent., but if she has to pay eight or ten or twelve per cent. the city of Boston will do it.

The motion to refer was rejected, and the order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Welis of Ward 3—

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be requested to report in print the result of their transactions with the Legislature during the present year.

Passed.

Mr. Train of Ward 13, offered the following:

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be requested to prepare plans for laying out, widening and extending streets over the territory bounded by Hampden street, Norfolk avenue, Magazine street and Swett street; said plans to be prepared with a view to the improvement of said territory by raising the grade thereof.

Ordered, That the Committee on the Suffolk-street District be requested to report to the City Government as early as practicable whether any additional legislation is necessary to secure the raising of the territory bounded by Hampden street, Norfolk avenue, Magazine street and Swett street, so that the grade thereof shall correspond to the new grade established for the Northampton-street district, so called.

Mr. Train of Ward 14—I presented the last order read that we might prevent any mistake being made in carrying out the provisions of the first one, and to see if it was necessary to have legislative action to cover the ground. But the first order is of great importance to the ward which I represent, and also to the whole city. The order passed the other evening in regard to filling up and grading the Northampton-street district is, of course, to be carried out. This territory lies between Swett street and Magazine street. It is a very small tract and only partially inhabited. The streets which will be laid out across the Northampton-street district will adjoin it. What we ask is that the grade may be raised and the streets laid out at the same time, so that property owners may go ahead and build and not be disturbed afterward. The order is merely to ask the Street Commissioners to look into it. The most feasible way of filling the Northampton-street District is for the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad to lay tracks across the territory. I hope the order will take a second reading tonight, as it is necessary that the matter be put in train at once. There should be no delay whatever.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—It appears to me that this first order is of considerable importance and certainly ought to go before the Committee on Streets, and I move its reference to that committee.

The motion prevailed, and the second order was passed.

Mr. West of Ward 16 offered the following:

Ordered, That additional temporary accommodations be furnished for the primary schools in the Lewis-School district.

Ordered, That a primary school be established on Beacon street near Parker Hill, to accommodate pupils living between Dartmouth and Parker street.

Mr. West—These orders have been acted upon by the School Committee, and the District Committee thought that all they had to do was to go to the Superintendent of Buildings to be carried out. I move their reference to the Committee on Public Instruction.

The orders were so referred.

On motion of Mr. West of Ward 16—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Instruction be requested to consider and report whether the Girls' High School has ever received legal establishment by the City Council, and what action is necessary in respect to the question.

Passed.

On motion of Mr. Collins of Ward 2, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
NOVEMBER 7, 1873.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at one o'clock today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

SALARIES OF FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the Board took up the order fixing the salaries of the Fire Commissioners, and voted to concur with the Council in making the salary four thousand dollars.

A motion to reconsider, by Alderman Stebbins, was lost.

EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

Special Police, without pay—George S. Hutchinson, for duty at evening school at bathhouse on Cabot street; J. W. Cotton for Chatham street.

Members of the Fire Department—Eugene M. Byington, Michael H. Barry, Edwin P. Jones, John F. Carrier, R. H. Lawler, George Davis, C. E. Hill, to take effect Nov. 1, 1873.

PETITIONS REFERRED.

To the Committee on Health on the Part of the Board. William Munroe, to occupy wooden stable for two cows and three horses on Bakers Court, near Washington street.

H. W. Bessom, to occupy wooden stable for one horse at 301 Sumner street.

To the Committee on Streets. Mrs. Ann J. Phillips to be paid for land taken on Cottage street.

CONSTABLES' BONDS.

The bonds of Charles E. Townsend and Martin F. Curley, constables of Suffolk County, being duly certified by the City Treasurer, were approved by the Board.

NOTICE OF INJUNCTION.

Notice was received from the Supreme Judicial Court of an application by George R. Minot and fifty others for an injunction to prevent the annexation of the town of West Roxbury to the City of Boston, and of a hearing thereon before said court on Friday, November 14, at nine o'clock A. M.

Referred to the City-Solicitor.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

Alderman Stebbins submitted the following report: The committee appointed to examine the returns of votes cast in the several wards of this city, on the 4th inst., for State and county officers, have attended to that duty, and report that they have examined the returns of election of all said officers, with the exception of those for the offices of Senators, Representatives, Register of Deeds and Register of Probate and Insolvency; and they find that the results, as far as examined, are correctly entered in the book kept for that purpose, and they recommend that the certificates thereof be signed and transmitted to the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Your committee report that requests duly signed have been received by the City Clerk, for a recount of the ballots cast in Wards 2, 3, 8, 13, for Register of Probate; also in Wards 2, 3, 5, 7, 12, for Senators, and in Wards 5, 13 and 14, for Representatives.

Your committee also report that no returns have yet been received from Chelsea or Revere for a Register of Deeds.

Your committee, therefore, ask for further time to report on the election of Senators, Representatives, Register of Probate and Register of Deeds, and for authority to count the original ballots in the case where the same has been requested.

S. B. STEBBINS, } Committee.
S. M. QUINCY, }

The report was accepted.

Alderman Stebbins said it was desirable that the recount should be made and reported to the Board on Monday. He moved an addition of one be made to the committee. Carried.

The Chair appointed Alderman Power on the committee.

THE FIRE COMMISSION.

A communication was received from His Honor the Mayor, nominating the following-named persons to constitute the Board of Fire Commissioners:

Alfred P. Rockwell, to hold office until the first Monday in May, 1876.

David Chamberlain, to hold office till the first Monday in May, 1875.

Timothy T. Sawyer, to hold office till the first Monday of May, 1874.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the Board voted to take the vote on confirmation on Monday next, at half-past four o'clock.

REMOVAL OF A DANGEROUS BUILDING.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert—

Ordered, That the Chief-of-Police be directed to close against the passage of vehicles the portion of Pine street nearest to Harrison avenue during the removal of a wall of building 237 Pine street, which has been condemned as unsafe by the Inspector of Buildings.

REPORTS.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, submitted orders to pay G. T. Bigelow and others, trustees, $1580, on account of widening Federal street; and Newell A. Thompson, $1309 20, on account of the extension of Columbus avenue to Park square.

Severally read once.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of the proprietors of the Stoughton-street Baptist Church, for abatement of betterments for street widening. Accepted.

Alderman Clark—I rise to a question of privilege. Certain comments have been made in the press concerning the order which I had the honor to present at the last meeting of this Board, in relation to the inspection of the territory covered by the great fire which occurred a year ago. I supposed the order was sufficiently clear in its wording to prevent any misunderstanding.

It did not seem inappropriate for the members of this Board, as Surveyors of Highways, to inspect the work which has been accomplished in the widening of streets and the erection of buildings during the past year, and to invite the other members of the Government to accompany them. No celebration was contemplated. It was intended to be purely a business affair.

There is to be no speechmaking that I am aware of. The Inspector of Buildings purposed to make a brief report to the Government, giving some account of the extent and character of the improvements on the burnt district for the year ending next Monday. It was suggested that that report, instead of being presented at the regular meeting of this Board, should be presented at the informal meeting of the City Council, and read by the Mayor, before proceeding to visit the territory.

That is the whole story. There is to be no formal procession—no dinner, no speeches. For the statement that there was to be such an absurd celebration the newspapers are alone responsible. That is the only source from which the community have received information that we are to have a band, or go to Parker's or Young's, or have a spread on the Common. It was proposed to give the members of the City Government an opportunity to go down there and see what has been done on this territory within the past twelve months. I thought it was proper for us to go, and the suggestion first came to me from many of the best merchants in the city. Several verbal and written communications came to me on this subject, but not from members of this City Government. For the idea that any great parade or procession was contemplated, the daily press, so far as my knowledge extends, is responsible. That is the only explanation that I have to make in this matter. Now if it is thought proper to abandon the whole thing I shall not feel that it was injudicious. I should like to have the opinion of other members of the Board in regard to dismissing it entirely. If the public press, who represent public sentiment, deem it unwise, I am willing to dismiss it altogether. It did seem to me that we might meet here at twelve o'clock, and after hearing a brief statement from the Inspector of Buildings of what has been done, we might go down and see this territory that had been burnt, and which has been rebuilt by the citizens of Boston, and with money of the city of Boston, principally. We might see for ourselves whether or not it was well done. I, for one, would n't think that it was time thrown away.

Alderman Stebbins—When this matter was introduced, on Tuesday, it struck me as very appropriate, but the public press have so magnified the demonstration, giving it a character which the originator never had any idea of, and which I certainly never thought of—the having of flags and bands of music was never in my mind, that after what has been said, I propose to abandon the whole thing.

Alderman Sayward—I don't propose to back out because the public press choose to put in something that the Board of Aldermen never thought of. I say, let us carry it out just as we first intended.

Alderman Hulbert—When this order was introduced it did n't seem to me to be inappropriate. It was designed to be an informal visitation of the City Government. I saw nothing improper in it, but when I read the papers the next morning, and was told what was involved in it, I thought perhaps more was contemplated than was mentioned in the order here, and that there was to be something entirely too elaborate. I made up my mind that I should n't go into that procession.

I disapproved of it in toto. As the explanation of the gentleman is just the same as has been said in the order of last Tuesday, I think it is very proper to proceed. It is not a celebration, and never was intended to be. If the newspapers have taken this matter in their hands we cannot be responsible for their mistakes. I understand that there are reporters here now from New York to report the speeches which will be made on that occasion. I hope there will be such an informal occasion, but that no speeches will be made. I see no occasion to change our action here, but we want to set ourselves right. The celebration contemplated by the newspapers was simply ridiculous.

Alderman Quincy—I fail to see why we should change because the newspapers say we intended to do something that we never intended to do. I think we had better carry it out as we intended, and show the press that they are mistaken.

Alderman Clark—It certainly would not be an occasion for glorification or the celebration of such an event as occurred twelve months ago. But it did seem to me to be fitting to have a report from the Inspector of Buildings of what has been done, and then to go down there and see for ourselves what has been accomplished in twelve months. It seems to me that what has been accomplished in this short space of time would be a source of gratification. The idea was to meet here at twelve o'clock, have a report from the Inspector of Buildings, and then go down there, without interrupting trade or blocking the streets—no fire, no band, no music or flags were contemplated for the occasion. I don't know where it comes from, but I believe that the newspaper which has this criticism was the first to suggest the display of flags and of having bands of music. If it is carried out I hope we shall meet at twelve on next Monday and have the report of the Inspector of Buildings, and then go down there with such members of the City Government as desire so to do.

Alderman Hulbert—I think it is very desirable that the City Government should go down there, for I apprehend that very few, except those who are connected with the committees on streets or paving, are familiar with things in the burnt district. Those of us who are on those committees have a great many things to consider in regard to that district. As a member of the Committee on Paving, having care of the streets, it would be very satisfactory to me to have the whole City Government see for themselves, and understand what is the best for the care of the streets during the coming winter. A great amount of information will be had by a visitation there, and the members of the committees will be enabled to take such action as the whole City Council will approve.

Alderman Gaffield—I cordially approve of the plan introduced by the gentleman from Ward 6. I think it was sensible, and hope we shall carry it out, and that every member of this Board and the other branch and the heads of departments will go with us. I think we have reason for honest pride in the rebuilding of that district from its ashes. The proposed visit is very proper, and I think it should be carried out.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
NOVEMBER 10, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Weigher of Coal—John McNanghton.

Special Police Officers without pay—Alexander McLeod, American Stable, Sudbury street; John Fullerton, Baltimore & Norfolk Steamship Company.

JURORS DRAWN.

Thirty-two traverse jurors were drawn for the Superior Court, first session; also eighteen special traverse jurors for the Superior Court, first session, to make appraisal and valuation of the land of Edward Wigglesworth and Thomas Wigglesworth; also thirty-two traverse jurors for the Superior Court, second session.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The order of notice on the petition of the Ross Manufacturing Company, to locate steam engine at 72 Dorehester avenue, was considered, and no objection being offered, the petition was referred to the Committee on Steam Engines.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD.

The special assignment, being the hearing of all parties interested in proposed location of the tracks of the Metropolitan Railroad on Beacon street, from Gloucester street to Brighton avenue, was taken up.

Mr. Jewell, counsel for the railroad, said he hoped arrangements had been made by which temporary use could be made of a tract of land on the corner of Marlborough and Parker streets, for a short term, if the Board shall see fit to authorize a stable to be kept there; and if the company get the necessary authority from the parties whose lands abut on Gloucester street, they would move their stable there and so relieve the Board from acting on that question. He therefore offered a petition for leave to maintain a stable on the southerly side of Marlborough street, where it joins Parker street, for sixty horses.

On motion of Alderman Power, the subject was laid on the table and the petition was referred to the Committee on Health on the part of the Board.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

To the Committee on Health on the Part of the Board. M. Murphy, for extension of time in which to complete his stable on Athens street, between A and B streets.

M. T. W. Glynn, for leave to erect a stable for one horse in rear of 37 Mercer street.

To the Committee on Common on the Part of the Board. Metropolitan Railroad, to remove a tree from Bartlett street.

To the Committee on County Accounts. Proprietors of Social Law Library, for their usual annual appropriation of one thousand dollars.

To the Committee on Assessors' Department. Henry T. Woods, for remission of tax on estate 1086 Shawmut avenue.

To the Committee on Paving. James Lee, Jr., et al., for plank walk on Commonwealth avenue, between Berkeley and Dartmouth streets.

Richard Miller, for damages for change of grade in the laying out of Bolton street.

To the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings. Reuter & Alley, to erect a wooden building on their premises, exceeding the legal limits.

To the Committee on Armories. Major Austin C. Wellington, for approval of armory in Boylston Hall for headquarters of First Battalion of Infantry.

Captain Dunn of Company B, Ninth Regiment, for reimbursement for rent of armory.

QUARTERLY REPORT.

The Superintendent of the City Scales in Haymarket square presented his report for the quarter ending November 1, 1873. Receipts, $919 37, of which $331 08 have been paid into the city treasury. Accepted and sent down.

SEWER ASSESSMENT.

The Superintendent of Sewers submitted an assessment of the cost of constructing a sewer in Ruggles and Halleck streets. Total, $13,185 30; to individuals, $6226 85. Referred to Committee on Sewers.

NOTICE OF INJUNCTION.

Notice was received from the Supreme Judicial Court of a petition for an injunction to restrain the union of the city of Charlestown with the city of Boston, and of a hearing thereon on Friday, the 14th instant, at ten o'clock A. M. Referred to the City Solicitor.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Orders to pay N. A. Thompson $1309 20, for Columbus-avenue damages. Passed.

Order to pay G. T. Begelew et al., trustees, $1580, for Federal-street damages. Passed.

Report and order for Cochituate Water Board to contract for iron water pipes to an amount not exceeding $200,000, payable in May, 1874. Passed.

Report and order to fix the salaries of the permanent men in the Fire Department at the following rates: Foremen at $3 25 per day; hosemen and assistant foremen at $3 00 per day. Passed.

Order to revoke any license for theatres, etc., where any immoral performance or exhibitions shall be permitted. Passed.

Report and orders to allow the town of Brookline to take water from the Cochituate water pipes for a period of ten years, at the usual rates.

Alderman Hulbert—I rise to inquire as to the mode of supplying water to the town of Brookline—whether it will be from the reservoir or whether the city shall lay the distributing pipes, and thereupon make charge only for water taken—whether it is contemplated that the town of Brookline or the city of Boston shall lay the pipes.

Alderman Stebbins—It was represented that the town of Brookline would lay their own pipes, and the city furnish the water to those pipes from what is known as the low service in the town of Brookline.

Alderman Stebbins—The order provides for the payment of no money, and there is no proviso that the city shall not furnish any pipes—nothing but water.

Alderman Hulbert—I still think there should be something more definite in the order.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield, the order was laid on the table, and subsequently taken up on motion of Alderman Stebbins, who offered the following amendment, to be added to the first order:

And provided further, that the said town of Brookline shall, at its own expense, put in such service and supply pipes as may be required, and connect the same in a satisfactory manner with the pipes already laid down by the city of Boston within the limits of said town.

The amendment was adopted, and the order as amended passed.

Report and order for Committee on Paving to contract for the construction of an iron bridge at Dartmouth street, over the Boston & Providence Railroad, at a cost of not exceeding $155,000; and for a loan therefor.

Alderman Hulbert—It may be well for some one of the Committee on Paving to make an explanation of this order. The bridge that was erected some two years ago across Dartmouth street is now found to be very defective and unsafe, great decay having taken place in it. It is necessary that immediate repairs be made to render that bridge safe for the present winter. It is plain, also, that an entirely new structure must be speedily put in its place. The present bridge rests upon supports between the railway tracks, placed there temporarily by permission of the railway company. What arrangements can be made for an iron bridge we do not exactly know. The order and the amount specify the contemplated cost of a bridge of one span, so that, in case it shall be necessary, it is covered. It was felt to be desirable in view of the present state of the iron and metal market, that the contract should be made during the present season, to be delivered in the ensuing spring, to erect the stone work in the spring and have the iron work all ready, so that the job could be completed in a speedy manner. It is supposed that quite an amount can be saved by making the contract now; but that there may be no disappointment as to the cost, the Engineer has been requested to make an estimate based on the high cost of iron, but we hope to build the bridge for a sum much less than that named in the order. Should this order be passed, we propose to spend a reasonable amount to make the present bridge safe, and this order covers both.

The order was passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

THE FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

The special assignment for half-past four o'clock being the confirmation of the Fire Commissioners, nominated by his Honor the Mayor, was taken up.

Alderman Gaffield moved that the vote be taken by yeas and nays, as was the case in the confirmation of the Board of Health, and that each candidate be voted for separately.

The motion was carried and the chairman announced the question to be on the question of confirming the nomination of A. P. Rockwell to hold office till the 1st of May, 1876.

Alderman Power—I don't wish to delay the appointment of the fire commissioners, but from the amount of influence that has been brought to bear to have the management of the Fire Department put into the hands of a commission it is very evident that the public thought this matter of the greatest importance to the city of Boston. I agree that it is of the very greatest importance to the city; that we should, if we are to have a commission, have the very best men who can be found to fill those positions. Now, sir, when those nominations were first handed in I was not present, on account of a misapprehension as to the hour at which the special meeting of the Board was to be held; if I had been I should have asked for what I propose to ask for now—some information in regard to the gentlemen nominated and their qualifications for the office. I don't think it is any credit to this Board simply because the public demand the appointment of a commission, and are in a hurry for it, to confirm the nomination of gentlemen of whom they know nothing, whom they have not seen. I think we should at least have an introduction to them, and see what sort of men we are going to have in this office. If I had been in the Board last Friday, I would have made some proposition so that we could have seen the gentlemen whom we are to vote for for fire commissioners. If we are to vote today I shall vote against them, for I cannot vote for men whom I have not seen and of whom I know very little. What I have heard about them is very creditable, but it is not very creditable to confirm gentlemen whom we have never seen, and I think the most of this Board are precisely in this predicament.

Alderman Hulbert—The time was pretty short in which we were given to make the proper investigations, in order to act today in reference to this commission, but knowing that fact I availed myself of all the opportunity I had to make inquiries, and I am prepared to act today.

Alderman Power—I move that when this Board adjourn, it be to Thursday next at one o'clock P. M., and that this subject be specially assigned for consideration at that time. This will not delay the matter at all. The commissioners will have to be confirmed by the Council also, which meets on Thursday evening.

Alderman Quincy—I am generally in favor, sir, of as prompt action as any one; but it is true it will not deter the matter at all by specially assigning it for the meeting on Thursday. I have made what inquiry I have been able to, but I confess I have not had all the light that I could wish, and I am not quite so ready to vote yea or nay as I would be on Thursday. For this reason I hope the motion to specially assign for Thursday next will prevail.

Alderman Gibson—The gentlemen should have ample time to look into the matter. No injury will be done by the delay. The present members of the Committee on Fire Department are as competent to carry on the department as any one else, and the city can suffer no loss.

Alderman Sayward—I have voted against a commission, but it has been said that the public want a commission, and want it immediately. Now, sir, the commissioners have been nominated by the Mayor. We have had three or four days to make inquiries. It appears to me that the gentlemen could have found out all that is to be found out. If there is such a public demand, we ought to vote on these nominations today. If gentlemen think they cannot vote for confirmation, they ought to vote against it. If gentlemen had desired to inform themselves of the nominees for fire commissioners, it appears to me they could have done so. I hope the question will be acted upon today.

Alderman Stebbins—I would call the attention of the Alderman from Ward 16 to the fact that two of the gentlemen who have spoken have been almost constantly engaged at the City Hall since last Friday, recounting the election returns. I speak for myself as well as for them, for I have not had time to make sufficient inquiries.

Alderman Hulbert—I would be glad to give the gentlemen all the opportunity they desire, and I hope the subject will be laid over.

Alderman Gaffield—I am satisfied that the more inquiries the gentlemen make the more they will be willing to vote for confirmation, and I therefore favor a postponement.

The motion to specially assign the subject for consideration at a special meeting on Thursday next was carried.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions referred in concurrence.

Auditor's monthly exhibit, November 4, 1873, (City document No. 122). Placed on file.

The following papers received concurrent action: Order requesting Water Board to report on condition of water of Farm Pond. Passed.

Order authorizing new desks and platforms to be provided for Common Council chamber, at an estimated cost of $2000. Passed.

Report "leave to withdraw" on petition of Edward Gallagher for leave to erect a wooden building at 632 Harrison avenue. Accepted.

Report and order to permit M. Drinan & Co. to erect a wooden building at 93 Shirley street. Passed.

Report and order to permit Hersey Brothers to erect an addition to their building on Second and E streets. Passed.

Report and order to permit James Frame to erect an addition to his building on White and Putnam streets. Passed.

Order for Board of Street Commissioners to prepare plans for streets on territory bounded by Hampden, Magazine and Swett streets and Norfolk avenue. Referred to the Committee on Streets.

Orders for a primary school on Beacon and Parker streets, and for temporary primary accommodations in the Lewis District. Referred to Committee on Public Instruction.

Order for Committee on Suffolk-street District to report if any additional legislative action is necessary to effect the improvement of the Swett-street district. Passed.

Order for Committee on Public Instruction to consider and report if the Girls' High School has ever received a legal establishment by the City Council. Passed.

The order for Committee on Legislative Matters to submit their report in print was laid on the table on motion of Alderman Quiney, who, in reply to a question from Alderman Stebbins, stated that it did not emanate from the Committee on Legislative Matters. The committee, he said, desired to learn the object of the order, that they might know what position to take upon it.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

Alderman Stebbins presented the following, which was read by the City Clerk:

The committee appointed to examine the returns of votes cast in the several wards, on the 4th inst., for State and county officers, and who were granted further time in which to report on the election of Senators, Representatives, Register of Probate and Insolvency, and Register of Deeds, have attended to that duty and report that they have examined said returns and, in accordance with the directions of this Board, have also counted the original ballots cast in Wards 2, 3, 8, 13, for a Register of Probate, etc., in Wards 2, 3, 5, 7, 12 for Senators, and in Wards 5, 13, 14, 15 for Representatives; and the results are correctly recorded in the book kept for that purpose, from which it appears that Thomas F. Temple has been duly chosen a Register of Deeds for this county; and that the following-named persons have been chosen Representatives to the next Legislature from their several districts, viz.:

District No. 1—Andrew M. Morton, Nathaniel Seaver and Daniel J. Sweeney.

District No. 2—Timothy J. Dacey, Patrick Collins and Dennis Bonner.

District No. 3—George P. Kingsley, Michael F. Wells and John Tewksbury.

District No. 4—Charles Hall, George G. Crocker and Alfred A. Clatur.

District No. 5—Edward B. Rankin, George A. Shaw and Francis M. Hughes.

District No. 6—William E. Perkins, Frederic W. Lincoln, Charles R. Codman.

District No. 7—Thomas F. Fitzgerald, Patrick Barry, John E. Fitzgerald.

District No. 8—Benjamin Heath, Lucius W. Knight and Henry P. Shattuck.

District No. 9—Moses Kimball, William Frost.

District No. 10—John J. McNutt, Lyman Mason.

District No. 11—John Bigelow, Richard H. Stearns and Edward J. Jones.

District No. 12—Richard Pope, Henry W. Wilson.

Norfolk District No. 4—Austin H. Connell.

Norfolk District No. 3—Brownell Granger, Albert Palmer and George Bartholmesz.

Norfolk District No. 5—Albee C. Clark, Richardson Hutchinson.

The committee recommend that the City Clerk be directed to notify the Register of Deeds and the foregoing Representatives of their election, and that certificates of the votes of this city for Senators and Register of Probate, etc., be transmitted to the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

The committee append to this report a schedule exhibiting the results of their investigations and the great discrepancies between the official returns and this committee's recount of the same ballots.

The committee feel that they cannot condemn in too severe terms the carelessness or the incapacity of the officers of some of the wards of this city.

The offices of Warden, Inspectors and Clerk, underlying, as they do, the very foundations of our civic government, are too important to be filled by persons of inferior ability.

For the last few years there has been exhibited more or less evidence of carelessness, ignorance or fraud in the conduct of elections and the computation and certificates of results, and either this Board or the Common Council has been annually called upon to perform the duties of ward officers and to review and correct the work which should have been properly performed at the polls.

It appears to your committee that if the citizens of the several wards have not sufficient pride or interest to secure their right by the election of suitable and competent persons for ward officers, then the time has arrived for the adoption of some other mode for their selection.

The committee, therefore, hope that at the ensuing municipal election ward officers will be chosen in the several wards, who will be a credit to the city, and who will not by carelessness or incapacity convert a sacred privilege into a perfect farce.

In the box returned to the City Clerk from Ward 5 there were found two packages of ballots folded in such a manner as to leave no doubt that they were fraudulently deposited at the polls. According to the sworn statement of the Warden two only of these ballots were counted by him: none of them were counted by your committee.

These packages contained the names of the following persons for the offices which your committee were authorized to recount, viz :

First package of twelve ballots—For Senator, F. W. Jacobs 10, A. J. Robinson 2. For Representatives, Horace L. Bowker 11, Robert McCue 2, George A. Shaw, Roger H. Scannell and Edward B. Rankin, one each.

Second package of sixty ballots—For Senator, F. W. Jacobs 46, A. J. Robinson 13. For Representatives, Francis M. Hughes 36, Roger H. Scannell 21, E. B. Rankin 20, Horace L. Bowker 19, Robert McCue 2, and George A. Shaw, N. B. Shurtleff, George G. Crocker and William E. Bicknell, one each.

These packages were of such a size that they could not have escaped the eye of a ward officer who was vigilant and correct in the performance of a duty which he had taken a solemn oath to perform. Such fraudulent attempts to defeat the real choice of the citizens have become so alarmingly frequent as to justify an appeal to the Legislature for some law which will better secure the purity of the ballot at the polls of large cities.

As a further indication of irregularities in the conduct of the recent election in this ward, the committee report that while the whole number of ballots returned in the sealed box was 763. There are only 685 names checked upon the list by the inspectors, tending to show that more ballots have been returned as deposited than passed through the ballot box.

In view of all the irregularities in this ward, the committee feel that the Legislature would be justified in ordering a new election in that ward.

Since the adjournment of the Board requests for the recount of ballots cast in Ward 3 for Representatives, and in Ward 6 for Senator, have been received by your committee, who have accordingly examined said ballots in both cases, and have recorded the results in the accompanying schedule and in the City Clerk's records.

The returns of votes for Register of Deeds have also been received from the city of Chelsea and the town of Revere.

Respectfully submitted,
S. B. STEBBINS, }
S. M. QUINCY, } Committee.

ELECTION OF OVERSEER OF THE POOR.

Alderman Brown, from the Committee on Overseers of the Poor, submitted a report recommending the election of Isaac F. Campbell as a member of said board, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Thomas Blasland.

On motion of Alderman Brown, the Board proceeded to ballot, and Isaac F. Campbell was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The chairman read a report from his Honor the Mayor, chairman of the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the request of the Committee on Sewers for an additional appropriation, recommending the granting of the request, and reporting the accompanying order:

Ordered, that the Auditor of Accounts be, and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Sewers, the sum of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000).

On motion of Alderman Power, the order was read twice and passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported favorably on the petition of Michael Ryan, George W. Wadsworth, and John Morgan, for leave to occupy wooden stables. Severally accepted.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Committee on Bridges be authorized to rebuild the draw and foundations of Broadway Bridge, over Fort Point Channel, at an estimated expense of $114,000.

Read once.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $114,000, to be applied to rebuilding the draw and foundations of Broadway Bridge.

Read once.

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court, at its next session, for an extension of the time within which the city was authorized by chapter 225 of the acts of the year 1871, to take and hold land and other property for a landing for the East Boston ferry-boats.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Committee on Bridges be authorized to expend an additional sum, not exceeding $1800, in repairing Dover-street Bridge; said sum to be charged to the Appropriation for Bridges.

Passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported favorably on the applications of James Ryan, 201 South street; Wendell E. Baker, 137 Tremont street; Stephen Wilson, 36 Phillips street; John Ryan, 1455 Washington street; Cram & Fogarty, 2 Providence street; Meinrod Rottler, 20 Pyncheon street, for victualler's license; and unfavorably on the application of A. B. Xander, 22 Groton street, for innholder's license. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported favorably on the applications of E. Elwell and four others, for transfer of wagon licenses; T. Edward Johnson, for wagon stand at corner Warren and Dudley streets; B. F. Hutchins, Thomas Murray and Cornelius Linnehan, for hack stands; Forrest Dramatic Club, to give an exhibition at Mattapan Hall. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on application of George F. Pratt for hack stand. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom were referred the petitions of the Continental Sugar Refinery, Henry A. Wilder and others, submitted reports severally recommending the passage of the following orders:

Ordered, That permission be given to the Continental Sugar Refinery to lay gas, water and steam pipes under and across First street, near Granite street, upon condition that said company shall first give to the city an agreement in writing satisfactory to the City Solicitor, holding the city harmless against any and all claims for damages, costs or expenses for, on account of, or in any way growing out of the laying down and maintaining of said pipes under said street; also upon condition that said company shall remove said pipes when ordered so to do by the Board of Aldermen, and place the street in as good condition as it was in before said pipes were laid.

Passed.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to John Souther to remove within thirty days the fence erected by him across A street, at Richards street; also to remove all obstructions extending beyond the line of said A street, northeasterly of Richards street.

Passed.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to Daniel Goodnow to remove within ten days the bay window recently erected in front of his estate on Brookline street, projecting over the line of said street.

Passed.

Ordered, That the time allowed to the Rowe's Wharf Corporation in which to remove obstructions from Broad street and Atlantic avenue be and the same is hereby extended to April 1, 1874.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee reported leave to withdraw on the petition of E. B. Bridgeman, to maintain a sign across Washington street and Cornhill; and no action necessary on that of Francis Richards et al., that obstructions be removed from the archway on Chapman place. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the application of Boston News Company to use steam engine at 142 Washington street. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom were referred the assessments for the construction of sewers in First street and in Stoughton street, Brook and North avenues and Cottage street, reported that they are correct and recommend the passage of orders for the collection of the same. The orders were severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark from the Committee on Streets, submitted orders to pay for street damages as follows: New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, $15,400, for land taken from the heirs of John Fleet, in widening Congress street; Mary F. Goddard, $17,790, Milk-street widening; heirs of James W. Fenno, $6000, Congress-street widening; Edmund Dwight, William Minot and J. Elliot Cabot, trustees, $12,600, for land taken from William Dwight and others, trustees, in Milk-street widening; Edmund Dwight, William Minot and J. Elliot Cabot, $9400, in extension of Arch to Milk street; Ann J. Phillips, $1443 25, widening of Cottage street; James Parker, $15,281 25, on account of widening of Washington street; Mary T. Goddard, $35,641, widening of Hawley street. Severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Fire Department, submitted a report, representing that during the fire of May 30 last the self-acting chemical engine belonging to the department was badly damaged by the sudden falling of a wall. To make good the loss in the shortest possible time, a telegraphic despatch was sent to Baltimore, ordering one of Holloway's chemical engines. Before the order was filled the great fire in that city destroyed the factory. Recently the committee have received notice that the engine would soon be ready for delivery. In the meantime the original machine has been repaired and put into service, but it is desirable that there should be two of these engines connected with the department; one to be located in the business portion of the city, and one at the South End. The committee recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on the Fire Department be authorized to purchase one of Holloway's self acting chemical engines, provided it is constructed in accordance with the specifications, at an expense not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars; to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Department.

Alderman Clark—The facts are plainly stated in the report. This other extinguisher was ordered immediately after the fire, after we supposed that the Babcock had been totally destroyed in the fire of May 30. It was nearly completed, but was consumed in the great fire at Baltimore. The order appropriating the money therefor has never been passed, but we felt that this extinguisher had been contracted for and it would be right to take it, inasmuch as it will be needed.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Streets, to whom was referred the order of the Street Commissioners taking the estate of Beals, Greene & Co., on Water street, on account of the widening of Water street, submitted a report recommending the passage of the order.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark offered the following, and on his motion it was referred to the Joint Committee on Streets:

Ordered, That the settlement with William Gray, for land taken from his estate by the Street Commissioners' order of June 30, 1873, for the extension of West Chester Park to Beacon street, for $15,035 10, as expressed in the order to pay him that sum passed in the Board of Aldermen the 4th inst., the city assume the payment of any and all betterment that may hereafter be assessed for the extension of West Chester Park upon other land of the said Gray, abutting on that street, or in any way benefited by the extension aforesaid.

HAYES'S STABLE.

Alderman Quincy—I rise to a question of privilege, Mr. Chairman, and would like to make a contribution to the literature in the Martin Hayes stable case. It appeared to me that the opinion read from the City Solicitor at the last meeting was rather calculated to confuse Mr. Hayes and the members of this Board. I therefore addressed a letter to the City Solicitor, which I would like to submit to the Board.

CITY HALL, Nov. 7, 1873.

Hon. J. P. Healy, City Solicitor: Dear Sir:—Will you kindly inform me whether the following inferences, which I draw from your communication to Alderman Stebbins in relation to the licensing of Martin Hayes's stable, are in your opinion warranted?

1. That the vote taken to revoke said license was either illegal or inoperative, and therefore properly reconsidered inasmuch as if said license was then in force; the Board had no power to revoke it, and if not in force no occasion to do so.

2. That if said building was not demolished or destroyed, thereby putting an end to the use licensed, but simply damaged, the owner's right to repair the same, subject to building regulations, is unquestioned.

If you can favor me with a reply before the next meeting of the Board, you will much oblige,

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. QUINCY.

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE, }
Nov. 8, 1873.

Dear Sir—The foregoing propositions accord with my opinion of the law.

Very respectfully,

J. P. HEALY.

Mr. Alderman Quincy.

Alderman Quincy—I move, Mr. Chairman, that the communication be placed on file with the other papers in the case.

It was so ordered.

Subsequently Alderman Stebbins said—I desire, Mr. Chairman, in connection with the question of privilege to state just this point. The opinion of Mr. Healy, just given by the Alderman, does not conflict with the one read to the Board last week. The petition is to repair his stable and rebuild it. The committee reported that he should have permission to rebuild with brick, and the permit has been so made out.

Alderman Quincy—It is simply a question of fact, whether the stable was destroyed or not. My position was that if part of it was destroyed it could be rebuilt, whether with brick or not. If the fire put an end to the stable it cannot be repaired, but if only a part was destroyed, whether it is to be repaired or rebuilt with brick is a mere use of words. The question is whether it was so destroyed that it cannot be used for a stable. The use of the words rebuilt or repaired cannot possibly affect the case.

Alderman Stebbins—Mr. Hayes holds a license from this Board to rebuild a stable partially destroyed by fire. The Committee on Health have reported an order allowing him to rebuild with brick. The City Solicitor says if he rebuild he must take out a new license.

Alderman Quincy—I understand Mr. Healy says you cannot rebuild a destroyed building without a new license, but you can rebuild a damaged one.

Alderman Sayward—The statement of the alderman on my left is precisely what I stated last Monday week. He can repair or rebuild the building, and that without changing its external appearance. It is a new building that he has given an opinion on. This is to repair an old building, and that is what we have given permission to do.

Alderman Stebbins read the following extract from the opinion of the city solicitor presented by him: "Mr. Hayes cannot legally erect another stable under the license formerly granted to him. The recent action of the Board of Aldermen, according to the official report of their proceedings, does not amount to a renewed license, and further action, as full as though no former license had been given, is requisite to authorize the rebuilding of his stable."

Alderman Sayward—There is one word more. The building has been occupied as a stable ever since it was burnt, and consequently he has a right to repair it.

CONDITION OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Fire Department, submitted the following report.

In view of the change in the management of the Fire Department, as provided in the ordinance approved Oct. 24, 1873, the Joint Standing Committee of the City Council, which has had the general supervision of the department from the 16th of January last, begs leave to submit the following report, giving some account of the organization of the old department and a statement of its present condition:

As early as 1711 the General Court provided for the appointment in this city of officers known as fire wardens, with powers and duties similar to those now exercised by the engineers. The preamble to the act then passed recites that

"Whereas, By reason of the contiguity and adjoining of the houses and dwellings within the town of Boston, persons are under great affrightment and hurry upon the breaking out of fire, and not only the person in whose house the fire first breaks out, but the neighborhood, are concerned to employ their utmost diligence and application to extinguish the fire and prevent the progress thereof, and to preserve their substance by the removal of their goods, being glad of the assistance of others in that regard, and divers evil-minded and wicked persons, on pretence of charitably offering their help, taking advantage of such confusion and calamities to rob, plunder, embezzle, convey away and conceal the goods and effects of their distressed neighbors.

For preventing whereof,

Section 1. Be it enacted by his Excellency the Governor, Council and representatives, in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful to and for the justices of the peace and selectmen of the town of Boston, from time to time, to appoint such number of prudent persons of known fidelity, not exceeding ten, in the several parts of the town, as they may think fit, who shall be denominated and called fire wards, and have a proper badge assigned to distinguish them in their office, viz., a staff of five feet in length, colored red, and headed with a bright brass spire of six inches long, and at times of the breaking forth of fire, and during the continuance thereof, shall, and hereby are fully authorized and empowered to, command and require assistance for the extinguishing and putting out the fire, and for removing of household stuff and furniture, goods and merchandizes out of any dwelling houses, storehouses, or other buildings actually on fire, or in danger thereof, and guards to secure and take care of the same, as also to require assistance for the pulling down or blowing up of any houses, or any other service relating thereto, by the direction of two or three of the chief civil or military officers of the town, as is by law provided, to stop and prevent the further spreading of the fire, and to suppress all tumults and disorder."

The first city charter, which went into operation on the first of May, 1822, provided that the citizens at their respective ward meetings should elect, by ballot, a number of persons to be determined by the City Council, but not less than three in each ward, to be fire wards for the city, with all the powers and subject to all the duties then by law appertaining to the fire wards of the town. The condition of the department at that time is thus described by Mayor Quincy: "Its efficiency chiefly depended upon the aid of the inhabitants, applied under the authority of the fire wards. They formed lanes of bystanders, who, by their direction, passed buckets of water, from pumps or wells in the vicinity to the engines playing on the fire, and returned them for further supply."

This system of protection had its origin in the relations of the colonial state, when the inhabitants were few, habituated to labor, and respect for the rights of property was general. Dwelling houses being then separated by gardens or vacant fields, extensive conflagrations were infrequent; yet, being of wood, and the means of insurance unattainable, their occasional loss kept alive the feeling of sympathy in the community. The duty of joining some fire company and assisting at every fire was, therefore, regarded as imperious.

At the time of the adoption of the City Government, Boston was in a transition state, and fast advancing to that period, when, by the increase of population, ties of individual interest were diminished. The establishment of insurance offices had, in most cases, transferred the loss upon capitalists, and poverty and crime, multiplying with numbers, began to regard fires as harvests, from the gleaning of which they had not principle enough to abstain.

Although this state of things was obvious, and its effects began to be felt, yet it was long before the duty of aiding the sufferers caused the necessity of imposing restraint on the general interference of the citizens at fires to be recognized. This reluctance to acknowledge the effect of circumstances on the then existing system of protection, was peculiarly strong among the engine companies, in whom the esprit du corps was active and general. From the earliest period of the settlement, the members of those companies had been accustomed to regard themselves as the guardians of the city against this element, and took a pride in the consciousness of their power. They were a body of men energetic and fearless. So far from regarding their labors as onerous, and looking for their reward in pecuniary compensation, a premium was often paid for admission into the companies, and they deemed themselves recompensed by a small allowance from the town, sufficient for an annual social supper, by exemption from militia duties, and the consciousness of useful and acceptable services to their fellow-townsmen. Their engines, found and supported by the town, were without ornament, and valued only for their power. To be first, nearest and most conspicuous at fires was the ambition of the enginemen; and the use of hose, as it had a tendency to deprive them of this gratification, was opposed."

In 1823 several companies petitioned for additional compensation for their services. It was refused. In one day all the engines in the city were surrendered by their respective companies; and on the same day every engine was supplied with a new company by the voluntary association of public-spirited individuals.

Authority was soon after obtained from the Legislature for the reorganization of the department, so as to make it independent of the aid of citizens in case of fire. The new organization went into effect on the 29th of April—the form then established having continued without any substantial change from that time to the present. The department at that time contained 320 men, 16 hand engines and only eight hundred feet of hose. In 1837 the ordinance establishing the Fire Department was revised, and under its provisions the chief-engineer submitted his first annual report in 1838. The department contained at that time 13 engines, 595 members, 14 hand engines, 8240 feet of leading hose, 18 hose carriages and one hook and ladder carriage.

On the 17th of September, 1860, the manual engines were entirely dispensed with and steam engines (with hose tenders attached) and separate horse hose carriages substituted in their place. The apparatus of the department consisted of nine steam engines, with hose tenders, nine separate horse hose carriages and three hook and ladder carriages. The members, including the engineers, numbered 236 men.

The condition of the department at the time the great fire occurred, last year, has been so fully described heretofore that it would be superfluous to dwell upon the matter here. When the present government entered upon its duties there was a very general demand on the part of the citizens that the efficiency of the department should be increased, both by additions to the apparatus, especially in the business portions of the city, and by changes in the organization of the force, so as to bring about a higher state of discipline. The recommendations made by the Mayor in his inaugural address, and also the recommendations made by the commission appointed to investigate the cause and management of the great fire, received the immediate and earnest attention of this committee. On the 13th of March a report was submitted to the City Council, stating the progress made by the committee in strengthening and improving the department, and recommending certain changes in the ordinance by which greater responsibility in the management of the department would be secured. Those recommendations were referred to the Committee on Ordinances, and from that day to this no report has been made upon them. If the matter had received prompt attention, as requested by this committee, the principal defects of organization which were dwelt upon with so much force after the fire of May 30, would have been cured, and the department would have been in a condition to meet criticism without fear as to the result.

The requests of the committee for appropriations from time to time to carry out the improvements which they had projected, have been responded to generally, by the City Council, with great promptness.

The following statements show the additions in men and material made during the present year—January 1 to November 1—a period of ten months:

The following engine houses have been built during the year, viz.:

Engine Company No. 12—Corner of Winslow and Dudley streets, Highlands. This house was built to take the place of the old one situated on the corner of Warren and Dudley streets, which was taken down on account of the widening of Warren street.

Engine Company No. 22—Parker street, Highlands. This building is for temporary use only.

Engine Company No. 24.—Corner of Quincy and Warren streets, Highlands.

Engine Company No. 25—Washington square. For temporary use.

Hose House No. 4—Northampton street, has been enlarged so as to accommodate a steam fire engine and horse hose carriage.

Hose Company No. 12—Corner of Fourth and O streets, South Boston.

Hook and Ladder Company No. 6—Corner of River and Temple street—Ward 16.

Hook and Ladder Company No. 8—Washington square. For temporary use.

A permanent house for Engine Company No. 25 and Hook and Ladder Company No. 8, corner of Washington square and Perkins street, has been contracted for but not completed.

The building known as the "Normal School," on Mason street, is being remodelled so as to accommodate a permanent steam fire engine company.

A building for Hook and Ladder Company No. 4, on Dudley street, Highlands, has been contracted for.

Horse hose carriages have been placed in engine houses numbered 4, 7, 8, 9 and 25, to run in connection with the engines in place of the small hose tenders formerly used.

In accordance with the order of the City Council, horse hose carriages will be placed in all the other engine houses as soon as they are completed.

The following pieces of apparatus have been repaired and put in the best condition:

Engines Nos. 6, 7, 8, 13 and 15; Hose Carriages Nos. 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 9; and Hook and Ladder Carriage No. 7.

Several of the horse hose carriages have been remodelled so as to convey the firemen to fires.

The apparatus purchased or contracted for during the past year is as follows:

One steam fire engine from Hunneman & Co. (received), $4000.

One steam fire engine from the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company (received), $4200.

One steam fire engine from Clapp & Jones (contracted for, to be delivered Dec. 1), $4250.

Four horse hose carriages from the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company (contracted for), each $650.

One horse hose carriage from William Gilchrist (received), $1000.

One hook and ladder carriage from Hunneman & Co. (received), $1600.

Four coal wagons from Joseph T. Ryan (received).

One self-acting fire engine (Babcock) from New England Fire Extinguisher Company (received), $2000.

One steam fire engine from Amoskeag Manufacturing Company (contracted for), $4250.

One self-acting fire engine from Holloway, Baltimore (contracted for), $1500.

The following additions have been made to the working force of the department:

Engine companies numbered 4 and 7 have been reorganized by the appointment of the foremen and hosemen for constant service—making twelve permanent members in each company.

Hose Company No. 1 has been changed to an engine company (No. 25) and twelve members appointed for constant service—making an addition to the department of five men.

Hose Company No. 4 has been reorganized and made an engine company (No. 23), on Northampton street, making an addition of two men to the department.

A new hook and ladder company, located on Washington square, and known as No. 8, has been organized, with fifteen permanent men.

A new hose company has been organized in South Boston, known as No. 12, thereby adding to the department nine men.

Two new engine companies have been organized in the Highland District, and known as Engine Company No. 22, on Parker street, and Engine Company No. 24, on Warren street, thus giving to the department twenty-two additional men—making a total of fifty-three men added to the department during the year. The company on Parker street was added in response to petitions from citizens of Wards 6 and 9, to cover the recently occupied lands in those wards.

The present condition of the department is shown in the accompanying statements.

The report here gives a schedule of the men employed and the property of the department, with the following recapitulation:

Steam engines in service, 25; horse hose carriages, 9; hook and ladder carriages, 8; extinguisher corps, 4; fire boat, 1; insurance brigade, 1; coal wagons, 12; men employed, 515; consisting of 1 Chief and 14 Assistant-Engineers, 1 Secretary of Board of Engineers, 2 clerks, 42 foremen of companies, 25 engineers of companies, 55 drivers, 25 firemen, 272 hosemen, 120 hook and ladder men; 1 captain, 1 mate, 1 steward, 1 engineer, 1 foreman and 1 deckhand of fire boat; 16 insurance brigade; 153 constantly employed, 369 doing duty only in case of fire; horses, 96; number of feet of leading hose, 60,956; number of feet of suction hose, 500; hydrants, 2872; reservoirs, 179; fire-alarm boxes, 177.

The members of the Insurance Brigade belong to the department as at present constituted, but they are paid for their services by the Boston Board of Underwriters. The City Solicitor has recently furnished an opinion to the effect that the members of the brigade cannot be considered as regular members of the department, for whom the city should be at the expense of furnishing accommodations.

It will be seen by reference to the statement relating to the number of hydrants in service that there have been two hundred and eighty Lowry hydrants introduced since the first of May last. The promptness of the Water Board in responding to the wishes of this department by enlarging the street mains in the city proper, and furnishing improved hydrants, is deserving of high commendation.

Inventions for the extinguishment of fires and for the preservation of life in case of fires, have been very numerous since the conflagration of last year; and the committee have given much attention and numerous hearings to parties interested in securing the introduction of new methods.

[The report here gives a schedule of the estimated value of all the property belonging to the department.]

The appropriation made for the maintenance of the department for the financial year 1873-74 was $551,316. The expenditures have been as follows:

May draft.....	$130,446 48
June draft.....	36,270 59
July draft.....	43,819 14
August draft.....	39,267 94
September draft.....	38,447 56
October draft.....	38,329 65
November draft.....	46,084 10

Total.....	$372,665 46
Unpaid contracts chargeable to this appropriation.....	16,800 00

Total.....	$389,465 46
Estimate of expenses required for the maintenance of the department for the remainder of the financial year, including salaries of commissioners and permanent force recently organized and to be organized for the Mason-street Station, at $50,000 per month during the remaining five months.....	250,000 00

Amount carried forward.....	$639,465 46
-----------------------------	--------------

Amount brought forward.....	$639,465 46
	551,316 00

Estimated excess of expenditures over appropriation.....	$88,149 46

In conclusion, the committee desire to acknowledge the obligations they are under to the Chief-Engineer for the valuable assistance which he has given them, and they also desire to commend in the highest manner the great energy and fearlessness which he has invariably shown in the discharge of his difficult and dangerous duties. The long and faithful services of the present members of the Board of Engineers and their secretary entitle them to the thanks of the citizens.

Respectfully submitted,

LEONARD R CUTTER,
JOHN T. CLARK,
SOLOMON B. STEBBINS,
GEORGE L. BURT,
JAMES F. MARSTON,
WILLIAM H. JONES,
FREDERICK PEASE,
ELIJAH B. HINE,

Committee.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the report was laid on the table to be printed.

On motion of Alderman Power, the Board adjourned to Thursday, at 1 P. M.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

NOVEMBER 13, 1873.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at one o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

To the Committee on Claims. Dean Dudley, representing that his office was situated in the burnt district at 8 Congress square, Monks Building, on the fourth floor, and his type, books, and printing material were entirely destroyed by the blowing up of the adjoining apartments, during the great fire of 1872. His loss by this calamity was about $5000, on which there was no insurance. Long before the fire reached this locality the city police stretched a rope across the street, and prohibited any one from removing the goods and fixtures or even from entering Monks Building. The city authorities took the liberty to stop him from removing his property and then blew up the same by means of gunpowder.

To the Committee on Health on the Part of the Board. J. A. King, to occupy wooden stables for one horse, at Clayton street, Ward 16.

E. C. Drew, to occupy two wooden stables for thirty-two horses, on Parker street.

John Hurley, for leave to add five more stalls to stable 63-65 Liverpool street.

John O'Hare, to occupy wooden stable for two horses in rear of Knowlton street.

H. R. Surles, to occupy wooden stable for ten horses on Culbert street.

To the Joint Committee on Health. Board of Health for additional appropriation of $1000 for quarantine department.

To the Committee on Sewers. Samuel P. Loud, that collection for assessment for sewers in Dorchester avenue be postponed.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The Superintendent of Sewers submitted schedules of sewer assessments as follows: East street, Ward 16, total $3861 59; to individuals $2896 20; Warren street, from Dudley to Washington street, total $1782 29; to individuals $1336 22; Washington street, between Summer and Franklin, total $683; to individuals $341 50. Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

CONSTABLES' BONDS APPROVED.

The bonds of Thomas A. Jackson and Johnson Warren being duly certified by the treasurer were approved by the Board.

FROM THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

A request was received from the School Committee that a tablet be placed in the Lowell School-house. Referred to Committee on Public Instruction.

EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

Member of the Fire Department—Charles T. Dearing.

FIRE COMMISSIONERS CONFIRMED.

The Board took up the special assignment, the confirmation of the nomination of Alfred P. Rockwell, David Chamberlin and Timothy T. Sawyer, to constitute the Board of Fire Commissioners.

The Chair announced that the first question would be on the confirmation of Mr. Rockwell, and that the vote would be taken by yeas and nays.

Alderman Quincy—I think that those who desire the success of the commission cannot do better than to confirm his Honor's selection. I regard the elements for an efficient and reliable board as well combined. In the first name, we have scientific engineering attainments of the first order, with a military record which testifies to the greatest capacity for command, organization and discipline; in the second name we find a practical and thorough acquaintance with the details and working of the present system in one who has been long enough out of the department to be independent of its influence, and in the third, energy, business capacity and an almost proverbial integrity. A practical knowledge of the details of the present organization is a most valuable element for the success of a new system, if it can be found in one not pledged or bound or influenced to a continuance in old ruts. The appointment of any member of the present department who had publicly opposed this measure would have been a mistake, as it would be too much to expect such person to bring an unprejudiced mind to his work. But a person not bound in any way to defend the present system, who yet has an intimate knowledge of it, if a fair-minded man, is of great value at the present moment, entirely irrespective of his own qualifications for such a post as that of Chief-Engineer. The result of the Alderman's inquiries had convinced him that Mr. Chamberlin would make a valuable commissioner, and he hoped all three would be confirmed.

Alderman Power—Since our last meeting I have seen some insinuations in the press that my motives in having this matter laid over till today were not just what I said they were at that time. The special meeting at which these nominations came before this Board was on last Friday, and owing to a mistake on my part I was not present. That same day I learned that I had been appointed on a special committee to recount the votes of this city. I had to go to work upon that matter immediately, and was constantly employed from Friday, both night and day, until the time of the meeting of the Board again on Monday. It must be apparent to everybody that under such circumstances I have very little time to make inquiries about the gentlemen whose names had come up here. I have made inquiries, and am satisfied that the gentlemen nominated are above suspicion. They say the first one is a first-class man in his department, and I believe the other gentlemen are all that is claimed for them. Yet, sir, I don't think it is a commission that entirely satisfies the public, with all their business qualifications and scientific attainments. I had hoped that gentlemen might have been found possessing a practical knowledge of the workings of the Fire Department and the fighting of fires. But, sir, I don't propose to delay action any further. I am satisfied that it is for the best interest of the public generally to allow these gentlemen to be confirmed, and I don't propose to oppose their confirmation any longer.

The vote was taken on the confirmation of Mr. Rockwell, as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins—11.

Nays—0.

Absent—Alderman Emery.

Mr. Rockwell's nomination was declared confirmed, and the Board, by precisely the same yeas and nays vote, confirmed those of David Chamberlin and Timothy T. Sawyer.

REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Committee on Fire Department, reported that a great deal of attention had been given during the past year to the subject of providing a suitable fire escape and extension ladder for the use of the department in case of fire in high buildings. From numerous experiments made by the Engineer, it has been demonstrated that the ladder invented by George Skinner and manufactured by the Skinner Hook and Ladder Company, is best adapted to the wants of this department. It has received the unanimous approval of the Board of Engineers. The Committee therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Fire Department be authorized to purchase one of Skinner's patent extension ladders and fire escapes, at an expense not exceeding two thousand six hundred dollars; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Department.

The order was read once.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Instruction be requested to report what disposition should be made of the old Mather Schoolhouse, Ward 16.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be requested to consider and report upon the expediency of petitioning the General Court, at its next session, for the passage of an act annexing the city of Chelsea and the towns of Revere and Winthrop to the county of Middlesex, so that the city of Boston shall constitute the whole of the county of Suffolk.

Passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the petitions of Robert T. Paine, Jr., W. H. Bessem and William Munroe, for leave to occupy stables, and M. Murphy for leave to extend stable; no action necessary on remonstrance of J. E. Herman against rebuilding of Metropolitan Railroad stable on Prescott place; also in favor of granting petition of C. J. Spencely on certain conditions; and that petition of W. T. Brigham, to construct cellar below grade, be referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, submitted an order to pay Charles H. Dodge $398, for street damages in widening Federal street. The order was read and passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That $11 63 be abated from the assessment of Karen Hart, and $6979 from the assessment of John Haggerty for a sewer in Dorchester avenue, and that the sum of $81 42 is hereby assessed upon William Glover.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom was referred the schedule of assessments for the sewer in Ruggles and Halleck streets, reported that they are correct and recommended the passage of orders for collection. The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the armory occupied by Company F, First Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at the junction of Warren and Palmer streets, be approved as a suitable place for the deposit of arms and equipments.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

NOVEMBER 13, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Quarterly report of Hayweighers of North City Scales placed on file.

Petitions of H. T. Wood, Reuter & Alley, Dean, Dudley and others, referred, in concurrence.

Order requesting Mayor to petition Legislature for an extension of time to take land and other property for a landing for East Boston ferry boats. Passed, in concurrence.

Report of Committee on Streets in favor of the passage of the preamble and order of the Street Commissioners to take estate surrendered by Charles G. Greene and others, for widening of Water street. Report accepted, and order passed, in concurrence.

Report and order authorizing Committee on Fire Department to purchase one of Holloway's Self-Acting Chemical Engines, at a cost not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars. Order read once.

Report and order authorizing a contract to be made for water pipes and other materials required to provide an adequate supply of water; the expense not to exceed two thousand dollars. Order read once.

Order concerning settlement with William Gray, for damages in extending West Chester park. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Report nominating Isaac T. Campbell to fill vacancy in the Board of Overseers of Poor. Report accepted.

On motion of Mr. Lamb of Ward 7, the Council proceeded to ballot.

The Chair appointed Messrs. Lamb of Ward 7, Page of Ward 9, and Dacey of Ward 2, a committee to receive sort and count votes. The committee reported as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	46
Necessary to a choice.....	24
A. A. Foster.....	1
John Brown.....	1
Thomas J. Cahalan.....	1
Isaac T. Campbell.....	43

Mr. Campbell was declared elected.

Report and orders authorizing the Water Board to contract to supply the town of Brookline with water for ten years, for domestic purposes and the extinguishment of fires, on certain terms and conditions.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—It seems strange that the city of Boston is ready to sell water to the town of Brookline when a great hue and cry is raised about our own supply being inadequate at the present time. I move to lay on the table.

Carried by a rising vote—34 for, 3 against. Subsequently, on motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the order was taken from the table and specially assigned for next Thursday evening at half-past eight o'clock.

Report and order for a transfer from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Sewers, $30,000. Order read once.

Report and orders authorizing an iron bridge to be built, with stone abutments, on Dartmouth street, over the Albany and Providence railroads, and the repairing and strengthening of present bridge for temporary use, at an expense of not exceeding $155,000; and for a loan of said sum to pay therefor.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—It is n't a great while since that bridge was built, Mr. Chairman, and it appears to me not to reflect great credit on the builders. This is a very large sum of money, and the City Government should know what kind of a bridge it is to be. I move the order be referred to the Committee on Streets, with instructions to report a plan for the bridge. The motion prevailed.

Request of School Committee for suitable tablet in Lowell Schoolhouse. Referred to Committee on Public Instruction.

Request of Board of Health for an additional appropriation of $1000 for Quarantine Department. Referred to Joint Committee on Health, in concurrence.

Order that the Committee on Public Instruction report what disposition shall be made of the old Mather Schoolhouse. Passed, in concurrence.

Order that the Committee on Legislative Matters consider and report on the expediency of petitioning the General Court to annex Chelsea, Winthrop and Revere to Middlesex County. Passed in concurrence.

SALARIES OF PERMANENT FIREMEN.

Report and order fixing the salaries of the permanent members of the Fire Department, recently appointed, as follows; Foremen $3 25; hosemen, assistant-foremen of engine companies and members of hook and ladder companies, $3 per day.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I propose, Mr. Chairman, to offer an amendment to that order, and to give you the reasons why. It seems to me that the proposition to pay foremen of engine companies $3 25 a day and hosemen $3 per day insufficient. I don't know of any reason why the foreman on the fire boat shall be paid $3 75 per day when he is performing the same relative duties that these other officers do. It is a fact that the captain of the fire boat get $3 75, and inferior officers are paid in the same ratio, and at the same time they are found in provisions. I don't think it is too much for them. There are parties who have examined this matter, who are better posted than I am, and who can give better reasons why the pay is fixed at the sum named. I have a few figures in my mind. I find by the auditor's books that the payment for provisions and supplies on the fire-boat from March last up to the present time is $1700—an average of $170 per month; so that, in fact, the cost of these officers to the city, in addition to their pay, is about seventy-five cents per day; consequently they receive $4 50 per day against $3 25 for the captain of an engine company. If I were to have my choice I would much prefer to be a fireman on the boat than on shore. I don't think they are inadequately paid, but I want to see all the men in the Fire Department well paid for the duties they perform. I therefore move to amend by inserting $3 75 instead of $3 25, and $3 50 instead of $3. I don't think that then they would be paid too much. I think the captains ought to have at least $3 75 per day.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I would ask the gentleman if he means the whole department, or merely the permanent men?

The Chair—The order is for the permanent men of the department only.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I should have said there are four permanent organizations to which this rule will apply—Engines Four, Seven and Twenty-five, and Hook & Ladder No. 8.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—While I agree in part with the gentleman from Ward 5 that firemen are not paid enough, yet I disagree with him in raising the pay of these permanent men to $3 50 a day, for this reason. The drivers now employed, having the horses and engine houses to take care of only receive $3 per day, and foremen, who are supposed to be able to run an engine if occasion requires, receive only $3. If it is unjust to increase the pay of hosemen over men of the different companies, in regard to the amendment for foremen it ought to be $3 75 per day. It is none too much to give a good man. A foreman should receive as much as an engineer, and I should be heartily in favor of increasing it twenty-five cents a day. But I think it would be great injustice to the firemen and drivers to increase the pay of the hosemen over them, although I think $3 25 or $3 50 would be none too much for the permanent hosemen employed throughout the city.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—Another phase of this matter is this: It is well-known that a part of these men have been on duty more than a month, and the order was not introduced in season for them to get their pay last month. If this amendment should pass this branch it would be too late before it could pass the Aldermen to give them their money this month.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—Another reason is, we are to have fire commissioners who are to fix the pay of the whole department. No doubt they will equalize the salaries so that where now they are too low they will be increased. It is a bad time to particularize as to what salaries should be increased.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—It is very strange to me that the Committee on Salaries, now that we have a Fire Commission, should bring in this order. It is within the prerogative of the commissioners and they can act upon it. The question with us, however, is, whether it is right to pay these men more. It may be passed upon now, and the commissioners may act upon it a week hence, if they are confirmed, a question on which I have some doubt.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—In reply to the member from Ward 5, I would state that on the night the Council voted to establish a Fire Commission this order was taken from the table and passed, and that is the reason of the delay. The gentleman eulogizes the men on the fire boat. All those on the fire boat would prefer to take their meals at home, but they have no time to go to their meals. If they should be absent for any length of time the effect might be disastrous. Therefore the Committee on Fire Department supply them with their meals. I think, myself, this matter had better go to the commissioners, if we are to have a commission. But as the men have been without pay for two months, it would be better to pass the order tonight. If the right men are appointed commissioners they will equalize the pay.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—The gentleman refers to my eulogizing the men in the fire boat. I simply spoke of it as a matter of fact not as eulogy.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I don't think it benefits the firemen at all to take their meals on the boat. I take all my dinners down town, but I don't save a cent by it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I am not in favor of increasing the pay of the firemen, although I am in favor of them. The foremen and engineers are supposed to be practical men, but I don't think we ought to put hosemen on the same level with them. They ought to come in rotation, somehow or other. I don't think a common laboring man should receive as much as one who has served twenty-five years at a business. As to the men on the boat, they have only one night off in a week, and they are obliged to be on board night and day. I would rather be a foreman or hoseman in one of the departments at a less rate of wages than to be on that boat and not be allowed to go beyond the deck. I hope the amendment will not prevail.

The amendment of Mr. Shaw was rejected, and on motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14 the rules were suspended and the order was passed.

CONFIRMATION OF FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

The nominations of his Honor the Mayor for the Board of Fire Commissioners were considered, the question being on concurring with the Aldermen in confirmation.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—As this is the first time that we have had those nominations officially before us, in order that members of the Council can have time to examine into the character and qualifications of the candidates, I move that they be laid on the table and that half-past eight o'clock next Thursday evening be assigned as the time for taking the vote.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I am not surprised—

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5—Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. I understood the motion to be to lay on the table, which is not debatable.

The Chair—I understand the motion to be to lay on the table and specially assign for next Thursday evening. If the gentleman insists on his point of order, the motion will have to be divided.

Mr. Flynn withdrew his original motion and moved to lay the nominations upon the table.

Lost by a rising vote—18 for, 32 against.

Mr. Flynn—I move to specially assign this subject for next Thursday evening at half-past eight o'clock and on that I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I am not surprised, Mr. President, to see this opposition to immediate confirmation of the gentlemen nominated by his Honor, the Mayor, for Fire Commissioners. It comes from the same source and from the same part of the Council which has opposed the Fire Commission throughout, as I judge of the standing vote which has just been taken. I hope, sir, that there will be no postponement. As the motion to lay on the table has been voted down, so should this motion to postpone for a week. We who have favored a commission have been met by motions of delay. It is now more than a year after the fire, and yet no commission is established. I believe this Council was elected upon this very issue to a great extent, the reorganization of the department, and we have been unable to complete the work for which we came here, and the reason is apparent to us all. Why does the opposition object now, when it is well known that a large majority of the City Government are in favor of having a Fire Commission. They opposed it in this Council with every parliamentary quibble than can be raised to impede the progress of the order. His Honor the Mayor has carefully sought throughout the city and found three men who, on the whole, are unquestioned in their private life and in their qualifications for the office to which he has been pleased to call them. General Rockwell seems to have all the qualifications necessary to a reorganization of the department, and has a mechanical and chemical knowledge which will enable him to fill the place admirably. He is well known in military and civil circles, and is beyond reproach in every way, besides being a gentleman of the highest culture. Mr. Chamberlin, the present Inspector of Buildings, has had some twenty five years' experience in the department, and knows it from its very foundation, and is thoroughly familiar with its present working. The other gentleman, Mr. Sawyer, is a thorough business man, has the confidence of the business men of the community, and is perfectly satisfactory to the underwriters and insurance men of the city. Three better men could not have been chosen. This reason given for delay is very trivial. The reason is said to be that we want a week to consider the nominations, because this is the first time they are officially before us. It is a common matter of knowledge who these gentlemen are. We have heard their names thoroughly canvassed, and are quite conversant with their public history. If there had been any ugly thing said of them, I doubt not it would have been spoken of in the press, and would have reached us. We are prepared to vote for them tonight, and there is no reason for further delay. I would call attention to the fact that a full year has elapsed since the great fire occurred, and I believe we were elected on this very issue. We have attended to our duty, perhaps, in part, but this great duty of having the Fire Department reorganized we have failed to accomplish. I would not object to a delay of a week were it not that after all hope of defeating the Fire Commission had been lost we were met with tactics simply for delay. I hope the motion will not prevail and that we shall proceed to confirm the nominations immediately.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I am glad the gentleman has shown his hand. He says this Council was no doubt elected on this issue. It is the first time I have heard of this Council being elected to reorganize the Fire Department. I never heard of it in my ward. But it is not the first time I ever heard of private clubs, in the ward where the gentleman belongs, undertaking to run the city of Boston, which is shown by the last nomination for a Board of Aldermen. He says we are ready to vote for them tonight. Well, I don't propose to vote for a gentleman who is not a resident of Boston, and who will not be until the first of January, and of which I have my doubts that he will be then, as the military friend of the gentleman, General Butler, has that case in hand and he may run annexation into the ground yet. I have heard that one of those gentlemen nominated has not paid a dollar in taxes for several years to the city of Boston. I was not sent here to reorganize the Fire Department. I hope the motion will prevail.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—Is it in order for me to say a word? [Laughter.]

The Chair—It is.

Mr. Shaw—Gentlemen may laugh, but they don't show that courtesy to the Chair that I did. They may laugh on the other side of their mouths yet. Mr. President, I propose to give a reason for the vote which I shall cast. When my friend asks that this matter be laid over, he makes a very reasonable request. This is too important to be passed upon hastily. We are not to be controlled by the other branch. I never saw Mr. Sawyer in my life. I never heard of Mr. Rockwell until his name was mentioned here. I am in favor of a Board of Fire Commissioners, but it don't make any difference whether this commission is organized today or a week hence. I have been trying to find out who Mr. Rockwell is. I have written five letters and have got replies to three of them from gentlemen who are personally interested in knowing who he is. Not one of them had heard a word of Mr. Rockwell before. I am told he has gone to New York to get posted up on fire matters. That may be very well, but I want to see the man I am going to vote for. I want to know who is going to take the responsibility of the matter. We have passed an ordinance giving these three men almost arbitrary authority, and I want to see those gentlemen face to face. I want to know what policy they will assume, what action they will take, before I vote for them. I think that is a reasonable proposition, and I hope the subject will be passed over for a week on the same principle that it was in the Board of Aldermen, in order to give gentlemen an opportunity to make inquiries. I think Mr. Chamberlain a very competent man, but of the fitness of the others I know nothing whatever. I have heard the gentleman from Charlestown criticised by those who know him. I don't agree with my friend from Ward 3, that we should not take a man because he is a resident of Charlestown, but I don't think it is very politic to go out of the city when we have just as good men here. I don't raise a question against either of them in any shape whatever, but I shall certainly favor giving the time asked for.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The gentleman from Ward 5 has been writing letters and receiving no answers. He wants to know who General Rockwell is. I have the honor of his acquaintance myself, but I don't offer that as any testimony. I think the gentleman sometimes asks questions for the sake of asking them. I don't know whether the gentleman means to get answers to his letters or not, but here are letters received by his Honor the Mayor, which I will read.

Mr. Perkins then read letters from Hon. John M. Forbes, Hon. William A. Buckingham and General Joseph R. Hawley—and said he had others, which he did not think it necessary to read, to his Honor the Mayor speaking in the highest terms of General Rockwell's ability and peculiar qualifications for the office.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—The gentleman says I have been writing letters and getting no answers. I said that I got answers to three letters out of five; they are from insurance men in State street, and the writers do not know their man. The gentleman says I ask questions sometimes. I have a right to, but when I do I ask of some one who is competent to answer. I did not ask questions of the gentleman from Ward 6. [Laughter.]

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I anticipated just such quibbles as the gentleman from Ward 5 has raised tonight. One of them is, he does not propose to vote for persons for fire commissioners unless he sees them face to face. Well, if he wants to see them face to face he has got to go and see them himself, for I don't believe they will take the pains to come and present themselves to him. [Laughter.] He says he has received letters from gentlemen connected with the insurance companies. I dare say he has; but without reading those letters I venture to say there is not an objection to General Rockwell. [Laughter.]

Mr. Shaw—I will read them.

Mr. Denny—Wait till I get through. The gentleman says it is a reasonable request to wait one week to give an opportunity to make inquiry. It is the duty of every gentleman here to have made inquiries. I have taken the pains to do it. If the gentleman allows himself to delay any matter which he has been urging this Council to act upon, after having the names presented, in order that he may see the persons face to face, he is attempting to impose upon the public. He says he can't find any one who knows General Rockwell. Well, sir, I inquired of the secretary of the Institute of Technology, Mr. Kneeland. That is one source. I have also a slight acquaintance with General Rockwell myself. Mr. Kneeland says General Rockwell is admirably adapted to a position where organization and discipline are required. There is the point we have argued is needed. He is a military man, and well educated, and no one can occupy a position at the Institute of Technology unless he is a good deal of a man. I can't see what the motive of the gentleman from Ward 5 can be in presenting the reasons he has for delay. I suppose the majority of the Council know Mr. Chamberlin better than I do. He has been twenty-seven years in the Fire Department and was a competitor of Mr. Damrell for the position of Chief Engineer. He has been elected Inspector of Buildings, and no one will doubt the propriety of his nomination. Mr. Sawyer is one of the first citizens of Charlestown, is highly respected for his integrity of character, and well known as a capital business man. He is at present president of the Mystic Water Board, and is well known in State street for the character I have given. My words may pass for nothing, but I say the three men are known, and if the gentleman had wanted to know he could have found out if he chose to. In debate I never attack a man's motives, but before the gentleman can induce the Council to postpone action a single hour, he will have to give better reasons than he has. I hope we shall have no delay.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—Like my colleague from Ward 6, I have had the pleasure of an acquaintance with General Rockwell three or four years, and can indorse what is said of him in those letters; also what my friend from Ward 9 has just said. Being in a private institution like the Institute of Technology, I can well understand why many gentlemen here have not come into contact with him. His record and his profession here have been of a private nature; but before he came to Boston his character was more public. He served well in the army, as you have seen by General Hawley's letter. In regard to Mr. Sawyer, a gentleman in Charlestown, perfectly competent to judge of character, said to me that he is one of the best men in that city. The idea of waiting to inquire further of the character of Mr. Chamberlin and Mr. Sawyer reminds me of one of our oldest merchants who wanted to get credit to import from China and was told that he could have it, after he had seen the "Barings," and the old merchant said he would like to inquire about the "Barings." Asking who Mr. Chamberlin is—a man who has been in the Fire Department for twenty-seven years, and Mr. Sawyer, who has been so well known for many years, is like asking who the "Barings" are. I don't think it is necessary to postpone action.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I don't agree with the gentlemen from Wards 11 and 6. If those gentlemen are so well fortified, I can't see the difference in having one week to inquire about them. The gentleman from Ward 6 quotes the "Barings." I have taken stock in some people and lost. The gentleman from Ward 11 seems to impress on this Council the fact that these gentlemen are so and so. Well, we are all acquainted with Mr. Chamberlin, and I am perfectly satisfied with him. But if the gentleman will go back far enough, when we located an engine house in Mason street, he will recollect that four or five weeks after an order to reconsider was reported, and he can see that my judgment was right. Let us lay this matter over for a week to inquire about the gentlemen nominated.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I don't see how any gentleman can have any doubts. I can't see what is to be gained by postponement. His Honor the Mayor had a number of names to select from, and it is to be supposed that he made a fair selection. I find very much in Mr. Rockwell's favor, though I do not know him personally. We all know Mr. Chamberlin and Mr. Sawyer, and I can't see anything to be gained by one week's delay. It would not change the final result at all.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—I hope we shall vote. The gentlemen ask for a delay of a week. They have had a week already. The Aldermen delayed a week, but because they did so no season we should. If gentlemen have not taken pains to inquire who these gentlemen are, it is no reason for delay. They may not inquire in the week to come. We often vote for gentlemen whom we have not seen. We must take something on testimony. We have had something before us tonight, and during the week we have had some very strong testimony in the papers in favor of General Rockwell and the others. It is objected that one of these candidates is from the city of Charlestown. I don't think a man's qualifications for office should depend on the place where he lives. I think the mayor is peculiarly fortunate. One member is a military man, who is a first-class engineer and organizer. For the second member we have an old experienced fireman for several years and the present Inspector of Buildings, in both of which positions he has opportunity to be peculiarly fitted for the position. And in the third, we have an ex-Mayor of Charlestown—a man of large public and business experience. I think it is a fortunate combination, and I hope action upon it will not be postponed.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I have flattered myself, Mr. President, that the statements I have made to the board have ordinarily been understood, but I think I have not been tonight. I stated not one word against either of those men which needed to draw out one argument in their favor. I have no doubt his Honor the Mayor has done the best he can. I intended to vote, and now intend to vote, for confirmation. What I said was, it was a reasonable request for a postponement for one week. My friend from Ward 9 bristles up here, and attempts to question my motives. Another friend comes up and tells a story of "Barings." This reminds me of a little boy, who after being perfumed with pomade and cologne, rushed into a room full of ladies and gentlemen, and said, "Look out! if any of you folks smells a smell, that's me." [Laughter.] Now, if any gentlemen in the city of Boston questions me in regard to principles which have dictated me in the advocacy of a fire commission, I will answer him at any moment, and my friend knows that if any man has labored for the last four or five months for a commission, he can't deny that I have. I have posted myself in regard to it. I had hoped to have the pleasure of seeing these gentlemen. I know Mr. Chamberlin, and think him very competent for the position. If the Board of Aldermen have seen them, why haven't we? If they have been to George Young's or Parker's, and had a sit down with the Aldermen, it is all right, but why have we not seen them? I did hope that when I have known Mr. Timothy T. Sawyer, by reputation, twenty-five years I might have seen him. I am satisfied of his competency. The others may be equally competent. If the Council shall vote not to postpone I shall heartily vote for confirmation.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5—I wish to give a reason for the vote which I shall cast in favor of postponement till next Thursday evening. Some gentlemen manage to get up their pluck when they have numbers behind them and that gives them strength. And that class of people with numbers behind them have attacked those who are smaller in number than themselves, and have indulged in just such arguments as we might expect from the gentleman from Ward 11. He talks about quibbles—that members of this Council who vote for postponement cannot give their reasons. He says he believes we were elected upon the issue of a fire commission. I am not a part of those so elected. The gentleman from Ward 11 may have considered that an issue in his ward, but it was not the issue in the ward which I have the honor to represent—"in part" [Laughter]. Mr. President, I certainly was ready to vote tonight in favor of confirming the nominees, but when a member of this body asks in fairness that he shall have an opportunity to think over the matter, when a member says he desires to vote in favor of confirmation, but is not ready tonight, it seems to me that we should hesitate before we refuse that request. I think the Mayor of Boston would like to have a unanimous confirmation from this body. The Board of Alderman did not postpone the matter one week as has been stated. They met on Monday and postponed it until this afternoon and have voted unanimously for confirmation, only one member being absent. Now, it comes to us and a delay of one week is asked for. While I do not agree with the gentleman that we should object to a man simply because he belongs out of the city, I don't suppose for a moment that his Honor the Mayor had any doubt about the decision of the Supreme Court. The question is to be argued before the court tomorrow, and before we meet again the Supreme Court will have decided it. But I do not press that as a reason for delay. I wish to be understood as desiring to give members of this body courtesy. When they say they are desirous of supporting the Mayor, I say give them an opportunity. I can't see any injury that can be done. I have opposed a commission, and it seems that some members of this body imagine that if a man has voted against a measure he must always raise points and quibbles for delay. You will find that men who raise such small matters are used to them and can act accordingly. I have no such motive. I am desirous of voting and am ready to vote to confirm, but I shall vote for postponement as gentlemen have requested.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—There is good reason for believing that the Supreme Court cannot give its decision before we meet again, as it has got to be reported to the full bench by Judge Endicott. I don't see that that is any argument. Now, here are two gentlemen who say they would vote for confirmation if it is not postponed. They have given no good reason for postponement, and I don't think the gentleman who made the motion has one.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I am one of those who are willing to vote for confirmation tonight, if the Council shall so decide. I am not at all disappointed in the selection of these commissioners. It is just as I expected it would be. I expected we would have commissioners who don't know anything about the workings of the Fire Department. They may be able men, but I feel disappointed that men are not put on the commission who know something about the department. General Rockwell may be an able engineer. We had one of the greatest engineers in the country blowing up buildings in the great fire, and a cheap mechanic who never earned more than three dollars a day did better than he did. Then, too, this commission is a direct slight upon the present Board of Engineers. I suppose it is the same here as elsewhere. Men in other commissions are appointed who do not know anything about the department. In fact a gentleman told me he did not know anything about the business, but being able to get a thousand dollars a year more than in his profession, he accepted. I think Captain Chamberlin is perfectly competent, and after the first year or two he will be the man to manage the department. I am perfectly willing to vote for confirmation tonight, but I should really like to see the gentlemen first, and see them personally, and for that reason I shall vote for postponement.

The vote was taken on postponement and resulted, 21 yeas, 36 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Anderson, Brennan, Dacey, Dean, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hughes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Madden, Mahan, Martin, McCue, McKenney, Shaw, Thacher, Wells, Weston, Woodward—21.

Nays—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Bicknell, Blackmar, Bleiler, Boardman, Brackett, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Lamb, Loring, Marston, Morse, Page, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Tower, Train, Warren, West, Whiston, Wilhur, Woods—36.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Barnes, Bowles, Doherty, Hall, Upham—5.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 moved to take the vote on confirmation by yeas and nays. Lost.

The Council voted to confirm the nominations, with only one dissenting voice, Mr. Thacher of Ward 15.

A motion to reconsider by Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 was lost.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order authorizing the fitting up of the Bowditch Schoolhouse to accommodate the branch of the English High and Evening schools now located in the city building, Mason street. Passed.

THE BURRILL CLAIM.

On motion of Mr. Train of Ward 13, the substitute order to pay the assignee of Charles Burrill $40,000, to be charged to Reserved Fund, was taken from the table and specially assigned for next Thursday evening, at nine o'clock.

NORTHAMPTON-STREET DISTRICT.

On motion of Mr. Prescott of Ward 9, the order for a transfer from Reserved Fund, of not exceeding $5000, to cover expenses for surveys, plans and estimates for contemplated improvements on Northampton-street District, was taken from the table and passed—yeas 46, nays 0. A motion to reconsider by Mr. Jones of Ward 14 was lost.

A PUBLIC PARK.

The Chair announced as the members of the Joint Special Committee on Public Works, on the part of the Council, Messrs. Shaw of Ward 5, Perkins of Ward 6, Flynn of Ward 7, Prescott of Ward 9, and Boardman of Ward 14.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Thirty-six special traverse jurors were drawn to serve in the cases of the United States against Thomas Goddard and Peter B. Brigham.

EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

Measurer of Marble, Soapstone and Freestone—William H. Cary.

Special Police—John Roach, St. Joseph's Church; Jeremiah Tinkham, in connection with duties as undertaker; D. T. Harnden, Fountain street and its vicinity.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS.

A communication was received from his Honor the Mayor stating that he had appointed Oliver L. Shaw Inspector of Buildings, vice David Chamberlin, resigned.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the communication was referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

PROTECTION OF THE HARBOR.

The following communication was received from his Honor the Mayor:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL, }
BOSTON, Nov. 17, 1873. }

To the City Council of the City of Boston—I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a communication to the Harbor Commissioners from General George Thom of the United States Engineers, relative to the taking of ballast and gravel from Long Island, in Boston Harbor. I commend to your careful consideration the statements therein contained.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER'S OFFICE, }
PORTLAND, ME., Nov. 7, 1873. }

Hon. Josiah Quincy, Chairman Board of Harbor Commissioners, No. 8 Pemberton square, Boston, Mass.: Dear Sir—Since my letter to your board of the 17th ultimo, I have, in compliance with the request contained in your communication of the 16th ultimo, caused a survey to be made of that part of Long Island which was washed over by the storm and high tides of last month; and I have also, myself, made an examination of it. This survey when compared with the survey of the same locality, made in 1860 by Mr. Henry L. Whitney, shows—

1. That both the eastern and western shore crests of the low neck of land which connects the south head with the main part of Long Island, have been considerably weakened since 1860 in width as well as in height; but that the main body of the low land does not appear to have changed materially in character or level.

2. That "Sculpin Channel" has been somewhat encroached upon, the twelve-foot curve being now about sixty feet farther from the shore.

It also appears that all the damage thus far done has been caused by the removal, for sale, of a very large quantity of stone ballast, shingle, gravel and sand from the shores by the owner of the land, with the permission, as I am informed, of the municipal authorities. It was shown at a recent meeting of the Common Council that gravel to the amount of 10,000 or 12,000 tons was removed to T wharf alone, from June 1 till September. Now, if this removal of material be permitted to continue, it will doubtless result in the opening, at no distant day of a channel across the island, to the great injury of Sculpin Channel—a state of things that even now will he likely to take place, unless some action be soon taken for the protection and strengthening by a stone apron work or otherwise of the shores thus weakened.

The question arises, by whom this work should be done; the owner of the land who has done the injury by the removal and sale of the material, or the municipal authorities which have granted him permission so to do. I do not think that the United States Government should be called upon, under the circumstances, to restore the shores to their former condition. The cost of a suitable apron work of stone would probably be about $20,000. At present there are no funds in my charge that are available for the purpose.

Very respectfully

Your obedient servant,

GEO. THOM,

Lieutenant-Colonel of Engineers,
Brevet-Brigadier-General U. S. A.

Referred to the Committee on Harbor on the part of the Board.

FROM THE WATER BOARD.

The following communication was received from the Cochituate Water Board:

To the City Council of Boston—By vote of this board I am directed to ask the City Council for an additional appropriation to meet the expenditures of this department for the remaining portion of the financial year. The calls upon this department in consequence of the large fires of November and May last have been exceptionally urgent. A better supply of water for the extinguishment of fires has been the demand of the City Government and the public. This "better supply" of necessity includes the laying of larger pipes in certain districts, the putting in of new hydrants and a somewhat radical change in the distributing system from that which was adopted something over a quarter of a century ago. All these improvements entail large expense; but this board has not hesitated to meet the general demand in a liberal spirit, and the result, so far as safety from great conflagrations is concerned seems to justify the policy pursued. Nearly a hundred thousand dollars have been expended from the general appropriation since May last in work, the cost of which was not included in the regular annual estimates. The larger items in this account are chargeable to the high service systems of Beacon Hill and South Boston; the laying of larger pipes in important streets; the laying of larger feed pipes; extension of pipes and many changes made to insure a better circulation of water throughout the general system of distribution. The effect of these changes on the low-service system has been an increase of head or pressure in the pipes, very noticeable to members of the Fire Department, who bear strong evidence as to the improvement produced. The appropriation for Wards 13, 14, 15 and 16 will be exhausted during this month, and it is estimated that some $15,000 will be needed for work recommended by the Board, this including the relaying of the remaining pipes of the Mount Warren Aqueduct Company, now nearly useless from their small size and bad condition. A general statement of the means and needs of this department may then be represented—

General appropriation (not including Wards)....$326,5300
Amount expended up to November,1..... 281,498

Leaving balance..... $45,000
Amount yet due on pipe contracts..... 53,000

Exceeding appropriation..... $8,000

The following is an estimate of the needs for the balance of the year:

Estimated expenditures Nov. 1, 1873, to May 1, 1874, for salaries matured and work, this being the same as the previous year.....$100,000
Estimated cost of furnishing high service in South Boston..... 20,000
Estimated expenditures in the wards..... 15,000
Estimated expenditures new gates for reservoirs 4,000
Estimated expenditures new machinery and shop. 7,000
Estimated Inspectors' debt..... 3,000
Estimated incidentals..... 18,000
$167,000

This, with the $8000 above referred to, will amount to $175,000, and this board asks a special appropriation for this amount. Possibly some portion of the above sums will not be expended owing to the lateness of the season, but it is deemed quite important to have the means on hand to continue the work if the weather allows it.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN A. HAVEN,
President.

The communication was referred to the Committee on Water.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The Superintendent of Sewers submitted an assessment for the construction of a common sewer in Buckingham street—total, $3173 81; to individuals $2380 36. Referred to Committee on Sewers.

CONSTABLE'S BOND.

The bond of George Richardson, constable, being certified by the Treasurer, was approved by the Board.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Report and order to purchase one of Skinner's patent extension ladders and fire escapes, at a cost of $2600. Referred, on motion of Alderman Brown, to the Board of Fire Commissioners.

Orders to repair the draw and rebuild the foundations of the Broadway Bridge; and for a loan of $114,000 to meet the expense thereof.

Alderman Gibson presented the report of the City Engineer on this subject to the Committee on Bridges, and moved that the order lie over until the report could be printed.

Alderman Power—I would like to inquire the gentleman's reasons for having the report printed.

Alderman Gibson—There are three ways to repair or rebuild this structure and the question is which is the best. For myself, I have no objection to passing the whole thing this afternoon, but there has already been a very large amount of money expended on this bridge already, and it has never been in repair twenty-four hours at a time.

Alderman Power—I supposed the members of this Board understood that matter, and I always thought the Committee on Bridges were a unit on the plan which they recommended. No member has any doubt that the plan we recommended is the best and surest. There were three plans before us, and the one we presented to this Board is, I believe, acknowledged by the committee, and cannot be disputed by anybody, to be the best, and I believe it to be the best economy for the city to adopt it. If the gentleman opposite has changed his mind, and thinks it is not the best plan, I have no objection to having this report printed and circulated; but if he believes in the plan, it would be useless to have this long report printed. I don't see how it will change matters in this Board.

Alderman Gibson—I have n't changed my mind at all upon the plan of the bridge, but I had some questions whether or not that place would not be filled up in the next thirty years. If so, you could build a structure for many thousand dollars less, to stand twenty years or more. I have had an idea that that place would be filled up and turned into a large common sewer. I think this is the best plan. Another plan is to put in another draw and let the present pillars remain, which will be about sixty thousand dollars less. Another plan still, is to put in some additional pneumatic piling, but I think the best is this one for a solid structure, the same as cutting off forty-five feet from Bunker-Hill Monument and putting it under the bridge. The pneumatic piling would be good for thirty years, but would not be so permanent as the other arrangement. Temporary repair of the hridge can't be depended on to last very long. If the members of the Board are satisfied that that cbbannel will be kept open for all time, I am for the best stone foundation that can be made.

Alderman Power—The gentleman is mistaken in the difference between the costs of what the committee think is the best plan and what they think is the next best. It is only some fifteen or twenty thousand dollars. While, of course, it is a great improvement over the present structure, it is n't a reliable thing, and the Engineer strongly recommends the best plan as the most economical for the city to adopt. Of course gentlemen here may have an idea of the probability of that channel being filled up, but it does n't seem to me that it could be done, or that it will ever be for the interest of the city of Boston to fill it up. Therefore the committee were unanimous in recommending the best plan.

Aiderman Hulbert—In order to be a little informed upon this question, which I knew would come up this afternoon, I took some pains to learn what is proposed by the committee, and I will state the case to the Board as I understand it, and give my reason for approving what Alderman Gibson has said. As I understand it, the draw of the Broadway Bridge is in a very imperfect condition; the bridges to the draw on either side are in good order, but the draw is imperfect and ought not to remain as it is. I understand the Engineer to state that the present draw can be repaired at an expense of about sixteen thousand dollars, to answer a temporary purpose, but for how long he cannot tell. I understand him to state that there is a mode by which moderate-sized stone pillars can be erected in the centre, upon which the present structure, or another draw, can be placed, easing the present supports upon which, as I understand it, very little weight will rest. It is needless, perhaps, for me to explain in detail, for gentlemen can get at the same information that I have had. The present supports are sustaining quite a large weight. The contemplated change by the Engineer will relieve almost entirely any weight from the post remaining, and will simply serve to steady the movement of the draw. I understand the Engineer to state that this can all be done, and an excellent bridge be placed there, at an expense of $78,000, from which can be deducted the amount of the old material which he estimates at $14,000. If the city will continue to use the present draw erected over a new foundation, then he says it can be done at an expense of $62,000, so that the expense of making a new draw is $12,000 more than would be that of using the old draw upon a new foundation. The other plan contemplated in the $114,000 plan, is very much larger, dispensing with the present circular stone foundation, and putting in the centre square columns of stone upon which the bridge shall be raised, that will cost $114,000. That, in the eye of the City Engineer is the most complete way of doing it. But to my mind there are objections to it, because it displaces too much of the channel, and I think the Harbor Commissioners would much prefer the smaller stone foundation. I also apprehend, from what the Engineer stated to me, that they will answer every purpose, and I see no objection in using one of that size in preference to the other. The question of obstructions to the channel are to be considered, and this expense of $74,000 may answer the purpose as well as the others. I rose simply to second the motion of the Alderman, as gentlemen may obtain intelligent information from the report.

The motion of Alderman Gibson was carried.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Order for a transfer from Reserved Fund, of not exceeding $5000, to cover expenses for surveys, plans and estimates for contemplated improvements on Northampton-street district. Passed—yeas 11, nays 0.

Report and order for Committee on Paving to contract for the construction of an iron bridge at Dartmouth street, over the Boston & Providence Railroad, at a cost of not exceeding $155,000; and for a loan therefor, came up referred to the Joint Committee on Streets. The Board concurred.

A PUBLIC PARK.

The order from the Council appointing Messrs. Shaw, Perkins, Flynn, Prescott and Boardman, and such as the Board of Aldermen may join, a Joint Special Committee on Public Works, with directions to consider the expediency of providing for the establishment of one or more public parks within this city, was laid on the table on motion of Alderman Gibson. Subsequently Alderman Clark said—

Mr. Chairman—The order for the appointment of a joint special committee to take into consideration the expediency of establishing a public park has been laid on the table on motion of the gentleman from Ward 1. I hope that it will be disposed of this evening. It is getting pretty late to take into consideration a subject of that magnitude, and longer delay should not be made. I hope the gentleman will explain his position, and unless he has good reasons, I shall move to take the order from the table, that it may be passed this evening.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me that before we go into a public park the circle of the city should be completed. We have already joined on Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton, and there are contemplations of other outside connections. After we get the territory laid out will be time enough to talk about a park. We are in panicky times; taxes have got to go up by thousands next year. We already have magnificent drives all round us. The committee have only till January to work in, and it is n't at all probable that they will fix upon any place to be cated upon by the present City Government. There will be so large an additional cost that it does n't seem to me that it will be warranted by the tax payers. Such a thing ought to be taken up by a government that can run it through, without having to abandon it to some other government. As it is, the whole thing will be put away on the first of January. My object in having it lie on the table was to consult with members of the Board. Of course, if the gentlemen wish it in these panicky times, I don't mean to join issue with them.

Alderman Clark—Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that there can be no objection to appointing a committee to take into consideration the subject of laying out a public park commensurate with the growth and business of the city of Boston. It is n't to be presumed that the present City Government will have much to do with laying out this park, but it can begin. I presume some legislation will be desired before a park can be laid out; therefore there will be no harm in appointing the committee to take it into consideration. If it is left to the next City Government it is January before they come in, and it is February before they go to work and the Legislature adjourns before anything can be done. I am decidedly in favor of laying out a public park where people can have an opportunity to go, as well as those citizens who are able to drive by the magnificent residences in the vicinity of the city. If the object is to delay the matter and let it go over to the next City Government, I am opposed to it. But if it is simply to lie over a week I do not object. It is n't much matter whether the times are panicky or not. I believe a majority of the citizens of Boston demand that some action be taken looking toward a public park that will be an ornament to the city. We have a Public Garden, but there are people living today who will see the Public Garden in the centre of business, which will reach up as far as Charles street. And the great majority will reside in the section where, I trust, we shall have a park or series of parks. There is no city so susceptible of having a park or series of parks, and no city where one can be laid out with so little expense. It will cost money, as all great improvements do. Public improvements have a tendency to increase the prosperity and growth of a city and that is what we have to look after. We have a sufficient amount of territory belonging to the city for the building of a park that will surpass those of Philadelphia or Brooklyn. We expect to see Brookline annexed during the coming winter, and land can be obtained for a very small price in Brookline, West Roxbury and Dorchester. There is no reason why steps should not be taken at once looking to such a series of parks as the people demand. I trust the subject will be taken up and acted upon today, unless at the special request of the Alderman from Ward 1 to have it lie on the table for one week.

Alderman Hulbert—I should be glad to see this thing lie on the table for a week.

Alderman Clark—I have no objection to a delay of one week, but if it is to stave off this thing to the next government, I shall object.

Alderman Gaffield—I agree with the gentleman from Ward 6 that this is a very important matter. I consider it a great mistake and misfortune that three years ago, when this matter was brought before the people, an unfortunate amendment was made to the law requiring a two-thirds vote before we could establish a park. It will be remembered that a very large majority were for the park, and I regret that that amendment was put in to kill the project at that time. As the gentleman has said, take any of the great cities of America—they all have their parks and are proud of them, and Boston, which does n't intend to be behind them, should have its public park also. I hope, therefore, that any action of the Board this afternoon will not be interpreted as unfavorable action on the subject. I move the order be taken from the table and specially assigned for next Monday at five o'clock.

The motion prevailed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of James A. Jones, 169 North street; Dolliver, Currier & Co., corner of Federal and Milk streets; Patrick Canny, 439 Hanover and Battery street; Bradley & Simpson, 74 Leverett street, victuallers, and Ferry & Anderson, innholders, 217 South and 116 Kneeland. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the application of E. S. Hamblin, et al., to give dramatic entertainment at Institute Hall Nov. 27; to J. S. Rogers, to exhibit panorama in Ward 16 Nov. 17-18; George Mahoney, and six other minors, for newsboys' license; L. B. Sheaf, et al., for transfer of wagon licenses; W. B. Stacey, to give concert in Tremont Temple Nov. 19; George F. Pratt, for hack stand on North Devonshire street at State street; George L. Pierce, for transfer of license for intelligence office to Edward Boyd; J. T. Murray, for hack stand on Tremont street; John Somers, for transfer of hack licenses. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the applications of the Metropolitan Railroad Company to locate and use stable for sixty horses on Marlborough street, provided it be placed upon the southeasterly corner of Marlborough and Parker streets; and of C. E. Drew on Parker street; J. A. King, Clayton street; H. R. Snrles, Culvert street, for leave to occupy stables; David A. Berry, to alter wooden store into stable. Severally accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, to whom was referred the petition of John Brett, reported the following order, recommending its passage:

Ordered, That the Chief of Police be authorized to close a portion of Oneida street against the passage of vehicles during the reconstruction of the walls of a building numbered 320 Harrison avenue, as required by the Inspector of Buildings.

Order passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Markets, to whom was referred the petition of Nathan Robbins et al., poultry dealers in Faneuil Hall Market, for a modification of section 14 of the market ordinance, reported the accompanying order, recommending its passage:

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to report an amendment to the ordinance relating to Faneuil Hall Market by which the dealers in poultry in said market will be relieved from the onerous restrictions now resting upon them in regard to the sale of undressed poultry.

Alderman Gibson—I would explain that the ordinance does n't allow market dealers to sell poultry with the heads on. All the dealers outside do sell them, even on the opposite side of North and South Market streets, with the heads and wings on, and that gives them an advantage. The dealers in the markets desire to have the ordinance changed so that they will be on an equality with those outside.

Alderman Hulbert—Will the Alderman explain why the ordinance stands as it does?

Alderman Gibson—That I can't say. I think the market men ought to have the same privileges as those on the street around them. The market men are obliged to take them off, while others on the opposite side of the street are not.

Alderman Hulbert—I would ask if the ordinance as it now stands is n't a proper one, and the best for the city to require as a rule inside the markets.

Alderman Gibson—It would be better to amend the ordinance one way or the other, making those outside sell on the same plan as those inside. Thirty-three per cent. of the poultry selling is done outside of the market limits, and it is unfair to give this privilege to outsiders. We ought to have the thing uniform.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert, the report was committed.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on East Boston Ferries, to whom was referred the request of the directors of the ferries for an extra appropriation for the new ferry boat, submitted a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the sum of $3000 be appropriated to pay the extra expenses incurred in finishing and furnishing the new ferry-boat Winthrop, said sum to be charged to the appropriation for East Boston Ferries. The order was passed.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Legislative Matters, to whom was referred the order in reference to annexing a portion of the town of Brookline, so as to form a connection between the old portion of the city and Brighton, made a report, recommending the passage of the order in the following new draught:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court, at its next session, to annex to the city of Boston so much of the town of Brookline as lies north of the southerly line of Brighton avenue, together with such other and additional lands as may be necessary or proper in order to form a suitable and convenient connection between Brighton and the old portion of the city.

Accompanying the above is a minority report signed by Councilman Perkins of Ward 6, dissenting from the report of the majority, on the ground that it does not sufficiently set forth what, in the opinion of the Committee on the City Council, constitutes a convenient connection between the city proper and the recently annexed territory of Brighton, and recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court at its next session, to annex to the city of Boston so much of the town of Brookline as lies north of the southerly line of Beacon street, between the Boston and Brookline line at St. Mary's street, and the Brighton line.

The order was read once and laid over.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Armories, to whom was referred the petition of Company F, First Regiment of Infantry, reported the following order:

Ordered, That the allowance for rent of armory formerly occupied by Company F, First Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at 1867 Washington street, be discontinued from and after the first day of October, A. D. 1873, and that the sum of eight hundred dollars per annum be allowed and paid for rent of armory now occupied by said company at the junction of Warren and Palmer streets, beginning on the first day of October, A. D. 1873, and continuing until otherwise ordered; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

The order was passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported orders to pay Benjamin G. Boardman $3000, on account of widening Congress street upon his estate next Milk street; and M. P. Grant and C. W. Lovering, J. P. Putnam and M. P. Grant, trustees, $2400 30, for land taken from Otis Daniell and others, trustees, in widening Cambridge street. Severally passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported an order directing Harriet Wiswell, Hugh Nawn, Noah D. Joyce, Edwin Ray and Donald Kennedy to remove obstructions from Walnut avenue on or before the first day of December. Passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the betterment of seven hundred dollars assessed upon the estate of C. W. Loring and others, trustees, numbered 20 on Edinboro' street, for the widening of Kingston street, by an order of this Board of Dec. 26, 1871, be and the same is hereby reduced one-half, to the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars, which now remains as the betterment on said estate for said widening.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be directed to provide for the use of the Master of the Lincoln School a private office in the Lincoln School Building, the expense of the same to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported leave to withdraw on petition of Samuel P. Loud for postponement of collection of sewer assessment in Dorchester avenue; and no action necessary on remonstrance of Walter H. French et al. against proposed sewer in Parker street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom were referred the assessments for sewers in Washington, Warren and East streets, reported that they are correct, and recommend the passage of orders for collection. The orders were severally passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the sum of $96 05 be abated from J. I. Bowditch, for a sewer in Summer street, and the same amount assessed upon Mortimer C. Ferris; that $64 04 be abated from Howard Stockton, agent, for a sewer in Summer street, and the same amount assessed upon Patrick Donahoe; that $189 98 be abated from George H. Kuhn, trustee, for a sewer in Summer street, and the same amount assessed upon the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Read once.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the application of Ross Manufacturing Company to use engine at 72 Dorchester avenue. Accepted.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on County Accounts, to whom was referred the request of the proprietors of the Social Law Library, for the usual annual appropriation, reported the following order recommending its passage:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to the proprietors of the Social Law Library, under the provisions of section 10, chapter 33, of the General Statutes, and chapter 215 of the acts of 1863, the sum of one thousand dollars; said sum to be charged to the Appropriation for the County of Suffolk.

The order was read once.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That Dover-street Bridge be closed to public travel on Monday, the 24th inst., and remain closed until the repairs thereon are completed.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to lease the greenhouse on the Public Garden from the expiration of the last lease until the 1st of July next, upon such terms as they may deem best for the interests of the city.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Streets, to whom was referred the order in reference to the settlement with William Gray for land taken in extending West Chester Park to Beacon street, reported that the order ought to pass. Report accepted, and order passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That the City Clerk be directed, in behalf of this Board, to prepare and revise the voting lists for Wards 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, to be used at the ensuing municipal election, and that he be authorized to employ such assistance as may be necessary; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for the "Registration of Voters."

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported leave to withdraw on petition of R. H. Wiswell to be paid for Warren-street damages—upon his own request, until settlement with the owners of the property he leases. Accepted.

LIMITS OF SUFFOLK COUNTY.

Alderman Quincy submitted the following, which, on his motion, was laid on the table to be printed:

The Joint Standing Committee on Legislative Matters, who were requested to consider the expediency of petitioning the Legislature to annex the city of Chelsea and the towns of Revere and Winthrop to the county of Middlesex, having considered the subject, beg leave to submit the following report: By an act of the General Court, passed in 1738, "all the lands within the town of Boston, heretofore called Winnisimmet, Rumney Marsh and Pullen Point" were "erected into a township by the name of Chelsea." In 1846 a portion of this territory was incorporated into a separate town by the name of North Chelsea. In 1852 a portion of North Chelsea was incorporated as the town of Wintrop.

Simultaneously with the passage of the original act establishing the city of Boston, an act was passed to regulate the administration of justice within the County of Suffolk (Chapter 109, 1821), which provided among other things that the town of Chelsea should not be liable to taxation for any county purposes until the Legislature should otherwise order.

In 1831 an act was passed providing that the connection which by law then subsisted between the city of Boston and the town of Chelsea should continue upon the following conditions: First—That Chelsea should release to Boston all right, title and interest to the county property, and should also relinquish to Boston the exclusive care and management of the court houses, jails, House of Correction and all other lands, buildings and establishments deemed county property; second, that Boston should be at liberty to apply from time to time to the Legislature for any alterations in the laws respecting county or municipal courts, or the administration of justice without interference from Chelsea; third, that Chelsea might at any time apply to the Legislature to be set off from the county of Suffolk to any other county without opposition from Boston.

It was provided further that the act should continue and be in force so far as respects the connection between Boston and Chelsea, for the space of twenty-five years, and thence afterwards until the same should be altered by the Legislature, in less Chelsea should in the meantime apply to the Legislature and be set off; provided, however, that the rights of property acquired by Boston under the act should remain forever vested in said city. The substantial provisions of this act were subsequently incorporated into the General Statutes.

This connection existed undisturbed for a period of forty years, double the length of time contemplated by the statute. In 1871 the attention of the City Government of Boston was particularly directed to the subject by the receipt of a requisition from the County Commissioners of Middlesex for the payment of a large sum of money for damages caused by laying out a highway in Chelsea. Application was immediately made to the Legislature to relieve this city from such assessments in the future, and an act was passed in 1872 (Chapter 91) providing that no part of the expenses incurred by the laying out, widening, alteration, discontinuance, building or repair of any highway, bridge, or other way of travel in the city of Chelsea or the towns of Revere and Winthrop should be assessed upon the county of Suffolk or the city of Boston.

All other expenses for county purposes continue to be borne exclusively by this city. The gross expenditures for the county of Suffolk during the present financial year are estimated at $325,000, and that sum has been appropriated by the City Council. Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop, containing about one-twelfth of the population of the county, pay no part of this sum, which, except for this peculiar arrangement, would be properly chargeable upon them in proportion to their valuation.

If an attempt is made to adjust this burden equitably by assessing these corporations for their portion of the county expenses a question immediately arises as to the manner in which the assessment shall be made. It is hardly probable that the Board of Aldermen of Boston would be allowed to have the sole care and management of property for which the other portions of the county were taxed.

Apart from this the connection is open to objection on account of the complications which it leads to in the management of the public business. Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop take part in the election of District-Attorney, Sheriff, Clerks of Courts, Register of Probate, Register of Deeds and Commissioners of Insolvency for the County of Suffolk; and of County Commissioners for the County of Middlesex. The Street Commissioners of Boston have the powers and duties of County Commissioners in Suffolk County, with certain exceptions.

The Treasurer of this city is, ex-officio, the Treasurer of the county. The Aldermen constitute the County Board of Accounts; and have the care and management of the county buildings.

It is somewhat surprising that such an anomalous condition of things should have been suffered to continue so long; and it seems necessary only to call the attention of the Government to the subject in order to have the present arrangement terminated, either by the annexation of Chelsea and the two towns to Boston, or to another county.

The committee would, therefore, respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order.

For the committee,

S. M. QUINCY, Chairman.

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court, at its next session, for the passage of an act to set off the city of Chelsea and the towns of Revere and Winthrop from the County of Suffolk, and annex them to the County of Middlesex.

TAKEN FROM THE TABLE.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the order for Committee on Legislative Matters to submit their report in print was taken from the table.

Alderman Quincy—I moved to lay the order on the table in order to take the sense of the committee upon it. The committee were surprised to see it coming in at so late a day. But if it is the desire of the other branch that a report of the labor done be made at this late day, the committee have no objection to the passage of the order.

The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, printed City Document No. 123, being the final report of the Joint Committee on Fire Department, was taken from the table and sent down.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
NOVEMBER 20, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held at half-past seven o'clock P. M., E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

To complete work already authorized by the City Council.....	5,000 00

$12,000 00

It should be stated, in justice to the committee, that the appropriation made for the present financial year was ten thousand dollars less than the appropriation made for last year, and that the additional amount asked for at this time is for the purpose of covering expenditures ordered by the City Council, and not contemplated when the appropriation was made. Respectfully submitted for the committee.

JOHN T. CLARK, Chairman.

ARMORIES.

Mr. Page of Ward 9, from the Joint Standing Committee on Armories, to whom was referred the petition of M. J. Dunn for reimbursement of expenses for armory of Company B, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., reported the following order, recommending its passage:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to M. J. Dunn, late Captain of Company B, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., the sum of forty-eight dollars and forty-six cents, to reimburse him for personal expenses incurred for rent of armory occupied by Company B, Ninth Regiment, at No. 577 Washington street.

Mr. Page of Ward 9, from the same Committee on Armories, to whom was referred the petition of Company E, First Battalion of Infantry, M. V. M., for a new armory, reported that no action on the part of the committee is necessary, and recommended the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the allowance for rent of armory occupied by Company E, First Battalion of Infantry, M. V. M., in Revere Hall, Bowdoin square, be discontinued on and after the 18th inst., the adjutant-general of the Commonwealth having notified the city that it would not be required to furnish an armory to said company after that date.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 from the same committee submitted the following orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend an additional sum, not exceeding $200, in repairing and furnishing the headquarters of the Ninth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at the corner of Harvard and Washington streets; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $600 in repairing and furnishing the armory occupied by Company A., First Battalion of Light Artillery, M. V. M., in Cooper street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

The reports having been accepted and the orders read once, Mr. Page of Ward 9 said—

It is very necessary that the repairs contemplated be commenced before the weather gets cold. I move that the rules be suspended and the orders be passed.

The rules were suspended and the several orders passed—yeas 37, nays 0

SOUP FOR THE POOR.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 offered the following:

Ordered, That a joint special committee, to consist of the standing committee of the Board of Aldermen and of the Common Council on the Police Department, be appointed, with instructions to provide soup for the deserving poor of the city, the same to be carried out under the immediate direction of the Chief-of-Police, and to commence as soon as said joint committee shall consider expedient; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I am accustomed, Mr. President, to give a reason for everything which I do, and in this case I wish to state that it is earlier in the season than this custom has heretofore been introduced. It is very well known by everybody that this is an extraordinarily hard year. It has been stated in the press that this month of November, thus far, has been colder than any similar time for the last twenty-five years. It is also very well known that there are thousands of deserving persons out of employment in the city of Boston, and it is also very well known that the cause, proceeding as it does, directly and indirectly, from the panic, is not seen so much here as it is in other cities. Nevertheless, it is evident. I have in the last two weeks, been called upon by persons who are suffering for want of food and raiment, and have become so specially for want of employment. The natural consequence is poverty, which is rapidly increasing. This afternoon I have been waited on by two sisters of charity—not by name, but by nature—who have been in the habit of visiting the poor of the city, and I have become satisfied that now is the time to lend a helping hand. I can relate instances of needy persons having called upon the Overseers of the Poor—and I will not say refused, but the granting of the request was accompanied with so much red tape that they were almost starved while waiting for the assistance rendered. It seems to me that now is the best time to meet this demand. It is not known generally to what extent this matter has gone on from 1868 to 1873 inclusive, and I have some figures on the subject, which I will give. The delivery of soup for 1873 commenced January 4 and closed March 9, having continued eighty-five days. The number of families supplied (reckoning each day they applied) was 17,382; number of meals furnished in all 88,541 (one quart for each meal); gallons of soup furnished, 22,174; cost of the whole, something less than $3500 (which was the amount appropriated by the City Council); cost per quart, less than four cents. I have taken some pains, Mr. President, within a few days, to inquire of the Chief-of-Police as to the manner in which this soup has been dealt out, and I have become satisfied that there is no other source as capable as that department for distributing this supply. The police have used very great diligence in dealing out the supplies, and great discretion in regard to the parties supplied, and they have done an immense deal of good. Individuals are now waiting upon the poor in this city—and they are not persons with very much means either—the ladies to whom I have referred—they have small means but large hearts, and in their veins runs human blood. I have seen inhumanity displayed by parties who have been applied to for charity, and therefore I say, in distinction from them, that the parties who have called upon me have exhibited to a great extent what I shall call humanity. This very afternoon, sir, while I was waiting in the Chief's office to obtain these figures, a well-dressed woman with tears in her eyes called and stated that she was turned from her house in the very ward which I represent, by her inhuman landlord. While absent, laboring for the support of her feeble husband, her landlord came, took possession and carried away the key of the door, and all because she could not pay the small pittance which was due for rent. She called upon the police at the station; one of the policemen took her case in hand, and he obtained the key of the house after much persuasion. Finally it proved that the inhuman landlord had taken out a little stovepipe in which and by which she cooked such meals as she had. There was no stove in the room; her husband had cut a hole in the stove pipe in which the cooking was done, and put some bricks about it to keep what little material she had from setting fire to the house. The Chief took from his pocket some money and gave it to that woman, and the two ladies referred to said, "Cease your crying; go home and take care of your husband and we will give you money to buy a stove with." I can state another instance, Mr. President, of a returned soldier, one who fought and almost died for his country. He came home maimed and was taken down sick, got up again and was able to work for a while and was again taken down. One of these ladies heard of the case and called upon the Overseers of the Poor, and was bluffed off by the attendant at the office. But she compelled him to attend to her request only by saying unless he did so she would publish him through the press. These parties are now in such a condition that they ought to be helped. I can relate another case, in Ward 8. Early in the year a report was made that a mother and four children had died of smallpox. Now, sir, I can bring proof that those parties were not sick with disease, but perished for want of food, and it was reported that they died of smallpox. But I don't think it is necessary to multiply instances. It has been intimated that Boston shall refuse this mere pittance for the support of her poor. I will only say this, that if there is anything human in our souls or bodies we will allow this thing to commence at the present moment.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I have no doubt, Mr. President, that members of the Council are ready to furnish this money, and as the gentleman from Ward 5 has preached such a fine sermon, I move this Council now offer prayer for the sufferers.

The President—The gentleman's motion is out of order.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The gentleman from Ward 5 has given this subject a great deal of study before coming in here, and I should like to have an opportunity of studying the system and its workings. For that reason I should like to have it lie over for a week.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I object to having the order lie over, and I call for the yeas and nays on the question when it is taken.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I will state my reason to the gentleman. This order is an unprecedented one in this Council. The distribution of soup has been under the direction of the Committee on Police and the Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I will give my reason for wishing the order passed tonight. It is not unprecedented in this Council, and it is not the first unprecedented thing I have done here. He says it has been done by a committee of the Aldermen. If I had offered an order that a committee of the Aldermen should do this, I would have been met by the saying that I was interfering with the business of the Aldermen. But I am not interfering with their business. I want the people represented. I don't see how any gentleman can oppose such an order as this while employers are discharging their employes by thousands every day, and parties are thrown out of employment who are in want of their daily bread. It is not too early to do good here. When we know there is suffering here day by day, it is the duty of this Council to do something to relieve it. If the gentleman had called round in his own ward he would have seen the poor and indigent who need the help of the city fathers. If you, Mr. President, would go down in your ward your heart would be softened, if it were necessary. And let the gentleman from Ward 3, who got up here and asked for prayers go round in his own ward, and then offer up a prayer for his own soul. But, Mr. Chairman, this is no boy's play; this is no foolish appeal. I was aware that some gentleman would get up here and oppose this order because I offered it. If it is out of time and place, the public will say so. Let us pass it tonight and see what the public will say. Poverty is not a crime, but we all know that the natural tendency of poverty is to crime, though not necessarily so. That is our experience in this city for the last few years. No one can question the propriety of this thing, and I am astonished that a gentleman of such profound knowledge should oppose it, that he should ask to have it lie over for a week.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I don't suppose the gentleman refers to me when he refers to "a gentleman of such profound knowledge." I have not opposed the order. I merely said he had made a careful study of the subject before offering the order. I say that before he expects people to vote on his order he ought to have given them time to find out something more than his say-so. I don't intend to vote on any subject on the say-so of one man, and I shall vote against the final passage of this order tonight. If he calls that opposition he may think so.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—When I think that we appropriate fifteen thousand dollars to celebrate the Fourth of July, and twenty-eight hundred dollars to be spent on the Common, for music for the benefit of the poor, and when it is asked that three thousand five hundred dollars more or less shall be given in aid of the poor—to help maintain their very lives—I am astonished that anybody should rise here and oppose the passage of this order tonight. Here is a snow storm upon us; men and women are suffering for raiment and food this very hour. If that is n't reason enough to stir us up, when we know it is true, and when people are daily hovering around this City Hall asking for food and for employment, and when some of them have offered their services for thirty cents per day, and can't get that even, it is time we set aside all little notions and enter upon the subject at once.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—I take it, Mr. President, there is no one here who doubts there is poverty about us, or that it is likely to increase as the season progresses, or that any of us would grudge the small pittance that is asked for the deserving poor. But I have seen it stated that the police, having the distribution of this particular form of charity, have said that it has been very much abused heretofore. Now, I should like to ask any gentleman here who knows the facts, whether that is the case, whether that is the opinion of the police or not. They are competent to know, and if the deserving poor have been shut out and great imposition has been practised in the furnishing of this food, we will not do what the gentleman's order proposes to do. I hope the passage of the order will not be pressed tonight, and I should like to know the opinion of the distributors.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—The gentleman has just expressed opinions which I have entertained. I have heard that charitable organizations express disapproval of the charity of the city for the reason that the deserving poor don't obtain as much as those who are not deserving. Therefore I don't see why the gentleman from Ward 5 should wish to press the order tonight. I have seen this opinion expressed, not only by the police but by charitable organizations, and they have expressed doubts of the propriety of this method of this charitable distribution by the city. If it is the right thing to do, and if the gentleman will let it lie over for a week that we may ascertain, I should be glad to vote for the order. But as it stands now, it is my impression that this is n't the best thing to do.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—I am inclined to favor the proposition of the gentleman from Ward 5, but would like a little more time to look into the subject and learn how it has worked heretofore. I therefore move that it be specially assigned for half-past eight o'clock next Thursday evening.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I can answer the question raised by the gentlemen on my right. I have called upon the Chief-of-Police today and had a long consultation with him, and he approves of the order in the most hearty manner. I read to him the order which I have offered, and it met his hearty approval. He said there was no better way in his judgment, and none so good as that. There were witnesses present when I was talking with him, and I can assure the gentleman upon my honor as a member of this Council, that if the gentleman will call upon the Chief he will state the same thing to him. The Chief showed me his books kept during the consecutive years of the distribution, and from him I obtained all these figures. While I was talking with him in came those ladies, and the Chief, after hearing their story, turned them over to me; so I don't think I need say anything more upon this subject. I think I have stated the exact facts, and as my words will go upon record, if I am not right I hope I shall be disapproved, and if I am not right I will withdraw the order.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The gentleman says he will withdraw the order. I would like to know what good that would do after it has been passed. Our interest here is to see that the city's money is not wasted, and therefore I renew the motion of the gentleman to specially assign for next Thursday evening.

Mr. Shaw called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I pretend to know something of this soup business, having had the honor about six or seven years ago to introduce an order of this kind into the Council. Then it was made a joint special committee and continued so until within two years, and since that time it has been in the hands of the Committee on Police of the Board of Aldermen. When the change was made I did n't like it. I think the order should receive the vote of this Council, and be disposed of tonight.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I have seen the working of this soup business at Station Three, and I can't see where there is any chance for any one to abuse the institution, when it is carried on in the Station House. They open the door at twelve o'clock; whoever comes in signs his name, or, if it be the head of a family, he signs for them all, and if they are given one or two quarts of soup they are credited with it on the books. A great many come in, and if the soup costs only four cents a quart, it can't do a great deal of harm for a few unworthy people to get a few quarts. I will give enough to pay for forty quarts myself, for any one travelling through the city—I hope the order will pass tonight.

The vote on postponing and specially assigning for next Thursday evening, was lost—yeas 12, nays 32, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Blackmar, Brackett, Burditt, Cudworth, Darrow, Denny, Flatley, Hine, Loring, Page, Perkins, Pickering—12.

Nays—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Bleiler, Boardman, Burt, Caton, Collins, Dacey, Davis, Dean, Edwards, Flynn, Lamb, McCue, McKenney, Morse, Pease, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Tower, Traub, Upham, Warren, Wells, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward—32.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Anderson, Barnes, Bicknell, Bowles, Brennan, Doherty, Hall, Harrington, Holmes, Hughes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Madden, Mahan, Marston, Martin, Thacher—18.

Mr. Shaw moved the vote on giving the order a second reading be taken by yeas and nays. Lost.

The order was passed to a second reading and on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 the rules were suspended and the order was passed.

ADJOURNMENT FOR THANKSGIVING.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 offered an order, that when the Council adjourn it be to Friday evening, 28th inst., explaining that he understood many members wished to go out of the city, and he thought more gentlemen would be accommodated by making it Friday evening.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved to amend by substituting Wednesday for Friday.

Mr. Dacey accepted the amendment.

On motion of Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 the order was amended by inserting Tuesday, and as amended was passed.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances consider and report upon the expediency of so amending the existing ordinances of the city relating to the attendance of children at school and "truants" that they shall better conform to recent legislation upon this subject.

Referred to Committee on Ordinances, on motion of Mr. Blackmar.

WATER FOR BROOKLINE.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 called up the special assignment for half-past eight o'clock, being the order to allow the Water Board to supply the town of Brookline with water, under certain conditions, the question being on giving the order a second reading.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—It could hardly be expected that I should urge the passage of this order very strongly after the people who sent me here have been denied the same privilege that is now proposed to give to Brookline. But I will simply state the reasons why the order is here. The town of Brookline has applied for the privilege, and the argument used is that that town is about to make an outlay of five hundred thousand dollars or more in taking water from Charles River, and that in all probability Boston would have to assume the expense, in case Brookline should be annexed. This was the idea held out to the Committee on Water, and therefore they reported this order simply to head off that outlay by the town of Brookline. I hardly see the force of this argument. If Brookline wants to come into Boston it will, to my mind, because she wants a supply of Cochituate water. Now if they get the water they probably will not want to come into the city. I have stated this matter plainly and fairly, but cannot see my way clearly to vote for the order, in view of the opinions of residents of the part of the city which sent me here.

Mr. Adams of Ward 14—I believe it is perfectly right and proper for the city to sell all the water she can spare, but self preservation is the first law of nature, and it is so in this case. The first question is whether the city of Boston has got water to sell to her neighbors. I don't believe she has if all the reports we have heard are true. The conduit from Lake Cochituate to the reservoirs has been under heavy pressure and has been continually lowering. I can't see how Brookline is going to incur so much expense if she takes water from Charles River. They will have to lay their pipes, the debt for which will be funded, and Boston will have to assume it if Brookline is annexed, and when the time comes I think the city of Boston will need all the motive power it can get. I am glad to hear the gentleman from East Boston speak as he does. We all know that East Boston has soured on the Mystic.

The order was refused a second reading.

On motion of Mr. Caton of Ward 11, the Council adjourned to Tuesday evening next, at 7½ o'clock.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to pay the proprietors of the Social Law Library $1000, as provided by law. Passed.

Order for change in certain sewer assessments on Summer street. Passed.

Orders to assess and collect certain assessments for sewers in Warren street, Washington street, and East street. Passed.

The majority and minority reports, with orders for the mayor to petition the next Legislature for the annexation of portions of Brookline to this city, were considered.

Alderman Quincy—The views of the majority in this matter were substantially these. We have an undoubted right to go to the Legislature and ask for a way to any part of the city. We have what is called at law, "a way of necessity," and the majority thought it would be a mistake to take advantage of such a right and ask a slice of a town that has voted against annexation. It was thought better to stand upon our legal rights, and we so worded the order that the inhabitants of Brookline would come up favoring the annexation of a larger portion of the town than we asked for. The majority were strongly of the opinion that we had better ask definitely for what the Legislature could not very well refuse to grant.

Alderman Clark—It seems to me that we might just as well go to the Legislature and ask it to give just the part of Brookline it is necessary to have. In my opinion the majority of the citizens desire the annexation of Brookline from the line of Beacon street to the reservoir. We already maintain, at a large expense, a roadway around the reservoir, and there is no reason why we should not have annexed to the city the whole territory bounded by Beacon street. It is contemplated to widen Beacon street, some day, from seventy to a hundred feet. If we go and ask for what we want we shall probably get it. We want Brookline, from Beacon street to the reservoir; so let us go to the Legislature and ask for it. I move that the report of the minority be substituted for that of the majority.

The motion was lost by a rising vote—3 for, 7 against.

The question recurred on the passage of the order of the majority.

Alderman Power—If I understand the order offered by the majority, it does not cut us off from obtaining the whole of Brookline if that is deemed expedient or we can take it.

Alderman Quiney—The idea was not to cut us off from what would be deemed necessary. There has been served upon us already a notice of a petition of inhabitants of Brookline for a change in the boundary line between Boston and Brookline; but what they ask for I do not know. We certainly ought to be in a position to take what the Legislature will give us.

The majority order was passed.

SUFFOLK-COUNTY JAIL.

A requisition was received from the Sheriff of Suffolk County for the expenses of the county jail for the month ending December 1, amounting to $1759 28, which being approved by the Auditor, was ordered paid.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions were referred in concurrence.

Order for Committee on Ordinances to report on expediency of amending the Truant Ordinances. Referred to Committee on Ordinances.

Order to expend $200 for repairs and furniture in armory of headquarters of Ninth Infantry. Passed—Yeas 12, nays 0.

Order to allow Captain Dunn, late Captain of Company B, Ninth Infantry, $48 46, for rent of armory. Passed—Yeas 12, nays 0.

Order to expend $600 for repairs and furniture on armory of Company A, First Battalion of Light Artillery. Passed—Yeas 12, nays 0.

Report "leave to withdraw" on petition of Company E, First Battalion of Infantry for a new armory; also an order to discontinue the rent of armory of said company in Bowdoin square after November 18, 1873. Report accepted and order passed.

Request of Committee on Common, etc., for an additional appropriation of $12,000. [City Document No. 126.] Referred to Committee on Finance.

SOUP HOUSES FOR THE POOR.

The following communications were read:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL, }
BOSTON, Nov. 24, 1873.

To the Honorable the City Council: Gentlemen—I have the honor to transmit herewith a communication from the Board of Overseers of the Poor in reply to certain inquiries which I made on the 18th instant, in relation to the relief of the poor in this city during the coming winter.

Since the opinion of the Board was asked upon the expediency of distributing soup from the police stations, I have conferred with the City Solicitor upon the subject, and have been informed by him that the City Council has no authority to appropriate money for such a purpose.

It is proper that I should state that the inquiries were made and the opinion of the Solicitor obtained before any action had been taken by your honorable body; otherwise I should not presume to communicate with you upon the subject at this time.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL, }
BOSTON, Nov. 18, 1873.

Hon. F. W. Lincoln, President Board of Overseers of the Poor: Dear Sir—In view of the distress which is likely to be produced among the laboring classes during the coming winter, caused by the recent financial disturbances in other sections of the country, I desire to obtain the opinion of the Board of Overseers as to the propriety of taking any official action at this time to meet the extraordinary demands which may be made upon the city for temporary aid.

If any assistance is desired in obtaining information in regard to the number of persons dependent upon their daily earnings who are likely to be thrown out of employment in consequence of this unexpected interruption of business, the Chief of Police will cheerfully furnish it.

I am aware that it is an extremely difficult and delicate matter for the Government to depart from established methods in providing relief for the destitute without increasing the very evil which it is endeavoring to cure. In times of general distress, however, a rigid adherence to the somewhat severe requirements of the laws relating to settlements might work a hardship to the deserving poor. Better that some unworthy persons should be aided than that one worthy person should be allowed to suffer. I have no doubt that the members of your board, most of whom have had a long experience in this charitable work, will be able to devise a system which, while meeting the demands of the times, will be free from the evil consequences which would result from a careless or indiscriminate use of the public funds for the benefit of any person who claimed to be in distress.

It is with a view to avoid hasty action by and by on the part of the Government that I apply to you to make an examination of this matter in advance of the actual demands upon us for extra assistance, so that if any enlargement of the present channels of relief is needed, it may be made with a due regard to the public welfare. In this connection, I should be pleased to have the opinion of the board upon the expediency of continuing the practice which has been pursued for several years past, of furnishing soup from the police stations to a certain class of poor persons. I have not satisfied myself that the City Council has authority to appropriate money for such a purpose; but I desire your opinion on the supposition that the Government has the authority.

I am, with great respect,

HENRY L. PIERCE,
Mayor.

OFFICE OF THE OVERSEERS OF THE POOR, }
BOSTON, Nov. 22, 1873.

To His Honor Henry L. Pierce, Mayor of Boston: Dear Sir—At a special meeting of the Overseers of the Poor, held this day, your communication of the 18th inst., in regard to the relief of the poor the present winter, was laid before them. They gratefully acknowledge that concern for this class of our people which prompted you to address us on the subject, as well as that regard to those interests of a public character evinced by your solicitude that any measure adopted should be timely and judicious in its nature.

The result of the deliberations of the board are embodied in two resolutions in answer to the two objects of inquiry submitted to our consideration. In transmitting them to you I was authorized to make such further comments upon the general subject as might occur to my own mind as to the experience of myself, or that of my associates, in the special work delegated to us by the City Council.

The mere distribution of charity, especially if the means are not furnished from our own pockets, seems to be a simple affair, but when it is considered that the method of its administration is pregnant for weal or woe to the community of which we form a part, it becomes a more serious matter and cannot be hastily discussed in a few words necessarily limited by the nature of this communication. The moment that any individual receives aid at the public charge, that moment that individual's relation to society is changed, and when by the aggregation of numbers those individuals become a large class, they become an important element in the social state, and any event which has a tendency to their increase is to be deprecated. The great fire of November of the last year is to be deplored for the large amount of property destroyed, and the numbers thrown suddenly out of employment, but not the least of its evils was the opportunity furnished to many persons for the first time to appeal to the public for assistance. They were justified under the circumstances, and even invited to make such a claim, and generous means were placed by our citizens to respond to such calls, but as another winter is approaching, we are already observing the indications that a portion of the same number are again at the door of our charitable institutions begging for support. The recent financial panic coming at a similar period of the year, again awakens apprehension, and its effects should be met, not only with a benevolent spirit, but in a manner which, while gently relieving the necessities of the real sufferers, will not encourage the importunities of the thriftless and improvident.

The functions of the Board of Overseers of the Poor, as you are aware, are regulated by the statute laws of the Commonwealth, and to the extent of their violation by our officers we are recreant to our duties and oaths of office. In some particulars we wish those laws could be amended, but living as we do in a city abounding in charitable organizations, whose treasuries are furnished by the more affluent of our citizens, the cases we cannot legally relieve are succored by them, so that no needy individual of any class has occasion to suffer when his wants are properly made known. We have no doubt that the calls upon these societies will be unusually urgent the present season, and we trust that those generous benefactors who are in the habit of making them the almoners of their bounty will respond to their appeals, so that they will be supplied with all the funds which may be necessary.

The second object of your inquiry, the opinion of the board as to the expediency of continuing the policy of distributing soup from the police stations, was considered, and a resolution adopted disapproving of the measure.

While the first resolutions was passed with unanimous consent, it is but fair that I should inform you that two gentlemen of the board dissented from the opinion of their associates, and voted against this resolution. While these gentlemen agreed with nearly all who have had experience in charitable work, that as a permanent policy the distribution of soup in this manner is inexpedient, yet they felt that the exigencies of the coming winter may be of such a character as will justify its continuance for another year.

Boston has a deservedly high reputation outside of its own limits for its benevolent spirit. It has attained this, not by a prodigal and lavish expenditure of large appropriations, doling out the alms in a lax and loose manner, but by the establishment of a method and system, which, while relieving real want, represses mendicancy. The establishment of soup houses, or turning the police stations into them a few years since, was regarded by nearly all conversant with the subject as a doubtful expedient for relieving the poor; the objections are obvious, and need not be commented on at this time.

Employment for the able-bodied is better charity than almsgiving, and although it is not the province of municipalities to furnish it for the people, yet incidentally some enterprises of a public nature might be prosecuted even out of season, to be supplemented by men of capital engaging in new ventures for their own profit, as well as for the benefit of the laboring classes.

It is the opinion of some of our most sagacious business men that we have already passed the period of our most severe commercial depression, and that the prospects are brightening for a return to our usual prosperity. If this hope is fallacious and will not be speedily realized, I can assure you that our board will endeavor to meet, to the best of their ability, the new emergencies as they arise, and we have no doubt that the same spirit will animate the more private charitable organizations not under municipal control.

There are occasionally cases, from their peculiar circumstances unknown to our visitors, coming to the knowledge of the police, of which we should be promptly notified at our office. There are other cases of extreme destitution in the outskirts of the city, which require immediate and temporary relief, for which arrangements have recently been made with the Chief, in concurrence with our board.

I remain, dear sir,

Yours, very truly,

F. W. LINCOLN, Chairman.

OFFICE OF THE OVERSEERS OF THE POOR, }
BOSTON, Nov. 22, 1873.

At a special meeting of the Overseers of the Poor, held at their office Saturday, Nov. 22, 1873, a communication from his Honor the Mayor was laid before them, and, after a full consideration of the same, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That as present advised, there is no unusual exigency existing, growing out of the commercial panic, to require any new organization or channel for the relief of the destitute the coming winter. The city is well covered by the Overseers of the Poor and the existing charitable organizations for ministering to the necessities of the needy. While there is some apprehension that, owing to the stagnation in business and industrial pursuits, the calls may be more numerous than in former years, yet the present organizations can accomplish the work if the means are placed at their disposal for this purpose. If the appropriation voted by the City Council to be expended legally by this board should become exhausted, the knowledge of the fact will be communicated, and another appropriation will be called for at the proper time, while an appeal to the more affluent and benevolent of our citizens, we have no doubt, will meet with a hearty response if the funds of the more private charitable associations should become depleted from the same cause. The knowledge of a large fund to be devoted to charitable objects will, we fear, exert a demoralizing influence upon the community. It will cause a large influx of the improvident of other places to make this city their residence the coming winter, and encourage the same class among ourselves to be less frugal with their means and less reliant upon their own resources, looking, as they naturally would, to the public for support. There is a large class of the really unfortunate, become destitute by sickness or the want of employment, who claim our sympathy, and whose wants will be relieved with that consideration and tenderness which their merits deserve; but there is another class of the idle and dissolute in our large city who take advantage of every source of supply, whose demands should be ignored and utterly rejected.

While it is the duty of every individual, so far as his heart prompts and his pecuniary means will justify, to relieve the necessities of those thrown more immediately about him, and with whose circumstances he is personally acquainted, and this number may be increased in every circle the approaching season; yet we cannot but believe that, after these cases are met, there will be abundance of means at the disposal of the more public channels of charity for the relief of those who have no friends to whom to appeal, and whose necessities must be met by other than private sources.

Entertaining these views, the board are of the opinion that at this time no official action is required of the City Government to meet present or future wants.

Resolved, That the practice of distributing soup from the police stations, in the opinion of this board, is unwise and injudicious, tending to aggravate and increase the evil it designs to alleviate.

A true copy—Attest: JOHN PRATT, Secretary.

The communications were placed on file.

Subsequently the order for appointment of a joint committee to provide, under direction of the Chief-of-Police, a free distribution of soup, the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals, which had been passed by the Common Council, came up for consideration in the regular course of business.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the order was laid upon the table and the communications from the Mayor and the Overseers of the Poor were taken from file and ordered sent to the other branch. Later in the session the order was taken from the table on motion of Alderman Sayward, who said—

I called up this order again because I can't conceive what is the object of laying this matter on the table and sending the communication to the City Council. It is only a matter of concurrence. Gentlemen's minds must be made up on this question, as well now as at any other time. I hope we shall concur with the Council in the passage of the order.

Alderman Clark—My object was to bring it up again this afternoon, or to lay it over for one week only. I have been in favor of furnishing the soup for the poor as it has been done by the police for some years, and have thought it was an excellent arrangement. I supposed it did a great deal of good. The money has been judiciously expended, and no sum of money laid out by the City Government has been of greater benefit to the poor than this. I have always understood from the Chief-of-Police and the police of the different stations that it was a means of furnishing food for a great many poor people who might otherwise have suffered, but having received a lengthy communication from the Overseers of the Poor, in which they deprecate the manner in which this soup has been furnished by the police, I wish to have time to read the communication, and also to ascertain whether they propose to make arrangements for conducting this business, which they believe to be injudicious when done by the police. I did not propose to have the order lie on the table indefinitely, but merely for one week. If it is illegal, I certainly don't wish to vote for an illegal measure, but I have always supposed it was a judicious appropriation and that it was judiciously used. I still have that feeling. I do not wish to trespass upon the duties of the Board of Charities, but if it is illegal, it has been so this many years. I do not wish to press this matter today, but I am in favor of having this soup distributed either by the Police Committee or by the Overseers of the Poor. I am ready, if the Board think it advisable, to concur with the Council tonight. It is a good thing, and certainly the necessity of providing for the poor is imperative. Probably we have not had a winter in which there has been so much suffering as there will be in this one coming. I trust we shall see the necessity of doing something to relieve their wants, and I know of nothing more judicious than to spend two or three thousand dollars, as has been done in years past. Whether it is necessary to have the Joint Special Committee I don't know. The work has generally been done by the Committee on Police.

Alderman Sayward—I am not particular about what committee this shall go to. I can't see what can be the object of taking the communication of the Overseers of the Poor from file and letting the whole thing lie over.

Alderman Clark—I should be in favor of having the communication printed. I should like to read it over carefully myself.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the order was laid on the table.

Alderman Clark moved that the vote to send the communication of the Mayor and Board of Overseers of the Poor to the other branch be reconsidered.

Alderman Gaffield—It strikes me that it ought to be sent officially to the other board. It is a very important matter. The charge of the poor is given to the Overseers of the Poor. They ought to know what is best. They have decided that it is illegal. The City Solicitor is also understood to have decided that this is an illegal measure.

Alderman Clark—I would like to know whether the communication must not be sent to the Council, whether we wish to send it or not.

Alderman Sayward—I can't see how it affects the matter by sending the communication to the Council. The proper way is to keep it here and settle whether we will concur with the Council or not.

The motion to reconsider was carried.

Alderman Clark moved that the communication be laid on the table to be printed.

Alderman Power—I don't see the necessity of printing the document; the money so spent had better be given to furnish the soup. It is a plainly written document, and any gentleman can read it if he wishes to.

Alderman Gibson—I fully agree with the gentleman from Ward 12, and hope the communication will not be printed.

Alderman Power—I think it is a useless expense. It has got to be too common a practice here to have documents printed. As to the matter being illegal, I don't know how that may be; but if it is, I don't see how it can be any more so than the voting of two thousand five hundred dollars last year for music. If we voted for that I think we certainly can overlook little legal quibbles in this matter.

Alderman Stebbins—We have a Joint Committee on the Overseers of the Poor. I think this communication should be referred to them. If, on consultation with the Overseers of the Poor, it is deemed best to establish soup houses in the city it can be done legally.

Alderman Power—I agree with the gentleman, that if the object can be reached in a legal manner we ought by all means to reach it in that way.

The motion to lay the communication on the table to be printed was lost.

Alderman Stebbins moved to refer the communication to the Committee on Overseers of the Poor with instructions to consider the expediency of establishing soup houses for the poor.

Alderman Clark suggested that the committee be instructed to make arrangements for the distribution of soup for the poor.

Alderman Hulbert—I don't quite like the way this thing stands. If we can't do it legally why do anything more about it?

Alderman Stebbins—I suppose it is understood that the Legislature confers power upon the Overseers of the Poor to do this very work. They are the agents of the city, and it is for this very reason that the order is declared illegal. I now move that the communication be referred to the Committee on Overseers of the Poor, with instructions to consider the expediency of establishing, by the Overseers of the Poor, of proper places throughout the city for furnishing soup, or other provisions, for the poor of the city.

The motion was carried.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS.

Alderman Gibson, from the Joint Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, to whom was referred the appointment by his Honor the Mayor of Oliver L. Shaw to the office of Inspector of Buildings, reported that he is in every way qualified to fill the position, and recommended that the appointment be confirmed.

It was so ordered.

THE PUBLIC PARK QUESTION.

At five o'clock the Board took up the special assignment, viz., the order appointing Messrs. Shaw, Perkins, Flynn, Prescott and Boardman, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, a Committee on "Public Works," with directions to consider the expediency of providing for the establishment of one or more public parks within this city.

Alderman Emery—I am not opposed to the city having a proper public park, or parks, and I presume that the other gentlemen of this Board are in favor of having a proper park, but I think that at this late day, at this late season, it is an improper time to appoint a committee for the selection of such a park. I think that nothing can be done at this late season unless it be to procure legislation by which proper lands can be taken, and I propose to move as a substitute for the order under consideration the following, which, I think, will make suitable provision for covering that point:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court at its next session for the passage of an act authorizing the City Council of Boston, or commissioners appointed by the Mayor or the City Council, to purchase or otherwise take lands in Boston or its vicinity for the purpose of laying out one large park or several small parks for the benefit of the people.

Alderman Hulbert—The order that was before the Board and the order which it is proposed to substitute therefor introduce a subject which I have thought should, for the present at least, lie undisturbed. I cannot but regard its being brought forward at the present time as inopportune and unwise, and I have, since joining in the request that this order be laid over for one week, given it such thought as I was able, though not so much as I would like, and I will state the reasons why I regard this thing as inopportune and ill considered.

The gentleman who originated the order, in his remarks at its introduction into the other branch assumed (I use his own words) "that public opinion has reached the point of making arrangements for the laying out of a public park, and to almost demand of the City Government that action should be taken in the matter." If this is really so, it is high time that some of us should give way to others who can more readily and correctly understand what the popular will is. For myself, I shall have to admit that I am a "little hard of hearing." Before alluding to what is the subject matter of the order, I beg to refer to its details, as named therein, viz., the appointment of a Joint Special Committee from the present Council to consider and report, but when, and to what body such a report is to be made, is not defined. It may be replied that this committee will report in due course, as other committees do. Let us see. Within a short month the present City Council will cease to be. Is it to be supposed that any committee appointed for the service required can make the needed investigation, and be able to report to the Council that created the committee? I say it cannot.

The originator of the order must, I think, have contemplated the existence of this committee to be continued beyond the present year, and the report to be made to some future Government. Another provision of the order is that "this committee be called the Committee on Public Works." Rather of a high-sounding title for a simple special committee of inquiry to hear. This may indeed mean little. I am just suspicious enough to fear that it may intend much. One thing is certain, the mover of the order intended that whatever was the work in hand, the committee should bear no common name and title, but one implying large responsibilities. I cannot but think that it is intended that this committee shall be considered as an important one in the public mind, and that its endeavors will be quite prolonged. As I read the order, the real origin, design and scope of it are not at all clear to my mind. The order itself, as prepared, does not strike me pleasantly, I must say. The originator of it, I suppose, does not expect that the creating of this committee is to be without expense to the city. These special committees are at times quite expensive, and I have the impression that if this committee should be appointed it will result in our worthy Auditor being called to make another of his oft-repeated donations to the "City's Parker Memorial Fund."

I will now refer to that which is the main object of the order, viz., the taking steps to inaugurate a scheme for a large, elaborate and costly public park, one to compare favorably with those which some of the largest cities of the country have provided. One gentleman, in the other branch, remarking upon the order, stated that "what is proposed is an inquiry merely, and can do no harm." I do not so regard it. I think the inquiry officially and formerly instituted implies too much to be harmless, if no subsequent steps for the realization of the scheme are contemplated. I shall try to show that it is most unwise to move, now, in the thing at all. To sustain the position I feel called upon to take on this question, it is not needful or pertinent to array myself against such a scheme under any circumstances. I do no such thing. I refer to the present duty of the city as to it. I think that such a thing as this is one, which, like many things to a private individual, is well enough if it can be afforded. It cannot be properly classed in the same category of the city's needs as a water supply, street extensions and widenings, sewerage, fire apparatus, bridges, school and other needed public buildings, and the like. When these are duly provided for, and the financial condition then is such as to warrant an expenditure which is large and mainly for ornamental and recreating purposes, then is a time for such a matter as the one before us to come up.

To satisfy myself as to what position it is my duty to talk as to the question, I have sought to ascertain as far as I am able, what the actual situation of the city is—both as to what has been done, and what is to be done. I see not how I could properly act in this matter involving an expenditure in the future of such magnitude, without getting at the true position of the city, as I have stated. That I may be the better understood, I ask the indulgence of the Board—in my giving here a condensed statement of such data and information as I have obtained—for my own guidance. That the position may be the better appreciated, I will refer briefly to the condition of the city, at dates prior to the present. I find the total funded debt ten years ago, viz., in May, 1863, was $10,336,000.

Unfunded.....	184,000
Total.....	$10,520,000
Less means for the redemption of same.....	1,190,000

Net debt.....	$9,330,000
In May, 1863, the total debt was.....	14,147,000
Less means for its redemption.....	5,200,000

Net debt.....	$8,947,000
In May, 1873, the total debt was.....	$31,841,000
Less means for its redemption.....	13,927,000

Net debt.....	$17,814,000
At the present time the debt is as follows:
Funded.....	$35,513,000
Amount authorized but unfunded yet.....	3,537,000

Total.....	$39,050,000
Add to this the amount of orders for loans now before the City Council.....	444,000
The sum needed to complete the work in the burnt district, the extension of Washington street, and the widening of Washington and Essex streets, not less than.....	800,000

Making a total of.....	$40,294,000
Deduct means for the redemption of the debt..	14,114,000

Net debt today.....$25,180,000

This refers to what has been already undertaken by the city, but it does not give at all the real situation of affairs as they exist, and as they should be viewed by us today. We must look further, and see what there is that the city is likely to be called upon to undertake in the near future, much of which there is urgent demand for immediately commencing.

I therefore beg to call your attention to such items under the head of "future undertakings" as come to my mind, such as are being considered by and urged upon the Government at the present time:

First, the additional and adequate supply of water, which is indispensable and will cost not less than.....	$7,000,000 00
Extra pipes and labor for extending and enlarging the present supply, beside what has been appropriated for the next year.....	250,000 00
A new court house and site, not less than...	1,250,000 00
Bridges over railroads on West Chester park, as extended.....	125,000 00
Bridges over Boston & Albany Railroad on Beacon street and Brookline avenue, including grade damages, say.....	400,000 00
Bridges over Longwood avenue and Neponset River.....	100,000 00
Building of Eastern avenue, including the drawbridge, which must be undertaken at once, according to an agreement made, all to cost not less than.....	2,000,000 00
Streets, the widening and extension of which are before the city for consideration, and all of which claim to have merit, and are pressed upon the city to undertake, and involving an expenditure not less than.....	7,000,000 00

I do not give details of this estimate, as I should not leave this hall without having a number of streets suggested to me as being overlooked, which I have not dared to include in the above
Public buildings, from.....800,000 00 to 1,000,000 00
In the foregoing I do not include any expenditures to be made on account of or in the recently annexed territory.

I may state here, however, that the increase to the debt of the city, by its assuming the debts of Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton, is $3,500,000. What will be required for the wants of these sections the Board can judge.

The foregoing, if undertaken, will increase the net debt of the city, at a near day, to a sum not less than fifty millions of dollars, and all this without a public park or many other things which I might name as among the possible wants of the city. As the net debt stands today, and with more favorable rates of interest than can be expected to obtain in the loans for the future necessities of the city, the amount of annual interest to be paid is $2,400,000. The amount to be added annually to the Sinking Fund on account of the above debt is $600,000, making a total of $3,000,000, which must be included in the annual tax assessment on account of the existing debt. By the increased indebtedness to arise in the immediate future—if what is contemplated is carried out—soon there will need be a further amount to be added to the sum of annual taxation for interest, etc., of not far from $2,500,000, making an aggregate to be raised annually in the tax assessments of fully five and a half millions, and this in addition to the current and rapidly increasing ordinary expense of the city.

In 1863, the total current ordinary expenses of the city were.....	$1,990,000
State tax.....	573,000
Other and extra expenses.....	512,000
Total.....	$3,080,000
Add War Expenses Special, of which $900,000 were for recruiting.....	1,140,000

Total.....$4,220,000
About three-fourths of what the annual interest and Sinking fund is soon to be, I fear. Why, in 1863, the city paid the enormous sum of $93,000 for interest alone.

How does that appear today? How does the city stand as to the ordinary current expenses for time to come? By reason of the "great fire" the appropriations made for the current year were made at the lowest point possible, and at a point where it will be impossible to keep them hereafter. I venture to state that the appropriations to be made by the next Government will be an excess over the present of $800,000 to $1,000,000. What is to be the taxation the next year with this addition to current expenses and the increase in interest, etc.?

If, in the foregoing, I have considered the situation in any other than a plain, fair and candid manner, I shall hope to be so told. I am no croaker, and I have no respect for a man who is. I am no professional watch-dog, pledged to growl at any and every approach to the treasury. I am not unmindful, but quite the reverse, of the future growth, wants and importance of this city. I must confess that it is not without solicitude that I look to the future in our history. Various causes have existed to precipitate upon us, rapidly increasing and immensely large expenditures. The citizens at large do not realize what the facts really are. If they did there would be a wide felt anxiety as to what the policy would be that should prevail at City Hall in the coming year and years. We have a way of deceiving ourselves as to the city finances. We do not meet the annual current and ordinary expenses. Everything that can be pushed off for the future to provide for is so done. If the city builds a small bridge the money for it is borrowed. If we build an engine house or hose-carriage house a loan is made for the expense. So when we erect a schoolhouse, the funds are borrowed. Anything that cannot by any manner of means be made to appear as an unmistakable current expense is made a cause for a loan, and it is to the discredit of the city that it is so. Now I claim that no true citizen will for a moment assent to a policy being adopted which will tarnish or harm the good credit of Boston. It has been the credit of all the country—none better—scarce any as good. Strong and good as it has been it may be injured as easily as female purity, even a breath of suspicion is enough. By the policy which is being pursued the city is in the market continually a borrower. It is unwise. We have no business to borrow for many of the things we do. They should be paid for when procured or else not have them.

Moneyed men are looking on to see what the policy of the city is to be for time to come. The city has had criticisms the current year, not at all creditable, and yet they were not undeserved. I see no way but we must go on and increase to an extent the debt in time to come; but it should be done only for the most imperative demands of the pressing needs of the city. For instance, no delay should be had in securing a full water supply. All will justify the city in this. There are other plain needs. Let these be carefully considered, and such only adopted as it is in good judgment to undertake. I submit, then, if the present there is any time to take up the subject of a large public park? I trow not. Why, situated as we are, we should lose our self respect to enter upon such a thing now, and we shall certainly lose the confidence of men whose good opinion we need in the proper working of our finances. It is all well to speak of our future, and plan for it; but do not present to me a future with such a debt as some would create by the projects brought forward. Some urge that now is the time to start in the thing because land may be had at a less cost now than at a future date. Suppose it is so. Suppose a man at the Highlands who has a pleasant and comfortable home, who is prosecuting a fairly prosperous business, and yet whose house is well mortgaged, whose capital in business is largely borrowed, and who does not even build a hencoop without making a special loan to meet the expense, should pass by the magnificent grounds and mansion of our esteemed citizen, Horatio Harris Gore, and think it would be a fine thing for himself to have, and should set about buying it, all on a credit mind you. And now because it can be bought less than it can years hence, when possibly he may come to be able to have such an estate. Just as proper for the city now to start out for a park, because a park is a fine thing to have, and Chicago and New York each have one. Our system of borrowing for all extra things, leads to an increased lavish and unwarranted expenditure. Matters have been undertaken this current year just because a loan, instead of the regular appropriations, paid the bills. It is all money.

A park such as is contemplated will cost millions to create, and thousands upon thousands for annual support and establishment; and no income to come back, as a sinking fund. We, as I view it, have come to a point when the policy of the city should be defined, and changed so far as to have it in a line which is commendable to those who should take judgment upon it. We cannot ignore the good opinion of the moneyed world. No shrewder minds are to be found than the men who stand at the head source of capital. Let the city, then, inaugurate a system of judicious expenditure—ever regarding her situation—foregoing the undertaking many very desirable things—desirable to be done. If the city had not the means properly at hand to do it. The city cannot at once, nor for years to come, do all that is proper or needful. I would not do much that is now under consideration, and which, I fear, may be undertaken. Cities had better wait, as private individuals do, having some regard to ways and means. How will such a scheme as this great public park be regarded by those sturdy and honored men who guard the treasury, the City Treasurer and City Auditor? Imagine the great committee—well coated and muffled, ready for December blasts—as starting off in procession, down the wide staircase of this hall, they move on for their tour of inspection (so appropriate is their mission, to the season). See them in the main hall—doors open on either side—and that unimpassioned Treasurer and fierce-visaged Auditor standing in the doorways to view and bless the parting train. What a blessing. The parties had better not hear it. I therefore urge that this is no time even to talk about a public park. We cannot afford it. When we can—then, buy it—cost what it may. An ill-afforded luxury is dear at any price. But I go further, and assert that, today, Boston has, for all the uses of her people, a park, better, more easy and cheap of access—more enjoyable when reached than any city in this country. New York had no such facilities as we possess. Any of our citizens can reach pure air, open country, beautiful landscape, quiet nooks and pleasant lakes easier and quicker than the citizens of New York can their Central Park. Central Park will never be so beautiful and satisfactory to the general eye as are our own beautiful suburbs. The time may come when we shall require a park as is proposed, but the time is not now. I hope the general public will come to the rescue and require that the City Council shall make a decided halt and a partial turn-about in the expenditures. It should occur at once. It is going to require the most careful management to shape our finances so as to hold unharmed the city's credit.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, in due time I shall move that this whole subject be indefinitely postponed.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the whole subject was laid on the table for one week.

EASTERN AVENUE BRIDGE.

Alderman Clark submitted a communication from Hon. Josiah Quincy, chairman of the Board of Harbor Commissioners, transmitting a vote of that board approving of the location of Eastern Avenue and the bridge over Fort Point Channel, in conformity with the recommendation of the Joint Committee on Streets of the City Council. The board hope that the city will soon take decisive measures for the construction of said bridge. Accompanying the vote of the Harbor Commissioners is a vote of the Executive Council of the Commonwealth, passed November 21st inst., approving said location.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the communication was referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

BOSTON AND ALBANY, & COT.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, to whom was referred the petition of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company for the Board to prescribe the limits in which land may be taken for depot and station purposes, reported the following order of notice:

Whereas, The Boston & Albany Railroad Company hath presented to this Board a petition, praying said Board to prescribe the limits within which said Boston & Albany Railroad Company may take, for depot and station purposes, lands and materials in the city of Boston, in the county of Suffolk, situate within the limits described as follows, viz.:

Beginning at the point of intersection of the southerly line of Kneeland street with the easterly line of Albany street; thence running eastwardly by the southerly line of Kneeland street to the westerly line of Utica street; thence southwardly by the westerly line of Utica street, as accepted by the city, and by said line extended southwardly to a point six hundred feet distant southwardly from said Kneeland street; thence southwestwardly to the easterly line of Albany street at the face of the abutment of the Albany-street Bridge; thence northwardly to the easterly line of Albany street to the place of beginning:

Ordered, That due notice be given to all persons and corporations owning or in any way interested in any part or all of the lands, or materials situate lying or being in said city of Boston, within the said limits, or in any way interested in the subject matter of said petition, that this Board will, on Monday, the fifteenth day of December now next ensuing, at four of the clock in the afternoon, consider said petition and the application of said Boston & Albany Railroad Company, thereby made, and will then and there hear all persons and corporations in any way interested therein by serving John J. Williams, Francis W. Palfrey, trustee, Alice A. Bartlett, Thomas J. Hills, trustee, Mary A. White and John White, her husband, Mary J. Sullivan, Mary Sullivan, widow of John Sullivan, Junior, John Edward Sullivan, child of said Mary and John, all of said Boston; Josiah Stickney of Watertown, in the county of Middlesex, and each of them, with a copy of said petition and of this order thereon, fourteen days at least before said fifteenth day of December, now next ensuing, and by publishing the same once a week for three successive weeks in the Boston Daily Advertiser and the Boston Post, newspapers printed at said Boston, the last publication to be two days, at least, before said fifteenth day of December next ensuing.

The order was passed.

REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Alderman Brown, from the Committee on Assessor's Department, reported "no action necessary" on petition of heirs of Nahum Ward for abatement of certain taxes assessed in 1871, and "leave to withdraw" on petition of proprietors of India wharf for remission of taxes paid on land leased to the city. Severally accepted.

Alderman Brown, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Henry T. Woods, reported the following order:

Ordered, That the City Treasurer be and he is hereby directed to refund to Henry T. Woods the sum of one hundred dollars and sixty-seven cents, being the amount of the tax erroneously assessed in 1872 upon the estate numbered 1086 Shawmut Avenue, and paid by said Woods; said sum to be charged to the Receipts for Taxes of 1872.

Passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the Joint Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, reported an order granting permission to Leander H. Jones to erect a wagon shed at 225 Dorchester Avenue, as asked for in his petition. The order was passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, reported on the petition of Right Rev. John J. Williams, that liquor saloons he closed on Sundays, that the enforcement of the laws relating to the sale of liquor on Sundays devolves on the police. The Chief of Police informs the committee that all proper efforts are now being made to close all liquor saloons on Sundays, and therefore no action is necessary on the part of the Board. The report was accepted.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert—

Ordered, That the Mayor be authorized to discharge two mortgages given by Donald Ferguson to the town of Dorchester, the debts secured by said mortgages having been fully paid. One mortgage is dated June 20th, 1855, and is recorded with Norfolk deeds, lib. 237, fol. 258. The other is dated February 12, 1860, and is recorded with Norfolk deeds, lib. 290, fol. 18.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert—

Ordered, That notice be issued to Parker Bryant to appear before this Board on Monday next, the first day of December, and show cause why the license heretofore granted to him to erect a brick stable for seventy-five horses, on Stanmore place, should not be revoked.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, reported orders of notice for hearings on Monday, December 9, at four o'clock P. M., on the subject of removing trees from the public streets, as follows: W. R. Gray and Edward Lang, owners of estates on St. James street, and all others interested—removal of an elm which occupies the roadway of St. James street; Henry Reed, owner of estate corner of Ashland and Park streets, Ward 16, and Joseph C. Lindsley, owner of estate on Beach and Park streets, Ward 16—removal of two elm trees on Park street; Benjamin Graves, owner of estate on Mercer street, Ward 12—removal of tree on northeast side of Mercer street, south from Dorchester street; Francis Marden, owner of estate on Neponset avenue, Ward 16, and Bartholomez Roach, owner of estate on Pleasant street, Ward 16—removal of nine elm trees which occupy the roadway of Neponset avenue. The orders were severally passed.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Public Institutions, to whom was referred an order in reference to the primary schools in the Lewis and Gibson districts, and the proposed school on Beacon street, near Parker street, reported the following orders recommending their passage:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide additional temporary accommodations for the primary schools in the Lewis District; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide temporary accommodations for the primary scholars in the vicinity of Norfolk street, Ward 16, in the Gibson District; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide temporary accommodations for the primary-school pupils living between Arlington and Parker streets; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Passed.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Public Instruction, who were requested to ascertain whether the Girls' High School in this city has ever received a legal establishment, reported that they are informed by the City Solicitor that the establishment of such schools is authorized by the statutes of the Commonwealth, and that there appears to be no want of legality in the establishment of the school in this city. Accepted.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Committee on Water, to whom was referred the request of the Cochituate Water Board for an additional appropriation, reported in favor of granting the request, and recommended that the same be referred to the Committee on Finance. Report accepted, and request so referred.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be authorized to report in print upon the order of the City Council in relation to an additional supply of pure water, and that two thousand extra copies of said report be printed for the information of the citizens; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for printing.

Passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of J. P. J. Nolan et al., for transfer of wagon licenses; W. P. Spaulding, to give concerts at South Boston, December 5 and 6; Thomas F. Doherty, to give concert in Sumner Hall, November 27; S. C. Martin, Jr., to give concert in vestry of Unitarian church, in East Boston, December 1; John C. McDevitt, John H. Marshall, John Holland, Thomas Heaphy, T. G. Conry, Patrick Carroll, for victualler's license; E. L. Golart, to keep bowling saloon, at 21 Fleet street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the application of James Scandan for victualler's license. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported that the assessments for a sewer in Buckingham street were correct, and recommended the passage of orders for collection. The orders were read once.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported an order for the construction of a common sewer in Westminster street, between Winsor and

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That an assessment of $62 levied on Benjamin F. Bean for a sewer in Eustis street, and an assessment of $34 93 levied on James and Martin Millmore for a sewer in Hammond street, be and the same are hereby abated; that $19 67 be abated from Joseph F. Wilson and assessed upon C. W. Farnum, $174 18 from Alexander Dearborn and assessed upon John W. Beals, and $59 77 from William Jones and assessed upon James Edwards, for a sewer in Summer street.

Read once.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported on the petitions of Nash, Spalding & Co.; Horatio Harris, Stephen Bowen, Alpheus Hardy et al.; trustees, and Nathaniel C. Nash, for payment for street damages, that said claims having been left to settlement with referees, no action is necessary; and from the same committee, that no action is necessary on the petitions of George Lawton and John Ritchie et al. for street damages, the claims having been settled. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages, as follows: Martha A. and Hannah N. Baker $385 75, widening Ceylon street; Charles Hulbert $60 80, widening Dale street; George Wry $131 25, widening Ceylon street; Stephen Baker $126 50, widening Ceylon street; William Boynton $12 250, widening of Lincoln street. The orders were severally passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported orders for the removal of obstructions from Ceylon and Dale streets within ten days. Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported leave to withdraw on petition of George L. Johnson et al., that the bay windows on the Goodnow estate, on West Brookline street, be allowed to remain. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported an order of notice to Joseph B. Moors, to remove off his building projecting over the line of High, Congress and Matthews streets. Passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered That the street leading easterly from Howard avenue, over land of W. Elliot Woodward and others, and recently opened to public travel, be hereafter called and known as Harlow street.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of Richard Miller, for grade damages. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph F. Paul, reported an order granting permission to Joseph F. Paul to lay down a steam pipe under and across Bristol street, provided he shall first secure the city from damage therefrom and remove the pipe when ordered by the Board. The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the sum of $204 75, being one-half the tax for 1872 assessed upon the estate taken from George Allen and William Noble for the extension of Devonshire street by an order of the Board of Street Commissioners passed May 13, 1872, and paid by them, be, and the same hereby is, refunded, and the Treasurer is hereby authorized to make payment of the said amount to the said Allen & Noble, upon their receipt; and charge it to an appropriation for Extending Devonshire street.

Read once.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the betterments of one hundred and seventy-five dollars on the estate of Hannah Glover, and of two hundred and one dollars on the estate of Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. Dill, both on Commercial street, in Ward 16, assessed by an order of the Board of Street Commissioners of August 5th last, for the widening of Dudley and other streets, be and the same hereby are, for cause, abated in full.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the application of Haley, Morse & Co., to use steam engine at 411 Washington street, there being no objection. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be and he hereby is authorized to convey, by a deed of release, to the heirs of William H. Bordman, the strip of one hundred and nine square feet of land discontinued from Sturgis street (and adjoining said estate) by an order of the Board of Street Commissioners passed April 15, 1871.

Referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That an additional appropriation of $100 be made to cover the expense of watering the streets around the public grounds; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Squares.

Passed.

FALSE FIRE ALARMS.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

quested to prepare and submit to the City Council a draught of an ordinance for the punishment of persons giving false alarms of fires or improperly interfering in any way with the signal boxes connected with the fire-alarm telegraph.

Alderman Quincy—Within the last two or three days, for the first time in a number of years, there have been repeated false alarms of fire. I can only suppose that they were given by some evil-disposed person, who expected to profit therefrom. I can hardly expect that they would have been sounded to create dissatisfaction with the new regime. We have now a statute on the subject, but it is desirable to make it more effective, and to increase the penalty of tampering with the boxes.

The order was passed.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Committee on Fire Department, to whom was referred the resignation of Assistant-Engineer Zenas E. Smith, made a report recommending that the resignation be accepted.

Alderman Stebbins—In justice to Mr. Smith it devolves upon me to state that his resignation was tendered last June, but that at the solicitation of the committee, he has been prevailed upon to remain till the present time, although he has frequently expressed a wish to be relieved.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins the resignation was accepted.

WARRANTS FOR THE CITY ELECTION.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That warrants be issued for the meetings of the legal voters of the first sixteen wards of this city, in their respective ward rooms, on Tuesday, the ninth day of December next, being the Tuesday after the second Monday in said month, at eight o'clock A. M., then and there to give in their ballots for an able and discreet person to be Mayor of this city; also for twelve Aldermen, all of whom to be inhabitants of this city; also to give in their ballots for a Warden, Clerk and five Inspectors of Elections, two members of the School Committee to serve three years, and four members of the Common Council—all to be inhabitants of the city, and to be residents within their respective wards. Also to give in their ballots for one able and discreet person to serve as a Street Commissioner for three years from the first Monday in January next. Also to notify the voters in Ward 14 to give in their ballots for one member of the School Committee in place of P. O. Edson, resigned. All to be voted for on one ballot. The polls to be kept open till four o'clock P. M.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That warrants be issued for the meetings of the legal voters of West Roxbury (Ward 17), of Brighton (Ward 19), and of Charlestown (Wards 20, 21, 22.) to assemble at their usual places of voting, on Friday, the ninth day of December next, at eight o'clock A. M., then and there to vote for the following officers:

Ward 17—First, to choose a Warden, Clerk, and five Inspectors of Elections to serve until January, 1874; second, to give in their ballots for a Mayor, twelve Aldermen, two members of the Common Council, and six members of the School Committee—two to serve one year, two to serve two years, and two to serve three years; a Warden, Clerk, and five Inspectors of Elections and one Street Commissioner—all officers in the second clause to be voted for on one ballot.

Ward No. 19—First, to choose a Warden, Clerk and five Inspectors of Elections, to serve until January, 1874; second, to give in their ballots for a Mayor, twelve Aldermen, two members of the Common Council, and three members of the School Committee—one for one year, one for two years, and one for three years, a Warden, Clerk, and five Inspectors of Elections, and one Street Commissioner, all officers in the second clause to be voted for on one ballot.

Wards 20, 21 and 22—To give in their ballots for Mayor, twelve Aldermen, a Street Commissioner, a Warden, Clerk and five Inspectors of Elections, two members of the Common Council, three members of the School Committee, one for one year, one for two years, one for three years; all to be voted for on one ballot.

The polls to be kept open until four o'clock P. M.

Passed.

GATES AT RAILROAD CROSSINGS.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That the Committee on Paving be requested to consider the expediency of establishing gates at the railroad crossings on Marginal, Webster and Sumner streets, East Boston, and report to this Board estimates of the cost of establishing and maintaining the same.

Alderman Stebbins—The Committee on Paving have now, I think, before them a petition numerously signed, asking that a bridge may be built over Webster avenue or Sumner street. I think every member of the City Government has come to the conclusion that such a bridge would be very costly and of doubtful expediency. In view of the fact that an additional ferry is considered in that part of the city, it has occurred to me that the exigency might be met by the establishment of gates, the cost of which would be but slight in comparison with that of maintaining a bridge. I hope the committee will look into this matter and report back. It seems to be a feasible way of protecting the streets. About two hundred trains cross those streets in a day, and there being only a man with a flag, the place is very dangerous.

Alderman Gibson—I thank the Alderman for lending me a hand in this matter. There are over five hundred trains passing there in a day. I have done my best to get this thing through, and I hope the Board will pass the order. I am aware that a bridge could not be reasonably expected; it would cost a great deal of money; but if we could get one gate even, it would be an advantage. There are several streets which cross these tracks, through which young children go to school, and of course it keeps the women in a perfect fever about school hours. Even if a gate be put on Sumner street that alone would be a very good thing.

The order was passed.

STOUGHTON-STREET RAILROAD CROSSING.

Alderman Clark offered an "order to quit" giving notice to the trustees of the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad to remove all obstructions forthwith from Stoughton street, in Ward 16, as ordered by the Street Commissioners, and in case of non-compliance, directing the same to be done by the Superintendent of Streets.

Alderman Sayward asked for the meaning of "forthwith" in the order.

Alderman Clark—It means immediately—tomorrow or the next day—to take immediate action. I understand that this order is all that is necessary to allow the Superintendent of Streets to go on at once.

Alderman Sayward—That means just nothing at all. I wish something more definite may be fixed upon, and if the railroad folks do not remove these obstructions, I hope the Superintendent of Streets will have power to do so in a short time.

Alderman Clark moved an amendment so that the work would be done within three days.

Alderman Stebbins—As I understand it the Superintendent of Streets will not remove the posts to the gate which the railroad keeps there, and I hope the railroad will be compelled to keep the gate.

Alderman Sayward—Those posts support the sign which is in the way of the Metropolitan Railroad, and prevent the track from being finished to Upham's Corner, which the people very much desire.

Alderman Stebbins—I was at this place last Friday. It is a gate post and not a sign post. It stands in the way of the Metropolitan Railroad, and I don't think it ought to be removed unless the railroad is compelled to keep up the gate.

Alderman Sayward—Then they can all be removed without the least trouble, and I hope it will be done at once as it is very much desired by the people.

The amendment was adopted and the order was passed.

LIMITS OF SUFFOLK COUNTY.

On motion of Alderman Quincy the report and order (printed City Doc. 127) authorizing the Mayor to petition the next Legislature for the passage of an act annexing Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop to Middlesex County, was taken from the table.

Alderman Quincy—I suppose some gentlemen of the Board have not had time to read this report since it has been printed, but I think I can, in a very few words, give them the substance of the report so that they can vote for the order. About forty years ago the town of Chelsea was exempted from taxation for county purposes, on condition of releasing to the county of Suffolk all right and title to the county jails, to continue for twenty years, at the expiration of which time the Legislature made no change in the arrangement. It is supposed that twenty years' exemption from taxation would be a sufficient compensation, but it went on for forty years and we have been paying for land damages, etc., in Chelsea. Finally, in 1872, the subject was taken to the Legislature and they relieved us. The Alderman read the concluding parts of the report, and the order, and said. If this order is passed it will bring the subject to the Legislature, and then if these towns come forward and express a desire to be annexed to some other county, they can do so. It does not commit the city of Boston to opposing it.

The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Brown, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

NOVEMBER 25, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at half-past seven o'clock. E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The following were severally acted upon, in concurrence:

Petitions of John Lyons et al. were referred.

Reference to Committee on Finance of a report of the Committee on Water, recommending the granting of the request of the Water Board for an additional appropriation of $175,000.

References to Committee on Streets: 1—Of a communication, resolve and order from Street Commissioners, for widening Magazine street, at an adjudged expense of $24,015 95-100 (City Doc. No. 124). 2—Of a communication, resolve and order from Street Commissioners, for extension of Eustis to Magazine street, at an adjudged expense of $11,640 20-100 (City Doc. No. 125). 3—Of an order authorizing the Mayor to convey a portion of Sturgis street, discontinued, to W. H. Bordman's heirs. 4—Of a communication from chairman of Harbor Commissioners, transmitting action of said commissioners, and of the Governor and Council, establishing the location of Eastern avenue and the bridge over Fort Point Channel, in conformity with the recommendation of the Committee of the City Council on Streets.

Report (no action necessary) on petition of heirs of Nahum Ward for abatement of taxes assessed in 1871. Accepted.

Report (leave to withdraw) on petition of proprietors of India wharf, that tax of 1873, assessed on a portion of their property, be refunded. Accepted.

Report and order authorizing a permit to L. H. Jones to erect a wagon shed at 225 Dorchester avenue. Order passed.

Order requesting Committee on Ordinances to submit an ordinance providing for punishment of persons who give false alarms of fire, or who improperly interfere with signal boxes. Passed.

Report that the establishment of the Girls' High School is authorized by the statutes. Accepted.

Report of the Committee on Survey, etc., of Buildings, to whom the subject had been referred, recommending the confirmation of Oliver L. Shaw, as Inspector of Buildings, in place of David Chamberlin, resigned. Accepted, and the appointment confirmed.

Message of the Mayor tendering his resignation of the office of Mayor, to take effect on the 29th inst., he having been elected to represent the Third District of Massachusetts in the Congress of the United States. Resignation accepted.

Report in favor of the acceptance of resignation of Zenas E. Smith as an Assistant-Engineer of the Fire Department, tendered by him on the 22d of June last. Accepted.

Order for Water Board to report in print on the order for an additional supply of pure water. Passed.

Message from the Mayor, transmitting a communication from the Overseers of the Poor, in relation to the relief of the poor during the coming winter, came from the Board referred to the Committee on the Overseers of the Poor, with instructions to consider the expediency of establishing places throughout the city for furnishing soup and other provisions to the poor. Laid on the table to be printed, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7.

The following were severally read once:

Report and order to refund to Henry T. Woods $100 67, being tax erroneously assessed in 1872, and paid upon estate 1086 Shawmut avenue.

Report and order (new draught) to provide temporary accommodations for the primary-school pupils living between Arlington and Parker streets.

Report and order to provide temporary accommodations for primary schools, Lewis District.

Report and order to provide temporary accommodations for primary schools in vicinity of Norfolk street, Ward 16.

Order that an additional appropriation of $100 be made to cover the expense of watering streets around public grounds.

Read once and amended, on motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, by striking out $100 and inserting $225. Mr. Perkins moved that the rules be suspended that the order might pass.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I hope the rules will not be suspended. The Finance Committee had under consideration today the request from the Committee on Common and Squares for an additional appropriation, and they are not inclined to grant the request in addition to the $80,000 first appropriated. The committee have another meeting tomorrow, and I hope the rules will not be suspended.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—As the motion occasions discussion, I will withdraw it.

Report and order for Mayor to petition Legislature for an act to set off Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop from Suffolk, and annex them to Middlesex County. (City Doc. No. 127.)

Mr. Pease of Ward 1—I have been informed by citizens of Winthrop that they desire to be heard on this matter before action is taken by the Council. They have a mass meeting this evening to take action on the subject, and until it is known what they do I hope the report will be laid over.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I should hope that the order will be laid on the table. It is a matter of too much importance for us to consider without more information than we have at present. The proposition is to dismember the towns and city named from the county of Suffolk, and I hope they will have an opportunity to be heard. I believe those places will be annexed to the city of Boston, and I am confident that is their desire. So I hope no action will be taken until they can be heard, and with the consent of my friend from Ward 1 I move that the order lie on the table.

Carried.

Majority report of the Committee on Legislative Affairs and order for Mayor to petition General Court to annex to Boston so much of Brookline as lies north of southerly line of Brighton avenue, with such other lands as may be necessary or proper to form a suitable connection between Brighton and the old portion of the city, and minority report and order of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, on same subject, came from Aldermen, with the order reported by the majority adopted.

The question was on giving the majority order a second reading.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—It will be remembered that when this matter was up before the Council, an order was introduced by the gentleman from Ward 14, as a substitute for the original order from the Board of Aldermen, the substance of which was to run a line from Muddy Brook along Longwood avenue and by Beacon street to Brighton, so as to include the territory between the Brighton road and Beacon street and the greater part of Longwood. When the matter came before the committee the majority reported in favor of the original order in a new draught, which only contemplated adding to the city of Boston so much of the town of Brookline as lies between the southerly line of Brighton avenue and Charles River. To this the majority proposed to add such other additional lands as might be necessary to give access to Brighton from Boston. That is all I want, and the only question is whether the present City Council shall express an opinion on that subject or whether it shall be left to the next City Government. It is to get that expression that I introduced that minority report. This is all the difference there is. If we annex so much of the town of Brookline as lies between Beacon street and Brighton avenue, that will seem to give a convenient connection between Boston and Brighton. Inasmuch as Beacon street is a great avenue on that side and leads directly to the possessions of the city, it seems to me that it should be a part of the city. I thought it was well that this Council should have an opportunity of voting on the question whether they would define the line of the territory they wish to have annexed to the city.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—In order that members of the Council may become better acquainted with the report I move that it be laid on the table.

Carried.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following came up as unfinished business and were acted upon in concurrence:

Report and order for an appropriation of $3000, to be made to pay the extra expenses incurred in finishing and furnishing the new ferry boat "Winthrop." Passed.

Report and order to discontinue allowance for rent of armory formerly occupied by Company F, First Regiment, M. V. M., at 1867 Washington street, from first of October last; and to allow $800 per annum to be paid for rent of armory now occupied by said company, at junction of Warren and Palmer streets, beginning on first of October and continuing till otherwise ordered.

Passed—Yeas 42, nays 0.

REQUEST FROM THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

A request was received from the School Committee for the enlargement of the area of the primary school lot on Lexington street, East Boston. Referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

REVISION OF THE CITY CHARTER.

A communication was received from his Honor the Mayor notifying the City Council that, in accordance with the provisions of an order passed October 31, 1873, he had appointed Benjamin R. Curtis, George T. Bigelow, Otis Norcross, Charles G. Greene and Charles Allen a commission to revise the city charter.

The communication was sent up.

PETITIONS.

Mr. Weston of Ward 1 presented the petition of Company B, First Regiment Cavalry (Boston Light Dragoons), representing that Boylston Hall is wholly inadequate for the requirements of an armory for a cavalry company, and requesting that they may have a new armory in the City Building on Mason street.

Referred to Committee on Armories.

WASHINGTON PARK.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend the sum of $1100 in improving Washington park; said sum to be in addition to the amount heretofore appropriated, to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Mr. Perkins asked for a suspension of the rules that the order might be passed.

Mr. West of Ward 16 hoped that, in view of the action of the Finance Committee, the order would be laid over.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—This is simply an order asking for an appropriation for work already done. They are simply asking to be allowed to pay for this work from the appropriation made for expenses of the department during the year.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—The facts are all well known to the Finance Committee. There are some $1400 now on hand from the appropriation for the Committee on Common and Public Grounds. It has been explained to the Committee on Finance that that amount will be exceeded by the labor account, and I hope if the money is to be expended it will go to that account first.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The order is precisely for that purpose; the money is to pay for improvements already made on Washington park.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—Washington park has been brought up here most unexpectedly to me. I have a few figures. I undertook to see, today, what Washington park has cost the city, as I understood it was done particularly in favor of a certain Alderman. This park is in Roxbury, in the immediate vicinity of the residence of one of the Aldermen who is one of the most bitter opponents of public parks. I hope gentlemen will understand me. I am in favor of expenditures for public parks. I inquired today what this Washington park is, not knowing it would be brought up here tonight. I suppose Washington park consists of 396,125 square feet of land in the Highlands. I have no doubt it is a most beautiful place. It has cost the city of Boston $23,443 16 and I am told that the managers of this matter have gone on to an unlimited extent and spent money there, and that they ran in debt to a considerable amount. I don't object to that. They have done it legitimately and properly, perhaps; but I want to see members of the City Government consistent. I don't want a gentleman in this Government to oppose a public park when he has got the special privilege of a park in front of his own house. Washington park consists, I am told, of a considerable ledge of rocks. This year there have been spent on this park over ten thousand dollars and last year over thirteen thousand. I have no doubt the money was judiciously expended. I am in favor of all such expenditures; but when I find them made it comes with an ill grace for such parties to oppose a general expenditure for public parks in the city of Boston. This is why I am called upon to say something here, because I want to see members of the City Government entirely consistent in their advocacy or opposition to measures of public improvement. As I walked through the corridors of the City Hall, today, I happened to see this piece of paper (holding it in his hand) floating about and I picked it up. I find that a member of the other branch raises his voice and brings to bear all the batteries with which he is endowed and undertook to read those long figures before the Board of Aldermen. When I heard that this particular member of the City Council has made this speech I was somewhat surprised to find that a citizen, after receiving the benefit of an expenditure of over twenty-three thousand dollars for his immediate neighborhood, should raise his voice against a contemplated expenditure when it is indorsed by the people and the whole press of Boston. I shall hope, and I agree with my friend from Ward 11, or some other ward, or no ward at all, that this matter shall be investigated before one dollar more has been spent in that immediate vicinity. If the matter of a public park, now agitated, is to be put down by a gentleman whose property has been benefited to a large extent by parks already established, then I say it is our right and duty to raise our voices here against it, and at any rate to examine into these expenditures. I am in favor of all public improvements, but not in favor of those special improvements which benefit only a particular class to the detriment of the whole people. I hope the objection to the passage of this order will be sustained until we ascertain to what extent this extraordinary expenditure has gone before we vote the money.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—One word on the matter which the gentleman has introduced here. I think it is only due to the gentleman whose action has been brought forward. Washington park was the property of the city years before that gentleman became an Alderman or was spoken of for that office, and so far as I know he has never said one word in favor of the expenditure for that park, and not one dollar has been spent at his solicitation. Further, I have no objection whatever to this matter being laid on the table, only I want the Council to understand before they so vote that the order is not for any new appropriation, but is simply to enable laborers who have done the work to get their pay.

Mr. West of Ward 16—There are one thousand four hundred dollars remaining unexpended of the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds. The pay-roll of that department already amounts to two thousand one hundred dollars. If this order is passed there will be some preferred laborers whose claims will be paid. I move that the order lie on the table.

The motion was carried—21 for, 16 against.

MAGAZINE-STREET DISTRICT.

Mr. Prescott of Ward 9, presented a report from the Special Committee on the Suffolk-street District, who were requested to report whether any additional legislation is necessary to secure the raising of the territory bounded by Hampden street, Norfolk avenue, Magazine street and Swett street. The committee report that if the Committee on Streets or the Street Commissioners should deem it expedient to lay out streets at this time over that territory, it would be necessary to apply for additional legislation to secure the filling of the adjoining lands.

On motion of Mr. Prescott the report was referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

On motion of Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—

Ordered, That the bill of S. B. Eustis, police officer, amounting to $28, for extra services, be allowed for payment by the Auditor of Accounts, provided it is approved in the usual manner.

Passed under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Pickering.

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 called for a report from the Committee on Public Institutions, on the request of the Grand Jury of Suffolk County. Submitted to the committee last July.

Mr. Prescott of Ward 9—The Committee on Public Institutions have acted only on a part of those recommendations of the Grand Jury. They have not been called together lately and are not ready to report.

Mr. Flynn offered the following:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Institutions be requested to report on the order to provide a suitable site for a home for the poor, also upon the recommendations of the Grand Jury submitted to the City Council June 16th, 1873, at the next meeting of the Common Council.

Passed.

MINOT SCHOOLHOUSE.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 presented a report from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings representing that in consequence of the condemning of the privies of the Minot Schoolhouse, Ward 16, by the Board of Health, as a nuisance, the committee have erected two new blocks of outbuildings of brick on the land recently purchased for the enlargement of the yard of said schoolhouse, at a cost of twenty-six hundred and eighty-two dollars and seventy-seven cents. The committee ask for the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to erect new privies for the Minot Schoolhouse, Ward 16, at a cost not exceeding the sum of twenty-six hundred and eighty-three dollars;

the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Mr. West of Ward 16 asked a suspension of the rules that the order might pass.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I would ask the gentlemen of the committee if the work is not already done.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11—It is already done. During the recess of the Council the old privies were condemned by the Board of Health, and it was necessary to have them rebuilt forthwith.

Mr. Wells moved that the order lie on the table. Lost.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I have a note from the Superintendent of Public Buildings, in which he says he supposed that he had authority to build those privies after the order of the Board of Health condemning them as a nuisance. He says he made a mistake. The work is done and the man wants his pay. That is all there is to it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—The gentleman moved to lay the order to pay the laborers on Washington park on the table. Last week the gentleman argued for laying an appropriation for $3000 on the table. If the laboring man has earned his money I think he is entitled to it. I don't think gentlemen can swallow this idea, that the Superintendent of Public Buildings thought he had a right to do this work. This is not the first time such a thing has been done. The same question has been brought up here before. I don't see why the gentleman who has done this work can't wait just as well as the laboring men.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I must say that I entirely agree with the gentleman from Ward 3. The gentleman from Ward 16 does n't wish to have preferred claims. Isn't that bill he brings in a preferred claim? If it was doubted that the labor has been performed on Washington park and the Council had refused to allow the payment of the claim, that would be another thing. When the Council voted to lay that order on the table I don't suppose they doubted that the labor had been performed. Now, on what ground does the gentleman ask for this preferred claim?

Mr. West of Ward 16—This work was done on account of necessity, and the appropriation has not been exceeded. The Committee on Common have no right to exceed their appropriation. [Mr. West read part of a letter from Superintendent Tucker stating the necessity of doing the work at that time.] The man has waited for his money four months already. So far as the laboring men on the Common are concerned, I am willing to vote for an order to pay them $1400, to be divided pro rata.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—Possibly the person who has got this bill in here can better afford to wait for his pay than the laborers on the park. And about that appropriation—the City Council have been warned that it may be exceeded. I heard the chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings state in the Board of Aldermen four weeks ago that that committee would have to come in for an extra appropriation. But to return to the subject. Last year we had $92,000; this year we asked for $80,000, supposing we could cut off the labor in Madison square and the parks in South Boston and other parts of the city. But a great pressure was brought upon us to have work done there. Orders for that work were put in here, and passed without a word of opposition. We have spent twelve thousand dollars on those squares, and now we ask for leave to spend the twelve estimated by the committee for other work.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11—I don't see what this order before us has got to do with the appropriation for Common and Squares. This work was necessary to be done, and I think members of the Council have sense enough to know that if the Superintendent of Public Buildings knew that he was exceeding his power the Committee on Public Buildings would have ordered him to do the work and taken the consequences.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—But if the Committee on Common have done what the Council authorized them to do, and the laboring man has been there and done his work, and he has a grocery man with a bill staring him in the face, I say if we have $900 to pay, and have only got $700, I would pay as far as I could go. Why not allow the Committee on Common to pay the debt as far as they can? It may serve the laboring men. I don't oppose paying this contractor, but there is such a thing as being a favorite. They say that this gentleman has waited four months for his money—well, I have had to wait longer than that, but I have managed to pay my help. If you have got $1100 or $1300, I believe we should pay as far as the money goes.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I think every matter should be considered upon its merits. I agree with the gentleman from Ward 11, that if, during the recess of the City Council, it was necessary to do certain work and certain liabilities were incurred, those liabilities ought to be settled, and the parties doing that work ought to be paid. I shall be entirely in favor of paying a debt incurred under those circumstances. Everybody knows that the Superintendent of Public Buildings is a straightforward, honest man. He has ordered work to be done, but could n't get an order from the Council to authorize him to do it. Now is the time to approve the bills and have them paid. There is no question about it, and as business men we ought to consider those matters as they come up.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I don't believe any member of this Council has doubted the honesty of the Superintendent of Public Buildings. I do not. But will the gentleman from Ward 5 remember that during the discussion of the Fire Commission, how he hemmed and hawed about every expenditure made without an order of the Council, and now he turns round and says he agrees with the gentleman supporting this order. I'd like to see where his consistency is. I don't oppose paying any bill; but I don't believe in the doctrine that the gentleman preaches either way.

The order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—

Ordered, That the sum of $75 be added to the appropriation for building a tool house and wagon shed on Common; the sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Laid on the table on motion of Mr. Perkins, and subsequently, on motion of the same gentleman, taken up and passed. A motion to reconsider, by Mr. Jones of Ward 14, was lost.

WATER FOR BROOKLINE.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 moved to reconsider the vote of the last meeting whereby the Council refused to give a second reading to the order authorizing the Water Board to make a contract to supply the town of Brookline with water.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I hope the motion will prevail. I understood that a town meeting was to take place in Brookline this afternoon, and this very question of water was to come up. I would be glad to have this matter lie over until we know what action Brookline has taken on the subject.

On motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 the motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WASHINGTON PARK AGAIN.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 moved to take from the table the order to pay $1100 for improving Washington park.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I raise the point of order, that the gentleman from Ward 3 voted against the motion to lay on the table, and he is not competent to move a reconsideration.

The President—The point is not well taken. The Chair is not informed by any record how the gentleman from Ward 3 voted.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would ask the gentleman from Ward 3 which way he voted.

The President—The point of order is not well taken.

The order was taken from the table by a rising vote—28 for, 11 against.

The question was on giving the order a second reading.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I have no objection to paying the laborers on Washington square, or any other square, the money that is due them. It will create evil feeling among other laborers who can't get their pay if this order is passed. I am willing to vote for an order to pay $1400, but I am not willing to vote for an order for pay for work on one square to the exclusion of all others. The Finance Committee will have this matter before them tomorrow and their action will be reported to the Board of Aldermen next Monday. For that reason I hope this order will lie over.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—All that the Finance Committee have before them is the propriety of granting the request for an extra appropriation for the Committee on Common, over and above what we have now, and over and above the $1100 we ask for now. I judge from my experience that the City Council will pay all the laborers for work on the squares and Public Garden, and I don't think the city will repudiate any bills of that kind. We come here now and say here is labor performed, let us have the money to pay for it. They say we must divide what we have pro rata among the laborers. I don't think the city will do anything of the sort. I think we had better deal with each subject as it comes up.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I agree to that.

The President—The gentleman from Ward 6 has the floor.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The subject now up is the payment of the laborers on Washington park. I don't wish to mix up privies, schoolhouses and parks. We have n't yet exceeded our appropriation up to this time, so far as this order is concerned. The estimate before the Committee on Finance is not for laborers on Washington park, and I prefer to have that question treated on its merits.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I understand all that. But when I say the auditor reports the pay roll of the laborers on the Common and public grounds at $2100 when there are only $1400 of the appropriation to pay them with, I say what is true. And I am certain the Finance Committee will not agree to the additional appropriation until the matter is looked into pretty thoroughly, and that will be done on Friday.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I have never heard the gentleman from Ward 6 make so shallow an argument as he has tonight in support of his order. He says that his order is to pay for labor on Washington park. I ask if it is not for more than that; if it is not for improvements on the park. I don't know what it is for, but we do know that, as members of the Finance Committee, early in the year we went over all the appropriations carefully and struck out here and there what we thought they would bear, that we might carry out what so much had been said about economy. We advised a reduction here and there. I am not sure that the gentleman has stated this correctly. My impression is that we cut down the appropriation on Common and Squares. Last year they had $92,000. This year the Finance Committee allowed $80,000 to pass. Now it looks very much to me as if this committee said, We will have that old appropriation of $92,000. It is very odd that they should come in for just $12,000 more. It looks as if they wanted to have it in spite of the Finance Committee, who don't care anything for this matter personally. That committee went through estimates, item by item, lump by lump. We considered that the Committee on Common could be honestly run for $80,000, and are perfectly convinced of that fact today. But here comes a request asking for an appropriation of $12,000 more, which happens to be just the sum cut off from last year's appropriation, as much as to say, We will have that old appropriation now. It looks as if they say that $80,000 wont do, and they will have that $12,000 whether or no. We have good reason to argue in that direction. Now, the Finance Committee had that matter under consideration today, and we asked for the chairman of the Committee on Common and the City Forester to appear before us and we adjourned to hear them. We propose to investigate the matter, and if it is necessary we will make the appropriation. But here is an order in which the gentleman tries to introduce his ideas instead of having an order for the pay of laborers on Washington square. As my colleague from Ward 16 has said, there are $1400 unexpended, and to pay the laborers will require $2100. Now, if we make an appropriation for "improvements" in any part of the parks, we want that money to be for paying the laborers. It seems to me that we are the ones who are looking out for the laborers instead of the gentleman. The Committee on Public Squares had warning that they should cut their garment within the range of $80,000. But they have n't done it and have just exceeded their appropriation $12,000. I am sorry this discussion has sprung up. I don't believe any gentleman on the Finance Committee has any wish to evade the payment of an honest debt. I assure you it is no light matter to go through all these appropriations and cut down, here a little and there a little, and then to be laughed at at the end of the year, and have them say, We have gone on just as we pleased, and now we want you to pay our bills. This is a good time to check this thing, if we mean economy. We want time to look into this matter tomorrow. If the Chairman of the Committee on Common and the City Forester explain it, all very well; but we want to see why it is after the estimate is cut down that they come in here and say they will have the extra amount.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—The gentleman says the argument of the gentleman from Ward 6 is very shallow. I think his own argument is a very shallow one. When the Committee on Common and Squares made their estimate for this year they had economy before them, and reduced the appropriation to $80,000, and did n't wait for the Council to do it. We were satisfied that $80,000 would do it. We did n't know that so much money would be required. I am willing that this matter should lie over, but these laborers are in need of their money, and should have it. This debate shows one thing—that gentlemen allow personal feelings to control them.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I shall agree to the appropriation, for the committee have given good reason for it. I am in favor of appropriations which are properly spent, and I am certainly ready to vote for that appropriation. I hope it will pass. But I am always opposed to the expenditure of money when it has not been appropriated. I think the committee make a reasonable request, and I shall be in favor of the additional appropriation of $12,000 if they can give as good reasons for it.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I wonder the gentleman did n't rake down the Paving Department when they asked for $20,000 more. May be he will have a chance to rake down the Department of Sewers, the Fire Department and others before the year is out. Washington park I am very familiarly acquainted with. It is in the ward which I have the honor to represent—"in part." At the beginning of the year we found that the $5000 set aside for that park would hardly do anything at all, and during the year we asked for an extra appropriation, and it was allowed us. The park is situated in the central part of the city, surrounded by citizens who pay a large part of the taxes of the city of Boston, and within ten minutes' walk of it there are thirty thousand people. In the course of a few years it will make as lovely a spot as any other in the country—I don't care where you go. Although the order is worded so that it may be for trees, sods, shrubs, etc., I know myself that it is for labor, carting, taking down walks, grassing walks and putting them in shape and trimming bushes, etc. I certainly hope that the order will pass tonight. I think the men should be paid. It is nothing but a common order, such as is introduced here at every meeting in the year.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I don't want the gentlemen of the Council to understand that the Finance Committee have objected to granting the additional appropriation of $12,000, but what they ask is that delay may be had till Friday evening. All they ask is that the chairman of the committee and the City Forester will explain the matter. If they explain it satisfactorily they will get an additional appropriation, and if they don't they wont.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I don't know what the Finance Committee has to do with this order. It is for money already appropriated for Common and Squares. We want $1100 that have already been appropriated and I can't see what it has got to do with the request for an additional appropriation.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—It is very easy to see how committees will go outside of the appropriations. If the gentleman from Ward 16 recollects in the discussion about the fence on the Common, he made a motion that it be transferred to Dorchester. I will ask the gentleman if the Finance Committee will pay the bills for resetting that fence, and if the bill comes into the Council I will ask if he will sit there and vote against paying it. I don't know whether the fence is set up or not, but some one has got to do the labor and get the pay. I don't see why the laborers on the park should be compelled to wait.

Mr. Train of Ward 13—It seems to me that the simple wording of that order has caused all this debate. I move to strike out the word "improving," and insert "labor upon," making it simply to pay the laborers on the park, so that it may be appropriated to the object for which we desire it.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I should like to know whether the gentleman from Ward 13 objects to paying for supplies that have been brought there, such as loam, sod, stone. As a member of the committee I don't like to take the responsibility of the amendment.

Mr. Train of Ward 13—I don't wish to deprive any one of his pay who has hauled loam and sods, but they can wait another week and come under the head of the appropriation for Washington park. My object was to favor paying the laboring men. I merely wish to further the matter as much as I can.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. McCue of Ward 5—The Committee on Common ought to have had more money this year than they had. Instead of $80,000 it ought to have been $100,000. I hope the order will pass.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I don't know but I differ from my colleagues on the Finance Committee as to the present order. We have in our committee a request for an additional appropriation of $12,000. We wish to know why this is necessary, because in the first place a part of that appropriation has been expended without authority, and that we all believe improper for any committee to do unless it is deemed necessary. We will hold the proposition until we have an opportunity to investigate. Now we have an order for an appropriation within the amount in the hands of the committee. The committee have a right to expend that sum of $1100. I hardly see how we can object to their expending $1100 or $1400, but we do object to their spending a dollar beyond the amount already appropriated—that is, $80,000. That is where I stand in the committee with reference to the $12,000, but I can't object to this order for an expenditure of $1100.

Mr. West of Ward 16—I thought I made myself well understood when I said that the Finance Committee did not object to this. My only objection was that we should use $1100 out of $1400 and have nothing left to pay the $2100.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I don't think we can take any responsibility in regard to the spending of $1100 when they have $1400, but the Committee on Common have exceeded their appropriation and the Finance Committee have got something to say about that.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—The matter of paying this $1100 will reduce the sum in the hands of the committee to $300. Their argument is that this $1100 has been spent in improvements, for I am bound to say improvements, as we don't know what they include. Then the hue and cry will be raised on this question of labor, just as it has been here tonight, and we have only $300 to pay for labor contracted for. The question with us is, can a committee exceed its appropriations, make its contracts, go on entirely independent of the Finance Committee? Can they go on, and make their expenditure, and at the end of the year strike a balance, and say, we want so much more, and not a single day be given the Finance Committee to consider the expenditure for improvements, which they say, verbally, means labor? Now they come in and say the laborers are suffering, and appeal to our sense of humanity and expect to be justified in making such an appeal before we have a chance to make an investigation.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The gentleman knows how much money we have got and how much we ask for; he knows that orders which were introduced for improvements in South Boston were not in the original estimates sent in by the Committee on Common to the Auditor and Finance Committee; and he must have known, when the Council voted to give us $5000 here and there outside of what we estimated for, that our appropriation was running short. Now we have spent a number of thousands of dollars for labor. We have gone ahead and employed men to do the labor, in the expectation that the City Council will allow us to do it. I don't think the City Council will object to allowing us this extra thousand dollars for labor on the public grounds. This is what we ask for, and the money given originally has been diverted into other channels. I object to the Committee on Common being censured for exceeding their appropriation, when they have done it in full view of the Finance Committee.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—I can't see how it is necessary for them to come here and ask for an order to spend $1100 when they have got $1400. If they have to spend $1400, why don't they go ahead and spend it; and if more money is wanted after the appropriation is expended, they can come and ask for more. Then the Finance Committee can look into the matter and discuss whether it shall be granted or not.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—My colleague asks the question, Why have n't the committee power to spend this money? It is because no joint committee have power to spend any money without an order from the City Council. During the year we get a certain appropriation and put in orders authorizing the expenditure. But we don't put in an order for a special appropriation until it is wanted for the purpose.

The order was passed to a second reading.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 moved to suspend the rules that the order might pass.

The rules were suspended and the order was passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the order was passed, offered by Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, hoping it would not prevail, was lost.

On motion of Mr. Wells of Ward 3, the Council adjourned.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

Schedules of assessments for the construction of common sewers were submitted by the Superintendent as follows: Copeland street—total, $2499 07; to individuals, $1874 30. Catawba street—total, $1414 74; to individuals, $1061 06. Gough street—total, $1169 07; to individuals, $876 80. Franklin street, between Pearl and Oliver streets—total, $893 86; to individuals, $445 40.

Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

CONSTABLE'S BOND.

The bond of Lemuel Clark, constable, being duly certified by the Treasurer, was approved by the Board.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to levy and collect sewer assessments in Buckingham street. Passed.

Order to abate certain sewer assessments in Enstis and Hammond streets, and to change certain sewer assessments in Summer street. Passed.

Order to abate from the tax on Allen & Noble's estate on Devonshire street the sum of $204 75. Passed.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions were referred, in concurrence.

Message from the Mayor announcing his appointment of Benjamin R. Curtis, George T. Bigelow, Otis Norcross, Charles G. Greene and Charles Allen as the commission to revise the city charter. Placed on file.

The following received concurrent action:

Report from Committee on the Suffolk-street District that additional legislation would be necessary to enable the Street Commissioners to lay out streets on the Swett-street District. Referred to Joint Committee on Streets.

Order to pay bill of S. B. Heustis, a police officer, for extra services ($28). Passed.

Report and order for the erection of new out-houses in Minot Schoolhouse yard, at a cost of $2600. Passed.

Order to allow the additional sum of $75 for erection of tool house and wagon shed on the Common. Passed.

A request from the School Committee for the enlargement of the area of the Lexington-street Primary School lot. Referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

WASHINGTON PARK.

The order to allow the additional sum of $1100, for improvement on Washington park, which had been passed by the Council, was considered.

Alderman Hulbert—I desire to say a word here. At the last meeting of the Common Council, on the introduction of this order, remarks were elicited from a gentleman concerning this matter of Washington park. Under all other circumstances I should decline to take any notice of it. But as the statements then made are entirely false, I wish to state something concerning it.

The Alderman read the remarks of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 at the last meeting of the Common Council on the order under consideration, and continued—

I have something to say, Mr. Chairman, concerning this. Washington park is a tract of land purchased years ago, long before Roxbury was annexed to Boston, for the specific purpose of a park, and after annexation that park has lain still, and not a single Highlander who has appeared in this Board, including this humble individual, has come here with a private axe to grind at the city's wheel.

The gentleman who preceded me last year did not come into this Board to advance measures for his particular interest. So far as I am concerned, I have never troubled the Committee on Common concerning the appropriations. I have never gone near them, and when they made the appropriations not a word escaped my lips. When the original appropriation was made it was for $5000; then demands came from other parts of the city and they saw fit to increase it, and not one single dollar was spent at my suggestion. I don't live facing the park, but I do live in sight of it. I am proud to say that I have not come here this year with a private axe to grind at the city's expense, and it is not for me to get up here and make statements so utterly false as were made in the Common Council.

The order was passed.

HOME FOR THE POOR, ETC.

Order for Committee on Public Institutions to report on a site for a Home for the Poor, and upon the communication of the grand jury, at the next meeting of the Common Council, came up passed.

Alderman Hulbert moved to amend so that the report would be submitted at the next meeting of the Board of Aldermen instead of the Common Council.

Alderman Power asked the reason for delay. The committee are to meet tomorrow to attend to this matter. He did not believe it possible for the committee to bring in a unanimous report on the Home for the Poor, but on the other matters they are all ready to report.

Alderman Hulbert replied that the committee had made every endeavor to report today, but it was impossible to do so. Some members have not had sufficient time to investigate the matter.

Alderman Power—The committee can report just as well next Thursday as at any other time on this matter. I have been accused of delaying this matter of a Home for the Poor, but I don't see any possibility of the Committee on Public Institutions to agree on any one site, and the matter has got to come before this Board again in the shape of majority and minority reports, and we are as well prepared now to give that to the Council next Thursday as now.

Alderman Sayward—If there is to be any report to the Council on this matter of the Home for the Poor I hope members will have all the time they need. It is very evident that this committee have been very dilatory in this matter, as all other committees have been generally.

Alderman Hulbert—As chairman of the committee I have used my best endeavor to have this report ready. Simply as a matter of proper preparation I think Thursday evening will be too early. Some gentlemen of the committee have not visited a single site, and have been before the committee today asking for an opportunity to do so. That is why I ask this amendment.

Alderman Power—For the purpose of complying with the purpose of this order one gentleman, who has not had time to make up his mind, has gone to look at the place this afternoon. The majority of the committee will be prepared to vote for the place favored by the chairman of the committee, and there is no question but we shall be able to report next Thursday evening, and I can't see any reason why it should be put off any longer. I ask that when the vote be taken it be by yeas and nays.

Alderman Gibson—If gentlemen ask for longer time I think they ought to have it. We can't do anything much before spring, any way, and it ought to have a thorough investigation. I should hope the time will be extended.

Alderman Power—The time is not asked for to give gentlemen an opportunity to visit any other place. Gentlemen went expressly this afternoon that they might be ready to vote yea or nay on the question tomorrow, and I cannot see what is to be gained by deferring the matter any longer. If they are not ready, the committee, as a committee, can ask for further time.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman says nothing is to be gained by delay; I would ask him what there is to be lost by letting it lie over.

Alderman Power—Nothing, except that the committee cannot gain anything by laying it over. The committee cannot agree, and the reports might as well come in next Thursday as next Monday.

The amendment was adopted—yeas 10, nays 2, as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gihson, Hulbert, Quincy, Sayward—10.

Nays—Aldermen Power, Stebbins—2.

REQUESTS FOR ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Chairman presented reports from the Finance Committee, to whom were referred the requests of the Water Board and the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, recommending the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the treasurer be and he hereby is authorized to borrow under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $175,000, to be added to the appropriations for Water Works.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Common, etc., the sum of twelve thousand dollars.

The orders were severally read once.

The appropriation for Public Buildings for the year was $92,000 00.

Following are the various expenditures of the appropriation classified with the amounts for the eight months of the financial year: Masonry, $7195 21; carpentry, $9604 12; painting and glazing, $5064 57; gas fitting and plumbing, $3439 80; whitewashing and plastering, $2903 75; furniture, $6370 11; roofing, $1707 01; iron work, $3151 59; locksmith, $127 30; gas and water, $2256 06; rents, $2128 12; cleansing, $2458 14; fuel, $759 25; salaries, $4700 00; supplies, horse keeping, and expenses of committee, $2757 43; grading and watering, $1003 75. Total, $55,626 21.

Recapitulation—Extraordinary expenses, $35,405 18; ordinary repairs and expenses, $55,626 21. Total, $91,031 39.

It will be seen that out of an appropriation of $92,000 the sum of $91,031 39 has been expended. The committee are of the opinion that the sum of $25,000 will be required for public buildings for the remaining four months of the financial year, and respectfully ask for an appropriation of that amount.

The request was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, presented orders to pay for street damages as follows: Heirs of Rebecca Sargent, $1833 75, widening Dorchester and G streets; heirs Edmund P. Dolbeare, $118 75, widening of Broad street. Severally passed,

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That due notice be given to Michael Scanlan and all other parties interested, that this Board will, on Monday, the 15th inst., at four o'clock P. M., take into consideration the expediency of removing a tree which occupies the roadway in P street, South Boston, opposite the estate of said Scanlan, numbered 57 on said street, and any persons objecting to said removal will then and there be heard.

Passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, presented a report in favor of granting the petition of Renter & Alley, to erect buildings within the building limits, and recommending the passage of the usual order therefor. The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert—

Resolved, That this Board hereby assents to the discharge by the Mayor of the mortgage given to the city of Roxbury by Anthony Garrett and Stephen Ellis, dated October 1, 1866, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 349, fol. 313, and to the execution by him of the legal instrument necessary for that purpose, to be delivered upon the payment to the City Treasurer of the amount due upon said mortgage.

Alderman Gihson asked if the Committee on Paving were ready to report on the subject of bridges over the Eastern Railroad and crossings at Sumner street, in East Boston.

Alderman Cutter, chairman of that committee, said the committee were not yet ready to report.

Alderman Gibson extended an invitation to the members of the Board to visit the locality on Wednesday morning at nine o'clock. The invitation was accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the applications of Charles Roberts and Winchester & Hight to use steam boilers and engines. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom were referred the schedules of assessments for sewers in Warren street and Chapman and Appleton streets, reported that they are correct and recommend the passage of orders for collection. The orders were read once.

Alderman Sayward, from the Joint Committee on Health, to whom was referred the request of the Board of Health for an additional appropriation of $1000 for quarantine purposes, submitted the following report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund the sum of $1000 to the appropriation for the Quarantine Department.

Passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

Alderman Sayward presented a report from the Committee on Health on petition of Charles H. Jenkins et al. for the suppression of the protracted use of locomotive whistles. The committee say the city has not authority to act, and recommend that the petitioners make application to the Old Colony Railroad. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported in favor of granting the application of Celia Lewis, and recommend that the time allowed for erecting stable on Dartmouth place be extended to June 1, 1874. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward submitted a report from the Joint Committee on Public Buildings, representing that in consequence of the extraordinary expenses created by order of the City Council during the present year, the appropriation for Public Buildings for the financial year 1873-74 has been nearly exhausted. Following is the cost of the work performed by order of the Council, and charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings, none of which was anticipated at the time the appropriation was made, in February, 1873:

Purchase of two buildings in Washington square, for the accommodation of the engine and hook and ladder carriage, including the fitting up of the same for men and horses.....	$3,334 47
Erection of an engine house on Parker street, on land leased for that purpose.....	3,034 25
Altering and enlarging Hose House No. 4, to accommodate an engine and horse hose carriage, together with the men and horses connected therewith.....	9,314 74
For the high service supply for City Hall, including the standpipe, hose and fixtures in connection with Tobey's patent as a preventive against fire.....	4,036 98
Iron shutters for the City Hall, strengthening the treasury vaults, and providing a fire-proof room in the same for the preservation of plans and public documents.....	4,310 70
Iron shutters and Hyatt lights for the Public Library Building, and for other protection against fire.....	7,500 00

In addition to the foregoing the following have been spent by the Committee on Public Buildings:

Alterations and new ventilation for the City Prison.....	$1,146 00
Excavating the cellar of Engine House No. 10, and protecting the same against tidewater..	2,727 98

Total..... $35,405 18

Alderman Quincy presented the report of the Committee on Legislative Matters, (printed City Document No. 129,) giving a summary of their labors during the last session of the Legislature. Read and sent down.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Whereas, By an agreement between the Commonwealth and the city, an avenue has been located over Fort Point Channel and the South Boston Flats, and designated "Eastern avenue," it is therefore Ordered, That the Committee on Paving be requested to consider the expediency of changing the name of the public way running from Commercial street to the East Boston Ferry landing from Eastern avenue to South Ferry avenue.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the petition of George B. Upton and others, that action in relation to the taking of Sudbury River be deferred until other sources for supply of water are examined, was taken from the table and referred to the Committee on Water.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Ordinances, who were directed to consider the expediency of amending the ordinance relating to the Fire Department, so as to provide that the commissioners shall have no power to interfere with the engineers during a fire, reported inexpedient, for the following reasons:

The committee cannot assume that the Board can possibly regard the command or direction of the department at fires as any part of their general official duties under the ordinance. At the same time should a case ever arrive of such gravity as to render them willing to assume, before the community, the weighty responsibility of removing from command an engineer or other officers from forces actually in action, the committee would not deprive them of the power of so doing by the proposed forbidding of interference. If, as has been argued, the statute power of command at fires is given to the engineers or other officers "of the Boston Department," cannot legally be extended to such "other officers" as these commissioners, then such extension by the ordinance is impossible, and cannot be inferred from its language. If, as the committee contend, the City Council may designate any officers of the department to exercise these powers, then the right to interfere in the last resort and under such exceptional circumstances as induce the commissioners to accept the responsibility, relying on the public for justification, the committee regard as wholesome and beneficial.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the report was laid on the table in order to enable a member of the committee to prepare a minority report.

Alderman Quincy, from the same committee, who were requested to report an ordinance in relation to the giving of false fire alarms reported the following:

Be it ordained, etc.

Section 1. No person shall open any of the signal boxes connected with the fire-alarm telegraph for the purpose of giving, or causing to be given, a false alarm of fire, or interfere in any way with said boxes, by breaking, cutting, injuring or defacing the same, or pulling the slides therein, except in case of fire, or without authority opening, tampering or meddling with said boxes, or any part or parts thereof, or with the fire-alarm telegraph wires or anything connected therewith.

Sec. 2. Any person or persons found guilty of violating any of the provisions of the foregoing section shall forfeit and pay a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each offence.

The ordinance was read once.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reporting in favor of granting the applications of David Smith & Co., William K. Wood, and John McDonough, victuallers; J. H. Donnelly, F. F. Bibber, for billiard saloon license; Pascal Gerard to exhibit feat of magic December 3 to December 15; L. C. Newhall to exhibit game of billiards in Bumstead Hall; W. B. Stacey to give concert in Tremont Temple; L. H. Jones & Co. et al. for transfer of wagon licenses; Keys and Ryan for two wagon licenses on Condon street; Bay View Quarry Co., for three wagon licenses; Hampden Cunningham for an auctioneer's license. Severally accepted.

OLD MATHER SCHOOLHOUSE.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Public Instruction, who were directed to inquire what disposition should be made of the Old Mather Schoolhouse, reported the following order, recommending its passage:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to remove the Old Mather Schoolhouse from its present position to the northwesterly corner of a lot of land owned by the city fronting on Highland street, and indicated on a plan in the office of the Superintendent of Public Buildings; the expense attending the same to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Alderman Stebbins inquired what disposition is to be made of the building—The committee don't say whether it is to be a target for hoys to throw stones at, or to be sold again.

Alderman Gaffield—When the order was presented to the committee I addressed a note to the chairman of the School Committee of that district, and received a reply stating that they desired another room fitted up for primary-school purposes, and would soon need the whole building. Therefore the committee passed the order in the form requested.

Alderman Stebbins—I notice that the order don't provide for fitting up the building for school purposes.

Alderman Gaffield—If the Committee on Public Buildings have n't the authority to do so all that is necessary for them to do is to ask for the money.

Alderman Gibson—I understand that the lot has considerable stone upon it which will have to be blown out.

Alderman Sayward—I supposed all the blowing out on this schoolhouse had been done before this. The Committee on Public Buildings don't generally fit up schoolhouses for the School Committee until it is asked for, and when this is asked for it will be time enough.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me that we ought to take hold of this just as if we were doing our own business. If we want it for a schoolhouse let us get all the blasting out for the cellar. It is pretty much all ledge out there and ought to be properly prepared.

Alderman Gaffield—It is proposed to remove this house upon a lot where there is not a large ledge. If it is necessary, I move that there be inserted in the order the words "and fitted up for primary-school purposes." That was the intention of the chairman of the School Committee.

The Alderman read an extract from a note to him, to the effect that the building would soon be needed for a primary school.

Alderman Sayward—If the Committee on Public Instruction desire to amend their report, I move it be recommitted and amended in the proper manner. It is an unusual manner to spend the city's money to fit up a schoolhouse at the mere suggestion of one member of the School Committee.

Alderman Gaffield—This will only make delay. The report was written with the idea of having the building fitted up for primary-school purposes. The gentleman has asked many times that it may be put out of the way of the new schoolhouse and this is to expedite matters.

Alderman Sayward—I am anxious to have it removed now, but I don't think it is proper way to spend the city's money to fit up schoolhouses at the suggestion of one member of the School Committee. When the request comes from the School Committee then will be time to do so.

The motion to recount was lost by a rising vote—4 for, 6 against.

The question recurred on the amendment of Alderman Gaffield.

Alderman Hulbert—I judge that the order had better stand as it was presented. If we go beyond that we act simply on a note from one member of the School Committee of the district. We should wait until the request comes in proper form.

The amendment was rejected and the order was passed.

THE PUBLIC PARK QUESTION.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the Board took up the special assignment for five o'clock, being the order appointing Messrs. Shaw, Perkins, Flynn, Prescott and Boardman, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, a committee on "Public Works," with directions to consider the expediency of providing for the establishment of one or more public parks within this city, the question being on the substitute order offered by Alderman Emery requesting the Mayor to petition the next Legislature for authority to take land for a park or parks.

Alderman Quincy—I am strongly opposed, Mr. Chairman, to the measure proposed by the other branch, but I am further inclined to favor the substitute offered by the Alderman on my right. It needs no prophet now to foretell the magnificent future of our city. Croakers are now dumb who once announced that our commercial importance was on the wane, and that under the shadow of our gigantic sister city, grass would soon grow on our wharves as we have caused it to grow on those of Salem. That our position is to be in the front rank among the metropolises of the New World is now assured, and that a park worthy of such position among cities, must, sooner or later be obtained, all seem to agree. The question then arises, should the first step in this direction be taken by the present City Government at this time, and if so in what manner? If we can take such step in such a manner as to involve no present expense, and without binding or even influencing our successors on the question of when the burden of the cost involved should be assumed, I think, even at this late stage of our municipal existence, we had better do so. And this I think will be effected by the passage of the substitute. It can do no harm to obtain the desired power and leave the question of the proper time for its exercise to be decided hereafter. But I agree most fully that in view of our present financial condition and the imminent demands for further expenditures which are unavoidable and necessary, for this outgoing City Government in the last month of its existence to create a new committee with a title indicating clearly enough the intent that it shall be perpetuated by our successors with indefinite powers, and a capacity for spending money limited only by the month of December, would be a cause for the just dissatisfaction of our constituents, especially, if as I contend, their work when the time shall come to undertake it, can be better performed for nothing by gentlemen ready to assume the task for its honor. I hope that when this power shall have been obtained from the legislature, there will be appointed an honorary impartial commission to examine the various locations, and report upon their respective merits. Some of our first citizens are sufficiently interested in this matter to give their services, and if it were advisable to visit other cities, would do so at their own expense and not that of the taxpayers. On the material presented by their report, the City Government could then act as it saw fit by committee or otherwise. If we can obtain facts and information for nothing, through a commission instead of at great expense through a committee of an already overworked City Government, our duty in the premises seems to me clear. With these views I shall vote for the substitute, and should that fail, then for an indefinite postponement.

Alderman Clark—I did not propose to say much on this subject tonight, but the gloomy view of the subject taken by the Alderman from the Highland District, last Monday, is such that I must get off something. I am not one of those who believe that grass is going to grow on the streets of the city of Boston, and I do believe it is the duty of this City Government to take some action on this subject. I wish to state that I shall favor the substitute offered by the Alderman from Ward 12, because I believe that this thing has been delayed long enough, and we should at once take some steps towards laying out a park or series of parks commensurate with the growth of the city.

I do not purpose to take the time of the Board but a very few moments in explaining my views upon this subject. The remarks by the Alderman from the Highland District at the last meeting of this Board have attracted a good deal of attention, and perhaps excited some uneasiness among the taxpayers. He presented a statement of our financial condition which was very far from encouraging. If it was a perfectly fair statement we might well pause before entering upon any new improvements or enterprises which would involve expense to the city. I think I shall be able to show in a very few words that it was not a statement of the whole case, but that it was a partial statement, and calculated to give a very erroneous impression of our condition. The Alderman wanted to frighten us from the contemplation even of a public park, and he went to work and figured up a debt that was somewhat appalling. He took a very gloomy view of the situation. He dwelt upon the enormous increase in our expenses and indebtedness during the past ten years, and he said very little about the increase of our industry and wealth; very little about the increased expenditures being the result of our increased prosperity.

If the gentleman will look at the objects for which the debt was contracted he will see that they are mainly for the purpose of furnishing facilities for carrying on business. Does any one pretend to say that we should be in a better position as a corporation without these improvements in streets and grades and without any increase to the debt, than we are with these improvements and with the debt? Does any one pretend that we could have made such rapid progress in the development of our industry and commerce as we have during the past six years, if these improvements had not been made? Considering what has been done during the past ten years, I am astonished at the small addition to city debt instead of being surprised at its increase. On May 1, 1863, the total net debt of the city was $9,330,000 and the valuation of the real and personal estates was $302,507,200. On the first of May, 1873, the net debt was $17,814,000 and the valuation was $693,831,400. The valuation had more than doubled, and this he it understood, just after a fire which had destroyed $80,000,000 of property, while the debt had not doubled, being in fact about a $1,000,000 short of it. Thus we see that we were nearer owing $17,000,000 than we were owing but $9,000,000.

But, says the Alderman, our liabilities have been largely increased since the first of May last. Very true, and so have our means of meeting them increased in proportion. It should be stated that during this period of ten years two million dollars were added to our debt, on account of expenses for war purposes. Previous to 1866 but very few important street improvements were made. In that year the Betterment law was obtained and the work was then begun in earnest. It would take too much time to enumerate the great street improvements which have been carried through since that time. Familiar as the members of this Board are with the work of the Government, I think they would be astonished in going over the statement of the Auditor to see what has been done in the way of widening and extending streets during the past six years. In nearly every instance I think it will be found that the property abutting on the streets which have been laid out, widened or extended, has increased in value for taxable purposes sufficiently to cover—in many cases, much more than cover—the interest on the expense of the improvements.

Now, as to the future, I do not think the outlook is at all gloomy. The Assessors' valuation of real and personal property in Boston, Charlestown, Brighton and West Roxbury for the present year is $765,817,000. Between 1871 and 1872 the valuation of Boston went up from $612,000,000 to $682,000,000, about twelve per cent. in one year, and there had been no new territory added during the year. The valuation of Brighton in 1872 was $10,881,000, in 1873 $14,548,000, an increase of about thirty-five per cent. Assuming an increase of ten per cent. on the valuation of Boston next year, and in view of the improvements on the burnt district and the increase in the value of property in the new wards, it will, undoubtedly, be much more than that. The total valuation will amount to $832,000,000. The total tax this year in Boston, Charlestown, Brighton and West Roxbury is $10,256,348. The same amount next year would make the rate per one thousand about $12 15. Add a million dollars to that amount and the rate would be about $13 50. In 1863 the rate was $11 50; in 1865, $15 80; in 1870, $15 30; in 1873, $12 80. In comparison with other large cities in this country, Boston certainly appears to good advantage. The rate in New York last year was $29 01 on a thousand; in Philadelphia, $21 50; in Chicago, $15 00; in Cincinnati, $20 10.

The Assessors' valuation in Chicago is based upon the actual market value. In the other cities named, the tax valuation is considerably below the actual valuation, but it can be shown, I think, that property in Boston is much less heavily taxed for municipal purposes than property of equal value in other large cities. In estimating the probable additions to our debt on account of public works contemplated or in progress it should be borne in mind that the interest on the water debt is substantially covered by the water rates. Loans made for the extension of the water works should not, therefore, be classed with loans made for other purposes. The statement of the Alderman in regard to the expense of constructing Eastern avenue is greatly exaggerated. The City Engineer made a careful estimate last year for the use of the city and the State. Omitting details, it appears that the cost of the solid portion of the avenue from Federal street to the Harbor Commissioners' line, including land damages, will be $242,765 16; the cost of bridge structure, $158,565 00; total $401,330 16. In the indenture which the city entered into this year it is expressly stated that Boston shall not be obliged to build the bridge and extend the avenue at a greater cost than the estimate of the City Engineer dated June 15, 1872, which I have already given. The construction of the avenue on the easterly side of the channel does not cost the city anything. All the parties owning the flats included within the lines of the avenue have agreed to fill them to a grade satisfactory to the Board of Aldermen of Boston and convey them to the city without expense.

If the items which went to make up the total of $7,000,000 for proposed street widenings are not more trustworthy than this statement about Eastern avenue, the taxpayers have no occasion for alarm. Suppose lands were purchased next year for a public park at an expense (after deducting betterments) of a million dollars, and the whole amount was put into the tax levy of that year, it would be an additional burden of twelve cents on every man who paid a tax on a hundred dollars, or $1 20 on a thousand. Add this to the tax next year with an extra million dollars to cover the increase in ordinary expenses, and we have a rate of $14 70. If a loan was made for, say, thirty years, and a tax levied to cover the interest and to provide a sinking fund to pay the bonds at maturity, the extra tax on every $1000 would be ten cents, or 1-100 of one per cent. The idea that a public park is a luxury which the city ought not to indulge in, unless there is more money in the treasury than the Government knows what to do with, is all wrong. As the growth of the city increases and all the attractive points in the surrounding country come to be thickly occupied by dwelling houses, the necessity of furnishing some place where the people who do not own horses and carriages can resort to for recreation and fresh air becomes more and more pressing.

At the hearing before a committee of the City Council in 1869 on the subject of a public park, an official statement was put in to show that 6 7-10 per cent. of the children born in Suffolk County were horn dead, while only 2 9-10 per cent. were born dead in the other counties in Massachusetts. Of the children born in Suffolk County alive, 18 35-100 per cent. died under one year, while in the other counties 13 7-100 per cent. died under one year. The State Board of Health in their last report say, it will be seen that the mortality of Boston is unprecedented. Exclusive of deaths from smallpox, the mortality of 1872 exceeds that of 1871 twenty-five per cent. But apart from sanitary considerations it can be shown that from a financial point of view the establishment of a park would be expedient, that, in fact, it can be made to pay if properly managed. At the hearing in 1869, to which I have referred, Hon. George B. Upton put in an official statement to show that the increased valuation of the three wards surrounding Central Park in New York paid a tax which covered the whole of the interest on the cost of the lands, and improvements for the park, and left an excess of $1,809,966 39.

Mr. James Houghton submitted the following statement from a well-known real-estate operator in New York:

"The Central Park was planned and accepted about twenty years since (Fifty-ninth to One Hundred and Sixth street, and subsequently to One Hundred and Tenth street). At that time lots from Fifty-ninth to Seventy-fifth street, on Fifth avenue, could have been bought in quantity for five hundred dollars each, and less. During the past three years they have sold for $18,000 to $30,000. Below Fifty-ninth, down to Forty-second street, a selection could have been had at eight hundred dollars to fifteen hundred dollars each. Last year one lot sold, northeast corner Fifth avenue and Fifty-fourth street, opposite St. Luke's Hospital, 25 by 100 feet, for $40,000 cash. Fifty thousand dollars was then and is now the asking price. Fifth avenue, from Seventy-fifth to One Hundred and Tenth street, when the park was accepted, was one hundred dollars to two hundred dollars per lot; now $8000 and $10,000 to $15,000 each; and beyond the park, for at least one mile to one and a half miles, the advance on real sales has been large and constantly upward. On Eighth avenue, west side of park, Fifty-ninth to One Hundred and Sixth street (park bounds at first Fifty-ninth to One Hundred and Sixth and to One Hundred and Tenth streets, and Fifth and Eighth avenues), there were no buyers, or hard to find."

Mr. Chairman—I had not supposed until one week ago today that any one here doubted for a moment the importance of having laid out, sooner or later, somewhere in the neighborhood of Boston, a public park which would accommodate the great multitude of people, so rapidly populating our city. It is something in which all classes are interested, the rich and the poor, the professional man and the merchant, the mechanic and the day laborer, all classes, both male and female, are more or less interested in having located within easy access a public park, which shall be open and free to all alike, as much the property of the one as of the other. It has been said that the whole neighborhood of Boston is one continuous park, that whichever way you drive the country is so beautiful and presents such a variety of landscape, with hills and valleys, with a land view and water view, scenery such as the neighborhood of no other city in this country can present, and on account of our having these great natural advantages, we have everything which is to be obtained in the laying out and building of a great public park, and therefore that any expenditure of money for this purpose would be unwise and injudicious.

This is all very well for those who are able to drive around and about this delightful country, but it is not what the multitude require. I admit, and fully agree to everything that can be said in regard to the natural beauties of the suburbs of the city. I do not believe that there is anything in the neighborhood of any city in any country that will compare with it; and as I drove over the hills and through the valleys of Milton and Dorchester, Roxbury and Brookline, during the autumn just closed, and enjoyed so much the beauties of nature, I thought of the great mass of the people in the city who were unable to enjoy that beautiful scenery, but who would be made healthier, happier and better if they could only, to a small extent even, be enabled so to do. It is for this very reason that the country is so beautiful and offers such attractions and facilities for the construction of a park for the people who cannot afford to ride over the country, that we should at once take such action as will enable us to secure a part of this splendid country, and make such arrangements and preparations as will enable the people, at small cost, to enjoy to some extent that which the great mass are now denied.

A park is always one of the great attractions of a city. The Central Park is one of the great sights of New York, as is also the parks of Philadelphia and Baltimore. It is always one of the first places a stranger visits upon reaching either of those cities, and a city without a park is behind the times, and cannot be ranked as a first-class city. We have natural advantages which will enable us to have the finest park in America if so desired. Nature has given us every facility, and it only remains for us to improve the opportunities so abundantly spread out before us. We have always taken a just and honest pride in our Common and Public Garden; and well we may, for they have been and still are among the most pleasant attractions of the city and among the things most enjoyed by the people; but we are fast outgrowing them, as we have outgrown the narrow and crooked streets and small warehouses of the past. We must be alive to the fact that we are called upon to anticipate the wants of a city of a million inhabitants, instead of a city of one hundred thousand, as at the time of the addition of the Public Garden.

The land can be taken now at small cost compared with what it will be worth a few years hence. Every year's delay will add to the cost on account of increased value of land. It will cost more now than it would have cost three years ago. It will cost more next year than this, and so on as the years go by. Let us, therefore, take such action as will insure the commencement of this too long neglected improvement.

Mr. Chairman, those are my views upon this subject of a public park. I believe that we ought not to delay taking some action looking to the laying out of a series of parks to surround the city, or in the neighborhood of the city. I admit that the expenditure and the taxes therefor look large. But the improvements of the city, the value of real estate and the growth of the city, will all help to pay the expense and tend to reduce the taxes of the people. I do not think that this subject is confined entirely to certain classes of people who have real estate to sell and expect to be benefited by the laying out of a public park in their vicinity. I know that the great majority of the business men of the city are in favor of a public park. As a merchant of the city, I think it is my duty to do every thing to increase and help push forward the mercantile interests of the city, and do what I can for its future growth and prosperity. Another thing, I do not believe that capitalists have any fears of taxes being so enormous. That was n't the sentiment in years gone by. Who came here in 1869 and asked for the laying out of a public park? Marshal P. Wilder, George P. Upton and George B. Emerson—men who are not to be at all benefited by a public park. And I believe all such men represented by Marshal P. Wilder and George B. Emerson are in favor of it. The estimates of the gentleman from the Highland District foot up to an enormous amount. Among them was $1,500,000 for a court house. Now we are not obliged to build a court house during the coming year, nor the next two years. But when we do, we have got land enough to sell to pay for the court house. That should be stricken out entirely in the enormous bill which looms up before the people. Then in this enormous expenditure for laying out streets he forgets to tell you that if the Street Commissioners do their duty we will get form 33 to 50 per cent. back in the way of betterments. I believe it is our duty to petition the incoming Legislature to permit the city—not to compel the city, but merely for such an act as will allow them to do so if they see fit—to take or purchase land in the next one or two, or three or five years, for a public park. I therefore shall support the substitute of Alderman Emery, and hope it will prevail.

Alderman Hulbert—The alderman from Ward 6 would not misrepresent anything pertaining to the public finances or public interests. I think he will award to me the same intention. There is n't an item that I presented last week, save that of Eastern avenue, that can be reduced a dollar. I took great pains in investigating the case of Eastern avenue. I went to sources that I deemed reliable. I produced an aggregate which is as low as I was warranted in doing. If we can save anything by filling in from South Boston, that is something gained. The least sum that the City Engineer will say it will cost is $1,200,000. If it is necessary to reduce that a half or a quarter of a million, I can bring forward other matters that will easily bring the figures up to the original amount. The gentleman has named the new Court House. I named $1,250,000; I should have said $1,500,000. I had no intention to create any one-sided story or present anything that is n't perfectly fair and candid. I had no other motive. I do not expect to trouble this or any other body another year with remarks of this kind. The Alderman claims that a debt is the measure of the prosperity of the city. That may be true, or it may not be. Certainly, it is not a measure of this city's prosperity. The Alderman stops at May, 1873. Come forward today and the debt is $26,000,000, a change of $9,000,000. The gentleman refers to my omitting the item of betterments. I have n't forgotten it. I took pains to ascertain from the Street Commissioners what amount we could recover, and the highest sum I could obtain was about six months' interest on the indebtedness; the whole amount is six months' interest and half the amount of the Sinking Fund on the present debt. We are not going to get back one-half or one-third, by any means. I speak advisedly. Another argument is brought from New York. I understand all this matter. One of the gentlemen quoted here as giving statistics from New York had very good reason to do so. He had a very large tract of land that he wished to sell, and was intensely interested in having a public park. I know all about that. I want to say a few more things, and if gentlemen will bear with me I will be as brief as possible. I feel intensely on this matter, and have not expressed myself as strongly as I feel, and I ain't a blue stocking, by any means. If any man will take a slate and pencil, and figure this thing out clearly, I would like to see it. Now this city, within a few months, has got to go into the market and borrow a large amount of money, and for purposes that enter into the business wants of the city—enterprises which our true development requires to be done. I did not come here last Monday night to ask this city to shut down the gate. Let us do what is necessary at first. I said wait till we can act legitimately for a park. I say so today, and I will give you my reasons. I undertake to say that all the money Boston can possibly borrow within the next two years she needs for things that are pressing for her material business interests, not for any thing extravagant or fanciful. I differ with my friend on my right and with the Alderman from Ward 6, as to the harmlessness of going to the Legislature this winter and getting authority to take land. You may talk about it being harmless, but it is no such thing. You can't convince those who loan you money of that. I tell you that the park question looms up, you may think it is in the distance, but the whole thing keeps in sight. The ostrich remains in sight even if he does stick his head in the sand. I say it will prejudice your present loans. Now I claim that the public credit of Boston, as such, should not be tainted nor harmed nor injured in any way by any man living except on an extraordinary account it cannot be prevented. We may burn up two hundred millions of property and we may find ourselves in a way to repair our credit. But I say don't let 's do it by purchasing luxuries that we don't need. It is every citizen's duty to protect the credit of the city when he can. I say it is not possible for the City Treasurer to effect loans in the next few months for all the things that are pressing to be done. I say you cannot borrow them on terms proper for the city of Boston to pay. I say, therefore, some of the material things must be delayed inevitably. Now it seems to me that the community should know—for, gentlemen, the community don't know the financial condition of the city; how many read the Auditor's reports?—things are left to go on and we are left to look after these things; how many can say how much Boston owes today? It is a thing that needs watching into and looking after. The public are deceived and should be undeceived. If the public understood how this thing is they would insist that some of these departments should give up to the needful things. There is the Board of Street Commissioners. If there is any board in this hall that deserves confidence, and where we have a right to place confidence, it is in the Street Commissioners. And yet, if any gentleman will look over the portfolio and see the things proposed to be done, and see what things of actual merit are proposed, and what they are going to do and what those things will cost, you can't help saying, "you must wait; you can't do all these things." I tell you, you must wait; they can't be done. We don't want any masterly inactivity either; but we do want masterly conformity to the present state of things. We have come to a point where we have had extraordinary expenses. We have done the best, as we believe, we could under the circumstances. I don't find fault with the course of things, but I say here we are with a debt of over twenty millions. Now, the tendency of things in City Hall you and I have seen. I declare here that an expenditure of half a million dollars today goes through here easier than one of five thousand did ten years ago. The gentleman quoted the debt of 1855. I did not go back to 1855. I did not think it was necessary. We have not grown richer in the last five years. The ground I take is this: We have got on the scale of large expenditures. The outside pressure is tremendous, and I wonder that we stand up as well as we do. Citizens having land come up and press for this or that improvement. The ball is moving with a velocity that is terrible. We have got to learn to keep within our appropriations, and I am glad we have got a Finance Committee that will call committees to account for spending too much money. We have got to the point where there are two forks in the road. You may go on one way, borrowing money, getting into debt, enter into all these enterprises so desirable, and roll up your debt and interest account, and force up your valuation. The valuation of Boston today is the highest of any city in the country. It is forced up here to the extreme limits, and we have been deceived so for years. The Assessors are forcing it up just as high as they dare to, and citizens will bear me up in what I say. Now, go on that road and just as sure as anything you will come upon evil times. If you go on the other road, determined to incur debt only when it is proper and acting with caution, I can see daylight, because moneyed men are looking on to see what our policy is to be. This is not the first time in our history that the matter of a debt has come up. In the time of the elder Quincy, of "Josiah the Bold," whose blood flows in the veins of that gentleman there, he said "The city, for sufficient causes, having created a public debt, has had the determination to enter upon a course of rigid economy to reduce it." That was the man who was so bold, who is quoted here time and again as so bold. If you want to get toned up on finance read those addresses of his, and I tell you you would vote for a public park this year. Now, I want to know if it is not important that we should conduct our finances so that we can borrow money at easy rates of interest. We have been accustomed to go to England, to the banking houses of the world. We have never gone there as suppliants. Our Treasurer has had a pretty stiff hack. But to start this park project and send him to England next spring to negotiate his loans, let him go to our old friends, the Baring Brothers, of whom Russell Sturgis, a Boston man, is now the head. I have talked with him about Boston and I will tell you one thing. Our Treasurer will tell you today that if you pass this order for a park, and you send the Treasurer to Baring Brothers he will be most respectfully snubbed. Then if he goes to another old friend, Morgan, the banker, he will get a decisive "No, sir." The fact is we have strained our credit this year, and I am afraid there will be trouble. There is no poetry about this. It is all fact. I say we have no business to enter upon a course of procedure that will damage the credit of the city. The city does not need a park. Gentlemen talk about this magnificent city of the future. I say we have got to take time for growth. We are not so big a city yet. Nobody supposes that our city has more than 265,000 inhabitants. That is all you can make out of it. More than that, Boston is not going to grow as the cities of the West do. We have got to grow the Boston way. We are not going to have any such rapid growth as some think. We shall have time to look into all these matters. Now, what is it to us that New York has Central Park? Why, she must have it. The Mayor of New York was on here a few years ago, and in going through the suburbs said, "If we had your suburbs we should not want a park." There is not a child or a man who can't get out into the country today if he wishes it. You speak of land being bought for less today. I have no doubt I can buy a magnificent coach, today, for less than I can years hence. But is that any reason I should ride in a $3000 coach? I don't care what a park will cost when we want it. The difficulty is not the cost of the land. When you get the land you begin to spend money upon it. When any avenue is opened for spending the city's money, it does seem as if all the hummers in creation are behind. I know what the sentiment is abroad. You travel abroad and you will find that you are a citizen of no mean city. We are charged with carrying a piece of Boston Common in our pockets. It is a piece of Boston pride and I am glad of it. You go to Europe today; New York is understood there, and they give the whole country a reputation from that of New York. I am not saying she deserves it; I am simply telling you the fact. I am Boston born, and I will stand up for old Boston, and I say what I do, because I don't want to see her credit injured. There is Jersey City, today, which can't pay her debts. Who wants to be a citizen of Jersey City? There is New York trying to issue legal tenders. We will have to do it too if we go into all these things. Now, you can't have a city with prosperity unless you allure and bring capital within it. I go for bringing capital within our borders. Reasonable taxation makes a great difference. It makes a great difference whether a man pays a hundred or two hundred thousand dollars taxes. There is a very large class of our population who feel this in their bones. I want to see moderate taxes, because it is for the best interest of the city, and when you crowd taxes up to the highest point you injure the city. Then, I want to see every provision made for the business of the city. I will go with the gentleman from Ward 6 in that. Show me anything that will benefit the business interests of the city, and I will go for it. Last winter some of our people were making great efforts for Western trade. I said very well, let us get Western trade if you can. But, I said, create skilled industries; build them up. When you come to that water power is of no account. Your steam power is just as good. The advantage of having skilled industries here is that skilled workmen will locate here and you can have competition; purchasers will meet trade at the head sources of supply. I don't care whether you can make silver watches or ware; I don't care whether you sell them here or send them to New York. When men employ a number of men it helps all the avenues of trade. Therefore I shall vote for water, whether it costs five or ten millions. You can't afford to be without water. Give us water, so that men can put up engines here by the hundred if they wish it. Let us have a water supply, and then you will have a property that can be taxed. We want to keep the expense of doing business moderate. Why has the wool trade increased so extensively within the past few years? One reason is, the expenses in New York are greater than here. Wool can be handled at a less expense here than in New York. A ship owner is willing to come here for a cargo worth a thousand dollars less than he will go there, because he has extra charges to pay there. I say, create facilities for trade, that you may bring in skilled industries, and then you will have prosperity: but you can't do that by creating luxuries. You can't create property, gentlemen, by going out and building a park. It is a fallacy to think so. As to the increase of taxable property the fact is it ain't worth a skiver to you or me. I knew of a gentleman who would have $2500 come to him from an uncle when the latter should die. He spent that money over three or four times before his uncle died, simply because he was going to have it. A park will not create property. The fact is we discount all that beforehand. Our growth is to be a steady growth. We won't have more than three hundred thousand when we take in all the annexed territory. I have n't said anything about the increased expenses. If gentlemen suppose that the citizens of Brighton, West Roxbury and Charlestown are not human you are very much mistaken. It is our bounden duty to aim for a policy that will keep taxation within proper limits. If war comes let us meet it, but don't let us do it in time of peace. I believe our city is in a transition state, I don't know where this is to end. They are talking of annexing Cambridge and Somerville and Chelsea; and a few days ago I saw in a Berkshire paper the suggestion that we take in Berkshire and make her a part of us. Now, this creating a city debt is a great evil. The cities of the country today are struggling under this thing. If we go on five years longer—well, we'll be the belle city for debt. This large indebtedness of a large municipality harms the whole community. I ask whether we have n't come to the time when prudence—and by prudence I mean good judgment—would withhold us from undertaking these great enterprises. You know that in old time a certain king disregarded certain things, and he was sent out to eat grass with humiliation. He returned to reason. I think the cities of the country today are eating the grass of humiliation. I mean by that when a city can't get credit. Look at New York, that great city with its millions upon millions, consulting about issuing legal tenders to pay her debts to her workmen. That is eating the grass of humiliation. We have got a large debt, and I can see where we have got to increase it many millions. We have got to borrow it where we can get it cheap. We came near being snubbed last year. You may talk about the panic as much as you have a mind to, but that is n't the trouble. When we can't go into the market and get money at A 1 rates something is wrong. If I should find some gentlemen's names on the street selling at eight or nine per cent. who ought to sell for six, I should think something was the matter. Now, a man who has always been a six-per cent. man, does he go at nine per cent. if everything is all right? It is n't as it ought to be. If we can't get money at A 1 rates there is something wrong. I say let us come home and see where we stand. If the moneyed men have any misapprehension let us go and make a statement. We have always been considered A 1. I don't want Boston to stand below that. It is worth living for to keep her A 1. Don't let us borrow money to injure our credit. Therefore, if we must postpone that building or this street rather than injure our credit, I say postpone that building. The gentleman says the Court House is n't pressing. Why not? We need it. There are other things pressing. If you go to the Auditor or Treasurer and sit down and talk with either of them, and say what can we borrow at fair, reasonable rates, I think you will get some plain common sense from him. Therefore if you bring up the subject of a park; if you inaugurate it, initiate, begin it, it becomes an element in the thoughts of all moneyed men who are estimating your wants. If we will be manly enough to say this park is necessary and it is desirable, and when we can afford to we must have it, I feel an interest in the success and growth of Boston; but I say let us be manly enough, if there is outside pressure, if there are newspapers urging this; let us look this thing squarely in the face and say, will it hurt our credit to take this thing now, and consider it, and go right out and say we won't touch this thing now? I am not willing to have the interest account double what was the entire city expense a few years ago, and I submit that the position I take is a correct one. I believe that the city, today, will say that the park question should be laid aside; that we should have good credit in our money markets. All this talk about the great future of the city—why you and I won't live to see it; we are not going to have such a mushroom growth as you speak of. I hope we shall pursue such a course as will save the credit of the city unharmed.

Alderman Clark—If there is anything in the world that will ruin the city's credit it is just such speeches as that of the Alderman from the Highland District. I pretend to say that the credit of the city of Boston stands as fairly today as it ever stood, and I should n't wish to have a better mission than to go abroad and ask the Barings or Morgans for another loan at five or six per cent. and not at eight or nine per cent. They would say it is just the place they want to put their money—where it is safe. I contend, gentlemen, that it is not hard to make a loan for a city—whose valuation is eight or nine hundred millions, and whose debt is only twenty-six millions. I presume to say that the City Treasurer will have no trouble in raising money in Europe within the next six months easily. I am glad the gentleman has referred to the elder Quincy. He had strength to build a public market with greater opposition than that given to the public park today. Does anybody doubt the wisdom of that measure? He had the courage to buy a piece of property which he advised the city to hold, and was thereby enabled to leave half a million dollars more to his heirs. There is no trouble about this money, notwithstanding all these gloomy forebodings. Mr. Morgan was a member of the firm with which the gentleman was once connected, and in 1840 the firm broke up, much to the regret of the business community of the city of Boston. Notwithstanding that many old business concerns have gone out of business, the trade of Boston is rapidly increasing. I will venture to say that, if the Treasurer goes to Europe and can't effect a loan there, if he will put it off a few months he can get it from our own citizens, and they will let the city have it at a reasonable rate of interest. They have put their money in these new buildings. Notwithstanding a fire by which over sixty millions were swept off the face of the earth, what was the number of failures in this community? The mercantile community stood up and paid a hundred cents on the dollar almost to a man. And during this financial crisis I know of but one single failure on State street. A few years ago the Cunard Company took off their steamers because they could n't get freight enough to fill them with. Now, those steamers are running from here once a week. This is a tremendous stride, and they are talking of having them leave here twice a week next spring. I suppose there is also more than double the amount of business done over the railroads that there was ten years ago. I don't know what the debt of Boston will be ten years hence, but I do know that as our debt increases, so our means increase in still greater proportion. The gentleman has seven millions down in his estimate for things which are first rate to do if we see fit to do them. It is n't to be supposed that we are to do everything that everybody represents to us. I should estimate the cost of water to be $7,000,000. The City Engineer's estimate is $5,000,000, but I don't propose to go into these estimates. The question is simply this: Shall we inaugurate a measure to take advantage of an opportunity to buy land at a very small expense, or wait till the land becomes so expensive that we can't afford to take it? The expenditure would be very small for the amount required now—not enough to deter any foreign banker from giving us a loan. I have attempted to say that a public would so improve the taxable valuation that it would pay the entire expenditure. I also believe that it is important for us to encourage manufactures everywhere within the limits of the city, but if you do build up manufactures you will have a very large class of laboring men for whom it is good policy to provide; and if it is nothing more than justice that you should look to the sanitary condition of those you bring around you. It is all very well for him and me, who can ride and drive through the city and into the suburbs, but the mass of people are poor; and when they do get into the suburbs, at every green field they see stuck up the sign, "This is private property; trespassers will be prosecuted according to law." It is our duty to make provision for this class of people who cannot afford to indulge in the luxury of a carriage. It is n't necessary, Mr. Chairman, to go through this labyrinth of gloom which the Alderman presents. It is n't necessary, I am glad to hear him say, that Boston is so highly respected abroad. She has never had any trouble in getting credit abroad and never will have, provided she don't get up and say her credit is gone to the dogs. This order simply asks the Legislature to give the right to take or buy land for the purpose of a public park. It does n't require the expenditure of a single dollar, and I hope therefore we shall get a majority of the Board and that the order will be passed.

Alderman Emery—I move that when the question be taken it be by yeas and nays on the substitute. Carried.

Alderman Gaffield—This is an important question, and one on which able speeches have been made on both sides. I think the matter ought to lie over for a longer time, and I move it be laid upon the table.

The motion was carried.

BROADWAY BRIDGE.

On motion of Alderman Power, the orders to repair the draw and rebuild the foundations of the Broadway Bridge, and for a loan of $114,000 to meet the expense thereof, and report of City Engineer on the subject (City Doc. No. 128), were taken from the table.

The question was on the passage of the orders.

Alderman Hulbert—I took some pains to get the opinion of the City Engineer, and I must say that from what I learned from him I have come to the conclusion that the plan proposed under the head of estimate No. 3 would accomplish everything that was desired. The only questions are durability and the cost of the iron piles. There seems to be no objection to this form of structure. These piles are the same as the old ones; they are simply for guiding and moving the draw, and there is that much less room displaced in the channel; besides saving fifty per cent. expense. I fail to see the necessity of going to this extra expense of $36,000 or $40,000.

Alderman Stebbins—I have not conferred with the City Engineer, but have carefully read the report as printed and have arrived at the same opinion as the Alderman from the Highlands. I therefore move as an amendment to strike out the words "$114,000" and insert "$78,000."

Alderman Power—I hope the motion will not prevail. If we are to have an engineer the only true policy is to follow his advice, unless we wish to be subject to this continual breaking down. Nobody can doubt that the plan marked 5 is the best, and will make the bridge as sure as can be. Nobody knows when these piles will give way. No man will dispute this. If you don't want to get into trouble I advise you to adopt the plan No. 5. Any man who knows anything of the wear and tear of iron, knows that it must give way sooner or later. The piles kept settling all the time, and it is likely to continue, and nobody doubts that they will have to be replaced in a short time. It is n't good policy for the city to be left in that predicament. This solid stone structure is just as sure a thing as can be built in the world, and it is the only safe, economical plan for the city to adopt. The City Engineer says it is the best.

Alderman Stebbins—I would ask if the Harbor Commissioners have been consulted, and whether they have any objection to these stone piers going there?

Alderman Power—It is not to be presumed that anything will be done without consulting the Harbor Commissioners.

Alderman Hulbert—I hope it may lie over. I asked the City Engineer a great many questions and concluded that the plan expending $78,000 is the best.

On motion of Alderman Power a recess of five minutes was taken to allow members to inspect the various plans.

On the reassembling of the Board Alderman Power said. The Committee on Bridges are unanimously in favor of adopting this plan; they feel the heavy responsibility on them, and if anything should happen they would be to blame. The draw is liable to tumble over when it is open. Dover-street Bridge is out of repair and closed, and if it should be necessary to close this one you see the predicament people getting to and from South Boston are in.

Alderman Gibson—I don't think the delay of a week would make any great difference. Dover-street Bridge will be done next week.

The Chairman stated that this order would have to go to the Council, and according to their rule it would have to lie over there a week. The danger is from settling back to the columns while they are rolling the bridge on and off. When the bridge is on and people are passing over it is perfectly safe.

Alderman Power—There is no danger except where the draw is turned off, but the bridge has been in a dangerous position all the year. And the committee have been perplexed at the large expense that in their judgment ought to be incurred; they have concluded that it is n't for the best interest of the City of Boston to throw away money to make repairs on it.

Alderman Stebbins—If I vote today I shall vote for estimate No. 3, because I think it is the best. Perhaps after waiting a week, my opinion might change. After the first of December very few vessels pass Fort Point Channel. I know that from experience, having done business there many years. No matter whether you pass this order or not, nothing will be done till spring.

Alderman Emery—I think we have an able Committee on Bridges; they favor this plan unanimously, and I hope we shall pass this matter this evening, and adopt the committee's report.

Alderman Clark—I go for the best bridge, provided it will not interfere with the harbor; and I don't understand that the Harbor Commissioners have been consulted in regard to the filling up of the channel. If I vote tonight I shall vote ignorantly, so far as any knowledge is obtained outside of the Committee.

Alderman Gibson—If this channel is to be open for all time I go for the largest expenditure, but if it is to be kept open for only fifteen or twenty years, I shall go in for a smaller expense. It is my opinion that in thirty years that whole channel will be filled.

Alderman Power—The committee and the City Engineer are unanims. I don't care what action is taken here, but I want some action taken so that we can get the matters off our shoulders.

Alderman Gibson in the chair.

Alderman Cutter—I have the honor to be the chairman of the Committee on Bridges, and perhaps it is as well for me to make a statement. This bridge has been an eyesore to me. I have tried to get up a plan to save that bridge without spending too much money. If you are going to build it for only twenty years, it is best to take a cheap structure. The Engineer says now is the best time to do the work, while vessels are not passing through there in large numbers.

Alderman Hulbert—It seems to me that we should know what the opinion of the Harbor Commissioners is in regard to the displacing of so large an area. It seems to me that two objects can be obtained by a delay of one week. We can learn what is the best plan and what is the opinion of the Harbor Commissioners.

Alderman Cutter—I had the honor to build the draw of Federal-street Bridge. We got up a plan satisfactory to the Harbor Commissioners, and went on to let the draw job out. Just as we got it let out the Commissioners vetoed us and were determined to have us build another structure—up in the air, like the Broadway Bridge. We had to go before the Legislative Committee and represent to them that it was unfit for heavy teams and horse cars; and so they agreed to our plan, if we would put in the word "temporary." So Federal-street Bridge is a "temporary structure." You want to show them what you want and satisfy them of its utility.

Alderman Power—I don't think there will be very much objection from the Harbor Commissioners. I don't see what objections they can possibly make.

Alderman Hulbert—It seems to me best to delay a few days and get the opinion of the Harbor Commissioners.

Alderman Gibson—This thing is the biggest elephant in Boston. Within four years the whole bridge has been rebuilt from the abutments; the draw has never been true. It is liable to go down at any time.

Alderman Power—If gentlemen have confidence in the committee they will not question the fact that the plan adopted is the best. Of course, if we can't get permission it will perhaps have to go over to the next Government.

Alderman Gaffield—I was a member of the Government when the Broadway extension was urged. It was then said that it was for our advantage to use these piles, and it seems to me that three years have fulfilled the prediction. I think we should adopt the plan recommended by the committee.

Alderman Clark—For the reasons given by the committee, I shall favor the adoption of the plan unanimously recommended by them. I would ask the gentleman from Ward 1 whether he was in the City Government when this project was adopted?

Alderman Gibson—I was not; and if I had been I would have labored to defeat this project. It has cost us $14,000 a year every year since.

Alderman Gaffield—I wish to state that the year I referred to it was defeated, and passed the year afterward.

The amendment was lost and the order was passed—yeas 11, nays 1—as follows:

Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Power, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins—11.

Nays—Alderman Hulbert—1.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the Board adjourned to Tuesday, December 9, at four o'clock P. M.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
DECEMBER 4, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held at half-past seven o'clock P. M., E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Report of the City Clerk placed on file.

Petitions of George B. Upton, of the town of Wintrop and others, referred in concurrence.

The following papers received concurrent action:

Report and order authorizing a permit to be issued to Rueter & Alley to erect a wooden building. Order passed.

Reference to Committee on Finance of a request of the Committee on Public Buildings for an additional appropriation of $25,000.

Order requesting Committee on Public Institutions to report on Home for the Poor, etc., at next meeting of Common Council, amended by inserting Board of Aldermen.

The following were read once:

Order to abate from the tax on Allen & Noble's estate on Devonshire street the sum of $204 75.

Report and order authorizing the removal of the Old Mather Schoolhouse to the city lot, Highland street.

Report and order for a transfer of $1000 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for Quarantine Department.

The order authorizing the rebuilding of the draw and foundations of Broadway Bridge, over Fort Point Channel, at an estimated cost of $114,000, and for a loan therefor, were considered.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—It strikes me that this is precisely a similar case to that of the Dartmouth-street bridge which the Council referred to the Committee on Streets. It is an application from the Board of Aldermen for an appropriation for $114,000 to be spent by one of their committees. It strikes me that it needs further investigation and it would be proper to be referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—As it is a matter of very great importance I would like to move that the committee report at the next meeting. Of course it ought to be investigated, but it is getting to be late in the season and action should not be deferred.

The Chair—It would be necessary to reconsider the last vote to make such an amendment.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I can assure the gentleman that the committee will consider it first.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Report and order to refund to Henry T. Woods $100 67, being tax erroneously assessed in 1872, and paid upon estate 1086 Shawmut avenue. Passed.

Report and order (new draught) to provide temporary accommodations for the primary-school pupils living between Arlington and Parker streets. Passed.

Report and order to provide temporary accommodations for primary schools, Lewis District. Passed.

Report and order to provide temporary accommodations for primary schools in vicinity of Norfolk street, Ward 16. Passed.

Order that an additional appropriation of $225 be made to cover the expense of watering streets around the public grounds. Passed.

A PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I believe it is always in order for a member of the City Council to rise to a question of personal privilege. That is my object at this moment. I have read in the official report of the doings of the Board of Aldermen on the 1st instant, as follows:

[Mr. Shaw read the remarks of Alderman Hulbert during the consideration of the order for improving Washington park.]

Mr. Shaw—Well, sir, I am the gentleman referred to, and in order that I shall not be misunderstood—for I never undertook, in my life, except in the few remarks which I made at the opening of the Council, to put my remarks on paper—and that nobody may be libelled, I have written down what I have to say. Now, sir, I have nothing to take back, nothing to retract; but, on the contrary, as the gentleman has so emphatically called attention to my remarks, and so sanctimoniously said they are "entirely false," I wish to state something concerning it. Perhaps he may, upon reflection, conclude that it is best to let well enough alone; for I have taken pains to obtain a few figures and a few more facts, and he possibly may find his pert allusion to me (in his anti-park speech) as the "statistician of the Council" may "contain more truth than poetry."

The Alderman says, very plausibly, "I don't live facing the park, but I do live in sight of it." His house, by measurement, is less than 400 feet from the park. Why did n't he add the whole truth and say "I own in addition to my house lot about 300,000 feet, or nearly seven acres, almost the whole of which is directly in front of this park, through a portion of which I have had a street laid out so as to bring it into the market, making his whole territory there about eight acres." "Figures don't lie." I hold in my hand a plan of the entire district standing in the gentleman's name, with the number of feet to each lot. In what I had to say in my former allusion to him I cast no reflections on him as an individual or as a property holder near Washington park, my remarks being illustrative of a principle in which the whole public are concerned, as showing the narrow and selfish views of such as find themselves surrounded by all the luxuries with which God and nature have blessed them, and are so ready to deny to the less fortunate the enjoyment of such privileges. If the gentleman desires anything more, I can reinforce my statements in the same direction, for he may as well understand that I shall allow no man, however tall he may stand in his boots, to go unanswered when he charges me with making statements to this Council or elsewhere, which are "entirely false." But, sir, I may have said enough at the present moment to satisfy the Council at least that I have made no false statements, and I am ready to go before the public on that issue. And the gentleman may as well understand now as well as at any other time that I shall allow no man to go unanswered. This is a charge made by a member of the City Council, and I am a member of the City Council and have a right to rise in my place when an attack is made upon me, when I rise here and state facts. With the condition of the Council, anxious for adjournment, I shall go no farther, but I shall wish it to be distinctly understood that, however sanctimonious and however much a man may be a church member, I care not for his character, nor his command of the property which he owns nor his position in society; I shall stand up here and defend myself. And when I make a proposition here for the benefit of the public, in my judgment, at least, I shall endeavor to reinforce it with all the facts and statements and arguments with which God has endowed me. Now, sir, I am ready to say to you and my friends in the City Council, and to the gentlemen who belong to the City Government of Boston, that I don't come here to raise my voice in favor of any project which directly affects me. I have never charged that the gentleman has raised his voice directly in favor of any project that affects him, but I reiterate the statement I have made, and hope it will echo through these halls, that it is very inconsistent for any gentleman, who has been placed as he has, with all the beauties of a public park around him, to rise in his place and make such statements as he has made. When that gentleman can put his finger upon one single point in which I have diverged from the public interest, then he may chastise me and criticise me in a lengthy speech which he may make on this project, or any other. I beg pardon of the Council for taking so much time. When the matter of a public park comes before the Council again I shall be prepared to meet his argument and I shall endeavor to show that the statements which he made are perfectly illusive, and, as has been remarked in the other branch, if anything tends to ruin the credit of the city of Boston, it is the remarks of that gentleman. He is a business man and should know better. He should know that every word of his is recorded; that it goes across the continent and to Europe, and directly affects every attempt of the city of Boston to negotiate a loan. At a future time I shall endeavor to answer the argument of the gentleman upon the public park question.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I don't know that I am in order, but I should like to say one word. The gentleman from Ward 5 has risen—

The Chair—The gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Perkins—I did n't know but I might be allowed to speak by unanimous consent.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I shall beg leave to reply to the gentleman if he speaks.

The Chair—That is precisely the difficulty of allowing one gentleman to speak out of order; another will wish to reply.

Mr. Perkins—If the gentleman proposes to choke me off—

Mr. Shaw— I proposed to choke nobody off. If the gentleman is allowed to speak, I shall claim the privilege of answering him.

PETITIONS.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 presented the petition of the town of Wintrop in regard to the matter of annexation to the city of Boston, and asking for a hearing.

On motion of Mr. Pease, the petition was referred to the Committee on Legislative Affairs:

Mr. Upham of Ward 16 presented the petition of A. T. Stearns for permission to erect a building larger than the legal dimensions.

On motion of Mr. Upham, the petition was referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, from the Joint Committee on Streets, to whom were referred the resolves and orders of the Board of Street Commissioners for the laying out of Magazine street at an expense of $24,015 95, for the extension of Quincy place to Pearl place at an expense of $12,784, and for the extension of Eustis street to Magazine street at an expense of $11,640 70, presented reports recommending the passage of the several orders in concurrence with the Board of Street Commissioners.

The orders were severally read once.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, from the Joint Committee on Streets, to whom was referred an order to authorize the Mayor to convey a portion of Sturgis street, discontinued, to the heirs of W. H. Bordman, submitted a report recommending the passage of the order.

The order was passed to a second reading, and laid over under the rules.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred the petition of W. H. Baldwin, et al., in reference to a new ward room in Ward 10, submitted a report representing that the present ward room is equal in accommodation to the other wards in the city, and the committee deem it sufficient for the citizens of the ward for two years to come, when a new division of the wards will take place, and the location of the ward rooms be changed. The committee believe that further action on the petition is at present inexpedient.

The report was accepted.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the same committee, submitted a report recommending that the petition of F. P. Meigs, in reference to the proposed introduction of certain school desks and seats into the public schools, be referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

The report was accepted and the petition referred as recommended.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12, from the Committee on Public Institutions, to whom was referred the communication from a Committee of the Grand Jury of Suffolk County, in relation to religious instruction in the institutions under the management or control of the city, submitted a report recommending that the subject be referred to the Directors of Public Institutions, with a request that they will consider the matter and report to the City Council on or before the 15th inst., their opinion as to the propriety of changing the present rules of the institutions providing for moral and religious instruction.

The report was accepted and the reference ordered as recommended.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

The report of the proceedings of the Committee on Legislative Matters (City Doc. No. 129) came down among the papers from the Board of Aldermen, and came up for consideration.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—Mr. President, I desire to have that matter lie upon the table, because I wish to make some comments on that report, and state some facts which are not stated in that report. I move that the report lie upon the table.

The motion was carried. Later in the session Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said—

Mr. President—I desire to move that the report of the Committee on Legislative Affairs, or what purports to be the report of that committee, be taken from the table. I do this for the purpose of moving that it be recommitted to the committee. The report, since it has been written, has never been considered by the committee, and there are many things in it which are erroneous. I therefore move to take it from the table.

Carried.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I move that it be recommitted to the Committee on Legislative Matters.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I shall not oppose the motion, but I would remind the gentleman that it was on his motion that the chairman was authorized to make the report.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—That is entirely true, but the gentleman does not state it exactly as it was understood by the committee. The gentleman from Ward 3 made the motion that the committee report in print, and that matter was considered in the committee. My motion was that the chairman should prepare the report, but I did not mean that the chairman should present the report to the City Council, but that he should submit the report to the committee, and that then it should be presented to the City Government. One great trouble of this City Government is that chairmen of the joint standing committees, especially the chairman on the part of the Board of Aldermen, think they can pocket the entire committee, and they go on as they please, even sometimes treating the committee with discourtesy, as, for instance, a gentleman making a report to the Board upon a matter that I, as a member of the committee, was interested in, when I knew nothing about the report. It is a thing that would not be tolerated in any legislative body. Now the chairman of the committee was to prepare this report, but it was understood that the report should be submitted to the committee, otherwise it is not a report of the committee.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I am glad to hear the statement of the gentleman, for it is in accordance with statements I have made with regard to the arbitrary manner in which chairmen of committees have acted. I stated a few evenings since, in regard to the committee upon which, Mr. President, I had the honor to be appointed by you, that the vote authorizing chairmen to approve bills met my disapproval. In regard to this report of the Committee on Legislative Matters (City Document No. 129), it is one of the most fulsome documents I ever read in behalf of a certain gentleman; and I think that before I sit down, if it will be in order, I shall move to amend its title; I may or may not conclude to do so. In the first place I notice that it contains an entirely gross misstatement. I know what I say, and am responsible for what I say. I call attention to the ninth page of this document, in the matter referring to Berkeley street, which this report says is "one of the most important matters," etc. Without reading the whole, I will give one extract:

"In this connection the committee will state that at one of said hearings objection was made by a member of the lower branch of the City Council to the chairman's assuming to appear in behalf of the city, without special instructions in the case from the City Government."

Mr. Shaw—This is the "lower branch"—we are the "lower branch"—we are the "lower branch"—we are the "lower branch"—perhaps you may not be aware of it—this is the lower branch. I did make that proposition, Mr. President, and was sustained by a large majority of the committee on the ground I took, and I shall be sustained here tonight by one of them at least, if not by others. The position which I took before the committee was the correct one. It was that the chairman of said committee had not the right to appear before the committee of the Legislature and assume to pledge the city of Boston to any one particular act or measure without a vote of the City Council, and I reiterate and repeat that statement here which I believe is absolutely true, and in which I am sustained by every gentleman who understands parliamentary usages. The report also says:—

"The Judiciary Committee, however, overruled said objection on the ground that the authority given by the joint rule was general, 'unless otherwise ordered,' and not confined to cases of special instructions."

Now, Mr. President, this is n't true. I have had some little experience in the Legislature and some experience before legislative committees. I rose as I had a right to do, as a citizen of Boston, as a member of the City Government, and did object to the statement which the chairman of this Legislative Committee made, which was that the city of Boston was bound to do so and so, and that the City Government were found to sustain such and such action. I stated there unqualifiedly that no vote had passed the City Council authorizing such a statement to be made, or such action to be taken. The chairman of that committee, on which there were other most respectable lawyers, said that my statements as a member of the City Council would be taken with as much force as those of a member of the committee. So much for that. "Member of the lower branch"

Now, again, on the tenth page, with regard to "Commission on Drainage and Water Supply." And here let me remind the Council that this question on the drainage and water supply has been before the Legislature before, when I had the honor to be a member in 1872, and to which bill I was enabled to add an amendment that the commission should not be appointed except by a vote of the City Council; and that bill provided that an area within ten miles, more or less, from this building should be surveyed, or rather that a commission should be appointed by the State for the purpose of surveying for a water supply and for the laying out of streets in those towns adjacent to Boston or within ten miles of it. That matter was brought, about one year ago, to the attention of this Council, and it was rejected by an almost unanimous vote. What then occurred? Why, sir, the application is made to the Great and General Court for a modified plan, but of the same character; modified in this, that the expense of the same should be assessed equitably upon the cities and towns benefited thereby. In that plausible shape it went before an eminently respectable committee of the Legislature. The gentleman says, "Hon. William Gray" and "the chairman of this committee" went before said committee—of which I have something to say afterwards. The hearing went on, and Hon. Mr. Gray made his statement, and he was supported and supplemented by Hon. Mr. Quincy and several legal gentlemen, as for instance, Hon. H. G. Parker, city solicitor of Cambridge, and by that eminent lawyer of Cambridge, Hon. Mr. Muzzey, and by the City Solicitor of Somerville, and the representatives of the town of Newton, and some other towns adjacent to the city of Boston, and on humble individual who has now the honor to address you, rose and protested against such action. Of course that committee, some of them being acquainted with me, and with whom I had previously the honor to serve in the Legislature, were somewhat surprised that I should have the courage to appear there and raise my feeble voice on a constitutional question—for that is what I spoke upon. In answer to the question on which side I appeared, I declined to state unless they agreed to give me a full and square hearing, and they concluded to give me further time and I appeared. I then told them that I believed no such proposition as they made was constitutional; that I did not believe it was the right of the Legislature to pass any such bill, and most certainly if they passed it the Executive would not approve it. I stated my grounds and will state them now, that no Legislature had the right to assess for the purposes named therein, the cost of grading and improving the streets of Medford or any other town upon the city of Boston.

I submit now if this was not sound doctrine. Some laughed at me for the proposition, but I had the honor to receive from Hon. Mr. Muzzey, whom I believe to be an able lawyer, this compliment. He said, "Mr. Shaw, I am opposed to you, as I appear in behalf of the city of Cambridge; but you have made a very sound, legal, constitutional argument." Of course my friend from Ward 6 laughs; let him laugh. What was the result? The bill was reported to the House of Representatives, where it passed with only a feeble protest from some of the city members. But when it reached the Senate, some of the legal gentlemen there began to look into it. They found the same difficulty that I had found. They called the attention of Hon. Charles R. Train, Attorney-General of the Commonwealth, to it and asked him if that bill could not be amended. What was his reply? It was, "No, gentlemen, you can't amend an unconstitutional law," and the bill went to the dogs. So much for that. Now, sir, I ask why in the name of common sense, justice and decency, why this honorable chairman of this committee should not have reported the facts in this case instead of saying "member of the lower branch"? I admit I am a "member of the lower branch;" I am not a member of the "higher branch," and never expect to be, and don't expect to be a member of the "lower branch" after this year. Again, why could not the facts have been stated without a slur upon that humble member of the "lower branch"? I am very much surprised at the statements of this document. On the first page of the report that the gentleman signs it says "at the first meeting of the committee a vote was passed authorizing the chairman," etc.—"the chairman," etc. I find "chairman" down three or four times on that page, and I go on, and pages 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12, I find, with scarcely a reference to the committee, that the "chairman" quotes himself nineteen times. Well, sir, I suppose that is a matter of taste, but this is very bad taste, in my judgment. I have thought, when I see reports come in here from the committees of the City Government, that they came with the sanction of the members of the committees. I have taken it for granted that that was the case with this one, but when I asked members of this committee if they are responsible for this report, they say they are not. I don't intend to criticise any one, but I do say that when a chairman undertakes to make a report it should be taken before the committee to receive their sanction before it is submitted to the City Council. It looks to me like an attempt on the part of the gentleman who signs this document to blow his own bugle. That is not in accordance with the rules of etiquette, and especially when I find misstatements in the document. I wish therefore that this matter may go before the committee, as my honorable friend has proposed, and that it shall be investigated and criticised and a proper report giving these facts shall be made, so that the City Council shall understand what have been the doings of their committee before the Legislature, especially in view of the fact that we shall soon have a new Legislature coming into the State House, and that new propositions have been made to be reported to the Legislature. It seems to me it will be the duty of any future committee to keep a proper record of their measures as they bring them before the Legislature, so that this Council shall know what action they take. Now, sir, I forgot to state one considerable objection, and an important one, in my mind, in regard to the passage of this order, which is this: It was stated in the House, when I was a member, in 1872, what would be the probable expense to the city of this Commission on Water Supply and Drainage. It was to consist of three civil engineers—somewhat expensive gentlemen. My proposition was that if the city of Boston needed any survey, she could do it with her own material and her own men, and she needed no commission appointed by the State to attend to her business while she had a competent Civil Engineer, a Surveyor and a Superintendent of Sewers and Drains; that it was not for the interest of the taxpayers of the city of Boston to go into an expenditure which at the lowest estimate was a quarter of a million of dollars, and that nine-tenths of this expense would come upon her. The city of Boston is capable of doing her own surveying. If that is not a financial reason, I don't know what financial reasons are. The ground which I took was that the Legislature could not assess the city of Boston for any such purpose, and if it did there was no power in the land that could collect such an assessment.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I don't desire to discuss the sagacity of the gentleman from Ward 5 on constitutional questions. It is generally understood that the Committee on Legislative matters is a one-man committee, and always has been since it has existed. I think that two years ago, when the late Mayor was chairman of the Committee on Legislative Matters, he was the only member of the committee who appeared before the Legislature. I believe it was customary for the City Solicitor to act with the chairman. Last year it was found most convenient for the chairman of the committee. I asked a member of the committee at that time if he had much to do, and he said no, all he had done during the year was to go over to Young's once. This year it was suggested and agreed that inasmuch as the committee often took action on matters in which both branches were interested, a member of the committee on the part of the Common Council should act also. It was not convenient for the chairman of the committee on the part of the Council to act, and the duty devolved upon me. I did not attend very frequently; the chairman did attend to his duties very faithfully. I attended one hearing, at which I saw the gentleman, as he states. He has impugned the courtesy of the chairman. I cannot say whether the statement on page 9 is correct or not, but as to the statement on page 11, I can say that the remark is strictly true in every particular. The gentleman from Ward 5 did appear before the committee in question. After the Chairman of the Committee on Legislative Affairs had appeared for the city, the gentleman from Ward 5 got up and opposed the proposition in hand. The chairman of the committee before which the hearing was in progress, Senator Larnard of Pittsfield, told him he could not be heard as a representative of the city. The gentleman said he claimed to be a representative of the Common Council of Boston—

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—No, sir.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—As a member of the Common Council then. The chairman said, "The city of Boston is represented by an Alderman, you cannot be heard as a representative of the city." This is the statement which, I say, is correct. Of course, the gentleman has his own opinion as to that, but I think that when a statement is denied, I may be allowed to state that it is correct. In regard to the other matter, I think the chairman was authorized to make the report, but of course, if the gentleman desires to have the report go to the committee again, I shall not object. I believe the report is perfectly accurate, and when the charge of egotism is made against the chairman, it should be remembered that he was the only member of the committee who did the work, and I don't see why he should not say so. He was authorized by the committee to make the report, and having done so he is now charged with blowing his own trumpet. The chairman of the committee had nothing to do with having this report come in. The truth may as well be told: the order was offered by the gentleman from Ward 3, and might have been written by some one outside of the City Council, perhaps a member of last year's Council; I don't know. When the matter came up in the committee, Alderman Quincy stated that he had not preserved the records of his appearances before the legislative committees, because the committee had never before been required to report in print, and he would have to hunt it up. Then it was suggested that he see what sort of a report he could get up, and, as I understand it, present it. I wish to defend the gentleman from the charge of inaccuracy.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I will correct that statement. When the gentleman was present at that one time, Senator Learnard was in the chair. The statement I made was that I appeared as a citizen of Boston and not as a member of the City Government. Senator Learnard then said, "Mr. Shaw, are you in favor or opposed to the proposition?" I replied, "I do not desire to state whether I am in favor or opposed now. Senator Learnard was called away by sickness in his family and did not appear again during the whole session. A gentleman from Cambridge took the chair and notified me of a hearing they were to have, and invited me to appear before them, and I did make the statement which I have made here, in the presence of the legal talent there assembled. They did hear me and seemed to listen with some attention to the points which I made. That is the whole history of the case. The gentleman was present only once, and that was the time when I said I would not state on which side I appeared, but would state my points at a future hearing, and when I was called at a future hearing, I stated that I had come to do so, and to oppose the passage of the bill; and I am exceedingly gratified at my success in saving so large an amount of money to the city of Boston."

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I don't see that we disagree at all. My statement was that the chairman's statement is correct, and that he had a right, under the joint rule, to appear before the Legislative Committee on behalf of the city. I remember the time that the gentleman alludes to. They intended to hear all those in favor first and the remonstrants afterward. The point is that he was not properly recognized as a representative of the city, and did not appear authorized by the city.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—Nothing of course is more unpleasant than to spend time in personal matters. Certainly if this report were the only thing that had come to my attention—if there had been nothing more than a proper disregard of the duties of committees—I should let the matter pass without saying a word. Now with regard to the most of what is contained in this report, I don't know as much as the gentleman from Ward 5 or Ward 6. I noticed in the paragraph at the top of the fourth page what seems to me to be an important error, and that is in relation to appearing before the Committee on Public Charitable Institutions in regard to the support of lunatics and the carrying of that committee to the lunatic asylum and ending in the location of a new lunatic hospital. Certainly the gentleman from Ward 6 and myself acted throughout the entire matter, both in the hearings before the committee and in going to South Boston with the legislative committee, and we had the able assistance there and at the Legislature, of my colleague from Ward 12, Mr. Loring. We both felt a deep interest in this; the whole committee acted, and a majority did act, and yet the report says, "The committee, by their chairman, approved and advocated," etc., and "besides taking the committee," etc. Now that is a matter in which the whole committee took a deep interest, myself particularly, and in which we were aided by my colleague, Mr. Loring. The other thing which I speak of is of as much importance as anything else, and I may say I feel as guilty as any one else. The report says, "At the first meeting of the committee a vote was passed authorizing the chairman and Councilman Perkins to appear in behalf of the committee before any and all legislative committees in support of the interests of the city, according to the authority conferred by the joint rule of the City Council."

Now, then, Mr. President, that had been practised up to this year. Being a few minutes late at the committee meeting on my arrival, I was informed of the passage of the vote. I didn't undertake to make any motion to reconsider, but I did make such observations in regard to it, which ended in the understanding and was distinctly talked of, that the chairman should appear in regard to the multitude of matters that were talked of, that did not involve the passing of our judgment upon—for instance, the form of bills, the looking over hills, in order to see that the city's interests were not in jeopardy. But it was not understood in regard to important matters, and I don't mean to say it is not formally so, for, if you get the record, you will find it so stated. I don't mean to say that the chairman has stated what is untrue, or neglected to give anybody else credit for action; he has done so much himself that in writing the report he would naturally say so. The thing I do object to is that everything was "delegated." Now I don't believe that we as a legislative committee have the right to delegate to the chairman all of those powers. There are a great many that we could delegate with safety, and all of those were talked over. Now I suppose that if the idea had occurred to him he would not have done it. I don't mean to say that the chairman would not feel that he was authorized by the vote of the committee to make this report. The motion was that he should prepare the report. It was not my idea from the very character of the business that was to enter into it. I should suppose that from the character of the business, if it was to be sanctioned by the committee it should be referred to them. I do not undertake to say for a moment that the chairman of the committee has done more than he thought the vote of the committee authorized him to do, but it is a bad practice, and it seems to me to be growing, for the chairmen of the committees to take everything into their own hands without sufficient regard to the other members of the committees. I should like to see the rules of this City Council materially altered. A matter may be originated in this branch and may here have its most earnest supporters, and yet the chairman of the committee on the part of the Board of Aldermen signs and presents the report. Now the better way is to make all the members of a committee make reports. The chairman of a legislative committee, when there are half-a-dozen reports to make, would scatter them among the members of the committee, and a chairman who would not do so would be considered derelict in his duty, and would have the matter taken out of his hands by vote of the committee. Now, here the Clerk of Committees is left to prepare reports, the chairman on the part of the Board of Aldermen presents them, and the other members do not completely understand matters before them. Very many times, when the gentleman from Ward 5 has asked for an explanation, no member of the committee could make a response. If this practice of joint committees is to be kept up, I should be in favor of separating those committees, having, for instance, a Committee on Ordinances on the part of the Common Council, or any other committee, so that when matters come here they may be investigated by our own committee. In the Legislature, it is very convenient to have joint committees. Great expense and trouble may thus be saved, but they have a Judiciary Committee of the House and of the Senate. This system, it seems to me, has been pushed too far. I hope that this report will be recommitted to the committee, though it is of less importance now that this discussion has taken place.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I think the gentleman from Ward 12 has made some very important suggestions, particularly in regard to the leaving of reports in the hands of the chairmen of committees, the other members never knowing anything of them until they come into their hands. The gentleman so abused this evening has labored zealously this year. He has written his own reports and gone out of the usual ruts, and you will find an individuality in them. I hope the gentlemen who come here next year will imitate his example in this respect. I think the gentleman will admit that the committee authorized the chairman to make the report. When I understand that a chairman is to make a report it is that he shall present it. The gentleman has done me the honor to state with his usual—I don't recollect his words, though it was complimentary. He now admits that my statement was certainly correct in regard to that vote in the Committee on Legislative Matters, but he states that there was some conversation afterwards. Now, we will all be justified after eleven months in taking the record of the committee rather than any desultory conversation. I think the committee records will show that Alderman Quincy is perfectly correct.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I don't wish to be misunderstood; it was not a desultory conversation. Arriving in the committee room late, I understand that a certain vote has been passed, what should I do? Shall I move to reconsider? I suppose not. The question is, what is meant by that vote? It is that upon every matter arising on which men may differ, you are to consult the rest of the committee, and it was distinctly understood that that was to be the case.

The question on recommmitting was then put, and the motion was passed.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

DECEMBER 9, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Special Police—J. Theodore Garney, Taher street and its vicinity; Frederick C. Gohring, Baptist Beuel Church.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The hearings on the orders of notice of intended removal of an elm tree from the roadway of St. James street and nine elm trees from the roadway of Neponset avenue, were postponed to Monday next, on motion of Alderman Power, and specially assigned for consideration then.

The order of notice for intended removal of four elm trees from the roadway of Park street, Ward 16, was considered.

Alderman Power—Gentlemen who are residents of Ward 16 expected to be present at this hearing have been unable to attend, and they have also requested me to move that this order be specially assigned for Monday next.

Alderman Clark—There are four or five parties here present, and unless they ask for a postponement I shall move that they be heard.

On motion of Alderman Power, it was voted to give the petitioners a hearing.

Mr. John C. Lindsley said the trees had been in the street thirty-five years to his knowledge; they are pretty trees and no accident has ever occurred from them. Every citizen in the vicinity objects to their being removed.

Alderman Stebbins—How far are they from the sidewalk?

Mr. Lindsley—They are near the centre of the street.

Alderman Stebbins—I suppose that you know the city is liable in case of accident.

Mr. Lindsley—They stand in the centre of the street and there is ample roadway on each side.

Alderman Stebbins—How wide is the roadway?

Mr. Lindsley—Thirty-five feet.

Alderman Power—Have the trees ever been the cause of any accident, to your knowledge?

Mr. Lindsley—No, sir.

Mr. Henry Reed—In making this remonstrance against the removal of these trees I have been reluctant to say anything, as they are directly opposite my house and it might appear that I was more interested than anybody else. I have taken pains to ascertain the wishes of the people in that square and find that they wish those trees to remain there. There is room for two carriages to pass on the left side and room for one on the other. There seems to be no reason for any accident to occur. This complaint comes from the captain of the police station, who has passed in this paper to Mr. Harris, who is opposed to having the trees removed, and gave me authority to say that he did not think their removal necessary. The trees are an ornament, and if taken away from the square all its beauty as a place of residence is gone. I don't offer the remonstrance simply because they are in front of my residence. There is an ample driveway and no reason for any accident to occur.

Mr. Whall—I heard that the trees were to be cut down, or that there was a petition to that effect. I have been a resident of Dorchester thirty-five years, and felt it to be my duty to come and remonstrate against it. There is no reason for it. There is sufficient room on both sides for any team to drive through. It is a pity and a shame to have those trees removed. They are the beauty of the square. If there was any necessity for having them removed I should say, "Amen, take them down;" and if it is necessary I can get witnesses; the whole neighborhood of Harrison Square would come up and remonstrate against it. I can't see why the Captain of Police should present this petition for it.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the petition was recommitted to the Committee on Paving.

The orders of notice for a hearing on the proposed removal of one tree on the northeast side of Mercer street, thirty-five feet south from Dorchester street, being under consideration, Alderman Gibson moved that it be specially assigned for Monday next.

Alderman Power—I believe that if those trees are to be cut down generally, it would be better to recommit the petition to the Committee on Paving.

Alderman Gibson—I have no objection to that. It does seem to me that the parties ought to be heard.

The Chairman—All the parties in interest have had notice of the hearing served on them.

The motion to recommit was carried.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

To the Committee on Steam Engines. Curley & Lennon, to set up and use a small smelting furnace at 4 Province court.

To the Committee on Licenses. W. R. Mitchell for an auctioneer's license at 148 Hanover street.

To the Committee on Sewers. Samuel Macintire, for delay in enforcing payment of assessments of cost of sewer in Brook avenue.

Jacob Symonds, for abatement of sewer tax on Beacon street.

Richard Justice, for abatement of sewer assessment.

To the Committee on Legislative Affairs. Notice of proposed petition of the city of Somerville for annexation to Boston.

To the Committee on Health on the Part of the Board. A. F. Neale and several hundred others, against the stable of Brigham's heirs on Washington street.

D. W. Lewis, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse on Station street.

H. Gihlin, to erect brick stable for one horse on C street, near Sixth street.

G. O. Hovey, against additional stalls in stable of H. J. G. Denney on Otter street.

William Dall and others, and Barnes & Buck and others, in favor of the erection of stable on land of William Brigham's heirs.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

Schedules of assessments for the construction of common sewers were submitted as follows by the Superintendent of Sewers: Moreland street—total, $524 18; to individuals, $393 14. Shawmut avenue, between Washington and Circuit streets—total, $13,825 16; to individuals, $4608 38. Sixth street, between O and P streets—total, $737 80; to individuals, $553 35. Westminster street—total, $156 88; to individuals, $78 44. Alpine street (to Circuit)—total, $2405 89. Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

SIDEWALK ASSESSMENTS.

Schedules of sidewalk assessments were submitted by the Superintendent of Streets, as follows: Pleasant street, $2728 05; Commercial street (Ward 16), $1315 20; Broadway, $3071 77; Columbus avenue, $557 68; Chandler street, $572 69; Woodbine street, $1659 38; Stoughton street, $5360 77; Norfolk street, $211 56. Severally referred to the Committee on Paving.

CONSTABLES' BONDS.

The bonds of George M. Felch and Phineas Bates, constables, being duly certified by the treasurer, were approved by the Board.

REQUESTS FROM THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Requests were received from the School Committee for such changes in the Girls' High Schoolhouse as will enable the pupils to study photography; that the yards of the Vernon-street Schoolhouse be paved; and for additional primary-school accommodations in the Sherwin District. Severally referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

AUDITOR'S EXHIBIT.

The Auditor's monthly exhibit for November was submitted in print (City Document No. 132), and sent down. Following is a recapitulation of the expenditures for the month:

	Appropriations, Revenues, etc.	Expended.	Unexpended.

	$20,351,102 98	$11,290,989 38	$9,060,113 60

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A request was received from the Trustees of the Public Library for an additional appropriation of $11,650 to meet the expenses of the Public Library and its branches to the close of the city financial year. The estimates submitted are—Binding, $1800; books, $3650; catalogue, $1000; fuel, $500; furniture, $250; gas, $250; printing and stationery, $2100; salaries, $1000; transportation, $800.

Referred to the Committee on Public Library.

THE PUBLIC PARK QUESTION.

A petition was received from Alpheus Hardy, Horatio Harris, and 130 others, asking that further action on the proposed public park be postponed. Read and sent down.

THE DORCHESTER MURDER.

Alderman Stebbins—Mr. Chairman, before proceeding to the regular business of the evening, I desire to offer an order relating to the mysterious murder committed in the Dorchester District on Friday evening last. The facts in the case are these: Bridget Landergerin, a faithful woman living for many years in the family of Mr. Shelton Barry on Bellevue street, while returning at about ten o'clock, from a visit made to some friends in the Highland District, and, when near Upham's Corner, was brutally murdered, her skull being fractured in many places, and her head and face bruised beyond recognition. The woman was evidently unaccompanied up to the time of the murder, relying, perhaps, for protection upon the good order which prevails in the community. The police authorities have made diligent investigations, but, thus far, have been unsuccessful in their efforts to secure the murderer. It has been thought desirable by many members of the City Council that the Mayor should be authorized to offer a reward for the detection of the criminal, and, if possible, remove this from the list—already too large—of mysterious murders committed in this city and its vicinity. Mr. Chairman, the frequency, during the past few years, of crime committed against persons and property in this part of the State should engage not only the earnest attention of the police authorities, but also of every thoughtful person interested in the detection and prevention of the violation of laws made for the protection of society. If the sum named in the order is not sufficiently large to secure the apprehension of the assassin, then let us double the amount, and secure at least one of the murderous villains who infest this city. We cannot restore the life of Bridget Landergerin—a poor woman, little known and with few friends—but the city of Boston, with its wealth and strong arm of power, can use every endeavor to secure the punishment of the criminal who took from this woman her life, which was as dear to her and her few friends as are the lives of those who are held in remembrance by the members of this board. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following order, and ask that it may take its several readings, this evening:

Ordered, That the Mayor be authorized to offer and pay a reward of $1000 for the detection and apprehension of the person who murdered Bridget Landergerin, in the Sixteenth Ward of this city, on the 5th instant; said sum, if paid, to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Alderman Power—Mr. Chairman, I suppose it is hardly necessary for any gentleman in this Board to say anything on such a subject. It seems to me there can be but one opinion as regards what our duty in the premises should be, to show to the public our feelings, and let it be known that we are determined that we will do our utmost to bring these villains to justice. I hope the order will be passed.

The order was passed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Ordinance to prevent false alarms of fire, or tampering with fire-alarm boxes or wires. Passed.

Orders to collect assessments for sewers in Warren street, and in Chapman and Appleton streets. Passed.

Order for transfer from the Reserved Fund of $12,000 to appropriation for Common, etc. Passed.—yeas 12, nays 0.

Order for a loan of $175,000, to be added to the appropriation for Water Works. Passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

The order that an additional appropriation of $100 be made to cover the expense of watering streets around public grounds came up amended by the insertion of $225, for $100. The Board concurred.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions were referred in concurrence. The following papers received concurrent action:

Report from Committee on Public Buildings referring to the Committee on Public Instruction the proposition to introduce "Meigs's Physiological School Desk and Seat" into the public schools. The Board concurred.

Request from citizens of the town of Winthrop, asking to be heard on the proposal to set off said town to Middlesex County. Referred to Committee on Legislative Affairs.

The orders authorizing the rebuilding of the draw and foundations of Broadway Bridge, over Fort Point Channel, at an estimated cost of $114,000, and for a loan therefor, came up referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

Alderman Power—This is something unusual, although it is the same course that seems to have been adopted by the Council on the order for building the Dartmouth-street Bridge. Of course I cannot just understand why the Council has adopted this course. However if they don't propose to delay action on the matter, it is all right. I can't see any difference whether the Committee on Paving or the Committee on Streets build this bridge. The reason why the Committee on Bridges put this matter in at this time was that there can't be any question that there will be a great saving if it is attended to and the contract is made immediately. All I have to say is, that if the Committee on Streets give their immediate attention to this matter, they will save the city a great deal of money.

The Board concurred in the reference.

Report requesting Directors for Public Institutions to report on the 15th instant, on the recommendation of the grand jury on subject of religious services in public institutions.

Alderman Sayward—I can't conceive, Mr. Chairman, the object of the Committee on Public Institutions in referring this matter to the Directors of Public Institutions. There are certain rules by which those directors are governed. If they saw any necessity for a change they would come to this Council and ask for it. But there is no need of such a change, and if there is the directors have no power to make it. I hope the report will be laid over.

Alderman Power—The matter was thoroughly discussed in the Committee on Public Institutions, and when it was being looked into I stated that I believed this was only a waste of time, that it would n't amount to anything to refer this matter to the directors, but the majority of the committee seemed to think that before they would order or recommend any change they wanted an opinion in official form from the Directors of Public Institutions. That is the reason why they have referred this matter to the directors, and requested them to report their reasons why a change should not be made, so that the committee might act more intelligently after receiving that report. I think it is n't best to lay this report on the table, even though it should go to the directors, and nothing more be said about it. I believe it is better to let the matter take the course recommended and concur with the Council in letting the directors send in their reason why they have not granted the prayer of the petitioners which was the cause of the matter ever coming to this Board. There has been a petition to the Board of Directors for a change; they either have not taken any action or refused to grant the prayer of the petitioners. Therefore, the Grand Jury have taken up this matter and recommended it, and before the committee act on it they want to get the opinion of the directors.

Alderman Hulbert—From the discussions before the committee I think it very proper that this inquiry should be made of the Directors of Public Institutions.

Alderman Sayward—I am not particular about this matter, but I can't see what light is to be gained. Here is the Committee on Public Institutions, and they have certain work to do. It seems to me that this is part of their work. If there is any evil to be remedied, it is for this Government to say so. The Board of Directors don't ask for any change. They can put into those institutions any religious teacher they please. The gentleman says this comes from certain parties whose petitions have not been granted. He says no action has been taken on the petition. Now, if he knows anything about it, he must know that there has been action, because, if there is any change desired it is this City Government who will make it; and if this Board of Aldermen and this Common Council desire to force it upon the directors, of course this Board will have to comply with the wishes of the Council. We have already certain rules, and if the Board of Directors desire any change they will come here and ask for it. I can't see what object will be gained by this reference. If there is any change to be made, here is the place to make it.

Alderman Power—The Alderman tells the story. As I say, certain parties have asked for a change which the Board of Directors have the power to make or ask for, but they don't see fit to make or ask for it. The parties then looked elsewhere for a change. Now this Government would simply like to know what their reasons are for not making the change. We want to know officially. I know privately what their reasons are, but other members do not. We want to know officially what the reasons are before taking action. It is to save the appearance of dictation that this reference is made. It seems to me that this committee have proceeded with the utmost courtesy in this matter.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman says the committee don't desire to dictate. Now, his own argument contradicts that. The inference is that the committee have made up their minds that there ought to be a change, and the committee don't want to make it. Now, as to the directors having refused to do anything, the gentleman does not state the thing as it is. They have not refused, and I challenge him to show that they have. Certain petitions have come there, but there has been no action upon them. He says they are refused. That is not so. The committee don't desire to make a change there unless they obtain the reasons of the directors why they should n't.

Alderman Power—If a number of citizens should come to this Board and ask us to grant certain things, and if a gentleman moves to lay that petition on the table, or postpone it, and such action is taken, it is the same result as a refusal would be. That has been the action of the Board of Directors for several years on this matter. A majority of the people in those institutions, are, I am sorry to say, members of a certain denomination. They ask to have the privilege of worshipping God according to the dictates of their own conscience. This has been refused, because they can't get any action taken upon it. The gentlemen say the directors have taken no action. They have n't emphatically refused to grant the petition, but these petitioners are getting out of patience waiting for action, and they have taken another course, and are trying to accomplish their purpose. Now, as to the Committee on Public Institutions, from any action they have taken, it is out of my power to say what their ultimate action would be on the subject. Whether they will vote to make the change or not I can't say. A majority of the committee simply said they wanted to get an intelligent opinion from the directors and to know why the directors have n't taken any action. And I say they could n't have taken a more courteous course.

Alderman Sayward—I still say that the gentleman spoils his own argument. He says the petitioners have been refused action by the directors. Now, they have come to this Government and why should we send it back to the directors. I am as liberal as anybody can be in religion; I go to church as little as anybody. Now, there are a great many things in this government that have n't been acted on. Now the committee come here and want to get out of the responsibility of it. I move that the report be recommended.

Alderman Hulbert—The alderman who has just spoken don't understand the position of this thing. In the first place the City Council has no control over this thing at all. The committee to whom was referred the consideration of this thing have done the only thing that they could do. They have, after a proper, courteous consideration of the question, asked from the proper sources which control this thing, information which will inform the City Council what is the practice, what has been petitioned for, whether granted or not, and, if not granted, why not. The object of the committee was to ascertain just that, and the Alderman who has just spoken is assuming that the committee have thrown this responsibility upon the directors. They have n't thought of doing so. This City Council can't change the rules down there, and it seems to me this question should not be up here for discussion today, but the procedure of the committee is open to inquiry. I claim that the action of the committee is appropriate; it is entirely appropriate.

Alderman Sayward—I think I do understand the case, and I do think the gentleman don't understand his business as chairman of that committee, when he tells us he can't get that information. He can get it. Moreover, he says he can't change the rules; that is true. The gentlemen know there are twelve directors, and they can get the information if they so desire. They can summon them before the committee. Now, sir, I move to recommit the report to the Committee on Public Institutions.

Alderman Power—I hope it will not be carried, but that we will concur with the Common Council. It seems to me that all the gentleman says goes to prove that if anybody ought to assume the responsibility of this, it is the Board of Directors, as they have the power to make the change if they see fit, but as I said before there has been no action. People have repeatedly tried to get some action on this matter. They have now taken the proper course to get it. No doubt some members of the committee have got the reasons of the directors, but we have n't got it officially. I don't know why those gentlemen should not wish to give their reasons. It is an important matter to those interested.

Alderman Sayward—I am one of the Board of Directors of Public Institutions. He says the responsibility is on the Board of Directors. Well, sir, the Board of Directors are ready to act either before or after election. This matter is before the committee; it is their work and ought to be done by them. I have no doubt when those Directors are summoned before the committee, they will be ready to respond. The motion to recommit was lost, and the Board concurred in the reference of the report.

THE CITY FINANCES.

The chairman submitted a report from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the request of the Committee on Public Buildings for an additional appropriation of $25,000, that the reasons given by the committee for this request are the large expenditures for new buildings for the Fire Department and for more protection to the City Hall and Public Library Building against fire which were not provided for in the annual appropriation. The Finance Committee, while admitting the necessity of the expenditure made by the Committee on Public Buildings, would embrace the opportunity to say that in no case should a committee present a matter to the City Council involving the expending of money not provided for in the appropriation under their charge without stating that fact; so as to enable the City Council to judge more clearly whether such an exigency exists as to require an outlay outside of the regular appropriation. Your committee also desire to impress upon the heads of departments and the committees under whose charge the appropriations are disbursed that no work should be undertaken that cannot be accomplished within the appropriation granted by the City Council and upon which the financial structure of the year is based. It is fraught with evil to deviate from this sound policy. Only urgent public necessity caused by accident or destruction should justify such a proceeding. If all the departments should pursue the policy of exceeding their appropriations, there would be no alternative left but to borrow money to meet the current expenses of the city, which would be highly objectionable and not to be considered for a moment. The committee, in view of the facts presented by the Committee on Public Buildings, report the accompanying order.

(Signed)

L. R. CUTTER,
Chairman.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Public Buildings the sum of $25,000.

The order was read once.

REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Alderman Hulbert, from the Committee on Public Institutions, to whom was referred the recommendation of the grand jury for Suffolk County, "that accommodation for tramps or casual homeless people be provided in connection with the police stations, separate and distinct from the quarters assigned to persons arrested for crimes," submitted a report recommending that the subject be referred to the Committee of the Board of Aldermen on Police.

The report was accepted and the reference ordered.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Faneuil Hall reported in favor of granting the petitions of E. M. Chamberlin et al., Charles W. Slack et al., and Rev. E. E. Hale et al., for the use of Faneuil Hall. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of Samuel Roach, Louis Sommers and Marshall Lincoln, to keep billiard saloons; Elliot, Blakeslee & Noyes, for auctioneer's license; Edward Stanley, to exhibit panorama of Ireland, at Wait's Hall, December 13 and 15; E. Brewster, to give public ball; Stephen Hull, to exhibit "World's Curiosity"; A. Keyes & Co., et al., for transfer of wagon licenses; Albert Omond, for wagon stand; nine minors, for newshoy's license; John Montaine, for transfer of pawnbroker's license to Maurice M. Isaacs and David Black; Abram French & Co., for hack stand; John F. Bowcers et al., for transfer of hack licenses; Thomas B. Drinan, Crosby & Co. and Marcellus Humphrey, for victualler's license. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the applications of John Healey, to add five stalls to stable 63 Liverpool street; George W. Cavanagh, E. W. E. Thompson and Joseph J. McCarthy, to occupy wooden stables. Severally accepted.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the Committee on County Accounts be authorized to enter into an agreement with Edwin Wright to refer to disinterested persons the claim made against the city by said Wright on account of damages alleged to have been caused to him by the termination of his contract for arranging, grouping, systematizing and indexing the papers and records of the Suffolk Registry of Deeds, dated the 20th day of September, A. D. 1869.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court at its next session for the passage of an act extending the time within which the city was authorized by chapter 78 of the acts of the year 1869 to lay out a public street or way across South Bay.

Alderman Quincy—This is the matter of extending Sweet street. The time in which the bridge is to be built expires next March. It is very necessary, if the bridge is to be built, that the time should be extended, and I move that the order take its second reading and pass tonight.

The order was passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Public Buildings, to whom were referred the order and petition for the location of a steam fire engine on Albany street, near Dover street, presented a report recommending that the subject be referred to the Board of Fire Commissioners.

Alderman Sayward—On October 27th an order was passed to this effect, that the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to purchase a lot of land on Albany street, between Dover and Beach streets, and erect thereon a steam fire engine, etc. Just following this came a petition from several taxpayers at the South End for the consideration of the expediency of erecting a steam fire engine on Albany street, near Dover street. In consequence of this order and this petition following this order, the committee thought it would be better, after making some inquiries in reference to the locality for a steam fire engine, thought that the engine now on Washington street might be dispensed with if an engine was located on Albany street. The committee therefore submit this report.

The report was accepted and the reference ordered.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Committee on Public Lands, to whom were referred the petitions of Boynton Bros. and S. B. Smith, reported the following orders, recommending their passage:

Ordered, That the time for erecting dwelling houses upon two lots of land on Columbus avenue, corner of Northampton street, as sold by the city, September 1, 1869, to Messrs. Boynton Bros., be extended to January 1, 1875, upon condition that they pay to the Superintendent of Public Lands the sum of $250, within ten days from the passage of this order. Passed.

Ordered, That the time for erecting a building upon the lot of land on Albany street, corner of Concord street, as sold by the city January 1, 1872, to S. B. Smith, be extended to January 1, 1873, upon condition that the sum of $100 is paid to the Superintendent of Public Lands within one day from the passage of this order. Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported the following:

Ordered, That the sum of $23 05, assessed upon Patrick Flynn's estate for a sewer in Bolton street, is hereby abated.

Ordered, That the collection of $46 52, assessed upon John Haggerty for a sewer in Dorchester avenue, be postponed till entry is made into the sewer.

Ordered, That $186 74 be abated from the assessment upon George Gardner, and $11 37 from the assessment upon Elizabeth N. Fiske for a sewer in Summer street, on account of overestimate of land.

Ordered, That $22 51 be abated from the assessment of Caroline Geib for a sewer in Stoughton street, on account of overestimate of land.

Ordered, That $63 35 be abated from Daniel S. Johnson for a sewer in Summer street, and the same amount assessed upon Barrett & Dwyer.

Ordered, That $26 76, assessed upon William Quigley's heirs for a sewer in Bolton street, is hereby abated.

The above were severally read once.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom were referred the schedules of assessments for sewers in Copeland, Franklin, Gouch and Catawba streets, reported that they were correct, and recommended the passage of orders for collection.

The orders were severally read once.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported in favor of granting the petitions of John C. Flood, to place gas lantern over door at 70 Cambridge street; Donald Kennedy, to place lamp post in sidewalk of Warren street in front of Kennedy Hall; and leave to withdraw on the petitions of Stephen Clapp et al., that the name of Pond street (Ward 16) be changed to Picasant street; D. G. Grafton et al., that Huntington avenue be graded between Clarendon and Daveport streets; Martin Beatty et al., that the name of Cazenove place be changed to Cazenove street.

Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders to pay for grade damages as follows: Timothy O'Regan, $800, Paris street; James T. Brown, $350, No. 56 Regent street; Caroline H. Brooks, $400, corner of Regent and Alpine streets.

Severally read once.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders as follows: To grade Ceylon street, between Bird and Quincy streets, Ward 16, at an estimated cost of $1200; to grade Tudor street, between D and E streets, at an estimated cost of $3500; to pave Arch street, between Milk and Franklin streets, with burnettized spruce blocks, at an estimated cost of $4000, the expense to be charged to the appropriation for the Burnt District.

Severally read once.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported an order directing the City Engineer to prepare plans for a foot bridge over the railroad tracks on Sumners street, East Boston, and to present said plans, with an estimate of the cost of said bridge, to this Board.

The order was passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported orders establishing the grade of Eustis street, easterly from Hampden street to that part of said Eustis street recently laid out; Tudor street, between D and E streets, and Magazine street, between Dudley street and Norfolk avenue, severally in accordance with plans and profiles drawn by the City Surveyor, dated June 5, 1872, and deposited in the office of said City Surveyor.

Severally read once.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay as follows: Asa P. Morse, $6170, widening Essex street; Thomas Higgins, $69,270 96, extending Washington street to Haymarket square; John Roessle, administrator of John Roessle, $17,132 75, widening of Washington street; John Roessle, administrator estate of John Roessle, $39,414 18, widening Pyncheon street; Edward A. White et al., $121,751 27, widening Water street.

Severally read once.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Whereas, An estate supposed to be James C'Brien's, formerly numbered 75, and now 138, in Kingston street, was assessed for betterment from the widening of that street, in 1870, by an order of this Board of December 26, 1871, to the amount of $900, and it now appears that at the time of the widening, James O'Brien was dead, and the estate was the property of his heirs: it is Ordered, That the said assessment be and it hereby is so amended and changed, as to be $900 upon the estate of the heirs of James O'Brien numbered formerly 75 and now 135 on Kingston street.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert,

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be authorized, under the direction of the Committee on Paving, to repair and strengthen the bridge on Dartmouth street, over the Albany and Providence railroads; the expense, not exceeding three thousand dollars, to be charged to the appropriation for paving.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the subject of providing additional accommodations of a permanent character for the pupils in the new Grammar School District, Washington Village, as requested by the School Committee July 15, 1873, be referred to the next City Council.

Passed.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

Alderman Quincy—I rise to a question of privilege. In the very edifying debate which arose in the branch overhead (if I may without disrespect so designate that body) on the subject of city document No. 129, a Councilman from Ward 12 is officially reported to have spoken as follows:

"One great trouble of this City Government is that chairmen of the joint standing committees, especially the chairman on the part of the Board of Aldermen, think they can pocket the entire committee, and they go on as they please, even sometimes treating the committee with discourtesy, as, for instance, a gentleman making a report to the Board upon a matter that I, as a member of the committee, was interested in, when I knew nothing about the report. It is a thing that would not be tolerated in any legislative body."

I presume allusion is here made, Mr. Chairman, to the report from the Committee on Ordinances, which now lies on your table. The facts are these: The committee were directed to consider the expediency of a certain amendment. A meeting was called, and the subject fully discussed. On motion of the gentleman from Ward 12, action was postponed to a subsequent meeting, to be called next week, that members might examine legal points or consult the City Solicitor. The chairman did consult the City Solicitor, and after the week had expired, called another meeting. A quorum was present, the gentleman from Ward 12 absent. The subject was again discussed, also the advisability of further postponement on account of the gentleman's absence. A motion was made by a member of the other branch that the committee report inexpedient without further delay. That motion being put and carried, it became the chairman's duty to make such report, which he did, having first read the same to the committee, and stating his intention to table the same in order to give time to the absent gentleman to prepare a minority report should he so desire. If there has been discourtesy to the Committee on Ordinances, whether it should be charged to the chairman rather than to the member whose repeated absences and claims of recommitment certainly have not lightened the committee's labors during the year, may be a question which may be safely left to the committee itself to decide.

HOME FOR THE POOR.

Alderman Hulbert, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Institutions, to whom was recommitment the reports in relation to the purchase of a site for a Home for the Poor, reported that having considered the matter in accordance with an advertisement for proposals, twenty-one estates situated within the limits of the city (including the portions recently annexed) were offered to the committee at prices varying from five hundred dollars an acre to twenty cents per square foot. A careful examination was made of all those which seemed to possess any claims to consideration, but the committee were unable to find among the estates offered any one which they could agree in recommending the City Council to purchase. While the question was in this condition a proposal was received from the present proprietors of the Austin farm in West Roxbury to convey that valuable estate to the city at a greatly reduced price. A full description of the property is given in City Document No. 108, of the present year. The price asked when the previous report was submitted was $175,000—a little less than six and one-quarter cents per square foot. It is now offered to the city for $75,000—a little less than three and one-half cents per square foot. At this reduced price the committee (with the exception of one member) are of the opinion that it would be greatly for the city's interest to secure the property without delay, and they would therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying order. For a majority of the committee,

JAMES POWER.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Institutions be authorized to purchase as a site for a Home for the Poor, the lot of land known as the Austin farm, bounded on the easterly side of Back street, between Boston and West Roxbury, on the southerly side by Morton street, on the westerly side by Canterbury street, and on the northerly side by Austin terrace, so called, containing fifty acres more or less, the price paid therefor not to exceed the sum of $75,000.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the appropriation for a Home for the Poor at Deer Island the sum of $75,000, to be applied to the purchase of the Austin farm as a Home for the Poor.

Accompanying the above is a minority report signed by Alderman Hulbert, respectfully dissenting from the foregoing recommendations of the majority.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert, the order was passed to a second reading.

Alderman Hulbert—Mr. Chairman, in the report of the joint committee to whom was recommitment the subject of a "site for a Home for the Poor," submitted to the Board today, I appear alone, as non-concurring in the recommendation made therein. After a careful review of the matter, such as it became under the circumstances, I feel it my duty to express my disapproval of the site recommended, and further, to seek to prevent, if possible, its adoption by the Board, by presenting, for your consideration, the reasons controlling my own decision. I wish to say just here that in what I feel it my duty to state I intend no disrespect to the other members of the committee, and do not at all impugn their motives in their action. The subject referred to the committee for consideration and report is "a suitable site for a Home for the Poor." The first inquiry is, "What is wanted for such an institution?" First, a proper provision for the comfort, health and care of the paupers of the city. Second, proper facilities for the economical and least burdensome conduct of its affairs. That a fine site, with a commanding view, situated amid a growing and beautiful neighborhood, and whereon structures are to be erected of a style which, with the conspicuous grounds, will altogether render it one of the proud "sights" of the city, is the idea to govern in selecting a location, as it seems to me, is by some entertained, I do not think it wise. I judge our common sense should go arm and arm with our philanthropy.

I now wish to call your attention to the class of people for whom Boston is called to make this provision; and in stating what I do I intend no lack of respect and sympathy for the "deserving poor." We are to act upon a knowledge of facts, so far as such can be obtained. It is estimated that of the total number of paupers provided for by the city, fully one third are those who have been in the House of Industry; another third, persons of low and dissolute habits and degraded lives; then quite a large number are those who, although able-bodied, yet are too lazy to labor, and throw themselves upon the city. During the colder months this class is large. But a small proportion are of the class known and truthfully called the "honest, virtuous poor." I regret that such are the facts. The worthy poor of our city find relief mainly through other channels, and will continue to do so, as the character of the inmates of the City Almshouse is such, and is likely to be such, that the better class of poor will avoid going there if possible. For humane reasons it is proposed to remove the paupers of the city from Deer Island to some locality away from the criminal institutions. At Deer Island they have been made comfortable in every respect, and, at the same time, with a due regard to economy and propriety. To change the institution to another locality is to enhance expenses materially, as now the officers in care of the other institutions superintend the almshouse also. Another set of officials must be created. Then, by reason of the change, I look for a large increase in the number seeking a home in the institution. I believe that soon, after a change is made, the number to be cared for will be fully five hundred, and at a day not remote, we may expect the inmates will number 800 to 1000. Nothing can be further from wisdom than to so arrange and carry on the new institution as to render it a standing invitation to a class of persons ever ready to be supported at the city's expense, and be a perpetual bid for pauperism. For a site there is needed a pleasant, healthy location, having an ample supply of good water, one properly isolated and situated as to affect, not injuriously, surrounding property, with an area ample enough for the present and future needs of the city, and upon the line of a good railroad, having direct and rapid communication with the city proper. The President of the Board of Directors of Public Institutions stated to me that to have the institution on the line of a railroad is indispensable and, to use his words, "a man must be crazy to think of locating it elsewhere." The advantages of direct railway communication are apparent. In the transportation of the material for the buildings, at the outset, there will be a lessened cost. Then, afterwards, in the carrying on of the institution, in the transportation of the supplies of the paupers, the visitation by the friends of the inmates, the intercourse and visitation of those who have the official oversight and conduct of its affairs, there will be a great saving in expense, beside all the convenience experienced. That the board may have some idea of the quantity of supplies likely to be required, I give herewith a memorandum of the main items furnished to Deer Island in 1872, where some twelve hundred persons are provided for, viz. 2300 tons coal, 120 tons meat, 2000 barrels flour, 6000 gallons molasses, 4300 bushels meal, 900 bushels beans, 25,000 pounds sugar, 52,000 pounds salt fish, 2150 pounds coffee, 7000 bushels potatoes, 15 tons soap stock, 20 tons straw.

I now come to the consideration of the site recommended by the majority of the committee, viz., the "Austin Farm," so called. In a former report submitted, and in remarks made to the board at the time, I stated my objections to this farm. I claimed then that the price was exorbitant. No one now will doubt the validity of that objection, when the same property is now offered for $75,000, for which $135,000 was then asked. But I made another and equally valid objection—that it was not on a line of railroad, but far remote from one. I now take the ground, and propose to substantiate it, that however reasonable the price of this property, as now offered, may be regarded, still the City of Boston for the special purpose for which it is wanted, cannot afford to buy it; nav, further, that the city, if to utilize it for a Home for the Poor, cannot afford to accept it as a free gift.

This farm is situated five and one-eighth miles by the nearest road from City Hall. It is four fifths of a mile from the nearest railroad station. Now consider the practical working of the institution if placed there. All the supplies must be transported by teams, the paupers must be sent by conveyances furnished by the city. Officials must go and come by the expensive mode of carriages; visitors must, unless the city provide adequate conveyance, be subjected to much inconvenience, and to them, usually poor people, a material expense. Aside from the inconvenience arising from the location, the actual increased expense to the city annually, by reason of the remoteness from railroad communication, will be a large sum, far beyond the annual interest on the cost of a site on the line of a railroad. I am not surprised that persons, at first thought, are pleasantly impressed with the "Austin Farm," but when it is looked at, with a due regard to the cost of carrying on the special institution to be placed there, it is quite a different thing. I have the opinions of the President and some of the experienced Directors of Public Institutions as to this site. Neither of them approve of it, as they look at it from a practical point. It should be borne in mind that during the cold months of the year, when it is the most desirable that the access be easy and comfortable, the number of the inmates is the largest. The idea of selecting a good farm as such, is not needful. These people live without work. An examination was made at one time of the real physical condition of the inmates of the almshouse, and ninety per cent. were pronounced able-bodied men, able to labor. The inmates of the other institution at Deer Island are made to work, but no work is done by the poor. It may be thought by the tenor of my remarks hitherto that perhaps I am disposed to delay meeting this question the present year. I am not. I am fully prepared at the proper time to introduce an order recommending a site which has, I believe, as many of the requisites desired as can be expected to be obtained in any site likely to be found. It is on the line of an excellent railroad, having direct and very frequent communication with the city proper. It is within thirty minutes' ride by rail, has an ample supply of water, a large area sufficient for the future wants of the city, is approved by the President and such of the Directors of Public Institutions as I have seen as a fit and good place, and it can be purchased for less than thirty thousand dollars—a site I do not hesitate to recommend as one entirely suitable. I will not longer now dwell upon the features embraced in it.

Thus far I have considered the "Austin farm" upon its simple merits only, and upon these have come to my own conclusion. But I feel I shall not be doing justice to this Board, the city or myself, if I leave the matter just here. I doubt not that while I have been giving my views as to this estate, the query has arisen in your minds, why it is, that if the facts are as I state them—the other members of the committee think differently—it is a proper query—I have put it to myself—I have reexamined my own premises and conclusions because of it, and I must confess I am unable to answer the query. I do find in the history of this thing that the condition of Mr. Bradt and his partner is one calculated to enlist the sympathy of friends. How far this may have influence with any members of the committee, if at all, I cannot say. I am not here to impute any unworthy motive to any one of the committee. The Board should know how this matter is, I think. In April, 1872, Mr. W. Eliot Woodward, a member of the present Common Council, purchased of Mr. A. W. Austin an estate for $92,300, giving a mortgage at seven years for $76,800. On May 1, 1872, thirty days after this purchase, Mr. Woodward sold the same estate to Messrs. Herman D. Bradt and George W. Seaverns for the sum of $154,530; these gentlemen assuming the mortgage given by Mr. Woodward for $76,800 and giving further mortgages payable in five years for $72,730, making a total amount of mortgages of $149,530 on a purchase of $154,530—thus paying but $5000 on so large a transaction. I believe it is generally understood that the owners have expected to make a sale of the property to the city. Very many persons have interested themselves in behalf of the parties. I am informed that the first price named was some $200,000: and during the year—at one price and another—this estate has been proposed to the city, and quite a pressure brought to bear to have the city take it. Any one can see the existing urgency for a sale, and now that it is offered at the price of $75,000, it might seem a favorable purchase at that rate. But I claim that it is not adapted to the purposes in hand; and I cannot admit into the question as acting for the city a personal consideration for the owners, although their exigency is a pressing one. I am sure the interest of the city will be much better served by seeking a different locality.

Alderman Power—I suppose, Mr. Chairman, that that matter has been so long before this Government that its particular merits and demerits have been thoroughly gone into by this Board, and I suppose every member thoroughly understands this question. The committee have gone all over the ground, and after examining many places, as the gentleman mentioned, have finally, seven to eight, concluded, after all their deliberations, that the Austin farm is the most preferable of all the places, at the price that it is now offered to the city. In relation to the remarks that the gentleman has made as to the property, compared with the site that he would recommend himself, it is more plainly stated in the report that was made to this Government than I can state from my own memory. [The Alderman read the description of the Austin farm from the report first submitted.] In relation to the necessity of immediate action at this time, the committee are unanimous. This matter has been delayed a much longer time than it should have been. I suppose that the members of this Board are aware that the Austin farm is four miles and a half from City Hall, while the place the gentleman last up recommends is nine miles. He says the city cannot afford to buy the Austin farm, and gives as one reason, among numerous others, an enumeration of the large amount of material used at Deer Island, and says the President of the Board of Directors says that railroad facilities are indispensable, for the reason that this large amount of material has to go to the institution. If that is so, why has this President been himself so anxious to have this institution located at Deer Island. If I understand the opinions of the President of the Board of Directors of Public Institutions, it is his opinion that this institution should be on Deer Island. But it seems to me that other matters enter into the subject that are of more importance to me. Now, allowing that it is, I say that all the articles for the use of the Home for the Poor can be transported to the Austin farm for less money and as speedily and as expeditiously by team than by railroad. I suppose no gentleman has any doubts that there will be railroad communication much nearer than at present. It is, at present, only ten minutes' walk from the railroad station. In relation to the intentions of the former purchasers of this place, and their hoping to sell it to the city, I don't see how this should enter into the question at all. I don't know what the intention of the former purchaser was. If he intended to do so, he failed. It is offered at a price that not a gentleman in the city can base an objection to it on that ground. Therefore, as the committee are a unit as to the question of immediate action, I hope this order will take its second reading at the present time.

Alderman Hulbert—Mr. Chairman, allow me to say a word here. I have no interest in anything I have said except the interest of the city. It is purely upon the same ground as I would select a place for myself to carry on this very business, that I made this investigation. I have had a conversation with the President of the Directors for Public Institutions, and some of the directors, and none of them approve of the Austin farm, and those I have seen do approve of the site that I have in my mind. I am opposed to the Bradt estate because it has no proper communication. Take the present season, for instance. Paupers can be taken to the place I propose in thirty minutes. To the other place it is five and one-eighth miles. I state the exact distance by the nearest road that can be taken. The place I approve is eight miles away, but it could be reached by railway in thirty minutes. In the other case you must have your conveyance—the paupers transported by teams. When it is stated that supplies can be taken to the Bradt Farm as cleanly and quickly as that, I say it can't be done. This is on the line of a good railroad, is easy of access, and paupers can be easily and comfortably placed there. Those who have friends there can visit them comfortably and definitely. It is a definite thing. I think tickets by the quantity can be purchased at 12½ cents; the place this side is eight for a dollar. Such is the expense of doing this business, I contend, that after furnishing homes for these people that is all they can ask for, and the city has to see how it can do this thing economically for itself. I think that ideas of economy should enter into this thing. The building site and everything should be in reference to a Home for the Poor, not the style of architecture or kind of site that I would put up for a university or court house. Now, I said, the city as a matter of money, taking into account the expense to be incurred, could n't afford to take the Bradt estate as a free gift. Now it seems to me that those who are familiar with this thing are the President and the Board of Directors. We all know the president would have preferred to have the almshouse remain at Deer Island, but he understands very well that they can't be entertained, and he submits to it. He gives me his unqualified opinion that railway communication must be had. The argument of the Alderman does not hold, for you can send down all your supplies to Deer Island by boat. Now in the estate I have in mind the cars can be run right into the yard and unloaded, and supplies can be run right from the cars into the bins, and with the railroad that it is on, any arrangement can be made that is reasonable. Now, I say, we have a duty to see to the friends of these people. They can go for a small sum and visit them. Now you locate them there on the Austin farm, and the next thing is you will not only be asked for conveyances for these people, but for these friends. That is the next thing asked for. We have got to double our pauper expenses immediately after this thing is done; there is no economy in this thing. We do it for humanity, and it is our duty to start it on an economical basis. If the Directors of Public Institutions have authority to put a building there, they will do it in a style of common sense.

You go down to Deer Island and there is no nonsense there. The directors will carry out the same idea here. We are not bidding for paupers to come to the city and be supported. The Austin farm is a fine farm, I admit. But the city will injure the surrounding property to locate this almshouse there. This is no place to put it. Where I propose to put it will not injure property, and when the time comes I will say many things in its favor. Let us put this thing where the supporting of so large a number of paupers can be done economically. Let us not put it where everything has to go by carriage, for your committees will have to go in carriages as well as your paupers. I can't see any good reason or one single argument for that Bradt estate. I have n't altogether been pleased with the course of matters in regard to that Bradt estate in this Council this last year, but I don't propose to go into that.

Alderman Power—The principal reason seems to be that, owing to the extraordinary beauties of the Austin farm, the gentleman is afraid that the Board of Directors, or those having charge of the building, will become so entirely infatuated with it that they will be tempted to go into extravagance. I don't think that worthy of consideration for a moment. I don't think the fact that they have a beautiful location will make them spend more money than if they don't. One great objection to Neponset having it at Deer Island is that it might be accessible to the poor, and that they might be visited by their friends.

Now I don't think any one is going to lose his manhood simply by going into an institution merely because it is easy of access and has a beautiful location, and I don't believe we are going to have any more paupers for that reason. I don't think the people of this country are made of this kind of stuff. When people go into the poorhouse they do so because their want of means compels them to. Now, this place is only a half-hour's walk from almost any part of the city. Any one can drive there with a horse and carriage quicker than they can go by railroad to the other place named by the gentleman. There is no railroad station on that place, a railroad goes by it and there is a station about a mile from there. If the city wants to go to the expense of building a station it can do so. Now as to the place selected by the gentlemen—it is a fit place for a pauper to live. A sheep could n't live upon it. It is the worst spot of land that the committee have visited since they have had the matter in hand. The only argument is that the price is $29,000 while the price of the other is $75,000. Now, sir, I say that the city cannot afford to take any such site, because it will cost more to put it into shape than the cost of this Brandt farm would be. On the Austin farm, all you have to do is to pick out the spot where you want your building, and set it there. I say it will cost more to fix up and grade this barren place than the price asked for the Austin farm. I don't believe there is any reason to think it will injure that locality. There is no question but that it will enhance the value of the property, and if the city could get a million or a half a million dollars for it, they could afford to move. Now unless the gentlemen of this Government wish to procure a home entirely unfit I say they should n't defeat this matter. I say the purchase of this land is a good investment for the city of Boston. It is a beautiful place, and there is no justification in turning those poor paupers out into the barren, swampy place like that the gentleman would recommend, when we could get so beautiful a location at such a low price. Therefore I hope the orders will be passed.

Alderman Hulbert—I sha n't make any statement that is n't true. I stated that this place had railway facilities. There is a station right on the premises, where there is no need of a carriage or anything of the kind. Furthermore, the gentleman stated that this is nine miles from City Hall. It is just nine miles to Dedham, and this place is a mile this side. One from nine leaves eight. Furthermore, part of it is good land and part of it poor.

Alderman Sayward—I would just remind the gentleman on my left that the great object is to get a place easy of access. Now where can you find a place easier of access than Deer Island?

Alderman Power—In regard to having a railroad station on the Austin farm, I expect there will be a station there when there is population enough to warrant the railroad in putting it there.

Alderman Hulbert—The parties now owning the place have the promise of the railroad company to put a station there, and they are laying out a street for the purpose. The place is laid down on the map. The Dedham Branch goes through the place, and they intend a station there. I don't want anything said that is n't exactly so.

Alderman Clark—For one, when there is so great difference of opinion between two gentlemen of such excellent judgment, I should like an opportunity to go there. There is, certainly, a very great reduction of price and that is something. The modest decline of $60,000 is something gained to be sure. The price it was offered for six weeks ago was $130,000; the price asked today is $75,000. The figures are sufficiently low to induce us to purchase. It may not be a bad investment, as the land may double in a few years. But if there is such a good place where supplies can be run under cover and easily, I am inclined to think I would like to see it. But I think the Bradt place is about as good a location as the committee will be able to find. There are advantages in having a railroad running directly through the property, and there is this advantage in the Austin farm—a horse railroad certainly runs to within twenty minutes of it. I don't think it is more than twenty minutes from the horse railroad in Dorchester to the Austin farm. I should like an opportunity to see the place, which the Alderman from the Highland District has referred to, and as we shall probably meet again on Friday, I should like to have this subject laid over until next meeting. I don't want to vote upon this subject ignorantly. I do know about the Austin Farm, and I believe the price for which it is offered now is low enough. It has the advantage of being only a few miles from City Hall. Members of the City Government, the directors and the friends of those who live there can go there without walking only a short distance, or going by carriages. I doubt very much whether there will be a railroad any nearer the Austin farm, unless a line was built specially to go from there to the Boston, Hartford & Erie station. While I did oppose the purchase of the Austin farm at $125,000, believing it too much, and thought the Neponset lot was better at the price for which it could be purchased, still at the price named, and unless the advantages are infinitely superior to the place spoken of by the gentleman from the Highland District, I shall vote for taking the Austin farm. I suppose that $75,000 includes all the territory looked at by the committee before. I understand that there are about fifty acres of land within the inclosure. If I am wrong the chairman will correct me.

Alderman Power—The estate contains about fifty acres. [The Alderman read from the original report a description of the farm and buildings.] It is the same lot for which $135,000 was asked. Now, Mr. Chairman, I don't want to deprive any gentleman of an opportunity of acquainting himself with the place, but I object to having this matter postponed any longer than next Friday. I am willing to let it lie over till then, if gentlemen desire to look at the place, but I hope they will not have any other excuse then. I hope they will vote for or against it and settle the matter. If we are going to have a Home for the Poor, let us have it. All agree that it is very much desired. If gentlemen have n't satisfied themselves, I am satisfied they will only want one look at it to cause them to make up their minds. I don't think they will hesitate long about voting for the Austin farm if they see it.

Alderman Clark—I wish to state as one that I shall be ready to vote next Friday. I was ready to vote today, but the remarks of the gentleman were so strong that before I vote for the Austin farm, although I believed it is the most desirable, I want to see the other. But, I must say, the decline of $60,000 in six weeks in real estate, is the greatest I have ever seen. I don't know of any stocks that have declined as much as that.

Alderman Sayward—I don't like the argument of the gentleman. Now, if that is a proper place for a Home for the Poor, we should n't stop on account of a few thousand dollars.

Alderman Stebbins—I would like to ask the member from the Dorchester District one question. He is a member of the Board of Directors. Do they oppose the Bradt farm as a Home for the Poor?

Alderman Sayward—As a body they neither oppose or favor any place. The question has never been before them.

Alderman Hulbert—I stated that members of the directors whom I had seen individually expressed preference for the Austin farm.

Alderman Power—I would state that such members as I have seen have expressed great preference for the Austin farm. They have expressed themselves in the very highest terms. In relation to the great fall of property, I don't think the Austin farm has fallen as much as the Water Power Company. Every gentleman knows there has been a great depression of all kinds of property. I don't believe any estate in the neighborhood would bring more than two-thirds of what it would a few months ago. The city is getting the benefit of the change.

Alderman Clark—I think we should take into consideration the value of property. I should vote today for the Neponset lot for $75,000 if we could not get the Austin farm for that sum. There is a great difference between $75,000 and $156,000. I think we ought to take the cost into consideration. It does make a difference, and we are obliged to use our best judgment. But if we can buy a piece of property that will answer the purpose for a much smaller sum, then we should take the one that costs less.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman don't state the case fairly. When we went to the Austin farm they were both the same price. Now, I say if there is a place in Dedham that you can buy for $30,000 that will answer the purpose, why don't you go and vote for it.

Alderman Clark—That is why I wish to go and look at it.

Alderman Sayward—Then there can't be any need of committees, if we can't take a majority or minority report and act upon it without the whole City Government going to see for themselves.

Alderman Clark—I don't propose to ask this Board to go out with me. I propose to go myself. Now, here are two gentlemen, both of good judgment, who differ widely in opinion. I want to go and see for myself.

Alderman Power—The gentleman is mistaken; it is not one against one, but seven against one.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me we are just getting the owners of property waked up; we are getting a little more competition. Property is falling very rapidly, and I have no doubt that if we wait a short time we shall have a considerable fall, and be able to get this property much cheaper.

Alderman Clark—I move that the order be specially assigned for the next meeting of the Board.

Carried.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins the Chairman appointed Aldermen Stebbins, Power and Gaffield a committee to receive and examine the vote cast at the election today.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the Board adjourned till Friday next, at one o'clock P. M.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

DECEMBER 11, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Petition of Alpheus Hardy et al., for postponement of action on public park. Laid on the table, on motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5.

The following papers received concurrent action:

Auditor's monthly exhibit. Placed on file.

Notice of proposed petition of Somerville for annexation to Boston; request of the Trustees of the Public Library for additional appropriation; and various requests of the School Committee. Referred, in concurrence.

Report recommending reference to Board of Fire Commissioners, of order and petition for location of an engine house on Albany street, near Dover street. Accepted and reference ordered.

Order authorizing the Mayor to offer and pay a reward of $1000 for the detection and apprehension of the person who murdered Bridget Landergin in Ward 16, on the 5th instant. Passed, under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7.

Order for Mayor to petition General Court for an act extending time for city to lay out a public street, or way, across South Bay. Passed.

Order referring to next City Council the subject of providing additional accommodations for pupils in the new Grammar School District, Washington Village. Passed.

Report and order to extend time to January 1, 1875, for Boynton Brothers to erect houses upon two lots of land on Columbus avenue, near Northampton street. Passed.

Report and order to extend time to Jan. 1, 1875, for S. B. Smith to erect a building upon a lot of land on Albany, corner of Concord street. Passed.

Report and order authorizing a transfer of $12,000 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for Common, etc. Passed under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6.

The following were severally read once:

Report and order authorizing a loan of $175,000, to be added to appropriation for Water Works.

Report and ordinance in relation to the fire-alarm telegraph.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following came up as unfinished business, and received concurrent action:

Report and order authorizing the removal of the Old Mather Schoolhouse to the city lot, Highland street.

Mr. Upham of Ward 16—Mr. President, by the operations of rule 23 of this Council, I feel myself debarred from voting on this question from the fact that I am owner of a shed erected upon the premises, which has been located there since 1837. There are also twelve owners of those premises who, it appears to me, have legal possession of the property, having held it for so long a time by vote of the town.

Mr. Upham was excused from voting, and the order was passed.

Order to abate from the tax on Allen & Noble's estate on Devonshire street, the sum of $204 75. Passed.

Resolves and orders from the Street Commissioners:

1. For widening Magazine street, at an estimated expense of $25,000. (City Doc. No. 124.) 2. For extension of Eustis to Magazine street, at an estimated expense of $11,640. (City Doc. No. 125.) 3. For extension of Quincy place to Pearl place, at an estimated expense of $12,784. (City Doc. No. 49.) Severally passed.

Order authorizing a conveyance to W. H. Bordman's heirs of a portion of Sturgis street, discontinued. Passed.

Report and order for a transfer of $1000 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for Quarantine Department. Passed—yeas 44, nays 0.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The first monthly report of the Board of Fire Commissioners in compliance with the "Ordinance to establish a Fire Department" was submitted. The report says, "The Board was organized on the 20th ultimo, and the report is as complete as our present means of information will allow us to make. If any plan can hereafter be adopted by which more exact information on each of the subjects named in the ordinance can be obtained, it will be shown in our future reports, as it will be our aim as faithfully as we are able, fully to carry out this and all other requirements of the ordinance. The experience of a few days has not been sufficient to fit us for giving any other information or to make any suggestions of interest or value to the City Council; but it may be proper for us to add that we find ourselves in a position where study, and labor, and time, will all be needed to work out an improved state of things in the department placed under our charge."

The report contains a list of all the fires which occurred during the month of November, giving the locality, boxes from which the alarms were sounded, the steamers and engines in attendance and the loss and insurance. Following is a recapitulation of the items furnished:

Alarms.			Insurance.		Loss.
Bell.	Still.	Total.	Building.	Stock.	Building	Stock.
27	14	41	$8,050	$65,152	$8,050	$102,263 23

The report was sent up.

PUBLIC SCHOOL ACCOMMODATIONS.

On motion of Mr. Thacher of Ward 15—Ordered, That additional accommodations be furnished for the Heath-street Primary School, Comins District.

Referred to Committee on Public Instruction.

Mr. West of Ward 16 presented requests from the School Committee for the erection, in connection with the English High and Latin schools, of suitable accommodations for the use of the School Committee, including a hall in which the meetings of the board may be held; for an enlargement of the lot recently purchased for the English High and Latin schools; and to abandon the Cottage-place School, and the erection of a new nine-room primary school-house on or near Elmwood street.

Severally referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

USE OF PETROLEUM.

On motion of Mr. Burditt of Ward 16—

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to report what changes, if any, are needed in the ordinance in relation to the manufacture, storage and sale of petroleum and its products, in order to secure the prompt enforcement of its provisions. Passed.

PUBLIC BATH HOUSES.

On motion of Mr. Wells of Ward 3—

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to consider the expediency of placing the bathing houses in charge of the Board of Health. Passed.

THE REPORT ON LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

On motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12, the Council voted to reconsider the vote by which the printed report of the Committee on Legislative Matters was recommitted to that committee.

The question recurred on recommitment.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—Mr. President, that matter was recommitted on my motion, but upon reflection it seems to me that it is so late in the season that it is hardly worth while to trouble the committee with it. I therefore hope the motion to recommit may be lost.

The Council refused to recommit, and voted to accept the report.

SOUP FOR THE POOR.

On motion of Mr. Dacey of Ward 2, it was voted to take from the table the reference to Committee on Overseers of the Poor a message from the Mayor, transmitting a communication from the overseers in relation to the relief of the poor during the coming winter, said reference being with instructions to consider expediency of establishing places throughout the city for furnishing soup and other provisions to the poor. (Printed City Doc. No. 130.)

The question was on concurring with the Aldermen in the reference.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—Mr. President, I do not wish to reflect upon the Board of Overseers of the Poor, but the fact that there is a great deal of complaint coming from all quarters of the manner in which people are treated who call at this bureau for assistance, and the great indifference which characterizes this bureau, leads me to believe that we had better not burden this department with any more duties of this kind. I know there are kind-hearted and charitable men on this board. No one can be kinder in heart than the worthy chairman, ex-Mayor Lincoln, but these men who are brought so frequently in contact with poverty get cold-hearted. A few weeks since a case came to my attention. A lady came to this bureau who wanted her case investigated. She needed relief, and yet she did not receive proper attention. There are some more cases of this kind which have been brought to my attention. I know a lady myself who has got tired of going to this bureau and will not go there any more because of the red tape required in procuring assistance. The board, in their resolution, say "there is no unusual exigency existing, growing out of the commercial panic, to require any new organization or channel for the relief of the destitute the coming winter." Now I beg to differ with the board right here. For years I have been a member of an organization the duty of whose members is to go about once a week relieving the needy. I know there is an unusual exigency. I find that there is an unusual amount of poverty. More people are out of employment than there were at this time last year. Furthermore, in regard to this method of distributing soup, the gentleman who introduced the order says the Chief-of-Police indorses the present method.

I have taken pains to go among the police and ask the officers, and they indorse it almost to a man. I never have heard a single objection raised to it, except this one which comes from the board of Overseers of the Poor. Furthermore, the Board say that "the practice of distributing soup from the police stations is unwise and injudicious, tending to aggravate and increase the evil it designs to alleviate." Now, we know that there is no man going to a police station to stand in line and wait for his turn to get a bowl of soup unless he needs it. It is better that a few unworthy should receive something than that the worthy should suffer. Therefore, I feel that the Board of Overseers of the Poor have got as much as they can do and I don't think it best to give them any more, and I certainly hope the matter will not be referred to them and that the distribution of soup shall proceed as usual.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I desire to say a few words, Mr. President, in advocacy of the adoption of this measure by the City Council. I am opposed to this reference to the Committee on the Overseers of the Poor, and I can only wish that my voice and health were in such a condition, tonight, that I could do full justice to the subject. But my labors for a few days have been such that I do not feel competent to treat it as I ought to, but I will endeavor to say something which will bear possibly upon the subject. Mr. President, I find the twenty-first of Proverbs says that "who so refuseth to listen to the cry of the poor, shall cry himself and shall not be heard." Now, Mr. President, you are well aware that it is not my custom to commit to paper what I desire to say upon any subject, but this afternoon I have written out what I have to say, because I shall particularly attempt to discuss something of the legal part of the subject. Gentlemen may laugh if they see fit, but I shall not be deterred from doing what I think is my duty in the premises. And first I desire to make some comments upon City Document No. 130. On November 24th his Honor the Mayor made a communication to the City Council, which contained these words:

"Since the opinion of the Board was asked upon the expediency of distributing soup from the police stations, I have conferred with the City Solicitor upon the subject, and have been informed by him that the City Council has no authority to appropriate money for such a purpose."

Annexed to this are reports in answer to his communication of Nov. 18th, signed by the President of the Board, and a resolution passed by the Board. The Mayor goes on to state his views and asks the opinion of the board. The reply he obtained is this communication signed by F. W. Lincoln, and dated the 22d, and in it I find these words:

"The moment that any individual receives aid at the public charge, that moment that individual's relation to society is changed, and when by the aggregation of numbers those individuals become a large class, they become an important element in the social state, and any event which has a tendency to their increase is to be deprecated. The great fire of November of the last year is to be deplored for the large amount of property destroyed, and the numbers thrown suddenly out of employment; but not the least of its evils was the opportunity furnished to many persons, for the first time, to appeal to the public for assistance. They were justified under the circumstances, and even invited to make such a claim, and generous means were placed by our citizens to respond to such calls."

"Were invited," Mr. President, "to present themselves and ask for aid." And yet the conclusion of this document is that they can't legally receive such aid. And they go on to say, "that no needy individual of any class has occasion to suffer when his wants are properly made known." On the eighth page they say that the resolution—which was to the effect that the city could not legally furnish the soup—was voted against by two men of large hearts, or rather they voted that it was legal, or in their judgment it should be done. Now go on further and the communication says—

"Boston has a deservedly high reputation outside of its own limits for its benevolent spirit. It has attained this, not by a prodigal and lavish expenditure of large appropriations, doling out its alms in a lax and loose manner, but by the establishment of a method and system which, while relieving real want, represses mendicity. The establishment of soup houses, or turning the police stations into them, a few years since, was regarded by nearly all conversant with the subject as a doubtful expedient for relieving the poor; the objections are obvious, and need not be commented on at this time."

If the objections are obvious, why not state them. Not one single word has been sent in here to show that they are obvious, not one scintilla of proof to show that they are obvious. Now, sir, here is a Wel-lerism, so to speak—

"Employment for the able-bodied is better charity than almsgiving."

Just as if everybody didn't know it. "And, although it is not the province of municipalities to furnish it for the people, yet incidentally some enterprises of a public nature might be prosecuted, even out of season, to be supplemented by men of capital engaging in new ventures to their own profit, as well as for the benefit of the laboring classes."

Well that meets the exigency to an enormous extent, in intimating that people may go into business for the purpose of supporting the poor. How many men will do it? Was there ever such an undertaking in Boston? Again—

"It is the opinion of some of our most sagacious business men that we have already passed the period of our most severe commercial depression, and that the prospects are brightening for a return to our usual prosperity."

Heaven save the mark. I'd like to see the evidence of returning prosperity. I see it nowhere. I notice that manufacturing establishments throughout all New England are suspending day by day.

"If this hope is fallacious, and will not be speedily realized, I can assure you that our board will endeavor to meet, to the best of their ability, the new emergencies as they arise, and we have no doubt that the same spirit will animate the more private charitable organizations not under municipal control. There are occasionally cases, from their peculiar circumstances unknown to our visitors, coming to the knowledge of the police of which we should be promptly notified at our office."

Well, I can cite instance after instance which has occurred within the last three weeks, for which I have personally, or through others, applied for relief from the Board of Overseers for females and families without means of daily support, and the propositions have been rejected, and that right in the face of this document. These are facts which I can prove and will prove absolutely at the proper time. Now I go on to the tenth page and find a document signed by John Pratt, Secretary:

"Resolved, That, as at present advised, there is no unusual exigency existing, growing out of the commercial panic, to require any new organization or channel for the relief of the destitute the coming winter. The city is well covered by the Overseers of the Poor, and the existing charitable organizations, for ministering to the necessities of the needy."

A fact which I and the whole people of Boston deny. The month of November has witnessed more poverty and more need has been required for deserving poor than in the same period for years. And that is the character of this document from beginning to end. Now, Mr. President, I can only characterize this document as one which has been got up for the purpose of allaying the public excitement now existing on this subject, and for no other purpose. It does not practically meet the exigency in any sense of the word. The deserving poor, day by day and night by night, are suffering, and yet the people of Boston are not aware of it. In street after street in the districts which many of us represent are deserving people who are suffering from hunger, to speak of nothing else. Now, Mr. President, it has been my custom, somewhat, to refer to facts and figures, and I will simply give a few to show that while we are lavish in our expenditures for extravagances, we are not willing to feed the hungry or clothe the naked. The expenditures for the Fourth of July in 1872 were $22,022 13, and for music on the Common, $2,932 13, making $24,924 26. By careful management this year those expenses have been reduced to the sum of $15,657 73, and some of us in this Council have the credit or discredit of bringing down these expenditures which are customary and legally passed by the City Council for the benefit of the people. Now, Mr. President, I desire to give to the Council, if they will have the kindness to hear, what I have committed to paper.

Mr. President, I have examined, with some considerable care, the letter of his Honor the late Mayor, dated November 18, to the Board of Overseers of the Poor, and their answer to the same, and while I find sentiments of humanity expressed by the Mayor, I fail to see responsive answers thereto; but, on the contrary, a strict adhesion to the old-fogy idea that "Boston cannot depart from established methods" on this or other subjects. Now, Boston has for the five years last past departed from the established method of helping her deserving poor in one particular manner; and not a single instance has been shown where it has worked unfavorably to anybody, but thousands of instances can be cited where such help has directly and indirectly been greatly for the advantage of the community, not only in the line of humanity, but in an economical sense, as saving to the public expense the cost following from crimes committed by reason of poverty. Look you to the records of the Chief-of-Police and find whether I am correct. Every word of what I have said and more will be proven by those records.

The theories advanced in the statements of the Board of Overseers in themselves may be very proper, but, practically they fail to meet the exigencies of the case. I took occasion a few days since to address a letter to the City Solicitor in order that I might obtain his reply in writing upon the legality of the city's furnishing soup for the poor, with special reference to chapter one hundred and sixty-five, Legislative Acts of 1861; and I have here his reply, which I will read so that I shall do him no injustice, for I have the highest respect for his opinion, but am well aware that on a point of possible doubt he would very naturally, and properly too, decide on the safe side.

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE,
2 Pemberton square, Boston.

George A. Shaw, Esq.: Dear Sir—In my opinion, chapter 165 of the acts of 1861 does not authorize the furnishing of soup as proposed. It provides for certain specific things, and "other purposes of a public nature." The other purposes must be of the same general character as those enumerated. Besides, that act by its terms provides for matters not theretofore provided for by law. Assistance for the poor was provided for before the enactment of that statute, and the mode of rendering it was also provided for. Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

J. P. HEALY.

Now, Mr. President, let me read that act, chapter 165, Legislative Acts of 1861:

"Any city, by vote of the city council thereof, in addition to the sum heretofore authorized by law to be raised and appropriated, may appropriate any funds in treasury, or raise money by taxation, and appropriate the same for the providing of armories for the use of military companies, for the celebration of holidays, and for other purposes of a public nature; PROVIDED, that such appropriations shall be made by vote of two-thirds of the members of each branch of the city council present, and voting by ye and nay vote, and that the amount of such appropriations made by any city, in any one year, shall not exceed one fiftieth of one per cent. of its valuation for the same year."

Now, sir, one fiftieth of one per cent. of the valuation of this year, the valuation being seven hundred millions, is a hundred and forty thousand dollars—not one-half of which has been spent, and there is yet remaining in the treasury the other half to be expended for purposes of a public nature. Now, sir, I had the honor to be a member of the Senate in 1861 when this act passed, and as it was a matter of very general interest, the debate on it is well remembered. An attempt was made to amend the act by inserting "towns" so as to make it apply to towns, but the amendment did not prevail, and it was adopted and approved as it now stands, intending that it should cover purposes which had nowhere before been provided for, but for exigencies which might arise, and it certainly admits of a most liberal construction. Mr. President, the City Solicitor has given his opinion, as he holds it; but there may be those who differ from him, for even the best judges on the Supreme Bench often differ, and on the most important cases. But as I understand the reason of this opinion, it is that "the act provides for certain specific things and other purposes of a 'public nature,'" but certainly it does not say of a "like public nature." I wish my equal friends here would take special notice of this act, because I think it is a matter which they can appreciate. And also that "the act by its terms provides for matters not theretofore provided for by law. Assistance for the poor was provided for before the enactment of that statute, and the mode of rendering it was provided for." I admit all of that, but it does not say, nor did it intend to say, that no further nor additional legislation shall be enacted; and I have always understood that as a rule of practice, courts and legislative bodies always accept the latest act as law. It may be presumption for me, as I am not a lawyer, "nor the son of a lawyer," to undertake to argue a legal question before this board; but, nevertheless, I have the right to give my opinion on a subject open for discussion. Again it is argued that the providing of soup for the poor is not of a "public nature," because it is only for a class (the poor), and not for the whole public. Now I think that is a fallacy, an entire fallacy, and will not stand the test of investigation and scrutiny. Now, what say Webster and Worcester both? "Public; in general indistinction from private acts—as the general people, the general acts." Nature—What say Webster and Worcester, quoting Dryden, "Sort, kind, species, in the nature of. That is, partaking of the nature of?" Now, if this act is not in the nature of a public measure, what is it? Because it is only taken advantage of by the poor, is it thereby taken out of the scale of legality for the purposes proposed? Let me read that again. "Because it is only taken advantage of by the poor." Is n't any public act to be partaken of by such individuals as see fit to partake of it? It is n't the whole public who are bound to do so, but only those who see fit to partake of the provisions of this act, and it is only that the poor shall partake of the provisions of this act because they see fit to do so. You and I, Mr. President, if we see fit, may partake of this soup, and I believe if this Council does not pass this measure, the next one will. Mr. President, I should like to have the people of Boston vote upon this question, that is, whether they would sustain the view I take upon it. Do you think there is a single voter in this city of ours of 350,000 inhabitants, including my friends from Charlestown who are witnessing our proceedings tonight, who would be mean enough to deposit in the ballot box a "No"? I should pity the man who would do it, and should advise him to do as the young man did who went West, and after getting quite well acquainted there, wrote home to his father to come out, saying, "Mighty mean men get office out here, and I think you would stand a good chance if you should come out." One of nature's noblemen, as well as a peer of the British realm, Lord Brougham, says, "It was the boast of Augustus that he found Rome of brick and left it of marble. How much nobler will be the sovereign's boast when he shall have it to say that he found law dear and left it cheap—that he found it a sealed book, and left it a living letter—that he found it the patrimony of the rich and left it the inheritance of the poor—found it the two-edged sword of craft and oppression, and left it the staff of honesty, the shield of innocence." It has been said that what has been done in the soup line for the five years last past has been wholly illegal, and if attempted again an injunction would be asked for by ten eminent citizens of Boston and the whole matter stopped. Well, suppose the ten citizens do muster up courage enough from their rusty brains to ask an injunction before they obtain it; they may wish they had followed the advice of the Western boy to his father and followed in the same footsteps. I think I see these ten men proceeding to ask for said injunction, and to illustrate my idea let me suppose a case. And in doing so I shall make use of some portion of the language a gentleman (not of this branch of the City Council) used in his speech against a public park.

Now, let us "imagine the great committee, well coated and muffled ready for December blasts, as starting off in procession down the wide staircase of this hall, they move on for their tour of inspection (so appropriate is their mission to the season). See them in the main hall, doors open on either side, and that unimpassioned Treasurer and fierce-visaged Auditor standing in the doorways to view and bless the parting train. What a blessing! The parties had better not hear it."

Imagine ten eminent citizens of Boston, headed by a tall gentleman from the Highlands with a written speech in his hand; on his right "that unimpassioned Treasurer, and fierce-visaged Auditor" on the left, flanked by a brace of ex-mayors, poor overseers, —all, all, decked in robes of sable, listening with more than Oriental splendor, "ready for December blasts"; imagine that grand army of patriots "as starting off in procession down the wide staircase of this hall" to the room of the Supreme Court. "What a blessing" will it be as the grand leader unfolds his ponderous portfolio, and proceeds to read to the court, with the refined diction of a George Francis Train and the eloquent oratory of a Daniel Pratt, one after another of those studied sentences, and to emphasize one after another those rounded periods, and then to listen in breathless silence to the Honorable Chief-Justice as he replies to them, "Men of Boston! go home and study the laws of God and man, and learn to do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has hearts not made of stone. You talk neither law nor logic, charity nor humanity." Your injunction is refused! Now look on that picture, then on this: And as these antediluvian malecontents, dressed in purple and fine linen, pass from the Court House to their homes of affluence and luxury, a poor widow begs a penny of them for the sustenance of her fatherless children, and she gets this for a reply: "Before we can do anything for you we must know whether your late husband had paid five years' taxes in Boston, and was an American citizen," and heartsick she returns to her home of poverty. Which of these, Mr. President, think ye, as here pictured, are God's chosen ones?

Mr. West of Ward 16—I think we had better take a practical view of this question, risk the legality of the action and pass the order, and then if any citizens want to test it, let them get an injunction. The city can't be very much injured, and I think we had better pass the order at once and risk the consequences.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12—In view of the fact that the city has already made suitable provisions for the poor, I shall vote against the order.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I will state for the information of the Council what I saw today at the Chardon-street Bureau. I was there about twelve o'clock, and saw some dozen or fifteen, one after another, passing up the steps and rapping at the door, where stood an ex-policeman, who was discharged for cruelty to a boy. Not one of those applicants was admitted. Now if members of this Council propose to vote to make poor people who live in Dorchester come to this bureau to get a pint of soup, I for one don't propose to do it.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—Where the City Solicitor has so much experience in matter relating to municipal law, the chances are that, when he gives an opinion on a subject relating to municipal law, it is right. And yet it seems to me that this is one of those pressing emergencies, and I for one should be unwilling to deprive the poor of this very simple and cheap relief—when it can be so easily supplied and is so accessible to them—until the question has been passed upon by the Supreme Judicial Court. And in this connection it may be proper to state that that court has considered that in applications for injunction it has a discretion, and on some occasions, if my memory serves me rightly, when applications have been made for injunctions to restrain municipal expenditures, the court, in the exercise of that discretion, which they are possessed of, have declined to interfere by injunctions. If I am not mistaken there have been such instances within my recollection. Therefore, while a question may exist in regard to the legality of such an expenditure, while we know that relief will be asked for and while we know that some improper persons wish to get relief, rather than that proper persons should go without it, and while we have the testimony of the gentleman from Ward 2, which can be listened to with entire confidence, it seems to me that the better way, on the whole, is to try and give this relief, and if we fail then it will turn out that it is their fault and not ours.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I don't understand that the question now is that the poor shall have soup at the police stations or no soup at all. I do n't know that the question is whether they will get no soup at all or whether they will have to tramp into Chardon street. The question seems to be whether the Committee on Overseers of the Poor, after a conference with the Overseers of the Poor, should come to the conclusion that it should be furnished to the poor; then comes the question what place they should select. I don't believe it is necessary to associate it with police stations, but it seems to have been taken for granted that if we don't pass this order to allow $3000 to be appropriated for soup, no relief will be given. That is n't a fair statement, and I don't think the reference should be defeated on that account. I have a letter from Mr. Thomas C. Amory, in which he says—

"The illegality resolves itself into this—that the relief of the poor being devolved upon the Overseers of the Poor, the distribution of soup by the police under an order of the City Council may be of doubtful legality or undoubted illegality, but the distribution of the soup by the Overseers of the Poor at the stations, with authority from the City Council, would not be open to the same question."

If that be so it seems to me to be wiser for the City Council to authorize the Overseers of the Poor to expend this money, than that the City Council should undertake to do it themselves. Of course that is prima facie evidence that it is illegal. The City Solicitor says it is. Now, if it is illegal to spend this money for the poor, it seems to me foolish to destroy this opportunity to dispense this charity simply because we have had these charges trumped up here. I was on a committee to investigate charges against the Overseers of the Poor two years ago, and they were entirely exonerated. I have here an article from the Sunday Courier, in which this paragraph occurs in reference to the sentiment of the poor:

"For reasons that will be sufficiently obvious upon reflection it is the policy of the State to offer no other alternative to the non-settlement poor who can bear the journey there, than the almshouse. But as no mode is provided by which such persons can be removed unless children or insane without their consent except as vagrants, a large number of our most needy poor who will not go to Tewksbury are left without other provision than private charity or such temporary aid not reimbursed by the State as comes within the definition of relief until removal. There is some difference of opinion as to what this signifies; the general and prevailing opinion being that fuel and groceries in extreme cases for a brief period are all that the law sanctions. This view seems to be sustained by the opinion of the City Council, who, in 1863, instructed the overseers that their duty was to make no expenditure for the use of any person who had not a legal claim upon the city for support and assistance; and that no such person had such claim to support either in whole or in part unless he had a legal settlement in Boston. That if a person fell into distress here who had a settlement elsewhere in the State, it was the duty of the overseers to afford him temporary relief at the expense of the town in which he had his settlement; and if he had no such settlement then they ought forthwith to take the necessary steps to have him removed to one of the State almshouses. No other mode, as already stated, is known to exist for such removal except by complaint under the vagrant law, which in many cases, would be gross inhumanity."

It seems sir, that if those instructions from the City Council to the Overseers of the Poor have never been rescinded, it is the Council and not the Overseers of the Poor who are responsible for any distress that may arise therefrom. I think it is better that we should not fling insinuations at officers whom we have ourselves elected. If there is anything wrong let it be investigated; if there is anything wrong let the City Council apply to the Legislature for a change in the law in relation to a settlement of the poor or for a change in the law in relation to the method of relief. I hope the reference will prevail.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I did n't propose to say anything further, but it is an old saying that everybody is not born with a silver spoon in his mouth. The gentleman talks about Tewksbury Almshouse for the poor. If he will follow the doings of the Tewksbury Almshouse arrangement, he will find that if a poor man goes there he will be liable to get sentenced for two years. Then the gentleman talks about flinging insinuations against the officers. There is not one word I have uttered but what I would wish published. I stand by what I say and they are facts. I don't think there is much need of making any talk about a few thousand dollars, and I think there are members of this Council and the other branch who will subscribe three thousand dollars. The gentleman says the Overseers of the Poor can distribute this money, but the gentleman don't say that certain parties who will have to establish the places will eat up the three thousand dollars before the people get it. Now the kettles are all prepared, the police are happy to distribute this soup. Now, the question is whether it is n't best for the Council to give the whole of this appropriation to the poor. No matter if a man is passing through this city and is needy, why, pass him by. What I say today has convinced me: That man who was discharged from the police of Boston was tending that door; if he was not fit to be on the police force, he was not fit to stand there and say who was an object of charity. Then the gentleman says it is a fling; if he will go and look back at the name on that document he will know that the man was formerly an assessor of Boston and was placed there by friends. My living and what I possess has been made by brains and muscle; I have been in this City Government many years, and I know the working of it, and I tell you that the affairs of this city are managed by men who can't earn a living by their brains or muscle, and they are put into these positions by their friends. They are not competent to stand there. If the city is to give a man aid, give it to him and let him go on—not time him by the bell. I am ready to stand here and give $100 if anybody else is willing, and here are two others beside me who will do the same. We can raise the money here in the Council.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—The gentleman from Ward 6 says cases have been trumped up. I can state cases of my own knowledge. No longer than a few days ago a woman met me and a reporter who sits over there at that table, and asked for help, and that kind-hearted reporter gave her some money to take her to the Charity Bureau; she applied there for assistance and got nothing—got nothing, sir; and a kind-hearted lady whom I can name here, and to whom the case was reported by me, took that woman in charge and provided for her wants. The reason why she was refused was the fact that it could not be ascertained that her father had paid five years' taxes in Boston. And this case having been reported in the newspapers, money has been sent in a sealed envelope, received and applied for the object designed by the proprietors of the Traveller. Now, sir, I can tell you of a case that occurred today, and then let the gentleman rise and say that cases are trumped up and brought here for any such purpose. I say such a charge is inhuman and indecent—I repeat it, sir, it is inhuman and indecent. A case occurred in which the Overseers of the Poor did furnish a poor man of Boston with two dollars and he spent it for his sustenance. In twenty-four hours a kind-hearted lady gave him the money to return the amount to the overseers and that board refused to take that man's name from the record of paupers, and he stands there today, with his name as a pauper, with the two dollars returned to that institution. Now think of Ward 6, which the gentleman represents in part—and I thank God only in part—which has elected a woman to the School Committee, and I, for one, intend to do my best to get a woman on that Board of Overseers of the Poor, a kind-hearted woman who knows the wants of the poor. It is not within the line of propriety for the gentleman from Ward 6 to rise here and say cases have been trumped up. Why sir, I can bring instance after instance of extreme poverty which have been relieved only by individual contributions after they have been refused by this inhuman board. I repeat it, it is an inhuman board, for it is the duty of that board to suppress inhumanity. I care not whether it is an ex-Mayor or the meanest and poorest man in Ward 5 where I live, who is the member, I say it is inhuman also for gentlemen to rise here and make such statements. Give me a man of heart, whether he is born in America, Ireland or Germany; I care not for his nationality or his color, but give me a man with "human blood in his veins," as I once before remarked. Now, sir, I speak with some degree of fervor upon this matter, because I think it is due to the exigencies of this occasion—because I think we represent a constituency of Boston and should do what we have a perfect right to do, and what I believe it is right to do, the opinion of the City Solicitor to the contrary notwithstanding. The honorable City Solicitor has decided this point in the same way in which he has before decided matters in which there is doubt—in favor of the city. But let that matter go to the Supreme Court, and there is not a court in the land but will decide that this act will admit of a liberal construction. I can only repeat what I have said before, that this matter is of a public nature. There is not a man in this room who can rise in his place and show it is not a public matter. I trust the Council will excuse me for speaking with some ardor, and I wouldn't do it except for the statement of the gentleman from Ward 6, who said cases have been trumped up here, while cases have been stated by myself and others of the suffering that is endured by citizens of this city. Yesterday morning there were discharged from employment several men whose subsistence depends upon the two dollars per day they get from the city. This is a notorious fact. Now where are they to get their subsistence? I have today been trying to get employment in the Navy Yard for parties discharged from the city, and I found Mr. Pook, the naval constructor, and the heads of departments willing to employ parties, notwithstanding the fact that there was very little work to do. If the gentleman from Ward 6 will take a fifth of his time and inquire into the wants of the people of his district, he never will say that those charges were trumped up. I only say this to the Council for the purpose of showing that this is no fallacy, and that the people of Boston, who are kind-hearted and generous, are calling attention to it day by day, and they are contributing to it from their own purses. There are thousands who are willing to partake of the soup which the city furnishes, but are unwilling to beg from door to door. I could enumerate instance after instance where the city of Boston can save thousands of dollars by preventing crime, the consequence of poverty. Day after day the records of the courts will show you that crime is committed by reason of poverty, and the expense of it is to be paid by the city of Boston and that poverty and hunger might be alleviated by the provisions which are proposed in this order. Now, sir, I say it is not only a matter of humanity, but a measure of economy for the city of Boston to provide the poor with this small pittance. And I shall repeat, at the risk of being called foolish for arguing against the opinion of the City Solicitor, that I believe the Supreme Court will decide in favor of the constitutionality of this law. It will be declared legal and constitutional.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—Perhaps from what the gentleman from Ward 6 said, it may be necessary to state that I can prove whatever I have said. In regard to insinuations, I am not willing to take from the gentleman from Ward 6 one particle of credit, but I must say that—

"For ways that are dark
And tricks that are vain,
The gentleman from Ward 6 is peculiar."

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—Assuming that we are all willing to do something for the poor, after listening to the long speeches this evening, would it not be best not to defeat the resolution before us, but to pass it and let the Overseers of the Poor consider the expediency of establishing the soup houses, and then vote upon it after hearing the report? If we defeat this order the whole thing will fall to the ground. The order went to the other board and was defeated there. Now we have from the other board this reference and recommendation, in which I hope we shall concur, with the amendment, which I shall offer. I move to strike out the words, "consider the expediency of establishing," and insert the word "establish."

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I am opposed to the gentleman's amendment clean through. If he will tell this Council why we need to refer it to the Overseers of the Poor to consider the need of establishing what we have already in the station houses, I will vote for this amendment. It does seem to me that the gentleman's amendment is incurring a bill of expense to do what we have already, and we don't need another institution of this kind.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—My amendment is intended not that there shall be new places provided, but that they shall establish them in places at their discretion. I am quite willing to leave the question of selecting the places to this committee of this Council. If you defeat this reference you will defeat the whole thing.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—If this order is illegal I can't see how the amendment is to make it legal. Furthermore, I believe that the Overseers of the Poor have enough to do. I don't believe in so much red tape in the giving away of a bowl of soup. There are so many instances of red tape with the overseers that I don't believe in hurdening them any more. If the present system is a success I can't see how the amendment will do anything to make the matter legal, if it is illegal now.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—If the gentleman is puzzled on the question of legality, I can't see how we can fail to pass the order, after the speeches which have been made on either side. That objection don't prevail in this Council.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—As I said before, I don't know whether it is legal or not. I have said that I shall vote for it if it is illegal, and I believe the citizens of Boston will support us.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 read a portion of the extract above quoted, and thought the amendment was open to the same objection as the original order.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I should like to suggest or propose an amendment, so that it will read "to establish at the several police stations."

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—I have no objection. I accept the amendment.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I have my doubts now, if the gentleman's amendment should prevail, whether the poor will get any help. I know that the Overseers of the Poor will not establish the soup houses. I hope the Council will not pass it.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would ask the question whether we have power to instruct the Overseers of the Poor.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—It seems to me that the order will not instruct the Overseers of the Poor, as the instructions are to the Committee on Overseers of the Poor. It seems to me we ought to pass the order to instruct the Overseers of the Poor.

Mr. West of Ward 16—If we pass the order to instruct the committee, there is nothing to prevent them from going and establishing the soup houses.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16—It seems to me that if we pass this amendment, we take it from the Overseers of the Poor, and give it to the Committee on Overseers of the Poor. It don't matter to me how it is done, so it is done. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

The amendment was carried, and the Council concurred in the reference as amended.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I would inquire how the vote making the appropriation stands. I forget whether we passed the appropriation for that purpose.

The President—The Chair believes that the original order instructing another committee to expend this money, is now pending in the other branch, being on the table. Th's now goes down in addition.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

DECEMBER 12, 1873.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at one o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENT CONFIRMED.

Special Police—Robert Evans, Chapel of Good Shepherd and Huntington House.

PETITIONS REFERRED.

To the Committee on Health on the part of the Board, Erskin & Bennett, to occupy wooden stable for twelve additional horses on corner Meridian and Eutaw streets.

To the Committee on Streets. Sawyer, Jameson & Cook, for abatement of assessment for betterment on Stoughton and other streets.

To the Committee on Paving. David R. Whitney & Co. et al., for a sidewalk on Milk street, between the Post Office and Oliver street.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Orders to pay John Roessle, administrator of John Roessle, $39,414 15, on account of widening of Pyncheon street, and $17,132 75, on account of widening of Washington street.

Severally passed.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

Alderman Stebbins submitted the following:

The committee appointed to examine the returns of votes cast in the several wards of this city on the ninth instant, for mayor and aldermen and for one street commissioner, have attended to that duty and report that the returns appear to be properly made and the results are correctly recorded in the book kept for that purpose, from which it appears that the following persons, having a plurality of votes, have been duly chosen for their respective offices:

Mayor—Samuel C. Cobb.

Aldermen—Leonard R. Cutter, John T. Clark, James Power, Solomon B. Stebbins, Alanson Bigelow, Hiram Emery, Andrew J. Hall, Thomas B. Harris, Francis A. Peters, William F. Brooks, Charles J. Prescott, Roland Worthington.

Street Commissioner (for three years)—Joseph Smith.

The committee recommend that the City Clerk be directed to notify the above-named persons of their election.

SOLOMON B. STEBBINS,
JAMES POWER,
THOMAS GAFFIELD, } Committee.

The report was accepted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported an order to pay Martin M. Rogers $129 55 for land taker, from Mary Tucker, by the widening of Cottage street.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported leave to withdraw on petition of William Childs, for more pay for land taken at the corner of Third and Emerson streets. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported leave to withdraw on applications of Edward Dalen, John O'Hare, T. & W. Glynn, Adeline P. Flanders, and heirs of William Brigham, to erect and occupy stables. Severally accepted.

HOME FOR THE POOR.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert, the Board took up the special assignment, the order to purchase the Austin farm for a home.

Alderman Hulbert—I will only occupy the attention of the Board for a few moments. Mr. Bradt called upon me after the meeting of the Board, and showed me that an incorrect impression would be created by a little omission which I myself had not observed. If the Board will allow me, I will refer to it. I referred to the purchase of the Bradt farm, and its being resold, and then I am informed that the first price named was $200,000, and during the year the price has decreased to $75,000. It did not occur to me that not quite all of the original tract was proposed to be reconveyed to the city. I told Mr. Bradt that I was under a wrong impression which might be corrected. Furthermore, Mr. Bradt took no exceptions to the other remarks I made. I will explain to the Board. Of the land which Mr. Bradt does not propose to transfer to the city, are twelve acres on Woodward street, for which Mr. Woodward paid $2800 and resold to Mr. Bradt for $6530. The case stands like this. There were conveyed in all to Mr. Bradt about forty-four or five acres of upland, and about twenty four acres of meadow land; he reserved seven acres of upland and twelve acres of meadow land. The city gets about twelve acres of meadow land and thirty-seven of upland. I will say a few words more upon this subject, and not trouble the Board further. In what I have said I have intended to be perfectly candid, and truthful, so that no wrong impression should be created. I also want to refer to another thing. Some have got the impression from the remarks I made here at the last meeting that I am not sufficiently regardful of the comfort of the class referred to, and in rejecting one site I undervalue the comforts of the poor. I wish to state here that I am open to no such criticism. In all that I have stated I have been duly regardful of the comforts of the poor in the kind of building and conveniences to be furnished. I have not omitted to consider the comfort and convenience of the poor and their friends, and I will give you the reasons why. The place that I propose, as compared with the one referred to in the order, is within one mile of a large town; it is on the line of a railway where the cars are passing every hour in the day, I think. It is capable of being made very pleasant and beautiful. The variety of scenery around it is great and it is pleasantly located for the inmates of the institution to occupy when the grounds are put in good order. Give me ten thousand dollars, and I will make that place look beautiful. I have in mind the comfort of these people because I want to place the institution where their friends can go, comfortably and conveniently, in any season of the year, and visit the inmates. In order that gentlemen may understand how important that is, I will state that the proportion of friends visiting paupers at such an institution, as compared with the number visiting reformatory institutions is as three to one, for this reason: in reformatory institutions only one ticket can be issued at a time, while whole families are allowed to visit the paupers at a time. Another thing, which is very important, is that aged persons may be able to visit the paupers. This is an important thing. Take the next six months in this cold climate—they must be placed so that their aged friends can go there as comfortably and conveniently on land as they can go to Deer Island. Therefore, I have not ignored the comfort of the poor in all that I have proposed, and I fail to see that I am not correct. I want to repeat just one thing that I have stated before. I have no point to carry in this thing; it is just as clear to me in the policy of the city as anything I have ever been called upon to do in my life. I have conversed with many persons, and I have been told that it is indispensable, in carrying out this thing, that it must be put upon the line of a good railroad, and one gentleman said to me that when the city comes to pay the bills for transportation they will see it.

I have found upon my desk a letter from a person with whom I never conversed on the subject, fully indorsing what I have said. If I should give the name it would carry weight with it. Now, gentlemen, I don't insist upon the lot I propose. Give me another just as good, and I will go for it. I have travelled about a good deal, and have not found as good a lot on any railroad as this, and therefore I am willing to state here that that lot will answer—will for all time, answer the purposes of the city. I am willing to have that go upon record as my opinion. Almost everywhere you go you find the neighbors object to the location of such an institution close to them; the railroads don't want it. When you come to find a site on the railroad you will find yourselves blocked at every corner. I know of no other locality that has as much that is desirable as this. I will say further that I never have objected to the Austin farm on account of its beautiful site. There is no doubt about that. I don't object to that, but I do object to taking it because it has not those other facilities which apply to the inmates, and to their friends, to the city, so all that appertains to the conduct of the affairs of the institution in the matter of economy, and to the city officials who are to have charge of it for years to come. This Austin farm is situated where it will not have a railroad for many years to come. I went over the ground last night. A very large extra expense must be made; there is no mistake about that. That is all I have to say, Mr. Chairman. It is simply a business transaction. If we make the place I recommend attractive, it is just as desirable as the Austin farm. It can be put in attractive shape; it is feasible, desirable and economical and easy to be carried on. It seems to me that this is a plain case, and upon that I take my position.

Alderman Power—I did n't mean to say anything upon this subject this afternoon, and I would not now were it not for the effects of the remarks made on a former occasion by the gentleman who has just spoken on this subject. I don't mean to say—I don't think—that he had any intention of maligning the character of gentlemen interested in this purchase, or injuring them in any way. But his remarks have had a great tendency to injure them, and the Boston Journal, of which I have a copy in my hand, in its remarks on the next day, contained the same impression and conveyed it to the public—which impression is, that gentlemen have been trying to put this property upon the city at an exorbitant price. And all this has been brought in here to prejudice us to act unfavorably on the Austin farm. This is what the Journal says:

"Alderman Hulbert made an able exposé yesterday afternoon of the condition of the proposed Home for the Poor, stating some facts which indicate that an effort has failed to perpetrate a great wrong had the original price named for the proposed estate been accepted. If some gentlemen figure in an unenviable light, they have only themselves to thank for it. In view of the fact that a better estate, which will cost the city less money and is far more eligibly located, can be secured, ought to be sufficient reason for at once abandoning all consideration of the Austin farm. * * * While there may be more or less sympathy felt for the unfortunate owners, it is very clear that the city of Boston ought to wash its hands at once of a location which is tinged with such grave suspicions of an attempt to put up a first-class job."

Now, sir, who are these gentlemen who figure in an unenviable light? It certainly must convey the impression that the committee who have had this matter in charge must stand in an unenviable light before the public. Since I have had the honor to have a seat in this Board I have thought that if ever there was a committee appointed in this City Government whose character stood above suspicion it was this committee. I have felt that here was a committee that was above suspicion of bribery. And now here is a statement that makes this committee "stand in an unenviable light." An impression has prevailed that that same property which was first offered for $200,000 is now offered to the city for $75,000. But the gentleman has explained his remarks, and so far that is right. Now, sir, I want to say that the very first estate offered to the committee was the "Ward farm," so called, owned by R. A. Ballou. It was deeded by deed recorded in Suffolk Registry by F. J. Ward and others, and conveyed to Samuel Wheelock, for more than a hundred thousand dollars for about fifty acres of land, and I think this committee will agree with me that fifty acres of the Bradt farm is worth fully as much as that. That farm was offered at ten cents per foot, that being the lowest price, and yet when the gentlemen were asked to make some concessions to the city of Boston, they said no. Now, contrasting this action with that of the proprietors of the Austin farm, it appears as if somebody else was trying to put up a job on the city. This land was bought at the same time that the Austin farm was, when people were run crazy about land. Everywhere land was bought at high prices, and the sales were made in good faith. So if the gentleman will look into this matter he will see that there is nothing which should prejudice this purchase. The owners of this property stand in the community as good as the gentleman from the Highland District. If they don't happen to be worth as much money as myself or the gentleman, they are entitled to as much respect. They wanted to sell this land, and as their chances of selling it grew less and less, and the value had declined, they offered it for less, as they wanted the money. Where is there a merchant in this city who has n't done the same thing? I have done the same thing myself in business. I have sold merchandise for $30,000 that could n't be bought for $60,000 today. It is the experience of every gentleman who owns land in the outlying districts. So there should n't be a wrong impression conveyed, that this land has been offered to the city for a less price than at first. But there is a great wrong done here. I know the gentleman would not do anything to injure me or insinuate that I am doing wrong in advocating this place. I am glad for the interest of the city that we waited and waited, and now the city is going to get the benefit of this fall in the price of land. Now, in view of the fact that it will not do to wait any longer, I advocate the purchase of the Austin farm for a Home for the Poor, and seven out of eight of the committee advocate it. Now, the gentleman says no man of common sense will take it as a gift for a Home for the Poor. Now, I grant that the gentleman who made use of that expression has a full measure of common sense, but I don't think he has absorbed all of it in the community. I think this committee have a full measure of common sense, and seven out of eight of them advocate the purchase of the Austin farm. Now, I don't believe that the proprietors of the Journal would cause such an aspersion upon my character, "Some gentlemen figure in an unenviable light, and they have only themselves to thank for it." I have advocated the purchase of the Austin farm for $130,000 and do I "stand in an unenviable light"? There was a time when it would have brought that amount in market. The gentleman says it is indispensable that a place should be easy of access. Now, sir, the Austin farm can be reached as easily as the other—you can go on foot and get there before you could go to the other place by rail. And the gentleman speaks of the poor who wish to visit their friends. Why, the great reason why poor people wished to have the institution removed from Deer Island was, that they might go there without cost. Why, you can go to the Austin even if you have no money. There is no depot there, it is true. The gentleman says there will be a depot at the place he names—he says he has heard that there is to be a depot there soon. I have heard that there is to be a branch of the Boston Hartford & Erie Railroad by the Austin farm. Another thing, I say the city can't afford to buy the place named by the gentleman, from matter of economy, for it will cost as much to place it in good condition as it will to buy the Austin farm. As I said before, I did n't want to say anything more about the Austin farm, and I should not were it not for the article in this paper. It has conveyed the impression that the gentlemen advocating the Austin farm had bad motives; it was calculated to do them an injury and to injure the gentlemen who own the property. That is all. I only wished to express my opinion on this article. I hope this order will take its second reading this afternoon, but if any gentleman is not prepared to vote, and would like it postponed until next Monday, as the Council does not meet before then, I have no objection to that if any one wishes it.

Alderman Gibson—I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Public Institutions how much additional accommodations there are at Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton for the care of the poor.

Alderman Hulbert—There are no accommodations at West Roxbury and none at Brighton. There is a poor-farm at Brighton, on which there is a moderate-sized dwelling, where twenty or thirty people can live. The town of Brighton found it cheaper to support their poor in another way. The city of Charlestown have a home for the poor. I would simply say, in reference to what the Alderman said, that Mr. Bradt told me that he felt that my statement was, under all the circumstances, such as he could not take exception to, except the statement I referred to before. I took as much pains as could be possible not to reflect upon any member of the committee. But every member of the committee has seen the pressure that has been brought to bear during the last year. I said to Mr. Bradt "that is not my way," and he said "such things were generally done that way." I took especial pains not to impute anything unfavorable to the committee. When, in my position as chairman, I found that I differed with the committee I was led to look very carefully over the matter. But when I deem it my duty I can't give up, though I am generally ready to change my convictions when sufficient proof is offered. Knowing what I know, and passing through what I have on this question, I have n't skill enough to make my statements more delicate than I did. I stated those facts that I knew, but without satire.

Alderman Quincy—My first impulse on hearing of this astonishing fall in real estate was to vote against the purchase on any terms, for it seemed to me as if the inference could not be avoided that an attempt had been made to obtain an inflated and exorbitant price from the city, and in my view of the relations which we hold to the money of the taxpayers, I felt as a guardian might on finding that a plan had been made to get the better of his ward. It seemed as if it was our duty to discourage such attempts by refusing to deal on any terms with those by whom they had been made. But in view of the fact that gentlemen more conversant with the subject, and whom we all trust, are of the opinion that no such attempt should be inferred, and that if made it has certainly failed, and that we are now dealing in fact with other parties, I am willing to vote for the purchase because it seems to me that it cannot fail to be a good one for the city.

Alderman Power—I have made the remarks that I have in defence of this City Government, because they are needed. This article in this paper would convey the impression abroad that there was something wrong in the City Government. The gentleman opened his speech upon another subject of importance, a short time ago, with the remark that the honor and credit of the city of Boston should be guarded as sacredly as the virtue of woman. I agree with him, that it should be so guarded and preserved and protected from suspicion. That is the reason I make this defence of the members of the Government. I feel proud to say that I think that if there ever was a committee that stood above suspicion, it is the rest of this committee (beside myself) who have had this matter in charge. Now, I may say of this place favored by the gentleman, that it was offered to members of this Government within a year for $15,000. There is no question about that offer; I state it upon the authority of members of the Government to whom it was offered. But I don't see what that should detract from the merits of this place. It should stand on its own merits.

Alderman Stebbins—Mr. Chairman, Mayor Pierce, in his inaugural address to the City Council, referred to the proposition to establish a Home for the Poor separate from those of a penal or reformatory character, and gave it his hearty approval and said, "The present system is discreditable, and should not be tolerated beyond the time absolutely required to make different provisions." This portion of the Mayor's address was referred to the Joint Committee on Institutions, and the committee have given the subject great attention; visiting, I understand more than twenty different farms offered for sale to the city as suitable locations for a home. The committee have now made their final report, and the City Council are called upon to decide between two locations. One situated on the boundary line between Ward 17 and Dedham, the purchase of which is favored by the chairman of the committee, the other location is known as the Austin Farm, and the purchase of which is favored by the other seven members of the committee. I wish, Mr. Chairman, to state briefly why I shall vote in favor of the Austin farm. Yesterday, in company with several members of this Board, I visited both locations, and I must say that, after the statements made at the last meeting of the Board, I was agreeably disappointed in the advantages offered by the location favored by the chairman of the committee, both in regard to the railroad facilities and the nature of the soil; but the objections, to my mind, against this location are the remoteness from the centre of the city and the increased cost of erecting buildings, by reason of carting and transporting building materials so great a distance. Alderman Hulbert at the last meeting of the Board, suggested that the supplies for running the institution could be delivered at this place cheaper than at the Austin farm. I must disagree with the Alderman on that point. Take for instance coal, large quantities of which will be required; the Providence Railroad have no facilities in Boston for receiving coal direct from vessel, consequently it would be necessary to cart the same to the depot, and this expense together with the freight would be much larger than it would cost to deliver it at the Austin farm by them, and it would be the same with all other supplies. When the purchase of the Austin farm was first brought forward, I was opposed to it for two reasons. (1) The price, $135,000, I considered more than the property was worth. (2) The odor of jobbery which, whether right or wrong, seemed to hover around it. By the reduction of the price to $75,000 both objections are removed, and I have reason to believe that the city are now dealing with parties who represent the bottom price at which this estate has been bought and sold for. The Austin farm is not too remote. The Metropolitan and Highland horse cars run within a mile of its location, the Hartford & Erie Railroad have recently established a new depot within about half a mile, and this railroad are seeking a location from their Worcester branch, which now enters the city through Brookline, over the Albany road, by a new route to their main line, and which will cross or come near the Austin farm.

It will be necessary to keep one or more teams wherever the home is located, and I apprehend that one such team could transport from the city all the lighter supplies required at the institution. It seems to me that the interests of the city will be best served by the purchase of the Austin farm, and I shall so vote, and I trust that good substantial buildings may be speedily erected, which shall reflect credit upon the city and afford the comforts of a home to the deserving poor.

Alderman Clark—At my request this subject was laid over in order to give members time to go out there. I was one of those who went out there yesterday, and I found the place recommended by the Alderman from the Highland District much better than I had been led to think from the description given by the Alderman from Ward 12. It is a very good piece of land and has very good facilities for transportation. If that were the only consideration, it would be much better than the Austin Farm. There is no doubt that by spending ten or twelve thousand dollars it could be well adapted for the purposes proposed. But I fail to see that it would be so good an investment to purchase at $25,000 or $30,000 as it would be to purchase the Austin farm at $75,000. I think the latter will increase very much in value in the next two or three years, and I don't know why the city should not look well to its investments as well as an individual would. At the present time the facilities for the transportation of supplies are rather against the Austin farm, but I doubt very much whether that cannot be done by the institution itself by a team as well as it can over the Providence Railroad. There is no question, if any one will go and see both, that the Austin farm at $75,000 is much cheaper than the West-Roxbury farm at $25,000. The question as to whether fraud was attempted in trying to sell the Austin farm to the city at an exorbitant price—a charge which has been made—is not to be decided at present. I do not believe that any fraud has been attempted. But it has declined from $155,000 to $75,000, and there has been no such decline in real estate or merchandise within my recollection. The panic has caused no such a decline as that. This place was sold by Mr. Austin to Mr. Woodward for $90,000; Mr. Woodward sold it to Mr. Bradt for $155,000. Mr. Bradt has paid $5,000 and one or two years' interest. It has probably gone back into the hands of the original owner, Mr. Woodward. He comes here and makes this offer. He has made a good thing by the sale, and has reserved seven acres, which will be worth much more than he paid. We are not dealing with Mr. Bradt, or any of the parties who have made the attempt to force this property upon the city at an exorbitant price. At any rate, I do not intend to let that influence me in my vote upon this question. I believe that of all the places which have been seen, at the price for which we can buy it, the Austin Farm is the best investment. I still believe that if the place at Neponset could be bought for the same price, and the Austin Farm at $25,000, as at first proposed, I would vote for taking the Neponset lot. The means for getting to the Austin farm are certainly convenient, for the horse railroad goes within four-fifths of a mile. The country about it is very pleasant and delightful, and certainly there can be no objections to having a pleasant locality for a Home for the Poor even, if it is not going to cost too much to obtain such a site. There is plenty of land for such additional buildings as may be needed for a Home for Orphan Children or any other purpose that may be desired hereafter. The soil is good, and I for one do not believe that no labor can be obtained from the paupers that we are obliged to support. I don't know how it is with city institutions, but I know that in the country the able-bodied poor are obliged to work as well as those who are not paupers. I believe we should look to the quality of the soil somewhat, and I think the number of acres contained in the Austin farm is none too much. I believe the inmates in the institution can do a sufficient amount of labor to raise their own vegetables, and I think a great many other things can be raised there. Those are my reasons, Mr. Chairman, for voting for the Austin place. I did oppose it at $125,000, and I should oppose the purchase of it at $100,000; but I think $75,000 is a low price for it. I believe a real-estate man who could take it at that price and hold it for a few years, would make money upon it; but I do not believe a real-estate man could take the West Roxbury place and hold it and make anything on it. I believe the Austin farm, at the price named, is the best place for the purpose.

Alderman Power—It is certainly gratifying to me, if it is so, that all sorts of merchandise have escaped the general breakdown that I thought had spread through the land. If it is simply in the metal business that the panic has struck I am glad to hear it. But I can't agree with the gentleman opposite. I think the panic has affected all sorts of business. I did not bring this paper here for this purpose, but here is an advertisement of the house of Jordan, Marsh & Company, where goods sold formerly at $800 are marked down to $400, and from $500 down to $200. That is worse than real estate. Other things have gone quite down to half price. Look at the dry-goods business—the best Brussels carpetings for $1.50, when I paid $3.50 for some some time ago. So it seems it struck into the dry-goods business as well as real estate. The gentleman must remember that a few weeks since one of the best estates in Franklin street, for which many fine offers were made last year, was put up at auction, and they could n't get a bidder; so it seems to me that right here in the business centre of Boston real estate has been affected. There is no question about the manner in which real estate in the out-lying districts has been affected. I don't believe that the place I have mentioned, which was offered to us first, can be sold today for $50,000 cash. To my mind there is n't any question at all about the decline in such property.

The order was passed—yeas 11, nays 1—as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Power, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins—11.

Nays—Alderman Hulbert—1.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom was referred the schedules of assessments for sewers in Moreland, Sixth, Westminster, Alpice and Shawmut streets, reported that they are correct, and recommend the passage of orders for collection.

The orders were severally read once.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That there be paid to Amasa Bird, the sum of $505 51 for paints, carting, etc., and work on telegraph poles; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Alarms.

Read once.

SWETT-STREET HOSPITAL.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, to whom were referred the communication of the Board of Health and other papers relative to the Swett-street Hospital territory, submitted a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the land and hospital building located on Swett street, now in charge of the Board of Health, and subject to its orders and regulations, be and the same is hereby transferred to the custody of the Committee on Public Lands.

The order was passed.

Alderman Stebbins inquired when a report on the location of a new smallpox hospital might be expected.

Alderman Sayward replied that one suitable site had been reported by the committee which had been rejected by the Council. The committee did n't propose to report any more sites this year.

PETITION FOR RECOUNT OF VOTES.

A petition was received from seven citizens of Ward 19 (Brighton) representing that they had good reason to believe that there were inaccuracies in the returns for ward officers from that ward, and asking that a recount may be made.

Referred to a special committee, consisting of Aldermen Stebbins, Power and Gaffield.

On motion of Alderman Power, the Board adjourned.

ORDER OF NOTICE ISSUED.

On the petition of heirs of William Brigham, to locate and use steam engine of 200-horse power in rear of 1051 Washington street, an order of notice was passed for a hearing on Thursday, the 1st day of January, 1874, at one o'clock P. M.

HEARINGS.

The order of notice of intended removal of trees from St. James street came up to be considered and was temporarily laid aside at the request of Mr. W. R. Gray, who expected other parties to appear. Later in the session, on motion of Alderman Clark, it was specially assigned to next Monday at four o'clock P. M.

The order of notice for the removal of nine elm trees from Neponset avenue, was considered.

Mr. Roach appeared for the estate of Bartholomez Roach, which is covered by five or six of the trees. There was no great necessity for taking them down, he said; the street is sufficiently wide for travel and the trees are just on the edge of the sidewalk. It would be considerable injury to the estates to have the trees removed.

On motion of Alderman Power the petition was referred to the Committee on Paving.

The order of notice of proposed removal of a tree from P street, South Boston, was, on motion of Alderman Power, referred to the Committee on Paving.

BOSTON AND ALBANY DEPOT.

The next hearing was on the petition of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company for leave to take land for station purposes in certain limits.

John White appeared for several property owners interested. They did not object, but simply desired fair compensation for the land.

Edward S. Rand appeared for the estate of Josiah

Stickney. He did not come to object, but merely to protect the interests of the owner of the estate. The question of damages will come up afterwards. He did not appear to oppose or object.

George S. Hale appeared to represent the railroad corporation. This proceeding does not diminish the obligation of the corporation to pay for the land. Under the statutes, the company cannot go outside the space of five rods without permission of the Aldermen. When the Board give their permission to take within certain prescribed limits, they will then have to settle for the estates. No person's rights are interfered with by this proceeding.

Alderman Clark offered the following:

Whereas, The Boston & Albany Railroad Company hath presented to this Board a petition praying said Board to prescribe and define the limits within which said Boston & Albany Railroad Company may take, for depot and station purposes, lands and materials in the city of Boston in the county of Suffolk, situate and described as follows, to wit: beginning at the point of intersection of the southerly line of Kneeland street with the easterly line of Albany street, thence running easterly by the southerly line of Kneeland street, to the westerly line of Utica street; thence southerly by the westerly line of Utica street, as accepted by the city, and by said line extended southerly to a point six hundred feet distant southerly from said Kneeland street, thence southwesterly to the easterly line of Albany street at the face of the abutment of the Albany-street Bridge; thence northerly by the easterly line of Albany street to the place of beginning; a portion of said lands and materials being without the limits of the road of said Boston & Albany Railroad Company;

And whereas, due notice has been given to all the owners of all lands and materials situated, lying or being within the bounds and limits described in said petition and hereinbefore described, of said petition, and that said board would, on the fifteenth day of December, at four of the clock in the afternoon, consider said petition, and the application of said Boston & Albany Railroad Company, thereby made and hear all persons and corporations in any way interested therein;

And, whereas, said Board did accordingly at said time and place consider said petition and application and hear all persons and corporations desiring to be heard in regard to the same, and hath adjudged and doth adjudge that the said lands and materials are necessary for said Boston & Albany Railroad Company; now then, said Board doth hereby prescribe the limits within which the same may be taken, as follows:

Beginning at the point of intersection of the southerly line of Kneeland street, with the easterly line of Albany street; thence running easterly by the southerly line of Kneeland street to the westerly line of Utica street, thence southerly by the westerly line of Utica street, as accepted by the city and by said line extended southerly to a point six hundred feet distant southerly from said Kneeland street; thence southwesterly to the easterly line of Albany street, at the face of the north abutment of the Albany-street Bridge; thence northerly by the easterly line of Albany street to the place of beginning.

And said Board doth adjudge that said Boston & Albany Railroad Company may take, for depot and station purposes, any and all the lands and materials situated, lying or being within said limits.

The order was passed.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

The following was received:

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS FOR PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS,
BOSTON, Dec. 13, 1873.

To the Honorable the City Council of Boston: Gentlemen—In reply to the communication of the City Council requesting the Board of Directors for Public Institutions to report on or before the 15th inst., their opinion as to the propriety of changing the present rules of the institutions providing for moral and religious instruction, I have been requested to state that, at a meeting of the board held on the 10th inst., it was Voted, That the president be requested to inform the City Council that, in the opinion of the board, it is inexpedient to change the rule, inasmuch as the Board of Directors have now ample power to provide for such religious instruction as they may deem expedient.

Respectfully,

J. P. BRADLEE, President.

The communication was read and ordered sent down. Subsequently, on motion of Alderman Power, the vote to send down was reconsidered.

Alderman Power—Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Public Institutions, when they referred that matter to the Board of Directors, asked for certain information which that report does not give. As I stated when this question was up before, there have been various petitions presented to the Board of Directors of Public Institutions asking for a change in the rules, that a certain denomination, of which the greater number of people in those institutions are composed, might have the privilege of religious instruction according to their belief. It is well known that the directors have not granted the request, and then the petitioners had to look elsewhere for that privilege. The matter in that way has reached the Committee on Public Institutions. Now this committee are ready to act on this matter, but the majority, with some good reason, think that before acting they would like to have certain information that they cannot get except from the directors. The committee wish to act intelligently, and before acting they wish to know the reason the petition has not been granted. The directors say they deem a change inexpedient. Now the committee wish to know the reason why the directors deem it inexpedient to make the change. Perhaps when they have those reasons the committee may not wish to make the change. In that communication we ask their reasons for not granting this petition, but in this reply the directors don't throw any light on the subject. Now, sir, that this thing may be settled one way or the other, the committee would like to have the reason of the directors for deeming a change inexpedient—why a change asked for by eighty per cent. of the people in those institutions for the privilege of worshipping God according to the dictates of their own conscience, and in the faith in which they were born. Of the inmates of those institutions—I blush to acknowledge the truth—at least eighty per cent. belong to a certain denomination, and yet they cannot have the privilege of worshipping God according to the faith in which they have been brought up. Now, the people of that same faith in this community want to know why the great majority of the people in those institutions can't have the opportunity to worship God in their own way. The only way they can be reached is through their religion, and they are there because they have wandered away from their religious influences. Now, sir, this matter has been before the public for some time. All the denominational papers in this country have expressed an opinion upon it, and all the papers of Boston are unanimous on this subject. The committee want to know the reasons of the directors, and therefore, Mr. Chairman, I move that the communication be referred back to the directors with instructions to give us their reasons for deeming it inexpedient to make a change in the method of religious instruction at those institutions.

Alderman Sayward—Being the humble representative in the Board of Directors from this Board, I have a word to say. I would like to have the communication that was referred to them read.

The report of the Committee on Public Institutions, recommending the reference to the directors, was read by the Clerk.

Alderman Sayward—That is just what I supposed the order was. They have reported that no change was necessary, as they have it in their power now to elect any one to direct the religious exercises at the House of Correction, etc. The question of putting some other teacher into those institutions has never come before the directors.

Alderman Power—No member, Mr. Chairman, regrets to have a religious question come up here more than I do, and I regret very much having to bring this matter before this Board. The petitioners do not ask them to change the arrangements at the institutions; they do not wish them to hire any other clergyman; they only ask that a clergyman of their own belief may be allowed to go there once a week and hold services in any place the directors may see fit to give them. They don't wish to put the city of Boston to any expense at all and they only ask that the great majority of the people there may be allowed to have a religious teacher of their own faith. I move that the document be referred back to the directors and that they give us the reasons why they will not allow the change to be made. The committee are all ready to act on the matter, but they want to know the reasons of the directors, who simply say it is inexpedient to make the change. Perhaps if the committee knew the reasons of the directors, the matter would end there.

Alderman Sayward—It appears to me that the gentleman is mistaken. If he wishes to get at any particular question it must go in a different form from that request. This has nothing to do with any petition. The directors simply answered the question that you asked them in regard to changing the rules. Now if you have anything else to refer to them I shall not object. But now that you have got this matter back it would be proper to recommit it to the committee. If there is any question that my friend desires to get before the directors to be answered he can put in such a document. But it appears to me there is nothing to be gained by referring it back to the directors.

Alderman Hulbert—The Alderman from Ward 12 is correct in what he expected the Directors of Public Institutions to report. I remarked at the last meeting what we desired to know. [The Alderman read his remarks at the last meeting on the subject of referring the communication from the grand jury to the Board of Directors.] The object of the committee was to obtain just that information. The wording of the order of inquiry is not as full as I supposed it was, and perhaps the reply of the directors is all that that order could call for in one sense. Still it was expected that the directors would give their opinion to the City Council as to the request that was made by the grand jury, giving information as to what was the practice and what objections they have, if any, to a change. I think that opinion should be given, and I am in favor of recommitting that order with the request that the directors shall give to the City Council a statement of what the present provision is, and objections, if they have any, to making the change asked for. I think that is due to the City Council.

Alderman Sayward—Notwithstanding what the gentleman has said they intended to get, the order certainly asks only that the Board of Directors give their opinion as to the change of their rules. For the information of the gentleman, I will read the rule of the Directors of Public Institutions.

"The chaplain shall be elected by the Board, annually, in the months of April or May, and whenever a vacancy may occur. It shall be his duty to perform divine service on the Sabbath, and such other times as may be set apart by the Board for religious exercises, and shall visit the sick, instruct the inmates in their moral and religious duties and counsel and advise them prior to their discharge, and perform such other duty in his capacity as the Board or the master may require. He shall not be allowed to exchange or send any substitute without the consent of the Superintendent of the Board."

I presume the directors will be ready to answer all questions they are asked, but they don't propose to answer any that are not asked.

Alderman Hulbert—I think, if anything, the fault was in the form of the inquiry. I think it was intended to have the opinion of the directors in regard to the change and their objections to such change. It seems to me that something more full should be had from them.

Alderman Gaffield—It seems to me that if we are making an inquiry on any question of these gentlemen it should not be general. If the inquiry is general we must expect a general reply. If particular information is asked for, we should ask for it in a particular manner. Now this question is about something that has not been spoken out. The question is why can they not have a Catholic priest there. Why not ask it right out? Now it is stated that there are eighty per cent. of the people in those institutions who are Catholics. If we ask the question in regard to one denomination it seems to me we might, with the same propriety, single out others. Some may be Episcopalians, or Congregationalists, and they might not like the Catholic form of worship, and the Catholics might not like the Congregational or Episcopal form of worship. It seems to me this question ought to be brought before the directors in a tangible manner. They ought to be asked if all classes of persons can have ministers come there. As the Alderman remarked, I may blush to say there are some Unitarians there, and they might want a minister of their denomination and the directors might, in order to please all, have a Unitarian one day, a Catholic tomorrow, a Congregationalist the next day, and so on. Let the inquiry be made in a specific form, and that ought to get a specific answer.

Alderman Power moved to lay the subject on the table. Carried.

CONSTABLE'S BOND.

The bond of Sarell Gleason, constable, being duly certified, was approved by the Board.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The Superintendent of Sewers submitted schedules of assessments for the construction of sewers, as follows: Stoughton and Myrtle streets, total $2272 38; to individuals, $1704 29; Ericsson and High streets, total, $2648 33; to individuals, $1986 25; Clifton, Hudson, Albion and Cottage streets, total, 4029 23; to individuals, $3021 93; Neponset avenue, Walnut, Wood, Taylor, Franklin and Water streets, total, $12,320; to individuals, $7766 66; Regent, St. James, Akron and Fountain streets, total, $9020 50; to individuals, $6765 38. Severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

WIDENING OF PEARL STREET.

An order (City Doc. No. 133) was received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Pearl street, near Milk street, at an adjudged expense of $66,440, the following schedule giving the names of owners, etc.:

ESTATES.

The order was read once and laid over under the rule.

Later in the session Alderman Clark moved the order take its second reading, and said—

I would state that the subject has been before the Committee on Streets and they fully recommend the widening of the street. It is necessary to have as little delay as possible, inasmuch as the insurance company are desirous of commencing, at once, to lay their foundations. The Street Commissioners unanimously recommend the passage of the order.

The order was passed in concurrence with the Street Commissioners.

RESIGNATION.

A communication was received from Samuel C Cobb, rendering his resignation of the position of member of the Board of Directors for Public Institutions, he having been notified of his election as Mayor of the city for the ensuing municipal year—the resignation to take effect this day.

Referred to Committee on Public Institutions, on motion of Alderman Holbert, with directions to make a nomination to fill a vacancy.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following came up as unfinished business, and were severally passed:

Order to pay Edward A. White et al, trustees, $121,751 27, for Water-street damages.

Order to pay Asa P. Morse $6170, for Essex-street damages.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to grade Tudor street, from D to E street. $3500.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to grade Ceylon street, from Bird to Quincy street. $1200.

Order to pave Arch street, from Milk to Franklin street, with wood. $4000.

Order to pay Timothy O'Regan $800, for Paris-street grade damages.

Order to pay James T. Barrow $350, for Regent-street grade damages.

Order to pay Caroline H. Brooks $40, for Regent and Alpine street grade damages.

Orders to levy and collect assessments for construction of sewers in Gouch, Catawba, Copeland and Franklin streets.

Orders to abate certain assessments on estates of John Haggerty, Michael Lane and others, for sewers in Bolton street, Dorchester avenue, Summer street and Sloughton street.

Orders to establish grades for Tudor street, Eastist street and Magazine street.

Orders to levy and collect assessments for sewers in Moreland, Alpine and Westminster streets, in Shawmut avenue, and in Sixth street, from O to P street.

Order to pay Amasa Bird $505 50 for painting, work, etc., on telegraph poles.

The report and order for transfer from Reserved Fund of $25,000 to appropriation for Public Buildings was considered.

Alderman Sayward—I have a single word to say here. I see by the report of the Committee on Finance that the Committee on Public Buildings have had to take a severe chastisement for spending money not appropriated at the commencement of the year. I had the honor, sir, of making this request for an additional appropriation for the Committee on Public Buildings, and I stated in detail why it was asked for. I believe, sir, the reason for this additional $25,000 has been forced upon this committee by other committees of this Government. On every occasion I stated to this Board the necessity of being economical in the appropriation for Public Buildings, for at the rate we were going on we should have to call for more money. Now sir, this expenditure has been made greatly in consequence of the Committee on Fire Department, which have placed this extraordinary expense upon the Committee on Public Buildings. But it does seem to me that if a committee had gone beyond its appropriation, it was necessary to lecture that one and not the Committee on Public Buildings. As my friend stated here in regard to the debate on the Home for the Poor, there is a wrong impression given to the public by this report. In the first place, the Committee on Public Buildings have not gone beyond their appropriation. When requests have been made here, at committee have risen in their place and stated what would be the result. I don't rise to find fault with the Committee on Finance, as I think they should look after the financial affairs of the city very closely; but they should lecture those committees who have gone beyond the appropriation and not those who have not.

The order was passed—yeas 12, nays 0.
Order to pay Thomas Higgins $69,270 96, for Washington-street damages. Passed.

Alderman Clark—For the purpose of making this conveyance immediately, it was necessary for a gentleman to come on here from the city of New York, and he is exceedingly anxious to return tomorrow by the ten o'clock train. I understand that in order to have it signed by the Mayor it would be necessary to move a reconsideration, and for the purpose of a commodious the parties, I move to reconsider the vote whereby we passed the order just read, hoping it will not prevail.

The motion was lost.

SOUP FOR THE POOR.

The reference to Committee on Overseers of Poor of a message from the Mayor, transmitting a communication from the said overseers in relation to the relief of the poor during the coming winter; said reference being with instructions to consider the expediency of establishing places throughout the city for furnishing soup and other provisions to the poor (Printed City Document No. 130), came up with amendments authorizing the above committee to provide soup at the several police stations in this city.

The question was on concurrence with the Council in the amendments.

Alderman Quincy—I hope we shall non-concur. Charity at random is universally admitted to do more harm than good, and of all forms of charity at random I think none are more calculated to produce evil results than this. It creates, attracts to the city and collects the class of the idle and vicious, who become dependent on it, while the self-respecting and industrious poor, who seek to support themselves, are hardly in any appreciable degree benefited. Because certain plants in a garden need water we do not pay amissly into the air with a fire engine in the hopes that some will fall where it will do good. Even if it did, so much more falls where it does harm that the soil is flooded and the rank weeds of swamp and morass make their appearance. In an article in one of the December magazines this very matter is used to illustrate the evil resulting from mistaken charities though prompted by the higher Christian benevolence. One Brown is supposed to have founded by will a "Beef and Broth Kitchen" for gratuitous distribution of food. The result is that it attracts into the city a large class who might support themselves in the country where their labor is needed, by holding out the fallacious promise that work or no work there shall be food for all. That such a mischievous charitable institution should be aided by an exemption from taxation necessarily borne more heavily on that account by others seems to a certain publican as rather odd, and the reader is inclined to agree with him. Better that many undeserving should be supported than that any deserving should suffer in the argument. If to support the undeserving simply did no harm and the deserving could be reached in no other way I might assent to this position. To compare the illustration of the garden—if the water which did not fall on the useful plants could run off without swamping the beds and encouraging the crowd weeds, and the garden was locked up so that one could not take a watering pot and put a little where it was wanted, then the fire-engine experiment might be a success, otherwise it is evident that its employment would be highly damaging to the general interests of the garden. In support of these views we have a communication from the Board of Overseers whom we have elected to give their special report on a steady to this matter, unequivocally condemning this practice of soup distribution as "unwise and injudicious, tending to aggravate and increase the evil it designs to alleviate." This communication we refer to the Committee on Overseers of the Poor with instructions to consider the expediency of the very measure which the overseers so strongly condemn; in other words we ask the committee to look into the matter and tell us whether they agree with the overseers or would advise us to override their objections. Now the position taken in the branch overheard by the amendment seems to be this: Why send it to a committee when it clearly enough appears that the overseers are wrong in the matter; that they don't know their business, but are guilty of red tape and inefficiency, which makes the adoption of this measure which they condemn our imperative duty as Christians. Therefore, instead of asking their opinion on the expediency of doing it according to law, let us simply instruct them to do it against law, or against the City Solicitor, who don't know the law. I can't vote for any such amendment. In regard to these vague charges and insinuations of red tape and dereliction of duty on the part of the Overseers, I understand that these gentlemen court nothing so much as investigation, under which, it is believed, they will vanish like smoke. I would refer those gentlemen who do not know (as I did not until recently) how much the board endeavor to do, how much they succeed in doing and what they are prevented from doing by the law, to an article written by one of their number in last Sunday's Courier. It seems that they go to the full extent if not beyond their legal powers in assisting meritorious cases irrespective of settlement or claim against the city for support. The City Solicitor in 1863 instructed them that they had no right to expend a cent for persons without such settlement or claim. But to relieve actual suffering they have disregarded the strictness of this instruction. I quote the article alluded to as follows:

"The overseers are consequently forced to give temporary aid in meritorious cases where there is no settlement, but feel constrained by the opinion of the City Solicitor to limit it to the immediate necessity, turning over the case by mutual understanding to the Provident Association and other organized private charities. If these societies had ample funds to meet all such cases of want this would seem the wisest and best disposition to be made of them. If we undertook the support, full or partial, of all who chose to flock here from other States and countries it would be difficult to discriminate, and would operate to the prejudice of our own poor. We should have an efficient and worthless population, liable at times, when out of work and needy, to become lawless and dangerous to public order.

As there appears, therefore, no other alternative for the non-settled poor who will not go to Tewksbury than the charity of the Provident, Howard Benevolent, St. Vincent de Paul and similar associations, it behooves the public to keep their treasuries generously replenished this winter should it prove an unusually severe one for the poor. If not perfect, the Chardon-street system is an improvement upon any previous mode of relief."

The reasons for and nature of that system, Mr. Chairman, were all set forth in City Document No. 45 for the year 1871, being the overseers' report for that year, from which I will venture a few citations: "Indiscriminate almsgiving is now admitted to be the most prolific source of vagrancy and the petty forms of vice. Large cities draw together the idle, the thriftless, the vicious. This class live, if they can, on the industrious and thrifty; they would be fed and warmed and clothed on means they do not earn, and as long as money or other assistance can be had for the mere asking, beggars will abound and multiply. To meet this want of our citizens the Charity Bureau was organized; municipal relief and private charity supplement and act in unison with each other; and although it may be some years before our people will fully understand the system, the experience of every month satisfies us of the wisdom of the experiment. In this connection it is a source of gratification to be able to state that the plan which has been inaugurated in Boston of bringing the Overseers of the Poor and the private charitable organizations together in one building, has proved not only satisfactory to ourselves, but has received the warm encomiums of those interested in similar works in other large cities, not only in this country but in Europe." "Several public meetings were held in London during the month of March"; "at one of which, sir, Michael Hicks Beach, M. P., was chairman; he called particular attention to what had been done in Boston by the erection of a building for the centralization of charitable agencies, and commended our system and plan to the favor of the British public." "In one of the circulars issued by the London organization, one of the main causes of pauperism is stated to be 'the demoralization of the poor by indiscriminate charity.' The conclusion to which my examination of the subject leads me, Mr. Chairman, is that if the coming season threatens to be severe, it is our duty as men to put our hands in our own pockets and contribute according to our means to these organized and combined private charities of our city. The proposed disposition of the taxpayers' money for the contemplated indiscriminate distribution of soup I regard with the overseers as mischievous and with the City Solicitor as illegal. Those holding different views will conscientiously support the amendment. I cannot for a moment suppose, however, that any member of this branch, because he votes for this employment of money out of the public pocket, will arro-gate unto himself all the Christian charity there is extant, or denounce for inhumanity or pelt with Bible quotations those who are so bold as to differ from him.

Alderman Hulbert—I have looked at this thing very thoroughly, and I can't see where we have any right to appropriate a dollar. And as I don't propose to do that which is manifestly against the advice of the City Solicitor, I would move you that this whole subject be referred to the Overseers of the Poor, for them to act as they may think best.

The motion was carried.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions were referred, in concurrence.

Report of Fire Commissioners for November. Placed on file.

Order from School Committee contemplating the abandonment of the Cottage-place Schoolhouse, and the erection of a new house near Elmwood street. Referred to Committee on Public Instruction.

Passed, in concurrence.

Request for additional primary-school accommodations for Heath-street scholars. Referred to Committee on Public Instruction.

Report of Joint Committee on Streets in favor of passage of resolve and order to widen Magazine street at an estimated cost of $24,015 94. (City Doc. No. 124.) Passed, in concurrence.

Report of Joint Committee on Streets in favor of passage of resolve and order to extend Quincy place to Pearl place at an estimated cost of $12,784. (City Doc. No. 49.) Passed, in concurrence.

Report of Joint Committee on Streets in favor of the passage of resolve and order to extend Eustis street to Magazine street at an estimated cost of $11,640 20. (City Doc. No. 125.) Passed, in concurrence.

Order for Committee on Ordinances to report what changes are needed in ordinance on petroleum, etc. Passed, in concurrence.

Requests from the School Committee for the enlargement of the Latin and English High School lot, and for such modification of plans for said school-houses as will provide for a suitable hall for meetings of School Committee. Referred to Committee on Public Instruction.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gibson, from the Joint Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, to whom were referred the petitions of A. T. Stearns, for leave to erect a wooden building on Fulton street, Ward 16, and William Pope & Sons to erect a lumber shed on Albany street, submitted reports recommending the passage of orders for granting the same. The orders were passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the same committee reported leave to withdraw on petition of W. T. Brigham, for leave to construct a cellar below grade at 1043-45 Washington street. Accepted.

Alderman Gibson from the same committee, who were requested to consider if any measures should be taken for the better protection against fire of buildings where combustible materials are stored, made a report recommending that the subject be referred to the Board of Fire Commissioners. Report accepted and reference ordered.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Committee on Public Lands, to whom was recommitted the report and order relative to cancelling the bonds given by Ivory Bean and John S. Dunlap, reported that, having again considered the same, they would state that frequent interviews have been held with the parties, and the committee are convinced that it is for the best interest of the city to adopt the order of June 16 in a new draft, and recommend its passage:

Ordered, That upon payment of one thousand dollars to the Superintendent of Public Lands, together with all taxes due at the present time, the Treasurer be and he hereby is authorized to cancel the bonds numbering from two thousand four hundred and thirty to two thousand four hundred and thirty-seven, both inclusive, and which were given by Ivory Bean and John S. Dunlap, May 1, 1871, for land on Dedham street, between Harrison avenue and Albany street, as represented upon a plan recorded in "Book of Plans," numbered two, page two hundred and three, of "City Lands Sold," in the office of the Superintendent of Public Lands, and that the said Superintendent be directed to take possession of the aforesaid lots of land in behalf of and for the use of the city of Boston.

The order was passed.

On motion of Aldermen Gibson—

Ordered, That the bill of J. A. & W. Bird & Co. for $90 40 for paint, etc., furnished the Fire Alarm Department, being in excess of the amount appropriated for that purpose, be paid, and the said sum be charged to the appropriation for fire alarms.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Gihson—

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings be authorized to employ such additional clerical assistance in the office of that department as they may deem necessary, at an expense not to exceed $450; to be charged to the appropriation for Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the maximum number of lieutenants in the Police Department be fixed, until otherwise ordered, at thirty.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the Legislature for the passage of an act to change the mode of preparing the voting lists and of registering voters in this city, so that said duties may be transferred from the Board of Aldermen to competent registrars, who shall perform the same as nearly as practicable within the limits of the several wards of this city.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages as follows: Trustees Permanent Peace Fund, $9450, extension of Quincy place and Pearl place; W. Elliot Woodward, $1437 35, widening and extension of Magazine street; Amasa Whiting, $2780, widening Hawley street. Severally passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported leave to withdraw on petition of Henry N. Sawyer et al. to be paid for grade damages on Thornley street, and inexpedient to make the proposed change of name of Eastern avenue to "South Ferry avenue." Severally passed.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported orders to pay for grade damages as follows: heirs of F. J. Chickey, $50, 35 Warrenton street; Arthur Pickering and trustee, $400, 130 Broad street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported an order to pave the sidewalks with brick on Tremont street, between Parker and Whitney streets, and report a schedule of the expense to the Board. Passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the City Surveyor be and he is hereby directed, on and after the passage of this order to permit no person to project beyond the line of any public street in this city, the plinth or base of the front of any building, or any portion of any building which at its lowest part is less than eight feet above the sidewalk; and in case such projections are made after due notice by him to the contrary, to report the same to the Board of Aldermen for its action.

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be and he is hereby directed to notify all parties taking out permits to build, of the above order.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom were referred the schedules of sidewalk assessments for Pleasant street, Commercial street (Ward 16), Norfolk street, L street, Columbus avenue, Stoughton street, Chandler street, Woodhine street, reported orders for the assessment collection of the proportional part thereof.

The orders were severally passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the application of Boynton Bros., to erect a stable. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of James C. Connelly, to give an exhibition of athletic exercises at Institute Hall; Alert Engine Company, to give a series of assemblies at Oakland Hall; W. R. Mitchell, for auctioneer's license; D. H. Holbrook, for transfer of wagon license; Charles M. Warren, for wagon stand at 338 Dorchester street; Alfred Morrison, to keep a billiard saloon at the corner of Dix place and Washington street; Alexander McNutter, Kendall & Dearhorn, Taylor & Burgess, for victuallers', and Mary A. Crawford, for innholder's license; William Sherburn, to give an exhibition of Japanese paintings. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the application of Curley & Lennon to use furnace at No. 4 Province court. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported leave to withdraw on petition of John P. Clapp, for abatement of sewer assessments in Ward 16. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the $17 84 assessed upon Richard Justice for sewer in Bolton street be and the same is hereby abated.

Read once.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That there be paid to Caleb A. Conant $85 51, upon his giving to the city a deed satisfactory

Kingsbury street; the amount to be charged to the appropriation for Sewers.

Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported no action necessary on petition of Samuel McIntyre for delay in the assessment of sewer assessments. Accepted.

DUTIES OF THE FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the report "inexpedient to legislate," from the Committee on Ordinances, on the subject of the control of the Engineers of the Fire Department by the Fire Commissioners at fires, was taken from the table, and the report was accepted.

FREE PASSES OVER THE FERRIES.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield, the report and order to furnish passes over the East Boston ferries to the Chief and Deputy-Chief of Police and to the members of the Police Department in East Boston was taken from the table.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert, the report and order were indefinitely postponed.

IMMORAL EXHIBITIONS.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the report of Committee on Licenses that it is inexpedient to insert any clause or condition in theatrical licenses on the subject of immoral exhibitions was taken from the table.

Alderman Hulbert—I move that that subject be indefinitely postponed, the action of the Board of Aldermen having made it unnecessary.

Alderman Sayward—It seems to me that this is a little discourteous. This report was laid upon the table, and the order was passed. It appears to me that the report should be accepted.

The motion to indefinitely postpone prevailed.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD IN BEACON STREET.

On motion of Alderman Power the order for a hearing of all parties interested in proposed location of the tracks of the Metropolitan Railroad on Beacon street, from Gloucester street to Brighton avenue, was taken from the table.

Alderman Power—As the railroad company have secured another location, I suppose they don't wish for this hearing. I move that that matter be indefinitely postponed.

Carried.

THE SOUP QUESTION AGAIN.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the order for appointment of a joint committee to provide, under direction of the Chief of Police, a free distribution of soup, the expense to be charged to the appropriation for incidentals, was taken from the table.

Alderman Clark—I move as a substitute to that order the following:

Ordered, That the Overseers of the Poor be requested to provide supplies of soup and provisions for the temporary relief of all applicants in this city who may require such form of assistance during the present winter, and that the Police Department be directed to furnish to said overseers any aid in the premises which they may require; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Overseers of Poor.

Alderman Clark—I offer this, Mr. Chairman, as a substitute for the original order, because if anything is to be done in the distribution of soup the present year, it is high time we were about it. There can be no legal objections to that, and I don't believe there can be any moral objections to it. It will be placed before the Overseers of the Poor, and they can consult the Police Department about it. The police have all the apparatus for distributing the soup, and if the Overseers of the Poor will look into this matter they will see that a great deal of soup can be well distributed by the police. I offer this order because I believe it is wholly unobjectionable from a legal standpoint.

Alderman Hulbert—A portion of this order has already, in substance, been passed this evening. I would suggest to the Alderman whether he had better not modify his order, or make it conform to the one already passed.

Alderman Clark—I understand that the order passed this evening amounts to just about this—it will be referred to the Committee on Overseers of the Poor, and they will unanimously report no action necessary. I believe a majority of the Board believe that some action is necessary, and that some steps should be taken to furnish soup to those who have not obtained a settlement in the city of Boston. I have no doubt that a majority of the Overseers of the Poor believe that the distribution of soup or provisions, except by themselves or the various charitable institutions, is wholly unnecessary. Now, a good many people think to the contrary, and among them some one or two—certainly one, at least, of that board—think that a greater distribution will be necessary this season. I have no objections to modifying the order to conform to the one already passed, provided some immediate action shall be required. I should have moved a reconsideration of the other order had not this one been taken from the table. I believe diate relief of the great many people who are in want and suffering. If any action is to be taken at all, the present year, it is time we were about it. I believe this order will accomplish the ends desired, and obviate any legal objections that may arise. I have no doubt—at least I hope—it will meet with concurrent action in the other branch.

Alderman Gaffield—It seems to me that this action is premature and improper. I know it is not the popular side to take, but I think that when we choose people to do certain work—men of character, such as compose the Board of Overseers of the Poor—it strikes me we ought to have confidence in their judgment. This matter has already been referred to the proper authority—the only one which has power to spend the money. You have their opinion of this matter, that it is inexpedient, and the City Solicitor has decided that it is illegal. It strikes me that with this double influence, we should have no doubt about our action. Suppose there should be a public meeting in Boston which would pass a vote directing the Committee on Streets to lay out a great many streets, and that same meeting should pass a vote of censure because the committee did not do it. This vote would surely be one of censure on the Overseers of the Poor. Those two words, "soup" and "provisions," would simply throw out an inducement to the poor of other cities to come here. I know something about the poor, and have been a visitor of the poor for many years. I feel sympathy for the poor, and I respect their independence when they have it. I want to do everything to prevent an increase of paupers in the city. Now a gentleman said the Committee on Paving are doing everything they can to keep men at work, and I think it would be the best to spend thousands of dollars in that way. Then we get a quid pro quo. This same question has been called up in New York. A meeting of the various charitable societies was held and the first proposition made was like this one—a generous proposition, sir, moved by generous impulses. A motion was made to provide soup for the poor, when Mr. Domas B. Eaton immediately arose and said it would be a bounty to the poor, and cause the poor from all parts of the country to rush to New York. I know a great many poor people come to Boston, because we have a great many charitable societies, and we provide well for the poor. I have known of a photograph of the institutions at Deer Island being distributed through England to show how well we provide for the poor in Boston. Therefore I think it would be well to let this thing go to the twelve gentlemen who constitute the Board of Overseers of the Poor, and hear what they have got to say before we take action. If they say they want twelve thousand dollars for the purpose I will vote to give it to them.

Alderman Quincy—Allusion was made to the popularity of this matter, Mr. Chairman. I presume it is as indifferent to the other members of the Board as it is to me; and I hope we shall all act according to our convictions. I have already shown my reasons for opposing this plan; and having referred the subject to the overseers, I will not now vote to instruct them. If they have expressed their honest convictions—as they certainly have—it does seem to me like a vote of censure upon this Board of Overseers of the Poor to pass this order.

Alderman Clark—I do not intend, in offering this order, to have it appear that it is a vote of censure upon the Overseers of the Poor. No member of this Board has a greater respect for them than I have myself. I understand that the Overseers of the Poor only give relief to those who have a settlement here. If the Charity Bureau is open to all persons who are in want, and aid is rendered to all worthy persons who apply there, then I don't know but I should decline to vote for any appropriation for further expenditures. But I have my information from one of the Overseers of the Poor, one probably who spends as much of his time among the pauper population of the city as any other member of the board; and he informs me that some part of the arrangement would be most excellent. He has suggested how it can be done in a letter to a member of the Common Council, to which no one could make any objection. Now this same gentleman told me that in visiting the poor of the city he did find parties, whole families, who were sorely in want of the necessaries of life—in regard to fuel, clothing and food. He is a member of the Board of Overseers, and he cited several instances where complaints had been made that persons were not properly attended to by the Overseers of the Poor. Upon looking around him he found there was no occasion for the complaint. Now if we have got several thousand dollars to spare let us spend it in this way. We can spend, in this way, the money left over from the Fourth of July. I don't mean to pass a vote of censure upon the Overseers of the Poor, but I do say there are a great many cases of honest poverty which escape the attention of that board. I know that the soup distributed last winter did a great deal of good, and I believe it was a most excellent thing. I know that a great many families were relieved by it; heads of families out of employment were aided. There is not a single day that gentlemen in business don't have applications from men thrown out of employment, who find it almost impossible to obtain work enough to support their families. This idea of increasing the objects of charity by allowing ourselves to render a little aid to the suffering poor during the season is, in my opinion, absurd. I do not believe poor people leave their homes and come here just because they know they can get a quart of soup. I hope, sir, that we shall pass this order or take such action as will allow the Overseers of the Poor to make an extra expenditure for the furnishing of soup for the poor during the present season.

Alderman Gaffield—The Alderman has referred to a letter from one gentleman. That gentleman is one of a committee of twelve. He has not had the experience of other gentlemen of that board. That gentleman's views are different from those of others who have had a larger experience in this matter. Now, I want to call the attention to the fact that we have charitable societies and this gentleman is himself president of one; he knows that the city is distracted, and he knows that every person can be sent to any one of them. There is the Howard Benevolent Society, and a great many others, and there is no difficulty in getting a case investigated. It is this helping the poor without investigation that increases poverty in our city. There are rooms in the house of this society in order that the institutions may all work together. I feel sure that if the matter is left as it ought to be that it will be done as it ought to be done. I feel for the poor, and I have not worked twenty-five years for the poor without knowing something about them. When the Overseers of the Poor ask for this sum, I will vote for it; I would vote to give them ten thousand rather than three or four thousand to spend in this work.

Alderman Gibson—This matter seems to be surrounded with difficulty at every point. If I understand the matter right it is this: We have no right to provide soup for the poor, and the Overseers of the Poor have no right to assist any but citizens of Boston. Now, we have a great many who are not citizens of Boston—a great many widows and children and infirm people. I should be very glad to vote for this appropriation if I can be shown that it is legal. But here I go to the City Solicitor and he says it is not legal. Now, I don't imagine we could elect a Board of Overseers of the Poor who would go through all the byways and alleys, and to every poor man's and woman's house, and make a thorough investigation of their affairs. I know one gentleman who does make thorough investigations among the poor, and if gentlemen were to hear some of the stories he tells they would shed tears. Now, I don't believe you can get a party for nothing who will make such investigations, and I don't believe there is another man or a woman who will go round among the dens of this city as he does. We have families in this city who live in dens as filthy as any hogs.

Alderman Stebbins—I would ask the Alderman if the Board of Health have been notified of such cases.

Alderman Gibson—I don't know from my own personal observation—only what I have heard. Now if we could limit this distribution, so that no man between the ages of twenty and fifty, unless infirm, would receive it,—if there is an able-bodied man coming in I would like to cut him off. I would like to vote three, five or ten thousand dollars to these suffering families, but I don't exactly see how we can separate it. That is what puzzles me. We have no legal right to do it. Neither can the Overseers of the Poor do so, except the applicants have a settlement. If we had authority to establish soup houses in every ward in this city—if we could have a party to take charge of it, and send tickets only to the deserving, I should be willing to stretch a little in my vote—but I can't do it now. This thing is abused very much. Very much of the soup is exchanged for liquor. Miserable creatures will take the quart of soup and exchange it for liquor. I have good reason to believe that this is true. I agree that the deserving poor ought to be helped. How much time do the Overseers of the Poor spend in going about the city? I'd like to know that. If you will show me how I can vote for this thing legally, I will do it.

Alderman Stebbins—I have heard some curious stories in relation to this distribution of soup. I have heard that even boarding-house keepers in Ward 1 were supplied with soup during the winter, and when the soup was discontinued in the spring they gave up keeping boarding house. This exchanging of soup for liquor is a new revelation from Ward 1.

Alderman Gibson—I did not allude to Ward 1.

Alderman Stebbins—I don't intend to censure the Overseers of the Poor by my vote, but what I intend to do is in a legal way.

Alderman Sayward—This thing is getting a little mixed—this "soup and other provisions." If this thing is illegal, I don't understand that it will make it legal to give it to the Overseers of the Poor, and then for them to give it to the police.

Alderman Stebbins—This order provides for an expenditure from the appropriation for Department for Overseers of the Poor.

Alderman Sayward—Then I ask whether this money can be spent except upon those who have a settlement here?

Alderman Stebbins—I should hope that the police will exercise great care and discrimination—giving the soup and investigating the case afterwards.

Alderman Sayward—Then let us be men and give the poor people soup, and let the police investigate afterwards. We should vote manfully, and vote either for soup or no soup. We can take the chances, and if there is an injunction we can put our hands in our pockets. I think we had better run the risk.

Alderman Quincy—I don't think we ought to dodge the question, but come up immediately. I honestly believe that a vote for this measure is a vote of censure. The Overseers of the Poor report that it is inexpedient. Now if I believed that the Overseers of the Poor were all wrong, I would vote to instruct them. I don't see how gentlemen who vote that way can help seeing it in the light of a censure.

Alderman Clark—I don't think it is a vote of censure. We simply disagree with them. The Overseers of the Poor are not unanimous in their opinion. Because we don't think just as the Overseers of the Poor do, is no reason why the passage of this order should be construed into a vote of censure. I understand that if we instruct the parties who are specially designated to have charge of the poor of the city to spend a certain amount of money, that makes it legal. I don't profess to understand much about law, but that is common sense. I don't propose to dodge this question in any shape. I would vote for this resolution in any form, either for the soup to be distributed by the police or by the Overseers of the Poor. I would have no objections to striking out the word provisions. I hardly know whether the gentleman from Ward 1 is arguing for or against soup; certainly if he believes the soup is exchanged for rum, that is a reason for him to vote against it. I don't believe that the soup obtained at the station houses is exchanged for rum. All applicants are obliged to give their name, age and place of residence, and those applicants are looked after. It may be that in some cases persons get soup who are not entitled to it, but in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred this soup distributed has done good, so we are informed by the captains and patrolmen. I believe that no amount of money expended during the year does more good than this. I don't care whether it is popular or unpopular, but I believe in it, and shall vote for it. I don't propose to vote to censure the Overseers of the Poor or the officers of the charitable institutions. But if they had any amount of money they could find opportunity to do good with it. Now, there are parties who devote their whole time in such institutions at the North End, who go about into the houses, and cellars, and garrets of these poor people, where probably very few of these Overseers of the Poor ever go. But these men and women go there every day, and one of those good women said to me the other day that it made her heart bleed when she heard of this Board of Aldermen refusing to give this small pittance to the poor. She devotes her life and her money for this cause. These are the parties, Mr. Chairman, who know whether the appropriation is judicious or harmful.

Alderman Sayward—I disclaim any intent to censure the Overseers of the Poor. They do something that is according to law; this is to make them do something contrary to law. Now, I believe the best place to have this thing done is just where it has been done for several years past—at the station houses. We can put it upon the Overseers of the Poor if we choose. In my ward I don't believe there are many who will need this soup, but if any one in my ward wanted to get some soup and had to come into Boston to the Charity Bureau, he would starve before he got there.

Alderman Emery—I think I shall vote to have this soup dispensed. The reasons given why this Board should not so vote are various. They remind me of the reasons given by a man who was asked to take something to drink. He said he would, but there were three reasons why he could not. First, he promised his father on his dying bed that he would never take anything; second, he belonged to a total abstinence society; and third, he had just taken something. This soup is something like that. A gentleman comes up here and says, "I would willingly vote for this soup, but the wrong parties will get it, and for that reason I can't vote for it." Another gentleman says, "I would willingly vote for it, but it would do damage to the community, and therefore I can't vote for it." Another one says, and this is the third reason; that it is illegal and it can't be done. Now I propose to vote for it and take my chances.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me we don't talk as if this thing were thoroughly understood. If I understand it the Overseers of the Poor have the right to spend money only for those who have lived here long enough. Now we ask them to do something that we won't do ourselves. They have got no money to do it with. We ask them to feed a population that it is illegal, by the laws of this Commonwealth, to feed. Now they can deal out a ton of coal or send supplies to those in need. But suppose they find a party who has a large family and is deserving, and yet he has not gained a residence here. They can't aid him. So it seems to me that the best plan is to have it done through the police stations. But if we vote to do that they say there would be an injunction, though I don't think that would be the case. It would be best not to direct the Overseers of the Poor to do an illegal thing; we had better do it ourselves and face it, and then if any citizens wish to get out an injunction they can.

Alderman Stebbins—I am informed that the rule of the Auditor's Department is that after the City Solicitor has decided that any order is illegal no bills for expenditures under that order will be approved. So we may pass vote after vote and no money can be had. For this reason I think the better way is to vote for the order of the gentleman from Ward 6.

Alderman Gibson—If the bus should come from the Overseers of the Poor could they be approved?

Alderman Stebbins—The overseers sometimes draw their money in large amounts, and the bills do not have to be approved the same as in other departments.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me that this thing is like a man-of-war without guns.

Alderman Hulbert—It seems to me that by passing a vote which will contain the latter part of the order of Alderman Clark we will cover all the ground that we can cover. I don't think we can vote to spend money illegally, and I shall not do it. This thing has assumed publicity. The late Mayor got information on the subject, and I understand he would have vetoed any order of that kind. I think this order we have passed this evening for the Board of Overseers of the Poor to take such action as they may deem best is all right, and then if the Alderman from Ward 6 shall offer another order requiring the police to render assistance when called upon, then we will cover all the ground we can legally. I don't see how we can act differently. I took the pains, today, to go over the list of names of the gentlemen who are the Overseers of the Poor of this city. They are a very likely set of men. I know some of them, and others I don't know. They are intelligent men, and understand their business. Now, the Overseers of the Poor have to their credit some $34,000 to be expended. Those gentlemen have reported to us, as late as November 27, that the practice of distributing soup at the police stations tends to aggravate poverty. Another gentleman, who spends his time in benevolent labors, says, "Don't give your alms indiscriminately. There are an immense amount of false and fictitious applications being made." It is the opinion of all who have to do charitable work that this way of doing it is not the correct one. And when the press has spoken out so strongly on this subject, I think we are fully warranted when we make this request to the Overseers of the Poor, and by doing so we shall have relieved ourselves of it. It is a very small matter, three thousand dollars for soup; it seems like idle talk about nothing.

Alderman Clark—It does not appear to me to be a small matter by any means. It may be a small matter to us, individually, but it may be a very large matter to hundreds and thousands of people in the city. This order simply requests the Overseers of the Poor to do this thing—it don't direct them. The gentlemen on that board will not do it if they find there are legal objections to doing it. They are not going to do an illegal thing simply because we request them to do it.

Alderman Emery—I hope, by all means, that it will be done legally, and I agree entirely with the remarks of the gentleman from the Highlands. I have no doubt the overseers will do all they can possibly do, and I believe we have the information from the same gentleman that they do act somewhat beyond their legal obligations in dispensing the public charities, and I think they are not to be blamed for it. I should certainly wish to avoid everything illegal and hope it will have certain restrictions that will take away all illegality. If it is necessary to have it amended, to have it come within the legal requirements, I hope it will be done. But, at all events, I think we should pass it in some way.

Alderman Sayward—If we all believe in the good judgment of the Overseers of the Poor, why do we want to put in any additional order? Why do we want to request them to do anything? It is just as well as to pass an additional order. I don't believe the overseers can have any better information than they can get at the police stations. Now, it appears to me that the police have better means of information than the Overseers of the Poor can have, but I think it would certainly be better to leave it where it is than to pass another order.

Alderman Quincy—I agree that it is just where it ought to be. Of course the Overseers of the Poor would not take any action that is illegal or inexpedient, and it seems to me that although we can't directly appropriate money for the purpose, yet we can legally direct them to spend their own money. [The Alderman read a portion of the extract previously quoted.] That is the way in which they are authorized to spend their money, and we have no right to direct the committee to make expenditures in any other way.

Alderman Stebbins—The Overseers of the Poor, in addition to the money which they receive from the Council, are also the agents for the trust funds left to the city for the aid of the poor. Those funds amount to over $300,000 and some of them are not tied up in any such way. They are the agents of the city and it is entirely legal to dispense those funds as they judge best. There are the Pembroke and Boylston and various other funds—one is for the pious alone, one for furnishing wood and coal, but a large amount is limited to the discretion of the Overseers of the Poor. The other order that is referred to has nothing directory about it. The order that was directory was from the other branch. I think we had better dispose of this matter by passing this order.

Alderman Gaffield—The amount is small and the number of poor is large. I meant no reflection when I said it is popular, and I don't reflect upon any gentleman of this Board, for I don't think that they advocate this matter because it is popular, but I will say that it is a fact that a gentleman in the other branch made a speech on the subject just before election, and he wanted copies of the speech to distribute among his constituents to let them see what he had to say. You may say what you please; you may say "Oh pshaw." or not, just as you please; and you may appeal to the gentleman from Ward 12, but it is a fact. Now, sir, I have no doubt that these gentlemen do visit among the poor to see that their paid visitors do their duty. I don't think the gentlemen of this Board can have visited the poor much, if they had they would not have said what they have. I do not think that is true that there is a great amount of poverty in Boston this winter. It is my experience that the harder the winter the warmer are the hearts of the people and the greater the charities. In times of panic men who want money feel more for others. There are in this city a hundred and fifty churches, each of which has a sewing circle or charitable organization; there are various benevolent societies, and last of all come the Overseers of the Poor with the funds which they can use for this temporary relief we are speaking of, and they can render that aid as they think best. I should be sorry to have it go forth to the world that we allow our poor to suffer. You can go to the right source—there are twenty or thirty charitable societies, and a hundred and fifty churches, each of which is a charitable society of itself. Now, we propose to have five hundred more, for every one of these police officers will become a visitor of the poor and dispenser of charity. I believe every one of these twelve Overseers of the Poor is competent to judge what is best for the poor.

Alderman Quincy—In order to test the sense of the Board on this question I move an indefinite postponement of the whole subject, and on that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Alderman Power—As the papers and political tickets have been flying about during the past week, and various intimations have been made that I had reached the highest pinnacle of fame that was possible for me, gentlemen wont accuse me of trying to seek any more popularity by espousing the side of the poor people. I don't wish, however, to vote, Mr. Chairman, for any order that will have anything like an appearance of censure upon the Overseers of the Poor, because I believe them to be high-minded gentlemen who have endeavored to do their duty as far as they can. But I don't believe that they have the opportunity to know the misery and want that exists in this city, that the policemen do. I believe that this soup, distributed under this system from the police stations, with proper restrictions, will do an immense sight of good; I don't see how it can help it. I don't believe in the indiscriminate distribution of the soup, but I do believe it can be dispensed so that it will be a substantial benefit to thousands of poor persons. A great many people must and do suffer before their wants can be properly known to the Overseers of the Poor, while at every police station each officer certainly knows the true condition of all within his precinct. Therefore, if this soup can be furnished and dispensed under proper restrictions, I mean to vote for it. It has been furnished year after year by this City Government. Now it is said that it is illegal, but I can't see how it can be any less legal to furnish soup this year than it is to furnish music on the Common. When that came up here I said the money would be wanted to furnish soup for the poor this winter. It seems to me that this soup is more needed than was the music on the Common. If the order has the appearance of dictation or reflection, or censure on the Overseers of the Poor, I don't want to vote for it, because I believe those gentlemen do all that they can under the laws by which they are governed.

Alderman Bigelow moved to amend by inserting, after the word "requested," the words "at their discretion."

Alderman Clark accepted the amendment.

Alderman Hulbert—I don't think it is quite in shape yet.

[Alderman Gibson in the chair.]

Alderman Cutter—It seems to me that this has got to be boys' play. If we have a board who are competent to oversee the poor, why not let them do it? If you have not, then abandon them and put somebody there who is competent. It does not seem to me that this board ought to take up a work that is left to the Overseers of the Poor. Now, why tamper with them? I trust this order will be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Cutter in the chair:

Alderman Clark—This has got nothing to do with their duties. It has always been done by the Police Department, but it has been decided by the City Solicitor that this soup cannot be legally distributed by the city as formerly. We propose to put it in a shape that will make it legal.

Alderman Gaffield—I think I understand that it goes to the Overseers of the Poor.

Alderman Clark—I think we all understand that the whole matter goes back to them.

Alderman Quincy—This subject is now before the Overseers of the Poor to act as they deem best. The expression used by Alderman Gibson, that this is like a man-of-war without guns, meets the idea exactly.

Alderman Clark—I accepted the amendment "at their discretion"; if the times do not demand it the overseers certainly will not do it. There has been suffering this winter. I read the other day of a woman actually dying from starvation. Her husband had been thrown out of employment; he went out to find some work, and before he returned she died. I suppose that is a case where a man had not a settlement; I suppose he had not paid taxes for ten years. There are a great many families who don't have as much food to sustain life as they ought to have.

Alderman Gibson called for the question.

The question was first taken on Alderman Quincy's motion to indefinitely postpone the whole subject:

Yeas—Aldermen Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy and Sayward—6.

Nays—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Emery, Power, Stebbins—6.

There being a tie, the motion to indefinitely postpone was lost.

The question was next taken on the substitute order of Alderman Clark:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Emery, Power, Stebbins, 6.

Nays—Aldermen Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy, Sayward, 6.

There being a tie the order was declared defeated.

Alderman Quincy moved that the original order be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Stebbins—As that order has been decided illegal, I shall certainly vote to indefinitely postpone it.

The motion was carried.

THE PARK QUESTION.

Alderman Emery moved to take up the orders relating to a public park. Lost.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council, DECEMBER 18, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Various petitions were referred in concurrence.

The following papers received concurrent action:

Reference to Committee on Public Institutions, with instructions to fill vacancy, of a communication from Samuel C. Cobh, resigning as a Director of said institutions.

Report referring to Board of Fire Commissioners the order requesting the Committee on Survey, etc., of Buildings to consider and report what measures should be taken for the preservation of buildings composed of combustible materials in densely populated parts of the city. Accepted.

Report (leave to withdraw) on petition of W. T. Brigham, for leave to construct a building below grade, in rear of 1043-45 Washington street. Accepted.

Report and order for a permit to William Pope & Son to erect a lumber shed on Alhany street.

Passed.

Report and order authorizing a permit to A. T. Stearns to erect a wooden building on Fulton street, Ward 16.

Passed.

Report and order (new draft) authorizing treasurer to cancel two bonds given by Ivory Bean and John S. Dunlap, of May 1, 1871, for certain land on Dedham street; and directing the Superintendent of Public Lands to take possession of said land.

Passed.

Report and order that the hospital lands and building on Swett street, now in charge of Board of Health, be transferred to custody of Committee on Public Lands.

Passed.

The following were read once:

Order authorizing the employment of additional clerical assistance in the office of the Survey and Inspection of Building, at not exceeding $450.

Order to pay bill of J. A. & W. Bird & Co. of $90 40, for paint furnished the Fire-Alarm Department.

Order to pay Amasa Bird $505 50, for paints, painting, carting, etc., for said department.

Resolve and order from Street Commissioners for widening Pearl near Milk street, at an adjudged expense of $66,440. (City Document, No. 133).

Report and order for a transfer from Reserved Fund of $35,000 to appropriation for Public Buildings.

Order requesting Mayor to petition Legislature to change the mode of preparing voting lists, from the Board of Aldermen to competent registrars.

On the question of giving the order a second reading, Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said—

This appears to be an important matter, Mr. President. The order is one which every member of this Council and citizens generally are interested in. I would like some member present to give an explanation of what it is intended to do.

The President—Is the Council ready for the question?

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I move the order lie on the table.

Carried.

DUTIES OF THE FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

Report of the Committee on Ordinances, inexpedient to amend ordinance in relation to Fire Department, so that the Fire Commissioners shall not interfere with Engineers while engaged in extinguishing fires, came from the Aldermen, accepted.

The question was on concurrence.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—Mr. President, it will be remembered that this order was introduced by myself, and referred to the Committee on Ordinances, of which, on the part of this branch, I have the honor to be the chairman. It came up once before the committee when I was present, and after some little discussion, at the suggestion of a member from this branch, who desired to take time to investigate it, thinking it a matter of considerable gravity, and he should not like to pass upon it until after some reflection—although I was ready to deal with it then, I thought that any member should have such time to investigate as he thought fit—it was postponed. It came up at the next meeting and in my absence the report here recommended—inexpedient—was adopted, in the absence of the member who had introduced it and was expected to give such reasons for its adoption as might to him seem weighty and just. It seemed to me that that was a very irregular course of proceeding, and I am happy to say that so far as some of the members of this branch are concerned it was against their wishes. I see it was called attention to in the other branch that the chairman on the part of this branch was not present. That is true, but it is but fair to say that the calling of committee meetings at noon had been protested against by some of the members of the Committee on Ordinances, who are so unfortunate as to be compelled to earn their living by their daily labors; and to call it when members of the legal profession were compelled to be absent was protested against too, and the opinion was expressed that it should be called after four o'clock when the courts are through. Now the chairman, who has nothing to do, called the meeting when people who have something to do are apt to be engaged in their daily labors. A cursory examination of the lucubrations of the chairman—it is not the report of the committee—will satisfy any one that this report ought not to be adopted. It ought to be carefully considered by somebody and it ought to be adopted by nobody. It will be remembered that when this ordinance was on its final passage—although I dislike the establishment of commissions and disliked to see the first inroad of them into the Government—although I did not undertake to examine into the details of the bill, and although I knew any motion to amend by me would be supposed to be factious opposition, rather than an attempt to amend the measure—I called attention to this defect. But after the ordinance had passed it became my duty and the duty of every member of this branch, to see if there were any amendments that ought to be made in order to make the ordinance work harmoniously. It ought to make the different officers agree with each other so far as their duties are concerned. Now then, the first thing that would strike one on looking at this ordinance—any one, I mean, who had been paying attention to the reorganization of the Fire Department—any one who knew that there was a provision in the law of the Commonwealth that the engineers should have charge at fires—any one who knew that by the statute law over which no ordinance can ride, that the engineer is the only one who can extinguish fires and has the authority to call in the aid of citizens in extinguishing fires; and when we know that at the last Legislature an attempt was made to get rid of the so-called town-meeting system, and put it into the hands of the engineers alone—any one who knows of that law would be surprised to see this attempt to intrust it to a board of commissioners, in direct conflict with the provisions of the statutes, with the powers of the Board of Engineers, created by the statutes, and which this ordinance can't obliterate, but recognizes. Any one familiar with the powers of this organization of the engineers, must have looked with a great deal of surprise upon this ordinance stating that the board of commissioners should have authority, and should be intrusted with the extinguishment of fires. This very authority simply says the commission shall have some of the powers belonging to the City Council. The first section says "the City Council may establish a Fire Department," and subsequently there is a provision that this thing may be done by any board the city may select. Now this city has selected a board, and they may have something to do with prescribing their duties, but it don't put that board in the place of the engineers, any more than it places the city in the place of the Board of Engineers. They have nothing to do with the Board of Engineers, except, perhaps, to prescribe rules. But when they undertake to deal with fires then they are doing what the statute expressly forbids. Now, Mr. President, for the purpose of showing the importance and gravity of this matter, it has been claimed, and the action of the Legislature was based upon it, that the great trouble in regard to this fire in November was that at the time there was no head to the department, and complaints were made that different people were meddling, and it was finally determined that everything of that sort should be put at rest, and if buildings were to be destroyed and a citizen was to lose his property, it should be done by the proper authority, and he should be compensated for it according to law. This committee having passed that ordinance, and perhaps the chairman, being a little proud of his ordinance, caring more for that than for the real good of the city—instead of looking to the good of the city—he by this very provision robs the ordinance of all of that concentration of power, when the immediate difficulty of a fire arises. It scatters and divides it between the commissioners and the engineers, so that the commissioners may meddle and undertake to interfere with the engineers in the discharge of their duties. Knowing that it was not within our power to grant this authority, that there could not be anything more disastrous to the management of fires than the passing of an ordinance like this,—with the mere matter of whether it is wise or not, or expedient, I do not propose now to deal. But I do desire to call the attention of the Council to this report, and I will undertake to explain my views of it so far as any provisions here are concerned, that do not meet with my approval. Now let us see. They have got this provision, that "the duty of extinguishing fire, and protecting life in case of fire, shall within the city of Boston be intrusted to the board of commissioners." Now, standing alone, that might be construed by anybody except a lawyer to allow the commissioners to interfere with the engineers in extinguishing fires, and so, many members of this board argued and thought, and if it was their understanding, it may be the understanding of the board of commissioners, and we all know that boards are more likely to exaggerate their powers than to diminish them. But let us see how the chairman is compelled, in order to make it sound possible, to rush into the strangest inconsistencies. The committee reported it inexpedient to repeal this ordinance.

"The committee cannot assume that the board can possibly regard the command or direction of the department at fires as any part of their general or official duties under the ordinance."

Now then, Mr. President, it will be observed that the excuse—that was the only possible excuse, and the only question I had with regard to it—taking the laws together you find that they have not got the authority; then when you read the ordinance you find it gives them the authority. Well, of course it should not. Well, here is the committee reporting that they cannot possibly regard the extinguishment of fires as any part of their general official duties under this ordinance.

Now, then, if that cannot possibly be the case, then, of course, the attempt to interfere would be useless. If it cannot be considered that the duty of protecting life and property within the city of Boston shall, when a fire is raging, be a portion of their duties, then we can see no use of repealing it. But if it can be so construed, then there would be an advantage in repealing it, because it would be giving authority to the board to exercise power which, by the statute law of the land they cannot exercise. Then you have the Board of Engineers exercising statute powers, and you have the Board of Commissioners believing that they have, and according to the chairman of the Ordinance Committee, the same power. But it is very strange and ridiculous to see the conclusion of this report. The next provision says, "But we cannot deprive them of the authority of discharging men while engaged at fires." There is another provision that they shall have power to discharge at any time for cause, so that the extinguishment could not have had and was not intended to interfere with that power. But before the report gets through, there are still greater inconsistencies. They say it has been urged that the statute power of command at fires is given to the engineers and other officers of the Boston department, and may be legally extended to other officers, as these commissioners. Such an understanding of the statute is impossible and it cannot be construed as giving that power.

But he goes on further, "If, as the committee contend"—if this Committee on Ordinances conclude—"the City Council may designate any officers of the department to execute these powers, then the right to interfere in the last resort and under such circumstances as may induce the commissioners to accept the responsibility, relying on the public for justification, the committee regard as wholesome and beneficial." You have got this committee making this report, that it is utterly impossible for these commissioners to regard the direction of the department at fires as any part of the general or official duties, and you have got on the other side of the page, the report declaring that the City Government may designate the officers, and they have the right to do it, then those commissioners ought to interfere and have the right. So, while the ordinance says they can exercise that authority, this committee conclude they have not got it and ought to exercise it. I take it, that anybody glancing at such a report, would conclude that any person who wrote it ought to be put under guardianship. I suppose he wrote that mess of stuff, looked at it, said that it sounded right, and that it ought to go. Such a thing as inconsistency never occurred to him, or certainly he would never have put himself into such a trap as that. Now, I have no sort of feeling about it except to have the City Government pass the right sort of an ordinance. I wanted it to be the action of sane men, of tolerably intelligent men, who can see a contradiction when there is one written, as there is on this page—the greatest possible contradiction. But we ought to be taken under guardianship if we are to pass that sort of thing. Now, I had prepared an ordinance, and the only trouble with it is the lateness of the season, and I have some reluctance to undertake it, because I know this fire matter has been before us so much that we have become weary of it, and especially, so far as my own indorsement would go, if I were going to pass upon it, and I only propose this amendment to prevent confusion in the department—my own judgment would be that the commissioners ought not to have the power that this ordinance undertakes to give them, but they would be justified in assuming it after this, because you have got here that which, if you accept, tells them in direct terms to undertake to discharge a duty that the previous part of the report acknowledges distinctly and states that under the law of the Commonwealth they have no authority to discharge. I have written an ordinance since I came into the room—and it reads as follows. I will present it. So far as I am concerned, certainly I ought to be sufficiently on record, whatever becomes of it, but I would not care so much about the record if I had not been arraigned in the other branch, except that in the mere discharge of my duty I must regret that I was not at the last meeting of the committee, that I might have continued to urge it as I had the first day. The ordinance I have prepared reads as follows:

Be it ordained, etc.

Section 1. The following language at the beginning of section 4, of an ordinance passed in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-three, entitled "An Ordinance to establish a Fire Department," namely, "the duty of extinguishing fires and protecting life and property in case of fire shall, within the city of Boston, be intrusted to said board of commissioners, shall not be construed to authorize said commissioners to direct, while the fire is raging, the engineers as to the discharge of their duties while extinguishing fires, pulling down or demolishing buildings or suppressing tumults and disorders at such fires."

That is, that they shall not interfere with the engineers while they are doing those duties at fires, which by the statutes are given them, and that is using the language of the statute giving the Board of Engineers the authority to extinguish fires. I move that ordinance as a substitute.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—Mr. President, it cannot be supposed, after the stand which I have taken with regard to the adoption of the ordinance providing for Fire Commissioners, that I shall undertake to do anything that shall weaken their hands or that shall take from them the powers which were intended to be given to them, under the ordinance. But, sir, when I read this report and when I consider the circumstances under which it is made, and when I hear the able and learned argument which has been made by the gentleman, the chairman of this committee, I am convinced that it is too important a subject to be considered at the present time or at any time to be lightly passed upon. I think the statements made by the gentleman—although I disagreed with him, and he with me on the subject of a Fire Commission should have weight. I think he has explained it, and given sufficient reasons why nothing whatever should be done at present. Therefore, under these circumstances, and, as he has stated, it being late in the year, I move that the whole subject be passed over and referred to the next City Council.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I don't desire to oppose that motion. All I care for is that the subject shall receive the careful consideration which its importance demands. I should feel that we were very derelict in our duty to pass this report. But if the subject is kept open, that it may receive sufficient examination, that will satisfy me.

The motion to refer to the next City Council was carried.

THE SOUP QUESTION.

The vote of the Common Council for the committee or Overseers of the Poor to establish soup houses at police stations, came down non-concurred in; and instead thereof a vote authorizing the Overseers of the Poor to take such action as they deem necessary.

The President—Will the Council adhere or recede?

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I move the subject lie on the table. Carried.

Mr. Flynn obtained unanimous consent to offer the following:

Ordered, That the Overseers of the Poor be directed to furnish temporary relief to the poor during the present winter by distributing soup at the police stations, or elsewhere; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Overseers of the Poor.

The question was on giving the order a second reading.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12—When this matter was before the Council at the last meeting, I had a few words to say, and I now desire to correct the words of the official report of the proceeding. The point under discussion was the appropriation of money for establishing places for furnishing soup for the poor, and the reference of the whole subject to the Committee on the Overseers of the Poor. I am made to say, as I find in the printed journal, which I will read, "In view of the fact that the city has already made suitable provisions for the poor, I shall not vote for the order." What I did say is this, "In view of the fact that the city has not for several years made suitable provisions for the poor, or for any one class of the poor, I shall vote against the reference and I shall vote for the appropriation." I will add, Mr. President, that I believe the reason of the error was that I did not speak distinctly.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I offered that order in order to obviate all legal difficulties in regard to the distribution of soup for the poor. In that order it is ordered that the amount shall be charged to the appropriation for the Overseers of the Poor.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I wish my voice was in such a condition that I could do myself justice tonight. I am in favor of the proposition made by the gentleman from Ward 7, and I think I can give satisfactory reasons. Mr. President, it is very well known that City Document No. 130, to which I now call attention, is an expression of the views of the Board of Overseers of the Poor upon this subject. It is enough for me to say that at present. Now, sir, I shall touch in what little I may have to say tonight, somewhat upon subjects of rather a delicate nature. But, sir, I am responsible here for what I say, and I propose to hold myself to that responsibility. I am aware that the course which I have taken since I brought this subject to the City Council has been criticised by many of the people of the city of Boston, who feel that their rights have been to some extent invaded. I mean, Mr. President, the parties in power. In what I shall have to say I shall not undertake to tread upon the rights of any one citizen or individual; nor shall I undertake to criticise the private character or private actions of any one individual. I shall speak here, as I believe it my right and duty to do, of the management of one of the boards of our city. In order to be brief, I have made some statements upon paper, and upon them placed a few figures. I desire to say, Mr. President, in the first place, that, fortunately for the poor of our city, the election is over. Fortunately for them those who loll in the laps of luxury and fare sumptuously every day, are not now before the people for reelection. Fortunately for those who deserve the watchful care and kind protection of the city fathers, I see in the immediate future, through the action of an incoming City Council, a measure of relief so much needed, but so persistently and unkindly refused them by one branch of the City Council, not this branch. It was a sad and mournful day for the worthy and unfortunate poor of Boston when by the determined opposition of the Board of Aldermen to affording the measure of relief which had almost unanimously passed this branch of the City Council, they laid it on the table. It is true that there were some true and kind-hearted ones there, but they had not the courage to stand up manfully for the right. But it was a bright and benignant morning, that following the day of the last city election—but a few days since—which broke upon the visions of thousands of anxious men and women and showed them that those who had opposed this measure of humanity had been left at home by the voters, and in their places had been chosen men of heart and good judgment, those who would be ready to respond cheerfully to the exigencies of the times, to the necessities of the people.

Mr. President, on the day following the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen I took up the Transcript and found words which I think it is my right to read to this branch on this very question. And I now read from the official report which is circulated and given to us as the doings of the coordinate branch—the remarks of Alderman Gaffield, to whom I pay my respects. And now I read and quote him literally:

"I meant no reflections when I said it is popular, and I don't reflect upon any gentlemen of this Board, for I don't think that they advocate this matter because it is popular; but I will say that it is a fact that a gentleman in the other branch made a speech on the subject just before election and he wanted copies of the speech to distribute among his constituents to let them see what he had to say. You may say what you please; you may say 'Oh, pshaw!' or not, just as you please, and you may appeal to the gentleman from Ward 12, but it is a fact."

Now, Mr. President, in my answer to that perhaps I may be allowed to say and to read what I have to say here, because I have prepared it this afternoon, so that there should be no mistake about it. I desire to say and suggest what an awful crime "this fact!" What an awful exposure of high crimes and misdemeanors! Why, sir, the traitorism of Arnold, the apostacy of Andy Johnson, the hutchery of Julius Cæsar, as he sat upon his throne, by Brutus and his followers, was not to be considered for a moment in comparison. Just think of it, Mr. President, in your reading of ancient and modern history, in the records of those great and good men who lived and died in their day and generation, and who have left the impress of their great genius upon the minds of those who come after them and for the benefit of generations yet unborn did you ever find its counterpart? Did you ever conceive of such an ignoble act? And yet, sir, to all these high crimes and misdemeanors I plead guilty. Yes, sir, I did obtain from the honorable Printing Committee and send a few extra copies of my feeble remarks to some of the people who had sent me here as their representative. And I wasn't ashamed to do it, and I have reason to believe, sir, that they felt that their representative had not disgraced his constituency, for they not only elected him again to the Council, but they had only thirty days before elected him as their representative to the Legislature. Now let us see how stands the gentleman who so bravely attempts his sallies of wit, and addresses himself chiefly to his ink-stand, sandbox and blotter, which are his chief audience, and who never made a speech which was considered worthy of being circulated, and if circulated among his constituents would have been sure death to him. Fortunately for them, however, after having worked for weeks to obtain a reelection—this is history—for the second term, he neither received that, nor even the nomination, and died a natural death, so to speak, and has gone "where the woodbine twineth." Figures don't lie. So much, sir, for the honorable Alderman. Now, sir, we will begin to deal in some facts that will, perhaps, be more pertinent to the question under consideration. On Tuesday last (16th inst.) it occurred to me that I would visit the Temporary Home on Chardon street. In company with another member of the Council and a member of the press, I called there about noon and was agreeably received by the parties managing there, and obtained the following memoranda:

October, 1872.	Total number of meals dealt out,	876.
"	"	1269.
Increase October 1873, over October 1872,		45 per cent.
November, 1872.	Total number of meals dealt out,	1650.
"	"	2603.
Increase November 1873, over Nov. 1872,		58 per cent.

I inquired of the parties managing the details of the institution as to what their custom was for furnishing aid to the poor, and they informed me that they gave meals to all who applied, without regard to their residence, domicile or nativity, but made no record of anything but the name of each person, and had done so for at least five years last past; excepting that since the 11th instant, they had recorded the residence against each name, and that this was done by the express orders of the Board of Overseers. While I was there, came in three men, to each of whom I put the question of his residence. One said "Hyde Park," another, "Portland," another, "Milford"; then immediately following, five more, all apparently from outside the city, and yet all were provided for, and it is a proper provision, and we see on page 10, City Document No. 130, as follows:

"The knowledge of a large fund (monstrously large, as we propose $3500), to be devoted to charitable objects, will, we fear, exert a demoralizing influence upon the community; it will cause a large influx of the improvident of other places to make this city their residence the coming winter and encourage the same class among ourselves to be less frugal with their means and less reliant upon their own resources, looking, as they naturally would, to the public for support."

Now on page eight, same document, what say this same board?

"Boston has a deservedly high reputation outside of its own limits, for its benevolent spirit."

"Consistency, thou art a jewel." I want the members of the Council to read these extracts and see where this high-minded board has lauded in its suggestions to the city.

Mr. President, If anything will appear ridiculous outside or inside of our own limits it is such statements and such resolutions as emanate from City Document No. 130. And the "deservedly" "high reputation of our city for" "benevolence," will be the laughing stock of the civilized world. Why, sir, I should think we had financial matters under consideration as large as are now under the control of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. I should think, sir, by the sentiment of that document, that we were legislating for the United States, and had under consideration the financial aspect of the whole country instead of the paltry sum of $3500 to be appropriated by the City Council for sustaining the lives of our worthy and industrious poor. After leaving the Temporary Home I went to the rooms of the Board of Overseers, and on inquiry there I learned from the parties in attendance that their applications for aid were very largely in advance of last year, that in fact for the present month up to the day I called (the 16th inst.) the amount supplied was more than the whole of last December, being an increase of more than one hundred per cent., and for November a large increase over November, 1872, and about fifty persons had already that day applied and it was then but noon. And yet, sir, what says the resolve of this board, as published in the same document (No. 130)? "Resolved, That as at present advised, there is no unusual exigency existing" requiring aid, etc.

Now, Mr. President, under these circumstances I cannot but conceive it to be my duty and the duty of the Common Council, acting as we do from each ward of the city of Boston, to explode any such proposition as that which comes to us from the Board of Aldermen, and consequently I am in favor of the instructions which the gentleman from Ward 7 proposes to give to that honorable Board of Overseers. Upon pages 10 and 11 the substance of the whole of this document is contained:

"Entertaining these views the board are of the opinion that at this time no official action of the City Government is required to meet the present and future wants."

Now, Mr. President, I think I have called attention to points enough in this matter to show that it is absolutely useless for us to send any discretionary power to the Board of Overseers. That is the point I desire to show—it is an absolutely fatal blow to the whole scheme. No fair-minded man, no unprejudiced member of this Council can look upon it in another light, in my judgment. I desire, Mr. President—I have no pride in the matter whatever, and no pride of opinion—I only desire to maintain the position which I have taken, and that position is that the worthy poor of Boston are in need of aid. Mr. President, there has n't an hour passing over my head during the last week, when some application has n't been made to me by some man, woman or child for aid. I can state instances which have occurred since the last meeting, of pure neglect. But I will say that it is our duty to meet the exigency of the times. When it is argued in other places that the law is against us, I will beg of the people of Boston to put that matter into some competent court, that shall pass upon that question. The Alderman stated that I sent among my constituents some remarks which I had the honor to make in the Council, I thank him for stating it. I am ready to stand by that speech, and by the one which I made at the last meeting. I want nothing but what is fair and what the conscience of every man now within the sound of my voice will dictate to him is right. And it is no political humbug which I bring before this Council. It is n't the first proposition I have argued, nor the first proposition I have carried here, as I believe in heaven it will be carried by this City Government, who I believe will have the honor of doing it, and that we shall not have to leave it to the next Government. I believe there is no man here but will say it is right. I will vote for it, I will stand by it, come what may, Mr. President. I never desired to come back to this Council: I only came here possibly first by accident, but probably because my constituents thought me competent to represent them here. If I have shown that I have been a faithful representative I hope they will remember that they urged me to come here a second time I had the honor two weeks ago to state here that I did n't expect to be here next year. But I have been elected and I shall, if I have the voice to be heard, raise it in favor of such measures as this. I have not confined myself simply to the district which I represent, and as it is now the dying moments of the Council, I may be excused for saying, I find that my remarks have met in this body a hearty response, and I have found, sir, that when I entered into the hearty consideration of any subject, it has not only met the approval of this body, but of the people. Now, sir, I speak somewhat feelingly about this matter, because it has been told about City Hall that a member from Ward 5 has been making political movements to be reelected. I have never undertaken, Mr. President, to do anything more than any honorable gentleman is bound to do. I have always stood by the people whom I represent. But when I find my course criticised in another branch when I have fairly and honestly laid matters before this body, I think I have the right to raise my voice here in opposition to any such calumny, although I know it is not right in parliamentary law to criticise the acts of the other branch, except when I am attacked. Now I beg pardon for taking so much time. There is only one more subject. I think my course in this Council has been one of honor and integrity. That is my opinion, whether it be the opinion of others or not. I have never invaded the rights of any other member, but when I have been attacked, I have always been prompt to defend myself.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—Mr. President, I think we have shown by our vote in this Council that we are tolerably unanimous on this subject, and I don't know that anything has been done to change our minds. I certainly have n't changed my mind. I think we have been long enough on this subject, but I hardly know whether there has been a discussion on the soup question or not. There seems to have been the arraignment of the chairman of one committee, who, it is said, ought to be put under guardianship. It seems to me that, if the gentleman was so feeble-minded, the committee ought to have stood by him. We are told, also, that a member of the other branch was n't sent back because he had n't strength enough to get back, and that he had "gone where the woodbine twineth." Well, sir, there are a great many of us who have been left at home, but I should be sorry to think it had been because we voted against soup or the Overseers of the Poor. I trust we shall come to a vote on this subject. I don't propose to go "where the woodbine twineth." I always supposed that "where the woodbine twineth" is where there is the most spout. I think we have had spouting enough, and I hope we shall come to a vote.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I made no reference to my worthy friend.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I move the previous question.

The main question was ordered, the order was passed to a second reading, and the rules were suspended and the order was passed.

HOME FOR THE POOR.

The report and orders authorizing the purchase of the Austin Farm, containing fifty acres, at not exceeding $75,000, as a site for a Home for the Poor, and for a loan of said sum to be applied therefor, came down passed.

The Council concurred in the passage of the orders, under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—yeas 48; nays 0.

A motion to reconsider, by Mr. Jones of Ward 14, was lost.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following were passed, in concurrence:

Report and ordinance in relation to the Fire-Alarm Telegraph.

Report and order authorizing a loan of $175,000, to be added to appropriation for Water Works—yeas 47, nays 0.

GIFT TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The President presented a communication from the Trustees of the Public Library, transmitting the following letter and the acceptance of the donation therein named:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL, }
BOSTON, Nov. 29, 1873. }

William W. Greenough, Esq., President Trustees of the Public Library: Dear Sir—Desiring to indicate my interest in the continued progress of our library, I ask leave to contribute to its funds the sum of five thousand dollars, herewith inclosed in my check. It is my wish that this sum should be used by the trustees for the purchase of books of a permanent value for the Bates Hall collection, but it is immaterial to me whether it be funded and the interest of the same be annually expended, or whether it be applied either now or at some future time to the acquisition of some special collection either of works relating to the history of this continent or of science or of art. In this way I hope to leave both principal and interest entirely at the disposal of the trustees, to be employed in such manner as may in their judgment most advance the value of our great library. Will you please convey to your board the assurance of my respect, and with the sincerest regard for you personally, believe me, dear sir,

Yours, truly, etc.,
HENRY L. PIERCE.

Referred to the Committee on Public Library.

PETITION.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 presented the petition of Major Dexter H. Follett, First Battalion Light Artillery, for $250, for necessary furnishing of armory at 37 Tremont street.

Referred to Committee on Armories.

CLAIMS.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11, from the Committee on Claims, to whom were referred the petitions of Charles L. Keys, for compensation for personal injuries from defect in highway; and Dean Dudley, for compensation for buildings blown up during the great fire, submitted reports recommending that the petitioners have leave to withdraw. Severally accepted.

BROADWAY BRIDGE.

Mr. Flynn, from the Joint Committee on Streets, to whom were referred the orders for the repairing of the Broadway Bridge, at an expense not exceeding $114,000, submitted a report recommending the passage of the orders.

Orders passed—yeas 46, nays 0.

ARMORIES.

Mr. Page of Ward 9, from the Committee on Armories, to whom was referred the petition of Company D, First Battalion of Cavalry, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $1200 in repairing the armory occupied by Company D, First Battalion of Cavalry, M. V. M., in Bacon's Building, 1839 Washington street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

The order was read once.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, from the Committee on Legislative Matters, submitted a report, representing that the committee having received notice of a petition to the Legislature by inhabitants of Brookline for a change in the boundary line between Boston, Brookline and Brighton, and having given a hearing to said petitioners, would respectfully report that in the opinion of the committee the change desired by said petitioners is also desirable in the interest of the city, as bringing within its limits the main conduits and lines of connection between the reservoir of the Boston Water Works and for other reasons. The committee recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be instructed to favor in behalf of the city any petition by the inhabitants of Brookline for such a change of boundary as shall bring within the city limits the main conduits and lines of connection between the reservoirs of the Boston Water Works.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The Committee on Legislative Matters, who have already made majority and minority reports on the subject of the annexation of a part of Brookline, now report this as a substitute for the previous orders. I will leave my senior on the committee to state the case.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—The only suggestion I want to make to my colleague on the committee was to call his attention to the fact that it was n't a substitute to the other one which has been proposed, but rather additional to that which has already been proposed. The annexation of Brighton to the City of Boston left the town of Brookline between the two parts of the city. Thereupon the committee reported—with one exception, my friend making a minority report—in favor of taking just what was essential to give connection between the two parts of the city of Boston and Brighton and no more—as small a territory as would accomplish that connection. Now, then, certain inhabitants of Brookline have been before the committee asking that more territory be annexed, and thereupon the committee decided that there would be no objection to that, and therefore reported that they would be in favor of annexing whatever territory should be desired. The other one asked as a right to take what territory was needed to give us a connection with Brighton, and I don't understand that it is a substitute any further.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—Then I should ask of the Council leave to withdraw my minority report, for this would include just what I recommended. This petition to be presented to the next Legislature by inhabitants of Brookline represents a very large majority of the owners of land lying between Longwood avenue and Beacon street. Gentlemen representing those parties were before the committee, and it was desired that when the Committee on Legislative Matters went up to the State House they should not oppose this petition. All they ask is that it be not opposed by the city. I suppose that no citizens of Boston would wish to oppose the annexation of any part of Brookline.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—If I understand this matter rightly, this is a substitute for the order offered previously. We merely ask the Committee on Legislative Affairs not to oppose any annexation that citizens of Brookline may ask for. I believe now we ask for nothing more.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I think the wording of the order should be that the committee should favor that which these inhabitants of Brookline ask for.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I am pretty thick headed, perhaps, but I don't understand this matter. If this is in favor of annexing any particular part of that town I am opposed to it. I don't want the city of Boston to pledge itself to support the petition of any one set of inhabitants of Brookline. I don't think we have considered that matter enough to determine any particular line. I am willing to go before the Legislature and say there, as one of the people of Boston, that I would like to see Brookline annexed, but that we should indicate any line I don't believe to be correct. But the matter has n't been discussed. Not a single gentleman here can state what that line should be. I am in favor of annexation, but I am opposed to this division of a town. I don't believe it is good policy for the city of Boston to pledge itself in favor of any particular line.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—In the first place, Mr. President, it seemed to be advisable that the city should n't be divided into two parts by an entirely separate municipality. Therefore, the committee reported Brighton street with the territory. East of it should be annexed to the city of Boston. That would give us a narrow strip connecting Brighton with Boston. That was asked as a matter of necessity. My colleague asked that the committee should indicate what would be a proper connection. The answer of the committee was that the town of Brookline voted against annexation, and the only thing the city of Boston could ask was that the city should have a connection with Brighton. After that, certain inhabitants of Brookline, covering a portion of the town my colleague had recommended, and some more covering that portion where the water works will run, have expressed a desire to be annexed. They said they thought it would be a good thing to have the water works within the city, and they did n't want any opposition at the Legislature from the city. Thereupon the committee said that after the vote of the city, and inasmuch as it would give us a better way, there would be no opposition to taking more of Brookline—it would be giving us better accommodations, and so the committee informed the gentlemen not only that we would n't oppose it, but we would, on the part of the city, favor any annexation that the inhabitants of Brookline desire. So far as the committee are concerned they will be in favor of all they can get the Legislature to grant. All that we insist upon is a particular connection with the city and Brighton.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I can't see any object in petitioning the Legislature except to connect the city with Brighton. It does seem strange that inhabitants of Brookline should come in and petition to annex that portion of Brookline which water works pass through, when we have the right already. It is nothing more in my opinion than an effort to get the water. I don't believe in instructing the Committee on Legislative Matters. While the Committee on Legislative Matters were asleep the town of Natick went to work and took the water; they don't talk like that in this Council, but it is so. And that ought to be put into the report of the Committee on Legislative Matters. I don't believe in proscribing one part of the town to help the other.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—The case seems to be that certain inhabitants and a great majority of the land-owners of Brookline are desirous of annexation to Boston. We know very well that the city is desirous of having the whole town. Now the point is that when the citizens of Brookline and the committee from Boston appear before the Legislature, there may be a conflict. They ask that the committee shall favor that petition. We say that not only the great avenues leading out of Boston, but the water works of Boston lying in that territory, the conduit which leads from Chestnut Hill Reservoir runs through that territory, should be annexed. This territory is not liable to have much money expended upon it. The only thing is for those in favor of annexing it to act together. Let us take what we can get. It seems very plain to me that the Council can instruct the committee in accordance with the report.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I confess I don't understand what is going on. Here we are within two weeks of the death of the City Government, and here is a proposition to instruct a committee of the incoming City Government to go before the Legislature and advocate a petition of certain citizens of Brookline, when that committee has not been appointed. It is to come in with the new City Government. Why are we obliged to advocate this petition? It is against the principle of the thing that I object. It is not good policy for this City Government to dictate to the next City Government. When the new one comes in then we can have such instructions as that City Council sees fit to give it. I don't want to see any one-sided action, especially while this City Government is alive, while it is only to determine the line of conduct of a few individuals. I can see broad land speculation in this scheme to divide the town of Brookline.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—The gentleman from Ward 5 remarked about two months ago that he could see a land speculation in this matter. The order came up in the other branch for the annexation of so much of the town of Brookline as included Brighton avenue. One of the annexation commissioners called my attention to the fact that it took only a small strip of land. He said if you are going to ask for anything ask for something. One thing that called my attention to it was that in laying the fire alarm telegraph poles to reach the other part of the city, now that there is an engine at Longwood, would make it two miles shorter than by the way of Brighton avenue. I don't think there are any land speculators engaged in this. I have been informed tonight that all the gentlemen owning property there favor this project, and only two oppose it. I think it is entirely competent for this Council to instruct the Committee on Legislative Matters to favor this petition.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved the report lie on the table. Lost—13 for, 21 against.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I don't undertake to make any statement here that is not correct, but when the statement is made here that only two gentlemen from Longwood oppose this measure I shall take issue with any gentleman who states it. I should like to have the gentleman state his authority. If he knows that only two property owners oppose this measure I shall take his word for it, but I undertake to say there is no truth in it. I don't believe the gentleman can state his authority. I hope the record will be made, and it will not be more than twenty-four hours before a hundred gentlemen will appear against it. I can name scores of them who will oppose it. I know this is true, but I don't say that any gentleman has made a misstatement, by any means. But some gentleman is terribly misled. Therefore I would not have the people nor the Council misunderstand the facts. It is nothing but a carefully drawn plan to divide the town of Brookline in the interest of certain individuals. No Legislature will ever vote to divide Brookline or any other town situated as that town is. With my present feelings I never shall vote for any such proposition. I believe a majority of the Legislature will vote to annex Brookline when there is a vote in favor of it.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I would like to ask the gentleman from Ward 5 whether it is not usual in the Legislature to grant a petition of a large majority of the inhabitants of a particular territory to be set off from one town to another?

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I will have to answer that there is no rule. That is frequently decided in one way and in another. I remember instances in the western part of the State where such applications have been refused. It was the case with regard to Abington and several other towns last year, and in 1872 the town of Holbrook was set off from Randolph by such means as they saw fit to use. But it is one of the hardest things I know of to get the Legislature to consent to a division of a town. Here is a proposition to commit the City Government to a certain line of division; tell me why it is necessary to act upon it at this time?

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—The members of this Council, during my two years' service here, know very well that I never make an assertion here that I never can back up. I think they will know where to find me. I said that I had been informed, on very good authority, that only two persons living at Longwood oppose annexation. That gentleman lives in Longwood; he is acquainted with almost every one there. I understood him to say that only two persons opposed it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3—I recollect when this matter came up in the Legislature, in 1870, and was defeated there, this piece of flats was worked through at that time, and, if I am not mistaken, the very men who asked for this annexation now opposed it then, and yet they were willing to give the city of Boston those flats, with the understanding that the city would put in a sluiceway. If they had not paid out their money then, Brookline would have been annexed. If those gentlemen are so eager to annex territory on that line of highway, there is no trouble, for the weight of the vote against annexation was brought from their laborers who were paid to do it. If we are to have any of the town of Brookline let us have the whole of it.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—I wish it to go upon record that I know nothing of real-estate speculations. As I stated before, one of the Annexation Commissioners called my attention to it, and I leave it to the good sense of this Council if this is not a proper thing to do. But no one has been to see me directly or indirectly, and I never had five minutes' talk with anybody except members of the Committee on Legislative Affairs.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—The reason why I made the motion to lay this matter on the table was in order that I might obtain information which every member not conversant with the boundary lines should have. I do not know where these lines are, and if I vote tonight I cannot vote intelligently.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—The majority report was in favor of annexing so much as would give a connection with Brighton. Gentlemen in favor of this petition have stated that nearly all the inhabitants are in favor of it. They ask the City Council to favor any line they may desire. The gentleman from Ward 5 is mistaken in that it does not fix any line. Although there may be legal difficulties in the way of accomplishing the proposition, I hope the Council will pass the order.

On motion of Mr. Perkins, the further consideration of this subject was specially assigned for consideration at half-past eight o'clock, at the next meeting of the Council.

BATHING HOUSES.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the Council voted to reconsider the vote passing the order in reference to placing the public bath houses in charge of the Board of Health, and on motion of Mr. Flynn the order was laid on the table, Mr. Flynn desiring that Mr. Wells, who offered the order, should explain it at the next meeting.

On motion of Mr. Dacey of Ward 2, it was ordered that when the Council adjourn it be to Friday evening of next week, at 7½ o'clock.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, from the same committee, to whom were referred requests of the School Committee for a primary schoolhouse site at City Point; for a new primary schoolhouse in the Norcross District; and for the abandonment of the Cottage-place school, and the erection of a new nine-room primary schoolhouse on or near Elmwood street, submitted reports recommending that the reports be severally referred to the next City Council.

Severally accepted.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, from the same committee, to whom was referred a request from the School Committee, submitted a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to pave the yard of the Vernon-street Primary Schoolhouse, Washington District, the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

The order was read once.

Adjourned to Friday evening, December 27th.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general history of the United States from its discovery by Columbus in 1492 to the present time. It covers the early years of settlement, the struggle for independence, the formation of the Constitution, and the growth of the nation. The author discusses the various political, social, and economic changes that have shaped the country over the centuries.

The second part of the book is a detailed account of the American Revolution, from the outbreak of hostilities in 1775 to the signing of the Treaty of Paris in 1783. It describes the military campaigns, the political maneuvering, and the ultimate triumph of the revolutionary forces.

The third part of the book deals with the period of the early Republic, from the adoption of the Constitution in 1787 to the end of the War of 1812. It examines the development of the federal government, the role of the judiciary, and the expansion of the nation's territory.

The fourth part of the book covers the years from 1815 to 1860, a period of rapid growth and change. It discusses the industrial revolution, the westward expansion, and the growing tensions between the North and the South that led to the Civil War.

The fifth part of the book is a history of the Civil War, from its outbreak in 1861 to its conclusion in 1865. It details the military strategies, the political issues at stake, and the profound impact of the war on the nation.

The sixth part of the book is a history of Reconstruction and the late 19th century, from 1865 to 1890. It explores the challenges of rebuilding the South, the struggle for civil rights, and the rise of industrial capitalism.

The seventh part of the book covers the period from 1890 to 1914, a time of progressivism and reform. It discusses the efforts to improve government efficiency, protect workers' rights, and address social inequalities.

The eighth part of the book is a history of World War I, from its outbreak in 1914 to the end of the war in 1918. It describes the American entry into the war, the military campaigns, and the social and political changes that followed.

The ninth part of the book is a history of the interwar period, from 1918 to 1939. It examines the economic challenges of the Great Depression, the rise of the New Deal, and the growing tensions in Europe.

The tenth part of the book is a history of World War II, from its outbreak in 1939 to the end of the war in 1945. It details the American military efforts in both the Pacific and Europe, the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, and the post-war world.

The final part of the book is a history of the Cold War and the modern era, from 1945 to the present. It discusses the rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union, the Vietnam War, and the social and political movements of the 1960s and 1970s.

Joseph Marshall, to occupy additional stables for twelve horses on Chelsea street, No. 327.

To the Committee on Sewers. John Harney, to be paid for damage done to his estate on Circuit street by construction of a sewer.

To the Joint Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings. Washington Snelling, for leave to erect two wooden houses without brick partitions on Eagle street.

To the Committee on Paving. John Kelly, for grade damages on Dorchester avenue.

Charles H. Leach et al., for removal of obstructions from, and for putting sidewalk of Dorchester avenue, near Crescent avenue, in good condition.

P. H. Rogers, to be paid for grade damages on Dorchester avenue, Ward 16.

Charles E. Turner et al., that sidewalks and crossings be laid on Chelsea, Saratoga and Bennington streets.

To the Committee on Legislative Affairs. Notice of proposed petition of Azel Ames et al., for the annexation of Chelsea to Boston.

Notice of proposed petition of J. Warren Merrill and seventy others, for the annexation of Cambridge to Boston.

To the Committee on Public Buildings. Michael F. Lynch, for a new ward room in Ward 16.

To the Committee on Common, etc. William Sohler, that a suitable walk be laid on west side of Tremont street, from Park to Boylston street.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The order of notice on petition of Sewall, Day & Co. to erect steam engine on Parker street was considered, and there being no objection to petition, was referred to the Committee on Steam Engines.

On petition of Sturgis & Brigham, architects, to place a stationary engine of six horse power in a building of C. & C. R. Codman, trustees, corner Kilby street and Exchange place, an order of notice was passed for a hearing on Monday, January 12, 1874, at four o'clock P. M.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

Schedules of assessments for the construction of common sewers were received from the Superintendent of Sewers as follows: Parker street, total $666 81, to individuals, $500 11; New Heath and Centre street, total $1595 13, to individuals $1196 35; Bremen street, total $5017 66, to individuals $1520. Referred to the Committee on Sewers.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to abate the sum of $17 84 assessed upon Richard Justice for a sewer in Bolton street. Passed.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The following papers received concurrent action: Petitions were referred.

Report (inexpedient at this time) to provide a new ward room for Ward 10. Accepted.

Communication from Trustees of Public Library, inclosing notice of donation of $5000 to said library by Henry L. Pierce. Referred to Committee on Public Library.

Reports of Committee on Public Instruction, referring to the next City Council the following requests of the School Committee: 1. For a primary-school site at City Point; 2. For new primary school-house in the Norcross District; 3. For the proposed abandonment of the Cottage-place Schoolhouse, and erection of a new house in the same district. Severally accepted.

Reports (leave to withdraw) on petition of Dean Dudley, to be paid for damages caused by agents of the city during the great fire of November, 1872; and of Charles L. Keyes, to be paid for personal injuries received in Portland street. Severally accepted.

Report of Joint Committee on Streets in favor of the passage of the orders to rebuild the draw of the Broadway Bridge, at a cost of $114,000, and for a loan therefor. Accepted, and orders passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

REMOVAL OF TREES FROM THE STREET.

At half-past four the Board took up the special assignment, the hearing of parties interested in the proposed removal of an elm tree from the roadway of St. James street.

William R. Gray appeared to remonstrate against the removal; the tree is some eighty feet high, with girth of eight feet, stands in the centre of the street, and is one of the most beautiful in the city. No accident has occurred on account of it, and it is rather a safety, as the roadway is shelving and teams naturally take one side or the other. The roots have been cut on the southerly side, but have not been affected; they are perfect on the other side. If the tree were to fall it would fall upon his (Mr. G's) house, so that if he thought there were the least danger he would not appear here.

Other trees stand worse in the road than this one, and this tree has not been affected by the wind. All the roots which have been cut are surface roots merely. The tree has been there forty years, and no accidents have happened in that time; there are fifteen feet of roadway on either side, the road is shelving and were it not there the teams might come together. The general sentiment of the residents there is against the removal, and among the remonstrants are several gentlemen who own teams. The petitioners for removal have not offered any proof of a single assertion of theirs, having offered merely the assertions of others. The remonstrants are of the utmost respectability. He valued the tree as a dear object, he had watched it carefully and felt that it is an unusually fine one, and, as a general thing, is in a fair condition and if well taken care of will be long lived. The Alderman from that district, Mr. Gray thought, had consulted only one side. He felt aggrieved that the removal should be pressed with no proof. There must be something at the bottom of it. Several gentlemen had expected to be present, but are detained away by business. There is a street lamp close by which will prevent any one from running into it. Mr. Gray presented a plan of the locality, and an additional remonstrance from twenty-six other residents of the locality against the removal. In reply to questions from Alderman Clark, Mr. Gray stated that the roadway is fifteen feet on each side of the tree, and that as a general rule he should not favor the general putting of trees in the streets of the Highland District. Ex-Mayor Lewis had signed the remonstrance and had since changed his mind; but he did not know that ex-Mayor Gaston and Senator Merrill had also. To Alderman Stebbins Mr. Gray said he would not be willing to sign a bond to indemnify the city for any damages which might occur on account of the tree.

Mr. Reynolds had examined the tree and found all the limbs shooting out from the body sound. There is very little but local travel in the street and the tree is no obstruction. It has the appearance of being healthy. The sure way would be to leave it till spring and if it did n't leave out then it ought to be removed.

Mr. Putnam thought it would be a great sacrifice. His teams had never experienced any difficulty. If the English elms on Tremont street are spared he could n't see why this one should n't be. To questions by Alderman Quincy Mr. Putnam said he did not live on the street, but wished he might.

Rev. Abiel Silver—Reside near there and the church and society would not have the tree removed if they believed it safe, which they do not. The roots are cut off within five feet of the centre of the tree to lay a water pipe, and last summer a sewer was laid which cut most of the roots off in line of the ditch that ran down deep. The roots that run up the street lie upon the rocks, so that there is very little to hold it on the north side and nothing on the south side. The roots run but a small distance, whereas the rule of arboriculture is that the roots should extend as far as the branches. It seems that a very little wind will blow it over. Soon after the sewer was cut through the leaves began to turn and they were all off before the leaves of the other elms were. He did n't think it would live three years. He should value the tree above price if it were healthy, but as it is now he did n't think it safe to stand. In reply to a question by Alderman Clark, Mr. Silver said he did consider the tree an obstruction to the street.

Mr. Hodges said he had as much reverence for that tree as any man, and had come to the conclusion that it ought to be removed. The roots have been cut off, the tree has seen its glory, and it is now decaying, the time has come when it should be removed, and a majority of citizens there desire it. He thought the tree a great obstruction; the age of the tree and the increasing travel were two good reasons for its removal.

Mr. Carey used to think the tree a great ornament, but he had seen it weakened on all sides, and there is a strong feeling in the street that the tree is unsafe. Hardly any one who intends to remain there desires to have it remain. Mr. Gray has advertised his place for sale, and don't intend to remain there. He thought it wrong for persons living a mile away, and who don't know anything about it, to get up a petition to have the tree remain. He had three trees in front of his house, and would n't take a thousand dollars apiece for them; so it was n't because he did n't love trees. Already there is a claim for damages made against the city on account of the roots of this tree. To Alderman Hulbert Mr. Carey stated in reply to Alderman Stebbins that he had measured the distance from the tree to the curbstone and found it eight and a half feet.

Alderman Hulbert explained his position. He appeared before the committee because the interest of the city required the removal of that tree; it was unsafe to public travel.

Mr. Gray corrected a statement he had made. He did not wish to convey the idea that it was fifteen feet from the tree to the curbstone, but to the side of the street.

Alderman Clark explained the action of the Committee on Common, etc., who were in favor of removing the tree, but they felt bound to consider and give a hearing to so respectable an array of remonstrants, but he had since learned that many of them had changed their minds.

On motion of Alderman Hulbert, the prayer of the petitioners for the removal of the tree was granted.

DUTIES OF THE FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

The report, inexpedient to amend ordinance in relation to Fire Department, so that the Fire Commissioners shall not interfere with engineers while engaged in extinguishing fires, came up from the Council, "referred to the next City Council," together with an ordinance making the amendment proposed.

The question was on concurrence.

Alderman Quincy—I trust, Mr. Chairman, that we shall not bequeath to the next City Government any such legacy as the proposition now before us, and I will endeavor to give my reasons for the view which I take of the matter. Whether such an onslaught as was made in the other branch on the chairman of the Ordinance Committee is worthy of any notice here, is a question which many gentlemen would answer in the negative. My reference to it shall be very brief.

A Councilman from Ward 12 was pleased at the last meeting of the other branch to be not only in his own opinion excessively severe and sarcastic upon a certain report from the Ordinance Committee, but also seemed to regard it as in accordance with good taste and warranted by the facts, to accuse the author of the document of a want of occupation in private life, and in public of a willingness to sacrifice the interests of the city to his own vanity. To personalities I certainly do not propose to reply. As to the report in question, as I regard the time of this Board as too valuable just now to be devoted to an exposure at length of the Councilman's train of probably unconscious fallacy and misrepresentation, I will simply say this: It was written after long consultation with the City Solicitor, whose views of the law it was intended to express. It has since been submitted to that officer, who authorizes me to state to the Board that, after careful perusal, he entirely fails to perceive the contradiction or inconsistency therein which so amuses the gentleman from Ward 12. Therefore, I will only suggest that when my friend from South Boston shall decide to petition the Judge of Probate for the appointment of a guardian to the imbecile chairman of the Ordinance Committee, he may be willing to further benefit the City Government by taking also under the protection of his mighty brain the equally enfeebled intellect of the City Solicitor.

With regard to the proposed ordinance it seems to me that for us to entertain it and send it to the next City Government as worthy of consideration, is hardly less than insulting to the gentlemen who have been or may be appointed to the office of Fire Commissioners. It assumes, as its author tells us in almost so many words, that without it there is danger that these gentlemen will grossly abuse the powers delegated to them by undertaking to run to fires and contradict the orders of the officers in command, whether given to extinguish the flames or to quell a riot. I hope we shall not indorse such a proposition as worthy of being sent to the next City Government. In view of the fact that such reference is entirely unnecessary, as its author being a member of the next government, can bring it forward whenever he sees fit, I move that the subject be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Power—I should hope the Alderman would withdraw his motion and let the matter lie on the table for a week, in order that I may examine into the subject.

Alderman Quincy—I would be willing to do anything in courtesy to the Alderman from Ward 12, but I think it is entirely unnecessary. If this subject is to be considered by the next City Government it can be called up by either the Alderman or the Councilman from Ward 2, both of whom are members of the other branch. It would be hardly less an insult to the gentlemen appointed commissioners to withdraw the motion.

The motion to indefinitely postpone prevailed.

Later in the session Alderman Quincy moved to reconsider the vote hoping it would not prevail.

Alderman Power—I had hoped that the Alderman would allow the matter to stand as it is, so that in the twenty-four hours allowed in which to move a reconsideration I could investigate the matter and understand it. If I could do so I think I should very likely think as the gentleman does, and very likely agree to an indefinite postponement.

Alderman Quincy—I moved an indefinite postponement, but that does n't prevent the gentlemen from Ward 12 bringing this matter before the next City Government if they wish. I did not wish to let the matter go to the next City Government as a legacy from this Council, and I think nobody's rights are cut off by the motion.

Alderman Power—Then I shall have to move to lay this motion to reconsider on the table. I don't understand the matter at all, and should like to look into it. I have a paper on my desk which is rather a lengthy document, which purports to set forth the merits of this case, but I don't profess to understand it and I should like time to look into it. If this motion prevails, I don't propose to let it lie longer than this week.

The motion to lay on the table was lost by a rising vote—4 for and 6 against.

Alderman Power—Then I hope the motion to reconsider will prevail. I have no desire to keep this matter open except as stated. I don't know whether this proposal is to take away power from the engineers and give it to the commissioners or not. I wish time to investigate.

Alderman Quincy—We pass upon no question, but simply decline to send it to the next City Government, knowing that it can be taken up by the next Council at any time.

The Board refused to reconsider.

THE SOUP QUESTION.

An order for the Overseers of Poor to furnish soup, from police stations, to the needy poor, at expense of appropriation for Overseers of Poor, came from the Council, passed.

The question was on concurrence.

Alderman Quincy—My reasons for opposition to this measure I have already explained to be twofold. First, the ground taken by the overseers that its tendency is mischievous as aggravating the evil it pretends to alleviate; and, second, that taken by the City Solicitor that it is illegal, and until the law shall be changed a purpose to which we have no right to devote the money of the taxpayer. I will not trespass upon the time of the Board by any repetition of my arguments, but will simply read to the Board two communications which I have received bearing upon each of these grounds, respectively. The first is from a well-known clergyman, the second from the City Solicitor.

ROXBURY, Dec. 17, 1873.

My Dear Mr. Quincy—After I got home from the tea parties I read, with the greatest satisfaction, the account in the paper of your staving off the soup. The first year of the soup distribution I took from the police station the list of all persons who had received it in the first winter for the district around my church. I divided this list among ten intelligent young men who were studying for the ministry, bade them hunt up the people, and find their condition. I am sorry to say that their reports, which were very curious and instructive, are destroyed, but I recollect distinctly that there were but five cases, of all those which they could find among the people who took soup that year, which they considered in any way tolerable; by far the greater part of the persons named could not be traced at all; we supposed that false names and false addresses had been given from the beginning. The poor people themselves who lived in those neighborhoods declared, as we believed, truly, that there had been no such persons there. In the large number of cases of poverty referred to this church, and relieved by it, since this distribution began, I do not know one person who ever received this soup (so unwilling are persons of any remnant of self-respect to make application for it), except one woman whom I compelled to go myself, because I wanted to learn the method of distribution. If the matter comes up again you may make any use of the statements above that you choose.

Very truly y'rs.,

EDWARD E. HALE.

ALDERMEN'S ROOM, CITY HALL,
BOSTON, Dec. 19, 1873.

Hon. J. P. Healy, City Solicitor: Dear Sir—In view of the recent action of the other branch upon the soup question, I respectfully ask the favor of your opinion upon the following points:

1. Can the City Council legally instruct the Overseers of the Poor to expend, or cause to be expended, any part of their appropriation from the city for the purpose of a general distribution of soup from the police stations?

2. Would such expenditure, in the absence of instructions, be legal?

3. Can the said City Council legally instruct said overseers to make such expenditure from any other private funds at their disposal?

Very respectfully yours,

S. M. QUINCY.

Dear Sir—In my opinion, neither the City Council nor the Overseers of the Poor have the right to appropriate the funds raised for the support of the poor to any persons who have not a legal claim upon the city of Boston for support. I, therefore, answer your first and second questions in the negative. I am not aware that the Overseers of the Poor hold any funds which the City Council can direct the expenditure of in the manner proposed; but I do not know upon what terms and trusts all the funds in the hands of the Overseers of the Poor are holden. The funds which they hold by gift must be disposed of in accordance with the conditions of the respective donors imposed at the time gifts were made and accepted.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

J. P. HEALY.

Mr. Alderman Quincy.

Dec. 22, 1873.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the claim which the class of deserving poor have, to be assisted by us, their more fortunate fellow men, I trust I do not ignore. If those so unfortunate as to have no settlement cannot legally be assisted from the public treasury, let us endeavor to change the law, and in the meantime let us contribute what we can from our own pockets to the organized private charities which can assist them. The proposed measure would in my opinion be at the same time a transgression of the law and an aggravation of the evil. Gentlemen who honestly believe that the overseers and the Solicitor are both wrong in this matter will conscientiously vote for the measure. Were I to do so, believing as I do that they are right, and assume the exclusive right to be considered the poor man's friend on that account, I should regard myself as masquerading under the sacred mantle of charity at others' expense, and regard whatever popularity I might thereby gain as poor compensation for the loss of self-respect. I move the indefinite postponement of this order.

Alderman Power—I think the order ought to pass as it comes from the Common Council. I don't think there is any question that the dispensation of soup under proper restrictions, from the police stations, will do a great deal of good. It has done a great deal in years past and no one can dispute that fact. With the knowledge that all the policemen have of residents of their localities it seems to me that it can be made to do a great deal more good than it ever has. I think we should risk the little harm that it might do. Notwithstanding the opinion of the City Solicitor, the Overseers of the Poor have, I understand, voted to grant relief to persons who ask for it. I understand that they are pretty evenly divided on the question of dispensing soup. Even if this order is passed I don't think the Overseers will do it if they find it is illegal. I don't believe in the indiscriminate dispensation of this sort of charity, but I can't see any trouble to be anticipated in this dispensation. I hope the order will not be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Clark called for the yeas and nays and they were ordered, and the motion to indefinitely postpone prevailed—8 yeas, 4 nays—as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy, Sayward—8.

Nays—Aldermen Clark, Emery, Power and Stebbins—4.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, submitted a report recommending the confirmation of the following-named executive appointments of members of the police force: Wilbur Laskey, Jr., Michael W. O'Brien, Samuel D. Chamberlain, John L. Savage, Moody Quimby, George F. Malcolm, George F. Sawyer, A. S. Buswell, James H. Wardon, Charles H. Cheever, John C. Blake, Ira C. Foster, Oliver W. Shapleigh, Charles A. Phillips, John B. Corcoran, William Matthews, William B. Daley, Bernard Armstrong, and Charles Glidden.

Constable—George Phillips.

Report accepted and appointments confirmed.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, reported "inexpedient" on petition of H. W. Nelson et al. for extension of wooden building limits so as to include Wards 7 and 12; and "no action necessary" on petitions of Joseph Marshall for leave to enlarge his wooden building at 327 Chelsea street; "no action necessary" on the subject of changing the building laws so that the floors of buildings shall be made fire proof; and "no action necessary" on the subject of protecting water pipes in buildings from injury by freezing, that being a matter which should be left to the owners. Severally accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the same committee, reported an order granting a permit to A. D. Williams to erect a building on Fountain street.

The order was read once.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Public Instruction, to whom were referred various requests of the School Committee, submitted reports recommending the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to furnish additional accommodations for the pupils of the Heath-street Primary School, Comins District; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to make such changes in the Girls' High School buildings as may be required to enable the pupils to study photography; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Passed.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide temporary accommodations for primary schoolhouses in the Gibson School District, Ward 16; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That notice is hereby given to John G. Lewis and Michael Barrett, contractors, and to Charles G. Crockett, Cornelius O'Hearn and Cassander J. Knight, bondsmen, to finish and complete the construction of the sewer in Kemp street, according to the terms of their contract with the city; and that if said sewer is not completed on or before the first day of February, 1874, the city will proceed to complete the same, at the expense of said contractors. Passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported no action necessary on petition of P. H. Rogers et al. for postponement of collection of sewer assessment; and leave to withdraw, on petition of Jacob Symonds for abatement of sewer tax. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom were referred the schedules of assessments for sewers in Clifton, Albion, Hudson, Cottage, Stoughton, Myrtle, Regent, St. James, Akron, Fountain, Wood, Taylor, Franklin, Water, Ericsson and High streets and Neponset avenue, reported that they had been found to be correct, and recommended the passage of the usual orders for collection. The orders were severally passed.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Public Library, to whom was referred the request of the Trustees of the Public Library for an additional appropriation of $11,650, submitted a report recommending that the same be referred to the Committee on Finance to provide the means. Accepted and reference ordered.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Public Library, to whom was referred a communication from the trustees of the Public Library notifying the City Council that the Hon. Henry L. Pierce had contributed the sum of $5000 to the funds of the library, having considered the subject, reported the following orders for passage:

Ordered, That the thanks of the City Council be presented to the Hon. Henry L. Pierce for his generous contribution to the funds of the Public Library.

Ordered, That the action of the Trustees of the Public Library in accepting and investing the donation of $5000 from the Hon. Henry L. Pierce for the benefit of the Public Library be and the same is hereby approved.

The orders were passed.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Legislative Matters, to whom was referred the petition of citizens of Winthrop to be heard on the subject of annexation, together with the notice of a proposed petition to the General Court for that purpose, would respectfully report that they have given the desired hearing, and are of opinion that to complete the city's control of harbor lines, and for other reasons, such annexation is desirable. They therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be instructed to favor the petition of the town of Winthrop, or its inhabitants, for annexation to the city of Boston, in preference to the proposed setting off to Middlesex County.

The order was read once.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the petitions of D. W. Lewis, S. G. Chase, Erskine & Bennett and Henry Hurd, for leave to occupy stables; H. J. G. Denny, to add three stalls to her stable on Otter street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of one bootblack and five newsboys for licenses; T. W. Gordon, Nelson Downing, for hack stands; Charles L. Steinkraus, for leave to exhibit game of checkers at 18 Howard street; C. M. Charter, for leave to exhibit a panorama at Wait's Hall one week; George Abbott and twenty-four others, for auctioneer's license; Messenger Brothers, to keep billiard saloon at 55 Bromfield street; J. R. White and others, for transfer of wagon licenses; James A. Riedell & Co., for two hack stands; John C. Fannelly, for wagon license; John Harrison, for pawnbroker's license; Martha P. Beatty, for innholder's license; Adeline Moore, P. A. Garvey, R. H. Yeaton, John Lale, for victualler's license; D. Harris, to give entertainment at Webster Hall, December 31, for the benefit of the poor; and leave to withdraw on application of Lawrence Sbealey for victualler's license. Severally accepted.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That in addition to the rules and regulations now in force for the government of the Police Department, the following rule be and the same is hereby adopted:

"No officer or member of the Police Department shall be allowed to receive a present from men under his command, and no subscription or contribution shall be made by any officer or member of the department to any present or reward intended for another officer or member of the department, unless specially authorized by the Committee on Police."

Passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Faneuil Hall, reported in favor of granting the petition of George V. B. Ladd et al. for use of Faneuil Hall for a public ball of January 22, 1874. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on County Buildings, reported inexpedient on petition of Charles R. Train et al., members of Suffolk Bar, for extension of accommodations in the clerk's office of the Superior Court, Civil Business. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Chief of Police, under the direction of the Committee on Police, be and he is hereby authorized to remove the flag staff from the corner of Dudley and Putnam streets, to such place as may be deemed expedient, said removal being made necessary by the erection of a fence for the new grammar schoolhouse, Dudley District; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Police.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages, as follows: Henry A. Thomas, $250, extension of Bedford street; Harriet Wiswell, $1982, widening Walnut avenue at Warren street; James and P. H. Power, $2025, widening Broad street; heirs of Alpheus Bigelow, $23,000, widening of Kingston street. Severally passed.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported orders to pay for street damages as follows: Barnard Foley and Owen Nason, $8472 10, for laying out Magazine street to Dudley street; heirs of Solomon Wildes, $188,248, extension of Washington street to Haymarket square; Mary A. Chase, $260, laying out Thornton street; Henry and Jacob Pfaff, $20,800, widening Congress street; heirs Timothy McCarthy, $1984, extension of Quincy place to Pearl place; Massachusetts Baptist Convention, $10,146, widening Washington street; Theodore Harrington $1800, widening Federal street; Harriet F. Nevins $900, for land taken in name of G. H. Blakmore, in widening Congress street. Severally read once.

ELECTION RETURNS.

Alderman Stebbins submitted the following:

The committee appointed to examine and count the original ballots cast for ward officers in Ward 19 at the recent election have attended to that duty and report that the result is as follows:

Warden—Joseph S. Duncklee had 279, F. Lyman Winship 278.

Clerk—Webster F. Warren 557.

Inspectors—Charles A. Faxon 428, Michael Coyle, Jr. 318, Asa Burbank 283, George B. Appleton 279, Joseph I. Bates 273, John H. Lee, 270, Charles Currier 269, Michael F. Morley, Michael Moreley 63, Michael Coyle 52, C. E. Coleman 62, Erwin L. Coleman 150, Edwin L. Coleman 59, A. T. Sinclair 34—all others 14.

From which it appears that the following-named persons, having a plurality of votes, have been duly elected to their respective offices, viz.:

Warden—Joseph S. Duncklee; Clerk—Webster F. Warren; Inspectors—Charles A. Faxon, Michael Coyle, Jr., Asa Burbank, George B. Appleton and Joseph I. Bates.

Respectfully submitted,

S. B. STEBBINS,
JAMES POWER,
THOMAS GAFFIELD.

Accepted.

Alderman Stebbins submitted the following:

The undersigned respectfully report that since the adjournment of the Board on the 15th instant they received a request duly signed by ten voters in Ward 2 asking that the ballots cast in that ward for ward officers may be reexamined and counted. The undersigned, a committee already appointed to examine similar ballots in Ward 19, attended to this duty and report the result as follows:

For Warden—Daniel F. Kelly had 697, Joseph Burnett 447, John Kenney 178, Frederic Balch 20, all others 7.

For Clerk—James O'Donnell 689, P. J. McDermott 609, William N. Starrett 37, all others 22.

For Inspectors—Hugh A. Carr 1143, Hugh McElaney 1144, James T. Gallagher 691, James L. Quigley 687, Matthias Conley 687, P. J. Duffey 464, E. Kelley 456, M. F. Mahoney 459, A. O. Brummett 190, C. E. Wiggin, Jr., 185, J. J. McDole 175, J. O'Hare 145, W. G. Hoyt 137, all others 187.

From which it appears that the following-named persons having a plurality of votes have been duly chosen to their respective offices: Warden—Daniel F. Kelley; Clerk—James O'Donnell; Inspectors—Hugh A. Carr, Hugh McElaney, James T. Gallagher, James L. Quigley and Matthias Conley.

S. B. STEBBINS,
JAMES POWER,
THOMAS GAFFIELD.

Accepted.

SUFFOLK-STREET DISTRICT.

Alderman Brown presented the report of the Joint Special Committee on the Suffolk-street District, and on his motion it was laid on the table to be printed:

The committee report its operations during the year. The total amount of the appropriation was $2,381,248 96; amount unexpended, $17,492 86; receipts from sales of estates by public auction, $617,944 53; from sales of old buildings and materials, $20,419 67; from rents, betterments, filling of land, etc., $145,162 47; total, $783,526 62; total amount of lands held by the city, $483,650 23; a small additional appropriation will be needed to pay damages awarded by the court and the committee, say $9782 14; the net cost of the improvement has been $1,607,504 48; the estimate cost was $2,351,550, by which it appears that the work has been done for $744,046 less than the estimates.

The Assessors' valuation for the year 1870, the year the improvement was begun, was about $5,000,000. A comparison of the valuation of that year with that of the present one shows an increase of not less than 124 per cent. It appears, therefore, that the increased income which the city will derive from the property in the shape of taxes will be sufficient to cover the interest on the cost of the improvement, and also to pay the principal in a few years. The committee also reported upon the legislation had in regard to the Northampton-street district, and stated that it is understood that the city is to go forward at the end of six months from the notice and raise the grade, charging the several owners for their proportionate part of the expense.

Those who are dissatisfied with the assessments may, within twelve months after they are laid, apply for a jury, or they may surrender their estates to the city. The city surveyor is now engaged, under the direction of the committee, in preparing accurate surveys and profiles of the streets and estimates of the cost of filling. These will be completed before the time arrives for beginning operations. In regard to the Swett-street district the committee stated that a large part of the territory is now in the hands of two or three individuals, who are desirous of having streets laid out and the land raised to a suitable grade as early as possible, so they can proceed to erect dwelling houses.

They have expressed a willingness to convey to the city, free of expense, such of their lands as are required for streets, and also to pay for the cost of raising these lands to grade. The committee reported orders to transfer from the Reserved Fund $10,000 to the appropriation for Suffolk-street District and $700 to that for Church-street District. The report was laid on the table to be printed.

THE PARK QUESTION.

On motion of Alderman Emery, the orders relative to a public park were taken from the table. The question was on the adoption of the substitute offered by Alderman Emery.

Alderman Emery—Mr. Chairman, when I offered the order under consideration as a substitute for the one from the other branch, I presumed nearly all of the Aldermen were in favor of having a park or parks at the proper time—sometime or other; but on account of the lateness of the season, I thought they might favor the postponement of putting it into the hands of a committee at present, for the reasons which I then stated—that a committee could do nothing more than what is contemplated by this proposed substitute, and by its adoption we should be in position to take advantage of an opportunity, whenever it should occur, both as to the financial condition of the city and the price and availability of lands, to secure desirable locations. Now I can see no objection to being in position, though we should deem it inexpedient now to take any further steps.

The subject has been very ably discussed, pro and con, and I do not propose to review any of the arguments presented, as they are doubtless properly appreciated by the members of the Board as well as by the public generally. I trust the time will come when Boston will have not only a park but several, or a series of parks, some of which may be in each outlying district; so that they may be easily accessible from any part of the city. Have not the late fires and the present depression of business proved the strength of Boston to bear misfortunes? May they not as well show her strength for growth and expansion; which, after providing for her substantial wants, may she not claim and enjoy the privileges and luxuries of other cities? The time is near at hand when we shall look in vain for unimproved acres with which to beautify our city. All of the famous gardens and parks of the noted cities of Europe were obtained when lands were cheap and purchasers few. Parks to a large city become a public necessity. We could no more make Boston Common a private garden, closed to the public, than could George II. the park of St. James, which, when coveted by his queen, was told it would cost "only three crowns," meaning a revolution. We may regret that our predecessors of an early period did not see this necessity for us and provide for it, but inasmuch as they did not, shall we put off all responsibility and leave it to our successors.

To the prosperous and well-conditioned our suburban attractions may be sufficient, with the fine roads, beautiful villas and palatial mansions, in which we have taken great pride. But to the less favored, where and how can they recreate and renew their strength? Must they take to the highways, with no sheltered seats on which to rest? or shall we have parks so contiguous as to be reached and enjoyed by all. Boston would not lose by such an investment, for, adjoining these parks and in the vicinity thereof, the homes of the rich would be found. Here the land would quadruple in value, thus increasing the taxable property fourfold, and which in my judgment would fully warrant such an outlay at a fit time. Now, Mr. Chairman, it is a question whether we shall move so far in the matter as to leave our successors in a position to act when circumstances favor it. The question is not, parks immediately or none at all, but shall we be in readiness for parks when they can be afforded. Boston is not obliged to push in one direction for her homes or her parks, as in the case of her more opulent neighbor, New York, for here we have no natural boundary to our growth and no boundary to our aggrandizement. The north may be made as beautiful and as desirable as the south, the east or the west, and all throbbing and vitalized from this centre of legislative action, which should be wise and always just and pure.

Alderman Hulbert—I would like the indulgence of this Board to say a few more things in reference to this subject; but I wish to say that what I shall say will not be because of the position I have taken in this Board before, and seek now to maintain, but what I shall say myself is from the deep conviction I have on this subject, and a deeper conviction I have not had on any subject since I have been a member of this Board, and I have not spoken on a subject which has involved so much as this question. I commence where the last speaker left off, that the action contemplated in going to the Legislature is in itself harmless, because I do not believe that that can be so. The ink will not be dry to the governor's signature to the act that shall be passed before there will arise a pressure for the carrying out of the scheme—a pressure that will be felt, and will, doubtless, accomplish the result. Now, at present, this scheme is urged by the public press to a certain extent, and by gentlemen connected with the City Government, by various individuals in the community, and I do not impute any other than the best of motives to these gentlemen. But after these there will be the dissolving views of the showman. There is another class of men, and they will soon appear—that is an array of interested men—interested in the sale of property to the city for this park, and they will come before they are needed. Now, I beg to call the attention of the board to some results which the inauguration and carrying out of the plan, of which this is the beginning and main element. Now, I believe in all that I have said, not because I have taken any one position, but because of my solemn convictions on this subject. As Boston is now circumstanced, I think there will be no one thing more unfortunate for her to inaugurate than to materially increase the rate of taxation. I have looked this over since our debates here. I have looked more carefully into the condition of the city's finances and I have done it ready to be convinced, but I tell you candidly that my convictions before given have only been confirmed and not changed. I alluded in my previous remarks made to the basis on which the appropriations were made for this year. We came together soon after the great fire. The feeling that was seen through this hall was that the appropriations for this year should not exceed those of the previous year, and should be decreased, if possible, and I think that when measures came before this Government, we all have been governed by this idea. But I think that some of the citizens who came here have forgotten that there was a fire. But it is my own opinion, and I think that it must be the opinion of all the gentlemen of the Board that the basis of expenditure which we established at the beginning of the current year will and cannot be maintained for the year to come; that the various departments scarcely without an exception will call for and must have their appropriations increased largely. I will not particularize, but I think that the advance will be materially in excess of the regular appropriations. Then we have to provide for the interest created by the debt of the year, so that there will be a large increase, for the taxation must be provided in the ensuing year. Then there are various schemes relating to the business development of the city which ought not to remain waiting any longer; all these things put together are going to make a basis of taxation far larger than anything we have yet had, in my judgment. We have in this past year been remarkably free from the pressure of individuals for carrying through private schemes—by which I mean those matters in different parts of the city which are urged by parties interested. What we have seen in this hall for the past four or five weeks, indicates that there is something of private scheming, planning and designing. I only hope and trust that the incoming Government will pay no more regard to them than the present one has been. But private enterprises will be pushed hard, not merely from the city, but from the annexed territory. They will have their wants, and will not fail to make them known here. Now, I do not suppose that any gentleman in this Board means to advocate any policy here that he does not believe to be consistent with the best interests of the city. I believe that that is true of every gentleman in this Board. Now, I feel that it is best for the coming year, that the best management only will keep our taxation within reasonable limits, by which I mean such taxation as will not cause serious results. Now I want to say, that the rate of taxation does not begin with not end with the wealthy men in our community. There are those who think that taxes have to do with the rich only, and they are the only ones who have to suffer. Now whatever may be true of other cities, it is plain to my mind that it is the policy that Boston must not ignore, that the expense of her merchants and business men and all who live here should be kept as economical as possible. It is a vital question to Boston. I have referred to the necessities which are before us, and which we must meet and provide for in the coming year. This shows what must cause a large increase of taxation. I do not see how it can be avoided. Now, suppose, in addition to all these private and public schemes, there is initiated the scheme for a park or a system of parks, at a large expense, it means a park that will compare favorably with those of Chicago, Brooklyn and New York, mainly New York. Therefore it means not only a large expense at the outset but a very large annual expense for its embellishment, and a very large outlay for the current expenses in carrying it on. Now, all that you do in that direction is a burden in addition to those created by the other causes of which I have spoken. Now, I contend that the business interests of this city should not be called upon to bear the burden. I speak with some feeling. I think what I state in that line is important for consideration. Now, there is another thing that I must call the attention of the Board to. It is known that it has been the growing custom of wealthy citizens to have residences in other places than Boston; and from one reason or another, and I do not impute unworthy motives, the number has been increased from year to year, and they have felt that they were not entitled to the sort of criticism which has been made upon them. Now, with all the enterprises that we have in hand for the business development of the city, which any gentleman familiar with the matter must know are very large; if the city shall now inaugurate a system of expense so great as this scheme involves, these wealthy men will see in that expense the results in the future. They will see in it largely increased taxes, and they can reason legitimately and properly. How long will it be before men will say I will not expose myself to consequences of this kind; it partakes of the nature of an expenditure that the condition of the city of Boston does not warrant. Let this thing become popular, and it will become popular when there is a valid reason for it, then you furnish a valid excuse for gentlemen of wealth to say we will not expose our property to the results of such a course of proceeding as that. If any man will take up a valuation of the various wards in this city, it is very easy to see that it is a very easy matter for many millions of property to be removed out of this city. It will go as easily as by fire. Therefore, rich men will take their personal property where taxation is low, and where the personal valuation is low. The country surrounding Boston furnishes every facility for this. Pleasant society is to be found, persons of culture and wealth can obtain good locations. Now, if that is the case, then you are exposed to have this large amount of taxable property leave you just as readily as it did by the fire, and not return. But the wealthy men will have to leave their real estate here, it is said. So they will, but who will pay for it? I mean, who will pay the taxes? The merchants who occupy the stores pay the taxes, and the tenants pay the taxes on the buildings they occupy. Follow this out, and you find that every day laborer pays his share of the taxes, and the masses of the people pay them, while, in many cases, the men who own the property do not. I suppose that nineteen twentieths of the leases in this city, provide that the taxes shall be paid by the lessees. Therefore, the people who want this park will suffer. We have got to borrow every dollar to make it. Then it will enter into our tax bills, and I fear will create a sentiment that will make our richest men go away. They can live in the country, and come here and spend their winters. This whole country around invites them, and there is nothing to prevent it. Let us inaugurate such an expenditure and furnish the excuse, and just as sure as the sun shines you will see the result I foretell. Now, in what, I say, I want to urge a policy, and this whole park question brings up a policy. I urge a policy that is not going to increase the rate of taxation to an undue extent. Boston, today, suffers for a reputation which she always has had as an expensive place of residence. It is one of the most expensive places in this country for persons in moderate circumstances to reside in. Now we need to invite capital here and keep it here—that should be our policy. I know that I am correct in stating that the rapid development in certain trade departments which have assumed great magnitude in a few years is due mainly to the incidental expenses in handling merchandise being less here than in New York. Gentlemen familiar with business know that all incidental charges in New York have been very large in a few years past. Take the wool trade, for instance. It owes its rise to that idea. Gentlemen, this is well worth your consideration. I may as well refer here to the relative condition of the merchants in New York with Boston. We have read so much of the municipal mismanagement of New York that we imagine it to be a very expensive place to live and do business in. Well, it is an expensive place to live in, but it is a better place for a merchant than Boston. While taxation is two and a half times what it is here the basis of valuation is such that the merchant in New York pays less taxes on his capital in business, by far, than the merchant in Boston does. The reason is that our valuation is high, while the rate is nominally much less. If New York city were under economical management; if New York were managed with the same honesty that has prevailed in Boston, New York city would be the most inviting place for business on this continent, because it would be enabled to make the expense of doing business there, on such a small scale, that it would compel business to come there, because the cost of doing it would be relatively much less. Now this enterprise of a public park seems to be ill-timed, because we are in a transition state by reason of the annexation that has taken place and the annexation that is to come. We do not know where our centres are to be. We do not know where our lines are to be drawn. We do not know the condition that we will be placed in, or what annexation is to do for us. I do not know what impression you have as to the effect upon the city proper by annexation, as to its increase or decrease of the rate of taxation to the main city. Now, there is the old town of Dorchester, a pretty favorable specimen. The town of Dorchester came in and she had done for her, during the first two years, very liberally. In what I may state I let those two years go. I have not taken the pains to inform myself as to that, but for the last two years, in 1871-2, Dorchester paid into the city treasury, not exceeding six-tenths of what was spent for her benefit, and I do not include one dollar of the amount spent there for water. This is from careful investigations. For the last year, Dorchester did not contribute—and her taxation was made upon a high valuation, a valuation that cannot continue, our assessors must reduce the valuation there—Dorchester, I say, for this last year, has paid into the city treasury, not exceeding two-thirds of what has been expended for her benefit, not including water. I have the facts, gentlemen, I know what I am talking about. That is to be true of all territory that we annex—Charlestown, Brighton and West Roxbury will all draw upon this old city and be an actual expense.

I am only stating certain facts concerning annexation. Chelsea, Cambridge, Somerville, Winthrop, Brookline, Revere, Hyde Park, and I do not know how many other places, are proposed to us, and whether they will be annexed or not you can tell better than I; but every one of these places that comes in is an expense to the old city of Boston, in which I include the Highlands. Now, our city is nominally increasing in population by annexation. We are not stronger because we have annexed this territory; it effects nothing, changes nothing at present. Now I want to refer to New York, because I think there have been some ill-considered comparisons made here. The systems of the two cities are unlike, and they cannot be compared at all. New York has its own location, its own wants and facilities, and they are unlike Boston's. We must grow in a different way from that in which New York has grown. We are not situated as she is, and we cannot do as she does. New York has resources and power, and if she had not she would have been crushed by what she has gone through. But she has borne it, and she has not sat down. In the first place, I have alluded to the fact that her merchants pay less taxes than we do. She has a population three times as large as ours. She has her Central Park. Now, how is it with us? We are situated very much as this room is. Boston is situated very much as the Speaker's chair is, and the surrounding country lies around in a circle, and we radiate in circles. New York stands almost like a triangle. When her population increased she had no alternative but to go up. She could increase only by going up north. Now, there have been statements made here and in the public press—I do not wonder at it, for they have been made in official reports—that the effect of Central Park was to create a large increase of value of real estate. It had to do with it, but the park was not the cause of it. The park entered into it, but did not make it altogether. The thing that made the increase in value of land was the population that wanted to occupy it, and would have gone there whether Central Park had been created or not. Now, look at the facilities of New York; look at the European steamship lines. There is a large number of lines, and each with a large number of steamers. We have but one line of steamers, but we had very good accommodations from that line, and why? We should thank the Boston & Albany Railroad Company for one. It had the enterprise to go and furnish the facilities to export the products of the West to Europe. I know that John P. Squire & Company are on trial for maintaining a nuisance, but the best thing the city of Boston can do will be to join hands with those men and men like them and arrange to have them carry on their business here. But for this man and the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, there would be no line of steamers here.

I am in favor of developing our business resources and facilities in every way possible—just as the Boston & Albany Railroad and J. P. Squire & Co. have done. I want to see skilled industries here, to see business created. You make this vast outlay involved in this scheme, and you throw a wet blanket upon trade; you discourage the very thing you ought to encourage. We want the cheapest and promptest method of handling merchandise. That is the policy of Boston, and she must study it. New York has advantages which we have not, and never shall have. Another thing; newspaper articles and talk of what the great Boston is to be—the great city of the future, our immense growth, etc.—will never produce it in the world, and you and I will never see photographed that you would think of by some of these articles. I believe in Boston's growth. I believe she is growing, but her growth is to be after the Boston style, it is to be slow and steady. We never can talk up a great city. Our sister city of Portland has tried that. Before and after the fire, citizens of Portland displayed an amount of determination and energy that was exceedingly commendable, but if it had been bestowed differently it would have received the success that it deserved. If you will read the articles in the newspapers you will find that they had a large city in prospect; they felt sure they were to realize it, but it did not come. And today Portland is suffering from that very talk and those newspaper articles. They undertook to be what they never could be. What is the result? Portland today has a valuation as high as ours and is paying a tax of $25 to the thousand. Does that look like inviting business men there. Portland, directly after the fire, built a large number of warehouses and they are not occupied today. Some of them bring not more than three or four per cent. now. Portland is trying to bring within her borders skilled industries. You don't see Portland men talking as they did three or four years ago. As a city we do not require this public park this year, nor the next, nor in the next five years. The masses are better off in Boston than in any other city in this country; they can go into the country; our suburbs are reached easily; they are delightful. Because New York and Brooklyn have parks is no reason why Boston should have one. New York must have a park because her citizens have no place to go to. I have a brother residing in Brooklyn, and he took me to ride one day. It was four or five miles over the pavements before we got out into the open country. Chicago needs a park, too, but Boston does not. A number of citizens have expressed their opinion to me against this scheme, and they are entitled to consideration. They are men who have done a great deal for Boston and are doing it today. They are the pioneers in building, and I have a letter from one gentleman, who is second to no gentleman in this city for his foresightedness and bold action in reference to building warehouses in this city. He stands at the head of his business and has had as much to do as any other man in Boston with bringing about the state of things that exist. He says—

"The people of Boston do not want a park. The pressure comes entirely from persons that will be benefited by the expenditure."

I don't misstate it. The merchants are not in favor of it—no merchant that I have talked with is in favor of it. They don't want to be burdened with it. The burden will be felt more this year than before. The expenses of business have increased immensely. They can't be continued on the present scale. There are not tenants for the stores that are going up today, and the panic isn't the only cause of it. You can't lease buildings within twenty or twenty-five per cent. of what you could have done eight months ago. I speak advisedly on that subject. The argument has been used that this is a good investment. A gentleman told me that this thing originated with him; he told me that it would pay for itself in ten years. I did not discuss it with him, but there is no truth in it. It is a fallacy. Why, the taxes, at the rate of the present year, levied upon West Roxbury, Dorchester and Brighton would not raise a sum exceeding the interest on the sinking fund for the park expenditure. Suppose your park is dropped in Brookline; just figure up what an amount of increased valuation you must have for the taxes that will come in here to equal the expenditure. If you take your slate and pencil you will find that the increase of valuation by this thing is a perfect fallacy. You will never have any relief for your treasury by reason of that valuation. Not that the lands in the vicinity may not increase in value. You will not have rich men going out there to take up their residences. They have fine residences all about here. You can't have the facilities which they require. Wealthy families like to be in the city in the winter where they can avail themselves of city privileges. I now refer to the rate of valuation. In Boston proper it is as high, if not higher, than any other city in the country and it is where it cannot be kept. The rate of valuation must recede the coming year. The assessors will tell you that. The community is not in a condition to take up such an additional debt. These large town debts are a serious thing. Even the Government of the United States is suffering from the same thing. Our course is to trim the expenses, therefore I will close by saying that the business interests of the city should have our first attention. There are many things necessary to be done. I say, do them first. Then you have a basis for prosperity and growth. Then if it is clearly shown that you must have a park, why, let it be done. Talk about the expense of land—that is a very small part, because the great expense is in the embellishment of the parks—in what you will create upon the land and not in the land itself. But you will find that the cost of the land will be enormous—for when it is known that this thing is to be done, a great deal of cheap land won't be found by the city. Gentlemen, you make no mistake if you indefinitely postpone this whole thing.

It is worth while to bequeath to the Government following us ideas which have reference to a reasonable and moderate rate of taxation. Therefore, I leave the question, and that is all I have to say about it. I am clear in what I have said, and I move to indefinitely postpone the whole subject.

Alderman Clark—Mr. Chairman, this subject has been discussed so very much that I don't propose to say anything but a very few words this evening. This whole argument of the Alderman has been gone over before, and no new ideas have been developed that I can perceive. The order introduced as a substitute is very simple. It asks the right of the Legislature to take land for the purposes of a park whenever the citizens of Boston think fit to do so. It does not contemplate the expenditure of a single dollar for years to come, perhaps. This gloomy view of the tremendous condition of the city is one which I cannot entertain for a single moment. If I believed as he does—that we are going to ruin so rapidly—I would follow the lead of many of these heavy taxpayers and take myself into the country, and spend the remainder of my days there. I am not prepared to believe that the business of the city is retrograding; but I do believe it is rapidly increasing, and will increase solidly, and will do so in years to come. The reason why the taxes in New York are less than in Boston is that New York is a much larger city, and it becomes us to do what we can to increase the business of the city. I for one contend that it is our duty to commence within a very short time to make preparations for laying out a series of parks to accommodate the requirements of the people. The longer we delay it the more it will cost. As a sample of the advance in land in the suburbs by improvements, there is a piece which I was offered three years ago for something like four cents a foot for one hundred and fifty acres; an estimate of the laying out of the streets would make it seven cents a foot. That land is now selling at twenty-five or thirty cents a foot. And that is only a fair sample of what we will have in case a park is laid out. If the city retain a hundred acres of land it will pay for itself in the increase in valuation. The Alderman has alluded to the fact that we are an insignificant city, inasmuch as we have but one line of steamers plying between here and Europe. I regret it as much as he does, and had measures been taken years ago to increase our railroad facilities we should have had steamers coming here every day instead of once a week. I don't believe that the Boston & Albany Railroad Company should have credit for more than they have done. They have done just what they were compelled to do. It has been the fear of the Boston, Hartford & Erie and the boring of Hoosac Mountain that has made them do what they have. They have granted to Boston such facilities as they could n't help granting. Now we want another elevator. The Lowell Railroad proposes to build it. It will cost a hundred thousand dollars. They are in debt; but is that any reason why they should n't go on and improve their facilities because they owe a larger amount of money than they did forty years ago? In regard to losing those great taxpayers whether or no, have these improvements depreciated the real estate of those who move out of the city to avoid taxation? I think these expenditures have added from ten to twenty per cent. to the value of these gentlemen's real estate. It may be that their personal property has shrunk some during the past year. Their investments in stocks have shrunk, but real estate in Boston has increased by these judicious improvements. I trust that the substitute order authorizing the Mayor to petition the Legislature for authority to take land for a public park will pass, and that we shall also prefer a request to the Legislature to pass an act requiring citizens to pay their taxes where they reside during the greatest number of months in the year. In my opinion the Mayor ought to petition for such a thing this year. There are no doubt a great many people who oppose at the present time the expenditure of any money for a public park. But I think you will find that the greater portion of these remonstrants are persons who live here and pay their taxes out of the city. I have been more fortunate than the Alderman in meeting persons in favor of a park. I have hardly met an enterprising business man who will oppose it, and the majority are in favor of it. The opposition comes principally from persons who own magnificent residences in the neighborhood, and have moved out of the city to avoid paying taxes here, or from some cause that has not been fully explained. I think the business of Boston will compare very favorably with the business of New York. As far as my knowledge extends, the merchants of Boston have done a better business than those of New York. I believe that the credit of the mercantile community—the dry-goods trade, for instance—stands fully as well as the credit of New York merchants, and I believe, from what I know, that there has been more business done here than in New York. The jobbing, dry-goods and other departments of trade stand on a better foundation than in New York. We need to take this step because there is no question but within the next few years real estate within a circuit of five miles of Boston will be double in value. If we obtain this right from the Legislature we shall be prepared whenever the opportunity offers to obtain land at a low rate and at such a price as may be established by a commission appointed for the purpose. I trust we shall not indefinitely postpone this movement but shall take such action as will initiate it. I hope to see a park that will eclipse Central Park, and I hope the order asking for the right to take land will be passed.

Alderman Power—When this question first came before this Government, I did not think it was good policy to launch out into any luxuries while we had so many needed improvements that must be carried out. At that time I thought of the two evils it would be best to choose the least. I thought at that time I might favor the going to the Legislature to get power to take land if we wanted it, but I don't believe any member of this present Government believes that it will be for the interests of the city of Boston to purchase land or take any steps for the laying out of a park in the coming, and therefore I do n't see why we should pass this order to get the power to take land. As the gentleman from the Highland District has remarked, we all know the pressure that will be brought upon us to make a beginning, by persons having large tracts of vacant land to sell. Considering the city's financial condition at present, I do n't think I could vote to put the city's foot into such an expensive luxury at present. Therefore I shall vote for indefinite postponement.

Alderman Stebbins—I desire to state to the Board in a brief manner, the reason why I shall vote in favor of the motion to indefinitely postpone action on the matter of a public park. While I agree entirely with Alderman Clark in his opinion of the certain growth and prosperity of our city, I think the City Council should well examine the present and prospective financial condition of the city before entering upon a project of this magnitude. It will be remembered, Mr. Chairman, that in October last an order was passed, directing the Cochituate Water Board to furnish information to the City Council relating to obtaining a supply of water from Mystic Pond, and also the condition of the present conduit from Lake Cochituate. The Water Board, desiring that the investigation should be most thorough, secured the services of two of the ablest engineers in this country—Mr. James Kirkwood of Brooklyn, and Mr. James B. Francis of Lowell. The report of these engineers has just been submitted to the Water Board and will soon be laid before the City Council for their action. As chairman of the Committee on Water, it became my duty to carefully read this report, and I must say that the conclusions of the engineers, which correspond almost precisely with those of our own able City Engineer, are startling, and bring before us at once for consideration the important question of a supply of pure water. The results of the examinations made by these eminent engineers are briefly and substantially these: At present there is little or no water to spare from the Mystic Pond; by the building of two storage reservoirs at or near Mystic Pond, requiring two years' time and an estimated expense of one million four hundred and eight thousand five hundred and forty-six dollars (1,408,546), a temporary addition to our water supply could be obtained, but no permanent addition could be secured, as the population of the district now depending upon that pond for water will be likely to increase during the next twenty years so as to require all the water to be had from that source. To remove the objections which have been urged against the purity of Mystic water, the engineers suggest a sewer from the Woburn tanneries to a point below the dam of Mystic Pond, and estimate the cost of the same at $264,000. With regard to the present condition of the Cochituate conduit, the engineers say that it is overtaxed, and shows signs of weakness and yielding, and the quantity of water forced through it must be reduced, and a portion rebuilt. These, Mr. Chairman, are some of the results arrived at by competent engineers—men like our own engineer, who stand at the head of their profession in this country. The City Council will, I think, unanimously agree, (1) that the Cochituate Water Board shall be authorized to commence work at once all along the line of the new conduit from Sudbury River; (2) to provide the means for vigorously prosecuting the work until its completion. To do this will require an appropriation next year of, say three millions of dollars, and the same amount the following year, and two millions the next, or in 1876, when it is thought the new conduit could be completed.

Now, Mr. Chairman, while I should like to have a public park in the vicinity of our city in which our people would all take pride. I am of the opinion it is our duty first to provide an abundant supply of pure water, which will do more to secure the comfort and happiness of our people and develop the industries of the city than any park, however beautiful.

I agree with Aldermen Hulbert that it is our duty to guard with care the credit of the city, and I thank him for bringing this matter so forcibly to the attention of the City Council and to every citizen interested in the welfare of our municipality.

I cannot vote in favor of the park scheme while so many other large appropriations are necessary to be made to provide for the welfare of our citizens.

Alderman Gibson—I heartily agree with the motion of the gentleman from the Highland District. It is well known that large institutions are to be built by the State, and forty per cent. of the cost must come out of Boston. There is a new Court House needed, which will cost a couple of millions. We have work of necessity to do that should be done first. We have parks enough now. We have steamers running to the seashore, where groves have been laid out for the entertainment of the people. People can go in any direction. These works of necessity demand our attention first, without going into luxurious articles. I shall therefore vote in favor of this motion to indefinitely postpone.

Alderman Clark—I call for the yeas and nays, Mr. Chairman. I hope to have the honor of recording my vote in favor of this important measure. I am very much surprised to see Aldermen who have favored this measure backing down at this point.

Alderman Gaffield—After what the gentleman has said I want to say a few words on this subject, which will take but a few minutes.

Alderman Clark—I made no allusion to the gentleman.

Alderman Gaffield—I hope some time to see a public park or series of parks, with a fine avenue or boulevard connecting them. What have we now? All that nature in its most beautiful aspects, all that art with its skill and taste, all that wealth with its profusion can do to make the landscape charming has been done in the pleasant farms and country seats with which our suburban avenues are lined. These I know cannot always be preserved in their beauty. The growth of the city and the consequent increase in the value of land will interfere with the preservation of these great private gardens, groves and parks which now afford such charming drives in every direction. To preserve some of these in park reservations is what should some time be done. But let it be at the right time. The right time might have been before the great fire. The right time is not today, because the great fire has entailed on us an increase of debt to the amount of several millions for really necessary improvements in the widening and paving of our streets, and in awakening us to a sense of our need of a more sufficient water supply, to meet which we must spend millions more. A park is not a luxury merely, but with our modern ideas it is a necessity in every great city, and especially in such a city as we expect and desire Boston to be. We wish Boston to be not only preëminent for business facilities, but to shine in all the walks of literature, science and art; to have its preëminent library, its Museum of Art, its schools of science and its Institute of Technology and its parks. But we must not make haste too fast and lose what is of more value than the wealth of the Indies, and all attainments in literature, science or art—I mean our good name and credit throughout the world. We must be progressive, but not rash; radical, and yet conservative; far-reaching and liberal in our views, and yet not reckless in our improvements and expenditures. More men have failed in business from being too fast and too careless than from over-caution and prudence. Just so is it with cities and towns. If we should do all that we are asked to do today, we might spend millions upon millions, and if we had the money, it could be well spent. But cities, like individuals, must wait until their exchequer shall warrant their expenditures before they can gratify all their wishes and accomplish all that they desire. We visit Europe and are charmed with their museums of art, their overflowing libraries, their magnificent parks, and greenhouses filled with the trees, flowers, and the animals of every clime; and we return to America with the thought and resolve that Boston, New York and the other cities of our land must vie with these cities of the Old World—that the young city of the Puritans, two centuries of age, shall shine like the old London founded by the Romans a thousand years or more ago. Sir, I know the enterprise, the pluck, the energy of my native city, never displayed more nobly than in the manner of its rising after our recent calamity. But proud as I am justly of what she has done in the past, let us not lose our position and characteristic integrity, prudence and economy, without which all enterprise and thrift will come to naught. What we need now is to pause and think where we are, what of public improvements we have got to do necessarily, and what can be properly postponed.

Meantime, we have our Fresh Pond, Jamaica Pond, our beautiful reservoirs and the surrounding avenues in Brookline, our rural cemeteries, unsurpassed in beauty, and all the loveliness which clothes the hills and valleys of our suburban towns and cities. In due time we can have our own park or parks, our collections of trees and flowers, of birds, fishes and animals, and all those attractions which give such a charm to Regent's Park in London and the Bois de Boulogne in Paris. But let us wait until we have grown a little older, and have earned the privilege of enjoying the luxury. The prudent husband and man of business does not move into a brown-stone front when he knows he can only afford to live in an humble cottage. He makes the most of his humble home and his plain furniture, his homespun clothing, pays his debts and his notes, and in due time achieves honorable success and independence; while his reckless neighbor, living in his palatial residence, driving his fast span and bedecked in broadcloth and diamonds,—whom some weak men and women think must be rich because he lives so lavishly,—comes down with a crash and is reduced to penury at the first approach of a storm in the financial world. Let Boston not fear to pause for a season, even if it be but for a short one, until this storm is over, before she launches forth into an ocean of debt in whose depths she may founder. She has withstood every storm as yet, and she can weather all that lie before her if she has good men at the helm and wheel. We want men who have the courage to go forward in times of necessity, and spend and be spent in her service. And we want men who shall have the courage—equally as great, and sometimes more needed—to hold back and stop any stream of expenditure which may lead her astray. Such men we have in the present Board, and the voice of one has been heard in tones which will long be remembered here and outside of this hall, and which makes us all regret that the city will not be blessed by his advice and counsel the coming year. We have men and always have had and always shall have men enough who can cry, "Go ahead," and would lead us into untold expenditure and uncounted debts. But we have also had, and God grant we always may have, as we shall always need, men whose motto shall be, "Stop and think," who can put the brakes on the locomotive energy and sometimes thoughtlessness of our younger and more inexperienced men.

We need young men of action, and we need men of experience and thought, and our citizens and their officers should seek such men, and when such men are sought and solicited to take these places of trust and honor, they should not shirk the responsibility, but should cheerfully do their share of public duty and work. God save the city when it shall be otherwise, and when public officers shall be bought and sold, like sheep in the shambles. And so, Mr. Chairman, may we do our part today in holding back our enthusiastic friends who are pushing this park question at an inopportune time, and ask them to wait till a more convenient season. I am a friend to the plan of having parks, and once thought that the passing of the order before us might do no harm to the city or to the project. But a sober second thought, stimulated by the truthful and refreshing words of the gentleman from the Highlands, has convinced me that any action on the subject at present would injure the good credit of the city, would displease our fellow citizens, and would raise up more enemies than friends to the ultimate success of the project. Let us show prudence today, and tomorrow we shall be in better condition to accomplish our most cherished plans. I understand that such a pause and delay in this matter is interpreted by some as a proof, and made some to fear that Boston is going to stand still in the march of improvement. Mr. Chairman, it is not that we love Cæsar less, but Rome more. It is not that we think less of the park, but more of the good name and fame of our city, that we advocate a postponement of the order before us. No shrewd merchant will think worse of a debtor who comes before him and tells just how he stands, and that he intends for a season to buy only what he actually needs. And so no wise or shrewd foreign banker will think her of Boston for having the courage to tell the world what she owes, and that she does not mean to incur any further debt for the luxury of a park until other and necessary wants are supplied. "Good for wants" is the happy record made in the mercantile agency of many a merchant who could not be trusted if he went into overtrading, speculation and extravagant living.

And so our good old city will at home and abroad always be set down in the books of every banker as "good for wants." But let her inaugurate today—in view of her present liabilities—a new series of expenditures for boulevards and public parks, and you would see a new note in the banker's book, "She has too many irons in the fire."

Let us, then, while we wish success at the proper time to all proper plans for the embellishment of our city and for the happiness and pleasure of our people, wait a little before we start on a project which will add millions to our debt. The path of prudence and economy followed today will surely lead to success and prosperity for generations to come.

Alderman Power—I do not know but what the gentleman referred to me when he talks about backing down. I wish the gentleman opposite to understand that I am not one of the kind that backs down. I have been opposed to this order ever since it came here, and I think almost every gentleman here is opposed to it in the shape that it came here. I am in favor of having all the luxuries that can be had, and I favor Boston having a good park when she can afford to have it, but not till then. When the original order came before this Board, fearing its passage, I intimated that I might favor the substitute. There are various reasons why we should not enter into this plan now. Here are Newton, Cambridge, Hyde Park and Chelsea talking about annexation, and we should wait till that is decided. But whether annexation takes place or not it is not best to go to the Legislature this winter. We all agree that it is not the best policy to undertake the scheme now. I agree that we need a park here, but none who clearly understand the question will say that the reasons are nearly as good as those for New York. The gentleman from the Highland District has truly said the increase of real estate there has been on account of the increase of population. They have got but one direction to go; they must all push Central Park way. But we must have a park sometime, but we should not have it until we need it more and can better afford it.

Alderman Emery—When this subject came from the other branch there seemed to be quite an unanimity of feeling that the committee contemplated in that order ought not to be appointed. I conversed with several gentlemen about the thing, and they thought the same. They thought that this substitute would place it so that if matters were satisfactory we might at some future time enter upon it.

The views of the gentlemen seem to have changed. The arguments presented have been able on both sides of the question, but they have no application to this substitute that I can see, but to the original order they are applicable. The arguments of the gentleman from the Highlands are only a reproduction of what was given us some time ago. They have been merely reiterated. They are all sound, perhaps, but I do not see how they are applicable to the substitute as proposed.

Alderman Gihson—I felt just as the Alderman did. I was afraid of that committee, so I thought it would be best to put off the whole matter; but if we could get clear of it a year at least, that would be something gained.

Alderman Clark—The best argument of the gentleman from Ward 3 is that we must have a park, and have got to have one, and in the face of that assertion he favors putting it off another year, till land doubles in West Roxbury and Brighton, as it has done. If we are prepared to have Boston fenced in, we don't want any steps taken for a park. I know the conscience of the gentleman tells him he is in favor of a park, and a majority of his fellow-citizens are in favor of it. Why is it that we are spending five or six millions of dollars for water? It is because we are growing. This money we spend for water is a good investment, upon which we get a good interest.

Alderman Stebbins—It has got to be paid for.

Alderman Clark—There is no doubt about that, but we will create a fund to pay it. We want the city to grow, so that we can have a larger population to divide these taxes among. I believe I shall vote for as judicious a measure as I have favored since my connection with the City Government, when I vote for the initiation of the measure of a public park.

Alderman Gaffield—The citizens of Boston would like to see a park, but those who go against the measure at this time feel that the first step is one that will lead to a second and a third. I think nothing of a debt of five or six millions, but I do think something of the credit of the city of Boston.

Alderman Stebbins—The Alderman who introduced this substitute says the argument of the gentleman has no application to this matter. I say it does. We all know that it means business. Real estate speculators are at the bottom of this whole thing. I believe in a public park. Perhaps I am one of those who backed down, but I never gave any assurance to the Alderman in regard to the order. I have listened with a great deal of attention to the speeches made by the gentleman from the Highlands. They are worthy of attention. They ought to set every gentleman to thinking where the money is to come from, and I can arrive at no conclusion save that coming from the Alderman—from the Highlands. We must in the next year provide for a water supply and, perhaps, a courthouse, and the city has given notice that it will take possession of the entire Northampton-street District. Then there is the proposed Swett-street extension, to cost two or three hundred thousand dollars. Taking all the improvements that will be made, the expenses that will necessarily be incurred, I say the whole thing should be indefinitely postponed.

The board voted to postpone the whole subject. Yeas 9, nays 3, as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Cutter, Gaffield, Gihson, Hulbert, Power, Sayward, Stebbins, 9.

Nays—Aldermen Clark, Emery, Quincy, 3.

THE SOUP QUESTION AGAIN.

Alderman Stebbins—The state of the case on the soup question is about this—everything we have done is declared illegal, and has been indefinitely postponed, and various objections have been made to the City Council appropriating money in any form. I think I have drawn an order which will remove any objections, as it does not authorize any expenditure of the city's money. It is as follows:

Ordered, That the chief-of-police be authorized to invite contributions from the public for the purpose of furnishing from the several station houses soup or other meals to the poor, especially those having no legal claim upon the charities disbursed by the Overseers of the Poor.

I offer this order hoping that it may pass, and that the Chief-of-Police may feel authorized to invite contributions, and that he may provide soup this winter as he did last winter. In this connection, I will simply show what the work of the Police Department has been in this respect. They furnished 8541 meals to the poor at a cost of $4708, which is five and a third cents for each meal. Certainly it is a very cheap provision for the poor. Now that the City Solicitor tells us it is illegal to appropriate money, it is proper to say to the Chief-of-Police that he may invite contributions. In looking over the report, I find that every care was taken by the officers to prevent any one receiving soup who was not entitled to it. The only objection which can be offered is, to changing the method of dealing out charity. When this communication came from the Board of Overseers I sympathized with the view taken by his honor the mayor, but so many cases of suffering have come to my notice that I am in favor of some action of this kind.

Alderman Clark—If you apply to the citizens at large for contributions, it seems to me to be the same as saying that the Overseers of the Poor will not attend to their duty, and it has become necessary for the city of Boston to go begging for two or three thousand dollars to furnish soup with which to keep the poor from starving. If the other is a censure upon the Overseers of the Poor, so is this. I have voted for the furnishing of the soup for the poor by the city, and shall vote that way tonight. I don't think it necessary for the city to hang out signs at the corners of the streets for contributions for helping the poor.

Alderman Stebbins—We have tried in every way to have an order of this kind to furnish soup, and tonight, after coming first in one form and then in another, it disappears through a motion to indefinitely postpone, the City-Solicitor having decided that it is illegal.

This order provides that the Chief-of-Police may furnish just the charity needed by such people.

The order was refused a second reading, by a rising vote—2 for, 9 against.

Alderman Stebbins moved to reconsider, that the order might be indefinitely postponed. Carried.

Alderman Gaffield—I move to indefinitely postpone the order, and I do it because we have many charitable societies who will help those poor people who are not helped by the Overseers of the Poor. Those societies help thousands, and if our citizens give money, they should give it for that purpose. The city is districted, and to each district there is a visitor. I have been a visitor myself for twelve years. The whole city is districted by the Boston Provide Society, and every case of want can be investigated by one, two, three or half a dozen individuals. Let citizens help our charitable societies. There is no necessity for this method of distributing charity in Boston. No county or city takes care of its poor so well as we do in Boston. They come from every part of the Commonwealth because we do so much to assist them.

The order was indefinitely postponed.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

On motion of Alderman Power the report of the directors of public institutions, relative to religious instruction to the inmates of the institutions, was taken from the table.

Alderman Power moved that the report be recommitted to said directors with instructions to furnish their reasons to the City Council on or before the 29th inst. for not permitting the inmates of the institutions to receive religious instruction from teachers in whom they have faith. Carried.

THE SOUP FINALLY POSTPONED.

Alderman Sayward offered the following:

Ordered, That the soup be furnished to the poor of the city of Boston by the Committee on Police, during the months of January and February, at an expense not exceeding $3000; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Police.

The order was passed to a second reading, 5 for, 4 against.

The question was on passing the order.

Alderman Quincy moved to indefinitely postpone.

Alderman Sayward—I hope it will not be postponed. This seems to be a summary way of disposing of matters. I desire to record my vote for soup. I voted to postpone the order because I would not vote to instruct another party to do an illegal thing, which I would not do myself. I move the question be taken by yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Alderman Power—I hope that order will pass. It is the order that has passed here for several years, and I presume it would have been passed this year were it not for the shape in which it reached us from the other branch, and for the object for which many suspected it was put in. I presume if it had originated as it always has it would have gone through here just as it always has. As I stated before, the dispensation of soup under proper restrictions at the police stations, has, I know, done a great deal of good, and it can be made to do a great deal more. The evils that some say exist can be done away with.

Alderman Gaffield—The gentleman from Ward 12 says that this has always been done. It has only been done a few years. I have asked the captains at the police stations, and with hardly an exception they said it was a nuisance; that it is n't a thing to be brought into the police stations. Police work is one thing and the work of charity is another.

Alderman Power—It seems to me that if anything should enter into our police stations it is charity. I pretend to say that gentlemen who oppose this are not as familiar with this subject as I am. My lot has been cast with the poor. I am one of them I was not reared in the lap of luxury, as some gentlemen were, and my close connection with the poor gives me a better knowledge of their wants than the gentlemen who oppose this order. I have the highest respect for Rev. E. E. Hale, but I pretend to say that the gentlemen in the Charity Bureau have not the means of knowing the wants of those people that I have. I am connected with some charitable societies myself and I know that poor people suffer while an investigation of their case is made. This is to meet cases that no one but the police can get at. Many people who are ashamed to make their wants known or go to the Charity Bureau for assistance, have been helped from this source. I hope the order will pass, for it is more needed this year than during any winter when the soup has been dispensed.

Alderman Stebbins—Mr. Chairman, I have thus far voted in favor of every order providing for the distribution of soup to the poor, which had the least semblance of legality or propriety; but we have now come to a point where, to horror an expression from the Alderman from the Highlands, "we cannot afford any nonsense." Mayor Pierce, in a communication to the City Council relating to the propriety of furnishing soup to the poor of the city, stated that Mr. Healy, the City Solicitor, had given as his opinion that the practice heretofore pursued by the city in expending money from the Police appropriation for free soup, was entirely illegal. In the face of this decision of the Solicitor, members of this board urge that we pass this illegal order, when they know that the decision is binding upon the City Treasurer, the Auditor and every member of the Government, from the highest to the lowest. I cannot vote for the order, anxious as I am for the Police Department to aid the poor of the city.

Alderman Clark—This order, I understand, is the same we have passed for the last two or three years. I have voted for it every year since I have been in this Board, and I am ready to vote for it now. I don't believe in technicalities. Gentlemen voted right in the face of the opinion of the City Solicitor for opening the Public Library on Sunday. I say we can do good with the kettles at the police stations, with this soup at three or four cents a quart. It is the best which we can give. No one knows better than the police who are the worthy poor. I hope this Board will pass the order, the opinion of the City Solicitor to the contrary notwithstanding.

Alderman Gaffield—Our forefathers would n't drink tea because they had to pay a small amount of tax. It was principle for which they fought. I say it is a wrong way to distribute charity. Policemen do a great deal of good, but I know they would like to be relieved of this duty. But I speak of it as a matter of principle, as the opinion of experts, as the views of the overseers and visitors of the poor.

Alderman Gibson in the chair.]

Alderman Cutter—I have no doubt the gentleman has done a great deal of charity and is ready to do more; but I venture to say that if you take your position at any court where many poor families live, you wont see any visitor going in there. You will see children who are not clad well enough to go to his house and tell him about their wants. But those children will go down to the station houses and get a quart of soup, and I tell you it does lots of good. Charity given in that way is beneficial. These colporteurs are well dressed and they are very careful to whom they go and to whom they give their charities. I have lived near station houses and have seen how it works. It is n't well for this Board to talk longer about soup, which costs only three and a half cents a quart.

Alderman Gaffield—I make no boast of my charitable doings, sir; not at all. But I will say, sir, that I have visited the cases of all classes, and none are so poor but they can come to my door to make application, and none are too poor to come and have their cases investigated. I was not born with a silver spoon in my mouth. The poor we always have with us. I propose to do my duty by the poor, only I do it in what I consider the best way.

Alderman Power—Almost all the gentlemen in this Board must know that there are many people in Boston who are suffering who are too proud to have all the secrets of their families exposed to public gaze. Such must be the case before they receive one cent from the charitable organizations of this city. We all know, too, that many people will suffer while an investigation is going on. If there has been any fault the police can be instructed to correct it, so that no unworthy person can obtain it. The police are familiar with the people living in their vicinity. It seems to me that it will not be illegal to give the soup to persons who have a settlement here.

Alderman Hulbert—This is getting into a shape that it should not. The City Solicitor says you can't do it. Now, what am I to do? The question about the method of dispensing charity is irrelevant. I cannot vote for this order because the City Solicitor says I have no right to do so. This discussion of the merits and demerits of a system of charity is wholly uncalled for.

Alderman Sayward—This isn't a time to talk about who is charitable and who is not charitable. The gentleman says we came here to do our duty. It is time this thing were done, and done quickly. I hope we will vote for soup for the poor.

Alderman Hulbert—I have a right to take money from my own pocket and give it to the poor, but the City Solicitor says I cannot vote the money of the people for that purpose.

[Alderman Cutter in the chair.]

Alderman Gibson—This is a thing we have n't anything to do with, and I am surprised to see the chairman of the Board come down here and advocate the voting of money that we have n't any right to vote. This order has no business here. We might just as well undertake to build a private railroad. I am willing to help the poor, but I am not willing to violate my oath to do so.

[Alderman Gaffield in the chair.]

Alderman Cutter—I think if you will turn to the records you will see that this order has been passed for years, and the gentleman from Ward 1 has voted for it for three years. One year he put the order in. In the absence of law, custom is just as good. It has been the custom of this Board to do it, and take it out of the appropriation for Police. Now, if this is illegal, let the City Solicitor, or anybody that sees fit, adjust its legality to it. I have voted for it, and I shall keep voting for it.

Alderman Sayward—I should like to inquire of the gentleman from Ward 1 whether he was n't chairman of the Police Committee in 1871, when he approved the bills of the Police Department.

Alderman Stebbins—The vote in favor of opening the Public Library reading room Sunday afternoon bears no comparison to an affirmative vote in favor of this order. In the case of the library, Solicitor Healy said, substantially, that unless it was a work of charity or necessity the library could not be legally opened on Sundays. The City Council solved the question by saying in effect by their vote, nearly unanimously, that in their opinion, it was both a work of charity and necessity, and Mayor Pierce promptly indorsed his approval on the back of the order. I repeat, the vote of the City Council in favor of the Public Library opening has nothing to do with a vote to take money from the City Treasurer in an illegal manner.

Alderman Cutter—Is n't this a work of charity?

Alderman Stebbins—Yes sir, but the City Solicitor has n't before decided that it is illegal. Now that the City Solicitor has given this opinion the Auditor can't approve the bills.

Alderman Gibson—It is true that I have voted every year for this appropriation, but it is also true that the City Solicitor has n't decided it illegal, so that the point of the Alderman from Ward 6 has n't much strength. We come here and have taken our oath to administer a certain line of policy, and how can we vote to pay out money that is illegal?

Alderman Cutter—I should like to know whether it is n't just as legal to furnish soup to the poor as it is to furnish it to the members of this Board. The gentleman has fully approved of this.

Alderman Gibson—That is entirely different. In this case the city gets value received.

Alderman Quincy moved the previous question.

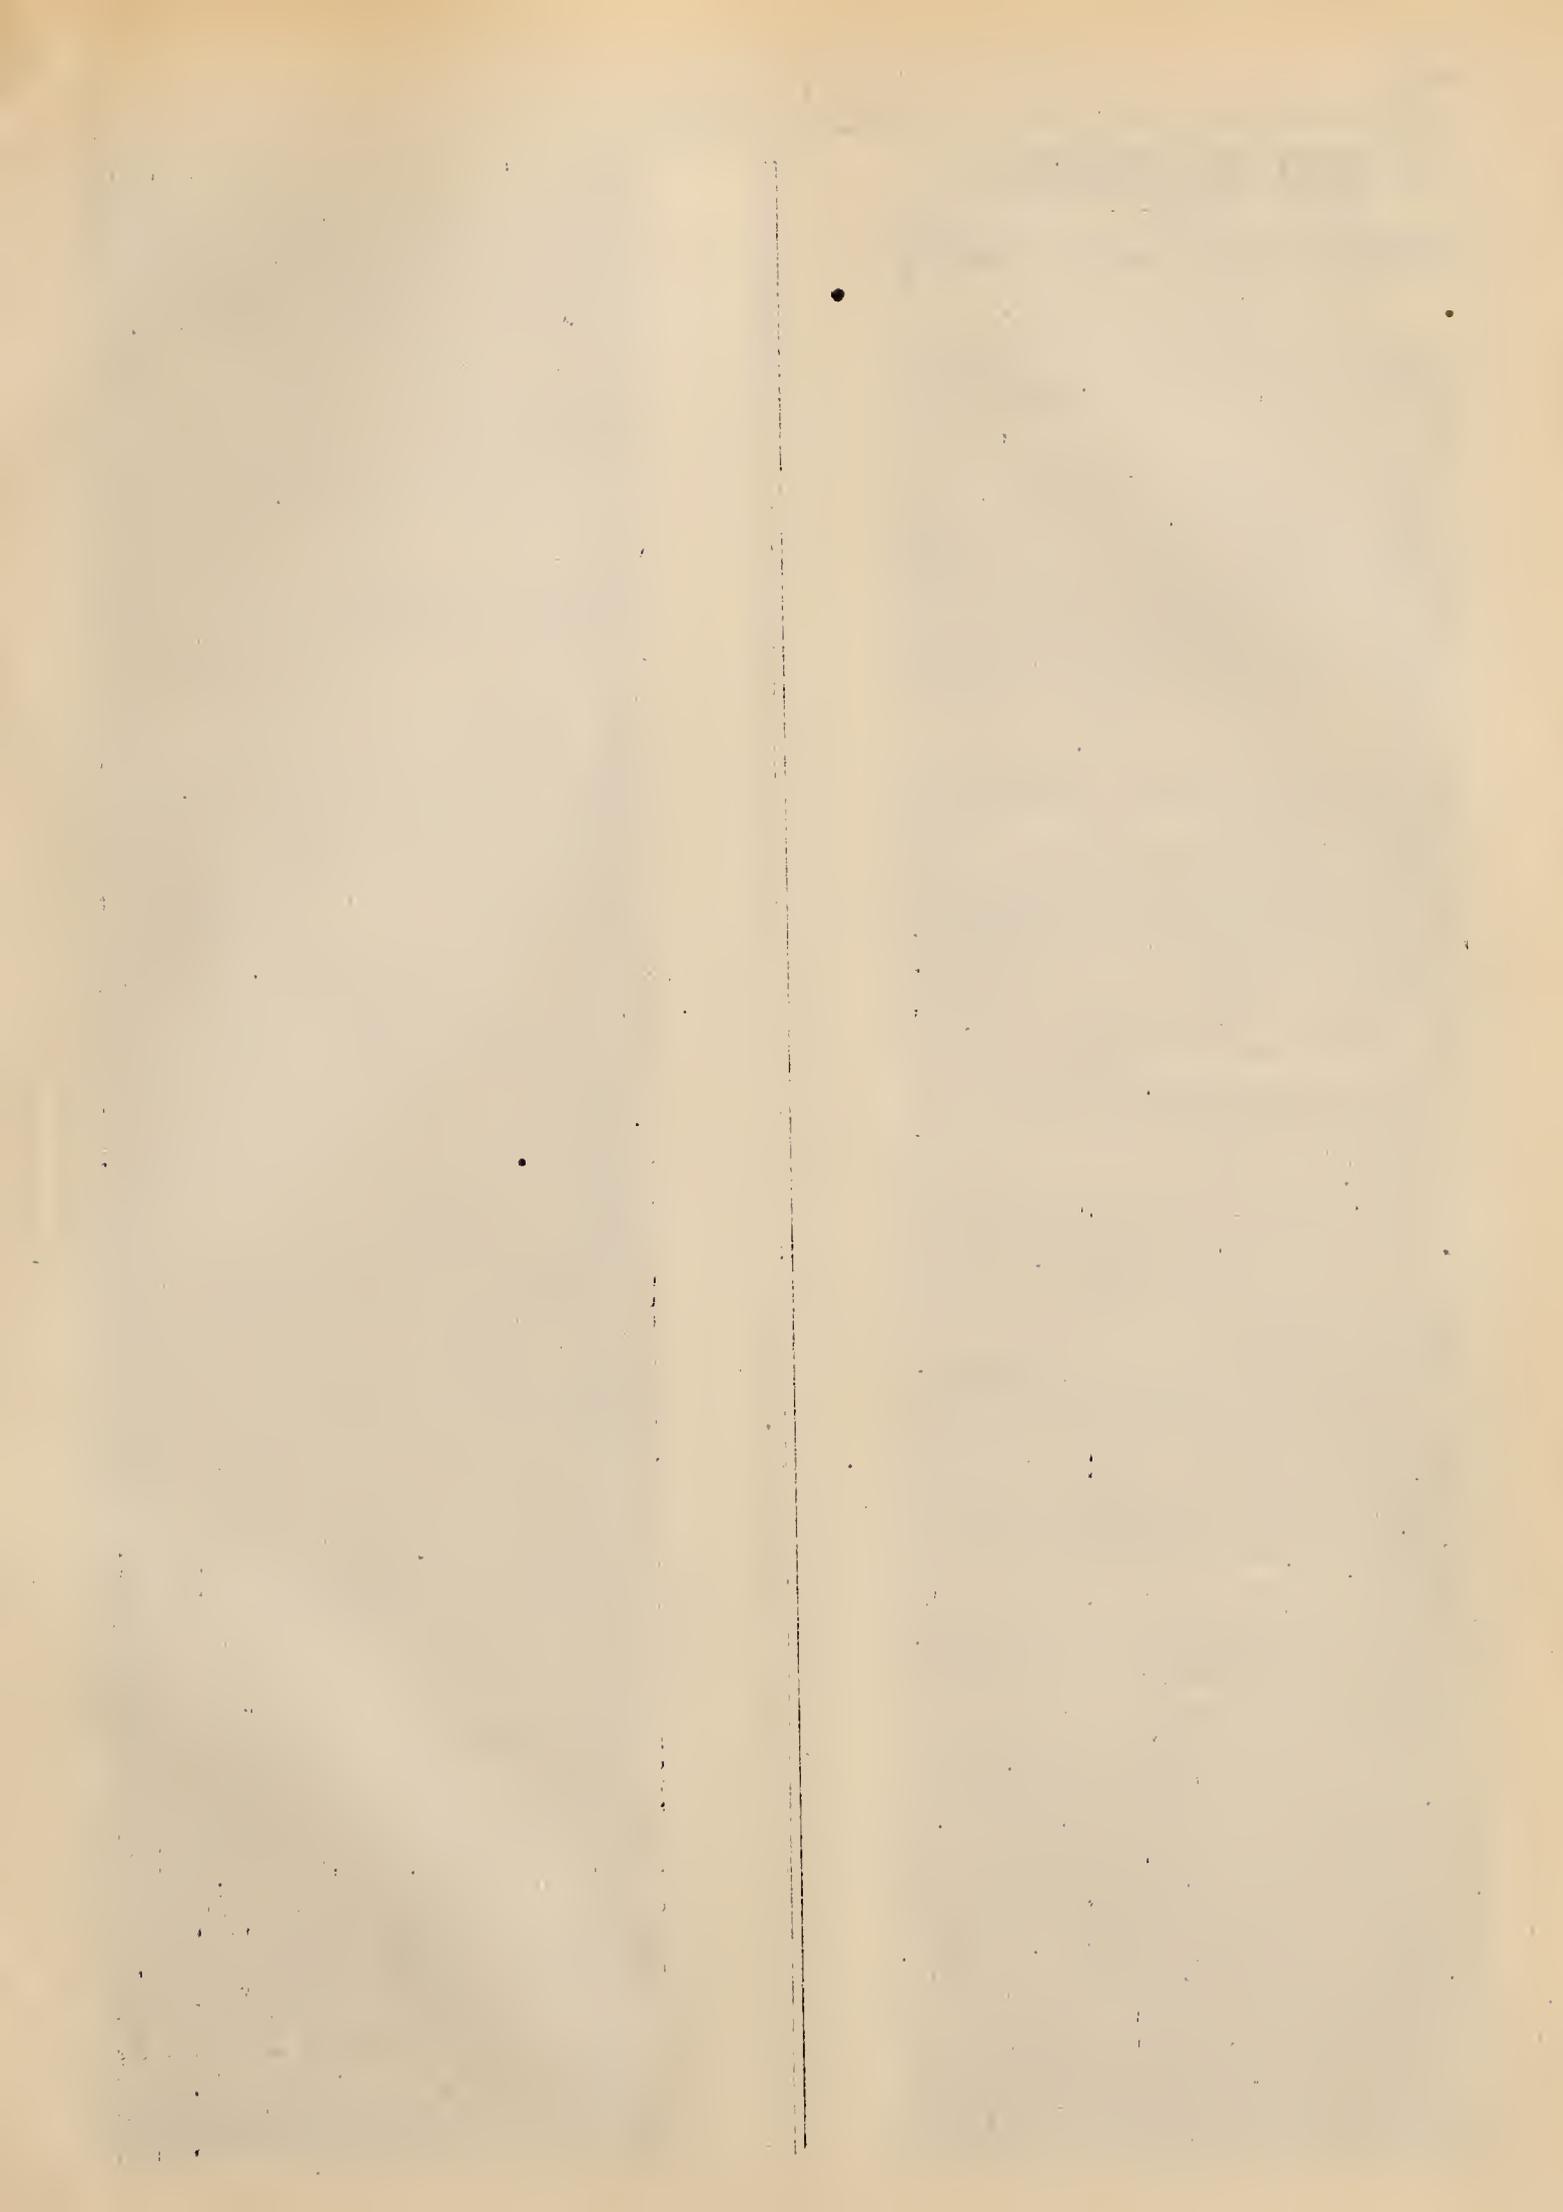

The main question was ordered, and the motion to indefinitely postpone was carried.—Yeas 7, nays 5.

Yeas—Aldermen Bigelow, Brown, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy, Stebbins—7.

Nays—Aldermen Clark, Cutter, Emery, Power, Sayward.

Alderman Stebbins—I voted for this motion although in favor of giving the poor soup if it can be done legally.

On motion of Alderman Brown the Board adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

DECEMBER 26, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of Common Council was held at 7½ o'clock P. M., E. O. Shepard, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The following papers received concurrent action: Petitions were referred.

Reports from the Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, inexpedient to take action in relation to amending the Building law to provide for the laying of fire-proof floors; no action necessary on petition of Joseph Marshall for leave to enlarge his wooden building at 327 Chelsea street; not advisable to extend building limits so as to include Wards 7 and 12; no action necessary for taking of measures to so place the water pipes in buildings as to prevent the water from freezing. Severally accepted.

Report in favor of the request of the Trustees of the Public Library for an additional appropriation of $11,650; and recommending the reference of said request to the Committee on Finance. Report accepted and reference ordered.

Report and orders thanking Hon. Henry L. Pierce for his donation to the Public Library, and approving the action of the Trustees of the Public Library in the matter. Report accepted and orders passed.

Report and order for additional accommodations to be provided for the Heath-street Primary School. Passed, under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Thacher of Ward 15.

Report and order for temporary accommodations to be provided for the primary scholars in the Gibson School District. Report accepted and order read once.

Report and order authorizing changes to be made in the Girls' High School building, to enable the pupils to study photography. Report accepted and order read once.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

Order recommitting the report of the Directors for Public Institutions, with instructions to furnish their reasons, on or before the 29th instant, for not permitting the inmates of said institutions to receive religious instruction from teachers in whom they profess to have faith, came down passed. The question was on concurrence.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—This is a very important matter, Mr. President; indeed, it is something which affects the discipline of the institutions very materially. If this order is passed tonight there can't be a meeting of the Board of Directors until next Monday, which will give them only an hour or two in which to prepare their report. A report upon so important a topic should be prepared with care, and I don't know that there is any exigency requiring immediate action. In order that the matter may receive proper care I move that the order be referred to the next City Council.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—This matter, Mr. President, has been before the Board of Directors for at least nine months. A petition was sent to that board at least nine months ago, they gave the parties a hearing, and they tell us no reason why they should not grant the petition.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—There was a petition before the Board of Directors, but it was not from this Government, and it was not expected that they would report to this Government their decision on that petition. The directors, individually, are ready to report on this matter, to this Government, at any time; but this is a request for a writ in report, and so important a report requires a great deal of time. The directors have never made a report on the subject. Some Catholic clergymen went before them and petitioned for the privilege of holding services at the institutions at certain times; but no action has been taken upon that petition and none has been called. It would be impossible for the directors to get up a report in the short time allowed in this order. By referring the order to the next City Council the subject can receive the consideration it deserves.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I desire, Mr. President, to ask the gentleman from Ward 9 if the directors did not make a report on this subject, the substance of which was that they were the Directors of Public Institutions, and they gave the Council to understand that they had the management and charge of the institutions.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—The trouble was there was a mistake made by the Council. If the vote had gone to the directors as it was intended by the committee the report asked for now would have come. The Council did not ask for what it wanted to know. A certain question was asked and the directors gave a specific answer to that question. It was merely asked if it was necessary to change a rule, and the directors merely answered that it was not necessary to make the change. If the gentleman will read the order and the report he will find it so.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—It seems to me, Mr. President, that the gentleman who represents the board has given very strong reasons why the matter should not be postponed. He admits that the directors are ready and willing to give the information.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—I said they were ready individually.

Mr. Dean—Well, individually they are willing and ready to give the information, and if they are ready to vote upon the question instantly, they can give their reasons. In so plain and simple a matter, Mr. President, as to give their reasons, if there are any; if they have got their minds made up, it will be no difficult thing to state them, — to give the reasons why the inmates of these public institutions should not have teachers of their own religious faith here in Boston, where we can't have a town meeting without passing a resolution that we were the first to establish a form of free government and without its being the standing boast that here every one can worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. If the members of this Board of Directors are prepared and ready, it will not be difficult for them to give such a report. Now then it seems this subject has been before the Board of Directors for nine months; that Catholic clergymen have appeared before them there, and yet during all these nine months nothing has been done. Now, Mr. President, if this has been before them for nine months, it is time something was done. If the City Council has got the supervision of these institutions, in regard to a matter as important as this, I say it is time something was done, and if nothing is done we should have the reasons for not doing it in a more authentic form—in a more permanent shape—than we can get in the statements of the representative of the board on this floor. They have had time enough to consider it, and if their minds are made up, why should not they give us their reasons, and do it now? Something has been said about the subject coming before the directors in the form of an order asking if it was necessary to change the rules, and they replied that it was not. Did that board understand that the great question of religious toleration was before them? that why these clergymen appeared before them was not the mere consideration of a technical question whether their rules should be changed or not? Did they understand that there was an application seeking to obtain for the inmates of the institutions religious instruction from those in whom they believe? I trust, Mr. President, the order will not be passed over, and that the reasons will be called for.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I shall agree with the gentleman from Ward 12, Mr. President, and go a great deal further. It is entirely wrong for this City Government to ignore this question now under consideration. And what is the question? It is in fact that the inmates of the penal institutions shall be allowed to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience. That is the whole of it. Now sir, what say this honorable board, who have in charge those institutions? We have here upon page 531, of our reports, a document from the president of that Board of Directors. It is to this effect. [Mr. Shaw read the report of the Board of Directors to the City Council on this subject.] Now sir, they deem it expedient to prohibit one kind of religious instruction; they have done so and they are doing it today, and a large class of citizens demand, as they have the right, that there shall be another order of religious instruction. But we, sir, in the capacity of a City Council, ask this honorable board why they object to it, and they do not give their reasons—hence this order instructing them, as we have the right to do, to give their reasons. And yet my friend from Ward 9 wants to have this matter prolonged and put over to another City Government. I am in favor of acting upon it tonight, and I am in favor of having the religious instruction required by any class, no matter what, who are represented there. But, sir, there is here a persistent effort, as appears upon record, to disallow and prevent that religious instruction. I hope that this matter will be acted upon here tonight; that the discussion will not be prolonged; that the request of these citizens of Boston shall be allowed and the religious instruction they ask shall be permitted.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2—This matter, Mr. President, is so important, it seems to me, that it ought to be acted upon here, this evening. It has been said that the subject has been before the directors for nine months. I notice that when the vote was passed in the other branch the chairman of the committee made no objection. If it had been too short a time, the chairman would have given some reasons for delay.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—I should be very happy to vote for the order for the Board of Directors to give us their reasons, and I agree with what the gentlemen have said; but it seems to me that the remarks of the gentlemen have not been upon the question before us. They have spoken upon the question of religious toleration, and to that I agree; but the gentleman from Ward 9 rises and asks that they shall have more time. He says that the president of the board cannot inform the members before Monday; that they cannot have a meeting before then. Now the gentleman from Ward 12 says we should have an authentic statement: now to get that we ought to allow them time enough to draw up their report. The gentleman from Ward 12 has asked for more time on subjects for committees on which he has served, and this seems to me a question of courtesy and not of religious toleration. It is whether we shall give the board more time to make their report. They gave us their opinion; now we ask for their reasons. If this order can be amended so as to have them report next week I will vote for it. But to pass the order to instruct them to report next Monday does not give them sufficient time to prepare a proper report.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—The gentleman from Ward 9 has already stated that the directors have made up their minds individually. It will be very easy for them to meet tomorrow, and they will have time to prepare it before Monday afternoon.

Mr. Page of Ward 9—The gentleman very well knows that to give the City Government what they want a report must be written. The president of the board will not be notified of this order till tomorrow morning, and a meeting can't be called until Monday. It will take some time to get their ideas into shape and on paper, to have it properly appear before the City Council. They will have but two or three hours at most. I am perfectly willing to have the order read, so that it will require a report to be made here next Thursday. I think the board are willing to give the City Council their views on the question, but all they ask is sufficient time to put them into such shape that they might be printed. I therefore withdraw my motion to refer to the next City Council, and move to amend by striking out the words "the 29th instant," and insert "January 1st."

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—We have no official information. It may be that the Council can get a report in two hours. That is a good deal of time, and a great many reasons can be given in two hours if your minds are already made up. We have got no information that the chairman of the board has not got his reasons stated in writing now, and all he wants is official action for the board to pass upon them. Of course the gentleman from Ward 9 would not say so. If the board knew they would have to comply they would set about complying. What then is the true course to adopt? Take the reasons given by the gentleman from Ward 10. What should be done? Give the board these instructions and if they have not got time they can say so, in an authentic manner, but let us not avoid coming to action upon it. There is no reason why this should be over, or the time be extended. If they can't make the report in that time let them say so; then we can give such further time as may be necessary.

The amendment was adopted, and the order as amended was passed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order authorizing the employment of additional clerical assistance in the office of the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, at not exceeding $450. Passed, in concurrence.

Order to pay the bill of J. A. & W. Bird & Co., of $90 40, for paint furnished the Fire-Alarm Department. Passed, in concurrence.

Order to pay to Amasa Bird $505 50, for paints, painting, carting, etc., for said department. Passed, in concurrence.

Resolve and order from the Street Commissioners for widening Pearl, near Milk street, at an adjudged expense of $66,440. (City Doc. No. 133.) Passed, in concurrence.

Report and order authorizing the paving of the yard of the Vernon-street Primary Schoolhouse, Washington District. Passed.

Report and order authorizing not exceeding $1200 to be expended in repairing the armory of Company D, First Battalion Cavalry, in Bacon's Building, 1839 Washington street. Passed—yeas 36, nays 0.

Report and order for a transfer from the Reserved Fund of $25,000 to the appropriation for Public Buildings. Passed—yeas 43, nays 0.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Prescott of Ward 9 submitted a report from the Committee on Public Institutions, on so much of the Mayor's address (referred to said committee) as relates to the removal of the House of Correction from South Boston, and the removal of the House of Reformation for Juvenile Offenders from Deer Island. The committee say that although they have not recommended to the City Council any definite action upon the suggestions of the Mayor with regard to these two institutions, they have prepared the way for definite action during the ensuing year, by the selection of a new location for the Home for the Poor. The removal of the paupers from Deer Island to an establishment on the main land, is preliminary to changes in the other institutions, which will follow naturally, and in the order of their necessities. The committee therefore respectfully recommend that the subject be referred to the next City Council.

The report was accepted and the reference ordered.

REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6, from the Committee on Public Lands, submitted a report on the petition of the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital Corporation recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Lands be directed to sell to the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital Corporation, the lot of land on Concord street, east of Harrison avenue, as applied for by them, and containing 25,624 square feet, at one dollar per foot, upon the following terms of sale: one-half of the purchase money to be paid in cash, the balance in five annual instalments of twenty per cent. each with interest at seven per cent., and also upon condition that all buildings erected on said land are to be used for hospital purposes.

The order was passed.

DIRECTORS OF PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

On motion of Mr. Caton of Ward 11, the Council reconsidered the motion referring the resignation of Samuel C Cobb of the position of member of the Board of Directors of Public Institutions, and on motion of Mr. Caton, the subject was referred to the next City Council.

THE SOUP QUESTION.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 offered the following:

In view of the fact that destitution among the poor of our city is now prevailing to an unusual extent for the season, and that the efforts of this branch of the City Council to aid in relieving that distress have to this date been of no avail, the other branch having repeatedly defeated the measure, it is hereby

Resolved, That the Common Council adheres to its previous and repeated declarations, as determined by several almost unanimous votes (the last vote being entirely unanimous) in favor of furnishing, in various convenient localities, the ordinary relief for temporary suffering of persons not coming within the letter of the pauper laws, and in such manner as it has been done by the city's authority from 1868 to 1873, inclusive.

Resolved, That the fact that six only of the seventy-six comprising the City Council stand up in opposition to this measure of relief, should assure the good people of Boston that the heart and judgment of their representatives in this City Council is right, and that only a very small number (though legally qualified to do so) have defeated it.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I don't think it is necessary for me to say a word in advocacy of the passage of that resolution, because I think it speaks for itself. However, I desire to call the attention of the Council for a single moment to the fact that the statute law of the Commonwealth is in my judgment entirely misunderstood by the members of the City Government, and to show that that is a fact I will read from the thirty-first page of the manual of the Overseers of the Poor, to this effect:

"The Overseers of the Poor of each place shall also relieve, support and employ all poor persons residing or found therein, having no lawful settlement within this State, until their removal to a State almshouse, and in case of their decease shall decently bury them," etc.

I find also on the thirtieth page—

"Said overseers, in their respective places shall provide for the immediate comfort and relief of all persons residing or found therein having lawful settlements in other places, when they fall into distress and stand in need of immediate relief, and until they are removed to the places of their lawful settlement," etc.

And in section sixteen, page thirty-two, it says—
"Every city and town shall be held to pay any expense necessarily incurred for the relief of a pauper therein by any person who is not liable by law for his support, after notice and request made," etc.

I want to call the attention of the Council to the fact that by law the Board of Overseers of the Poor of this city are compelled not only to provide for the wants of the people who are not residents, not having a settlement here, but they are compelled by law to give them employment. Now I ask, Mr. President, whether it is done in a single instance in the city of Boston? Here is a statute law printed in the overseers' own manual, and here is hesitation to provide relief for their own citizens contemplated in an order for three or four thousand dollars for the relief of the suffering poor. Now, Mr. President, there is not only no consistency in their acts, but a refusal to comply with the statute law of the Commonwealth. While I speak emphatically on this question, believing that I am right, I have seen fit to offer this resolution, which I offer without disrespect to anybody, and have couched it in such language as will place it on the record of the Council that we stand by the sentiments we have so repeatedly expressed here, that is, that the sentiment of humanity which prevails in our hearts shall be understood by the people. I hope that the resolution which states this fact will not be ignored, and that it shall be received and adopted by unanimous consent. I hope that if any gentleman has anything to say upon the principle which is there enunciated, he will say it in plain and unqualified terms, so that the record will be made here and now, so that if any one makes any objections to the positions of that resolution he will express the sentiment of his heart.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—As far as we can gather from the meaning of the resolution, we resolve that in our past votes, we have done right, and everybody opposed to us has done wrong. Now, while the gentleman says he means no disrespect for any one, I can see disrespect to ourselves in that resolution. I think it would be beneath my dignity to resolve that the votes I had cast are right, and that all opposed to them were wrong. I can see that it would be in bad taste to pass any such resolution. More than that if it is necessary to take such action upon votes in regard to the distribution of soup for the poor, then resolutions are necessary in many other matters in which we differ with the other branch. If the majority are to pass votes that they are right, we can occupy our time in that way for a week. Let our votes stand, and let the community judge between us.

The President—The Chair feels bound to say that there is something in the resolution which seems to reflect a little upon the action of the other branch, which it is entirely unparliamentary to do. Each branch of the City Council is independent of the other. The two branches are coordinate; each has the right to independent action, and it is unparliamentary for one branch to criticize the action of the other. The Chair does not think fit to rule the resolution out of order, but he thinks there is something in it disrespectful to the other branch.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—As I stated, sir, in the outset, I intended no disrespect to anybody. I certainly did not intend any disrespect. I stated the facts as a matter of history, and read them as a matter of record, as it is my right, in my humble opinion, as a member of the City Council, to rise in my place when a question that has been so prominent before the public mind is in any sense of the word under consideration by the representatives of the people, and therefore to state the history of the matter up to the present time. I have carefully drawn that resolution, Mr. President. It is no hurried or hasty action; it is drawn with entire respect to every member of the City Council. It is meant in its terms to be plain and distinct; it is an unqualified statement of fact, gainsay it who may; it is the record made here and for all time. Hence I have seen fit to refer to it in a proper and a parliamentary way. I introduce it, sir, as a resolution, that it may go upon the records of this body. It is not intended to go outside of this room, but it does seem to me, with the little parliamentary experience I have had, to be proper in this place. It is an expression of the sentiment of this body, as unanimously expressed at the last meeting, and it does seem to me as you have well ruled, Mr. President, that it is in order, but at the same time, I shall not cavil at any modification, if any gentleman shall see fit to offer an amendment which is plain and will express the sentiment which I hold, and as I believe a majority here entertain. It is a matter worthy of consideration. It is a matter for every gentleman here to rise in his place and discuss. It is a matter of principle with me, and I have not a doubt that it is so with the gentlemen who sit around me; and I shall hope if any gentleman see fit to move an amendment or modification, he will do so, that the matter may be considered by the body personally.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—It seems to me that we have got business of more importance than this to attend to; and furthermore, as I consider that we shall be wanting in self-respect if we pass that resolution, I move its indefinite postponement.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—Mr. President, I shall vote for the indefinite postponement of this resolution. I agree with the criticisms upon it by the gentleman from Ward 9. I don't see that the resolution adds at all to the strength of the position of this body. I should not deem it necessary for myself to vote that I adhere to my former opinions upon a subject that I thought at that time were right; that I recognize the fact that I was acting conscientiously. I regret very much that the provision for soup for the poor was not passed. I see in every effort that was made to oppose it, a strong reason in its favor. I have not seen, Mr. President, a single argument bearing against the established policy of distributing soup at the police stations. I have seen statements made with great apparent confidence, that were made as if calculated to put the subject forever at rest; and yet those statements, which were made on that side for the purpose of putting the subject forever at rest, so that anybody who afterwards presumed to speak in favor of soup distribution at the police stations would be regarded as foolish, to my mind have been the strongest arguments in favor of it. I noticed a statement in the communication from the Overseers of the Poor, that when a person took the slightest relief from the public that very moment the position of that individual towards society was changed, and that very moment you must consider him as an outlaw. I do not consider that the more fortunate of the community have the right to say that the poor and unfortunate have their positions towards society changed simply because they are poor. So far as my position is concerned, I trust that I shall adhere to that sentiment, and having voted and expressed myself in that direction, I should not consider it parliamentary to vote over and over again that I was right. There was another argument made by Rev. E. E. Hale, in a letter to a gentleman in the other branch, wherein he stated that he had taken special pains, by means of ten students for the ministry, to ascertain the names and residences of the persons who applied for soup, and it could not be found where they stayed or where they lived, and it was utterly impossible to find anybody of the poor of his own parish who would owe to having received any relief from soup, because they considered it disgraceful, and it had never been done except in one instance, when he sent a woman himself to get the soup. Now, while he was undertaking to show that it was unnecessary that soup should be distributed because in his parish everybody was cared for, he discloses one significant fact, which is that there are people in this community—hundreds and I don't know but thousands—who will go where soup is distributed, sneaking into the police stations, giving false names simply and solely for the purpose of getting a meal of four or five or six cents' value, but are actually ashamed of their poverty, ashamed to acknowledge their condition, though they go to the soup house to get soup. That there are cases of destitution which he could not find, that there are people in his society that he could not ferret out, is made distinctly manifest. In other words, the necessity of this relief is made more manifest by this attempt to prove that it is unnecessary than by any argument stated or brought forth on the other side. Therefore, I regret very much that this institution for relief should not be established; but, notwithstanding that, I shall vote for the indefinite postponement of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Ward 5. I wish he would be good enough to withdraw it. He does not add to his position by it; the Council will not add to its position by expressing its opinion over and over again.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I introduced this resolution for two purposes; one of which was to state the fact which I have stated and which has been denied about City Hall, and that is that the Board of Overseers of the Poor are compelled to employ anybody found destitute in the city. I have now made my record upon it, and as my friend from Ward 12 has said that it is unnecessary, and as other gentlemen have expressed opposition to it, and with the understanding of the case, I now withdraw the resolution.

The President—If there is no objection, the resolution is withdrawn.

ORDERS.

On motion of Mr. Denny of Ward 9—

Ordered, That the Committee on Health be and they are hereby authorized to award the contract for removing horse offal from East Boston for the term of three years from January 1, 1874, to the lowest bidder who shall give a sufficient guarantee to the city, said work to be performed to the satisfaction of the Board of Health.

Passed.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9—

Ordered, That the Committee on Printing be authorized to prepare, or cause to be prepared, an index to the proceedings of the City Council during the current year, and have the same printed and bound with the copies of said proceedings furnished to members of the City Council and city officials; the expense to be charged to the Committee on Printing.

Passed.

On motion of Mr. Prescott of Ward 9—

Ordered, That the Board of Directors for Public Institutions be instructed to procure and submit to the next City Council, as early as practicable, plans and estimates for the construction of a Home for the Poor on the Austin farm, recently purchased for that purpose by the city; and the Auditor of Accounts is hereby authorized to transfer from the appropriation heretofore made for building a Home for the Poor at Deer Island, a sufficient sum of money to pay the expense of procuring said plans and estimates.

The rules being suspended, and the order put upon its passage, it was lost—yeas 41, nays 1, two-thirds of the Council not voting in favor. The vote was reconsidered, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, and the order laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—

Ordered, That the following bills for extra services performed by officers in the employ of the City Government be allowed for payment by the Auditor of Accounts, provided they are approved in the usual manner: John S. Cook, $25; S. B. Heustis, $16.

Passed, under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Pickering.

ANNEXATION OF BROOKLINE.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 called up the special assignment, being the report and order instructing the Committee on Legislative Matters to favor any petition, by inhabitants of Brookline, for such a change of boundary as shall bring the main conduits and lines of connection between the reservoirs of the Boston Water Works within the city limits; and the report and order for the Mayor to petition the General Court to annex so much of Brookline to Boston as lies north of the southerly line of Brighton avenue, with such other lands as may be necessary or proper to form a suitable connection between Brighton and the old portion of the city.

The question was on giving the first order named a second reading.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 called attention to the fact that he had previously withdrawn his minority report. The last report of the committee is supplementary. At the last meeting of the Council there was some doubt expressed by members as to what citizens of Brookline asked for, and to make to make everything plain a map had been brought, showing the proposed line which the petitioners propose to make.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—If I understand this matter now under consideration, Mr. President, it is that the report and order instructing the Committee on Legislative Matters to favor any petition of inhabitants of Brookline for such change of boundary as shall bring the main conduits and lines of connection between the reservoirs of the Boston Water Works within the city limits. Now, Mr. President, I have had some experience in legislation, and I must say this is a most extraordinary request, that the City Council shall favor any petition—no matter what it is, who it comes from, and upon what conditions—"any petition" of inhabitants of Brookline for a change of boundary. Now there may be forty different clans and cliques, and to my certain knowledge there are half a dozen now in Brookline, who have different views and ideas in regard to this question of annexation of that territory to Boston. Now, here is a sweeping clause, that we are called upon to pledge ourselves to vote in favor of any petition. Well, suppose there are half a dozen petitions. Suppose there are but two; we place ourselves on record as favoring "any petition," and to be consistent, it seems to me we have got to favor both of them. The report does not advance any particular line or proposition. Now, sir, the proposed line may run directly through Beacon street to the reservoir; it may run partially through Beacon street and then diverge to the reservoir, as some parties have got it; and, as a map I have seen portraying it, it may diverge from Beacon street toward the south, and then run into Boylston street. Now, I was told that the line which is proposed here is not that line, and I was also told by a member of the Committee on Legislative Matters who heard these petitioners, that he never agreed to any such proposition as that which is now before us. He never signed the report and never agreed to any such proposition. Well, as I said at the last meeting, we are now on the heels of this City Government. One week more and we shall be dead, so far as this City Council is concerned. Now I ask why we should be called upon to instruct our legislative committee of three honorable gentlemen to go before the Legislature—these gentlemen going out of office on the last day of this year—and favor "any petition" of citizens of Brookline for the annexation to Boston of such territory in that town as shall contain certain water pipes. It is unnecessary to repeat what I have said before, and every man of common sense knows that strictly upon this order half a dozen sets of petitions may come before the Legislature, and we will be called upon to favor any of them. That is the language. I say it is—I don't know what to call it—it is one of those things which never was contemplated by any legislative body. It was said we are asked to confine ourselves to one reasonable proposition; we could accept it or vote it down, as we saw fit. But even then it seems to me, to be uncalled for. We are called upon to place upon record a statement and vote that we favor the petition of any citizen of Brookline to do a certain thing, or to do what I shall call voting for an uncertain thing. If the gentleman who got up this order would state the boundary, and through what streets it proceeds, that would give us some light. I find no line defined; I find nothing that we can act upon as intelligent people and I can see no necessity for any action whatever. Therefore, Mr. President, I move that the whole matter be referred to the next City Government.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—There are two propositions assigned, the one now before us, and the other, which would perhaps have presented the situations of the question before the Council in better shape. As is well known, the city of Boston is now divided into two parts by the town of Brookline. This second order provides for the annexation to Boston of so much of Brookline as lies north of southerly line of Brighton avenue, with such other lands as may be necessary or proper to form a suitable connection between Brighton and the old portion of the city. That is a well-defined order providing for a well-defined way, which is the smallest that will possibly answer. The situation is such that here is a street running along tide water, and the order asks that that street and all between it and tide water be annexed, which is the smallest that the city could make. And even that provides for the annexation of such other lines as might be necessary to give suitable connection between Brighton and the old portion of the city. That is something which the city of Boston, as it seems to me, has a right to claim. This first order is another thing. It is not so important, so essential, so necessary, for us that this order should pass as the one to which I refer, and the majority of the committee didn't consider that it was so essential or necessary. But we did see no reason whatever why it should not pass; we did not see any objection to it, and I can't see any objection. The city of Boston had already, by a large majority, voted in favor of the annexation of Brookline. I was not an annexationist. I would rather each municipality be separate and distinct, having a local government for small matters, and some central board to take care of matters in common, such as sewers and streets. But that has passed, and Brighton being annexed, makes it necessary that a part of Brookline should be annexed. The people residing in that section where the reservoirs and the Boston Water Works are located, have come and asked that that section be annexed. Now, then, it would be a good thing for the City of Boston to have that property, in the present state of the annexation question. The committee are inclined to favor that proposition, and therefore when these citizens came and said this second order would practically shut them out, the committee said it was no part of their intention to narrow the question. Therefore they reported this first order. It proposes to annex that part of Brookline in which the city property is located. The city of Boston don't take the initiative in this. Certainly, I don't understand that this order means that the present Committee on Legislative Matters shall live over through next year, for if it did I should not favor it. The present committee is no longer the Committee on Legislative Affairs when the Council adjourns, but the city may still continue it by appointment of the proper officers.

Mr. Train of Ward 13—I suppose, Mr. President, we are all anxious to see a connection between the old portion of the city and the part called Brighton, but I can't see any force in the argument to pass this order now. I think it would be best to refer it to the next City Government, and when the petition comes in then it will be time enough to instruct the committee to favor that petition. There seems to be no well defined proposition. There seem to be two or three plans. I think it is eminently proper to refer this matter to the next City Council, and it will be time enough for them to act.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—I agree with the remarks of the gentleman from Ward 13 entirely. It is an important matter; we shall soon cease to live as a Council, and it is eminently proper that it shall be passed over to the next City Government.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I think the objection to laying it over to the next City Government is that the next Council won't get to work before it is necessary for this petition to be put into the Legislature. It is perfectly proper to instruct the Mayor to petition for the annexation of this territory, and that is the same as instructing the Committee on Legislative Affairs to favor anything in the General Court. It is the same thing. I should like to know what good reason there is for having it laid over. I don't care if there were a dozen different petitions. Suppose there were a dozen—all that this order commits the next City Government to is to simply favor such a petition as shall bring about the annexation to Boston that part of the territory of Brookline in which the property of Boston lies. If that is n't clear I don't know what is. As it is now there is a petition, very generally signed, to be presented to the next Legislature by inhabitants of Brookline who live on the territory readily indicated on the map, that is to say, those who live between Longwood avenue, Beacon street and Brighton avenue and between the line of Beacon street and the old Brookline Reservoir—the owners of seven hundred of the nine hundred acres—have signed that petition. This thing is perfectly clear before us. Does anybody object to the annexation of the whole of Brookline? If there is any objection why should n't it come out now? Why should n't it be discussed? The gentleman wants it laid over; let him assign a reason. I was in favor originally of taking the line of Beacon street as proposed by the gentleman from Ward 14, but when these petitioners came before us and said, "Don't order your committee to the next Legislature and say the city of Boston is bound to oppose anything outside of a particular line without instructions from the City Council. Now if the city of Boston is in favor of taking in that large part of the town of Brookline inhabited by large taxpayers I don't see any reason why we should n't act."

Mr. Train of Ward 13—I said when I rose that I don't object to the annexation of Brookline, or a part of it; and I am opposed to referring to the next City Council any definite business—anything that we know about. But this business is not definite; the Council don't understand it. I go for annexing the whole of Brookline, and if no the whole a part; when the proper territory is decided upon let us instruct our committee to act upon it. I can't see that anything will be lost to turn matters over to the next City Council.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—As I remarked at the last meeting, I thought it was perfectly proper for this City Government to act upon this matter; and as the gentleman from Ward 6 has remarked, the next City Council won't be in order to properly present this petition. During the discussion I have n't found any gentleman opposed to the annexation of Brookline to Boston. Now, the line marked out by nine-tenths of the citizens of Boston is the one which it is proposed to take. It is the policy of Boston to include within her territory the property of the city in the town of Brookline. I hope this order will be passed tonight. The residents of Longwood have delineated their preference on the map there, and any one can see it.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—It seems to me, Mr. President, this matter is peculiarly the property of the next City Council. The lines are indefinite, as I understand it, and when a committee from this body go to the Legislature, next session, no matter whether they go to the first or last of it, they will be instructed more thoroughly than we can instruct them tonight, for then they will have behind them the vote of the whole city—and a very large vote—to take the whole of Brookline. Boston has placed itself on record; we want the whole of Brookline. The Legislative Committee will consider this subject among the first; they will hear gentlemen from Brookline and from Boston, and they can better determine what is best. We shall have gentlemen in that body next year—the able gentleman from Ward 6, who advocates this resolution,—to protect the city's interests; we shall have gentlemen there, no doubt, who will represent the idea of Boston to get as much as we can of Brookline. I think it very proper that this matter should go to the next City Council, who can instruct the committee as they please. I hope the motion to postpone will prevail, for I can't see how any vote of ours will affect the Legislature or our committee in the next Legislature. We shall have the able gentleman from Ward 6 and several others from this body to represent the views of the city of Boston in the Legislature. The city of Boston will have its views thoroughly protected there, and I can't see any necessity for taking any action tonight in regard to boundaries with the outlying wards.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14—As we don't object to the annexation of Brookline, I can't see how any one can object to the line proposed. As we all agree that we want Brookline it is easy to go for this thing because there is no line stated.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I would n't rise again, except that I have heard it so many times repeated that it is necessary for the city to control her own property in her own district. Now it is twenty-five years since those pipes were laid in the town of Brookline to conduct the water to the city of Boston, and not a voice has been raised here to the effect that the city should control this property; not a question has ever been raised between the city of Boston or Brookline as to the control of the property under the soil, and the city of Boston controls nothing above the soil. If we vote tonight we shall vote blindly. When a hearing can be had before an honorable committee then it is proper to have the report here which shall cover the main reasons in the case. My friend from Ward 6 gives no reason. That gentleman forgets that his eminent ability is to carry on the Legislature for the next six months; he seems to intimate that, whoever is appointed President the coming year will not appoint the committee before the Legislature adjourns. What is the necessity of hurrying the matter. If it is good it will keep, and if it is n't it won't.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I don't consider, Mr. President, that any long harangues from me will keep the Legislature in session till next June, but I am afraid the gentleman from Ward 5 will.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—That is so.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I look upon the gentleman from Ward 5 as my fate. He pursues me. I have listened to him upon soup, and every other subject, and I fully expect to see him telling the Legislature that Boston is opposed to the annexation of Brookline. He will tell the Legislature this proposition was voted down, and I want to cut off such an opportunity for him. I don't want him to say this. I know he is opposed to the annexation of Brookline; he has old ties which are so strong, and he don't wish to see his residence divided, but I don't think that is the sentiment of this Council. If gentlemen here favor annexation why should n't they vote for it.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—The gentleman says he wants to cut me off. It is n't the first time,—but the biter got bitten. He wants, he says, to try to prevent me severing my connection with Brookline. I repeat it here that I am in favor of the annexation of Brookline, and if we can't get the whole of it take a part, and I am willing to put myself upon record. If we vote upon it tonight we don't know what we are voting about. I don't question the gentleman's ability to make long speeches, but I sometimes question their substances, as I have a right to do. If I go to the Legislature I shall do what I believe I have the right to do, notwithstanding the gentleman from Ward 6. He may try to cut me off; perhaps he will try to do the same thing that he did at the Parker House last winter, over his fat dinners, when he tried to discourage the members of the Council from voting that my seat should n't be retained. I know the gentleman and his animus. He read all the books, but out of all of them he could n't read enough law to cut me off. I don't mean to be personal or disrespectful to any member here, but when any member attacks me he will get as good as he sends. Now, Mr. President, I say that no member has expressed himself as unqualifiedly as I have. The gentleman does n't state the truth when he rises here and says I am opposed to the annexation of Brookline to Boston. I have said here more than once that I would go much farther in annexation than has been proposed in this City Government. If I had my way I would take in a circle of ten miles. Now that goes upon record, and the gentleman may qualify it if he can. I dislike personalities, but when a gentleman rises here, and makes a statement that is n't true, I shall deny it. My only opposition to it is that the gentleman from Ward 6 represents a private personal interest in trying to drive through certain matters which are against the public interest. It is patent upon its face. When I am told by a member of an honorable committee that the order brought here don't receive his sanction, then I say that as coming from the committee, I doubt the propriety of accepting that order; much more do I doubt the propriety of accepting it at this time, when, as these gentlemen have stated repeatedly, this Council is soon to go out, and as the gentleman said, his committee has n't expected to act upon it before they do go out. Now what is contemplated? that this committee shall go before the Legislature and approve any petition which citizens of Brookline may present in favor of annexing any portion of that town to Boston? I say again that it is n't within the line of propriety, to say the least, and as a measure of policy it certainly is n't within the interest of the city.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I don't object to the gentleman from Ward 5 boring me to death with his long speeches, but I do object to his making insinuations that even he does n't believe to be true. When he says I represent any private interest he states what he knows is false. I haven't seen any one except at the hearing for the petitioners from Brookline.

The motion to refer to the next City Government was carried by a rising vote—19 for, 17 against.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend an additional sum not exceeding four thousand five hundred dollars in providing labor and team work in their department during the remainder of the financial year; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Passed under a suspension of the rules.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, it was ordered that when the Council adjourn, it be to Thursday afternoon, January 1, at three o'clock P. M.

On motion of Mr. Prescott of Ward 9, the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
DECEMBER 29, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at four o'clock P. M., Alderman Cutter, chairman, presiding.

JURORS DRAWN.

Thirty-six traverse and twenty-two grand jurors were drawn for the January term of the Superior Criminal Court.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS.

Members of the Police Force—John C. Bull, Samuel Frost, Alonzo Burnham, Thomas Carey. Referred, on motion of Alderman Gibson, to the Committee on Police.

Special Police without pay—Charles H. Andrews, for Richmond street and vicinity. Confirmed.

PETITIONS REFERRED.

To the Committee on Health on the Part of the Board. Peck & Hall, for leave to occupy a brick stable for seventy horses on Lancaster street, Nos. 19 and 21.

To the Committee on Paving. Alonzo Bowers, to be paid for grade damages on Marion street.

To the Committee on Licenses. Somers set Club, for leave to maintain a bowling alley on their premises.

To the Committee on Claims. Eben B. Phillips et al., owners of estates on the burnt district, to be paid for delay on part of the city in arranging new lines of streets, etc.

JAIL EXPENSES.

A requisition was received from the sheriff of Suffolk County for $2057 69, which, being duly audited, was ordered paid.

SIDEWALK ASSESSMENTS.

A schedule of assessments for sidewalks on Tremont street, between Ruggles and Parker streets, amounting to $2259 75, was received from the Superintendent of Streets and referred to the Committee on Paving.

EASTERN AVENUE.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the laying out of Eastern avenue, in continuation of Congress street, from Broad street to the Harbor Commissioners' line, at an estimated expense of $99,780. Referred, on motion of Alderman Clark, to the Joint Committee on Streets.

The following orders came up as unfinished business, and were severally passed:

Report and order to allow Aaron D. Williams to erect on Farnham street a wooden building beyond the usual dimensions.

Orders to pay Harriet F. Nevins, $4900 00, Congress street; Theodore Harrington, $1800 00, Federal street; Massachusetts Baptist Convention, $10,146 00, Washington street; Mary A. Chase, $260 00, Thornton street; Bernard Foley et al., $8472 10, Magazine street; Henry & Jacob Pfaff, $20,800 00, Congress street; Timothy McCarthy's heirs, $1984 00, Quincy place; Solomon Wilde's heirs, $188,248 00, Washington street.

THE ANNEXATION PROBLEM.

The report and order for Committee on Legislative Affairs to advocate the annexation of Winthrop to Boston came up in the regular order of proceedings as unfinished business, the question being on the passage of the order.

Alderman Quincy—Mr. Chairman, in the report (City Document No. 127) made on the subject of setting off Chelsea to Middlesex County, the committee in closing their report have stated—

"It is somewhat surprising that such an anomalous condition of things should have been suffered to continue so long; and it seems necessary only to call the attention of the Government to the subject in order to have the present arrangement terminated, either by annexation of Chelsea and the two towns to Boston, or to another county. The committee would, therefore, respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court, at its next session, for the passage of an act to set off the city of Chelsea and the towns of Revere and Winthrop from the county of Suffolk and annex them to the county of Middlesex."

Since that time, Mr. Chairman, some of the inhabitants of Winthrop have held a large meeting—I believe almost all the inhabitants of the town participated in it—at which they passed a resolution expressing a preference to be annexed to the city of Boston rather than to be set off to Middlesex County, and rather than be set off to Middlesex County they would prefer to be annexed to Essex County, and if neither of these arrangements could be made they would prefer to contribute their share of the county expenses. The committee was directed to give the petitioners a hearing, and it appeared from the evidence that in some respects it would be best that an annexation should take place. If gentlemen will look at the map they will see that it would be desirable to have the lines of the upper harbor within the city of Boston. The town of Winthrop is interpolated in the territory of the city of Boston, and our voters on Long Island and Deer Island have to go through that town to get to East Boston where they vote.

In view of the fact that the Harbor Commissioners have suggested a sea wall along this line, it seems desirable that the proposed annexation should take place, and also in view of the fact that the town of Winthrop lies in the overland route to our institutions at Deer Island—for these reasons it seemed to be well to instruct the committee not to oppose the annexation of Winthrop to the city of Boston, rather than to favor its setting off to Middlesex County, for which the Mayor has already petitioned.

Alderman Hulbert—Mr. Chairman, I have given this matter a few thoughts since the meeting last week, and I must say that I differ in my opinion from that of the Committee on Legislative Affairs, and I will briefly give my reasons. This is opening up a new chapter; it also seems to me that, as a city, we are embarking upon an unknown sea. This matter of annexation, in my opinion, is going too fast and too far. It is as yet an experiment with the city of Boston, and can be termed nothing less than an experiment, the results of which do not yet appear. To be sure we annexed the old city of Roxbury, but that was a thing by itself. Roxbury was a part of the city proper before; there was only an imaginary line between; it was a city of large population, thoroughly identified with the interests of Boston. But with the union of the town of Dorchester with the city of Boston there began a new species of annexation, if I may use that term. We annexed some thirty-five acres of taxable land. In the remarks I made at the last meeting, I stated that the town of Dorchester does not contribute to the common purse six-tenths of the amount expended for her benefit. Each one of the recently annexed sections—even Charlestown, with its dense population and small area—will cause a direct tax upon the main city. None of those places will pay their own bills for years to come. We are passing through a transition state. Up to within a short time Boston has been herself, but how long she can continue to be herself is an open question in my mind. I wish to call your attention to the city as it now stands. The area of Boston, including Dorchester—the taxable area—is 9583 acres. There will be added by the annexation of Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton, 9517 acres, making a total of 19,100 acres. By recent annexation we have doubled our area, and of this new area I don't suppose there is more than one-tenth densely settled—the rest being what is called sparsely settled, not exactly open country, but a great deal of it detached residences. Now Boston, before the last annexation, had—including Dorchester—224 miles of streets to care for; by the last annexation she has added 141 miles of streets already existing; but, as every gentleman knows, that is only a moderate proportion of the streets yet to be created in that area. In speaking of our position, I suppose we may as well admit that the annexation of Brookline will become a fact; then Boston will have a taxable area of 23,100 acres, with a total length of streets of over 400 miles, the expense of which Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton, with Dorchester, will pay but one seventh, leaving the old city of Boston and the Highlands to pay six-sevenths. And we all know that the expense of this newly-acquired territory will not be pro rata, but far in excess of that, and become a direct tax upon the taxpayers of the main city today. New York has some 14,500 acres in area; while Boston will have, after January 1, 19,100 acres, and if Brookline is added, she will have 23,100. Now, what is contemplated by this order is the entering wedge to the annexation of more territory on the other side of the Charles River. It is a new departure in annexation. I ask, if we, as a city, are in a condition for any such thing. I say we are not. Winthrop is a town of 880 acres, of which 180 acres are marsh and low land, with a population of a few hundred, no sewerage, no conveniences that belong to those territories which have been annexed. They will want everything, Winthrop has ten miles of streets

—I know that there are parties there who have taken up lands, and I have no doubt they will be greatly pleased if Winthrop is taken within the city of Boston, and receives the benefits of schoolhouses and public institutions. It will be a grand arrangement for them. When these places are annexed they will call for and insist upon those conveniences which appertain to a city—streets, sewerage, water supply, Fire Department, police and all those things which cost large amounts. Now, I contend that we cannot think of Winthrop without calling to mind the whole retinue of towns and cities northward of Boston, most of which have given notice of an application to be annexed to Boston. I would like to call your attention to the case as it will stand when those places which have asked for it shall be annexed to Boston. Cambridge, Somerville, Medford, Malden, Everett, Winthrop, Revere, Chelsea and Watertown—I say nothing of Arlington and Belmont—have 327 miles of streets to take care of, and a taxable area of 23,000 acres. When those places are annexed there will be over 725 miles of streets to care for, instead of 224 as now; there will be 46,000 acres of taxable area instead of 9600 as now. And of the total expense pertaining to the carrying on of the city, as it will be then, fully seventy-five per cent. will fall upon the present city of Boston. Should these towns be annexed, there will be an area more than three times that of New York. Bear in mind, also, that all these places have nothing to bring us. They are of no advantage to us. They come to receive, not to give; what they require is a very large matter; to do all they will require will cost far in excess of anything they can contribute to the common purse. They cover an immense area. There is another thing, gentlemen, for we may as well speak out in meeting, first as last. Every one of these towns and cities is a distinct section; they have their own peculiar wants; those wants will need to be urged at City Hall; when you get them all in you have got a vast power all around you, and yet is not in the old city. Now, you know what human nature is—and I suppose it is going to continue for years longer—and I'll venture to say that in a few years this surrounding influence will control this city. Those outlying districts can be made a Hoosac Tunnel; they can combine together and control matters here at the City Hall, and the taxpayers of the present city, while paying seventy-five per cent. of the expense will be powerless to control or direct expenditures. The main city, which has been neglected this year and last year, should be cared for. Here is the main question: These outlying sections will want their pet schemes carried out; there will be an immense pressure to carry them out. There is an element of danger and weakness if all these towns and cities are to be brought in here. With the territory that is annexed we shall on the first of January be fifty per cent. larger than New York city; when Brookline is annexed we shall, of course, be larger still. We have taken in Dorchester, which is but the semblance of the whole territory to be annexed. I contend that we should wait until we see how this thing works, until annexation has been tried and proved, and not go on and get the city into a condition that is irretrievable. If it proves mutually good, and not evil to one, we should ascertain that fact by actual experience; when it is demonstrated will be time enough to decide upon taking in this whole section north of the city. When an annexation proves by experience to be the best policy it is the easiest thing in the world to extend our borders; these places will be none the less anxious to come in when they are wanted. Mr. Chairman, I wish this Board would consider the additional labor, expense and taxation involved in this annexation. It is without precedent. The cities of the Old World do not increase so. It is not simply Winthrop alone; I consider Winthrop merely as one of the series. I have no doubt a great many parties have purchased real estate with the view of this thing coming about at some day. Some of them are my friends, but what is that to do with the case? I believe it will be a sad day for Boston when we enter the wedge for any further annexation. I would like to see the thing stopped where it is, and I believe the interests of the city would be subserved by stopping where it is. Therefore, as I see nothing but an immense expense to follow from the annexation of territory beyond what has been annexed already—gentlemen will understand that I include Brookline; I admit that the annexation of Brookline is best—as I see nothing but an enormous expense far beyond what any of these cities or towns will contribute, thereby leaving a heavy tax upon the main city, I oppose the adoption of this order. We are to pay largely for the conveniences those places are to have; that is the arithmetic side of it. The day may come when it is best, but today I believe a worse thing cannot be done for the city of Boston. We are not strong enough yet; it will weaken us. What the future may bring I do not pretend to state; but I do think that before we annex another piece of territory, we should wait and see what is the result of what we have done. I know that annexation is "on the brain" and it seems to me it will be a fatal mistake if this thing is allowed to take place. By the way, one of the reasons I see given for annexation of Winthrop is with reference to the harbor lines. I saw one of the Harbor Commissioners and asked him what force there was in that argument, and he said there was none at all; that the city of Boston can have what she wants done to the harbor today.

Alderman Sayward—I rise, Mr. Chairman, not for the purpose of making an argument on this matter; but the gentleman has alluded several times to the expense of Dorchester—how little she pays, and how much she gets, but he avoids saying what proportion Roxbury pays for what benefit she gets. I judge he means that Boston is a great deal worse for having annexed Charlestown, West Roxbury, Brighton and Dorchester—and now this small piece of territory comes with nothing to give, but all to receive. We have been told that it is more blessed to give than to receive; how blessed Boston will be if she gives all that will be asked of her by this little spot.

Alderman Hulbert—Mr. Chairman, I simply stated as a fact that Dorchester does not pay into the treasury what is expended for her. The same will be true of Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton. The question is, how long the city proper can go on and take these additional burdens. I advocate waiting, instead of increasing those burdens. I am prepared to prove that this annexation is a great burden upon the city proper. It is on that ground that I stand. I say now is the time to stop. I take notice of the applications already made, and say that in my judgment the thing ought not to go any further until we know what the consequences are.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman avoids the question. I asked what proportion the Highlands pay for the benefits they get.

Alderman Hulbert—In what I said I made no reflection upon Dorchester at all. It was by a great deal of labor that I gained the statistics in regard to Dorchester, and I gave the facts simply.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman does not answer the question, but one thing I will say which he will not deny, Roxbury has not paid anything like her proportional part for the benefits she has received.

Alderman Gibson—I heartily indorse most of the argument of the gentleman from the Highlands, but the main subject is not being considered by this Board now. The town of Winthrop is a small spot, and I think the gentleman should confine himself to that. I think he will endorse the statement that the annexation of Winthrop will bring the harbor lines within the control of Boston. It is only a connecting piece; I believe we own two hundred acres of the town now—very fine land, too. The land of that town is very fine, generally, perhaps not excelled by any township in the Commonwealth. Nearly all the residents of Winthrop own the places where they live; the farms are small, ten or twelve acres being quite a good farm. It does not appear to me to be a greatly enhanced expense from the annexation of that town. The water pipes pass through the whole length of the town to get to Deer Island.

Alderman Quincy—This is no pet scheme of the committee, Mr. Chairman. The committee were directed to give the parties a hearing and they made out a pretty good case. If the committee supposed that this was to be an entering wedge to the annexation of other towns north of the city, they might not have recommended this order. It seemed to be a peculiar case, the town being, as it were, inserted between two sections of our territory and our citizens having to go over it. It also seemed to the committee desirable to have all the harbor lines within the city of Boston. So far as the committee are concerned, they do not wish to put any entering wedge into this scheme of annexation. Winthrop wishes to come in, but if the Board do not think it best, the committee are willing that the town of Winthrop should stand upon its own bottom.

Alderman Gibson—That long strip of land is like the limbs of the main body; as the map now is the legs and arms are separated from the body. We have to go over there now to get to our own territory.

Alderman Hulbert—It seems to me that Winthrop can take care of itself, as it is. The moment we undertake to take care of it, we will go to a large expense.

The order was passed with but one dissenting voice, that of Alderman Hulbert.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Order for Committee on Printing to prepare and print an index to City Council proceedings of 1873. Passed.

Order to allow Committee on Common to expend $4500 for labor and team work for the remainder of this financial year. Passed.

Report and order to allow the sum of $1200 for repairs on armory of Company D, First Cavalry, in Bacon's Building, Roxbury. Laid on the table on motion of Alderman Quincy, who said the Committee on Armories wished to ascertain to what uses the armory had been put.

Report of Committee on Institutions, recommending a reference to next City Council of the measures proposing the removal of the House of Correction from South Boston to Deer Island, and the House of Reformation from Deer Island to another locality. Accepted.

Report and order to sell to the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital 25,624 feet of land on Concord street, east of Harrison avenue, at $1 per foot. Passed.

The resignation of Mr. Cobb as a Director for Public Institutions came up referred to the next City Council. The Board concurred.

Order for Committee on Health to contract with the lowest responsible bidder for removal of house offal from East Boston for three years, from January 1, 1874. Passed.

The order recommitting the report of the Directors for Public Institutions, with instructions to furnish their reasons, on or before the 29th inst., for not permitting the inmates of said institutions to receive religious instruction from teachers in whom they profess to have faith, came up with an amendment to extend the time to January 1, 1874. The Board concurred.

The report and order instructing the Committee on Legislative Matters to favor any petition, by inhabitants of Brookline, for such a change of boundary as shall bring the main conduits and lines of connection between the reservoirs of the Boston Water Works, within the city limits, came up referred to the next City Council. The Board concurred.

Order to pave the yard of the Vernon Primary Schoolhouse, Washington District. Passed.

THE CITY POLICE AND THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE PROHIBITORY LAW.

An order to pay John L. Cook $25 and S. B. Heustis $16, for extra services, came from the Council passed.

The question was on concurrence.

Alderman Quincy inquired if the persons named in the order are regular members of the police force.

The Chairman replied that they are.

Alderman Quincy—I am glad to find, Mr. Chairman, that when members of our Police Department perform extra services they receive extra pay, for thus only do we remove from them the temptation of seeking to pay themselves for uncompensated labors by making an unauthorized profit out of their official position. I believe in the honesty and integrity as a body of our city police, and it is because I do so believe in it I rejoice in view of the example daily before their eyes, that such honesty and uprightness should be surrounded with all possible safeguards. I regard the rule adopted at our last meeting prohibiting the receipt of presents by officers from men under their command as an excellent one. In this connection, Mr. Chairman, and suggested by the subject of the uprightness and integrity of our Police Department, I should like the indulgence of the Board for a few words on a matter which I consider as directly related thereto. I for one, Mr. Chairman, have never seen cause to regret the vote by which this Board declined to instruct our guardians of peace and order to strike hands with the State Constabulary in what I regard as the tyrannical enforcement of a mischievous and odious law. With all respect for the sincerity of conviction of the petitioners for the measure—with all admiration of the fervid eloquence of its reverend advocates, I am still firm in the belief that its adoption by us would have introduced the most fatal demoralization in the ranks of the men whose honesty and whose bravery now impartially protect our property and our lives. With this belief, the unflattering remarks of certain newspapers, which I presume all of us have received by mail, I am able to support with the greatest equanimity.

We submit, Mr. Chairman, as we ought, to the manner of the enforcement of this law within our city simply for the reason that it was enacted and the instruments of such enforcement created by men sent to the State House by a majority of the voters of Massachusetts. The great English writer, Mill, in his "Essay on Liberty," instances this very law, then known as the Maine law, as illustrating what he considers as the tyranny of a majority often more oppressive and dangerous than that of a despot. Why, sir, I venture to assert that there is not a monarch in Europe who would dare, unless he wished to see barricades in his streets within a week, to instruct his creatures to execute a law or decree of confiscation of property throughout his capital in the manner in which these appointees of the Governor, this physical arm of the State executive against which I have protested elsewhere, sees fit to enforce the Prohibitory Liquor law in our good city of Boston. When the last Emperor Napoleon was in the zenith of his power, holding to all appearances the neck of the nation under his imperial heel, had any one then suggested to him the advisability of issuing a decree of confiscation against a certain class of merchandise, and authorizing officials of his own to execute the same arbitrarily, here and there, throughout his capital according to no apparent system save that of persecuting and driving into bankruptcy the poor dealers and foreigners, leaving the rich unmolested, save in some exceptional case of political spite or private grudge, it is my belief that the old fox would have shaken his head and replied that the garrison of Paris was hardly strong enough for that. I allude to this law and the manner of its enforcement simply to illustrate our duty, as it seems to me, of surrounding our own police with every safeguard against the temptation of swerving from an impartial discharge of duty alike to rich and poor. Since, however, I have undertaken to give my opinion in the matter, I have no objection to use still more unmistakable language, and to state that I regard this law and the manner of its execution in our city as the great shame and disgrace of the Republican party in Massachusetts, and if this is treason to the organization with which I generally vote, I am willing that they should make the most of it. I thank the Board for their indulgence in listening to this little digression, and will not longer trespass on their time.

The order was passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the application of heirs of William Brigham to remove brick stable, and leave to withdraw on application of same to occupy wooden stable; in favor of granting petitions of Sarah H. Dyer; and leave to withdraw on petitions of H. Gibliu and A. D. Pattee. Severally accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, reported in favor of confirming the executive appointment of W. S. Bond, Michael Griffin, George E. Lawrence and John W. Jackson, as police officers with all the powers of constables except serving and executing civil process. Report accepted and appointments confirmed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Fort Hill, to whom was referred the petition of Peter B. Brigham to be paid for damages to property on Fort Hill, occasioned by the widening of streets, reported that the evidence showed that the estates had been improved more than damaged by the widening, and that petitioner have leave to withdraw; also, on petition of E. B. Phillips & Co., for same, leave to withdraw at request of petitioners. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the following applications: Buckley's Serenaders, for leave to give a concert at Wait's Hall January 5; Albert Dunton, for license to deal in second-hand articles at corner of Lowland and North streets; E. Stockwell and others, for transfer of wagon licenses; G. J. Fortune, for license for express wagon; John Pender, for wagon stand at 426 Hanover street; John A. Sawyer, for transfer of hack license; Harvey & Pray, Miss A. Baker, Gruni & Stewart, J. G. Pennycuick, Joseph Francis and James Doherty, for victualler's license; E. J. Sullivan, for billiard license; and leave to withdraw on application of Jourdain & Davison, to keep anatomical museum.

Severally accepted.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on County Accounts, to whom was referred the request of the Paymaster in the Municipal Court for an increase of salary, having considered the subject, reported that the petitioner is an employé of the City and County Treasurer, and any request for additional compensation should be made to him. It the allowance for clerk hire in the Treasurer's office is not sufficient to meet the requirements, on account of the county business, then, upon the requisition of the Treasurer, an additional sum would doubtless be granted. If the Treasurer is to be held responsible for the acts of his clerks, and for the funds intrusted to them, he should have full authority as to their appointment, compensation and bonds. The committee recommend the reference of the petition to the Treasurer. Report accepted and reference ordered.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Armories, submitted a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $250 in repairing and furnishing the headquarters of the First Battalion, Light Artillery, M. V. M., 37 Tremont street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on County Accounts, to whom was referred the memorial of the Judge of Probate in relation to preparing a classified index to the records in the Probate Office, reported that the preparation of such an index is extremely desirable and that the work should be commenced without delay. They recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on County Accounts be authorized to contract with some suitable person or persons, upon such terms as they may deem best for the interests of the city, for the preparation of a classified index to the records in the Probate Office for the County of Suffolk; the form of said contract to be satisfactory to the City Solicitor, and the expense incurred under it to be charged to the appropriation for County Accounts. Order passed.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Armories, reported the following order:

Ordered, That, until otherwise ordered, there be allowed and paid for rent of armory of Company A, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., at the corner of Causeway and Lowell streets, the sum of $1000 per annum, beginning on the first day of October, 1873; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Order passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, reported in favor of granting the petition of David R. Whitney & Co. et al., for sidewalk on Milk street, between the Post Office and Oliver street, and inexpedient to grant the petition of George N. Marsh et al. for removal of plank walk on east side of Hawley street.

Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, to whom was referred the petition of J. E. & N. Brown, et al., reported the following order:

Ordered, That the Board establish the revised grade of Parker street, between Congress and Pearl streets, as shown on a plan and profile drawn by the City Surveyor, dated Nov. 24, 1873, and deposited in the office of said City Surveyor.

Order passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom were referred the schedules of assessments for sewers in Parker, Bremen, New Heath and Centre streets, reported that they were correct, and recommended the passage of the usual orders for collection. The orders were severally passed.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the application of Sewall, Day & Co. for leave to use steam engine on Parker street. Accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders giving notice to property owners on Broad and Washington streets, to remove obstructions within ten days, from those parts of said streets widened by resolves and orders of the Board of Street Commissioners. The orders were passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Committee on Streets on the part of this Board be and they are authorized to pay to J. H. Jenkins $300 for clerical services during the present year, as authorized by the city ordinance.

Read once.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages as follows: Paul H. Kenducken, $987 50, Cottage street; George Crowninshield, $2503 46, Washington street; J. C. Howe and J. J. French, $13,402, extension of Pearl street to Congress street; J. H. Chadwick, $2016 91, widening Magazine street; James Leeds, $6255 75, widening Pearl street; H. L. Hallett, trustee, $26,506 51, widening Congress street; William Lowry, $523, widening Dale street; Joseph Moore, $218 41, widening Dale street; Charles A. Green, $382 51, widening Dale street. Severally passed.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That $79 19, assessed upon William Gardner for a sewer in Saratoga street, is hereby abated.

Ordered, That $171 05, assessed upon William H.

Brown for a sewer in Cottage street, be abated and the same amount assessed upon Margaret Carroll. Severally passed.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON BATHING.

Alderman Power presented the printed report (City Document No. 135) of the Joint Standing Committee on Free Bathing Establishments. The appropriation for the year amounted to $40,000, and in May orders were passed authorizing the committee to make expenditures. On June 1, the several establishments were opened, under rules and regulations presented by the committee.

The following statements show the expense of maintaining each establishment during the year, and the number of bathers of each class: No. 1—West Boston Bridge, $905 40; No. 2—Cragie's Bridge, $1033 37; No. 3—Charles-River Bridge, $1175 41; No. 4—Warren Bridge (female), $804 36; No. 5—East Boston, Border street, $1120 60; No. 6—East Boston, Border street (female), $1120 59; No. 7—Federal-street Bridge, $840 07; No. 8—Mt. Washington-avenue Bridge (rebuilt), $4561 64; No. 9—South Boston, foot of Fifth street (female), $902 71; No. 10—South Boston, foot of L street, $1591 34; No. 11—Dover-street Bridge—$950 07; No. 12—Dover-street Bridge (female), $950 06; No. 13—Boston Highlands, Cabot street, $1104 28; No. 14—Boston Highlands, Cabot street (female), $1104 28; No. 15—Norfolk avenue, $1395 56; No. 16—Dorchester, Commercial street, $916 93; No. 17—East Boston, Maverick street, $764 90. General expenses for the twelve months, $16,057 86. Total, $37,299 43.

The following statement shows the number of bathers at each place, etc.:

Total baths at bathhouse No. 1, 78,336; No. 2, 133,965; No. 3, 183,471; No. 4, 12,999; No. 5, 134,674; No. 6, 64,757; No. 7, 89,864; No. 8, 105,453; No. 9, 29,398; No. 10, 192,642; No. 11, 68,309; No. 12, 48,118; No. 13, 110,584; No. 14, 16,339; No. 15, 69,686; No. 16, 4,866; No. 17, 46,465. Total, 1,389,926.

	1873.	1872.
Whole number men bathers.....	324,139	348,778
“ boy bathers.....	894,176	999,742
“ women bathers.....	36,011	41,423
“ girl bathers.....	135,600	129,179

Decrease, 1873.....	1,389,926	1,519,122
		129,196

It should be understood that the expenditures given are for the year beginning January 1, and not for the financial year beginning May 1. The appropriation made for the present financial year was $40,000, and the expenditure charged to that appropriation to December 3, amounts to $31,630 36,—leaving a balance of $8369 64 to meet the expenses for the remainder of the year. Respectfully submitted.

JAMES POWER,
THOMAS GAFFIELD,
NEHEMIAH GIBSON,
DAVID WHISTON,
GEORGE P. KINGSLEY,
JOHN B. MARTIN,
HALSEY J. BOARDMAN,
ALONZO WARREN,
Committee.

The report was accepted and sent down.

SUFFOLK-STREET DISTRICT.

On motion of Alderman Brown the report of Committee on the Condition and Cost of the Suffolk-street, Church-street, Northampton-street, and Swett-street improvements (City Doc. No. 136), was taken from the table, accepted and the following orders appended thereto passed:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund a sum not exceeding ten thousand dollars, to be added to the appropriation heretofore made for the improvement of the Suffolk-street District.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund a sum not exceeding seven hundred dollars, to be added to the appropriations heretofore made for the improvement of the Church-street District.

Alderman Stebbins explained that since this report was made several complimentary terms had been used in reference to the committee for having carried forward this vast work at less than the estimated expense. The impression seemed to have gone out that the credit was due to the committee of the present year, and he desired to correct that impression, and state that the credit belonged to the committee of last year, Aldermen Pope, Little and Squires and others who had this matter in charge.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins the Board adjourned to Thursday, Jan. 1, at one o'clock P. M.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

JANUARY 1, 1874.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at one o'clock P. M. today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

PETITIONS REFERRED.

To the Committee on Health on the Part of the Board. John McCarty, to occupy a wooden stable for ten horses on Ward street (Ward 15).

J. H. Wigglesworth, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Fifth street, near O street.

To the Committee on Common, etc. Charles E. Fuller et al., that the ice on the Public Garden Pond be kept free from snow.

To the Committee on Paving. John V. McElroy, for leave to place a lamp in front of building 1102 Tremont street.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to pay J. H. Jenkins $300 for clerical services to the Committee on Streets, on the part of the Board.

Passed.

ARMORIES.

The Board took up the special assignment, being the order from the Committee on Armories authorizing the expenditure of $1200 in repairing the armory of Company D, First Battalion of Cavalry, M. V. M., in Bacon's Building, 1839 Washington street. Specially assigned to the next meeting on motion of Alderman Hulbert.

SIDEWALK ASSESSMENTS.

Schedules of assessments for Old Harbor street, sidewalks, $752 55; F street, edgestones, $787 36; Prescott street, edgestones, $447 64; Hampshire street, edgestones, $1027 63; Dorchester street, edgestones and sidewalks, $3140 46; East Eighth street, edgestones, $730 86; White street, edgestones and sidewalks, $846 80; Trenton street, edgestones, $1584 02; Gates street, sidewalks, $57 45; Thomas street, sidewalks, $386 70; Telegraph street, sidewalks, $253 35, were received from the Street Commissioner, and the orders for the collection of the same were passed.

The chairman presented a report from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the report of the Committee on Public Library covering a request from the trustees of the Public Library for an additional appropriation of $11,600, recommending the passage of the accompanying order. The committee again take the occasion to urge upon those having charge of the appropriations the great need of confining the work to be undertaken to the means on hand for prosecuting the same, and not to expect to have deficiencies made up by additional appropriations to the liberal ones granted by the City Council for the whole year.

Ordered, The the Auditor of Accounts be, and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the reserved fund to the appropriation for the Public Library, the sum of $11,650.

Alderman Clark—The censure in regard to exceeding appropriations is drawn very mildly, but there is a slight censure in the order, and in order that the Trustees of the Public Library may stand right before this Board I would state that the bulk of this additional appropriation is for conducting the branch libraries in Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton during the remainder of the financial year. About four thousand dollars are for part payment of price of the Barton Library, which was not contemplated at the time the appropriation was made. I make this statement in order that the Trustees may not be misunderstood.

Alderman Hulbert—I wish also to state, as a member of the committee, that the pains taken by the Trustees of that institution are deserving of all praise. The estimates are made with the greatest care; the most full explanations are given for all that is required, and if the expenditures of money in this institution continue to be as carefully made as they have been heretofore, the city will have no occasion for complaint from that source. The request is entirely warranted, and nine-tenths of it are for matters which they could not have contemplated at the beginning of the present year, while one or two items have been thrown upon the appropriation for Public Library that another department should have been required to pay.

The order was passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

Alderman Power, from the Joint Committee on Harbors, who were requested to make inquiries in regard to the removal of gravel from Long Island made a report recommending that the subject be referred to the next City Council. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward from the Committee on Public Buildings reported, on the petition of Michael F. Lynch for new wardroom in Ward 16, that it is inexpedient to recommend a change at present, as the new division of the wards occurs in 1875. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward from the Committee on County Buildings reported inexpedient on petition of Giles H. Rich et al. for a new Court House for Southern District. Accepted.

Alderman Brown, from the Committee on Assessors' Department, reported the following order:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be directed to refund to Aaron D. Capen $21 42 on account of taxes erroneously assessed upon him in 1870; also to refund to said Capen $26 62 erroneously assessed upon him in 1871; said sums to be charged to the receipts for taxes for those years.

Passed.

Alderman Brown, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on petition of George H. Davis, for remission of taxes assessed in 1872. Accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on Public Lands on the part of the Board of Aldermen, to whom was referred the petition of Thomas W. Carter for leave to rebuild and enlarge his kiln on land opposite the City Hospital, on Albany street, reported that the petitioner have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, submitted a report recommending the passage of an order authorizing the granting of a permit to Washington Snelling to erect two buildings on Eagle street. The order was passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the Joint Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, to whom was referred the petition of Robert Treat Paine, Jr., for change in the building ordinance, having carefully considered the subject, reported that it appears that the petitioner obtained a permit to build sixteen wooden buildings in two blocks of eight buildings, each block to contain three eight-inch brick walls. After beginning the buildings he changed his plan and proceeded to construct the external walls of brick. The Inspector of Buildings objected to this method of building, on the ground that the buildings should be classed as brick buildings and should have a twelve-inch party wall between each building, as required by the statute. The petitioner claimed that they were wooden buildings, but were built better and safer than required by the ordinance. The Supreme Court, however, sustained the decision of the Inspector. The petitioner thereupon asks that the ordinance be amended so that no person shall be required to build a wall of wood which he is willing to build of brick. In the opinion of the committee the City Council have not the power to enact an ordinance to that effect. They are simply authorized to regulate the construction of wooden buildings. In doing this they have required the construction of brick walls at certain intervals in blocks of wooden buildings, in order to arrest the progress of fire, but a careful reading of the building ordinance will show that these walls are not considered as a part of the buildings which they separate, but are simply to be looked upon in the light of barriers against the extension of fire. If it were otherwise the City Council would have authority to permit a person to erect a building with four brick walls eight inches thick, which would be a violation of the statute which requires that they shall be twelve inches thick. The petitioner stated to the committee that he would have been willing to have constructed all the walls of his buildings of brick, provided that he could have built them eight inches thick, and if it were possible to amend the ordinance to this effect it would undoubtedly meet the views of those who wish to put up a cheap class of building, but the committee are decidedly opposed to any effort which tends to reduce the thickness of walls of dwelling houses, which they believe to be now fixed at the lowest minimum compatible with the public safety. In the opinion of your committee, buildings constructed as proposed by the petitioner would not be much if any safer in case of fire than wooden buildings, for although the exterior is better protected against the communication of fire from an adjoining building, the interior is no better protected, and is exposed to all the dangers which affect wooden buildings. The ordinance as it now stands does not require any one to build a wall of wood which he is willing to build of brick. It regulates the construction of wooden buildings only, and if a builder is desirous of building better than is required by the ordinance, and believes that it is better and safer to construct his walls of brick, your committee are of the opinion that he will not allow four inches of brick work to deter him from conforming to the statute law. The committee is of the opinion that no action is necessary on the part of the City Council.

The report was accepted.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Edward F. Robinson the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars, in full compensation for services rendered to the Committee on Streets, of the Board of Aldermen during the present municipal year, said sum to be charged to the appropriation for laying out and widening streets.

ORDER OF NOTICE.

The order of notice on the petition of heirs of William Brigham for leave to locate and use a steam engine at 1043 Washington street, was considered.

Mr. Young appeared for the petitioners, and stated that the application was for a brick building for manufacturing purposes, with a 200-horse-power engine in the basement. The first intention was a riding school, but the Board having given them leave to withdraw on that, they have changed their plans to those covered in the present application.

Mr. Colcord appeared for the remonstrants. He claimed that every attempt made by the Brigham heirs for improvement had been an attempt to make a nuisance, and that this was an attempt to force the people of the neighborhood to take the riding school. The people generally objected to it. He charged that a circular had been sent to the people living in the vicinity stating that the 200-horse-power engine would be a greater nuisance than the riding school, and insinuating that the neighborhood ought not to object to it. Over a hundred remonstrances had been sent to the Committee on Health. He looked upon this application solely as a threat to the neighborhood. Mr. Colcord was questioned as to the details of the plan by Aldermen Hulbert, Power, Sayward, Clark and Quincy.

Mr. Lewis had lived in Medford court for twenty-one years, and there had been a continual nuisance; it is high time that something was done. The water leaks from the stable into his cellar; he had complained to the Board of Health, who sent a man up there, but nothing was done. It has been very bad since last June.

Mr. A. F. Neale, who lived in the vicinity, had been assured when he went there, that the stables were to be moved; but the old buildings had been moved and let for job wagons and stables, and had been a continual nuisance. His wife cannot walk or ride, and he cannot move, and there he must stay, with the noise and stench; he did not know whether the proposed factory would decrease the nuisance.

Mr. Young wished to correct some of the misstatements of the other gentlemen. The lot is larger than they suppose. The plan was originally drawn so that the building might easily be converted into one for light manufacturing purposes, and this they intend to do. The location cannot be used for dwellings, as people would have no escape in case of fire, no frontage on any street, and no chance for light or air. The heirs claim the right of way over Brigg's Place, though there is a controversy about that. The building is to be four stories high, and built approved by the Inspector of Buildings. The neighbors have put every obstacle in the way of improvement.

Mr. Colcord added a few additional words of remonstrance, and the Board voted to recommit the petition to the Committee on Steam Engines.

REPORTS AND ORDERS.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the appropriation for incidental expenses to that for contingent expenses of the Board of Aldermen, the sum of five hundred dollars.

Passed—yeas 12, nays 0.

Alderman Gibson presented the semi-annual report (City Doc. No. 137) of the Committee on Inspection of Prisons and Houses of Detention. The report gives a classified statement of the inmates at each institution. In conclusion, referring to the Suffolk-County Jail, the committee say—

"There will soon be a necessity for additional accommodation to receive and keep prisoners; and the sheriff suggests that the most practical and economical method of furnishing them will be either by building an additional tier of cells in the upper part of each wing, thus providing forty-two more new rooms, or by the alteration of the west wing and its use by prisoners."

In this connection the committee would call the attention of Government to the importance of providing accommodations for the female prisoners, separate and apart from those furnished to the male prisoners. Under the present arrangements the portion of the building occupied by the females is subject to observation from those passing along the corridors. The committee would recommend that the north wing be partitioned off for exclusive use by the female prisoners, and that they be waited upon by persons of their own sex. The present system of male oversight and attendance is degrading to the females, and should not be longer continued."

The report was accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported leave to withdraw on petition of Sawyer, Jameson & Cook, for abatement of assessment for betterment. Accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages as follows: Josiah Bardwell, $39,626, widening Otis street; James Lawrence, $34,450, extension of Pearl street; James M. Beebe, $15,000, extension of Washington street; James Lawrence, $115,000, widening Milk street; Samuel and William Atherton, $5790 50, widening Pearl street; William Dehon, trustee, $44,462 25, widening Broad street; Joseph Kyle, $152 70, widening Magazine street; Caleb Stetson, $31,077 75, widening Pearl street; Ellen Stearns, $56,700, extension of Pearl street to Congress street; Jacob S. Sleeper, $69,000, widening Milk street; heirs of Samuel Whitwell, $47,000, extension of Washington street. Severally passed.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories be authorized to expend an additional sum, not exceeding $383 10, in repairing and furnishing the armory of Company I, Ninth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at 544 Washington street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Passed—yeas 11, nays 0.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the Judge and Register of Probate for the County of Suffolk be authorized to employ such clerical or other assistance at such rates of compensation as they may deem expedient, subject to the approval of the Committee on County Accounts of the Board of Aldermen, for the time being, for the preparation of a classified index to the Probate Records between the years 1638 to 1870 inclusive. The names of the persons employed as aforesaid shall be borne upon a special monthly pay-roll, which when certified to by the Judge and Register of Probate aforesaid, and approved by the Committee on County Accounts for the time being, shall be transmitted to the Auditor of Accounts for payment. The authority conferred by this order upon the Judge and Register aforesaid may be revoked and annulled at any time by the Board of Aldermen, on the recommendation of the Committee on County Accounts for the time being, upon giving said Judge and Register thirty days notice to that effect. The expenses incurred under this order to be charged to the appropriation for County Accounts.

Ordered, That the order passed by this Board, and approved Dec. 30, 1873, authorizing the Committee on County Accounts to contract for the preparation of a classified index to the Probate Records, be and the same is hereby rescinded.

The orders were passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of application of Stephen A. O'Rourke for the transfer of license. Accepted.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That auctioneers' licenses be granted to George V. Quigley, 1700 Washington street; Nathan M. Hatch, 877 Washington street, and to Luther G. Lambert, 437 Broadway.

Ordered, That billiard licenses be granted to the Rialto Billiard Co., 109 Court street, and to E. J. Sullivan, 221 Eighth street, on the usual conditions.

Severally passed.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the Board reconsidered the vote previously passed specially assigning the order for the appropriation of $200 for Company D, First Battalion Cavalry, to the next meeting.

Alderman Hulbert—There are some circumstances to which my attention have been called, and I supposed the chairman of the committee would make some explanation in regard to the order.

Alderman Quincy—It has been said that an advertisement has been published stating that this armory can be used for a ball room, but this was done by the permission of the Adjutant-General. While I deprecate such a state of things, I don't see how we can make any objection when the city does not allow them sufficient to pay the rent of the armory. The committee had found that the armory could not be obtained unless such permission was given.

Alderman Hulbert read the clause of the Militia act forbidding such use of armory except by permission of the Adjutant-General, and said, This very room is already advertised for various purposes. This armory is in the Highlands, and the captain of the company is one of the most respectable citizens, and I think he certainly would do nothing improper. But as I am aware of these facts, I don't propose to sanction the doing of what is improper. If they come here for an appropriation and we know that they advertise this hall for various purposes, contrary to law, I can't see my way clear to vote in favor of the order.

Alderman Quincy—Our duty is simply to grant them a proper place for an armory. How they use that armory is a matter between them and the authorities at the State House. The only question was whether we were voting to pay for a ballroom or an armory. I don't see how the City Government can impose any such conditions upon the fitting up of the armory.

Alderman Hulbert—I move that the order lie upon the table till the next meeting of the Board. I simply want to act advisedly.

The motion was carried.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned till Saturday, 3d inst., at 12 M.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Report and order instructing the Committee on Legislative Affairs to favor the petition of citizens of Winthrop for annexation to Boston.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I should be glad to have the voice of the Council on this matter. This is an order instructing the Committee on Legislative Matters to favor a petition of certain citizens of the town of Winthrop for the annexation of that town to Boston. Will any gentleman tell me how this Council can instruct a committee to do a certain act which they have no power to do after tomorrow. It seems to me to be entirely out of place. I am in favor of the annexation of Winthrop to Boston, but I am not in favor of instructing the present committee to go before the Legislature and advocate that measure, because that committee is powerless to do so. That is the principle upon which I stand, and I believe it to be right. When the new Council come in, if they see fit to instruct the committee appointed by the President, that will be proper; but for us today to instruct a committee which shall die tomorrow, seems incompetent, improper, and entirely out of place. Therefore I am opposed to this order.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—The Committee on Legislative Affairs have certainly never taken the view of this order that the gentleman from Ward 5 undertakes to ascribe to it. There are many hundreds of things constantly going on in the city, which go from one City Council to another, and as the committees are chosen they succeed to the duties of their predecessors. If a public building is in process of erection when this Council dies, the next committee proceeds to finish the building. This order does not refer to the present Committee on Legislative Affairs, for if they went before the Legislature they would be met by the answer, "You are not a member of the committee." This order is proposed with reference to the fact that the Committee on Legislative Affairs has become a standing committee of the City Government, and if such a project is to be favored it would be proper enough to provide that the regular body of men having such matters in charge should take charge of it, viz., the Committee on Legislative Affairs for the time being. If a building were ordered erected under the direction of the Committee on Public Buildings, no one would pretend that when this present City Government went out of existence, the present committee would hold over. Still, I should be content that any amendment should be made to avoid technical difficulties. We might instruct the Mayor to do it, but there is a new Mayor coming in, and even if the Mayor comes in again he does it by a new election and not by virtue of any office that he now holds. Therefore there can be no objection to the passage of an order of this kind.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—Notwithstanding all that, there is a principle in this thing. We can't instruct a committee of next year. That is the point I take in my exceptions. I am in favor of the annexation of Winthrop, but I want it done upon proper principles. This committee proclaimed, in the first place, that Chelsea, Winthrop and Revere should be separated from Suffolk County and added to the county of Middlesex, and that met with a rebuke from this body, as it ought to have, for it now lies upon the table. Now, they go to work in the face and eyes of this proposition and say, a meeting having been held in Winthrop in favor of annexation to Boston, they will take the back track and go for annexation. If it is a good measure it will keep. Why instruct my excellent friends from Wards 12, 9 and 6 to go before the Legislature and do what they have no right to do unless by authority from the incoming City Government. What I ask is that Brighton, Charlestown and West Roxbury shall have a voice in this matter.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I take it that if the order of the gentleman from Ward 5, to furnish soup to the poor at the police stations in January and February had passed, he would not have contended that the present Committee on Police would have any charge of it during those months. It is very clear that the present committee can't take this matter in charge, because if they do they will be told that they are not members of the Committee on Legislative Affairs. He says you can't instruct a committee of next year, but it seems to me we are devolving just such duties upon every committee of the Government. But in order to meet the objections, I am willing to authorize the Mayor to carry out the order, and I will move to strike out the words "the Committee on Legislative Affairs" and insert "His Honor the Mayor."

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I am willing to accept a proposition that shall go out as an expression of the Council in favor of the annexation of Winthrop, but I am opposed to instructing any committee of the next City Government. My order for soup was introduced early in December; it made no reference to time; the people were suffering then and are suffering today for want of the soup; it made the Committee on Police a joint special committee, but I was not green enough to suppose that the present Council could instruct a committee of the next City Government. Did you ever hear of the present Legislature instructing the next one? You can't find such a proposition upon the records of time.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I hope the amendment will not prevail, and the order as it came from the committee will pass.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I heartily agree with the gentleman from Ward 7. Since the soup thrown to Cerberus by the gentleman from Ward 12 has not been accepted by that vigilant animal, I hope the amendment will be withdrawn. There is no difference between instructing the committee and instructing the Mayor.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—I will withdraw the amendment; I offered it only to stop discussion.

The order was passed.

Report and order of Finance Committee authorizing an additional appropriation of $11,650 for the Public Library—to be transferred from the Reserved Fund.

Mr. West of Ward 16—The Committee on Finance thought that any committee having their expenses so completely under control as the Committee on Public Library have, ought not to make a request for additional appropriation. If unexpected expenses do come up they ought to get rid of some others. The point is for each committee to keep within its appropriation.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16—As one of the Trustees of the Public Library, I desire to express my thanks to the Committee on Finance for recommending the passage of this order, but I protest that every dollar expended was for things that could not be avoided.

Mr. West of Ward 16—The natural reply is that when a committee finds it necessary to expend an amount not anticipated at the time of the appropriation, it should be mentioned to the City Council.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16—The greater part of that expense has been caused by the annexation of new territory, and the remainder was for the Boston library, which members of the City Government know of; we should have been obliged to let that library remain unused or expend the money to put it in proper shape.

The order was passed under a suspension of the rules, on motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—yeas 58, nays 0.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Report and order for temporary accommodations to be provided for primary scholars in the Gibson School District. Passed.

Report and order authorizing changes to be made in the Girls' High School Building, to enable the pupils to study photography.

Mr. Denny inquired what would be the probable expense to be incurred.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 replied that it would be very trifling, probably not more than three hundred dollars.

The order was passed.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION AT THE PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4 presented the following—

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS } FOR PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS, }
BOSTON, Dec. 30, 1873. }

To the Honorable the City Council of Boston: Gentlemen—The Board of Directors for Public Institutions, in compliance with the order of the City Council requesting the board to furnish their reasons to the City Council, on or before the next meeting of the Common Council on the 1st of January next, for not permitting the inmates of those institutions to receive, under suitable regulations, religious instruction from teachers in whom they profess to have faith, respectfully report that the subject of religious instruction has been at various times considered by the board, but more especially since the 21st day of February last, when, upon the petition of the bishop of Boston and several Catholic clergymen and citizens urging the appointment of a Catholic clergyman for the several institutions, the board gave a hearing upon the subject to the petitioners, when the reasons why, in their opinion, such a clergyman should be appointed were fully presented and carefully considered. Immediately after the hearing the following order was submitted:

“Ordered, That from and after the 4th of March, 1873, this Board of Directors grant the privilege of a Catholic clergymen to all the inmates of that faith in the institutions under their charge and control, and that no inmate in any such institution professing the Catholic faith shall be compelled to assist at or take part in any other form of religious worship.”

This order was discussed and laid on the table, in order that some members of the board might have an opportunity to consider the subject in its full bearing upon the discipline and welfare of the institutions.

While the subject was upon the table the board, early in the month of June, in the course of its regular business, made the annual choice of the chaplains of the institutions, when the present incumbents who had for several years occupied these positions, meriting and receiving the confidence of the board, were reelected by a unanimous vote, one member of the board, a prominent member of the Catholic Church, who submitted the order before mentioned, voting for these gentlemen as “chaplains for non-Catholics.” Afterward, in July, the order was taken from the table and again considered, when upon motion of one of the strongest advocates of the measure the subject was referred for consideration to the president of the board and Director Donahoe, with instructions to report to the board early in September.

At the time assigned for the report, the President stated that the committee had been unable to agree upon a report, and for himself reported verbally that he had consulted with the bishop of the diocese and had a long interview with him, and that he had discovered no reason for changing his convictions, formerly expressed, which were adverse to the appointment of such a clergyman. Director Donahoe submitted an order looking to the immediate establishment of a Catholic service, which order was discussed and laid upon the table. Here the subject rested until the 10th instant, when, at a special meeting of the board called to consider a communication from the City Council requesting an opinion as to the propriety of changing the rules of the board, the subject was again considered. Pending a vote upon the direct question contained in the order of Director Donahoe, the following vote was submitted as a substitute for the order:

“Voted, That in the opinion of this board the inmates of the institutions under the control of the city should be permitted, under such regulations as will not interfere with their proper discipline, to receive religious instruction from teachers in whom they profess to have faith, and that they should not be compelled to listen to religious services which are not in accordance with the dictates of their own conscience.”

This vote, so entirely different from the order then under consideration and opening such a wide field for discussion and investigation, was at that time but briefly considered and then laid upon the table.

The records of the board have been thus briefly reviewed in order that the City Council may be assured that, thus far, no definite action has been taken upon the subject.

Although the subject has for the past ten months been prominently in mind, whenever a definite vote upon it was imminent it has assumed a new phase, calling for more careful and extended inquiry.

To the first communication of the City Council, in relation to the propriety of changing the rules of the institutions, the Directors, conscious that the power of providing for such a service as was contemplated by the petitioners was vested in the board, replied that no such change was necessary. The second inquiry, in relation to the reasons for not permitting the inmates of the institutions to receive religious instruction from teachers in whom they profess to have faith, can be answered by the statement that the Directors have, as yet, taken no definite and final action upon the prayer of the petitioners, but still have the subject under careful consideration.

Respectfully,

J. P. BRADLEE, President.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—That is about the kind of a report I expected. As it appears to be a mere transcript of the record of their doings for the last year, I move it be printed and sent up.

The motion was carried.

EASTERN AVENUE.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 submitted a report from the Joint Committee on Streets, to whom were referred the resolve and order from the Street Commissioners for laying out Eastern avenue to Harbor Commissioners' line, at an adjudged expense of $99,780. The committee recommend concurrence in the passage of the order, and submit the following order to cover the expense of carrying out the same:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, to pay the awards for damages on account of laying out Eastern avenue from Broad street, to the Harbor Commissioners' line, and also to begin the construction of the bridge over Fort Point Channel in extension of said avenue, the plans of said bridge to be approved by the Joint Standing Committee on Streets.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 thought it was too important a matter to be passed upon without further consideration, but after a full explanation by Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 Mr. Denny stated that he had been mistaken in the measure, not having understood it by the reading.

The report was accepted, the resolve and order were passed in concurrence, and the order introduced by the committee passed—yeas 58, nays 0.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the order authorizing the Water Board to take and convey into the city the water of Sudbury River, and to hold by purchase, or otherwise, any water rights and lands connected therewith necessary for the purpose, on the conditions set forth in said order, was taken from the table and referred to the next City Council.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to provide such additional new carpeting as may be necessary for the Common Council Chamber occasioned by the change of desks; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

Passed.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the order requesting the Mayor to petition Legislature to change the mode of preparing voting lists, from the Board of Aldermen to competent registrars, was taken from the table.

Mr. Flynn—I understand from the City Clerk that he will be unable, after the large extent of territory annexed, to discharge that duty, and I think the order should pass.

The order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Caton of Ward 11—

Ordered, That the City Messenger cause to be bound enough of the city documents as will furnish each member of the Council with a complete set, and that he be paid for indexing the same the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars.

The order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the order for the Committee on Ordinances to consider the expediency of placing the bathing houses in charge of the Board of Health, was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

On motion of Mr. Prescott, the motion to reconsider the vote whereby the order for plans and estimates for a Home for the Poor, to be erected on the Austin farm, and for a transfer of a sum sufficient to pay therefor, was lost, was taken from the table.

The vote was reconsidered and the order was passed—yeas 56, nays 0.

On motion of Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—

Ordered, That there be allowed to the Clerk of the Common Council the sum of $500 for extra services in preparing for publication the journal of proceedings of the Common Council. Passed.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the petition of Alpheus Hardy and others, that the subject of a public park be deferred, was taken from the table and placed on file.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 the order that all sums in excess of $5000 collected by the City Treasurer on certain policies of insurance on William Smith & Co.'s interest, as contractors of the Smallpox Hospital on Swett street, destroyed by fire, be paid to William Smith & McGaragle, contractors aforesaid, was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the motion to reconsider vote whereby were denied a second reading the orders authorizing the Water Board to contract to supply the town of Brookline with water for ten years, for domestic purposes and the extinguishment of fires, was taken from the table.

Mr. Perkins—As Brookline has voted to take water from Charles River, I hope the motion to reconsider will not prevail.

The motion to reconsider was lost.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 asked how the subject was left.

The President—It appears that the order was denied a second reading, and the order was lost. A motion was made to reconsider; that motion was laid upon the table, and now having been lost, the whole is lost.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the report and order for Mayor to petition Legislature for an act to set off Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop from Suffolk, and annex them to Middlesex County (City Doc. No. 127), was taken from the table.

Mr. Perkins—As the Council has already acted on the matter of annexing Winthrop, it seems to me we had better drop Winthrop from this order, whatever may be done with the rest of it. I move to amend by striking out the words "and Winthrop"

The amendment was carried.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—This has got into the shape that I supposed it would. It is perfectly well known that Chelsea and Revere have petitioned to be annexed to Boston. I believe a majority of the people are opposed to being set off to Middlesex County, and that a very large proportion of the residents of Chelsea favor annexation to Boston. Why ask to send them out of the county of Suffolk when within the next two or three months the question will be decided whether they will come within our territory.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—I brought up the subject merely to clear the table. I move it be referred to the next City Government.

The motion was carried.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—

Ordered, That all matters of an unfinished nature in the hands of the several joint committees be referred to the next City Council.

Passed.

THANKS TO THE PRESIDENT.

On motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12—

Resolved, That the thanks of this Council be tendered to our president, Edward O. Shepard, for the uniform courtesy, impartiality and ability which have characterized his administration of the duties of his important office for the year now drawing to a close.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 in the chair.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12—Although this resolution is one that is generally offered when bodies of this kind are about to terminate their labors, I am sure the members of this Council will agree with me that it is especially due at this time. I do not desire to call the attention of the Council to the earnest endeavor on the part of our presiding officer, in his selection of committees, to make choice of those who are specially qualified for the duties they have to discharge; nor to the fact that, taking our experience throughout, we have found that in the discharge of so important a duty, he has conducted himself with that impartiality and fairness which has merited the commendation of all the members. But there is another respect in which the Council has been particularly fortunate during the past year. The legal education and training of our President has enabled him to decide very many difficult questions, and although some of us at the time have been inclined to differ with his decisions, yet I think we can all say that careful reflection afterwards has satisfied us that—and I now remember no instance to the contrary—we have found that those decisions have been correct and just. There is another respect in which we have been equally fortunate, and that is in that grace and dignity which has enabled the President, not only in the preservation of his own dignity but in preserving that of the Council, to so discharge his duties that many matters which have been difficult when debate has grown warm—and I take it that during the past year we have had an unusual number of important matters which have given rise to warm and earnest debate on the one side and the other, which is always proper and just—I say we have been fortunate in having had a President who, while, on the one hand, he would construe or administer the rules so as to preserve complete freedom of debate, he at the same time has so administered them as to prevent debate running into excess, or to cause personal differences. Of course there are to be personal differences. The line of demarcation is, many times, very difficult to see, and to preserve that uniform courtesy between the various members, and between the Chair and the members is very difficult, though I think we can all look back upon the past year and say that the most difficult of the duties of a presiding officer have been most admirably conducted by our President. Therefore, Mr. President, I have taken great pleasure in being permitted to present this resolution for the action of the Council.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9—As the gentleman from Ward 12 has stated, complimentary resolutions of this character are very frequently mere matters of form, but I take great pleasure in seconding this resolution. I believe it is especially due to our presiding officer. I should take this body to be a decidedly difficult one to preside over in an impartial manner. Generally a large portion of the members come together without a very large experience in deliberative assemblages; consequently, the rules and regulations may seem at times to hear rather hard upon them. After an experience of three years, I must say for myself that I have never known a presiding officer to discharge the duties of the office with more dignity, more impartiality, and, it seems to me, with more general satisfaction than has our President during the past year. Many of us were strangers to him, yet we have been compelled to acknowledge that he has decided questions against his own personal preferences; indeed, I have myself known several instances when I felt quite sure his personal inclinations have been one way and his decisions another, and I cannot call to mind a time when any one has appealed from his decision. Therefore, Mr. President, I heartily second the resolution of the gentleman from Ward 12.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11—I do not like to let this occasion pass without saying a word in seconding the resolution, representing, as I do, that portion of the Common Council about to retire from the City Government. Most of those who have served a term of years here, and are about to leave, are, I doubt not, willing and anxious and pleased, that I should make a statement in their behalf of the manner in which our President has treated us and received our communications, and of the ability he has shown in making up his committees. Coming, as we do, from the various walks of life, he from that material had to make up his committees, and I feel that from mere acquaintance, as most of us met last year, many of us will part with that relation better described by the word friendship. It has not been an idle year, beginning as we did by throwing open the Public Library on Sunday, following that up by the establishment of a Board of Health, which sent the small-pox scourge away from the city; and following on in that manner, we have organized a Fire Commission and given them power, if not to prevent fires, certainly to take full measures to prevent such terrible disasters in the future. We have been very active during the past year, and in all the various questions that have come before us no party lines have been drawn. It has been almost impossible to tell who was a Democrat and who a Republican this year. I can hardly call to mind a year when party lines have been drawn so little. But I merely rose to second the resolution of thanks, given as they are to an old associate and friend, for I have been with him on other fields, and this occasion is peculiarly pleasant to his old army friends. We vouched for him in the beginning, and we are proud of his record.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—Everything has been said that could be said, and if I were to say anything the evidence would be merely cumulative to the worth of the presiding officer. But there is one thing: I believe that on no occasion of a meeting of the Council has the President been absent, and in this he has distinguished himself. Looking back on the three years I have served here, and this being my last, I think I can say that in impartiality and ability as a President, he who now retires from the chair has never been surpassed. I don't think this is entirely an unruly body. It has been a talkative, a disputatious year; as the gentleman says, our labors have been severe, and of course that has increased the labors of the President. I cannot sit down without saying how much I have enjoyed the association, not only with the President, but with the members of the Council. The acquaintances and friendships we make in the Council are worth keeping. As one I shall always remember my associations with the members of the Common Council of 1873.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—I perhaps have been here more years, with one exception, than any member present, and I can say that it has been a gratification to me to see the President, whom we elected at the first of the year, presiding over all the meetings, and I can add that it has never been my good fortune to see so faithful a presiding officer of the Common Council.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I want to say a single word. I have been a member of this body at different periods, and have had some experience in other bodies. I don't rise to speak words of flattery or adulation for any gentleman here, but to utter words of truth and soberness. I have had occasion, as much as any one, to criticize the rulings of the President, but I can say that, without a single exception, those decisions have been in accord with my judgment of right. As a fair, impartial and judicious President, I can offer my meed of praise in his favor. I can say, that nowever heated may have been the debate, and however much it may have been out of order, I have never had occasion to complain of any rulings which the Chair has made. I rose merely to add my feeble testimony in favor of the adoption of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Ward 12. I believe it entirely merited, and that the gentleman who has occupied the chair during the past year is entitled to all that may be said here in his favor. I have never to my knowledge criticised any rulings or statements he has made from the chair and I therefore thought it becoming to me as the senior member of the Council to rise and make that statement.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10—As has been said by others, I don't suppose it is necessary to have any words from me in support of this resolution. I have rarely spoken during the last year except upon subjects on which there was division, and I have advocated the side in which I believed. But upon this question there is no division; and it is n't easy to advocate such a resolution. It was my privilege and pleasure, a year ago, to give my support to the gentleman who has occupied the chair during the present term, and I certainly have had no occasion to regret it. During the year an appeal from the decision of the Chair has been very rare, and in no case has that appeal been sustained. Mr. President, I move that when the question be taken it be by a rising vote.

The motion was carried and the resolution was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

THE PRESIDENT'S RESPONSE.

The President resumed the chair and spoke as follows:

Gentlemen of the Common Council—I thank you more heartily than I can express by any form of words, for your resolution, and for the very generous sentiments uttered by those who have spoken to it. I accept it all with as much pride and pleasure as I should if like closing ceremonies had never before been enacted. Custom cannot rob them of their meaning, nor formality shadow their heartiness. They are in exact keeping with the unvarying kindness and courtesy which you have extended to me during the entire year. My thanks, therefore, must cover not only what you have been pleased to say of me today, but also your whole conduct towards me while I have been your presiding officer.

A large share of whatever success may have attended my efforts to discharge the delicate and responsible duties of my office with exact fairness to each of you and fidelity to the trust it devolved upon me is due to your ready support of me under all circumstances, to the respect and courtesy with which all my rulings and suggestions have been accepted, to your careful observance of the rules which you adopted for your own government, to your dignity and decorum in debate, and your commendable devotion to the public business committed to your hands.

I take pleasure in availing myself of this opportunity to acknowledge my own as well as your indebtedness to Mr. Gregg, the experienced clerk of the Common Council, whose civility graces the discharge of all his duties, and whose efficiency has contributed in no small degree to regulate and facilitate our proceedings.

Now that the labors of your municipal year are finished, it is fitting that I should pass in review before you some of your more important works. If time permitted I would present the whole array of them, well knowing that, with hardly an exception, all could be looked upon with proud satisfaction.

The great work of the improvements of the streets and grade in the portion of the city laid waste by the November fire, called the "burnt district" was one of the most important as well as one of the earliest subjects you were called upon to meet and decide. I will not occupy the time even by enumerating the numerous resolves and orders that you were called to pass upon. It is sufficient to say that they embraced the widening and extension of nearly all the streets in that territory. A large part of the work necessarily devolved upon the Committee on Streets, rendering their labors extraordinary. How well this work has been done, and how few mistakes have been made in it can be seen from an inspection of the territory itself, now largely rebuilt upon the new lines and grade. The Street Commissioners and this City Council may proudly abide the public judgment upon the wisdom displayed by them in the rearrangement of the "burnt district." The friends and opponents of the stoutly contested widening of Water and Congress streets for the accommodation of the new Post Office will doubtless watch the future development of that locality with peculiar interest, to learn whose judgment on the question was really the wiser one.

The favorable opportunity for widening Washington and Essex streets within the limits of the second burnt district, created by the disastrous fire of May 30th, you did not suffer to go by unimproved.

In view of the extraordinary expense incurred by these street improvements in the fire districts, amounting to about $4,500,000, you have wisely postponed all other considerable projects.

The vital importance of placing the Fire Department in the best possible condition pressed itself upon your attention from the earliest moment. Your excellent and able committee were liberal in their recommendations for supplying the acknowledged deficiencies, and they were responded to by you with promptness and equal liberality. Four new steam fire engines and two self-acting fire engines and other apparatus have been purchased or contracted for, and you have authorized the purchase of horse hose carriages for all the engines. Six permanent and three temporary engine and hook and ladder houses have been built or contracted for.

The large fire of the 30th of May, following so closely upon the great November fire, and laying in ashes another wide section of the heart of our city, struck the whole community with terror, and created an increased feeling of insecurity against the devastating power of the fire-fiend which naturally, whether justly or not, resulted in a general feeling of want of confidence in the management and system of the Fire Department. Eight thousand of our strongest and wealthiest citizens came here with their petitions, praying for ampler means of protection to their dwellings and warehouses, and for a sweeping change in the existing system of conducting that department. An able special committee of both branches, after a laborious and exhaustive investigation of the methods and workings of our own department and those of other cities, reported in favor of giving the responsibility and control into the hands of a board of commissioners. The subject received from you the most thorough consideration, and the ordinance reported by the committee, though once rejected, was finally enacted. The three commissioners, who were at once appointed by his Honor Mayor Pierce, received your approval. It remains for future developments to disclose how far the high expectations of the friends of the new system will be realized. The reestablishment of confidence and a sense of security in the public mind was worth its adoption.

The appropriation of $500,000 for the purpose of carrying out the plan of taking a supply of pure water from Sudbury River, together with your recent action since the annexation of Charlestown, causing scientific investigation to be made into the supply that could be obtained from the Mystic sources; the appropriation of $160,000 for the purchase of land and construction of a reservoir upon Parker Hill; the additional appropriation of $170,000 and the independent appropriation of $200,000, to meet the liberal expenditures of the Water Board in providing Lowry hydrants, and in extending the water pipes and laying larger mains throughout the city; the purchase of a new ferry boat, and construction of new wings to the ferry houses, together involving an expenditure of $70,000; the report of the Joint Special Committee of the Suffolk-street District, by which it appears that the work in that territory has been done for $744,046 less than the estimated cost of the improvements,—are all among your more important acts during the year, and are deserving of a more extended mention than you will care now to stay to hear.

The recommendation for the appointment of a commission to revise the laws and charter of the city, communicated in the inaugural message of the Mayor, received your early attention. The great importance of the subject deserved and received the fullest discussion both in the Committee on Ordinances to which it was sent and in this body, thereby occasioning delay of your final action until the latter part of the year. Your deliberations finally resulted in the passage of an order giving to the Mayor authority to appoint such a commission. The filling of the commission with five distinguished citizens was among the last official acts of his Honor Mayor Pierce. The far more arduous and difficult labor of considering and deciding upon the report that will be submitted by the commissioners will fall to the lot of the next City Council.

I will venture to suggest, without meaning to anticipate any of the reforms that may be effected by the revision of the laws and charter, that harmony between the two coordinate branches of the City Council will be greatly promoted, and good government will be better secured, when each body shall have an equal voice in determining in what manner the public money shall be expended in all departments that are under the direction of the City Council. The subjects of paving, police, sewers, bridges, lamps, and others, all of great magnitude, with which this body has nothing to do after it has concurred in the passage of the annual bill of appropriations, would receive by the change suggested all the advantages that are supposed to be derived from a separate consideration in two independent legislative bodies, each of which is a check upon the action of the other. The wisdom of this system of concurrent legislation has been shown in several instances during the past year, which I need not mention, where unwise measures that had passed through one branch without due consideration were defeated in the other. The fact that some good measures passed with great unanimity by this body have been lost in the other, does not argue against the excellence of the system, but shifts the burden of responsibility.

The recent question of the most advantageous selection of a site for the Home for the Poor, which came to you from the last Council, and upon which your Committee on Public Institutions has labored wisely and disinterestedly, has been finally decided by your purchase of the Ausin farm for the reduced sum of $75,000. Your immediate action in authorizing the procurement of plans and estimates for suitable buildings upon the site shows that the delay was not from want of interest in this humane project.

The opposition to the opening of the Public Library on Sundays, which, in former years has been strong and determined, both within and outside of the City Council, seemed to have abated in a great degree when the order to authorize the opening came before you this year. The credit of unlocking the doors of one of our city's best institutions and offering its elevating use to the public on the best of days belongs to you. The result has equalled the highest expectations of the friends of the reform, and I am not aware that, as yet, any of the abominable evils that its opponents predicted would follow the "opening wedge" have made their appearance.

Late in the year you took favorable action almost unanimously upon a measure looking to the establishment of one or more public parks. The other branch, admitting that Boston must sooner or later lay out a park, after much discussion, postponed the subject to a more convenient season. It seems to be expected that a time will come when the growth of our city will so far have ceased that large expenditures for other needed improvements will not confront this project, and it is deemed a wise and far-seeing economy to purchase at some future day the territory now so desirable for the location of a series of parks, even if it shall then be largely built upon, and the present natural advantages of landscape scenery shall have disappeared, and the land shall have doubled or tripled in value. If such is the true principle of municipal economy, then we should praise and no longer censure the City Council of 1845, because in view of the expenditures of their own time they shrunk from the widening of Washington street, and bequeathed the vast outlay for it upon us.

That the pinchings of daily hunger, and loss of health, and of some lives, perhaps, of the poor of our city are not to be warded off to some extent by the meagre charity of soup for distribution at the various Police Stations cannot be laid to the door of this body. Your persistent and almost unanimous action in favor of contributing a trifle out of the public fund, even in face of its questioned legality, toward relieving the increased extreme destitution that it is evident must prevail among the poorest classes during the winter now chilling the naked and homeless, although fruitless in the desired result, will not fail to receive the plaudits of the great majority of your constituents, and without doubt has already been written by the pen of the recording angel among your noblest municipal acts. The $5000 which the Board of Aldermen appropriated for the balloon ascension upon the Common on the last Fourth of July, but which was saved to the city by the veto of this body, would more than cover the entire expense of this charity.

It is a matter of regret that the city will suffer the loss of some of the most valuable members of the present Council solely on account of the unfortunate rule that prevails in some wards limiting the term of office to two years. This rule has its foundation in the false idea of rotation in office for the sake of accommodating other aspirants. It would be more to the advantage of the wards, as well as the city, to return truly valuable members for a third, or even a fourth year, if they are willing to give so much time to the city's service, and thereby strengthen the Government with the superior knowledge and aptness which are acquired by a longer experience in the conduct of its affairs.

I need not remind you, yet it is proper for me to make mention here of the sad fact that death has made one vacant seat in our chamber, and the clerk, ever since the first of September, has ceased to call the name of the lamented Thomas H. Doherty. He set out with us with as certain prospect of reaching this closing hour as lay before any of our number. He made no attempt to impress himself upon his fellow-members by any brilliant deeds or words, but none could fail to observe enough of true worth in him; a modesty and kindness in his behavior at all times; an honest purpose to discharge his duties here faithfully, which bring to us only agreeable and respectful memories of his life with us, and call from us all sincere regrets over his too early grave.

Again thanking you for the harmony that has prevailed to a remarkable degree in the conduct of our official proceedings, and for the generous and unexceptional goodwill and courteous regard of which you have made me a recipient from the beginning to this day, I invite you to join with me in casting behind us into the grave of the Old Year every word and action in our intercourse together that may not be pleasantly remembered, especially every error of judgment that I may have fallen into in the performance of my office, for I am sure that I have never knowingly or intentionally erred against any of you; and I invite you to bring into the New Year and preserve in memory in the coming years all the pleasant scenes and experiences that we have so agreeably shared together. That our closing session and parting words do not fall into the shadows of one of the last days of the dying year, but instead are set about with the radiance and gladness of New Year's Day, may be regarded as a happy omen of the living power of the friendships that have here been formed, and of the light of public favor which will henceforth always shine upon the records and doings of the members of the Common Council of 1873.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—I desire to rise here as a member of the Common Council and thank the President for the charitable and magnanimous sentiments which he has uttered, and to have my thanks go upon record. I claim the privilege, Mr. President, of asking that the Council by a unanimous vote shall ask that the remarks of the President shall be published for distribution among the members of the City Government.

Mr. Prescott of Ward 9 offered the following:

Ordered, That the President be requested to furnish a copy of his address, that the same may be printed with the city documents.

Passed.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the Council adjourned sine die.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

JANUARY 3, 1874.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at noon, today, Alderman Cutter, Chairman, presiding.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Order allowing $500 extra compensation to Clerk of Common Council for extra services. Passed in concurrence.

Report and order authorizing the Mayor to petition the Legislature to set off Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop from Suffolk to Middlesex County, came up amended by striking out the word "Winthrop," and the order referred to the next City Council. The Board concurred.

Order authorizing the binding of city documents and journal of the City Council, and to pay the City Messenger $150 for indexing and preparing the same. Passed in concurrence.

Order authorizing the providing of additional new carpeting for the Council Chamber, occasioned by the change of desks. Passed in concurrence.

Order authorizing the Cochituate Water Board to seize the water in Sudbury River and to take land necessary for the erection of machinery for purifying the same and conducting it into the City of Boston, came up referred to the next City Council. The Board concurred.

Report recommending the passage of an order of the Street Commissioners laying out Eastern avenue to Harbor Commissioners' line and submitting an order authorizing the Treasurer to borrow $200,000 to pay the land damages occasioned by said laying out. Report accepted and orders severally passed in concurrence—yeas 11, nays 0.

Order for the preparation of plans for a Home for the Poor on the Austin Farm, to be submitted to the next City Council. Passed in concurrence—yeas 11, nays 0.

Report of Directors of Public Institutions on rules for religious instruction for inmates at the public institutions, came from the Council. Ordered to be printed. The Board concurred.

Order referring all unfinished business of joint standing committees to the next City Council. Passed in concurrence.

ASSESSMENTS.

Schedules of assessments for Chelsea-street sewer, $425 05; Dorchester-avenue edgestones and sidewalks, $470 15; Appleton-street edgestones, $482 16; Berkeley-street edgestones, $1149 80; Bowen-street edgestones and sidewalks, $326 82; Norfolk-avenue edgestones, $681 35; Cedar-street sidewalks, $324 30; Longwood-avenue edgestones, $1585 06; Guild-street edgestones, $613 83; Athens-street sidewalk, $2359 35; Tremont-street sidewalk, $2259 75, were received from the Superintendent of Streets, and the orders for collection thereof were passed.

ARMORIES.

The Board took up the special assignment, being the order authorizing the expenditure of $1200 in repairing the armory of Company D, First Battalion of Cavalry, in Bacon's Building, 1839 Washington street. Passed in concurrence—yeas 11, nays 0.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of granting the application of Thomas Rogerson, Peck & Hall, and Joseph Marshal, to occupy stables. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward submitted a report from the Committee on Licenses, to whom was referred the petition of the Somerset Club for leave to use the bowling alleys belonging to said club in rear of 42-43 Beacon street, and also the remonstrance of Thomas Gray et al. against the same. The committee have heard both the petitioners and remonstrants, the latter of whom claim that their rest is disturbed by the noise of the rolling balls and falling pins. They have also visited the premises of the club and the houses of the remonstrants, and they recommend that a fair trial be given to the experiment proposed in the accompanying order, the passage of which is recommended:

Ordered, That leave be granted the proprietors of the Somerset Club to use the alleys connected with their club house, No. 42-43 Beacon street, with the following limitations: This license to run until the first day of March, 1874, the alleys to be used with the ventilator and windows tightly closed, and not be used on any day after the hour of nine o'clock P. M.

WILLIAM SAYWARD,
ALANSON BIGELOW,
SOLOMON B. STEBBINS, } Committee.

The order was passed.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, submitted a report recommending the confirmation of the following persons appointed special police by the Acting Mayor: John C. Bull, Samuel Frost, Alonzo Burnham, Thomas Carey. The report was accepted and the appointment confirmed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That all matters of an unfinished nature in the hands of the several standing committees of this Board be referred to the next Board of Aldermen.

Passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to James Dennie the sum of two thousand dollars in full compensation for services rendered to the city of Boston during the present municipal year; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Laying out and Widening Streets.

Passed.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported orders to pay for street damages as follows: James Leeds, $29,860, Pearl, Congress and Milk street; F. R. Sears, guardian, $5358, Congress street; Louisa R. Nichols, $292 50, Dale street; John F. Mills, $12,000, Lindall street; Charles H. Fiske, $39,620, for land taken from Josiah Bardwell by the widening of Otis street; also an order rescinding order of January 1, 1874, to pay said Josiah Bardwell said sum of $39,620, Morse, Denny & Co., $8636, Congress street, severally read twice and passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of granting the applications of J. H. Eddy and the Dorchester Yacht Club to give entertainments at Lyceum Hall. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power reported leave to withdraw on petitions of John V. McElroy, Daniel B. Pierce and James McAnnaugh. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the application of the heirs of William Brigham for leave to locate and use a steam engine.

Alderman Gibson—It doesn't seem to me to be right to locate an engine in that vicinity. It is entirely surrounded by brick houses, and such an establishment there would depreciate the value of land all around it. Besides, the soot and cinders from the chimney would ruin the clothes of people on washing days. You may rely upon it that it will damage the neighborhood for seven hundred feet around, and will make that section of Washington street a miserable place for dwelling houses. We are bound to protect the people of that territory, and I admit that it is a hard thing for the owner of that property.

Alderman Power—The Committee on Steam Engines, after listening to the arguments of the remonstrants, visited the premises, and it did n't take them two seconds to make up their minds that the prayer of the petitioners should be granted. They are unanimous in thinking that there is no better way to improve that territory. I can't imagine why the inhabitants of that vicinity should come here to protest against the erection of a manufacturing establishment to take the place of that miserable stable. I believe it will enhance the value of their land, and if the committee had n't thought so they would n't have reported as they did. We know that the building must be erected to conform to the laws of the city, but nobody knows what sort of business is going to be carried on there. When there is a nuisance there then it will be time enough to act upon it. It was the most unreasonable argument I ever listened to that a man must be prevented from improving his property because some persons imagine it will create a nuisance, and if I had been a member of the Committee on Health I should have voted to permit the location of a riding school there. Those people seem to think that no building should be put there unless it is exactly suitable to them. I can point out places in Boston where land is worth ten or fifteen dollars a foot, on which permission has been given to erect a steam engine—where there are first-class warehouses and where there is more taxable property in one building than there is in a whole acre of that land. This property proposed to be erected will pay more taxes than that of all the people who have remonstrated.

Alderman Stebbins—It may not have taken the committee two seconds to conclude whether or not the petition should be granted, but it will take me much longer than that to concur with them. I agree with the Alderman from Ward 1, that to locate this large manufactory there will be a nuisance. I am familiar with the locality and I know what effect the establishment of this large manufactory there will have. It will be remembered that the petitioners propose to erect a building within three feet of their line, which will cover nearly the entire ground. I have asked what would be the effect upon the rates of insurance on property there and have been told by the underwriters that the rates would be immediately raised all around there. There is no way to get into the building in case of fire. I don't believe it is a proper location for a large manufactory like that. They should go over on Albany street, where they are grouped together.

Alderman Power—The gentleman says they propose to cover the entire land. Now, they propose to put the building within three feet of their line, and intend to give a space of eighteen feet all around the building. There is a large driveway, and they propose to set the building back and have a way all around it. Besides, they think their rights in Briggs place just as good as anybody else's and they propose to use it. The gentleman says they had better go on Albany street. Now I venture to say that land on Albany street is worth more than it is on Washington street where this house is to be built, and that it has been made so by buildings for manufacturing purposes.

Alderman Gibson—The heirs of Mr. Brigham propose to build entirely round the lot, depending on the other passageways for their light and air. I claim they are bound to furnish their own light and air. Here will be a building six stories high, filled with windows, from which the workmen will be looking, so that every window in the dwelling houses will have to be kept closed. The entire property round there will be depreciated more than a thousand dollars on each piece. In justice to the people living there we are bound to defeat this measure.

Alderman Emery—As one of the committee I visited the location, and I must say that before I went to see the premises I had some scruples about the propriety of allowing such a building to go there. But when I came to look over the land and its surroundings I changed my mind. I could not see how anything better than some manufacturing establishment could be put there. If I lived in any of the adjoining houses I should certainly object to a stable being put there. The building is not to be six stories, as the Alderman says, but four, and such a manufacturing establishment would not be any more detrimental than a certain class of tenement houses which would naturally go there. The houses now there are of the moderate-priced class, perhaps from four to six thousand dollars, and I could think of nothing else that could be put on this lot that would be less detrimental to the neighborhood than this building proposed. The committee were unanimous in their report.

Alderman Gibson—There are four dilapidated buildings on the territory, and it is a miserable, dirty place. When you come to put up a large building there with a tall chimney from which the soot and cinders will be sprinkled over the whole neighborhood, it will be worse than the stable. The people want something put there that won't destroy the surroundings. It seems to me to grant this petition will be a very great injustice to the residents of the vicinity.

Alderman Quincy—It seems to me that the amount of nuisance this proposed manufacturing establishment would be to the neighborhood has been greatly exaggerated, but I can't get over the objection which the Alderman from Ward 8 makes in regard to the effect of fire. According to his statement the opinion of the underwriters is that it would be a great fire trap; that it would be putting a manufacturing establishment right in the middle of a fire trap. We have learned, to our cost, by the fire of May 30th, and others, what is the effect of such a policy—of putting buildings where firemen can't attack them. In view of this opinion I can't vote in favor of the license.

Alderman Hulbert—If there is any one thing this Board should do, it is to secure the proper protection of the property of citizens; and in doing that they have and should have control of the buildings to be erected in different parts of the city, and thereby have control of the business to be carried on in them. If a party should come here and wish to put up a large manufacturing establishment on Beacon or Brimmer streets, for instance, I have no doubt there would be but one decision, simply because of the detriment to the surrounding property. I am as much in favor of the introduction of manufacturing as any member of this board, but I clearly believe it is the duty of this Government to see that no section of the city is injured by the erection of certain kinds of buildings on adjoining property. To a section mainly occupied by dwelling houses, a large building for manufacturing purposes so near as this, is decidedly objectionable. I think that we, as the guardians of public interest, must look at what the effect upon the surrounding property is to be. Here are parties owning a tract of land difficult to improve. It is a nuisance today. They have tried to change it into a stable. That has been rejected,—probably very wisely. Now they come with another proposition to which the abutters also object, and say that it will be a nuisance to their property. The safeguards which citizens feel they have to prevent their property from being jeopardized, are left with the Board of Aldermen. Now I do not see why these persons should have a permit to erect a building there that will create a nuisance, with the expectation, it is said, of being bought off. This has been done in the Highlands. I know some of this area, though not particularly acquainted with this property. It is and must, for some time, be largely occupied by dwelling houses. As I understand it, the parties who own this lot also own the front on Washington street and if they have an insufficient opening they can make such a one as they need. They can open a court, as is done in many other parts of the city. The power of the Board should be used with great discretion in such cases. This is not the only use that can be made of this property. The owners have allowed it to be a nuisance; it has been a disgrace to them, and it is no excuse for them to come here and say, "Here is a nuisance; we propose to change it." They ought to have been compelled to do so before. For these reasons I am decidedly opposed to granting the prayer of the petitioners.

Alderman Power—It seems to me the question which should govern our action in this case is solely whether it is going to injure this property or benefit it. I have known that property for forty years, and there is no question but the erection of such a building will enhance the value of the land. The Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings have granted the privilege of erecting such a building as may be used for mechanical purposes. It is to be four stories high, the opening is sufficient to get into for fire purposes or for any team in Boston to drive into, and they propose to keep a sufficient opening. The dwelling houses in the vicinity are of the class that would be occupied by mechanics, and if this building is erected it will cause a demand for those houses. There are many places in the business part of Boston where permission is granted to run steam engines. Perhaps it would not be good policy to grant permission to put a manufacturing establishment on Beacon street, for it might injure the property there; but where property is of so little value as this, there is no doubt but that a manufacturing establishment would enhance its value. I could quote hundreds of places where land is worth eight or ten dollars a foot which was, in a great measure, made so by just such establishments as the one proposed to be erected here. It is natural to suppose that the owner of any land will want to use it for a business that will pay him, and in this case it is felt that manufacturing will yield the best return for the investment. As for the nuisance, the people are supposing all that. When they propose to put a nuisance in there is time enough to act. Nobody knows what sort of business is to be put there. This acting on the supposition of what might be put there is not taking a proper view of the case.

Alderman Gibson—It does seem to me that the alderman from the Highland District has covered the whole ground. These parties have brought this upon themselves. They put a building on the front lot on Washington street which has shut them off from this lot. It will be a complete nuisance on a business thoroughfare.

Alderman Sayward—The Committee on Health have been alluded to in reference to the stable, and my friend on my left states that he would have granted permission to erect the stable. That is only a difference of opinion, and I am free to say that if I were compelled to have either of these buildings, I think it would be better for a stable. But it is unfit for either a stable or manufacturing establishment. It is not a proper place for a two-hundred horse power engine. It is surrounded by dwellings of a moderate-priced class, inhabited by respectable people, to whom it certainly would be a great annoyance. It will also endanger people's lives, because there is not a proper means of escape in case of fire. The parties now have in that area one brick stable and one wooden one in connection with the building; they were desirous of having the brick stable remain, and also to move one of the wooden buildings for a stable, which, if it had been my property, I would not have requested. The committee refused to grant permission to move the wooden building, but did give a permit to move the other one. Now they come here and ask this privilege in order to compel the people there to take the stable, which, if I were one of the neighbors, I would rather submit to than to have this proposed building there.

Alderman Quincy—I can't see that anything has been said to weaken the objection of the underwriters. It is perfectly evident that they regard it as corking up a manufacturing establishment so that it cannot be attacked in case of fire. We ought to have learned enough of that by the experience of the May fire.

Alderman Power—The Alderman on my left is entirely mistaken. It can easily be attacked on either side. There are arches running through every dwelling house, through which hose can be carried. The entrance to this building will be a good one, and there are hundreds of places in Boston with worse entrances than this. The insurance rates on manufacturing establishments are always higher than on any other property. Are we going to throw a wet blanket on every man who wishes to start a business like this? It seems to me there has been a persistent effort made every year to prevent this man from improving his property. Gentlemen must know we can't prevent that building from being erected. The Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings have already given permission for its erection. The question is simply whether or not you will give permission to use a steam engine on the premises. It will be a great blow to the interests of the city of Boston if you are going to prevent such enterprises from being started. I should be very loth to vote for anything that would injure any citizen of Boston, but I can't help thinking that that land will be much better for manufacturing purposes than for dwellings. This very place has been talked of for a theatre. Which would be the greater nuisance, a theatre or a manufactory? I ask the gentleman from Ward 1 which he would prefer?

Alderman Gibson—I would prefer a theatre; the noise and nuisance would all be inside of the walls. The people who live there require some protection. We have a duty to perform for the poor as well as the rich.

Alderman Power—I also believe in that theory, but you can't give people any better satisfaction than to enhance their property.

Alderman Clark—I have n't visited this location, but I understand it is a nuisance today, and those who own the place admit that fact. First they asked to put up a stable, which I don't believe to be an injury to houses of high or low estate. I know of stables located in the vicinity of houses of large value, and which are not objected to by citizens living in that neighborhood. They first asked for permission to erect a riding school, which would be very convenient for the neighborhood. That was refused them. Now they ask for permission to erect a building for mechanical purposes, and people come here and object to that. Now I believe it is our duty to help people improve property rather than have them put money into bonds and go out into the country to secure exemption from taxation here. The heirs of William Brigham have money, which is now in trust funds; they have kept this real-estate property, and now wish to improve it, and it is our duty to allow them to improve this fourteen thousand feet of land by the erection of a building for mechanical purposes. It can't be used for anything else. Furthermore, the buildings in that neighborhood are changing in character; in a very short time it won't be considered a desirable place for dwelling houses, for many reasons, and if people are allowed to go on and improve their property its taxable value will be greatly increased. No one doubts that Chickering's factory is a great advantage to the city, but the smoke-stack of that factory don't trouble the back yards of Chester square. The chimney to this place will be built so high that all the soot will be blown away. I'd like to know what East Boston would be without its manufactories; and yet the gentleman from East Boston comes here and opposes the erection of a building on property that is now taxed at two or three thousand dollars, which would, by this improvement, be taxed at fifteen thousand. Sometime ago some one came here and asked for permission to erect a large carriage manufactory on Concord street by the successors of Thomas Goddard. No one thought of objecting to it. Now I say that, as a Board of Aldermen, acting for the interest of the city, we have no right to oppose these great public improvements for mechanical as well as mercantile development, and I am surprised at the course of the Alderman from the Highland District, who has spoken so strongly in favor of the enlargement of our industrial interests. The owners have too much respect for this property to put it into tenement houses. I think if gentlemen will go up there and look at the class of tenement houses in that section of the city, they will come back here and say that in preference to having any more such tenement houses as are in Ottawa place they would give a permit for a stable, or for a steam engine with ten thousand horse-power. I hope the order will pass and that we shall give the owners an opportunity to improve their property.

Alderman Sayward—The gentleman talks about the trust property of the Brigham heirs; well, here are fourteen thousand feet of land in a back lot. He speaks with great respect for stables; well, I have great respect for stables, because they are very necessary. The reason I oppose this is, it is hemmed in on every corner. That place on Concord street is very desirable; it adjoins a burying ground, the occupants of which don't require many carriages, and would not be annoyed by the manufacturing of them. My friend is very earnest for these parties to have a chance to improve their land. So am I, and I would n't deprive anybody of doing so. But we owe a duty to the community. My friend here says there is a good entrance. Well, the entrance is a passage way under an archway, with just room enough for a team to go in. They say they have rights in Briggs place, but I should like to know how they are going to get through there. In case of fire it will be very hard to get people out of there. It is for this reason principally that I oppose this petition. There is plenty of room on Albany street, or on the land of the Water Power Company.

Alderman Clark—I know that William Brigham did leave a large property, and this is a part of the real estate, which his heirs have kept and now wish to improve. Such improvements tend to increase the valuation of the city.

Alderman Gibson—I am not opposed to improving property. In regard to Chickering's factory, was there any house there when it was built? That is a different case. Where parties build around an institution they take their own chances. But to go right into a neighborhood and erect a building that will depreciate property is a different thing.

Alderman Clark—This has nothing to do with the erection of the building. The permit for that has been granted already. Now the Alderman from Ward 8 has gone and helped to build a church right under the shadow of a building with a big engine in it. The Parker Memorial Hall is right under the shadow of the Boston & Albany grain elevator. It don't hurt the church, but the value of property there has been increased by it.

Alderman Power—I would like to know if the gentleman from the Island Ward thinks a multiplicity of establishments of that kind tends to depreciate real estate. Now the question is simply about the steam engine. We can't prevent the erection of the building, so long as it is built according to law. One of the remonstrants who came here wanted it understood that if a building was put up according to his notions, he would n't object. Now it seems to me to be preposterous for them to think of preventing such enterprises. It is proposed to invest about a hundred thousand dollars on this estate, and I say we would make a great mistake if we put a stop to such enterprises.

Alderman Gaffield called for the yeas and nays and the report was rejected by the following vote:

Yeas—Aldermen Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Power—5.

Nays—Aldermen Bigelow, Gibson, Hullert, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins—6.

THANKS TO THE CHAIRMAN.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, Alderman Gibson was called to the chair. Alderman Quincy offered the following:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Board of Aldermen be tendered to the Chairman, Hon. Leonard R. Cutter, for the ability, courtesy, impartiality and industry with which he has discharged the duties and performed the labors of his office during the past year, and for the satisfactory and commendable manner in which he has served as the acting Mayor since the resignation of his Honor Mayor Pierce.

Alderman Quincy—I deem myself fortunate, sir, that the privilege of offering this resolve testifying to our appreciation of the services of our chairman falls to my lot for the reason that while that gentleman and myself have so widely differed in our views of certain measures which have come under discussion, no one can more highly appreciate than I the conscientious zeal, industry and unshaken firmness with which he has supported his own convictions and labored in the interest of the city during the past year. In behalf of those of us whose connection with the City Government is now to terminate, I doubt not that I utter the voice of all in assuring the Board of the sincere personal friendship and esteem with which we take leave of those who have been our fellow laborers in this vineyard during the important municipal year which has just closed. Some of us would have willingly continued to contribute our services to the city which we love; others to whom her interests are no less dear, would have found it impossible. But whatever may have been the varying opinions and utterances of approval or criticism elicited among our fellow citizens by our official course, I hope that all will agree that we may at least reply to those to whom we owe the honor of having held these seats in the simple words with which one of the bravest of American soldiers closed his earthly career, "We have endeavored to do our duty."

Alderman Gaffield—In seconding these resolutions, may I be permitted to say that in an experience of five years in our City Government, I can look back upon no one with more pleasant memories than that which is just drawing to its close. A year ago our city was sorely afflicted by the visitation of fire and pestilence. The people, rising in their majesty and power above all local and party ties, selected and elected the members of the present Board. The Board in the same liberal spirit made choice of its chairman. In the same spirit, the chairman has presided, and the members have spoken and acted towards each other. We have had important questions before us throughout the year, and they have been earnestly, fully and heartily discussed. Each member has had his own opinion, and has defended it in a manly and independent way. Each has seemed to vie with his neighbor in honest endeavors to serve the public good. In all our debates there has been a marked courtesy and respect for the opinions of others, and no time has been wasted in disputes upon parliamentary tactics. The year will stand out as a red-letter year in the memory of every member of the Board, and equally so in the annals of the city for the many important measures inaugurated and consummated for that city's welfare.

It would be unbecoming for us to speak of our own acts. If they have been wise and judicious, right and honest, they will in all coming time speak for themselves in the promotion of the best welfare of the community. The consciousness of having done modestly, honestly and to the best of our ability our humble part in the government of the city during a most important and trying year in its history, is the richest reward of any public servant, rising far above the petty triumphs of political victors, and making one oblivious of the petty annoyances of harsh criticism and unjust judgment. Such a consciousness can our chairman enjoy, with the added satisfaction of the hearty approval of all his associates at this Board. I feel assured that I only voice our unanimous sentiment in saying, at this closing hour, that among the choicest memories of our lives will be the recollection of this very busy, but pleasant year, spent in public service, and especially grateful will be the remembrance of the uniform courtesy of our chairman towards the members of the Board, and of their friendly relations with each other.

Alderman Clark—It gives me great pleasure to add my testimony to the faithful and impartial manner in which the chairman has executed the duties of his office during the past year. His close attention to his duties both as chairman and as member of this Board is well worthy the imitation of those who will come after him, and if all who are called to the administration of the affairs of the Government do so with an eye single to the city's welfare, as he has done, it will be well for the interest of the city. I believe that every member of the present City Government thinks that, as chairman and member of this Board, our chairman has exerted his influence solely in the manner which he believed to be for the best interests of the city of Boston. And, Mr. Chairman, I can say that the city is particularly fortunate in that it is not to lose his services during the year 1874. It is fortunate for the city and fortunate for the members of the Board.

Alderman Power—I cannot permit our proceedings to close without indorsing the sentiments which have been expressed by the gentlemen who have spoken in relation to the chairman, and, Mr. Chairman, I would say a word or two in relation to our associates whose terms of office have ended. I regret exceedingly that the ties of friendship and good feeling existing between us all are to be severed, and I regret the retirement of these gentlemen from the Board on the city's account. They have been good and faithful servants, and the city will be fortunate indeed if those who are about to fill their places perform their duties with the same fidelity that I believe these gentlemen have. And I regret exceedingly that the people who have the power to form this Board, could not have had the same opportunity of an intimate acquaintance with those gentlemen that we have had; for if they could have known and seen them as we who have been associated with them, they certainly would have been with us again another year. I wish, Mr. Chairman, before they depart, to thank them all for the exceedingly kind treatment that I have received at the hands of all of them, and to wish them many years of prosperity and happiness.

Alderman Sayward—I did not propose to say a single word on this occasion, but as my friend has alluded to the retiring members, it would seem proper that some one should respond, and I, being his next neighbor, and having fought him as hard as any one, take the opportunity to do it. I can say that all my associations with the members of the City Government have, in most cases, been very pleasant, though it is not to be expected that in four years' experience there should be no clashing. In reference to the resolutions of respect for our chairman, I heartily concur with the sentiments expressed in them. Though differing with him on many questions, and though sometimes overstepping the bounds of courtesy—although my friend on my right says our debates have been courteous—if I have ever offended any one here, publicly or privately, I am willing to be forgiven. There is one quality in our chairman which I have particularly admired; when he makes up his mind that he is right he sticks to it, and that is what I like in any man, even if he differs from me in opinion.

Alderman Hulbert—I don't know that there ever was a chairman of a deliberative body who did not discharge his duties faithfully and with impartiality. I don't believe history furnishes a single instance where it has not been done. I can't second this resolution before this body, however, unless permitted to relieve myself of some mental reservations that I have. I suppose my location in the hall has been an unfavorable one, but I have felt during the year that the eye of the chairman has been upon me most of the time. I have felt as if it had been directed toward me personally. We all know that he has a big eye and a peculiar eye, and as questions of pecuniary importance to the city have come up here I have felt the standing influence of that eye, and if I have been led into the paths of economy in making expenditures it has been due as much to the influence of that eye as anything else. At any rate I go out of the Board without a single monument to which my friends can point and say, "He did it." Sometimes it is much to one's credit to bring forward an enterprise, and ever afterward his name is linked with it as the mover of it. If, for that reason I shall go down into history as a man without a reputation, I question whether it cannot, in part at least, be laid to the eye of our chairman, whom you regard so impartial. That eye has been upon me, and with all sincerity I can say that it has influenced me very much this year. I feel that I owe largely any influence I may have had to the cautious judgment and consideration of the chairman of this Board, in connection with committees of which he and I have been members. His constant courtesy to me has won my uniform esteem and regard, and I wish to say here that I feel that the citizens of Boston are to be congratulated that the services of our retiring chairman are to be retained in this Board during the ensuing year. If there is a man, who, from day to day, studies the interests of the city, it is our chairman, and no member of this Board has the interest of the city more constantly on his mind than he has. His influence is felt in the right direction. We have it here upon minor matters, and from the beginning to the end of the year his influence has been in the right direction in regard to the city's expenditures. In the year to come it will be a source of satisfaction to me to know that Alderman Cutter is present in this Board and taking part in the discussions to come up. I am not without solicitude in regard to the future of this city. All my utterances have been prompted by a fear for the future interests of the city. I can never feel hereafter as I have in the years that are past. The interest of the city of Boston will feel more dear to me than I ever felt them before, and I wonder now how I could have lived so long here and never felt any more interest in the City Government than I have. It is a wonder to me that citizens of wealth can live so regardless of the interest of the city as they do. I wish, also, to say one thing more; there is a wrong impression among the people of Boston in regard to City Hall. There is an impression that things are all going in the wrong direction here, and that everything is controlled by some ring or other. I take pleasure in saying, today, that since I have been here I have seen no ring, nor the shadow of a ring. I feel glad to be able to say that the members of this Board are as free as any men can be from anything of that kind, and that the impressions which many persons in the community have with reference to things here are erroneous. While I believe in the dangers which exist, I can testify that I have seen nothing like rings since I have been here. In closing, I wish to hear testimony to the courtesy of the members of this Board. I came here without any experience in deliberative bodies, and it has been partly on account of their courtesy that I have been enabled to go along through the year without any very great degree of discomfort. It is a matter of very great regret that I must part with gentlemen for whom I have such strong regard—every one of whom going into the next City Government has my entire confidence. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, having relieved myself of all mental reservations, I am willing to second the resolution.

Alderman Emery—I believe I can freely and conscientiously indorse all that these gentlemen have said with regard to our chairman as to the manner he has presided over our deliberations during the past year. It is with feelings of sadness that I realize that the sessions of this present board are so soon to terminate. The pleasant associations and acquaintances here formed have been to me a source of much pleasure, and will long linger in my memory. Could our present associates have continued in service with us who remain for 1874, my labors, it seems to me, would in anticipation be much lightened. Having commenced my labors here only last January, I have had great help and support from the experience of many of my friends here older in service than myself, and whose support and counsel we so soon shall lose. The superintendents of the departments whom we come in contact with, are left and I think their services are invaluable. Indeed, we could not get along without their valuable aid. The services of these gentlemen and our City Clerk and Clerk of Committees are all known to be the main wheels and indispensable machinery to the business of the city of Boston.

The resolution was adopted unanimously, by a rising vote.

THE CHAIRMAN'S RESPONSE.

Alderman Cutter resumed the chair and said—

Gentlemen of the Board of Aldermen—The long and fatiguing labors of the year are now brought to a close. Before formally adjourning this Board, I embrace the opportunity to say that I have endeavored, to the utmost of my ability, to discharge faithfully, honestly and impartially the duties which you were pleased to devolve upon me in elevating me to this honorable position. If on any occasion I have wounded, for a moment, any one's feelings, it is the cause of true and heartfelt regret. I beg you, gentlemen, to accept my sincere thanks for the unanimous vote that has just been passed approving of my conduct. I shall endeavor on all occasions, in whatever situation I may be placed, to act in such a manner as to have the approbation of my own conscience and in so doing, I trust of meeting the approbation of generous, just and honorable citizens.

Gentlemen, I thank you for the kindness and courtesy which you have invariably extended to me. I bid you an official farewell, and may the friendships here formed continue during our lives.

Alderman Gaffield offered the following:

Ordered. That the final proceedings of the Board, together with the address of the chairman, be printed for the use of the members of the Government. Passed.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield, the Board adjourned sine die.
